Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, gave the address of welcome. With him are, left, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, of Saranac; Lenox, widow of the late Boston Symphony conductor; and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York and Glendale, president of the board of trustees of the Berkshire Festival. Through the efforts of Miss Smith the first Berkshire Music Festival was given in the area in 1934.

Manos

Richard Burgin, right, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, welcomes to Tanglewood two distinguished composers who will share this summer the duties of the school's composition department. Roger Sessions, left, professor of music at Princeton University, and second from right, Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, Germany, who is making his first visit to the U.S.. Violinist Ruth Posselt (Mrs. Burgin) is on the Berkshire Music Center faculty.

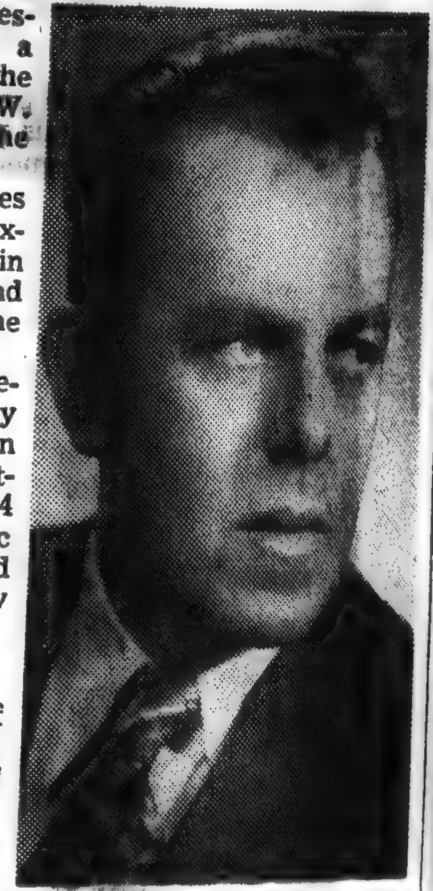
Eagle 7/6/5

Orchestra Soloist Rehearses

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, rehearses for her solo part in the Bach Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings in the opening chamber orchestra concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The concert will be Friday at 8:30 p.m.

'Music Under the Moon'

John Mahanna's New Book Covers History of Festival



John G. W. Mahanna

Announcement was made today by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. of the publication of a new book, "Music Under the Moon," written by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

The first edition of 5,000 copies is now at the printer's and is expected to be off the presses in time for distribution the weekend of July 15, the second week of the Festival's six-week season.

"Music Under the Moon" is described by the author as an early history of the Festival, drawn from official minutes of the meetings of the corporation from 1934 to 1945 when the $100,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood was presented as a gift to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

48 Pages of Illustrations

In addition to 30,000 words of text, the 125-page book contains 48 pages of illustrations. Many of the nearly 100 photographs are being published for the first time. These include photos taken in the early days of the Festival in a horse showing at the Hanna Farm, later in a tent at Holmwood, Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's estate, and at Tanglewood before the Shed was built in 1938.

An epilogue in "Music Under the Moon" covers high lights from 1945 to the present. Included are the establishment of the Berkshire Music Center, the retirement and death of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, the engagement of Charles Munch as conductor of the orchestra and successor to Dr. Koussevitzky as musical director ending with the tribute paid by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last year to Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the Festival and the board of trustees of the organization for their part in founding the outdoor concerts and their ultimate success.

Covered Festival News

"Music Under the Moon" stems from a series of articles written last summer by Mr. Mahanna and published by The Eagle in its weekly supplement, The Weekender (now the Berkshire Week). Mr. Mahanna, who started his newspaper career in 1933 as correspondent for his home town of Lenox, site of the Festival, has been associated with the news coverage of the Festival concerts [illegible] since its inception. He served on the county and city staffs of The Eagle prior to being appointed county editor in September, 1947. The only break in his newspaper service was from 1942 to 1945 when he was in the Navy, part of that time being in combat duty with the Pacific Fleet which he reported in special dispatches to The Eagle.

The Eagle Printing & Binding Co. of this city is printing "Music Under the Moon," and the engravings are by the Eagle Engraving Co. Copies will be distributed to county book stores, and the Tanglewood Music Store by the Pittsfield News Co. as well as to book stores in Boston, Cape Cod, New York and the Albany area.

It's Beethoven for Six Festival Weeks

By MILES KASTENDIECK

ONCE again it is time for the annual Berkshire Festival. For the 16th summer the Boston Symphony Orchestra will hold forth for six weeks beginning this Friday. It will give 24 concerts in all. With all attendance records broken at last season's concerts the outlook is one for even larger audiences this year, especially since the concerts will be built around the music of Beethoven.

This is only the second time that the Festival programs have concentrated on a single composer, thus unifying the entire program. Last year Charles Munch extended the Berlioz anniversary so that his music could become a focal point.

Conservative Year

This year Boston Symphony's musical director might be called more conservative for selecting Beethoven. Perhaps his choice is by way of compensation to those who question the significance of Berlioz, though they learned more about his worth than ever before.

As planned, the programs will feature all Beethoven's symphonies, with the ninth ending the Festival on Aug. 14, and will include Act II of "Fidelio" in concert form (Aug. 6), the Violin Concerto, two piano concertos and the "Missa Solemnis" (Aug. 5). A number of "Tanglewood premieres" by other well-known composers have also been listed.

For the two weekends preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed, what were originally called the "Bach-Mozart" concerts will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall. Time has changed their pattern. Only next Sunday's program will be devoted entirely to Bach (the B-Minor Mass), and Friday, July 15, to Mozart. Programs of Italian and French music respectively have been scheduled for next weekend. Leonard Bernstein will return to Tanglewood after a year's absence both as conductor and pianist for Mozart. Thor Johnson, a former Tanglewood student, will conduct this Saturday.

First of Six

The Festival activity begins this Wednesday evening with the first of six concerts of Beethoven's chamber music. A representative range of his works includes quartets, trios, violin, piano and cello sonatas.

New York Journal-American, Sun., July 3, 1955

Knickerbocker News: Saturday, July 2

Tanglewood to Offer First Program Wednesday

Tanglewood will present its first program of the season Wednesday night and its first weekend of music July 8, 9 and 10.

The Wednesday program will be the first of six Wednesday nights devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. Performing will be the Kroll String Quartet.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts will open July 8 in the theater-concert hall. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the opening program of two Bach works, the Prague Symphony of Mozart and Stravinsky's "Orpheus."

Saturday night, July 9, Thor Johnson, former student at Tanglewood and conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony since 1947, will conduct works of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Joseph DePasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be the soloist.

The Sunday afternoon program of that weekend will present the Bach in B minor with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society under the direction of Mr. Munch. Soloists will be Adele Addison, John McCollum, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm.

THOR JOHNSON

JOSEPH DE PASQUALE

A second series of programs will be presented in the theater-concert hall July 15, 16 and 17.

Beginning July 22, the full Boston Symphony will be at Tanglewood for four weekends. All nine Beethoven symphonies will be presented this season. Mr. Munch will conduct the symphonies, while in other programs Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein will conduct.

New Bedford Standard Times 7/5/55

1955

Berkshire Festival Opens Tomorrow

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 5—The 1955 Berkshire Festival will open at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven.

The quartet will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods:

Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (middle), and the [illegible] C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (late).

During the course of the six-week festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act 2 of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solennis," and the five cello sonatas.

[illegible] 7/6/55

Beethoven's Works Fascinating To Music Lovers, Says Munch

TANGLEWOOD — In welcoming 405 students to a summer of musical study at Tanglewood Sunday, Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, defended his choice of Beethoven as the principal composer of the 1955 Festival.

Speaking at the opening exercises in the Theater Concert Hall, Mr. Munch explained to "those of you who may perhaps be surprised and may even reproach us for devoting a large part of the Festival concerts to the music of Beethoven," his reasons for the programming.

"If this music, written 150 years ago, does not always seem immediate to the professional, the musician of our time," he declared, "it has never ceased to fascinate the music lovers, the general public, the men of our time.

"What is the reason? Why does the public always come back to listen to the Eroica—or the Eighth Symphony? Simply because music lovers know that after having heard this music, they will not leave the hall without having gained something. They will not leave the hall without taking away something enriching, something heart warming.

This music, which is not sensual, not abstract, not dramatic in the sense of Wagner, not romantic in the sense of Schumann, not sentimental not pathetic—is all of them at once. And that is the reason why we must always live with it."

Alb News July 6

Tanglewood Opens

The Kroll String Quartet, in three works by Beethoven, will open the 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at the Tanglewood Theatre in Lenox, Mass.

Syracuse Herald American; July 3, 1955

The Berkshire Music Center, summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. The five appropriations, commencing this summer and extending over a period of five years, can amount to $125,000. The Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The Rockefeller Foundation appropriations will be made annually.

This date in music: 1848, Thedore Presser born. He became founder of the Presser Co. in Philadelphia, publisher of Etude. Mr. Presser established the fund, bearing his name, in aid of musicians.

The 1955 pattern of concerts in The Shed by the 104 piece Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, calls for four weekends, starting July 22 and closing Aug. 14 with symphonic programs Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein. The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two weekends by the Chamber Section of the Boston Symphony, with Bach-Mozart concerts given in the Theater Concert Hall under direction of Conductor Munch with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross guest conductors.

CONDUCTOR JOHNSON

The noted young American conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson, a former student of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Chamber Orchestra next Saturday night in the Theater Concert Hall, the program including compositions by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith with Joseph de Pasquale, principal violinist, of the Orchestra as soloist.

Other soloists during weekends in the Theater Concert Hall programs will be Bernstein, who will be piano soloist as well as conductor on July 15, an all-Mozart program, with soprano Jennie Tourel. Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, vocalists, and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, in addition to de Pasquale, Samuel Mayes cellist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

There will be six Wednesday night chamber music concerts with proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship fund. These will be devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. Performers: Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio and the New Music String Quartet.

Berkshire Fest Bowing 18th Season; B.O. May Better '54 Record-Breaker

Lenox, Mass., July 5.

The Berkshire Festival—America's top summer music event—bows its 18th season tomorrow (Wed.) at Tanglewood here, with one of its most imposing schedules to date. Prospects for this season's six-week fest loom stronger than last year's (1954) record-breaker, when an alltime attendance high of 135,775 persons paid $330,033 in admissions. (The 1953 attendance was 117,950 and receipts $311,600). Subscriptions for 1955 have run ahead of last summer's.

Where last season's sked called for full symphony concerts (104 players) all six weekends, the 1955 setup has been changed back to one resembling the old. The first two weekends will comprise a series of Bach-Mozart concerts by about 40 Boston Symphony Orch players in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The next four weekends will offer the full BSO contingent in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

The 24-concert sked of the Festival bows tomorrow night with a chamber music concert by the Kroll String Quartet, and subsequent Wednesdays will offer the Beaux Arts Trio, New Music String Quartet, Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolph Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The Bach-Mozart concerts (with the Bach B Minor Mass a highspot) will have Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as conductors and Jennie Tourel and Samuel Mayes as soloists.

Munch, Bernstein and Pierre Monteux will share the podium for the four weekends of Shed concerts, with soloists including Stern, Serkin, Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw and Eugene Istomin. Concerts will feature Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, and the Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late director of the BSO).

Prices are the same as before. Tickets for the weekend Shed concerts are $6.50 for boxes, and from $5.50 down to $2.50 elsewhere. Bach-Mozart tabs are $5 and $4. The Wednesday chamber concerts are $3 and $2.

Change in the schedule from last year was dictated simply by the heavy duty of doubling between here and Boston by the bulk of the orch (some 65 men), who played Pops and Esplanade concerts in Boston the first part of the week, then commuted to Tanglewood for the latter part, and back again. It was not only tiring, but costly.

Eagle Wed. July 6, 1955

Beethoven Music Tonight At Festival

Kroll Quartet To Be Heard In First Concert

TANGLEWOOD — The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven.

During the course of the six-week festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts have a lower admission charge than the major events and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season 8,750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1,358 per concert, or well over the 1,200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefited by a total of $7,850.

50 Town Hall Recitals

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello) will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C minor (early), the "Serioso" quartet in F minor, Opus 95 (middle) and the great C sharp minor, Opus 131 (late).

THE KROLL STRING QUARTET will open the 1955 Festival season at Tanglewood tonight. William Kroll, violinist, is with Richard Burgin head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music section. Other quartet members: Louis Graeler, violin, David Mankovitz, viola, Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

As the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York, the Kroll String Quartet has given nearly 50 Town Hall recitals since it was founded by William Kroll in 1945, in addition to its annual tours. The group also appeared at last season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, on Aug. 4, playing quartets by Hadyn, Hindemith and Ravel. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been head of the violin and chamber music departments at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York since 1943.

Other artists appearing this season in the Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music by Beethoven will include the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) on July 13; Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, on July 20; the New Music String Quartet (Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello) on July 27; Rudolf Serkin, piano, on Aug. 3; and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on Aug. 10.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the performance.

Springfield Union 7/7/55

Tanglewood Festival Opens With Kroll Quartet Recital

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—Here we are again for the opening of the 16th session of the Berkshire Music Festival under the aegis of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year, as last, the festival opened with the first of a series of six Wednesday night recitals by eminent ensemble groups and soloists.

1172 in Audience

It fell to the lot of the Kroll String Quartet to open the series. It was a happy choice, for this distinguished quartet made known its value last season and tonight it revealed the creative genius and growth of Ludwig von Beethoven in superb fashion, rousing the 1172 people in the audience to prolonged applause.

We heard tonight three quarters, representing the three important periods making up the quartet period. First came the Quartet in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; then followed the Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95, and the recital concluded with the gigantic Quartet in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

As noted, the Kroll quartet was in marvelous form and they played with virility, transparency of tone and rhythmic incisiveness. Above all, their readings were scholarly and in the finest taste. One listened to the early strivings of the Opus 18, often sweetly pretty and Haydnesque, yet holding of seed of inventiveness and imagination which was to blossom in the Opus 131 quartets.

Continued On Page 6

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

Moods Vary

There was much to admire in the smooth utterance of lyrical passages and the brusque, dynamic utterance in, for example, the opening movement of the Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95. The performance of the final quartet was magnificent in its spaciousness, its solidity and its expressivity. It was the sort of playing and interpretation that comes only from those absolutely devoted to their music.

The members of the Kroll quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; and Avron Twerdowsky, cello.

Next Wednesday night, the recital will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio, consisting of Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin; and Bernard Greenhouse, cello. They will play three Beethoven trios, namely Trio in C Minor, Op. 1, No. 3; Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1, and Trio in B-Flat Major, Op. 97.

Friends Meet Again

It's something of an old home week when Tanglewood opens. Everyone seems to know every one else and be glad to see them again. In back of us Roger Sessions was talking animatedly with a member of the opera department, a pretty girl; in front of us, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky was greeted by many people.

We find the audiences at these Wednesday night recitals quite different from those who attend the week end concerts in the shed. First of all, most of the audience arrives on time and there is absolute quiet during the performances. It is evident that these people are there to hear the music, rather than be seen. It is also evident that the performers know the kind of audience for which they are playing. The recitals this season will be devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven and such great artists as Rudolf Serkins, pianist; Isaac Stern, violinist, and Gregor Piatagorsky, 'cellist, will be heard.

Friday night, the first of the chamber orchestra concerts will be given in the theater-concert hall. Dr. Charles Munch will lead the orchestra in the Sinfonia from the "Easter" oratoria by Bach and the same composer's "Suite No. 2 in B Minor, for Flute and Strings." Doriot Aanthony Dwyer will be flute soloist in this work. Then will follow Stravinsky's, "Orpheus," a ballet in three scenes. The concert will conclude with Mozart's symphony in D Major, the "Prague."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 6 1955

Chamber Music Opens Berkshire Festival Tonight

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello) will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big Periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (Early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (Middle) and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (Late).

Other artists appearing this season in the Wednesday evening concerts of Chamber Music by Beethoven will include the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) on July 13; Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, on July 20; the New Music String Quartet Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello) on July 27; Rudolf Serkin, piano, on August 3; and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello, and Ralph Berkowitz, piano, on August 10.

CHAMBER MUSIC EVENT TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Popular Wednesday Evening Concert to Open Festival Season

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Started Last Season

Inaugurated las t season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music enter. Last season 8750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1358 per concert, or well over the 1200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7850.

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet, William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello, will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (Early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (Middle) and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (Late).

B. E. Eagle 7/7/55

Manos

STUDENTS REHEARSING for tonight's first [illegible] by the Berkshire Music Center Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed are directed by Seymour Lipkin, assistant to Leonard Bernstein in the school's department of orchestra and conducting, who [illegible] conclude the program by conducting Schumann's Symphony No. 2. Three student conductors, James Yannatos, Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg, both of New York, and George Mester of Mexico City, will make their debuts with the orchestra at 8:30.

BSO Flutist Is Soloist Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by music director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts," will be given in the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

At tomorrow's concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach—the Sinfonia from the 'Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings—along with Stravinsky's music for the Ballet "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony. Soloist in the Bach Suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Thor Johnson will be guest conductor of the concert Saturday night when music by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith will be played, with Joseph de Pasquale viola soloist in Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher."

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Mr. Munch will return to conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and the following vocal soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Leonard Bernsteins Have Baby Son

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bernstein are the parents of a son born last night in New York. Mrs. Bernstein is the former Felecia Monteleagre. They have a two-year-old daughter, Jamie.

Mr. Bernstein, head of the conducting department at the Berkshire Music Center, left Tanglewood last night for New York and will return Monday to start preparing for his first concert (July 14) in two years at Tanglewood.

Music

Kroll Quartet Opens Season at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the season at Tanglewood took place last night in the theater-concert hall. The Kroll string quartet gave an all-Beethoven program as the first of six Wednesdays to be devoted to chamber music for various groups and to be played by six different ensembles. The members of the quartet are William Kroll, first violin, Louis Graeler, second violin, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello.

The three quartets played were chosen from all three of the periods arbitrarily established as divisions of Beethoven's creative life. From the early and transparent C minor, Opus 18, No. 4, the Krolls proceeded through the profound F minor, Opus 95, to the late and abstruse C sharp minor, Opus 131, written in the last year of his life.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN quartets need a maturity, the distillation of years, a polishing from endless application, which the Krolls supplied in superabundance. Accuracy as such is no longer a merit here worth mentioning as that may be achieved by able players without penetration, and, as a matter of fact, inaccuracy as such is not a fault worth mentioning by the same token when the spirit is there, and the vitality and the elan.

Kroll is a dominating leader and raises his colleagues, and his audience as well, to high peaks of excitement. There is a tense glow to their tone in the more sustained movements and a galvanic sparkle to the more animated ones, but it is the accumulation of details that makes the performance so absorbing.

* * *

YET EVEN ALL that is the mere surface manifestation of the basic and unsurpassed understanding of the music. There is no one in chamber music today with more experience and greater contact with tradition than William Kroll. Through him comes down the unwritten dicta of the best schools of chamber music playing and in the elegance and brilliance of his personal performance he possesses the means with which to illuminate the highest ideals of musical communication.

His fellow players generally matched their leader. If Beethoven's fertile pen lured Kroll in certain instances to magnify the importance of subsidiary phrases to the detriment of the main theme, no one begrudged the passing obscurity for the graceful and facile passages and the lovely sounds produced somewhat out of perspective. And if some tempi failed to observe the traffic lights, most of them were thrilling and entrancing.

* * *

THE MARVEL of the evening was how the performance of three quartets permeated with such discerning erudition could be performed with such freshness and ebullience. The answer probably lies in the verity of the conception and the reduction to simplest terms of the performance. No better illustration need be sought than the fifth measure of the first quartet when a short bow at the tip not only best expressed the phrase, conserved and maintained the line and the color but made it look easy and sound natural and withal in good musical taste. No wonder the endless recalls forced them to play another Beethoven movement. They chose the fugue from the third Rasoumoffsky quartet, where, incidentally, the other three voices subdued themselves so that the stentorian statement given the second violin might properly rise above the agitation and be heard in all its glory.

William Kroll

Eagle
Thurs. July 7

Tanglewood Tales

Friends Concert Tonight

The first of some 25 concerts and demonstrations given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, which are open to the public through enrollment in the Society of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, will be the concert given by the symphony orchestra of more than 100 students from all over the U.S., Canada and foreign lands in the Music Shed, at 8:30 p.m. tonight. Three student conductors are making their debut on the podium at Tanglewood: James Yannatos, 26, of New York City, who conducts Aaron Copland's "Outdoor Overture"; Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg, 27, of New York City, who leads the orchestra in Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; George Mester, 20, of Mexico City, who conducts Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Mr. Bauer-Mengelberg as narrator. For this opening concert the student symphony has been trained by the young pianist, Seymour Lipkin, assistant to Leonard Bernstein in the music school's department of orchestra and conducting, and Mr. Lipkin will conclude the program by conducting Schumann's "Symphony No. 2."

* * *

Munch To Conduct Student Orchestra

Charles Munch, Boston Symphony orchestra music director, in his capacity as director of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the student symphony's second concert on Thursday evening July 14, in Schubert's Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 6 1955

Berkshire Festival Opening Tonight

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven.

In the course of the six-week festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

The Kroll Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello) tonight will play the Quarter No. 4 in C Minor, the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131.

De 670

Public Events

Tonight

7:00-11:00—Mount Carmel lawn party. School grounds.

8:30—First student orchestra concert. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox. (Open to Friends of Berkshire Music Center)

1955 Music Festival Is Now in Progress

B. Courier — 7/7/55

Beethoven Program Opened Season Last Night

Tomorrow Evening Charles Munch Will Conduct Chamber Orchestra In Selections From Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart.—Boston Symphony Opens Full Concerts July 22.

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood in Lenox of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts started last evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. Tomorrow evening Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemuth, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violinist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center. On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13, 15, 16, 17, will all be given in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts withing the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two week-ends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four week-ends, July 22-August 14, when 12 week-end concerts are held in the 6000-seat Music Shed.

In 1954, Charles Munch's fourth summer with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over eastern United States and Canada, totaled an attendance of 135,775 to total paid admissions of $330,033. Chamber music concerts inaugurated last summer averaged 1358 persons; chamber orchestra programs drew an average of 2275, both series attracting considerably more persons than the capacity of the 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall. An average crowd of 9197, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, came to the final programs.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr. Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Sergei Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

The first week's Berkshire Festival programs include Tanglewood premieres of the following: Bach: Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio and Stravinsky's "Orpheus" (Friday, July 8); Hindemith; "Der Schwanendreher" and Haydn; Symphony in D flat, No. 98 (Saturday, July 9).

[124]

Section II, Page 2 — The Lakeville Journal, July 7, 1955

The Berkshire Festival To Present 24 Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is once more launched on its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the sixteenth summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts in staggering amounts! Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

Again, in 1955, the Berkshire Festival will consist [illegible] twenty-four concerts, which [illegible] Wednesday evening, July [illegible] the first of six Wednesday [illegible] of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure. The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adee Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentaton of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinatti Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series: Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed

(Continued on Page Twenty-one)

PIE FROM THE SKY . . . four-and-twenty concerts instead of blackbirds will do the "singing" when this pie is opened! Tanglewood drew 135,000 people in 1954 and signs point to an even greater attendance this year. Called the "most important American music festival," Tanglewood attracts music-lovers from all over the world.

10—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Thursday, July 7, 1955

Local Residents To House Harvard, Radcliffe Singers

Nearly 80 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, who Sunday afternoon will sing in Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in the third Berkshire Festival concert are house guests of local residents.

The college students who sing each year in Boston with the orchestra and appeared at Tanglewood last season, will arrive tonight, to rehearse for the next two days with the orchestra and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Chairman Named

Under the chairmanship of D. [illegible] Edman, Harvard student, the hosts and hostesses are: Dr. and Mrs. Thurlow H. Pelton of 21 Cro- [illegible] St.; Mrs. Donald McPherson, 14 Paisley Ter.; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, 500 Williams St.; Mr. and Mrs. Zenas C. Colt, 497 Holmes Rd.; Mrs. Brace W. Paddock, 435 South St.; Mr. and Mrs. James W. Raynolds, 19 Brunswick St.; Dr. and Mrs. Wendell G. Ahern, 52 Brunswick St.; Mr. and Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, 173 South Mountain Rd.; Dr. James E. Breslin, 219 South Mountain Rd.; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Edman, 584 South St.; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Galt, 51 Bishop Pkwy., all of Pittsfield.

Also, Mrs. Raymond L. Buell, Mrs. Eaton Woolverton, Rev. and Mrs. William M. Crane, and Donald B. Miller, Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Dwight and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Burkat, Stockbridge; Mrs. Russell W. Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Deykin, Great Barrington, and Dr. and Mrs. Rustin McIntosh, Tyringham.

BE Eagle 7/7/55

Another Tanglewood Season

In Berkshire County, proof that sumer is really icumen in is furnished annually by the opening of the music festival at Tanglewood. Sumer therefore has icumened. Sunday saw the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center under the amiable chairmanship of Mr. C. D. Jackson; last evening saw the first concert, a superb performance of Beethoven's chamber music by the Kroll Quartet.

In the two decades that it has been in existence, the Berkshire Festival has become established as an international rather than a local or even national event. It attracts the leading musicians of the world as soloists and guest conductors; its audiences include music-loyers from every state in the Union as well as from abroad. The influence of the school started by Dr. Koussevitzky is becoming increasingly evident as a new generation of musicians develops; few of the younger artists have not studied at Tanglewood.

This season promises to out-do any of its predecessors in the numbers that attend. One reason may be that Dr. Munch has finally broken down the guards of those who would have none but Koussevitzky. The most likely influence, however, is the fact that the program this summer is to include a great deal of Beethoven. Who is the greatest of all composers is a matter of opinion; we venture to guess however that of all the "greats," Beethoven appeals to a wider and more diverse audience than any other composer.

Beethoven has his detractors, and so has Tanglewood. Any form of art includes a few self-styled experts who in the inflation of their own egos and their determination to impress those who know less than they do, consider it necessary to sneer at anything that has a mass audience. Our advice to those who enjoy great music is not to be impressed by this type of affectation, and not to let this type of phony spoil their enjoyment of the Tanglewood programs.

IN THE COUNTRY Nyer

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra in a performance of Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 13, at 8:30: The second in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Beaux Arts Trio. . . . ¶ Friday, July 15, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting the chamber orchestra, and acting as piano soloist, in an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 16, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra in a program of Italian music, with Samuel Mayes, cello, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 17, at 2:30: [illegible] conducting the chamber orchestra in a program of French music; no soloists. [illegible] Lenox, Mass. Through [illegible]

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 8 1955

Music

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, ~~Lenox, Mass., under~~ the direction of Charles Munch, presents a series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and associated groups through August 14.

July 8, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Sinfonia from "Easter" Oratorio, Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with Doriet Anthony Dwyer, soloist; Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K-504.

July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor: Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon; violin and 'cello; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn's Symphony in B Flat, No. 98 with viola solo by Joseph DePasquale.

July 10, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Mass in B Minor, with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliff Choral Society, and soloists.

July 13, Beaux Arts Trio: Beethoven, Trio in C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; Trio in D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from Page Two)

concerts, also [illegible] Friday and Saturday evenings [illegible] Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, [illegible], David Lloyd, [illegible] Addison, Eu[illegible] Akos, Mac [illegible] and Donald Gramm.

Tanglewo[illegible] given for the [illegible] ton Symph[illegible] Berkshire [illegible] summer: B[illegible] Easter Orat[illegible] pheus; Hin[illegible] dreher; Ha[illegible] No. 98; Mo[illegible] Giovanni: B[illegible] Cello; Viva[illegible] B minor, O[illegible] (with choru[illegible] haud, Seren[illegible] phony No. [illegible] The Black M[illegible] of Kierkega[illegible] Act II; Blo[illegible] Suite from D[illegible]

The Festiv[illegible] planned by [illegible] Munch [illegible] ture the m[illegible] Beeth[illegible] cluding all [illegible] symphon[illegible] delio (Act I[illegible] concert [illegible] mance, the [illegible] concert [illegible] two piano concer[illegible], three overtu[illegible] the Missa Solen[illegible] (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center). A representative range of Beethoven's chamber music, including string [illegible] trios and violin, piano, [illegible] sonatas will be heard [illegible] Wednesday evening programs.

Secti[illegible] II [illegible]ge 2 — The Lakeville Journal, July 7, 1955

The Berkshire Festival To Present 24 Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is once more launched on its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the sixteenth summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts in staggering amounts! Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

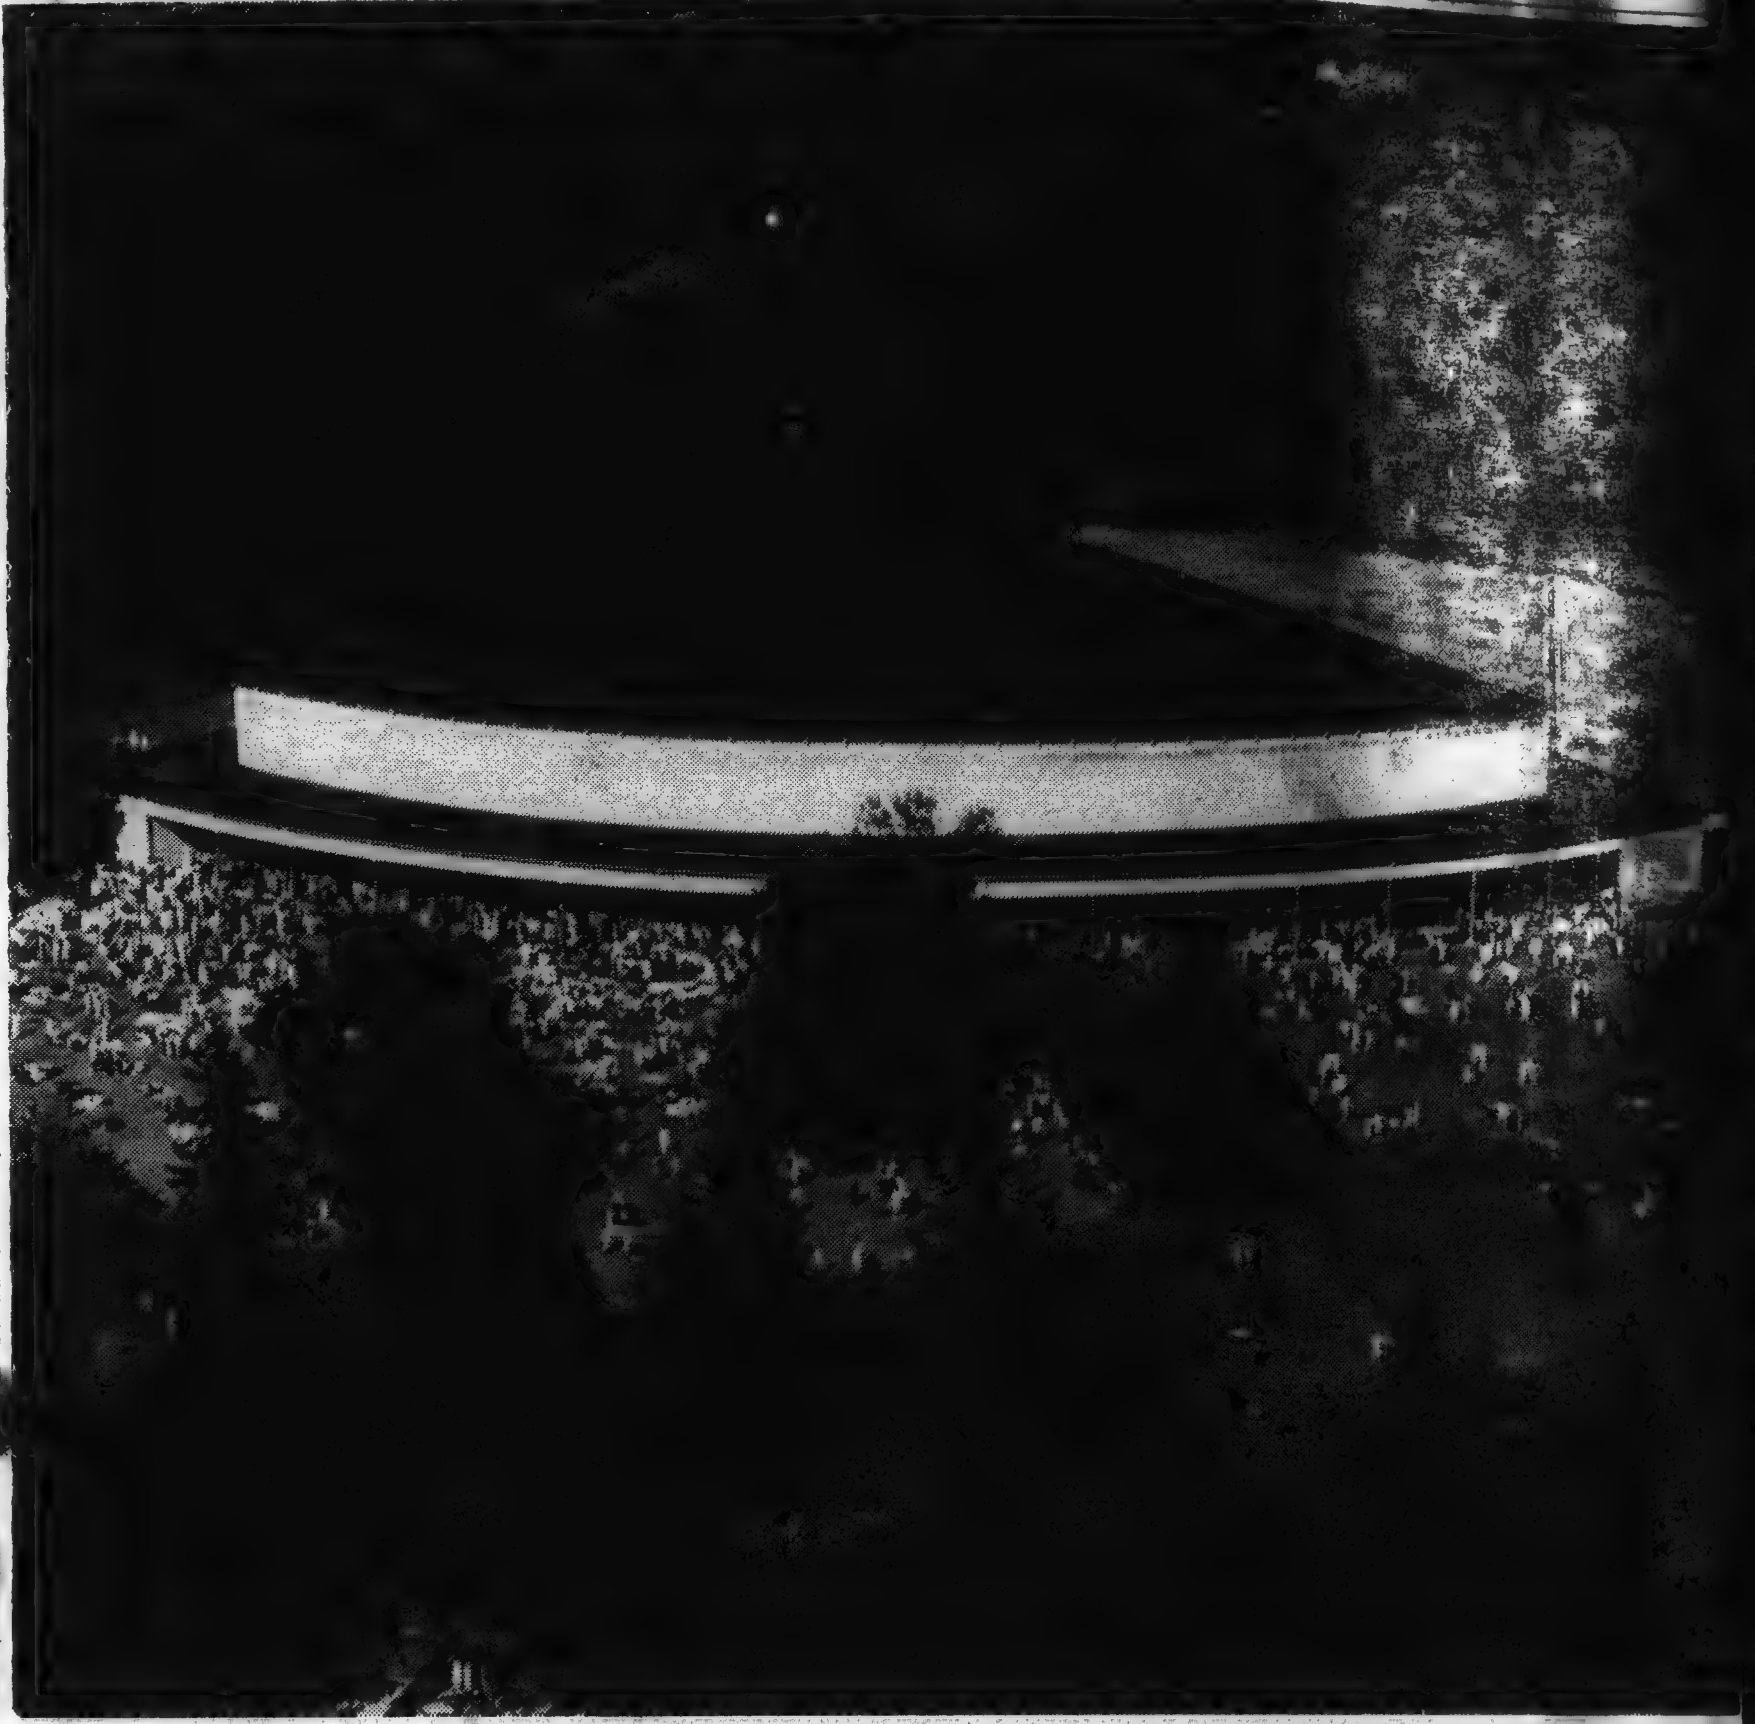
Again, in 1955, the Berkshire Festival will [illegible]-four concerts, [illegible] Wednesday evening, [illegible] the first of six Wednesd[illegible] of Beethoven's chamber m[illegible] such noted aggregations as [illegible] Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and rec[illegible] by Isaac Stern and Alexander Z[illegible], Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Pia[illegible]gorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure. The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adee Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentaton of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinatti Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series: Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Dir[illegible] of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, [illegible] conduct the Orch[illegible] in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed

(Continued on Page Twenty-one)



PIE FROM THE SKY . . . four-and-twenty concerts instead of blackbirds will do the "singing" when this pie is opened! Tanglewood drew 135,000 people in 1954 and signs point to an even greater attendance this year. Called the "most important American music festival," Tanglewood attracts music-lovers from all over the world.

Berkshi[illegible] Festival

(Continue[illegible] Page Two) concerts, als[illegible]iday and Saturday evenin[illegible] Sunday afternoons, comm[illegible]riday, July 22, and concludi[illegible]ay, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Tanglewood premieres — music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills — will include this summer: Bach, Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio; Stravinsky, Orpheus; Hindemith, Der Schwanendreher; Haydn, Symphony in B Flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to Don Giovanni; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and Gloria (with chorus); Faure, Pavane; Milhaud, Serenade; Honegger, Symphony No. 4; Sessions, Suite from The Black Maskers; Barber, Pr[illegible] of Kierkegaard; Beethoven, Fidelio Act II; Bloch, Schelomo; Str[illegible], Suite from Der Rosenkavalier.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr. Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, Fidelio (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures the Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center). A representative range of Beethoven's [illegible] including string [illegible] and violin, piano [illegible] will be hear[illegible]esday evening pro[illegible]

10—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Thursday, July 7, 1955

Local Residents To House Harvard, Radcliffe Singers

Nearly 80 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, who Sunday afternoon will sing in Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in the third Berkshire Festival concert are house guests of local residents.

The college students who sing each year in Boston with the orchestra and appeared at Tanglewood last season, will arrive tonight, to rehearse for the next two days with the orchestra and soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Chairman Named

[illegible]nder the chairmanship of D. [illegible] Edman, Harvard student, the [illegible] and hostesses are: Dr. and [illegible] Thurlow H. Pelton of 21 Cro[illegible] Donald McPherson, 14 Paisley Ter.; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, 500 Williams St.; Mr. and Mrs. Zenas C. Colt, 497 Holmes Rd.; Mrs. Brace W. Paddock, 435 South St.; Mr. and Mrs. James W. Raynolds, 19 Brunswick St.; Dr. and Mrs. Wendell G. Ahern, 52 Brunswick St.; Mr. and Mrs. Jay C. Rosenfeld, 173 South Mountain Rd.; Dr. James E. Breslin, 219 South Mountain Rd.; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Edman, 584 South St.; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Galt, 51 Bishop Pkwy., all of Pittsfield.

Also, Mrs. Raymond L. Buell, Mrs. Eaton Woolverton, Rev. and Mrs. William M. Crane, and Donald B. Miller, Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Dwight and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Burkat, Stockbridge; Mrs. Russell W. Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Deykin, Great Barrington, and Dr. and Mrs. Rustin McIntosh, Tyringham.

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Friday, July 8, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra, made up of members of the Boston Symphony, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute . . . ¶ Saturday, July 9, at 8:30: Thor Johnson conducting the chamber orchestra, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 10, at 2:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra in a performance of Bach's Mass in B Minor, with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 13, at 8:30: The second in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one played by the Beaux Arts Trio. . . . ¶ Friday, July 15, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting the chamber orchestra, and acting as piano soloist, in an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 16, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra in a program of I[illegible], with Samuel Mayes, cello, and [illegible] Sunday, July 17, at 2:30: [illegible] conducting the chamber o[illegible] French music, no [illegible] Mass [illegible]

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 8 1955

Music

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, [illegible] the direction of Charles Munch, presents a series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and associated groups through August 14.

July 8, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Sinfonia from "Easter" Oratorio, Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with Doriet Anthony Dwyer, soloist; Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K-504.

July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor: Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon; violin and 'cello; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn's Symphony in B Flat, No. 98 with viola solo by Joseph DePasquale.

July 10, Charles Munch, conductor: Bach's Mass in B Minor, with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists.

[illegible]

BE Eagle 7/7/55

Another Tanglewood Season

In Berkshire County, proof that sumer is really icumen in is furnished annually by the opening of the music festival at Tanglewood. Sumer therefore has icumened. Sunday saw the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center under the amiable chairmanship of Mr. C. D. Jackson; last evening saw the first concert, a superb performance of Beethoven's chamber music by the Kroll Quartet.

In the two decades that it has been in existence, the Berkshire Festival has become established as an international rather than a local or even national event. It attracts the leading musicians of the world as soloists and guest conductors; its audiences include music-lovers from every state in the Union as well as from abroad. The influence of the school started by Dr. Koussevitzky is becoming increasingly evident as a new generation of musicians develops; few of the younger artists have not studied at Tanglewood.

This season promises to out-do any of its predecessors in the numbers that attend. One reason may be that Dr. Munch has finally broken down the guards of those who would have none but Koussevitzky. The most likely influence, however, is the fact that the program this summer is to include a great deal of Beethoven. Who is the greatest of all composers is a matter of opinion; we venture to guess however that of all the "greats," Beethoven appeals to a wider and more diverse audience than any other composer.

Beethoven has his detractors, and so has Tanglewood. Any form of art includes a few self-styled experts who in the inflation of their own egos and their determination to impress those who know less than they do, consider it necessary to sneer at anything that has a mass audience. Our advice to those who enjoy great music is not to be impressed by this type of affectation, and not to let this type of phony spoil their enjoyment of the Tanglewood programs.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC SERIES OPENING AT TANGLEWOOD

First of Six Programs Set Tonight; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m.

This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," will be given in the first two week ends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

In First Appearance

Tonight Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach—the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings—along with Stravinsky's music for the ballet "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony. Soloist in the Bach Suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday night at 8:30 the second chamber orchestra concert will be given with Thor Johnson as guest conductor. Mr. Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the center.

Work by Handel

The program will be Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello, by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony will be receiving their first Tanglewood performances.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Mr. Munch will return to conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and a quartet of vocal soloists comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

These same forces performed the B Minor Mass in Boston last April during the regular winter season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert which was broadcast in part coast-to-coast during the orchestra's regular Saturday evening series over the National Broadcasting Co.

Remaining tickets for all these concerts as well as succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, telephone Lenox 600. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 6 1955

Oracle

After all Berkshire is in the same Congressional District with us Holyokers and its eastern borders are for a long run our western borders. And the highways being pretty good, and going to be better, we look upon Tanglewood and Jacobs Pillow as our terrain. The fact that there will be 100 programs of music in the Tanglewood and South Mountain area this summer now gives to Berkshire the title of summer music capital of the North Eastern States, which by the way include New York. Consider what courage and vision two Boston women and the Boston Symphony Orchestra had to set up this tremendous chapter in the musical life of the nation.

✡ ✡

Lakeville Journal; 7/7/55

Programs Listed For Tanglewood Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a years leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross' students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tangewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger.

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello (July 16); Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi: Gloria (July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honegger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Sat. July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun. July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

JUL 5 1955

Berkshire Festival Opens Tomorrow

Special to The Standard-Times 047

LENOX, July 5—The 1955 Berkshire Festival will open at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven.

The quartet will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods:

Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (middle), and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (late).

During the course of the six week festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act 2 of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Northampton, and Holyoke Junior College. He is a driving instructor at [illegible] Driving School, Northampton.

Springfield 7/8/55

YWCA Sponsors Tanglewood Trip

Planned July 24 for Boston Symphony Concert

The YMCA is offering an opportunity to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, perform three of Beethovan's Symphonies, Symphony No. 1 in C. major, Symphony No. 4 in B. flat and Symphony No. 6, the Pastorale Symphony.

This program begins at 2.30 on July 24 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. A bus will leave the YWCA, at 26 Howard St. at 11 a. m. and the return trip will be made at the end of the concert.

There is a refreshment stand on the grounds at Tanglewood where sandwiches and beverages may be purchased. However, it is suggested that all persons going on this trip take their own lunches.

The cost of this trip includes transportation and ticket expenses. All reservations and trip fees must be made at the YWCA no later than July 11.

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Summer Time . . . a wonderful time to enjoy the beauties of the Berkshire Hills and listen to the great music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood. This estate of 210 acres was once the meeting place of Emerson, Holmes and Melville; the residence of Nathaniel Hawthorne from 1850 to 1851 when he imagined his Tanglewood Tales and the Wonder Book, and wrote the House of the Seven Gables. Now Tanglewood is the setting for the Festival which inaugurates its 1955 season on July 6th with the first of 24 concerts. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will assist on July 10 in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. Enjoy music at night under the stars or absorb it along with the Sunday sunshine . . . programs and ticket information may be had by writing to Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

NHRR Menu
July 1955.

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 3 1955

Tanglewood Festival Opening

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass. — Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director Charles Munch.

041

For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

Former Student to Conduct

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Hayln and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

These concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

Total of 24 Concerts

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts.

Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22 to Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat music shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

[126]

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC SERIES OPENING AT TANGLEWOOD

First of Six Programs Set Tonight; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m.

This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," will be given in the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

In First Appearance

Tonight Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach—the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings—along with Stravinsky's music for the ballet "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony. Soloist in the Bach Suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday night at 8:30 the second chamber orchestra concert will be given with Thor Johnson as guest conductor. Mr. Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the center.

Work by Handel

The program will be Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello, by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony will be receiving their first Tanglewood performances.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Mr. Munch will return to conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and a quartet of vocal soloists comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

These same forces performed the B Minor Mass in Boston last April during the regular winter season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert which was broadcast in part coast-to-coast during the orchestra's regular Saturday evening series over the National Broadcasting Co.

Remaining tickets for all these concerts as well as succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, telephone Lenox 600. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 6 1955

Oracle

After all Berkshire is in the same Congressional District with us Holyokers and its eastern borders are for a long run our western borders. And the highways being pretty good, and going to be better, we look upon Tanglewood and Jacobs Pillow as our terrain. The fact that there will be 100 programs of music in the Tanglewood and South Mountain area this summer now gives to Berkshire the title of summer music capital of the North Eastern States, which by the way include New York. Consider what courage and vision two Boston women and the Boston Symphony Orchestra had to set up this tremendous chapter in the musical life of the nation.

Lakeville Journal, 7/7/55

Programs Listed For Tanglewood Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a years leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program [illegible] century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which [illegible] the Boccherini Concerto for Cello with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist, and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's [illegible] department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross' students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tangewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger.

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello (July 16); Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi: Gloria (July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honegger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Sat. July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun. July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

College. He [illegible] driving [illegible] at [illegible] Drive, Northampton.

YWCA Sponsors Tanglewood Trip

Planned July 24 for Boston Symphony Concert

The YMCA is offering an opportunity to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, perform three of Beethovan's Symphonies, Symphony No. 1 in C. major, Symphony No. 4 in B. flat and Symphony No. 6, the Pastorale Symphony.

This program begins at 2.30 on July 24 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox. A bus will leave the YWCA, at 26 Howard St. at 11 a. m. and the return trip will be made at the end of the concert.

There is a refreshment stand on the grounds at Tanglewood, where sandwiches and beverages may be purchased. However, it is suggested that all persons going on this trip take their own lunches.

The cost of this trip includes transportation and ticket expenses. All reservations and trip fees must be made at the YWCA no later than July 11.

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Summer Time . . . a wonderful time to enjoy the beauties of the Berkshire Hills and listen to the great music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood. This estate of 210 acres was once the meeting place of Emerson, Holmes and Melville; the residence of Nathaniel Hawthorne from 1850 to 1851 when he imagined his Tanglewood Tales and the Wonder Book, and wrote the House of the Seven Gables. Now Tanglewood is the setting for the Festival which inaugurates its 1955 season on July 6th with the first of 24 concerts. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will assist on July 10 in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. Enjoy music at night under the stars or absorb it along with the Sunday sunshine . . . programs and ticket information may be had by writing to Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

NHRR Menu
July 1955

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 3 1955

Tanglewood Festival Opening

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass. — Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director Charles Munch.

041

For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

Former Student to Conduct

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Hayln and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

These concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

Total of 24 Concerts

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts.

Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22 to Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat music shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 58,894

JUL 5 1955

Berkshire Festival Opens Tomorrow

Special to The Standard-Times

047

LENOX, July 5—The 1955 Berkshire Festival will open at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven.

The quartet will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods:

Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (middle), and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (late).

During the course of the six-week festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed [illegible] all nine symphonies [illegible]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 4 1955

Tanglewood Greets Munch; Hears Praise of Beethoven

Conductor Hopes for 'Fervent Communion' of Musicians, Listeners at 18th Festival; Rockefeller Foundation Aid Announced

Lenox, July 3 — Moved by the tumultuous applause and warm reception that made his appearance at the opening exercises of the 13th season of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood a triumphant return, Charles Munch — the world famous conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra — gave a moving explanation of the principal reason behind the decision to feature the works of Beethoven during the Berkshire Festival's 18th season.

"Elevating, Enabling"

Describing Beethoven's music as something that expresses everything a human can feel, the director of the music center said the famed composer expresses both happiness and suffering in his works. Dr. Munch added that "Beethoven's music is both elevating and enabling — such that it will forever be as necessary to those who love music as faith is necessary to the lovers of Christ."

Enraptured with the Beethoven theme, Dr. Munch told students and guests that it is the message of Beethoven that gives to Schiller's words "Bruder, uber, sternenzelt; muss lin lieber vater wohnen" — a significance that resounds throughout the entire world.

In closing his address, the conductor, just returned from his native France, stated, "I hope with all my heart that our festival here in the beautiful Berkshire Hills, under this guidance, will be a blessing that may unite all — those who make music and those who listen to it — in a noble and fervent communion."

Composer Present

Introduced to the group in the theater-concert hall was Boris Blacher, noted European composer of Russian birth who has long resided in Germany. Now director of the Hochschule Fur Musik in Berlin, he will be the guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center this season.

Richard Burgin, popular concert master of the Boston Symphony, was introduced as the acting assistant director of the center in the absence of Aaron Copeland who is in Europe this summer on his first free season since the opening of the school on the Tanglewood grounds.

William Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who succeeds his father-in-law, Lewis Perry, resigned after 12 years of fruitful endeavor, explained that the Rockefeller Foundation has announced it will match all gifts in excess of $15,000 for the next five years with a ceiling to the grant of $125,000. Thus with $18,000 raised already this season every dollar contributed by friends both old and new will be matched by the Foundation.

Closing the exercises in traditional style was the rendering of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" by the 400-voice student chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross. This was a masterwork by the choral director of the center who benefited from but a single rehearsal before the program began Carried through the stately pines of Tanglewood by the gentle Berkshire breeze, the music echoed over the waters of Lake Mak-en-nac to thrill the hundreds of visitors on the grounds today.

Stars Meet

With each succeeding year new appearances in the student body of the music center point to the esteem with which Tanglewood is held the world over. And this summer is no different from previous ones. No less a personage in the music world than Jan Sibelius' own nominee for a scholarship is enrolled — a composer protege from Finland.

Of the 405 students in attendance 372 represent every state in the country, 33 are from Canada, and 18 foreign nations are represented.

Area Represented

Topping the list of Western Massachusetts enrollees at the center for advanced study is Miss Cristine Cardillo of North Adams, rising young soprano who a few years ago won the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and last summer was featured at the Central City Opera Center in Colorado. She is studying drama in the opera department.

Others from the opera are Stephen Harbachick and Barbara Jasmin of Springfield — both enrolled in the opera department; Max Watras of Chicopee, studying the clarinet; Robert Ceeley of Williamstown, composition; and Marjorie Kember of Pittsfield, audition in the opera department and Jayn Frances Rosenfeld, of Pittsfield, enrolled in the study group.

A star in her own right — Marcia Henderson of Hollywood and television fame and a native of Williamstown — is taking the opportunity of making her initial visit to Tanglewood today and met for the first time the "star" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who has thrilled her with his performances of Ravel's Bolero. She last saw him conduct in Carnegie Hall in New York as a guest conductor back in 1948 and since then has awaited meeting him. The chance came this afternoon in her own native county of Berkshire, now the summer home of Dr. Munch.

Many Scots do not know that the bones of St. Andrew rest in the cathedral of Amalfi on Italy's Sorrento penisula.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 4 1955

EZRA WINTERS MURALS SHOWN IN PITTSFIELD

Berkshire Museum Program Includes Sculpture by Peter Abate

By WAYNE C. SMITH

Pittsfield, July 3—The Berkshire Museum in keeping with the increased interest in the arts in this area during the summer season, presents its major programs of the year during July and August.

The first of two monthly programs prepared by Stuart Henry, director of the museum, opened this afternoon. This program features the work of Ezra Winter, popular muralist of the second decade of the century, and provides the first retrospective exhibition of his work.

Also included in the program is a one-man show of sculpture by Peter Abate of Boston, skyscapes by Helmut Siber, water colors by Paul E. Decker, 19th and 20th century French prints loaned by Ferdinand Roten of Philadelphia, and photographs of famous musicians by George J. Kossuth, loaned by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opening this afternoon was in honor of the Winter exhibition. The abate sculpture was not set up because the artist had not yet brought the special stands for the sculpture. The Decker paintings are being shown in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood.

Ezra Winter was born at Manistee, Mich., on March 10, 1886. He attended Olivet College for two years and then entered the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts. In 1911 he was awarded a scholarship for study at the American Academy in Rome.

Returning to America after five years of study and travel in Europe, Winter turned to mural painting, which was then very much in vogue, with murals a popular decoration for architecture but always apart from it. The most famous, and perhaps best of his murals, is the one he did for the Radio City Music Hall. It measures 60 by 40 feet, the largest mural ever completed in America.

His other murals appear in such buildings as the United States Supreme Court, Cunard Building, Eastman Theater, New York Cotton Exchange, United States Chamber of Commerce and the Library of Congress.

Included in the show are some of the studies preparatory to these and other murals, photographs of some of the completed murals and of the artist working on them. The show also contains some of the artist's few easel paintings.

Such a show cannot be used as the basis for an evaluation of the artist's work as his major achievements were in the field of mural paintings which must be studied in situ as the correlationship between the mural and supporting architecture is very important. His easel paintings are largely negligible.

Winter's murals are seen to have been based on Italiafn traditions and of a style which met with popular and official favor. In some, though, like that for the Radio City Music Hall, he is seen to have been inventive and contemporary in spirit. It is felt that if he had lived a quarter of a century later (he died in 1949) his work would command a greater attention today than it does.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,234

JUL 3 1955

Four Concerts At Berkshire Festival Listed

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 2—The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood here will comprise an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio, (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano, Wednesday, July 13; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 15 and 16, and Sunday afternoon, July 17).

047

The Friday evening program will mark the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Mr. Bernstein has chosen a all-Mozart program, with Jenni Toutel, mezzo - soprano wh teamed with Mr. Bernstein for memorable festival concert tw
Summers ago, as soloist. The pro gram is designed as a preview o the widespread observance o Mozart's bicentennial which wil commence generally with th
Fall music season. Miss Toure will sing three arias, two fro
"Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstei will double as soloist in the Pian Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, music directo of the Boston Symphony Orche tra, will conduct both the Satu day evening and Sunday afte noon concerts. The July 16 pr gram will be 18th Century Itali music of Vivaldi and Boccheri highlights of which are the Bo cherini Concerto for Cello, wi

Samuel Mayes, 1st cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the festival chorus of Mr. Ross' students.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 7 1955

Tanglewood Festival Opens With Kroll Quartet Recita

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 6—Here we are again for the opening of the 16th session of the Berkshire Music Festival under the aegis of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year, as last, the festival opened with the first of a series of six Wednesday night recitals by eminent ensemble groups and soloists.

117 in Audience

It fell to the lot of the Kroll String Quartet to open the series. It was a happy choice, for this distinguished quartet made known its value last season and tonight it revealed the creative genius and growth of Ludwig von Beethove in superb fashion, rousing the 117 people in the audience to prolonge applause.

We heard tonight three quarters representing the three importan periods making up the quartet period. First came the Quartet in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; then followed the Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95, and the recital concluded with the gigantic Quartet in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

As noted, the Kroll quartet was in marvellous form and they played with virility, transparency of tone and rhythmic incisiveness. Above all, their readings were scholarly and in the finest taste. One listened to the early strivings of the Opus 18, often sweetly pretty and Haydnesque, yet holding of seed o inventiveness and imaginatio which was to blossom in the Opu 131 quartets.

Moods Vary

There was much to admire i the smooth utterance of lyrica passages and the brusque, dy namic utterance in, for example the opening movement of th Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95. Th performance of the final quarte was magnificent in its spacious ness, its solidity and its expressiv ity. It was the sort of playing an interpretation that comes onl from those absolutely devoted t their music.

The members of the Kroll quartet are William Kroll and Loui Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz viola; and Avron Twerdowsky cello.

Next Wednesday night, the recital will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio, consisting of Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet violin; and Bernard Greenhouse cello. They will play three Beethoven trios, namely Trio in C Minor, Op. 1, No. 3; Trio in D Major Op. 70, No. 1, and Trio in B-Flat Major, Op. 97.

Friends Meet Again

It's something of an old home week when Tanglewood opens. Everyone seems to know every one else and be glad to see them again. In back of us Roger Sessions was talking animatedly with a member of the opera department, a pretty girl. In front of us, Mrs. Serg Koussevitzky was greeted by many people.

We find the audiences at these Wednesday night recitals quite different from those who attend the week end concerts in the shed. First of all, most of the audience arrives on time and there is absolute quiet during the performances. It is evident that these people are there to hear the music rather than be seen. It is also evident that the performers know the kind of audience for which they are playing. The recitals this season will be devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven and such grea artists as Rudolf Serkins, pianist Isaac Stern, violinist, and Grego Piatagorsky, 'cellist, will be heard.

Friday night, the first of th chamber orchestra concerts will b given in the theater-concert hall Dr. Charles Munch will lead th orchestra in the Sinfonia from th "Easter" oratorio by Bach an the same composer's "Suite No. in B Minor, for Flute and Strings." Doriot Anthony Dwyer will b flute soloist in this work. Then wil follow Stravinsky's, "Orpheus," ballet in three scenes. The concer will conclude with Mozart's sym phony in D Major, the "Prague."

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,416

JUL 7 1955

Beethoven Trios At Tanglewood Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein.

Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello,

[127]

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,252

JUL 6 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL SET FOR 16TH SUMMER

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences this evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, condctor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor;; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P. M., Sunday afternoons at 2:30 P. M.

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the six-week framework of the festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists. Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attended may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

STAMFORD'S FIRST

Gazette
SO. BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,001

JUL 8 1955

Unique Music Festival to Highlight Berkshire Mountains Summer Season

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., June 30 — A music festival unique in America will be one of the highlights of the summer season in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts.

It is the second annual Festival of Early Music, to be presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Town Hall at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, beginning August 13. A series of four Saturday evening concerts, extending through September 3, and a Sunday evening concert on September 4 are scheduled, at which French, English, Spanish, Italian, and German music of Middle Ages Renaissance, and Early Baroque periods will be presented.

Again this year, as at the first festival presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Berkshires last August, numerous works of early music never before performed in this country — indeed, not performed anywhere for centuries — will be heard.

Last year's festival, first of its kind in this country, was held at the Town Hall at Lenox, Massachusetts, shortly after conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood season. The Stockbridge Town Hall has been chosen as the site of the 1955 festival because of superior acoustics and more ample parking facilities which it offers.

The New York Pro Musica Antiqua, a non-profit organization, was established in 1953 to make possible, for the first time in the United States, the presentation by professional musicians of the musical masterpieces of Medieval, Renaissance, and Early Baroque periods. The music of these periods — extending roughly from 1200 to 1700 — is now practically unknown to music lovers, although scholars acknowledge it to be among the great achievements of artistic man. Thus it is that while many people today are familiar with the great names in, say, Renaissance art — Titian, Michaelangelo or da Vinci — few have heard of (let alone "heard") a work by their great musical contemporaries — Orlando de Lassus, William Byrd, Josquin des Pres, or Giovanni Palestrina, for example.

The Stockbridge festival will be presented by six singers and four instrumentalists (the latter, incidentally, using authentic reproductions of musical instruments employed in performance of music in Medieval, Renaissance, and Early Baroque times, including recorders, harpsichord, viols, etc. The musicians, along with husbands or wives, have moved for the summer to a twenty-room country house near Lenox to prepare for the forthcoming festival concerts and for the concerts they will give in New York City and elsewhere next winter.

During the past winter season the group presented a series of seven public concerts in New York City before capacity audiences. In addition, the group sang at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C., at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, and at The Cloisters of The Metropolitan Museum in New York. Its most recent concert was a program of Elizabethan music at last month's Roof-Tree Raising Ceremony held at the site of the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy under contruction at Stratford, Connecticut.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 5 1955

Tanglewood's 18th Season

Time, an inexorable convincer, says that the Berkshire Music Center's season opening at Tanglewood is the 18th, though Western Massachusetts may still look upon the festival as a lusty infant, a still-new member of the family. The fact of the matter is that the summertime program in the green and lovely setting of Lenox is a shining facet of America's permanent culture, as, indeed, it has been from the outset.

Back in the beginning it was the popular hope that Tanglewood would become the "American Salzburg," a designation that now seems dated, since the festival stands on its own feet as an incomparable attraction to music lovers. It has made the Berkshires the focus of the musical world at this time of the year.

As the parents, or, at least, as the foster parents of this shining enterprise, the people of this section of Massachusetts are understandably proud of the achievement and prestige of Tanglewood. They have heard and read many appraisals of the direction and attainment of the festival. In our opinion, it would be difficult to find a simpler or more nearly accurate statement on the subject than the one offered by Dr. Charles Munch at the conclusion of his address at the opening exercises Sunday, when he said:

"I hope with all my heart that our festival here in the beautiful Berkshire Hills, under this guidance, will be a blessing that will unite all—those who make music and those who listen to it—in a noble and fervent communion."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 7 1955

Tanglewood Opens 16th Season

The 16th session of the Berkshire Music Festival opened last night at Tanglewood in Lenox with an audience of more than 1,000 hearing selections by the Kroll String Quartet. It was a Beethoven program.

Selections heard were Quartet in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; Quartet in F Minor, Op. 95 and Quartet in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131. Members of the quartet are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The musicians were in top form and received heavy applause from the audience.

The next chamber music concert will be Wednesday, featuring the Beaux Art Trio in the theatre-concert hall.

The next concert will be Friday in the theatre concert hall. Concerts in the shed start July 22.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 6 1955

Berkshire Festival

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, July 6—The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8.30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos. Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season 8750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1358 per concert, or well over the 1200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7850.

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet, William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello, will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (Early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor, Opus 95 (Middle) and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (Late).

TANGLEWOOD TALE

The phenomenal growth of "Tanglewood"—from 3 concerts to 24, from 5,000 attendance to over 100,000—is the fulfillment of a great dream.

By JULES WOLFFERS

ALTHOUGH this particular Tanglewood Tale started as late as 1934, and not in Tanglewood, the Stockbridge-Pittsfield-Lennox area in the Massachusetts Berkshires had long been noted as a center of American artistic achievement. Hawthorne, Bryant, Longfellow, and Melville all found inspiration in the beauty of its rolling, rounded landscape. Artists of all kinds were either year-round or summer residents. Formal and informal concerts and musicales presented the most illustrious European and American performers before distinguished and appreciative audiences. It was an aristocratic milieu patterned after the finest European models.

When the idea of a music festival was advanced by a committee of citizens in Berkshire County in 1934, it took hold immediately. That summer Henry Hadley conducted 65 players from the New York Philharmonic-Symphony in three concerts before audiences totaling about 5,000 on the Dan Hanna estate in Stockbridge. A second festival was held there the following summer.

In 1936 the Festival Committee invited the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky to continue the festival, with the same modest three-concert schedule. The site, however, was moved to Holmwood, the Emerson estate in Stockbridge. By this time the audiences had tripled to 15,000.

Not until the following year did the festival move to Tanglewood, its present home, a 210-acre estate presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks (later Mrs. Andrew Hepburn). The 1937 season was increased to two weeks with six concerts. At one of these, an all-Wagner program, Koussevitzky found himself competing against a storm which drummed against the tent-top with such violence that the orchestra was drowned out, and part of the audience drenched to the skin. But the redoubtable "Koussy" would not give way. Conceding temporary defeat only, he returned when the fury of the storm had somewhat abated to complete the concert for the faithful few who had stuck it out.

This was the precipitating event that led to the speedy erection of a permanent auditorium. Eighty thousand dollars was raised (it would cost at least three times as much today), and the present Shed with a capacity of 6,037 was built in time for the 1938 festival. The Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, drew up the original plans, and Professor Richard D. Fay of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology worked out the acoustical problems with remarkable results. Not only is the sound clearly projected in the auditorium, but the Shed's almost completely open construction between roof and ground allows the music to be heard on the spacious surrounding lawns.

In this inaugural season the attendance climbed to 38,000 for the six concerts. Six concerts were presented again the following summer, but in 1940 the season was increased to nine concerts in a three-week season. This year also saw the realization of a Koussevitzky-inspired dream,

(Continued on page 18)

MUNCH in rehearsal

Photo: John Brook

KOUSSEVITZKY and ELEANOR ROOSEVELT rehearsing "Peter and the Wolf"

Photo: David Milton Jones

Historic Dan Hanna Farm—site of first Berkshire Symphonic Festival, 1934.

Photo: Howard S. Babbitt, Jr.

"Tanglewood" today

Musical Courier

TANGLEWOOD TALE
(Continued from page 5)

the establishment of the Berksh Music Center, with a six-week te principally for advanced perform In 1941 festival attendance [illegible] to 95,000 and a theater-concert h with a chamber music hall, also arinen-designed, were added.

Wartime conditions forced the ab donment of the festival in 1942, Koussevitzky continued the Cen with funds contributed largely fr his own resources. The following su mer Koussevitzky resumed the fe val with a small chamber orches playing Mozart, and in 1945 six cha ber-orchestra concerts were devo to Bach and Mozart, thus beginni a tradition which continues to t present, although other composers a now regularly included.

The following year saw a resumption of the full-scale festival, with the Bach-Mozart concerts preceding the nine-concert series. Koussevitzky completed his 25-year tenure with the Boston Symphony in 1949, but he remained as director of the Center and conducted much of the next year's festival.

With the passing of Koussevitzky, Charles Munch assumed conducting duties at Tanglewood. Last summer the attendance figure reached 118,000 in a six-week festival with a chamber concert, chamber orchestra concert, and two full symphony concerts each week.

The pattern of Tanglewood is a gradually shifting one. This summer the six-week Wednesday-Friday-Saturday-Sunday sequence remains the same. But the full symphony orchestra will be heard three times weekly for the final four weeks, from July 22 to August 14. Six Bach-Mozart concerts will be presented the first two weeks, starting July 8. Opening event each week will be a Wednesday evening concert devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. The accent this year, as a matter of fact, is on Beethoven; all nine symphonies and many other works have been scheduled. For complete information write: Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 8 1955

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MO

Prospects for Berkshire Festival

6-55

Weekend Concerts Starting

The Berkshire Festival series, popularly known as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," begins at Tanglewood this evening at 8:30.

Members of the Boston Symphony will form a chamber orchestra for concerts tonight and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Charles Munch will conduct the Friday and Sunday programs, with Thor Johnson on the podium Saturday.

Tonight's concert will include the Sinfonia from Bach's "Easter" Oratorio, Bach's Suite in B minor for Flute and Strings, Stravinsky's music for the ballet "Orpheus," and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D major, the "Prague." Doriot Anthony Dwyer will be flute soloist.

On Saturday evening the selections will be Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B minor, Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante in B-flat, Hindemith's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra, "Der Schwandendreher," and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B-flat. Joseph de Pasquale will be viola soloist.

On Sunday's program will be Bach's Mass in B minor, presented with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists including Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

The second week's concerts will begin Wednesday evening, July 13, with the Beaux Arts Trio in a program of Beethoven's trios. On Friday evening, July 15, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the chamber orchestra in a Mozart program. He will be soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453), and Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing three arias.

* * *

On Saturday evening, July 16, Mr. Munch will direct the chamber orchestra in a program of Vivaldi and Boccherini. The Festival Chorus and Samuel Mayes, cello soloist, will participate. Mr. Munch returns the following afternoon with the chamber orchestra in a program of French works including selections by Rameau, Ravel, Fauré, Milhaud, and Honegger.

All of these concerts will be held in the Theater-Concert Hall, evenings at 8:30 and afternoons at 2:30.

Joseph de Pasquale, who will be viola soloist at the Berkshire Festival concert Saturday evening.

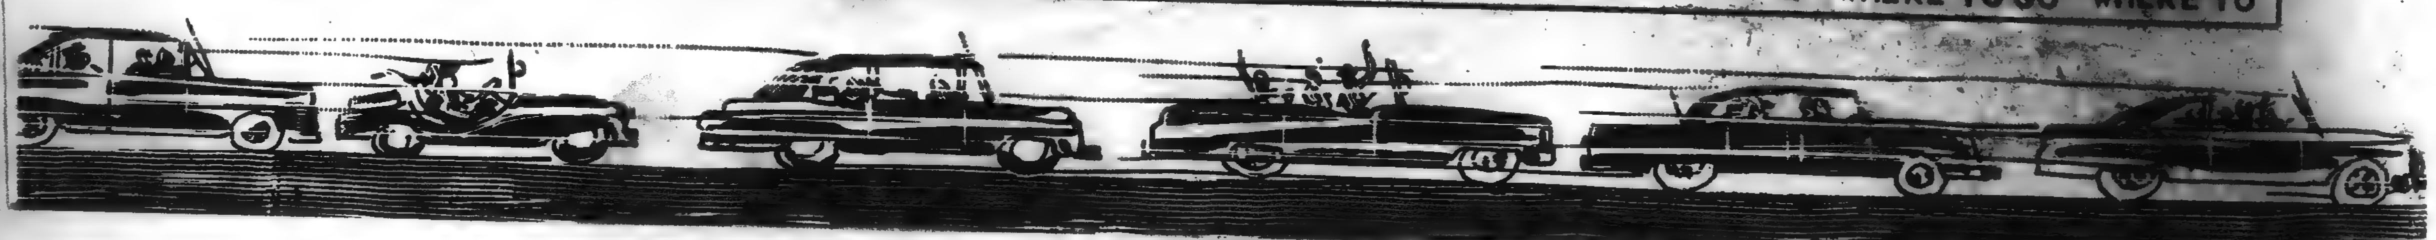
July 1 15, 1955 10c

Playtime

THE MAGAZINE FOR HAPPY TRAVELING

WHERE TO GO - WHERE TO STAY - WHERE TO DINE - WHERE TO GO - WHERE TO STAY - WHERE TO DINE - WHERE TO GO WHERE TO GO

WHERE TO GO - WHERE TO STAY - WHERE TO DINE - WHERE TO GO - WHERE TO STAY - WHERE TO DINE - WHERE TO GO WHERE TO



The victory for the jazz invaders was not easily won, and rearguard battles are still being fought but both at Lenox and Newport, the jazz concerts are firmly established. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose summer festival is at Tanglewood, near Lenox, does not deplore the challenge and is maintaining a polite aloofness. But insiders know that their box-office receipts will benefit, too, because the success of the adjacent jazz concerts in the Berkshire Music Barn will increase the number of travelers and visitors, and many will also partake of Beethoven, and Bach "under the stars".

6 Lenox, opening of Berkshire Music Festival, by Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood. Theatre Concert Hall, 8:30, July 6, The Kroll String Quartet; July 13, Beaux Arts Trio. "Bach-Mozart" concerts by the B.S.O. Chamber Orchestra, Fri., Sat. at 8:30, and 2:30 on Sundays.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS

CHAMBER MUSIC

1st WEEK

BEETHOVEN

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 6

✱ THE KROLL STRING QUARTET ✱

String Quartets

C minor, Op. 18, No. 4
F minor, Op. 95
C sharp minor, Op. 131

2nd WEEK

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 13

✱ BEAUX ARTS TRIO ✱

Trios

C minor, Op. 1, No. 3
D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost")
B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")

3rd WEEK

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 20

✱ ISAAC STERN and ALEXANDER ZAKIN ✱

Violin Sonatas

No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2
No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring")
No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2

4th WEEK

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 27

✱ NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET ✱

String Quartets

G major, Op. 18, No. 2
E flat major, Op. 127
A minor, Op. 132

5th WEEK

WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 3

✱ RUDOLF SERKIN ✱

Piano Sonatas

F major, Op. 10, No. 2
D major, Op. 10, No. 3
B flat, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier")

6th WEEK

WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 10

✱ GREGOR PIATIGORSKY and RALPH BERKOWITZ ✱

The Cello Sonatas

F major, Op. 5, No. 1
G minor, Op. 5, No. 2
A major, Op. 69
C major, Op. 102, No. 1
D major, Op. 102, No. 2

"BACH-MOZART" CONCERTS --- THEATRE-CONCERT HALL

X

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 8

BACH
Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio
BACH
Suite No. 2, for Flute and Strings
Soloist: DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER
STRAVINSKY "Orpheus"
MOZART "Prague" Symphony (K. 504)
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 9

HANDEL Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12
HAYDN Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello
HINDEMITH "Der Schwanendreher"
HAYDN Symphony in B flat, No. 98
Viola Solo: JOSEPH DE PASQUALE
Conductor: THOR JOHNSON

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 10

BACH
Mass in B minor
with Harvard Glee Club,
Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
ADELE ADDISON, Soprano
FLORENCE KOPLEFF, Contralto
JOHN McCOLLUM, Tenor
DONALD GRAMM, Bass
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Y

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 15

MOZART
Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz", (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo")
"Non temer" ("Idomeneo")
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Soloist: JENNIE TOUREL, Soprano
Conductor: LEONARD BERNSTEIN

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 16

Italian Music

VIVALDI Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11
VIVALDI Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10
BOCCHERINI Concerto for Cello
VIVALDI Gloria (with Chorus)
(HUGH ROSS Conducting)
Soloist: SAMUEL MAYES
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 17

French Music

RAMEAU Suite from "Dardanus"
RAVEL "Le Tombeau de Couperin"
FAURE Pavane
MILHAUD Serenade
HONEGGER Symphony No. 4
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA --- MUSIC SHED

A

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 22

BEETHOVEN
Overture to "Coriolan"
Violin Concerto
Symphony No. 7, in A major
Soloist: ISAAC STERN
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 23

BACH-RESPIGHI Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor
BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 2, in D major
SESSIONS Suite from "The Black Maskers"
STRAUSS "Death and Transfiguration"
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 24

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 1, in C major
Symphony No. 4, in B-flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

B

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 29

HANDEL Suite, "Water Music"
SCHUMANN Symphony No. 4, in D minor
BARBER "Prayers of Kierkegaard"
(with Chorus; Soloist: LEONTYNE PRICE)
BRAHMS Symphony No. 4 in E minor
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 30

BEETHOVEN
Overture to "Egmont"
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Soloist: RUDOLF SERKIN
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 31

BRAHMS
Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Soloists: ISAAC STERN and GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

C

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 5

BEETHOVEN Missa Solemnis
(with Chorus and Soloists)
IN MEMORY OF SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY
ADELE ADDISON, Soprano
EUNICE ALBERTS, Contralto
DAVID LLOYD, Tenor
MAC MORGAN, Bass
Conductor: LEONARD BERNSTEIN

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 6

BEETHOVEN Fidelio, Act II
(with Chorus and Soloists, including Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan)
WAGNER Excerpts from "Götterdämmerung"
Siegfried's Rhine Journey
Siegfried's Death Music
Immolation Scene
Soloist: MARGARET HARSHAW, Soprano
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 7

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 8, in F major
Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major
Symphony No. 5, in C minor
Soloist: EUGENE ISTOMIN
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

D

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 12.

BRAHMS Variations on a Theme by Haydn
BLOCH "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra
DEBUSSY "La Mer"
RAVEL "Daphnis and Chloe", Suite No. 2
Soloist: GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 13

WAGNER Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"
BRAHMS Symphony No. 3, in F major
DEBUSSY Three Nocturnes
STRAUSS Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier"
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 14

BEETHOVEN
Overture, "Leonore", No. 3
Symphony No. 9, in D minor
(with Chorus and Soloists)
ADELE ADDISON, Soprano
CATHERINE AKOS, Contralto
DAVID LLOYD, Tenor
DONALD GRAMM, Bass
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

A SEASON OF BEETHOVEN

MUNCH, MONTEUX & BERNSTEIN TO CONDUCT AT TANGLEWOOD

Again this year the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Lenox, Mass., will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program. The young conductor also will be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9.

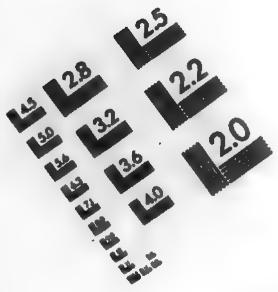
Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve (full orchestra) Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

REDUCTION
RATIO
17x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

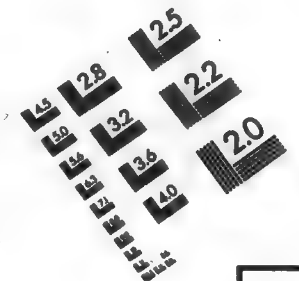
1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



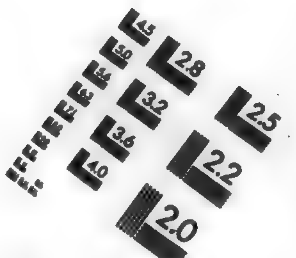
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0

2.8
3.2
3.6
2.5
2.2
2.0

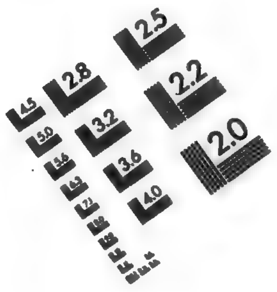
PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0



2.8
3.2
3.6
2.5
2.2
2.0



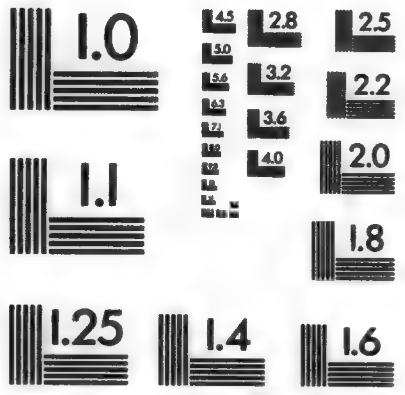
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0
4.0

2.8
3.2
3.6
2.5
2.2
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0
1.8
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6

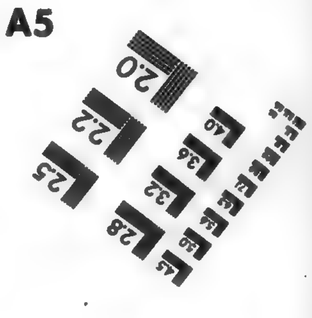
1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

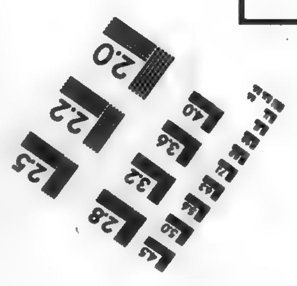


2.0
2.2
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8

2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3

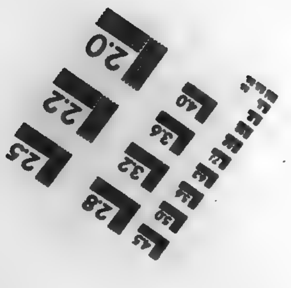


2.0
2.2
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8

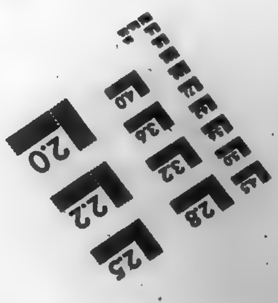
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
2.5
3.6
3.2
2.8



2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Eagle July 9, '55

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; MUSIC INN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183.

Sunday

July 10

Tanglewood

10:00—Department 1 (Friends)
2:30—Theater-Concert Hall.
Conductor: Charles Munch
Mass in B Minor Bach
(With Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Bruno Eisner, pianist.
C Major Quartet ("Dissonant") Mozart
Quartet Number 3 Hindemith
Piano Quintet Schumann

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Art Farmer Quintet, with Addison Farmer, Art Taylor, Freddie Redd, Gigi Gryce.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7.00. Final performance, "Time Out for Ginger."

Monday

July 11

Tanglewood

8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. (Friends) Forum

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Sabrina Fair," with Gaye Jordan, William Roerick, Amy Douglass, Margaret Hamilton.

Tuesday

July 12

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Gigi"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Gigi"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

Wednesday

July 13

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall
Beaux Arts Trio
Trios Beethoven
C minor, Op. 1, No. 3
D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost")
B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater.

Thursday

July 14

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra (Friends)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

Friday

July 15

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Soloist: Jennie Tourel.
Mozart
Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K.425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo")
"Non Temer" ("Idomeneo")
Piano Concerto in G major (K.453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

Saturday

July 16

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Overture to "Anacreon" Cherubini
Concerto for Cello Boccherini
Concerto Grosso with Four Violins, Op. 3, No. 10 Vivaldi
Gloria Vivaldi
(Hugh Ross conducting)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Theater, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.

July 17

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends)
4:00—Theater-Concert Hall.
Conductor: Charles Munch.
French Music
Suite from "Dardanus" Rameau
Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande" Faure
Pavane Faure
Symphony No. 4 Honegger
8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Max Roach, Clifford Brown Quintet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.

July 18

Tanglewood

8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.
Forum

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson in "The Old Maid."

July 19

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Crucible"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Fifth Season"

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

July 20

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall
Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin
Beethoven Violin Sonatas
No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2
No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring")
No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

July 21

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

July 22

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Isaac Stern.
Beethoven
Overture to "Coriolan"
Violin Concerto
Symphony No. 7 in A major

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

July 23

Tanglewood

10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal.
8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux.
Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor Bach-Respighi
Symphony No. 2 in D major Beethoven
Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions
"Death and Transfiguration" Strauss

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.

July 24

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Department 1. (Friends)
2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra.
Conductor: Charles Munch.
Beethoven
Symphony No. 1 in C major
Symphony No 4 in B flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Thelonius Monk Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00

July 25

Tanglewood

8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum.

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan.

July 26

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs.

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Picnic"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial"

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program)

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

July 27

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet.
Beethoven String Quartets
G major, Op. 18, No. 2
E flat major, Op. 127
A minor, Op. 132

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

July 28

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends)

Berkshire Playhouse

3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show."

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Count Basie Orchestra.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.

July 29

South Mountain

10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Music String Quartet.

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; Merce Cunningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish dancer, East Coast debut.

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch.
Suite, "Water Music" Handel
Symphony No. 4 in D minor Schumann
"Prayers of Kierkegaard" Barber
(With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price)
Symphony No. 4 in E minor Brahms

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 3:00 (La Meri), 8:45 (play); Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

July 30

Tanglewood

10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal.
8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin.
Beethoven
Overture to "Egmont"
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")

South Mountain

4:00—New Music String Quartet.
String Quartet Boccherini
String Quartet Jerome Rosen
String Quartet, Op. 28 Anton von Webern String Quartet in D major Mozart

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.

July 31

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music Hall, Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends)
2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Soloists, Isaac Stein and Gregor Piatigorsky.
Brahms
Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Symphony No. 1 in C minor
8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3. Composers' Forum. (Friends)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Teddy Charles Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.

August 1

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Depts. 2 and 4. Concert of Chorus and Opera. (Friends. Special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Edward My Son"

August 2

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends)

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer.

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"Tovarich."

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week)

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

August 3

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin.
Beethoven Piano Sonatas
F major, Op. 10, No. 2
D major, Op. 10, No. 3
A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier")

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer. East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 4

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 5

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein.
Missa Solemnis Beethoven
(With chorus and soloists)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 6

Tanglewood

10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal.
3:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends)
8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw
"Fidelio," Act 2 Beethoven
Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" Wagner
Siegfried's Rhine Journey
Siegfried's Death Music
Immolation Scene

South Mountain

4:00—Sonata Recital. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider
Sonata in C major, K.296 Mozart
Sonata in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2 Schubert
Sonata in B flat, K.378 Mozart
Rondo in B minor, Op. 70 Schubert

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.

August 7

Tanglewood

10:00—Chamber Music Hall. (Friends)
2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Eugene Istomin.
Beethoven
Symphony No. 8 in F major
Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major
Symphony No. 5 in C minor

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.

August 8

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet.

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including premiere of Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required)

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—To Be Announced.

August 9

Tanglewood

8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required)

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Late George Apley"

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Here We Come Gathering"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

August 10

Tanglewood

8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.
Beethoven
The Cello Sonatas
F major, Op. 5, No. 1
G minor, Op. 5, No. 2
A major, Op. 69
C major, Op. 102, No. 1
D major, Op. 102, No. 2

Jacob's Pillow

9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 11

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced)

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 12

Tanglewood

8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky.
Variations on a Theme by Haydn Brahms
"Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra Bloch
"La Mer" Debussy
"Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Ravel

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 13

South Mountain

4:00—New York Woodwind Quintet. George Schick, piano.
Sinfonia Bernard Heiden
Allegro and Arioso Ingolf Dahl
Quartet No. 4 in B flat G. Rossini
Quintet in E flat, K.452 Mozart
Quintet Hindemith

Berkshire Music Barn

4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet.

Tanglewood

10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Public rehearsal.
3:00—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends)
8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux.
Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" Wagner
Symphony No. 3 in F major Brahms
Three Nocturnes Debussy
Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Strauss

Pro Musica Antiqua

8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. French chansons and English madrigals.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.

August 14

Tanglewood

10:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends)
2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch.
Beethoven
Overture, "Leonore," No. 3
Symphony No. 9 in D minor
(With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm)

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.

August 15

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Dizzy Gillespie and his Quintet.

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—"Shadow and Substance." Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens.

August 16

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—To Be Announced.

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Sabrina Fair"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

August 17

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 18

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 19

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Order, Paul Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabry, modern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 20

South Mountain

4:00—Leontyne Price, soprano. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider. String Quintet and three percussions and harpsichord.
Chaconne for strings Purcell
Chansons Madecasses, for voice, flute, violoncello and piano Ravel
Lorca Romanzen Killmayer
Salve Regina Scarlatti

Pro Musica Antiqua

8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. Italian early Baroque music.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Dixieland.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 21

Music Mountain

4:00—Berkshire Quartet.

Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Folk Into Jazz

Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.

August 22

Berkshire Playhouse

8:45—Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens in "Shadow and Substance."

August 23

Malden Bridge Playhouse

8:45—"Picnic"

Williamstown Summer Theater

8:40—"The Rainmaker"

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.

August 24

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 25

Music Inn

8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 26

Jacob's Pillow

4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance Theater, Aubrey Hitchins, artistic director. World premiere of two new ballets. Ruth St. Denis in a new work, "Freedom." Xenia Zarina in dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Persia.

Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

August 27

Pro Musica Antiqua

8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. William Byrd, sacred and secular works.

South Mountain

4:00—Budapest String Quartet.
Quartet Dorico Respighi
Quartet, Op. 7 (1908) Bartok
Quartet, Op. 33, No. 2 Haydn

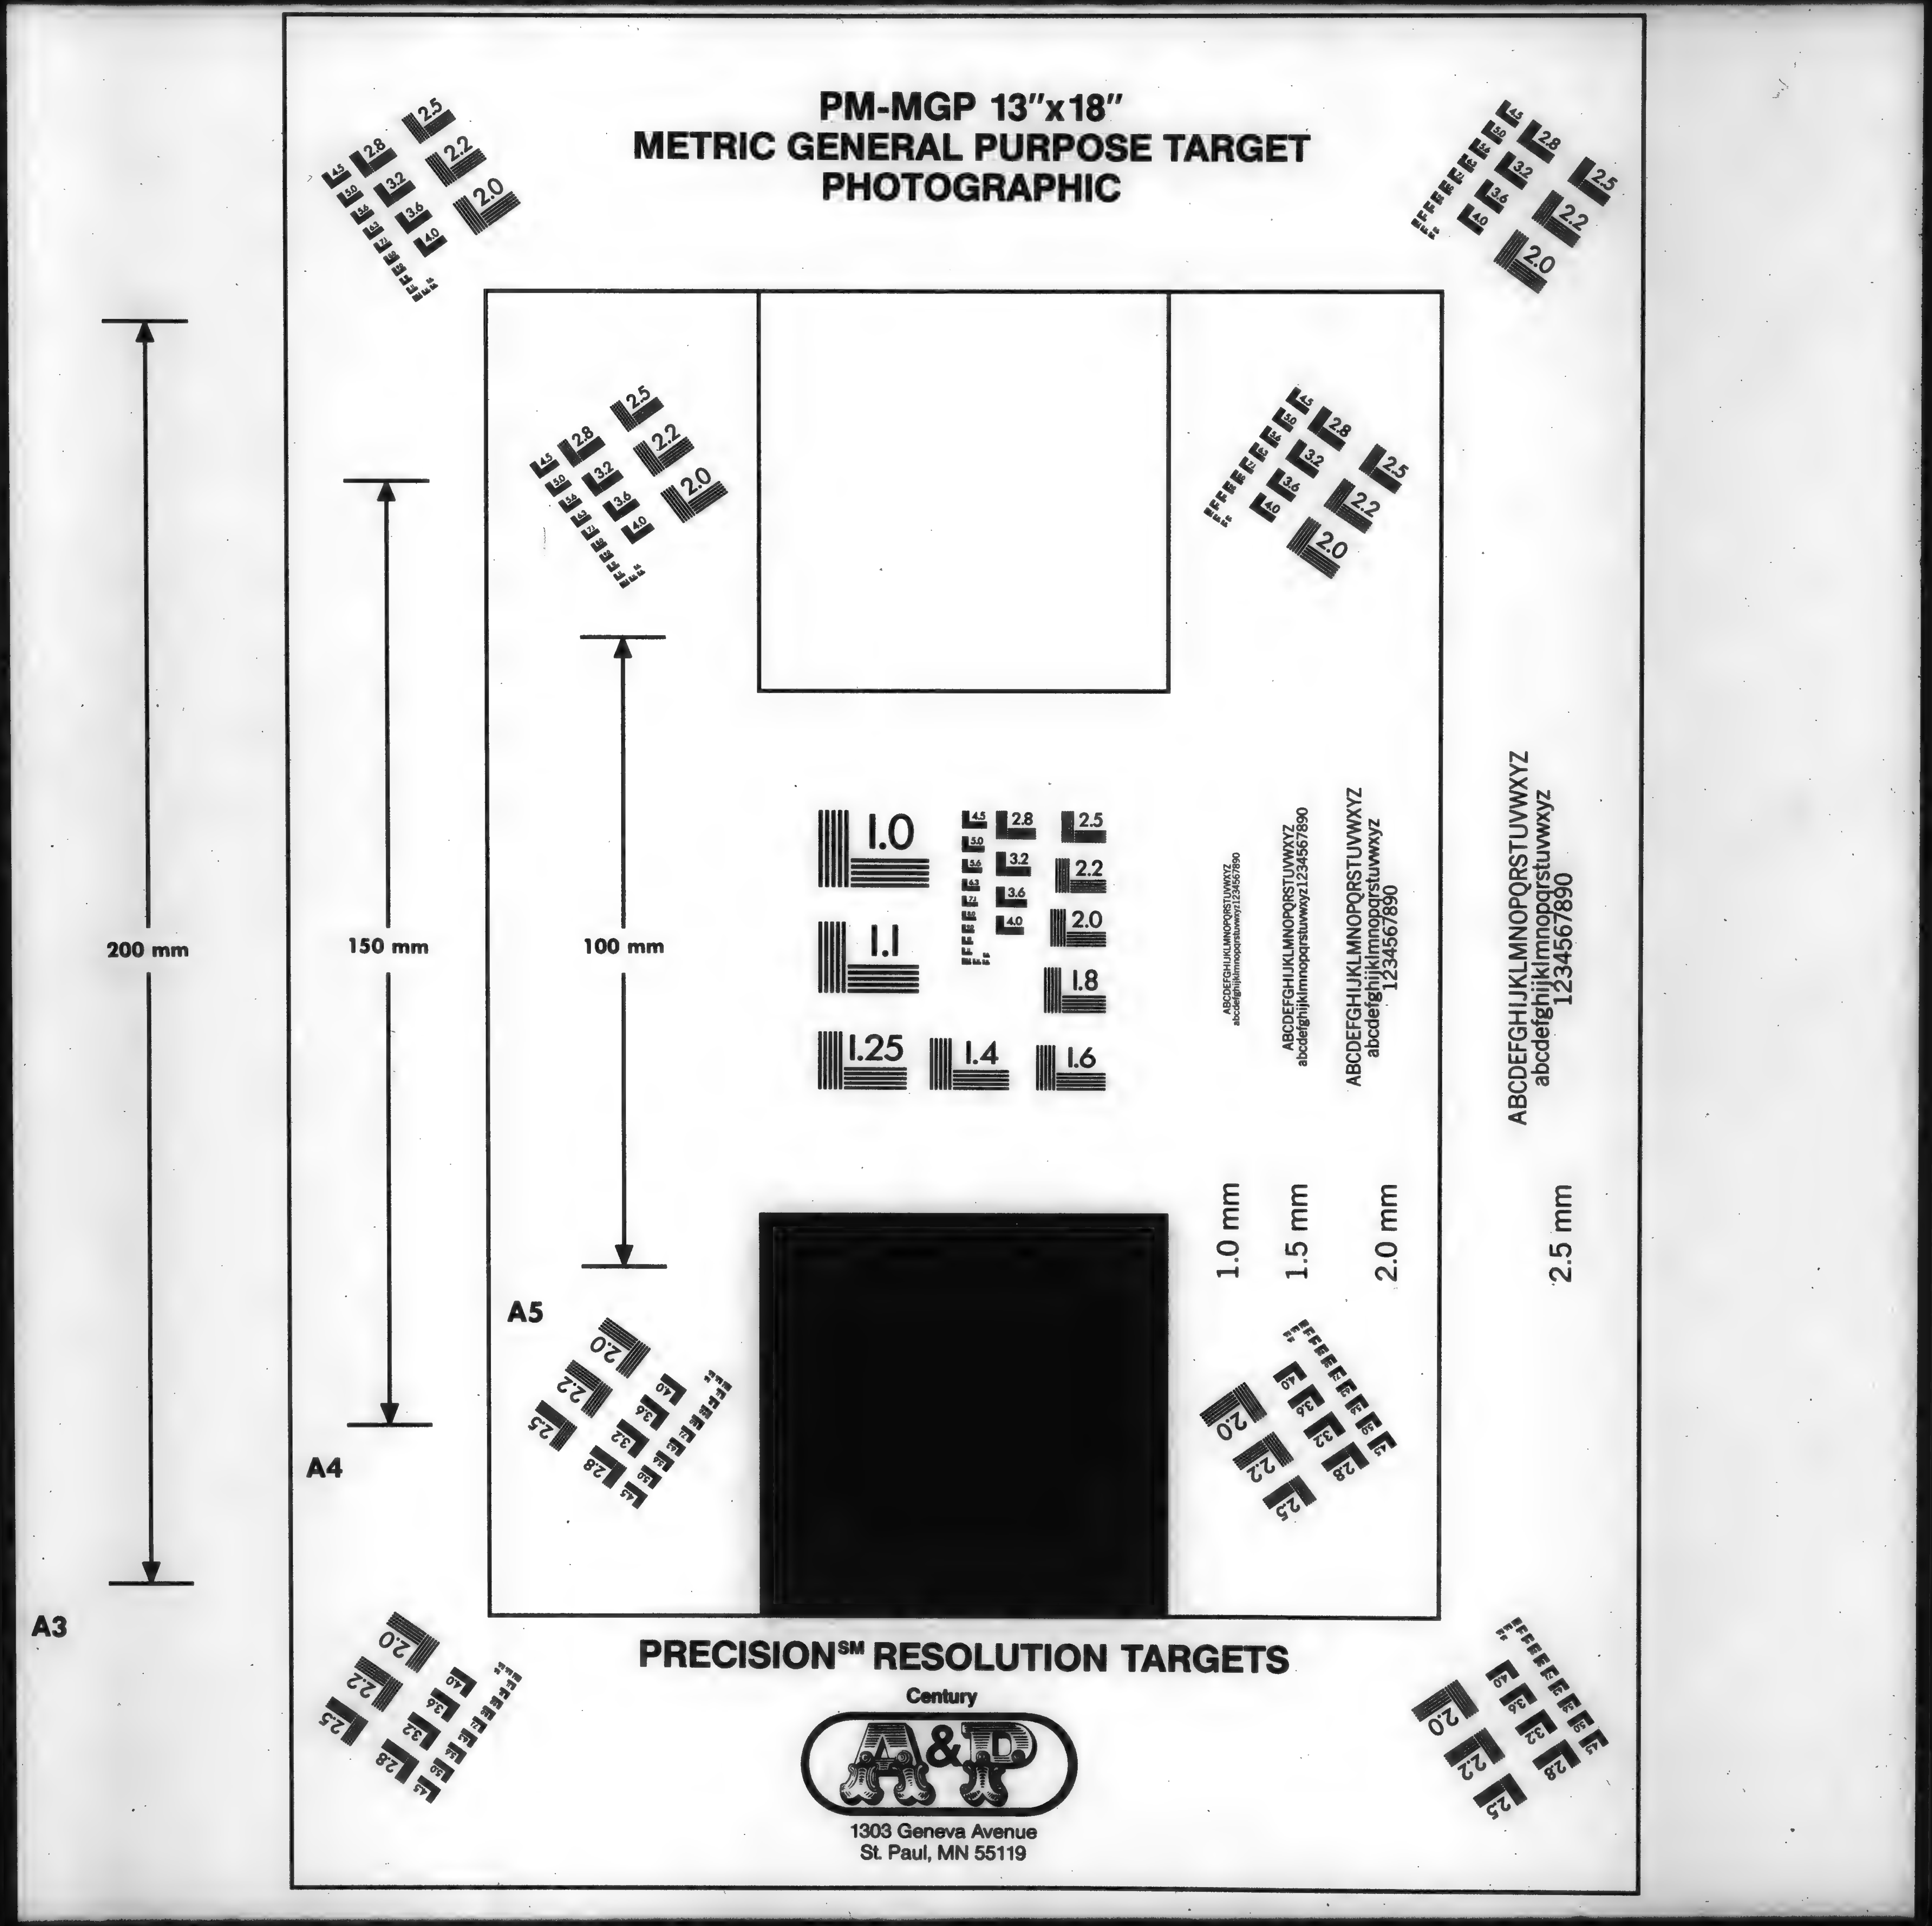
Berkshire Music Barn

8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Swing.

Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A3
A4
A5
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Eagle July 9, '55

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TA
Route 183 from center of tow
7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BE BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on I
MER THEATER, on Main S

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Frid
July 10 Tanglewood 10:00—Department 1 (Friends) 2:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch Mass in B Minor — Bach (With Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Bruno Eisner, pianist. C Major Quartet ("Dissonant") — Mozart Quartet Number 3 — Hindemith Piano Quintet — Schumann Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop; Art Farmer Quintet, with Addison Farmer, Art Taylor, Freddie Redd, Gigi Gryce. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7.00. Final performance, "Time Out for Ginger."	July 11 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. (Friends) Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair," with Gaye Jordan, William Roerick, Amy Douglass, Margaret Hamilton.	July 12 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Gigi" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Gigi" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 13 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Beaux Arts Trio Trios — Beethoven C minor, Op. 1, No. 3 D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost") B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater.	July 14 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse. 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 15 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conc Soloist: Jennie Tourel. Mozart Overture to "Don Giovanni" Symphony in C major, "Linz" Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Ze "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo") Piano Concerto in G major (K Soloist: Leonard Bernstein Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Pla Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 17 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 4:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch. French Music Suite from "Dardanus" — Rameau Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande" — Faure Pavane — Faure Symphony No. 4 — Honegger 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Max Roach, Clifford Brown Quintet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	July 18 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson in "The Old Maid."	July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles M Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Play Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 24 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Department 1. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major Symphony No 4 in B flat Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Thelonius Monk Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 25 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan.	July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show." Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 2 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Conce Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and ningham & Company; Mariqui Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Suite, "Water Music" Symphony No. 4 in D minor "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (With chorus. Soloist: Leonty Symphony No. 4 in E minor Continuing: Berkshire Playhou (play); Malden Bridge Playh Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 31 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall, Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Soloists, Isaac Stein and Gregor Piatigorsky. Brahms Academic Festival Overture Concerto for Violin and Cello Symphony No. 1 in C minor 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3. Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Teddy Charles Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 1 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Depts. 2 and 4. Concert of Chorus and Opera. (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Edward My Son"	August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer. East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memor chestra. Conductor: Leonard Be Missa Solemnis (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Play Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 7 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Beethoven Symphony No. 8 in F major Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major Symphony No. 5 in C minor Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 8 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet. Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including premiere of Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—To Be Announced.	August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 1 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Variations on a Theme by Hay "Schelomo" for Cello and Orch "La Mer" "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Play Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 14 Tanglewood 10:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 Symphony No. 9 in D minor (With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 15 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dizzy Gillespie and his Quintet. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Shadow and Substance." Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens.	August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 18 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 1 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterso Sutherland in works by William ern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhous Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown S
August 21 Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Folk Into Jazz Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 22 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens in "Shadow and Substance."	Aust 23 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic" Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 24 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 25 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 2 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance artistic director. World premier St. Denis in a new work, "Fr dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Continuing: Berkshire Playhous Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown S

9, '55

ummer Calendar

Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; MUSIC INN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183.

lay	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
1 od Hall, ds) Fair," dan, Wil- k, Amy Margaret	July 12 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Gigi" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Gigi" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 13 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Beaux Arts Trio Trios Beethoven C minor, Op. 1, No. 3 D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost") B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater.	July 14 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 15 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Soloist: Jennie Tourel. Mozart Overture to "Don Giovanni" Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K.425) Arias, "Al Desio" (K.577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo") "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo") Piano Concerto in G major (K.453) Soloist: Leonard Bernstein Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45 Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 16 Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch Soloist: Samuel Mayes Overture to "Anacreon" Cherubini Concerto for Cello Boccherini Concerto Grosso with Four Violins, Op. 3, No. 10 Vivaldi Gloria Vivaldi (Hugh Ross conducting) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Theater, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
od Hall, Brun- hor Wil- Old	July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 22 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Isaac Stern. Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 23 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor Bach-Respighi Symphony No. 2 in D major Beethoven Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions "Death and Transfiguration" Strauss Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
d Hall, Fig- Lipson, Martha Swan.	July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show." Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 29 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Music String Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; Merce Cunningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish dancer, East Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Suite, "Water Music" Handel Symphony No. 4 in D minor Schumann "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Barber (With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price) Symphony No. 4 in E minor Brahms Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 3:00 (La Meri), 8:45 (play); Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 30 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Overture to "Egmont" Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") South Mountain 4:00—New Music String Quartet. String Quartet Boccherini String Quartet Jerome Rosen String Quartet, Op. 28 Anton von Webern String Quartet in D major Mozart Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
Concert and 4. us and . Spe- uired) y Son"	August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adreano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer. East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 5 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Missa Solemnis Beethoven (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 6 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 3:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw "Fidelio," Act 2 Beethoven Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" Wagner Siegfried's Rhine Journey Siegfried's Death Music Immolation Scene South Mountain 4:00—Sonata Recital. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider Sonata in C major, K.296 Mozart Sonata in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2 Schubert Sonata in B flat, K.378 Mozart Rondo in B minor, Op. 70 Schubert Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
Jazz dern oncert Opera. ere of Rope." l tick- unced.	August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 12 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky. Variations on a Theme by Haydn Brahms "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra Bloch "La Mer" Debussy "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Ravel Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 13 South Mountain 4:00—New York Woodwind Quintet. George Schick, piano. Sinfonia Bernard Heiden Allegro and Arioso Ingolf Dahl Quartet No. 4 in B flat G. Rossini Quintet in E flat, K.452 Mozart Quintet Hindemith Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Public rehearsal. 3:00—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" Wagner Symphony No. 3 in F major Brahms Three Nocturnes Debussy Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Staruss Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. French chansons and English madrigals. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
llespie d Sub- epperd Deirdre	August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 18 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 19 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Order, Paul Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabry, modern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 20 South Mountain 4:00—Leontyne Price, soprano. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider. String Quintet and three percussions and harpsichord. Chaconne for strings Purcell Chansons Madecasses, for voice, flute, violoncello and piano Ravel Lorca Romanzen Killmayer Salve Regina Scarlatti Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. Italian early Baroque music. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Dixieland. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
trud- Deirdre w and	Auust 23 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic" Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 24 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 25 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 26 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance Theater, Aubrey Hitchins, artistic director. World premiere of two new ballets. Ruth St. Denis in a new work, "Freedom." Xenia Zarina in dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Persia. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 27 Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. William Byrd, sacred and secular works. South Mountain 4:00—Budapest String Quartet. Quartet Dorico Respighi Quartet, Op. 7 (1908) Bartok Quartet, Op. 33, No. 2 Haydn Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Swing. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

Eagle 7/8

First Student at Tanglewood Returning as Guest Conductor

SOLOIST TOMORROW at the chamber concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood will be Joseph de Pasquale, first violist of the BSO.

TANGLEWOOD — The second chamber orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tomorrow by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson, guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8.30 p.m.

Mr. Johnson, who is music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center. During the war he spent four years in the Army Signal Corps and during this period, with the Army's permission, he filled his first big guest engagements with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the New York Philharmonic and the Boston Pops.

Heads Ojai Festival

In addition to his duties with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, where he has been since the autumn of 1947; he is head of California's annual Ojai Music Festival, which he organized; director of the Moravian Early American Music Festival in Bethlehem, Pa., and the Peninsula Festival at Ephraim, Wisconsin; and a regular conductor at the May Festival in Ann Arbor, Mich., by the Philadelphia Orchestra. He was also a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1948-49 season.

He has just returned from a tour of the Far East as co-conductor of the Symphony of the Air, the former NBC Symphony Orchestra.

At the concert tomorrow, Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony will be receiving their first Tanglewood performances.

The viola soloist, Mr. de Pasquale, has been principal viola with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1947. Then in his 27th year, he was at the time the youngest first viola of any major symphony orchestra in the United States. A native of Philadelphia, he is a graduate of the Curtis Institute where he studied with Louis Bailly, William Primrose and Max Aronoff. During World War II he enlisted in the Marine Corps and served in the Marine Band ("The President's") in Washington, D.C., playing trumpet. In the Marine Symphony he played viola. After the war he joined the American Broadcasting Company Symphony Orchestra in New York, with which he was soloist in the Bloch Suite.

Munch Conducts Sunday

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will return to conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and a quartet of vocal soloists comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. These same forces performed the B Minor Mass in Boston last April during the regular winter season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert which was broadcast in part coast-to-coast during the orchestra's regular Saturday evening series over the National Broadcasting Company.

Of the four soloists, three are former Berkshire Music Center students who have since gone on to distinguished concert and operatic careers. Adele Addison was a student in the opera department during the summers of 1947, 1948 and 1950; Florence Kopleff studied in the choral department in 1946 and in the operatic department in 1947; and John McCollum was a member of the opera department in 1952 and 1953. Donald Gramm, a native of Milwaukee, received most of his musical training in the mid-West and he has made numerous radio and television appearances. All four have sung with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on numerous occasions, as well as with most of the other leading American orchestras.

Tanglewood, Take Note

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — A British firm has invented a silent wrapping for chocolates to cut out that rustle at concerts and theaters.

Two hundred boxes with the new plastic - based wrapping were tried out at a philharmonic society concert last night.

Society officials said they didn't hear a thing except the music. They canceled their longtime ban on chocolates with music.

Eagle 7/8

NY Post 7/7/55

Berkshire Festival Opens Tomorrow

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, begins its six weeks of summer music in the Berkshire Hills tomorrow night. A Bach-Stravinsky-Mozart program in the theater-concert hall on the estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and wrote "Tanglewood Tales," will begin the series of events which will continue through Aug. 14.

For the initial two weeks, the orchestral concerts will all be held in the smaller hall, which seats approximately 1,200. Programs in the 6,000-seat music shed will commence Friday, July 22. Twelve concerts will be presented in the famed shed which was designed by the late Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, and which is distinguished for its excellent acoustics.

This coming Saturday night's concert will be under the direction of the young American, Thor Johnson, regularly the musical director of the Cincinnati Symphony. The program will include a Handel "Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12," and two works by Haydn: "Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello;" and "Symphony in B Flat, No. 98." Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" with violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, completes the program.

Bach B Minor Mass Sunday

Bach's Mass in B Minor will be performed Sunday at 2:30 with Munch conducting and with the Harvard Glee Club plus the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Soloists are as follows: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Leonard Bernstein is to open the second week of orchestral concerts Friday night, July 15, with an all-Mozart program. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be the soloist, singing three arias. Bernstein will also double as piano soloist in the G Major Piano Concerto.

Munch returns to the podium for the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon events, July 16 and 17.

For further information write the festival office at Lenox, Mass.

Eagle 7/8

Sculpture Exhibit By Peter Abate Opens at Museum

An exhibition of sculpture by Peter Abate, opened yesterday at the Berkshire Museum. Another show, of paintings by Paul E. Decker, will open there Tuesday.

The Abate show includes about 15 pieces, described by Stuart C. Henry, director of the museum, as "chiefly semi-abstract." The pieces are marbles, bronzes and toned plasters, and the artist is an instructor at the school of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, a winner of the Prix de Rome and was once conductor of a summer sculpture course at the Berkshire Museum in association with Ivan Mestrovich.

The Decker collection, to be put on view in the lower hall, has been seen this week in the "Fishbowl" at Tanglewood. The paintings, numbering about 12, are chiefly gouaches, according to Mr. Henry. Mr. Decker, a resident of Canaan, Conn., is known also as a commercial artist and magazine illustrator. Another exhibition of his work is currently at the Tyringham Galleries.

Other current shows at the museum, include the first one-man retrospective show of mural studies and easel work by Ezra Winter, about 80 prints by modern artists from the collection of Ferdinand Roten, photograph portraits of musical notables lent through the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and paintings of the sky by Helmut Siber.

7/7/55

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

400 Music Students Register at Tanglewood

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports, with additional applications being processed daily, until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. Students from most of the 48 states, Canada and many foreign countries will arrive for the opening of the 13th session of the school on Sunday, July 3, when they will be welcomed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as director of the Berkshire Music Center. The 375 students to date have been chosen from 635 applications, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 174, including 102 who comprise members of the student symphony orchestra.

Twenty-eight foreign students have registered in the school, nine from Canada, three from Japan, two from Hawaii and France, one each from Chile, Puerto Rico, Israel, Greece, New Zealand, Mexico, Iran, Brazil, Netherlands-Antilles, Austria and Finland.

The Tanglewood Study Group includes four of the Canadians, one of the Hawaiians, and the student from Brazil.

Students at the Berkshire Music Center study orchestra playing and conduction under Leonard Bernstein; chamber music from first-chair members of the Boston Symphony; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from guest composers Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl.

Since enrollment in the Tanglewood Study Group may be for either the full six weeks, or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted. Members of this department have an opportunity to sing in the Festival Chorus made up of Berkshire Music Center students with the Boston Symphony in Berkshire Festival concerts, including such works this summer as Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," Act II of "Fidelio," and the Ninth Symphony.

7/7

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Charles Munch, music director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 6-August 14.

Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth session.

Berkshire Festival Concerts Now Open

Millbrook Round Table 7/7

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 6) with an all-Bethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (Jully 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists. Following the first two week ends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four week ends, July 22-August 14, when 12 week end concerts are held in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatos.

It is a cynical philosphy that does not recognize the perfectibility of the human race, and a stupid one that expects the untimate in our time.

Earmarked funds are those somebody has an eye on.

Tanglewood Singer To Be at First Church

Eagle 7/8

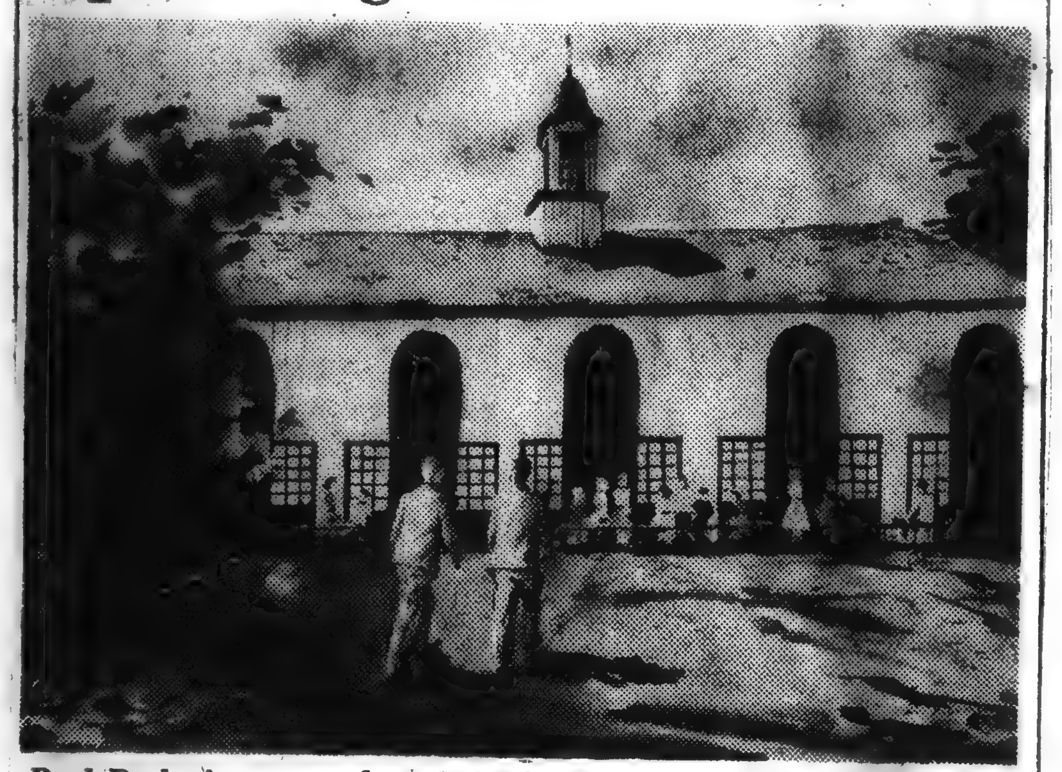
Miss Lee Gobel, mezzo-soprano with the opera department at Tanglewood, will be soloist at the 10 a.m. morning worship service at the First Congregational Church, Sunday. Her selection will be the Agnus Dei by Bizet.

Miss Gobel has been heard in the New York churches, and sang at the First Church two summers ago, when she was a student at the Berkshire Music Center. Since then she has appeared in operatic roles in New York and Hartford, Conn. Miss Gobel will sing in the opera concert at Tanglewood, Aug. 8 and 9.

The Rev. William Coolidge Hart, pastor, will preach. His topic will be, "Magnify the Lord."

Eagle 7/8

Decker Berkshire Paintings Open Tanglewood Exhibitions



Paul Decker's water color of the South Mountain Temple of Music is among the Decker works in Tanglewood's opening art show.

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture, prints and photographs again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood, and arranged by the Berkshire Museum, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

This week's exhibit is 12 watercolors by Paul E. Decker, freelance commercial artist of Canaan, Conn. A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. Decker served in the U.S. Marine Corps during the War, and upon his return to civilian life took up a study of painting at the Art Career School, New York. He has currently a one-man show at the Tyringham Galleries, and has exhibited at the Stockbridge Playhouse, in Holyoke, New York, Hartford and Silvermine, Conn. He is a member of the Connecticut Watercolor Society.

Show Local Activities

Mr. Decker's Tanglewood show includes six works commissioned by the Ford Motor Co., to go with an article, "The Musical Berkshires" by Robert Martin Hodesh. The article, written for the Lincoln-Mercury Times, was reprinted in the Ford Times 1955 edition of New England Journeys and in the July 2 edition of The Eagle's Berkshire Week, along with the Decker illustrations.

The Decker water colors show Tanglewood students; the Lenox Town Hall; the Church on the Hill, Lenox; and the South Mountain Music Temple chamber music auditorium. His other paintings are "Hilltop Barn," "Clayton, Mass. Barns," "Christmas," and three seascapes, "After Carol," "Sunset, Boothbay," and "The Beach."

For next week, Tanglewood's exhibition hall will display contemporary prints by noted modern artists, loaned by Ferdinand Roten, print dealer of Baltimore, Md.

From July 16 to 23, Helmut Siber of Mill River, Mass., will display a collection entitled "Paintings of the Weather."

July 23 to 30 will be devoted to small sculpture by Peter Abate of Brookline, and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge.

During the July 30-Aug. 6 week, paintings, drawings and prints will be shown by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art, Lenox.

A showing of sculpture and drawings by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox, director of the Sculpture Workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox Library gardens, will complete the summer shows, Aug. 6 to 14.

A collection of photographs of Tanglewood personalities, Boston Symphony Orchestra personnel, staff and students of the Berkshire Music Center, by Gus Manos, official Tanglewood photographer, from Columbia, S.C., will be shown during mid-season.

Eagle July 9

Manos

TONIGHT'S CONDUCTOR, Thor Johnson, centerfi a former Tanglewood student, now conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, discusses the Festival program at Tanglewod with these soloists, leading members of the BSO. At left, Ralph Gombeg, oboe and Richard Burgin, concertmaster; and at right, Sherman Walt, bassoon and Samuel Mayes, cello.

Second Chamber Concert at Lenox

Herald 7/9

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B minor; Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante in B flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B flat.

Music Eagle 7/8

104-Piece Student Symphony Makes Debut at Tanglewood

FRIENDS of the Berkshire Music Center turned out in some force last night to hear the first of this year's student concerts. For a student group, the orchestra of Tanglewood's Department I did pretty well. After meeting for the first time on Monday and after some four rehearsals, the 104-piece ensemble presented four works in the Music Shed, with four conductors giving the signals.

The audience, which filled more than one-third of the seats in the Shed and a scattering of blankets beyond, seemed both younger and more critical than that at Wednesday night's opening. Students were much in evidence,, as were several groups from nearby camps. The program—at least until intermission—appeared aimed at the campers, and therefore drew some cold comments from the student set.

• • •

FIRST WORK of the evening was, appropriately, "An Outdoor Adventure" by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Music Center on leave this year. James Yannatos, a member of the San Antonio (Tex.) Symphony, was the student conductor. Claude Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" was conducted by Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg and featured flutist Janet Sillars. Both were heard again in Serge Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf," the former as narrator, while George Mester was the third student conductor.

Robert Schumann's second symphony, in C major, formed the program's second half. Seymour Lipkin, assistant director of the Music Center's orchestral department, conducted, and applause was heard after each movement.

• • •

CONCERTMASTER for the program was Hiroshi Hatoyama, a student at the New England Conservatory. Outside of the strings, a number of chairs were exchanged during the evening, and it is expected that roles will be rotated within the orchestra throughout the six-week season. It is expected also that one faculty member will lead the orchestra in each of its programs, along with the several student conductors.

Members of this orchestra will also form the personnel for a series of chamber music programs open to Friends of the Center on Sunday mornings, and will also be heard in student opera productions. Their average age must be about 20 or 21, their experience ranging from music schools to membership in professional orchestras and New York recitals. Somewhat more than one-third are girls, chiefly in the string section and in instruments such as the flute.

What proportion are headed for greatness remains to be seen, perhaps during these six weeks. Both the size of last night's audience and the over-all quality of performance suggest that this guessing game should draw many participants.

—A.D.H.

Eagle 7/9

COCKTAIL PARTY given by Ted Shawn, right, was attended by a select group of about 200 friends on the afternoon that the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival opened its 14th season. With Mr. Shawn are dancers Glen Tetley, standing, and John Butler, of the John Butler Dance Theater; and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale and New York, who was a prominent leader in the establishment of Tanglewood.

Eag

Soloist D

Receives

By JAY C. ROSE

HE FIRST orches
t of the season la nglewood was the ovation to Dorio yer after she per in the Bach B flute and strin t couldn't ha son and if ich Miss A repeat a dinerie, the secon
Tanglewood
for it.

CHARLES MU
g for the first tim n,' was in superb
ach was robustly
e indications were cisive, and in excell
the opening Sinfonia Easter" Oratorio, the sounded fresh and e strings especially, ree trumpets, Roger rmand Ghitalla and M osse well deserved the cognition for which ngled them out.
The tempi in the B ite were deeply gr acious and unhurried the now famous final which he gave Miss A r head. Munch reduc rings to a desk in each nd further restrained th pplying mutes. We agr iss Anthony is worthy eference but this mo oes not sound badly w ormed as written and w hroated strings and a g nder it all.

• • •

A TANGLEWOOD fi as the ballet music heus" of Stravinsky rising Stravinsky here ays. There are lush vocative of the Hol here, the manuscript s as completed in 19
unch cut 10 minutes f
allet's normal half-ho droit pruning, althoug pity to cut some epis
In music intended to b r ballet, there is al uestion when it is pla oncert of the inclusio ages which stage ac etter illustrate. One c ssay sound accordin nclinations and cap

Eagle July 9

Soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer Receives Tanglewood Ovation

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST orchestral concert of the season last night at Tanglewood was the occasion of an ovation to Doriot Anthony Dwyer after she performed the solo in the Bach B minor suite for flute and strings.

It couldn't happen to a nicer person and if this reaction in which Miss Anthony is obliged to repeat a part of the [illegible] Badinerie, now having occurred for the second time, is to become a Tanglewood tradition, we [illegible] all for it.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, appearing for the first time of the season, was in superb vein. His Bach was robustly wholesome. The indications were clear and decisive, and in excellent style. In the opening Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio, the orchestra sounded fresh and spirited, the strings especially, and the three trumpets, Roger Voisin, Armand Ghitalla and Marcel La Fosse well deserved the special recognition for which Munch singled them out.

The tempi in the B minor suite were deeply gratifying, spacious and unhurried except in the now famous final vivace in which he gave Miss Anthony her head. Munch reduced the strings to a desk in each section and further restrained them by applying mutes. We agree that Miss Anthony is worthy of this deference but this movement does not sound badly when performed as written and with open-throated strings and a good bass under it all.

* * *

A TANGLEWOOD first time was the ballet music to "Orpheus" of Stravinsky, a surprising Stravinsky here in many ways. There are lush chords evocative of the Hollywood where, the manuscript shows, it was completed in 1947. Mr. Munch cut 10 minutes from the ballet's normal half-hour by adroit pruning, although it was a pity to cut some episodes.

In music intended to be played for ballet, there is always the question when it is played at a concert of the inclusion of passages which stage action would better illustrate. One can always assay sound according to one's inclinations and capacity. How much one's imagination can replace kinetic perception is anyone's guess.

* * * *

STRAVINSKY seems to have depicted most appropriately the emotions of the dramatis personae he attempts to depict. Particularly effective and telling are some of the scenes where Orpheus' sorrow is overpowering. Munch was at his best here as he was during the whole evening. It would appear that a rapport was in effect between him and his orchestra in which response is instantaneous with little effort from the podium and even anticipated in some cases.

* * *

MUNCH CLOSED his program with the Mozart symphony he plays on alternate years: the "Prague" D major, No. 38. This is a gay animated symphony in which Mozart uses a moderately small orchestra, omitting clarinets in all three movements and instilling a persuasive motion even in the central andante. It is admirably suited to the size orchestra used in these concerts of the season's first two weeks played in the theater-concert hall and in which some 30 musicians are utilized. It was an ensemble of very near this number that Mozart had in mind when he wrote his symphonies and Munch further preserved the spirit of the music by a symmetry and perspective fitting to all aspects of the symphony.

Ideal weather permitted the overflow audience to rest on the blankets and collapsible chairs they brought along to place on the lawn to the rear of the hall and the applause was spontaneous, cordial and prolonged.

Springfield Union 7/9/55

TONIGHT AT 8:30 — TOM'W. AT 2:30

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS. • NOW through AUGUST 14

Berkshire Festival

of the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

THEATRE—CONCERT HALL

NEXT WED. July 13, at 8:30 — BEAUX ARTS TRIO
FRI. July 15, at 8:30 — MOZART PROGRAM:
Guest Conductor — Leonard Bernstein; Soloist — Jennie Tourel, Soprano
SAT. July 16 at 8:30 — ITALIAN PROGRAM: Soloist — Samuel Mayes, Cello
SUN. July 17 at 2:30 — FRENCH PROGRAM
TICKETS Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply [illegible]
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. [illegible] LEnox 600

What's Going On

Eagle 7/9

Tonight:

8:30—Tanglewood. Theater-Concert Hall. Chamber Orchestra, Thor Johnson conducting. Works by Handel, Haydn, Hindemith.

~~8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "Light Up the Sky."~~

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, Paul Hartman in "The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "Time Out for Ginger."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

County Notes

Eagle 7/9

AT TANGLEWOOD, the 13th season of the Berkshire Music Center was officially launched at ceremonies addressed by director Charles Munch and attended by faculty members, friends, and 405 students . . . Jacob's Pillow in Lee scored another important first as 10 leading dancers of the 207-year-old Royal Danish Ballet staged their American premiere before an en-

---

John McCollum To Sing Tomorrow At Local Church

Eagle 7/9

John McCollum

GREAT BARRINGTON — Tenor John McCollum, who will be one of the Tanglewood soloists tomorrow afternoon, will sing at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning at the First Congregational Church.

Mr. McCollum will sing "If With All Your Hearts Ye Truly Seek Me" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," with organ accompaniment.

In the afternoon he will be one of the soloists in Bach's Mass in B Minor, presented by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, assisted by three other soloists, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society.

Mr. McCollum, who studied at the Berkshire Music Center, is leading tenor at the New England Opera Theater and sings with major symphony orchestras throughout the country.

Boatright To Sing At St. Stephen's

Eagle 7/9

McHenry Boatright, baritone with Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera Company, will be the first in a series of guest soloists at Sunday morning services at St. Stephen's Church. He will sing with the senior choir under the direction of Miss Mildred I. Buttrey, organist and choirmaster, at the 10 a.m. service tomorrow.

Mr. Boatright will be a member of the opera department at Tanglewood again this summer. During the past year he has been on a series of concert tours with various symphony orchestras and the New England Opera Company. One of America's outstanding baritones, Mr. Boatright won the Chicago Music Award last year.

Tanglewood artists will sing at all the services at St. Stephen's during the summer music season. Mary McKenzie will be soloist July 17. Others include Sarah Mae Endich, Harold Johnson and Adele Addison.

Whales, Tales

Eagle 7/9

So now to Tanglewood, where Hawthorne lived in a little red house for the better part of two years and wrote "The House of the Seven Gables" and planned the "Tanglewood Tales" which have given their name to the region. The house burned down in 1890 and the present red house is a replica on the old foundations. It is part of the plant of the Berkshire Music Center, somewhat ironically, since by his own confessions Hawthorne couldn't tell "Hail Columbia" from "Yankee Doodle." To this spot came Oliver Wendell Holmes from Pittsfield, to call on Hawthorne, and for longer calls came Herman Melville who could discuss with Hawthorne the metaphysics of white whales, but with whom else in Berkshire?

Holmes lived in Pittsfield from 1849 to 1856, in a fine house facing down the river meadows on what is now Holmes Road. His psychological novel, "Elsie Venner," is supposed to owe some of its setting to South Mountain. But of far more interest to us today is the work of Herman Melville and the house wherein he wrote "Moby Dick." This house, called Arrowhead, is also on Holmes Road, just south of the Holmes estate, where the road crests a little hill. It is a simple farmhouse, built in the late 18th century. Melville lived and worked here for 13 years. It is still used as a private dwelling, and has been excellently preserved.

Scales of Time

It is interesting to note that as late as 1902 the Rev. DeWitt Mallary, in his history of Lenox, mentions Melville only casually, as a visitor to Hawthorne, and speaks of him as the author of "Typee" and "Omoo," with not a word about "Moby Dick." But the good rector speaks with vast enthusiasm of the "Star Papers," written by Henry Ward Beecher in a farmhouse where Cranwell School now perches. Time has at-

---

BACH PERFORMED BRILLIANTLY BY DORIOT DWYER

Spfld Union

Flutist Received Enthusiastically in Performance At Tanglewood 7/9

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 8—There were two bright stars contributing to the first of the Bach-Mozart chamber concerts given tonight in the theater-concert hall. The first was Johann Sebastian Bach; the second was the premiere flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Both Beethoven and Mrs. Dwyer were magnificently aided by the Boston Orchestra virtuosi and Charles Munch who was making his first appearance of this festival season.

Stravinsky 'Orpheus'

In addition to Beethoven the program contained the Stravinsky "Orpheus;" a ballet in three scenes, and Mozart's "Symphony in D. Major" known as the "Prague." There was a good sized audience with many preferring to sit outside the concert hall, benefiting from what cool breezes there were.

The program opened with the Sinfonia from the "Easter" ratorio by Bach. What a glorious bit of music this is. It is exultant with its brilliant horn passages heralding the advent of the Easter season. Then followed Bach's "Suite No. 2 in B Minor" for flute and strings. Mrs. Dwyer was the soloist. Surely this unassuming, attractive young woman is one of the greatest flutists of the day. Her command of her instrument is absolute and she has a great sensitivity and a wonderful feeling for phrase and color.

The finale of this delightful suite, with its overture, rondo and little dances, is a tremendous Badinerie-Presto. Mrs. Dwyer played it at dazzling tempo. It was no surprise that the audience applauded and cheered at its conclusion. She was recalled at least six times and finally played a portion of the finale over again. Mr. Munch and the string players provided stunning assistance.

It is a far distance from Bach to Stravinsky, but somehow the music of the ballet "Orpheus" seemed to fit perfectly into the program. The ballet was written in 1947 and had its first performance the following year by the ballet society in New York City Center. George Balanchine was the choreographer.

The ballet relates the story of Orpheus and Eurydice. For the most part the music is subdued, dark and sad. It contains many lovely lyrical passages for solo strings and woodwinds and it also contains some of the barbaric color and tonal dissonance characteristic of the composer. Even without the dancers, this music is powerful, often ruthless. The performance was illuminating and it was clear that Mr. Munch realized its emotional depths and strength.

The concluding work was the Mozart "Symphony in D Major," known as the "Prague," probably because it was given its first performance in that city. Mr. Munch and his men provided a fluent reading of the work, one which had both the grace and the strength inherent in the music.

Tomorrow night Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra will make his first appearance here as conductor. He has chosen to program the "Concerto Grosso for string orchestra in B Minor" by Handel; the Haydn "Sinfonie concertante" for violin, cello, oboe and bassoon; Hindemith's "Concerto on old folk melodies for vila and small orchestra, with Dipasquale as soloist, and Haydn's "Symphony in B-Flat Major, Op. 98."

Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, Harvard and Radcliffe clubs and soloists in a performance of Bach's "Mass in B Minor." Adele Addison will make the first of three appearances in this work, singing with Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Boston Sun. Herald 7/10/55

JENNIE TOUREL, famous French soprano, who returns to Tanglewood as soloist in the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein conducts with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony on Friday night in the Theater-Concert Hall in Lenox, Mass.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Theatre-Concert Hall
Tanglewood, Lennox, Mass.

NYT 7/10

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Members of Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; Radcliffe Choral Society and Harvard Glee Club.
Bach's Mass in B minor.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violinist; Bernard Greenhouse, 'cellist; Menahem Pressler, pianist).
Program of Beethoven Trios: C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D, Op. 70, No. 1 (Ghost); B flat, Op. 97 (Archduke).

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Members of Boston Symphony conducted by Leonard Bernstein; piano soloist, Mr. Bernstein; Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano.
Mozart program: Overture to Don Giovanni; Symphony in C (K. 425); Arias, Al Desio (K. 577), and Zeffiretti and Non Temer (Idomeneo); Piano Concerto in G (K. 453).

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Members of the Boston Symphony conducted by Hugh Ross; Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano; Samuel Mayes, 'cellist; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.
Concerti Grossi in B minor and D, Op. 3, Nos. 10 and 11 .... Vivaldi
'Cello Concerto .... Boccherini
Gloria .... Vivaldi

NEXT SUNDAY, July 17, 2:30 P. M. Members of Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch.
Suite from Dardanus .... Rameau
Le Tombeau de Couperin .... Ravel
Pavane .... Faure
Serenade .... Milhaud
Symphony No. 4 .... Honegger

Eagle 7/11

IN REHEARSAL for tomorrow's Festival performance of J. S. Bach's Mass in B minor are Donald Gramm, bass soloist; John McCollum, tenor; director Charles Munch, leading members of the Boston Symphony, Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; Adele Addison, soprano; and Florence Kopleff, mezzo-soprano. Starting time is 2:30, in the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood. Manos

Chamber Orchestra Concerts Tonight, ~~Tomorrow~~ Afternoon

TANGLEWOOD — Music by Haydn, Handel and Hindemith will be played tonight at 8:30 in the theater concert hall by the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra, under the direction of Thor Johnson, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center. Joseph Pasquale will play the viola solo in Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher."

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Dr. Charles Munch will return to the podium to conduct Bach's Mass in B minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and the following vocal soloists: Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of the noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Tanglewood Tales

Chamber Music Concert Sunday Morning at 10

The first concert by chamber music students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given at the Chamber Music Hall on the Tanglewood grounds tomorrow morning at 10 when the program will be: Haydn: String quartet, Op.76, No. 2, performed by Stanley Dombrowski (Export, Pa.), violin; Heinz Perez (New York City), violin; Joseph Pietropaolo (Medford, Mass.); Bruce Klingbeil (Bay City, Mich.), cello. Hindemith: Quintet for wind instruments, performed by Suzanne Heckman (New Rochelle, N.Y.), flute; Pierre Rolland (Montreal, Canada), oboe; Elsa Ludewig (Charlottesville, Va), clarinet; Isabelle Clore (Louisville, Ky.), bassoon; Robert Ricks (Marion, N.C.), French horn. Schumann: Quintet for piano and strings, performed by Paul Gurevich (Bronx, N.Y.), violin; Barbara Dingee (Watertown, Mass.), violin; Edward Gerber (Bronx, N.Y.), viola; Philip Fink (York, Pa.), cello; Susan Pearlman (New York City), piano.

* * *

405 Students Enrolled

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, announces the 1955 student enrollment at Tanglewood totals 405 students, of which 372 are from the U.S., 33 are from foreign lands, 18 countries including Canada which has sent 10 to study music in the Berkshires.

Mr. Berkowitz will be moderator at the first of three forums, open to the public, students, and Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, which will be given in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox Library, at 8:30 p.m. on Monday when the topic will be: "For What Kind of Careers are Young Musicians Being Educated?". Speakers will be Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik, Berlin, Germany, Tanglewood's guest composer this summer; Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center opera department, and director of the New England Opera Company; and George E. Judd, of Cannonsville, N.Y., former manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Other forums are scheduled for Monday, July 18, Monday July 25.

* * *

Party Talent

At the informal party hosted by the Berkshire Music Center last Sunday, following opening exercises, high lights of the entertainment were songs by the "Tangle Tones," the 10 college student guides at Tanglewood this summer, directed by lifeguard Arthur Kerr; a satire on "The Damnation of Faust" by McHenry Boatwright, of Boston, a former Berkshire Music Center student, with his own piano accompaniment. Guide Allan Wardwell of New York City and Yale University was master of ceremonies. The jazz orchestra which played for dancing was organized on the spot and consisted of students Jules Hirsch (New York City), string bass; Joseph Hassid (Queens, Long Island), saxophone; assisted by lifeguard Arthur Kerr, who plays trombone in the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra; and Relly Raffman, of the Tanglewood bookstore staff, who is professor of music at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., at the piano.

* * *

Maestro Swings

Whenever he has an afternoon free from rehearsals with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and his duties with the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, look for music director Charles Munch on the links of the Stockbridge Golf Club, taking lessons from pro Jack White. Mr. White has no handicap on the symphony maestro yet this season, but reports considerable improvement in his game over last year, and classifies his game as average.

* * *

Copland Active Abroad

Aaron Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, is on his first leave of absence from the Tanglewood campus since the Boston Symphony's summer music school was started in 1940. Mr. Copeland has written from his summer home in the French maritime Alps an account of his recent activities and plans: "I spent the spring mostly in Paris and London. I conducted the Orchestra of the Radiodiffusion Francaise (formerly conducted by Charles Munch) in a program of my works, including my third symphony. With the BBC Symphony I conducted the full version of 'Appalachian Spring' for the first time.

"In June I attended the Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music in Baden-Baden, Germany, as U.S. delegate, and was elected first vice president of the International Society of Contemporary Music. I am engaged to conduct programs of my works in September with the radio orchestras of Munich and Baden-Baden. In October I am going to Scandinavia for the first time, and have been engaged to conduct a public concert with the Oslo Philharmonic; and conduct the radio orchestras of Helsinki, Stockholm and Copenhagen. These are part of the cultural exchange program of the American-Scandinavian Foundation of which I am an honorary fellow. I am spending the summer on the Riviera at work on a commissioned work for piano."

Spf'ld Rep.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MA

Harvard Glee Club at Tanglewood Today

7/10

Shown above is the Harvard Glee Club, G. Wallace Woodworth (extreme left) director, which will combine with the Radcliffe Choral Society this afternoon at Tanglewood in a presentation of Bach's Mass in B minor, Charles Munch conducting. Adele Addison of this city will be the soprano soloist.

[137]

INTO THE COUNTRY

N.Y. Times 7/10

Music Moves Into the Greener Areas In Summer on an Increasing Scale

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

FESTIVAL is a much-abused word. Not all of the musical undertakings that use it here and abroad have a right to it. But there is no law to prevent an ambitious committee from dressing up its venture with this attractive appellation. What counts, in the end, is not the title given to a series of programs but the content.

Whether they are called festivals or not, such series have been spreading through the country in the summer. Wherever you turn, a new set of programs is being announced. Some are modest in scope; some ambi-

Around the Country

There is, of course, the most ambitious undertaking, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, which has been in business for two decades.

First Report of New Musical Experiment

Boston Sunday Post 7/10

By TUCKER KEISER

When Serge Koussevitzky retired and the Boston Symphony ceased championing American composers, neither the New York Philharmonic nor the Philadelphia Orchestra moved into the gap created by this abdication; the power and the glory went to the Louisville.

Two years ago the culture conscious Mayor of that city received a $400,000 grant to embark on the most ambitious commissioning program yet. Composers get $1500 for each composition premiered by the Louisville Orchestra and given two succeeding performances. After the third performance the work is recorded by Columbia Records and issued on a subscription basis. These records cannot be bought separately in the regular record stores but are sold as a unit.

While new music sponsored ing work of the 19, revealing its meaning bit by bit on repeated hearings. The first impression is one of great density and even turgidity, yet on the second and third replayings one is struck by the inevitibality of the contrapuntal lines. The apparent density is seen to be a remarkable terraced series of tonal planes.

The Hovhaness Concerto is diametrically opposite to the Mennin in every respect. The composer, whose style weds Near Eastern scales to Western forms, creates the happiest sort of music with the simplest devices. Single instruments tracing intricate arabesques simultaneously over free flowing rhythmic pulsations can make vivid emotional impressions.

Both Hovhaness and Mennin are composers with something to say and who know precisely to say it.

Springfield Rep. 7/10

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 9—First of some 25 concerts and demonstrations given by students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which are open to the public through enrollment in the society of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, their contributions helping to support the school, was the concert given by the symphony orchestra of more than 100 students from all over the United States, Canada and foreign lands in the Tanglewood Music Shed, at 8.30 p. m. Thursday.

Three student conductors are making their debut on the pdoium at Tanglewood: James Yannatos, 26 of New York City, who conducts Aaron Copland's "Outdoor Overture"; Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg, 27, of New York City, who leads the orchestra in Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; George Master, 20, of Mexico City, who conducts Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," with Mr. Bauer-Mengelberg as narrator.

For this opening concert the student symphony was trained by the talented young pianist, Seymour Lipkin, assistant to Leonard Bernstein in the music school's department of orchestra and conducting, and Mr. Lipkin will conclude the program by conducting Schumann's Symphony No. 2.

* * *

Charles Munch, Boston Symphony orchestra music director, in his capacity as director of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the student symphony's second concert on Thursday evening July 14, in Schubert's Symphony No. 8 in B minor ("Unfinished") and Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

* * *

Student Concert

The first concert by chamber music students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given at the Chamber Music Hall on the Tanglewood grounds on Sunday morning (July 10) at 10 a. m., when the program will be: Haydn; String Quartet, Op. 76, No. 2, performed by Stanley Dombrowski (Export, Pa.), violin; Heinz Perez (New York City), violin; Joseph Pietropaolo (Medford); Bruce Klingbeil (Bay City, Mich.), cello. Hindemith: Quintet for Wind Instruments performed by Suzanne Heckman (New Rochelle, N. Y.), flute; Pierre Rolland (Montreal, Canada), oboe; Elsa Ludewig (Charlottesville, Va.), clarinet; Isabelle Clore (Louisville, Ky.), bassoon; Robert Ricks (Marion, N. C.), French horn. Schumann: Quintet for Piano and Strings, performed by Paul Gurevich (Bronx, N. Y.), violin; Barbara Dingee (Watertown), violin; Edward Gerber (Bronx, N. Y.), viola; Philip Fink (York, Pa.), cello; Susan Pearlman (New York City), piano.

* * *

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, announces the 1955 student enrollment at Tanglewood totals 405 students, of which 372 are from the U. S., 33 are from foreign lands, 18 countries including Canada which has sent 10 to study music in the Berkshires.

Mr. Berkowitz will be moderator at the first of three forums, open to the public, students, and Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, which will be given in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox Library, 8.30 p. m. on Monday when the topic will be: "For what kind of careers are young musicians being educated?" Speakers will be Boris Blacher, director of the Hocheschule fur Musik, Berlin, Germany, Tanglewood's guest composer this summer; Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center opera department, and director of the New England Opera Co.; and George E. Judd, of Cannonsville, N. Y., former manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Other forums are scheduled for Monday, the 18th, Monday, July 25.

* * *

Special Concert

A special concert open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and the public attending this week end's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood was given in the Chamber Music Hall today by Walter McKibben, tenor, and Ephraim Segerman, lutenist, both of New York City. At the invitation of the Berkshire Music Center they will give a program of 14th and 15th century English, French and Italian airs and arias for voice and lute.

* * *

At the informal party hosted by the Berkshire Music Center last Sunday, following opening exercises, highlights of the entertainment were songs by the "Tangle Tones," the 10 college student guides at Tanglewood this summer, directed by lifeguard Arthur Kerr; a satire on "The Damnation of Faust" by McHenry Boatwright, of Boston, a former Berkshire Music Center student, with his own piano accompaniment. Guide Allan Wardwell of New York City and Yale University was master of ceremonies.

The jazz orchestra which played for dancing was organized on the spot and consisted of students Jules Hirsch (New York City), string bass; Joseph Hassid (Queens, Long Island), saxophone; assisted by Lifeguard Arthur Kerr, who plays trombone in the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra; and Relly Raffman, of the Tanglewood bookstore staff, who is professor of music at Clark University, Worcester, at the piano.

* * *

Whenever he has an afternoon fre from rehearsals with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and his duties with the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, look for music director Charles Munch on the links of the Stockbridge Golf Club, taking lessons from pro Jack White. White has listed no handicap on the symphony maestro yet this season, but reports considerable improvement in his game over last year.

* * *

Copland in Europe

Aaron Copland, the noted American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, is on his first leave of absence from the Tanglewood campus since the Boston Symphony's summer music school was started in 1940. Mr. Copland has written from his summer home in the French maritime Alps an account of his recent activities and plans:

"I spent the spring mostly in Paris and London. I conducted the Orchestra of the Radiodiffusion Francaise (formerly conducted by Charles Munch) in a program of my works, including my Third Symphony. With the BBC Symphony I conducted the full version of 'Appalachian Spring' for the first time.

"In June I attended the festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music in Baden-Baden, Germany, as U. S. delegate, and was elected first vice-president of the International Society of Contemporary Music. I am engaged to conduct programs of my works in September with the radio orchestras of Munich and Baden-Baden.

"In October I am going to Scandinavia for the first time, and have been engaged to conduct a public concert with the Oslo Philharmonic; and conduct the radio orchestras of Helsinki, Stockholm and Copenhagen. These are part of the cultural exchange program of the American-Scandinavian Foundation of which I am an Honorary Fellow. I am spending the summer on the Riviera at work on a commissioned work for piano. Have a good summer. I'll be missing you all!"

* * *

Soloists, all members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first chairs, in the Berkshire Festival concert performance of Haydn's "Symphonic Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello" this evening are Richard Burgin, concertmaster, violin; Samuel Mayes, cello; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Sherman Walt, bassoon.

Leonard Bernstein Back To Conduct at Tanglewood

Springfield Rep. 7/10

Also Soloist in Piano Concerto on All-Mozart Program Friday; Beaux Art Trio to Play Wednesday; Bach's B-Minor Mass Today

Lenox, July 9—The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menaham Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

Bernstein to Conduct

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Dept. I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Bernstein will double as soloist in the piano concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th-century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini concerto for cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's "Gloria," which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross' students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum.

Next Sunday afternoon's program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

"Firsts" Scheduled

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini concerto for cello (July 16); Vivaldi concerto grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi "Gloria" (July 16); Faure, "Pavane" (July 17); Milhaud, "Serenade" (July 17); and Honneger, Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the week-end concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed. The programs:

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music
Beethoven: Trios—C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").
The Beaux Arts Trio—
Daniel Guilet, violin
Bernard Greenhouse, cello
Menahem Pressler, piano

FRIDAY, JULY 15—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
Mozart: Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo"), "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo")
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, soprano
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Leonard Bernstein, conductor

SATURDAY, JULY 16—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
Italian Music
Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11
Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10
Boccherini: Concerto for Cello
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Vivaldi: "Gloria," with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students
Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano
Hugh Ross, conductor

SUNDAY, JULY 17—2:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
French Music
Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"
Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"
Faure: Pavane
Milhaud: Serenade
Honegger: Symphony No. 4
Charles Munch, conductor

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

TODAY AT 2:30

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS. • NOW through AUGUST 14

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN
THEATRE—CONCERT HALL

NEXT WED. July 13, at 8:30—BEAUX ARTS TRIO
FRI. July 15, at 8:30—MOZART PROGRAM
Guest Conductor—Leonard Bernstein; Soloist—Jennie Tourel, Soprano
SAT. July 16 at 8:30—ITALIAN PROGRAM: Soloist—Samuel Mayes, Cello
SUN. July 17 at 2:30—FRENCH PROGRAM
TICKETS Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 400

Fld Rep 7/10

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL ON RADIO MONDAYS

Concerts of the world-renowned Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be broadcast by the NBC Radio network on Mondays (8.15-9 p. m.) starting tomorrow. The programs will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra with distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists. Ben Grauer will be narrator.

The concerts take place in Tanglewood, where thousands of visitors flock each week to the many orchestral, chamber and operatic programs. In addition to the concerts, the major activity is the Berkshire Music Center, where many young professionals complete their musical education. The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the late Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

1,700 at Tanglewood Hear Boston Symphony Perform

NYHT 7/10

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 9.—The flute playing of Doriot Anthony Dwyer in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Friday night, is going to be talked about for some time to come. All she did was to take complete possession of the Berkshire Festival's first orchestral concert with a solo performance that bordered on the fantastic in the Bach B Minor Suite, No. 2, for flute and strings. Some 1,700 listeners raised such a din that Charles Munch, who conducted, had to repeat the last section of the suite.

This is Mrs. Dwyer's third season as first flutist of the Boston Symphony, and though she had previously shown much promise, it required Friday night's solid achievement to convince everybody of her remarkable talent.

There was another Bach item in the program, the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio. This went along without untoward incident and also, it might be added without much excitement. Nor did the Stravinsky music for the ballet "Orpheus" create much of a stir. What it wanted most, one supposes, was the ballet to go with it. By itself the score, for all its typical flutter and flashes and starts and stops, failed in one main department—it did not communicate. However, it was given a Boston Symphony performance and that, at least, was something, when you think of the difficulties imposed by any Stravinsky score.

The last item on the list was the Mozart "Prague" Symphony, and here Mr. Munch and his musicians came through rather handsomely. There were balances in the performance, delicate and awfully clever in their adjustment. One thing about Mr. Munch, as exhibited in the first movement of the work (Adagio), he did not attempt to phrase every note with his hand, or with jerky motions of the head, or with swaying of the body, as some conductors have been known to do. Slight cues were all he needed to give, to remind his men of what had been decided previously in rehearsal. And it was miraculous how much was expressed with such little physical activity on the podium.

N.Y. H-T

MUSIC THIS WEEK

7/10

[illegible] Melodies; [illegible]; The [illegible] Tailor, Herbert.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Conductor, Charles Munch. Bach Mass in B minor with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Wednesday, 8:30. Trios in A minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke"), Beethoven. Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violinist; Bernard Greenhouse, cellist; Menahem Pressler, pianist).

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Symphony in C major, "Linz," K. 425; Arias, "Al Desio" K. 577; Zeffiretti ("Idomeneo"); "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo") (soloist, Jennie Tourel, soprano); Piano Concerto in G major K. 453 (soloist, Leonard Bernstein), Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10, Vivaldi; Concerto for Cello (soloist, Samuel Mayes), Boccherini; Gloria, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students (soloist, Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano; Hugh Ross, conductor), Vivaldi.

Sunday, July 17, 2:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Ravel; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Symphony No. 4, Honegger.

Springfield Rep 7/10

VISITS IN OUR VALLEY

by BRIAN F. KING

By the time this column appears in print we will have begun our annual vacation leave. We haven't made any definite plans, as of this writing, but we hope to get down to New York City for a day or two and we plan to spend at least a few days at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox. We may even manage to get down Cape Cod way to spend a few days with friends, a trip we'd particularly like to make because we had to postpone it two years ago when our automobile went on the blink on the very first day of our vacation.

But, in any event, we'll be back on July 31 to report our vacation adventures, especially those we may experience at Tanglewood where we have spent some of the happiest hours of our life and where we hope to renew acquaintance with Our Valley friends who feel the same way about Tanglewood as we do.

Berkshire Festival Closes Week With Bach Mass

NY Herald Tribune 7/11/55

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 10.—The first week of the Berkshire Music Festival closed this afternoon in the Theater-Concert Hall with a performance of the Bach Mass in B Minor, under Charles Munch. An ambitious undertaking, especially since the choral group—the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society,—lacked the massive vocal sound that this work very often wants.

As a matter of fact, wherever there were long passages for chorus, one could not help noting the rather aimless utterance. Furthermore, the voices being those of very young people, there was scarcely any distinction to be made between sopranos and altos and, again, between tenors and baritones. One must say, however, that the chorus sang with a will and, certainly in a musicianly manner—matters that reflected the training of their director, G. Wallace Woodworth.

Soloists Capable

The vocal soloists gathered for the occasion proved capable, indeed. Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, managed their difficult lines quite well. A special delight was the duet "Christe Eleison" sung by the two ladies. And Miss Addison and Mr. McCollum joined forces commendably in their duet "Domine Deus." Mr. Gramm, for his part, sang his aria, "Quoniam Tu Solus Sanctus" with considerable feeling for the text, as well as the musical phrase.

A general observation on this performance was the exactitude of the tempo once it was set but also the deplorable lack of a living pulse beat, a human heartbeat, if you will. For the Mass, called by Sir Hubert Parry "the mightiest choral work ever written," gave—in this rendering—only occasional intimations of such grandeur.

In addition to the vocal soloists, there were several instrumental ones recruited from the various choirs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Willie Frank was the organist.

Orchestral Program

On Saturday evening, again in the Theater-Concert Hall, Thor Johnson conducted an orchestral program. He did especially good things with Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," which is a concerto for viola and orchestra based on old folk melodies. The soloist was Joseph De Pasquale, a nonpareil violist, who did all that was expected of him, and with an almost ridiclous ease. The charming folk songs contained in this work are all beautifully treated by Hindemith, and they were so treated by Mr. Johnson, who likes this piece and makes no secret of it.

Less successful in the delivery was the Handel Concerto Grosso No 12 for String Orchestra, which, despite some enchanting ensemble work in the Larghetto and elsewhere, was played on the whole in desultory fashion. Haydn's Symphonie Concertante for Violin, Chello, Oboe and Bassoon, Op. 84, afforded many moments of pleasure despite instances of faulty intonation by violin and cello soloists.

The concluding number was the Haydn Symphony in B-Flat Major, No 98, which went quite nicely. A grand total of 8,484 attended the Friday, Saturday and Sunday concerts.

Springfield Sunday Republican 7/10/55

FIRST TANGLEWOOD CONCERT BY MUSIC SCHOOL IS SUCCESS

Student Conductors Outstanding in Performance Of Difficult Numbers

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, June 9—This is the first time we have been close enough to Tanglewood for a full season to permit our viewing the various activities of the student body of the Berkshire Music School, sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This season we propose to view in detail many of these student activities.

Speedily United

Thus, Thursday night found us in the Music Shed listening to the first concert by the Orchestra of Department 1. These young musicians got together for the first time on Monday, but being musicians they speedily united and their performance, under student conductors and under Seymour Lipkin, who is assisting Leonard Bernstein in the conducting department, was something of a revelation.

The word "fear" is apparently unknown in the vocabulary of youth. James Yannatos, 26, of New York put the orchestra through its paces in Aaron Copland's "An Outdoor Overture." This is a rugged work which places considerable technical demands upon orchestra and conductor. That all got through it so well was tribute to Lipkin's coaching, the innate musicianship of Yannatos and the caliber of the orchestra.

Then came on stage 27-year-old Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg of New York who is said to be related to the great Mengelberg, longtime conductor of the Concertgebow Orchestra. Be that as it may, this young man is a musician to his finger tips. He chose to conduct Debussy's "Prelude a L'Apres-midi d'un Faune," one of the most demanding works, from an interpretive standpoint, in the repertoire. He provided a sympathetic, controlled emotional reading of this work; one which was sensitive without being maudlin.

Again, Bauer-Mengelberg had the wholehearted assistance of this admirable orchestra [illegible] did not fail to acknowledge [illegible] splendid performance by flutist Janet Sillars of University City, Mo.

Lipkin took over after intermission to conduct Schumann's second symphony. As always, this splendid pianist and admirable conductor provided a performance rich in detail, depth, and tonal beauty. It was a scholarly reading, but never stodgy. This young conductor would grace any podium in distinguished fashion. His pianistic journeyings would add lustre to any orchestra he conducted.

E NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 10, 1955

Music: Berkshire Fete

Season at Tanglewood Gets Under Way

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, at least a substantial section of it, and its conductor, Charles Munch, began their annual task of adding the ministry of music to the generously endowed Berkshire countryside at Tanglewood here Friday night.

This year's Berkshire Festival, when it moves into the Big Shed in a fortnight, will pay a lot of attention to Beethoven. But the first two week-ends, which employ a reduced Boston Symphony, are devoted to what are described as "Bach-Mozart" concerts.

•

Well, there was some Bach and Mozart on Friday's program, and there was also a piece by Stravinsky. Saturday night there will be Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Next week a number of other composers who are neither Bach nor Mozart will be welcomed to the programs. And why not? There is a lot of fine music for a small orchestra, and an idea that is inherently attractive need not turn into a rigid formula.

Friday's concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall began with the joyous Sinfonia from Bach's "Easter" Oratorio. Mr. Munch and his players let it sing out. If it was meant to serve as a kind of benediction for this year's festival, it certainly set an exulting tone.

Next came Bach's Suite No. 2, in B minor, for flute and strings. The soloist was Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and if anybody thought that Mr. Munch's choice of a piece that gave a woman the first solo chance of the festival was just gallantry, Mrs. Dwyer quickly made it clear that she had impressive credentials as a musician. This young woman, who has been solo flutist with the orchestra for three seasons, played with crispness, clarity and a great deal of sparkle. So brilliantly did she perform the closing Badinerie that she and the ensemble had to repeat it.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer

Mr. Munch led the Suite in enamoring fashion. There is more sheer music in the opening movement of this suite than one encounters in long essays by other men, and the conductor evoked the full value of its humanity.

•

Stravinsky was represented by his "Orpheus," a score designed to go with a ballet. It is no doubt tremendously effective when the dancers are doing their share on the stage. Nevertheless, it has some interesting things that make it viable as an orchestral piece pure and simple. Mr. Munch gave a persuasive account of its subtle rhythms and balance of timbres.

The evening ended with Mozart's lovely "Prague" Symphony. The audience, as Tanglewood audiences go, was modest in size—1,700. However, there were lots of persons outside the theatre on the lawn. And after all, this is only the beginning.

CONCERT PLEASES AUDIENCE OF 3000 AT TANGLEWOOD

Springfield Rep 7/10/55

Handel, Haydn, Hindemith Works Played Under Thor Johnson's Baton

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 9—Nearly 3000 people listened tonight to one of the most enjoyable programs any conductor has put together for a long time. It was the young conductor Thor Johnson, a former pupil of Koussevitzky and now conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra who was responsible. It may also be noted that Mr. Johnson was eminently satisfying in his interpretations and revealed a fine musicianship and imagination.

Handel Work Played

The program opened with a rewarding performance of the last of the 12 concerti grosso that Handel wrote. Written for string orchestra, these 12 concerti explore every possibility of a string orchestra, yet they are not in the least [illegible] academic. In fact there is a fascinating spontaneity about them. Handel wrote them at the rate of one a day and there is a freshness of approach and [illegible] deal of enjoyment in every one. Every change of emotion makes itself felt.

Mr. Johnson's reading of [illegible] work was broad in outline [illegible] meticulous as to detail and he [illegible] the full co-operation of his players.

The second work was the too seldom heard Concertante [illegible] B-Flat Major, Op. 34, for oboe, bassoon, violin and cello by Haydn. The admirable soloists were Richard Burgin, violin; Samuel Mayes, cello; Ralph Gomberg, oboe and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Haydn follows the old concerto grosso style, combining and alternating the two groups, the tutti and the concertino of four instruments.

Plays as Quartet

The small group plays for the most part as a quartet, a high string and wind instrument balancing a low string and wind instrument. There are brief solos for each instrument and all were finely played. We have seldom heard Richard Burgin play so beautifully as he did tonight.

The rapture of the audience was somewhat dimmed before the ensemble and violist Joseph Depasquale finished the performance of Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher."

Performance Enjoyable

Regardless of what Hindemith has done to some of these really charming 15th and 16th century folk songs, one could enjoy and marvel at the splendor of Mr. Depasquale's performance. It was tonally handsome and technically dazzling. There were several lovely episodes for harp and viola just as there were unlovely episodes which seemed to caricature the melodies. Mr. Johnson conducted this work knowingly.

The concert concluded with a thoroughly satisfying performance of Haydn's "Symphony in B-Flat Major." The Haydnesque humor is somewhat moderated in the opening movement, but it breaks wide open before the end of the symphony. The slow movement is one of the finest Haydn wrote, broad and grave. Mr. Johnson and his players provided a finely integrated and imaginative performance.

Tomorrow afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the first choral work of the season, namely the "Mass in B-Minor" by Bach. The chorus will be made up of the Radcliffe and Harvard Glee Clubs. Adele Addison of Springfield will make the first of three appearances at the festival in this work. With her will be Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Second

Super

By K

Chamber Music S

Tanglewood O

Beethoven Qu

By WILLARD M. CL

Lenox, July 9—The gre shire Music Festival at wood, sponsored by the Symphony Orchestra,
way. So is the Berkshire School with its more students from all parts world. The festival ope cially Wednesday night first of a se six W night chamb first was giv
Kroll String

This throughout works of symphonies piano concer works for chamber will also the "Missa Solemn second from only opera.

Eager Student

There is something satisfying about Tangle its activities. We find th larly in the school we people from many parts world are making the their opportunity to st the virtuosos of the Bost phony orchestra; with in the choral department with Boris Goldovsky in th department. Many of th on scholarship and they get the most out of this ty.

The other night we h student orchestra play for time this season, under th tion of three student cond
Six weeks from now they playing like veterans, but night they played with finish and unanimity th amazing. Individually, them are already talent
formers and, being young,
not difficult for them to an ensemble.

Chamber Music

The chamber music which began Wednesday draw an interesting
the Theater-Concert Hall about 1200 people and we the series is sold out.
phisticated, musical comes to hear e seen. They list brook no interference of them are on hand
the concert begins ey were treated al by the Kroll om have we hea ances. The red the three eethoven's quartet we heard the r, Op. 18, No. way, but ventiveness n were to ets of Opus uartet in C d the program was the Quartet 95.

three quartets a richness of ng of spirit ity which ong association ch other and

Second Thoughts in Music

Springfield Rep. 7/10

Superb Concert Presented By Kroll String Quartet

Chamber Music Series in Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Opens With Performance of Three Beethoven Quartets; Student Orchestra Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 9—The great Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is under way. So is the Berkshire Music School with its more than 400 students from all parts of the world. The festival opened officially Wednesday night with the first of a series of six Wednesday night chamber music recitals. The first was given by the distinguished Kroll String Quartet.

This season's focal point throughout the festival will be the works of Beethoven. His nine symphonies, violin concerto, two piano concertos, and many of his works for small ensembles and chamber music will be featured; also the "Missa Solemnis" and the second act from "Fidelio," his only opera.

Eager Students

There is something eminently satisfying about Tanglewood and its activities. We find this particularly in the school were young people from many parts of the world are making the most of their opportunity to study with the virtuosos of the Boston Symphony orchestra; with Hugh Ross in the choral department or work with Boris Goldovsky in the opera department. Many of them are on scholarship and they mean to get the most out of this opportunity.

The other night we heard the student orchestra play for the first time this season, under the direction of three student conductors. Six weeks from now they will be playing like veterans, but the other night they played with a style, finish and unanimity that was amazing. Individually, most of them are already talented performers and, being young, it was not difficult for them to merge into an ensemble.

Chamber Music

The chamber music concerts which began Wednesday night draw an interesting audience to the Theater-Concert Hall. It holds about 1200 people and we are told that the series is sold out. This is a sophisticated, musical audience that comes to hear, rather than to be seen. They listen intently and brook no interference or noise. Most of them are on hand well before the concert begins.

They were treated to a superb recital by the Kroll String Quartet. Seldom have we heard finer performances. The three quartets covered the three creative periods of Beethoven's quartet composing. First we heard the Quartet in C minor, Op. 18, No. 4, Haydnesque in its way, but bearing the seeds of inventiveness and imagination which were to result in the mighty quartets of Opus 131, of which the Quartet in C sharp minor concluded the program. The center work was the Quartet in F minor, Opus 95.

The three quartets were played with a richness of detail, understanding of spirit and technical virtuosity which can only come from long association of players with each other and with this music.

Chamber Orchestra Series

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is directing the series of chamber music concerts which began Friday night. These concerts will be discussed in later columns. He will be assisted during the series by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and by Leonard Bernstein, who heads the conducting department of the school this year.

Week of July 10

This afternoon, Charles Munch is directing a performance of the Mass in B Minor by Bach. The participants are the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, the same group who sang the performance in Boston, a few weeks ago. The soloists will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass.

Wednesday night, the second chamber music recital will be played by the Beaux Arts Trio, consisting of Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violin and Bernard Greenhouse, cello. The trio will be heard in three Beethoven Trios, Trio in C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; Trio in D major, Op. 70, No. 1 and Trio in B-flat major, Op. 97.

Friday night, Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program and also be the soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major, K453. The orchestral works will include the overture to "Don Giovanni" and the Symphony in C major known as the "Lenz." Jennie Tourel, distinguished soprano, will be heard in three Mozart arias, two of them from "Idomeneo."

Saturday night, Hugh Ross will conduct the Festival chorus in the vivaldi "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. The soloists will be Sara Mae Endich, soprano and Sadie McCollum, contralto. Also on this program, Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, will play the Boccherini Concerto for Violincello in B flat major. The orchestra will be heard in two Vivaldi works, the Concerto Grosso in D minor, Op. 3, No. 11 and the Concerto Grosso in B minor, for four violins and string orchestra.

Globe 7/10

Berkshire Festival

The concerts this week at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be as follows:

Today at 2:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Mass in B minor, by the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth, with the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. The Beaux Arts Trio in a Beethoven program: C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Friday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, Mozart: Overture to "Don Giovanni," Symphony in C major ("Linz," K. 425), arias sung by Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano—"Al Desio" (K. 577), Zeffiretti" and "Non Temer" from "Idomeneo"; Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453, Mr. Bernstein, soloist).

Saturday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting—Vivaldi: Concerti Grossi in D, Op. 3, No. 11, and B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini: Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes, soloist). Hugh Ross conducting—Vivaldi: Gloria, with Berkshire Music Center Festival Chorus and these soloists: Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano.

Sunday, July 17, at 2:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger: Symphony No. 4.

In Rehearsal

Jennie Tourel (left) noted soprano, and guest conductor Leonard Bernstein seen in rehearsal for the all-Mozart program in which they will be featured Friday evening at Tanglewood.

Times Sun. July 10

TODAY at 2:30

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.
• NOW through AUGUST 14

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN
THEATRE—CONCERT HALL

NEXT WED. July 13, at 8:30 — BEAUX ARTS TRIO
FRI. July 15, at 8:30 — MOZART PROGRAM:
Guest Conductor — Leonard Bernstein; Soloist — Jennie Tourel, Soprano
SAT. July 16 at 8:30 — ITALIAN PROGRAM: Soloist — Samuel Mayes, Cello
SUN. July 17 at 8:30 — FRENCH PROGRAM
TICKETS Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

NY H.T. 7/10

TODAY at 2:30

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.
• NOW through AUGUST 14

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN
THEATRE—CONCERT HALL

NEXT WED. July 13, at 8:30 — BEAUX ARTS TRIO
FRI. July 15, at 8:30 — MOZART PROGRAM:
Guest Conductor — Leonard Bernstein; Soloist — Jennie Tourel, Soprano
SAT. July 16 at 8:30 — ITALIAN PROGRAM: Soloist — Samuel Mayes, Cello
SUN. July 17 at 8:30 — FRENCH PROGRAM
TICKETS Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

2:30

NY Times 7/11/55

Music: Bach at Berkshire

B Minor Mass Closes First Week-End

John McCollum

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 10—The Berkshire Festival's first week-end of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall ended with one of music's masterpieces—Bach's B minor Mass.

Charles Munch approached the task of conducting it with eagerness and veneration. He grew up in an environment where Bacht was worshiped. His father and Albert Schweitzer discussed and argued Bach when the conductor-to-be was in his boyhood, and he has never lost a feeling of intimacy and reverence in the presence of the composer.

Leading a reduced Boston Symphony, a choral group drawn from the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and four fine soloists, Mr. Munch brought out the grandeur of the music without skimping the tenderness that lies at its roots.

●

If there was any element that stood out in this performance, it was its excitement. Mr. Munch took the "Gloria in excelsis Deo" at a ripping pace, and the "Cum sancto spiritu" went with disciplined intensity. But there were wonderful subtle details, such as the hushed delicacy of the "Qui tollis" opening.

The soloists were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. They made a well balanced group. All the voices were good; all sang with restraint and sensitivity and without a touch of forcing. The college choristers lacked something in firmness of ensemble tone but sang with a will and a lot of drive.

Instrumentalists who contributed expert solo playing were Richard Burgin, concertmaster; James Stagliano, horn; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Louis Speyer and Jean Devergie, oboe d'amore; Willie Frank, organ; Daniel Pinkham, harpischord, and RoRger Voisin, trumpet.

●

At last night's concert there was an example of the local boy who had made good. Thor Johnson, who was a student in Serge Koussevitsky's conducting class in the first year of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940, came back as a full-fledged conductor in his own right.

Mr. Johnson seems to be one of theb usiest conductors in the business. In addition to his regular post as head of the Cincinnati Symphony, he has shared recently in the Symphony of the Air tour to Asia, has led a festival in Winston-Salem, N. C., and will direct another in Fish Creek, Wis., in a few weeks.

Experience was unmistakable in his work last night. He has developed a firm beat; he knows how to keep control of the orchestra; he has a gift for holding steady tempos. The basic material of conducting is secure. All that remains, if one may judge from one program, is to become freer and more flexible. The performances last night were solid, but they did not have the warmth and plasticity that Mr. Johnson should be able to achieve in a few more years.

●

Handel's B minor Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, provided a large-breathed beginning. Haydn's Sinfonie Concertante, Op. 84, with Mr. Burgin, violin; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Samuel Mayes, cello, and Sherman Walt, bassoon, as the able soloists, had a lively reading.

Then came Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," a concerto on old folk melodies for viola and small orchestra. Joseph De Pasquale played the solo part with a rich tone, and Mr. Johnson conducted vigorously. The special folk quality of the piece did not come through, but one was impressed by the high caliber of Hindemith's work.

The program ended with Haydn's B flat major Symphony, No. 98, one of his happiest creations in this form. This is a score of unfailing inventiveness and felicity. It helped to freshen a close humid evening.

●

It was even hotter, more humid and more uncomfortable this afternoon. The men in the orchestra and chorus doffed their coats.

But Mr. Munch and the male soloists wore theirs. At the end the conductor looked as if he had been swimming in Stockbridge Bowl in his clothes.

The 3,585 in the hall and on the lawn gave a deserved ovation to him and his colleagues.

Second Berkshire Festival Week

Boston Herald 7/10

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, July 17.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 496

JUN 22 1955

TANGLEWOOD SEASON AT HAND!

Scene Outside the Shed at a recent Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual "Operation Tanglewood". For the sixteenth summer its music will be presented in an idyllic setting near Lenox, Mass. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world. Last Summer (Music Director Charles Munch's fourth with the 104-piece Boston Symphony) all attendance records were broken.

Music lovers, indeed, have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from the Connecticut, Mohawk and Hudson valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane, and shown also a welcome for the plan inaugurated last year to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope.

A voluntary contribution to the tax-exempt organization known as the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center admits music-lovers to the student concerts which take place almost every day and are of comparable interest to the professional Festival concerts.

Ticket sale for the Berkshire Festival concerts has been opened. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or by telephoning Lenox 600.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUL 1 1955

Munch Returns for Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by Air France from his home in Paris and will drive to Lenox this afternoon, to his Summer residence.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This marks his fifth Summer at Tanglewood and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony's [illegible] season May [illegible], Mr. Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra then went to Europe for his between-seasons vacation. In France he visited his family in Strasbourg, spent some time at his home in Paris, but for the most part vacationed on the Riviera. There was a five-day interruption of this vacation at the beginning of June, when he made a flying visit to the United States to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,211

JUN 26 1955

Berkshire Music Festival

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., have surpassed those of the Summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr., announces. The six week festival of 1954 saw an all time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, starting July 3, with the opening of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Telephone orders are accepted at Lenox, Mass., 600.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUN 24 1955

Berkshire Festival To Have 24 Concerts

Tanglewood Series Will Run July 6 - August 11

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the 16th summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, at Lenox, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate, and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

The Berkshire Festival will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethovens chamber music by noted aggregations and soloists. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 12 Music Shed concerts, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Dividends for Festival patrons are four Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at admission of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Ticket sale for the Berkshire Festival concerts has been opened. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or by telephoning Lenox 600.

Patrons seeking accommodation over Festival weekends in the Berkshires are advised to write the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass., which through the co-operation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations will endeavor to secure reservations.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

JUN 25 1955

Berkshire Festival Now In 16th Season

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the sixteenth summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire eFstival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

In 1954—Music Director Charles Munch's fourth summer with the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood—all attendance records were broken. In the six weeks from early July to mid-August, the Festival concert attendance totaled 135,775 (as compared with 117,950 in 1953), and total paid admissions were $330,033 (in 1953 $311,606). Attendance at Six Chamber Music Concerts in the 1,152-seat capacity Theater-Concert Halls was 8,750, an average of 1,358. Attendance at the six "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphnoy Orchestra in the same auditorium totaled 16,50, an average of 2,275. Twelve concerts by the full orchestra given in the Music Shed, capacity [illegible] persons, attracted audiences of 129,925, an average of 9,197.

In addition, 30,800 persons attended the [illegible]-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with the Festival, and the school's annual benefit, "Tanglewood On Parade," drew an all-time record of 10,050.

Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,669

[illegible] 23 1955

Berkshire Series Ticket Sale High

1955 Festival Opening At Lenox On July 22; Programs Announced

Subscriptions for the weekend concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., have already surpassed those of the record season of 1954, according to announcements.

The season's schedule includes four Friday evening concerts, July 22-August 12; four Saturday evening concerts, July 23-August 13, and four on Sunday afternoons, July 24-August 14, in the Music Shed at the Tanglewood site.

Charles Munch, music director for the 104 piece symphony, will conduct the shed concerts with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors. The programs will feature Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos and three overtures.

Among the season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series will be preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the symphony's chamber section of "Bach-Mozart" concerts given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, under the direction of Mr. Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors.

Seats for these two weekends, July 8, 9, 10 and July 15, 16, 17, are already reported scarce, as is Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert, July 15.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts also are scheduled in the Theatre-Concert Hall, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's revolving scholarship fund. These will be devoted to Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

For detailed festival programs, a complete list of the summer's student concerts and price information, persons are asked to write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

JUN 25 1955

A "Youth Forum" on juvenile delinquency will be conducted by Dorothy Gordon of WQXR during the New Hampshire Festival of the Seven Arts at the Lord Tarleton, Pike, N. H., during July. Judge Hyman Barshay and Evan Hunter, author of "The Blackboard Jungle," will be among the participants of the session which will be taped for radio rebroadcast. . . . Our Danton Walker, discussing his popular book, "Danton's Inferno," and Ricardo Montalban, talking about his Broadway musical, "Seventh Heaven," will be guests on the Ethel [illegible] show over WPIX tomorrow night.

[illegible] . . . Bob Hope headlines Arthur Godfrey's daytime show on CBS-TV Tuesday morning at 10 . . . The concerts of the Berkshire Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony Orch., with guest artists, will be broadcast over NBC-Radio Mondays from 8:15 to 9 P. M., beginning July 11 . . . Guy Lombardo's restaurant in Freeport, L. I., and the "Arabian Nights" spectacle at Jones Beach are the origination points of NBC-TV's "Variety Hour" Sunday, July 3, at 8 P.M.

England Newsclip Ag
078, Boston 6 • Richm

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass
Independent
Circ. 46,726

JUN 28 1955

USIC
ALFRED W. BUR

be ass.
nt
1

Festival
1955 Berkthe Boston at Tanglehave sur-summer of D. Perry week festi-me record rsons s for the now on n, Monday 9 a. m. to ll also be g July 8, 18th ses-
usic Cenof music hestra in tival conngle conn receipt.
cepted at the presentation in B Minor. July e Leonard Bern-Tanglewood, after tical, in an all-the young con-be soloist in the Major, and Jennie oprano, will be arias.

with the as-rre Monteux and ein, will lead the ny Orchestra in hed concerts, on aturday evenings rnoons, commenc-
22, and conclud-
ugust 14. Soloists
Stern, Leontyne
Serkin, Gregor rgaret Harshaw,
Eugene Istomin,
Eunice Alberts,
Mac Morgan and concerts for 1955,
Mr Munch, will ic of Beethoven,
nine symphonies,
1) in concert perolin concerto, two three overtures a Solemnis", in ge Koussevitzky.
tor of the Orches-
of the Berkshire
Festival patrons day morning re-
Boston Symphony
mission of $1.00, the Orchestra's or the Berkshire
s has been open-and ticket inforobtained by writ-rkshire Festival, x., Mass., or by
x 800.
g accommodaval weekends in are advised to shire Hills Conld, Mass., which operation of local mmerce and sim-ns will endeavor ations.

---

w England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
x 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 40,726

JUN [illegible] 1955

USIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

OWELL — George Tsandi- s of this city, who is stationed h the U. S. Army in Germany, s been active with the special rvice. The gifted young tenor ently toured with a musical mpany in which he perfor- d as leading vocalist.

t present he is active with e programming and theatri- organization whose purpose to assemble casts of artists new productions. However, is expected that he will shortly assigned to a new entertain- ent unit. Before joining the rvice he was prominent in usical circles both here and Boston. He is a graduate of e New England Conservatory Music where he was a voice ajor.

owell Directors

Wesley Boynton and Morse Haithwaite, co-directors of the amous Arundel theatre in Kennebunkport, Maine have announced the eighth season of he summer opera company which will open next Wednesday evening with a new and fresh adaptation of Gounod's "Faust". The production will be sung in English and will be performed by a group of noted artists.

Other performances of "Faust" will be given on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Other productions to be presented during the season include, "Chocolate Soldier", "Iolanthe" and "Cosi Fan Tutte". A special July attraction will feature such events as Madame La Meri's "Little Show" and three nights of the Royal Danish ballet.

eadying Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony orchestra is preparing these days for ts huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the 16th summer n which the Boston Symphony rchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts. Since 937, this orchestra has played n Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century go, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacioul lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it at night under the stars or in the Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

At the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," scheduled this year for Thursday, Aug. 11, a crowd of more than 10,000 will hear simultaneous demonstrations by all departments of the music school, enjoy a picnic supper, then attend a gala concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed.

NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER

JUN 19 1955

July brings music and dance festivals to Berkshire Hills

By ELENORE LESTER

LENOX, Mass.—The coming of July brings music and dance as well as thick green foliage and bright summer-blue skies to the rolling Berkshire Hills.

Visitors planning to spend a week-end or a couple of weeks in this delightfully cool and verdant part of the country will find plenty of man-made beauty under the skies both at musically-famous Tanglewood and at the dance center, Jacob's Pillow, just outside of the lovely old New England town of Lee.

The dance season will open first in the Ted Shawn Theater on July 1. Opening the 53 performances scheduled for the 10-week season will be Ruthanna Boris and Frank Hobi, ballet dancers; the John Butler Dance Theater with Glen Tetley and Mary Hinkson, modern, and Carola Goya and Mateo in dances of Spain, India and Ceylon.

* * *

FROM JULY 6 through July 9 and July 13 through July 16, performances of special importance will be offered. Ten leading dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet will be seen for the first time by American audiences. The dancers will offer two different programs during the two weeks of their performances. On July 27 and 28 they will return again in still a third performance to be offered in conjunction with an appearance by Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn in a classic pase de Deux.

The season will continue until Sept. 3 with the programs featuring outstanding modern, ballet and ethnic dance artists.

* * *

THE SEASON at Tanglewood starts on July 6 with a performance by the Kroll String Quartet in the theater concert hall. This will be first of a series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts. Symphony performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under conductors Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson will be given in the concert hall on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons until July 17.

Starting July 22, performances will be given in the famous music shed on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Visitors may buy tickets for seating in the shed or may listen to the music from the lawns of beautiful estate of Tanglewood.

* * *

THIS YEAR the featured composer is Beethoven and there will be works by this master at nearly every performance. The chamber music series will feature works by Beethoven exclusively.

The area around Lee and Lenox is dotted with motels and rooming houses, but there is often a great shortage of accommodations in the festival vicinity at the height of the season. It is wise, therefore, to make reservations well in advance. There are also many packaged tours, which offer transportation, accommodations and tickets to the concerts. For full details about the dance festival write to Ted Shawn at Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass. and for details about the music festival write to Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

There is plenty of non-cultural activity as well in the Berkshire countryside. Golfing, swimming and just walking through country and exploring old New England towns occupy vacationers during the day.

BEACON, N. Y.
NEWS
Circ. D. 20,200

MAY 26 1955

Plan Hudson Valley Music Festival

Establishment at New Paltz of a Hudson Valley Music Festival, which in time may rival Tanglewood in the Berkshires, is under consideration. The festival would be staged on a 22-acre tract owned by Jascha Rushkin, one of the organizers of Symphony of the Air. Leading orchestras, artists, ballet groups and choruses would provide the program. If plans develop as expected, there will be in July or August two symphony concerts and two performances of opera or ballet each week for four weeks or more. Chamber music will be used to fill in.

Mr. Rushkin is assembling a staff including such notables in the music field as John Brownlee, Albert B. Gins and Dr. Samuel Selden. Frank Lloyd Wright will design and supervise the construction of shell, shed, seats, driveways, parking fields and other facilities at an estimated cost of $300,000.

State Teachers' College has indicated it will loan its dormitories for orchestra members and singers staying in New Paltz during the festival season.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

JUN 19 1955

"Bach-Mozart" Concerts at Tanglewood in July

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will consist of 24 concerts beginning Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

047

The two weeks preceding the appearances of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, starting Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B minor.

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Piano concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs July 9.

White Rose
Motorist York, Pa.
June, 1955

Coming Events

Brevard, North Carolina: July 1-2-4, Sylvan Valley Folk Festival.

Stanton, Delaware: July 2, Delaware Handicap Horse Race.

Manchester, Vermont: July 2-10, Annual Art Exhibit.

Eastport, Maine: July 3-10, Old Home Week.

Chautauwua, N. Y.: July 3—Aug. 28, Festival of Music and Drama.

Lenox, Mass.: July 6—Aug. 14, Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin: July 12, All-Star Baseball Game.

Traverse City, Michigan: July 13-15. National Cherry Festival.

Atlantic City, N. J.: July 15-17, Greater Atlantic City Marlin Tournament.

Brandon, Vermont: July 14-16, Vermont Handcrafters Show.

Port Huron, Michigan: July 18-24, Blue Water Festival.

Ashville, North Carolina: July 18-22, Craftsman's Fair of the Southern Highlands.

Detroit, Michigan: July 20-26, National P.G.A. Tournament at Meadowbrook.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUN 26 1955

Cultural Events in Berkshires

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—There's more than music in the Berkshires, but Tanglewood, of course, is still the area's summer headliner.

For the second successive year, he Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

One is a summer theatre which will open a 10-week season June 28, in the Adams Memorial Theatre at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits. Marcia Henderson, Williamstown native, who is now a Hollywood and television star, will be featured in the opening performance.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the ~~Sterling and Francine Clark~~ Art Museum. The multi-million dollar museum, erected by Robert Sterling Clark, New York financier, was opened to the public in May and is already rated in the top bracket of the nation's showplaces.

The Clark Museum is open to the public at no charge.

Another Berkshire regular, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 off Jacob's Ladder Route 20) in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn announced recently that his 1955 season will be highlighted by the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Following are some of the Berkshire's other cultur. offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Music Inn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concerts, July 2 through Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, series of medieval and Renniassance and baroque music concerts Saturday evenings from Aug. 13 to Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge summer theatre featuring top Broadway stars June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, county courthouse, Pittsfield, this year published its first directory of what to do and where to go to do it in the Berkshires. The directory and a four-color brochure on the area may be secured by writing to the Conference.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ: 40,726

JUN 2 3 1955

USIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

OWELL — George Tsandi- of this city, who is stationed n the U. S. Army in Germany, been active with the special vice. The gifted young tenor ently toured with a musical pany in which he perfor- as leading vocalist. present he is active with programming and theatri- organization whose purpose to assemble casts of artists new productions. However, expected that he will shortly assigned to a new entertain- nt unit. Before joining the rvice he was prominent in usical circles both here and Boston. He is a graduate of New England Conservatory Music where he was a voice ajor.

owell Directors

Wesley Boynton and Morse althwaite, co-directors of the mous Arundel theatre in Ken- ebunkport, Maine have an- ounced the eighth season of e summer opera company hich will open next Wednes- ay evening with a new and resh adaptation of Gounod's "Faust". The production will be ung in English and will be per- ormed by a group of noted rtists.

Other performances of "Faust" will be given on Thursday, Fri- ay and Saturday evenings. Other productions to be present- d during the season include, "Chocolate Soldier", "Iolanthe" nd "Cosi Fan Tutte". A spe- ial July attraction will feature uch events as Madame La Meri's "Little Show" and three nights f the Royal Danish ballet.

eadying Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony orches- a is preparing these days for s huge annual Operation Tan- lewood. For the 16th summer which the Boston Symphony rchestra has participated, music ill be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts. Since 937, this orchestra has played Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century go, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales".

Since 1938 when the huge pie- haped Music Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacioul lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it at night under the stars or n the Sunday sunshine, the Berk- shire festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

At the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," scheduled this year for Thursday, Aug. 11, a crowd of more than 10,000 will hear simultaneous demonstrations by all departments of the music school, enjoy a picnic supper, then attend a gala concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra in the music shed.

July brings music and dance festivals to Berkshire Hills

By ELENORE LESTER

LENOX, Mass.—The coming of July brings music and dance as well as thick green foliage and bright summer-blue skies to the rolling Berkshire Hills.

Visitors planning to spend a week-end or a couple of weeks in this delightfully cool and verdant part of the country will find plenty of man-made beauty under the skies both at musically-famous Tanglewood and at the dance center, Jacob's Pillow, just outside of the lovely old New England town of Lee.

The dance season will open first in the Ted Shawn Theater on July 1. Opening the 53 performances scheduled for the 10-week season will be Ruthanna Boris and Frank Hobi, ballet dancers; the John Butler Dance Theater with Glen Tetley and Mary Hinkson, modern, and Carola Goya and Mateo in dances of Spain, India and Ceylon.

• • •

FROM JULY 6 through July 9 and July 13 through July 16, performances of special importance will be offered. Ten leading dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet will be seen for the first time by American audiences. The dancers will offer two different programs during the two weeks of their performances. On July 27 and 28 they will return again in still a third performance to be offered in conjunction with an appearance by Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn in a classic pase de Deux.

The season will continue until Sept. 3 with the programs featuring outstanding modern, ballet and ethnic dance artists.

• • •

THE SEASON at Tanglewood starts on July 6 with a performance by the Kroll String Quartet in the theater concert hall. This will be first of a series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts. Symphony performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under conductors Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson will be given in the concert hall on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons until July 17.

Starting July 22, performances will be given in the famous music shed on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Visitors may buy tickets for seating in the shed or may listen to the music from the lawns of beautiful estate of Tanglewood.

• • •

THIS YEAR the featured composer is Beethoven and there will be works by this master at nearly every performance. The chamber music series will feature works by Beethoven exclusively.

The area around Lee and Lenox is dotted with motels and rooming houses, but there is often a great shortage of accommodations in the festival vicinity at the height of the season. It is wise, therefore, to make reservations well in advance. There are also many packaged tours, which offer transportation, accommodations and tickets to the concerts. For full details about the dance festival write to Ted Shawn at Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass. and for details about the music festival write to Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

There is plenty of non-cultural activity as well in the Berkshire countryside. Golfing, swimming and just walking through country and exploring old New England towns occupy vacationers during the day.

BEACON, N. Y.
NEWS
Circ. D. 20,200

MAY 26 1955

Plan Hudson Valley Music Festival

Establishment at New Paltz of a Hudson Valley Music Festival, which in time may rival Tanglewood in the Berkshires, is under consideration. The festival would be staged on a 22-acre tract owned by Jascha [illegible] one of the organizers of Symphony of the Air. Leading orchestras, artists, ballet groups and choruses would provide the program. If plans develop as expected, there will be in July or August two symphony concerts and two performances [illegible] of ballet each week for four weeks or more. Chamber music will be used to fill in.

Mr. Rushkin is assembling a staff including such notables in the music field as John Brownlee, Albert B. Gins and Dr. Samuel Selden. Frank Lloyd Wright will design and supervise the construction of shell, shed, seats, driveways, parking fields and other facilities at an estimated cost of $300,000.

State Teachers' College has indicated it will loan its dormitories for orchestra members and singers staying at New Paltz during the festival season.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 368,241

JUN 1 9 1955

"Bach-Mozart" Concerts at Tanglewood in July

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will consist of 21 concerts beginning Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

047

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, starting Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B minor.

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program; the young conductor will also be soloist in the Piano concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs July 9.

Coming Events

Brevard, North Carolina: July 1-2-4, Sylvan Valley Folk Festival.

Stanton, Delaware: July 2, Delaware Handicap Horse Race.

Manchester, Vermont: July 2-10, Annual Art Exhibit.

Eastport, Maine: July 3-10, Old Home Week.

Chautauwua, N. Y.: July 3—Aug. 28, Festival of Music and Drama.

Lenox, Mass.: July 6—Aug. 14, Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin: July 12, All-Star Baseball Game.

Traverse City, Michigan: July 13-15. National Cherry Festival.

Atlantic City, N. J.: July 15-17, Greater Atlantic City Marlin Tournament.

Brandon, Vermont: July 14-16, Vermont Handcrafters Show.

Port Huron, Michigan: July 18-24, Blue Water Festival.

Ashville, North Carolina: July 18-22, Craftsman's Fair of the Southern Highlands.

Detroit, Michigan: July 20-26, National P.G.A. Tournament at Meadowbrook.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUN 26 1955

Cultural Events in Berkshires

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—There's more than music in the Berkshires, but Tanglewood, of course, is still the area's summer headliner.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

One is a summer theatre which will open a 10-week season June 28, in the Adams Memorial Theatre at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits. Marcia Henderson, Williamstown native, who is now a Hollywood and television star, will be featured in the opening performance.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million dollar museum, erected by Robert Sterling Clark, New York financier, was opened to the public in May and is already rated in the top bracket of the nation's showplaces.

The Clark Museum is open to the public at no charge.

Another Berkshire regular, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 off Jacob's Ladder Route 20) in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn announced recently that his 1955 season will be highlighted by the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Following are some of the Berkshire's other cultur.' offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Music Inn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concerts, July 2 through Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, series of medieval and Renaissance and baroque music concerts Saturday evenings from Aug. 13 to Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, summer theatre featuring top Broadway stars June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, county courthouse, Pittsfield, this year published its first directory of what to do and where to go to do it in the Berkshires. The directory and a four-color brochure on the area may be secured by writing to the Conference.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD JOURNAL
Circ. D. 130,981

JUN 2 1955

TALKING IT OVER

Scholarships, Tuition Aids Are Offered in Berkshire Center

By EMMA VAN WORMER

SEVERAL SPECIAL scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the School of Music offered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass.

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony, is school director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean. Principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from the U. S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which last year awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

BERKSHIRE Music Center students will work during six summer weeks in Tanglewood with such eminent faculty members as Leonard Bernstein, head of the orchestra and conducting departments; Richard Burgin and William Kroll, who head the chamber music department; Hugh Ross, choral department; Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher, teachers of composition; Boris Goldovsky, in charge of the opera section, and Ingolf Dahl, in the Tanglewood Study Group, a special department of vocal and instrumental music available to professionals or amateurs.

Established in 1947 by gifts from RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America and since augmented from other sources, the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund is drawn upon each year to aid students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so, in order that others may benefit in future school years.

Among aid available this season to Tanglewood students: A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer;

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting;

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the summer;

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field;

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition;

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300 to a Tanglewood composer;

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award;

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

TWO NEW scholarships: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center.

Through the interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

A PIANO recital will be given by the pupils of Mrs. Theresa Colburn in the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts, at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow. Performing: Ricky Lannon, Mary Pat and Jimmy LaVoy, Bill McMahon, Carolyn Bates, Sandy Stone, Susan and Marsha Thomas, Sally Bentley, Susan Armacost, Geof and Gerry Molina, Barbara Gifford, Mary and Betsy Templeton, Pat Coffman, Vicky and Donna Crear, Elizabeth Weis, Christy Moran, Billy Haggerty, Janelle Stuffing, Susan McPhail, Muriel Rossman, Cathy Spadaro, Pat Porcaro, Donald, Marilyn, and Rosalie Riccardi, John Cook, Mary Hotaling, Linda Medsger, Cindy and Polly Homer, Judy Findling, Sharon Morrison, Kathy Gale, Edna Ashute, Rosemary Camp, Anita Pietricola, Elaine Clark, Sharon Morrison.

• • •

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican

16th Berkshire Festival Will Feature Beethoven

047

By ELINOR HUGHES

As the sun rises higher and the days grow milder, music lovers not afraid of a bit of traveling are looking forward to the 16th Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. It promises to be a rich and rewarding feast of music, featuring this year the compositions of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, Act II of "Fidelio" in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Miss Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitsky) and a wide range of string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas, the chamber music programs to take place on Wednesday evenings.

The Festival starts Wednesday, July 6, with the first of the six chamber music concerts, to be given by the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts by Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There will be six of these, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theater Concert Hall, starting Friday, July 8. The music to be played will be from the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger and Faure.

The concert on Sunday, July 10, will offer the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm in Bach's B Minor Mass; and on July 15 Leonard Bernstein will return, after a year's sabbatical, to conduct an all-Mozart program, in which he will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel will sing three arias.

The 12 Music Shed concerts will start on Friday evening, July 22, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 14. Charles Munch will conduct eight of these, Pierre Monteux three and Leonard Bernstein one. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, trasts with the slower rich lines of Vaughan Williams, and with the Brahms "Alto Rhapsody."

SOLOIST — Margaret Moreland who will be the soloist in George Gershwin's piano "Concerto in F," at Pops in Symphony Hall Wednesday night.

Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

There will be several Tanglewood premieres, meaning music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival. They include Bach's "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio;" Stravinsky's "Orpheus;" Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher;" Haydn's Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni;" Boccherini's Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso in B Minor, Op. 3, No. 2 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure's "Pavane," Milhaud's "Serenade;" Honegger's Symphony No. 4; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Barber's "Prayers of Kirkegaard; Beethoven's "Fidelio" (Act II); Bloch's "Schelomo;" and Strauss's Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUN 19 1955

A TOURIST'S CALEND

Outboard Marathon, New Orleans-Alton, Ill., July 1-4. Third annual race up the Mississippi.

Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo, Gulfport, Miss., July 1-4.

Pancake Days, Kalispell, Mont., July 1-4.

Folk Festival, Brevard, N. C., July 1, 2, 4. Sylvan Valley celebration.

Dairy Days, Sparta Wis., July 1-4. Parade, carnival, fireworks.

Powwows: Arlee, Mont., July 1-10 (Flathead Indians get-together); Flagstaff, Ariz., July 2-4 (Southwest All-Indian event). Cushing, Okla., July 15-17.

Dance Festival, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass., July 1-Sept. 3.

Outdoor Dramas: "The Lost Colony," Manteo, N. C., July 1-Sept. 4. "The Common Glory," Williamsburg, Va., July 1-Sept. 5.

Delaware Handicap, Stanton, Del., July 2. $110,000 purse.

National Forest Festival, Manistee, Mich., July 2-4.

Timber Carnival, Albany, Ore., July 2-4.

Operettas, Central City, Colo., July 2-30. "Mikado," "Yeoman of the Guard," "Trial by Jury," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Iolanthe."

Music Festival, Aspen, Colo., Wed., Sat. and Sun., July 2-Sept. 4.

National Soaring Contest, Elmira, N. Y., July 2-14.

Hydrangea Festival, Atlantic City, July 3-9.

Pageant, Daniel, Wyo., July 3. "Green River Rendezvous," story of the fur trade.

Coaster Race, Bisbee, Ariz., July 4.

Rodeo, Arcadia, Fla., July 4. All-Florida championship.

Anniversary, Bardstown, Ky., July 4. Stephen Foster's birthday.

Kids' Costume Parade, Clayton, N. Y., July 4. Begins at 10 A. M.

Summer Ski Jump, Lake Placid, N. Y., July 4. Annual meet on crushed ice.

Antique Auto Races, Arnold's Mills and Bristol, R. I., July 4.

Motorcycle Races: Dodge City, Kan., July 4. Windber, Pa., July 17. San Mateo, Calif., July 24.

Orchestra, Woodstock, Vt., July 5. Vermont Symphony Orchestra.

Folk Festival, Glenville, W. Va., July 6,7.

Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., July 6-Aug. 14.

Pioneers' Reunion, Mangum, Okla., July 7, 8.

Symphony Concerts, Wheeling, W. Va., July 7, 14, 21, 28. At Oglebay Institute.

Library Auction, Dallas, Pa., July 8, 9.

Open House, Litchfield, Conn., July 9. Eighteenth-century homes open.

Outdoor Art Show, Stroudsburg, Pa., July 9, 10. In Courthouse Square.

Modern Jazz, Music Barn, near Lenox, Mass. Concerts on Sundays, July 10-Sept. 4.

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUN 1 1955

Counterpoint

1414

By Nat Hentoff

A COUPLE OF issues ago I mentioned the wintry fact that, unlike life in the classical world, there are almost no opportunities for jazz musicians and writers to enjoy summer retreats.

There is a constantly growing number of projects like Tanglewood or Aspen, Colo., where classical artists can spend several weeks in study, in composition, in exchange of ideas and techniques.

The best a jazzman can usually hope for is a not-too-well-paid gig for part of the summer in an area that has a nodding acquaintance with trees. But nowhere thus far has there been a jazz workshop where jazz musicians can benefit from a leisurely, unpressured exchange of ideas.

The jazz weather is looking up, however, because this year the first "summer home for jazz" will open. The place is the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famed Music Shed and Tanglewood. The sponsors of the jazz project are Stephanie and Philip Barber, who have contributed valuably to jazz by backing the annual Folk and Jazz roundtables at their Music inn.

PROF. MARSHALL STEARNS of the Institute of Jazz Studies has directed these roundtables for the last five years, and he invariably assembles a stimulating, briskly argumentative series of panels composed of musicologists, anthropologists, musicians, dancers, blues singers, and critics. These roundtables explore a wide range of jazz history and comparative musicology.

They have been of great interest through five years, and they'll continue this season Aug. 14-Sept. 5 on subjects from ragtime to Afro-Cuban to gospel songs to modern jazz.

But the Barbers began to feel the roundtables weren't enough. They believed that these investigative sessions should be preceded by several workshop weeks wherein young modern musicians could have the time to work with their materials without being subject to critiques. In this way, the Barbers reasoned, their Lenox seminars not only could help jazz research but also support the growth of the music by encouraging modern jazz experimenters.

SO THIS SUMMER, starting July 2, several modern jazz units will be invited to Lenox for one week each. They will be in residence at the Berkshire Music Barn and will be housed and fed for free at nearby Music inn. The musicians can spend all week rehearsing, writing—or even rowing a boat if they like. The only demand on them will be to play a concert on the Sunday at the end of the week they're there, and for that concert they'll be paid.

Bob Reisner will manage the workshop. Reisner is librarian of the Institute of Jazz Studies, and for the last two years, has been presenting modern jazz on Sunday nights at the Open Door in New York.

The project is all the more intriguing because for the first time, the classical musicians, students, and listeners at Tanglewood up the road now will be exposed to contemporary jazz developments.

Many of the younger members of the Boston Symphony long have been interested in jazz. Harold Faberman of the Boston Symphony percussion section, for example, has a deep-rooted knowledge of jazz percussive techniques. And it will do the young classical composers (and composer-teachers) in the Tanglewood classes no harm to wander down the road.

Most contemporary American composers have been astonishingly uninformed about modern jazz developments for too long, and accordingly, their musical expression has been that far removed from a vital aspect of the American spirit.

NOT ALL DETAILS of the Berkshire Music Barn's workshop have been set as this is written, but this much is known: three of the workshop groups will be led by Art Farmer, Thelonious Monk, and Teddy Charles. Farmer will bring Gigi Gryce, Art Taylor, Addison Farmer, and Freddie Redd. Charles' combo will include J. R. Montrose, Charlie Mingus, and possibly Hall Overton. Monk's group isn't yet set.

Their concert dates are July 10 (Farmer), July 24 (Monk) and July 31 (Charles). Dizzy Gillespie, who may not be able to stay a week, is expected — barring unexpected bookings — to give a concert July 17. And the Modern Jazz Quartet will give concerts Aug. 7 and 8.

There will be at least two special events. The opening ceremonies July 2 will feature Coleman Hawkins. And Count Basie's band, the best single illustration of the modern mainstream of jazz, will give a concert in the Music Barn July 28.

FOLK MUSIC EXPERT Richard Dyer-Bennett has agreed to give a series of five Saturday concerts. In the series, Dyer-Bennett, a brilliant musical artist, will present a comprehensive sweep of English, Scot, colonial, and mountain ballads and songs. Ticket prices for these concerts are $1.10, $1.65, and $2.20. The Basie concert tickets are $2.20 and $3.

For further information, you can write to the Barbers, Music Inn, Lenox, Mass.

Musical Leader, Chicago, May 55

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood will open its 13th summer session July 4, with Charles Munch again serving as director. . . . Six of the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival will be devoted wholly to Beethoven . . .

[143]

TALKING IT OVER

Scholarships, Tuition Aids Are Offered in Berkshire Center

By [illegible] VAN WORMER

SEVERAL SPECIAL scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the School of Music offered by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass.

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony, is school director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean. Principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from the U. S., Canada and abroad is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which last year awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

BERKSHIRE Music Center students will work during six summer weeks in Tanglewood with such eminent faculty members as Leonard Bernstein, head of the orchestra and conducting departments; Richard Burgin and William Kroll, who head the chamber music department; Hugh Ross, choral department; Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher, teachers of composition; Boris Goldovsky, in charge of the opera section, and Ingolf Dahl, in the Tanglewood Study Group, a special department of vocal and instrumental music available to professionals or amateurs.

Established in 1947 by gifts from RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America and since augmented from other sources, the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund is drawn upon each year to aid students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so, in order that others may benefit in future school years.

Among aid available this season to Tanglewood students: A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer;

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting;

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the summer;

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field;

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition;

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300 to a Tanglewood composer;

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award;

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1952, a tuition award.

TWO NEW scholarships: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center.

Through the interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student comp[illegible] memory of Raphael S[illegible]

A PIANO recital [illegible] by the pupils [illegible] Colburn in [illegible] of Fine [illegible] row [illegible] Lan- [illegible] my La- [illegible] Carolyn [illegible] one, Susan and [illegible] Sally Bentley, Se[illegible] acost, Geof and Gerry Mol[illegible], Barbara Gifford, Mary and Betsy Templeton, Pat Coffman, Vicky and Donna Creer, Elizabeth Weis, Christy Moran, Billy Haggerty, Janelle Stuffing, Susan McPhail, Muriel Rossman, Cathy Spadaro, Pat Percaro, Donald, Marilyn, and Rosalie Riccardi, John Cook, Mary Hotaling, Linda Medsger, Cindy and Polly Homer, Judy Findling, Shar[illegible]

Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUN 2 0 1955

16th Berkshire Festival Will Feature Beethoven

647 By ELINOR HUGHES

As the sun rises higher and the days grow milder, music lovers not afraid of a bit of traveling are looking forward to the 16th Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood. It promises to be a rich and rewarding feast of music, featuring this year the compositions of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, Act II of "Fidelio" in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Miss Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitsky) and a wide range of string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas, the chamber music programs to take place on Wednesday evenings.

The Festival starts Wednesday, July 6, with the first of the six chamber music concerts, to be given by the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the Bach-Mozart concerts by Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There will be six of these, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theater Concert Hall, starting Friday, July 8. The music to be played will be from the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger and Faure.

The concert on Sunday, July 10, will offer the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm in Bach's B Minor Mass; and on July 15 Leonard Bernstein will return, after a year's sabbatical, to conduct an all-Mozart program, in which he will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel will sing three arias.

The 12 Music Shed concerts will start on Friday evening, July 22, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 14. Charles Munch will conduct eight of these, Pierre Monteux three and Leonard Bernstein one. Soloists will be Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, trasts with the slower rich lines of Vaughan Williams, and with the Brahms "Alto Rhapsody."

SOLOIST — Margaret Moreland who will be the soloist in George Gershwin's piano "Concerto in F," at Pops in Symphony Hall Wednesday night.

Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

There will be several Tanglewood premieres, meaning music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival. They include Bach's "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio;" Stravinsky's "Orpheus;" Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher;" Haydn's Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni;" Boccherini's Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso in B Minor, Op. 3, No. 2 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure's "Pavane," Milhaud's "Serenade;" Honegger's Symphony No. 4; Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Barber's "Prayers of Kirkegaard; Beethoven's "Fidelio" (Act II); Bloch's "Schelomo;" and Strauss's Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUN 19 1955

A TOURIST'S CALEND

Outboard Marathon, New Orleans-Alton, Ill., July 1-4. Third annual race up the Mississippi.

Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo, Gulfport, Miss., July 1-4.

Pancake Days, Kalispell, Mont., July 1-4.

Folk Festival, Brevard, N. C., July 1, 2, 4. Sylvan Valley celebration.

Dairy Days, Sparta Wis., July 1-4. Parade, carnival, fireworks.

Powwows: Arlee, Mont., July 1-10 (Flathead Indians get-together); Flagstaff, Ariz., July 2-4 (Southwest All-Indian event). Cushing, Okla., July 15-17.

Dance Festival, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass., July 1-Sept. 3.

Outdoor Dramas: "The Lost Colony," Manteo, N. C., July 1-Sept. 4. "The Common Glory," Williamsburg, Va., July 1-Sept. 5.

Delaware Handicap, Stanton, Del., July 2. $110,000 purse.

National Forest Festival, Manistee, Mich., July 2-4.

Timber Carnival, Albany, Ore., July 2-4.

Operettas, Central City, Colo., July 2-30. "Mikado," "Yeoman of the Guard," "Trial by Jury," "H.M.S. Pinafore," "Iolanthe."

Music Festival, Aspen, Colo., Wed., Sat. and Sun., July 2-Sept. 4.

National Soaring Contest, Elmira, N. Y., July 2-14.

Hydrangea Festival, Atlantic City, July 8-9.

Pageant, Daniel, Wyo., July 3. "Green River Rendezvous," story of the fur trade.

Coaster Race, Bisbee, Ariz., July 4.

Rodeo, Arcadia, Fla., July 4. All-Florida championship.

Anniversary, Bardstown, Ky., July 4. Stephen Foster's birthday.

Kids' Costume Parade, Clayton, N. Y., July 4. Begins at 10 A. M.

Summer Ski Jump, Lake Placid, N. Y., July 4. Annual meet on crushed ice.

Antique Auto Races, Arnold's Mills and Bristol, R. I., July 4.

Motorcycle Races: Dodge City, Kan., July 4; Windber, Pa., July 17. San Mateo, Calif., July 24.

Orchestra, Woodstock, Vt., July 5. Vermont Symphony Orchestra.

Folk Festival, Glenville, W. Va., July 6,7.

Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., July 6-Aug. 14.

Pioneers' Reunion, Mangum, Okla., July 7, 8.

Symphony Concerts, Wheeling, W. Va., July 7, 14, 21, 28. At Oglebay Institute.

Library Auction, Dallas, Pa., July 8, 9.

Open House, Litchfield, Conn., July 9. Eighteenth-century homes open.

Outdoor Art Show, Stroudsburg, Pa., July 9, 10. In Courthouse Square.

Modern Jazz, Music Barn, near Lenox, Mass. Concerts on Sundays, July 10-Sept. 4.

DOWN BEAT
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUN 1 1955

Counterpoint

14174 By Nat Hentoff

A COUPLE OF issues ago I mentioned the wintry fact that, unlike life in the classical world, there are almost no opportunities for jazz musicians and writers to enjoy summer retreats.

There is a constantly growing number of projects like Tanglewood or Aspen, Colo., where classical artists can spend several weeks in study, in composition, in exchange of ideas and techniques.

The best a jazzman can usually hope for is a not-too-well-paid gig for part of the summer in an area that has a nodding acquaintance with trees. But nowhere thus far has there been a jazz workshop where jazz musicians can benefit from a leisurely, unpressured exchange of ideas.

The jazz weather is looking up, however, because this year the first "summer home for jazz" will open. The place is the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., a mile down the road from the Boston Symphony's famed Music Shed and Tanglewood. The sponsors of the jazz project are Stephanie and Philip Barber, who have contributed valuably to jazz by backing the annual Folk and Jazz roundtables at their Music inn.

PROF. MARSHALL STEARNS of the Institute of Jazz Studies has directed these roundtables for the last five years, and he invariably assembles a stimulating, briskly argumentative series of panels composed of musicologists, anthropologists, musicians, dancers, blues singers, and critics. These roundtables explore a wide range of jazz history and comparative musicology.

They have been of great interest through five years, and they'll continue this season Aug. 14-Sept. [illegible] subjects from ragtime to Afro-Cuban to gospel songs to modern jazz.

But the Barbers began to feel the roundtables weren't enough. They believed that these investigative sessions should be preceded by several workshop weeks wherein young modern musicians could have the time to work with their materials without being subject to critiques. In this way, the Barbers reasoned, their Lenox seminars not only could help jazz research but also support the growth of the music by encouraging modern jazz experimenters.

SO THIS SUMMER, starting July 2, several modern jazz units will be invited to Lenox for one week each. They will be in residence at the Berkshire Music Barn and will be housed and fed for free at nearby Music inn. The musicians can spend all week rehearsing, writing—or even rowing a boat if they like. The only demand on them will be to play a concert on the Sunday at the end of the week they're there, and for that concert they'll be paid.

Bob Reisner will manage the workshop. Reisner is librarian of the Institute of Jazz Studies, and for the last two years, has been presenting modern jazz on Sunday nights at the Open Door in New York.

The project is all the more intriguing because for the first time, the classical musicians, students, and listeners at Tanglewood up the road now will be exposed to contemporary jazz developments.

Many of the younger members of the Boston Symphony long have been interested in jazz. Harold Faberman of the Boston Symphony percussion section, for example, has a deep-rooted knowledge of jazz percussive techniques. And it will do the young classical composers (and composer-teachers) in the Tanglewood classes no harm to wander down the road.

Most contemporary American composers have been astonishingly uninformed about modern jazz developments for too long, and accordingly, their musical expression has been that far removed from a vital aspect of the American spirit.

NOT ALL DETAILS of the Berkshire Music Barn's workshop have been set as this is written, but this much is known: three of the workshop groups will be led by Art Farmer, Thelonious Monk, and Teddy Charles. Farmer will bring Gigi Gryce, Art Taylor, Addison Farmer, and Freddie Redd. Charles' combo will include J. R. Montrose, Charlie Mingus, and possibly Hall Overton. Monk's group isn't yet set.

Their concert dates are July 10 (Farmer), July 24 (Monk) and July 31 (Charles). Dizzy Gillespie, who may not be able to stay a week, is expected — barring unexpected bookings — to give a concert July 17. And the Modern Jazz Quartet will give concerts Aug. 7 and 8.

There will be at least two special events. The opening ceremonies July 2 will feature Coleman Hawkins. And Count Basie's band, the best single illustration of the modern mainstream of jazz, will give a concert in the Music Barn July 28.

FOLK MUSIC EXPERT Richard Dyer-Bennett has agreed to give a series of five Saturday concerts. In the series, Dyer-Bennett, a brilliant musical artist, will present a comprehensive sweep of English, Scot, colonial, and mountain ballads and songs. Ticket prices for these concerts are $1.10, $1.65, and $2.20. The Basie concert tickets are $2.20 and $3.

For further information, you can write to the Barbers, Music Inn, Lenox, Mass.

Musical Leader, Chicago
May 55

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood will open its 13th summer session July 4, with Charles Munch again serving as director. . . . Six of the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival will be devoted wholly to Beethoven . . .

[143]

RICHMOND, VA.
TIMES-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 123,471 - S. 174,705

MAY 29 1955

Today's Radio, TV Highlights

Dutch Orchestra Plans CBS Concerts

The first of four symphonic concerts by the world renowned Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, Holland, will be broadcast on CBS radio at 2:30 P. M. today under the direction of the orchestra's guest conductor Rafael Kubelik. The concerts were transcribed by Radio Nederland for CBS Radio on the stage of the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam's magnificent concert hall, for which the orchestra is named.

Kubelik will open the broadcast program with "The Roman Carnival" Overture by Hector Berlioz. Appropriately, the famous Dutch orchestra will perform next the "Berkshire Symphonies" by the young Dutch composer Jurriaan Andriessen, who wrote the music for a documentary film about the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., on commission by the late Serge Koussevitzky. After its completion, Andriessen was commissioned by the Dutch government to write a symphony which he called "Berkshire Symphonies."

The program will close with a performance of the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6 in B minor ("Pathetique").

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Sun.)
Cir. S. 357,463

MAY 22 1955

nts nter

Summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-Aug. 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the United States, Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

In addition, special scholarships in 1955 to Tanglewood students include the following:

A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting.

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the Summer.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field.

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300, to Tanglewood composer.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

Two new scholarships have been announced: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

Full information about the Berkshire Music Center and its inducements to Summer music students may be secured by writing to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HOLYOKE, MASS.
Transcript-Telegram
Circ. D. 26,042

MAY 14 1955

Rockefeller 'Matches' Funds To Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, in Lenox, in connection with it Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center. Grants totaling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totaled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
Circ. S. 102,016

MAY 15 1955

Rockefeller Grants Aid Berkshire Music Center

Foundation to Donate Matching Sums for Five-Year Period Starting This Summer

Boston, May 14—The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music, operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood in Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, starting this summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, could amount to $125,000.

Seen as Impetus

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center; grants totaling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school.

An impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totaled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 has been set.

The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the Center through tax-exempt donations to the organizaset up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1940 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000 while drawn upon annually to assist the 4575 students from all parts of the U. S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1959 is estimated at $325,000.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its 13 session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; Choral Music, with Hugh Ross in charge; Composition, with noted composers Roger Sessions (U. S. A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; Opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky; and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood Study Group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

ANDERSON, S. C.
INDEPENDENT
Circ. D. 36,781 - S. 37,215

MAY 29 1955

EDWIN A. FREEMAN HAS VARIED SKILLS
Clemson iCvil Engineer Also Music Composer

Clemson Engineer Receives $500 Music Scholarship

CLEMSON, May 28 — A young graduate assistant in engineering drawing at Clemson College with a diversified education has won a $500 prize for musical composition. Edwin A. Freeman, a native of Clemson and a graduate of the college, has been notified that he has been awarded the money to be used for further musical study by the 1954 Student Composers Radio Awards.

THIS COMPETITION is sponsored annually by Broadcast Music, Inc. in this country and Canada to further the creation of concert music in North America. Judges for the 1954 awards were William Schuman, president of the Julliard School of Music; Earl V. Moore, dean of the School of Music at the University of Michigan; and Henry Cowell, composer and professor at the Peabody Conservatory of Music.

Freeman's composition entitled 'Fantasy on a Ground' is a passacaglia for orchestra. It was written while he was studying musical composition under Helen L. Gunderson in the School of Music at Louisiana State University. While at LSU he also received a prize from the Louisiana State Federation of Music for a viola suite which he wrote. His other compositions to date include a string quartet, a woodwind quartet, a two-piano sonatine and an art song with words from the poem "The Road Not Taken" by Robert Frost.

So far Freeman's life has been a blending of music and engineering, even in his home life. His father, Professor E. J. Freeman, head of the industrial engineering department, plays the cello, and his mother is an accomplished pianist and organist with whom he studied music from childhood.

AT CLEMSON Freeman studied civil engineering and served as student bandmaster before his graduation in [illegible]. He later completed the four year course in musical composition at LSU in three years and served two years as a lieutenant in the Army's Corps of Engineers including a tour of duty in Korea.

At the present time his plans for the future are indefinite. During the summer he will study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Massachusetts, and at the Pierre Monteux School of Conducting in Hanover, Maine.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

APR 19 1955

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund will be held April 23 from 2 to 5 p.m. and May 1 from 12 m. to 3 p.m. at the chapter room in Carnegie Hall, 154 West 57th street, New York.

* * *

APPLICANTS intending to audition have been asked to notify the registrar at Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll of the chamber music department will be present for scheduled auditions and interviews.

The Berkshire Music Center, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its summer home at Tanglewood, offers an opportunity for six weeks of music study in connection with the Berkshire Festival. The 13th season of the school will be conducted from July 4 to Aug. 14 with Charles Munch as director and a distinguished faculty including principals and other members of the Boston Symphony.

Departments in the school include orchestra and conducting, Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, Richard Burgin and Mr. Kroll; choral music, Hugh Ross; composition, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera, Boris Goldovsky; and the Tanglewood study group, which enrolls students for two, four or six weeks, Ingolf Dahl.

* * *

A WORLD FESTIVAL of folk dance and song will be held at Oslow June 29 to July 4 with over 1,500 folk dancers from [illegible] countries participating. The International Folk Music Council will hold its annual conference in conjunction with the festival.

N, Chic
May

10, at Tangle-ert session July
rving as di-
can to be played nox, e Berkshire to Beeth-

[144]

RICHMOND, VA.
TIMES-DISPATCH
Circ. D. 123,471 - S. 174,705

MAY 29 1955

...ue de la Rampe, a short street just beyond the yacht basin at the foot of the hill. You can't miss it, for in the doorway will be standing the proprietor, M.

Directly on the Oce...
Halifax ho...
26th
VIRGINIA B...
Large, ... outside double ... with phone ... private bath. All ... activi...

...four symphonic concerts by the world renowned Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam, Holland, will be broadcast on CBS radio at 2:30 P. M. today under the direction of the orchestra's guest conductor Rafael Kubelik. The concerts were transcribed by Radio Nederland for CBS Radio on the stage of the Concertgebouw, Amsterdam's magnificent concert hall, for which the orchestra is named.

Kubelik will open the broadcast program with "The Roman Carnival" Overture by Hector Berlioz. Appropriately, the famous Dutch orchestra will perform next the "Berkshire Symphonies" by the young Dutch composer Jurriaan Andriessen, who wrote the music for a documentary film about the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., on commission by the late Serge Koussevitzky. After its completion, Andriessen was commissioned by the Dutch government to write a symphony which he called "Berkshire Symphonies."

The program will close with a performance of the Tchaikovsky Symphony No. 6 in B minor ("Pathetique").

N. Chic...
May

...10, ... at Tangle-
...ert ... session July
...rving as di-
...can to be played
...nox, ...e Berkshire
... to Beeth-

ANDERSON, S. C.
INDEPENDENT
Circ. D. 36,781 - S. 37,215

MAY 29 1955

EDWIN A. FREEMAN HAS VARIED SKILLS
Clemson iCvil Engineer Also Music Composer

Clemson Engineer Receives $500 Music Scholarship

CLEMSON, May 28 — A young graduate assistant in engineering drawing at Clemson College with a diversified education has won a $500 prize for musical composition. Edwin A. Freeman, a native of Clemson and a graduate of the college, has been notified that he has been awarded the money to be used for further musical study by the 1954 Student Composers Radio Awards.

THIS COMPETITION is sponsored annually by Broadcast Music, Inc. in this country and Canada to further the creation of concert music in North America. Judges for the 1954 awards were William Schuman, president of the Julliard School of Music; Earl V. Moore, dean of the School of Music at the University of Michigan; and Henry Cowell, composer and professor at the Peabody Conservatory of Music.

Freeman's composition entitled "Fantasy on a Ground" is a passacaglia for orchestra. It was written while he was studying musical composition under Helen [illegible] Gunderson in the School of Music at Louisiana State University. While at LSU he also received a prize from the Louisiana State Federation of Music for a viola suite which he wrote. His other compositions to date include a string quartet, a woodwind quartet, a two-piano sonatine and an art song with words from the poem "The Road Not Taken" by Robert Frost.

So far Freeman's life has been a blending of music and engineering, even in his home life. His father, Professor E. J. Freeman, head of the industrial engineering department, plays the cello, and his mother is an accomplished pianist and organist with whom he studied music from childhood.

AT CLEMSON Freeman studied civil engineering and served as student bandmaster before his graduation [illegible]. He later completed the four year course in musical composition at LSU in three years and served two years as a lieutenant in the Army's Corps of Engineers including a tour of duty in Korea.

At the present time his plans for the future are indefinite. During the summer he will study at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Massachusetts, and at the Pierre Monteux School of Conducting in Hanover, Maine.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Sun.)
Cir. S. 357,463

MAY 22 1955

Scholarships Aid Music Students at Tanglewood's Berkshire Center

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to Summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-Aug. 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the United States, Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

In addition, special scholarships in 1955 to Tanglewood students include the following:

A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting.

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $500, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the Summer.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field.

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300, to Tanglewood composer.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

Two new scholarships have been announced: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

Full information about the Berkshire Music Center and its inducements to Summer music students may be secured by writing to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

HOLYOKE, MASS.
Transcript-Telegram
Circ. D. 26,042

MAY 14 1955

Rockefeller 'Matches' Funds To Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, in Lenox, in connection with it Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center. Grants totaling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totaled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
Circ. S. 102,016

MAY 15 1955

Rockefeller Grants Aid Berkshire Music Center

Foundation to Donate Matching Sums for Five-Year Period Starting This Summer

Boston, May 14—The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood in Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, starting this summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, could amount to $125,000.

Seen as Impetus

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center; grants totaling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school.

An impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totaled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 has been set.

The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the Center through tax-exempt donations to the organiza- set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1940 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000 while ...awn upon annually, to assist the 4575 students from all parts of the U. S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1959 is estimated at $325,000.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its 13 session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; Choral Music, with Hugh Ross in charge; Composition, with noted composers Roger Sessions (U. S. A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; Opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky; and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood Study Group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

APR 19 1955

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund will be held April 23 from 2 to 5 p.m. and May 1 from 12 m. to 3 p.m. at the chapter room in Carnegie Hall, 154 West 57th street, New York.

* * *

APPLICANTS intending to audition have been asked to notify the registrar at Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll of the chamber music department will be present for scheduled auditions and interviews.

The Berkshire Music Center, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its summer home at Tanglewood, offers an opportunity for six weeks of music study in connection with the Berkshire Festival. The 13th season of the school will be conducted from July 4 to Aug. 14 with Charles Munch as director and a distinguished faculty including principals and other members of the Boston Symphony.

Departments in the school include orchestra and conducting, Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, Richard Burgin and Mr. Kroll; choral music, Hugh Ross; composition, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera, Boris Goldovsky; and the Tanglewood study group, which enrolls students for two, four or six weeks, Ingolf Dahl.

* * *

A WORLD FESTIVAL of folk dance and song will be held at Oslow June 29 to July 4 with over 1,500 folk dancers from [illegible] countries participating. The International Folk Music Council will hold its annual conference in conjunction with the festival.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 85,013 - S. 85,817

MAY 29 1955

Music And Drama

By MALCOLM MILLER
Journal Music and Drama Critic

BARTER THEATER'S TWENTY THIRD SEASON

Robert Porterfield's Barter Theater in Abingdon, Va., (officially The State Theater of Virginia), will open its 23rd season in Abingdon Opera House, Monday, June 13, at 8:15 p.m.

The opening opus will be Frederick Knott's exciting melodrama, "Dial M For Murder," starring Barter Theater's versatile director, Owen Phillips, in the role of "Tony Wendice," the part created for the Broadway production by Maurice Evans.

OWEN PHILLIPS

Other plays to be seen in Abingdon during the coming summer season include "The King of Hearts," "The Fourposter," "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial," "Bernardine," "The Cocktail Party," with an all-star New York cast; "The Seven Year Itch," "The Skin of Our Teeth," "Dark of the Moon," "Sabrina Fair," and one of the great classics.

Season ticket books, eight tickets for $10, are now on sale. They must be purchased before June 18. No season books will be sold after Saturday, June 18. Send remittance and self-addressed envelope to "The Barter Theater of Virginia," Abingdon, Va.

SPIRITUALS SINGERS

Thirty-two Negro boys and girls from Charles M. Hall School, Alcoa, Tenn., gave a beautifully rendered program, which included Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer," and a number of Spirituals, at Maryville Kiwanis Club's noon luncheon meeting last Tuesday.

The singers were directed by Mrs. Harriet West, head of the school's Music Department. The program was announced by Prof. Emmett West, the Principal.

PROGRAM

1. Theme Song
   Ride on King Jesus.
   This Little Light of Mine.
2. Lift Thine Eyes.
   Were You There?
3. The Lord's Prayer.
   No Man Is On An Island.

WILDERNESS ROAD

Berea, Ky., is all agog over the forthcoming World Premiere of Paul Green's "Wilderness Road," Wednesday, June 29, at 8:15 p.m., celebrating the Centennial of Berea College.

The drama will be repeated nightly, except Sunday, through Sept. 5, 1955. However, there will be two special Sunday performances, July 3, and Sept. 4.

The leading role will be played by Bedford Thurman, Director of the Department of Speech at Purdue University, LaFayette, Ind. More than 100 actors, singers, and dancers, largely from Berea College, will comprise the supporting cast.

"Wilderness Road" will picture the life and happenings in an isolated mountain community in Eastern Kentucky during the "War Between the States." It is interspersed with mountain music, including famous ballads distinctive of the Appalachian region.

On the opening night all seats will be $3. Thereafter, the prices will be $3, $2.50, and $1.75. All seats are reserved.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its thirteenth Summer School of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood, on Lake Mahkeenac, Berkshire County, Mass., on July 4.

Charles Munch, Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be director of the six-week session.

Richard Burgin, Concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony, will serve as Assistant Director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his first since the Berkshire School was founded in 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer, and Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, will come to the United States for the first time to teach composition.

Roger Sessions, the distinguished USian composer, will be associated with Blacher in the composition department.

Blacher and Sessions have each received a commission for a work to celebrate the Boston Symphony's seventy-fifth anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

The Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, for which auditions are now being held, and the conducting class, will be directed by Leonard Bernstein with the help of Seymour Lipkin.

Orchestra Sections and Chamber Music will be under the direction of the Principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin and William Kroll will head the Chamber Music Department, assisted by Jean Bedetti, Ruth Posselt, and members of the Boston Symphony.

Hugh Ross will again head the Choral Department, and Boris Golddovsky, whose production of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" will open Knoxville Civic Music Association's 1955-56 season at the Bijou Theater on Thursday night, Oct. 20, will return to Tanglewood to take charge of the Opera Department. He will be assisted by Sarah Caldwell, Paul Ulanowsky, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, and others.

The Study Group offers a course of general music study for those active in community music; for music educators; and for amateurs. Members of the Study Group will take part in the Festival Chorus which participates in the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood. The Study group accepts students for two, four or six weeks.

Catalog, additional information, and applications for admission to the Summer School of Music may be secured from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

MAY 2 1955

Five-Year Matching Grant To Berkshire Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its thirteenth session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; Choral Music, with Hugh Ross in charge; Composition with noted composers Roger Sessions (U.S.A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; Opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky; and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood Study Group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is Director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland is Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz is Dean.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,590 - Sat. 176,542

JUN 4 1955

To an Unknown Music-Lover

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

This is a little tribute to the forgotten man of music—that unknown music-lover who never gets into the news and maybe doesn't ever bother to read it.

He is the man who waits on line for hours to get a seat at the Metropolitan, or maybe just standing-room, and not necessarily on opening night.

He is the man who has no particular favorites in music; whether it's Mozart or Beethoven or Wagner, he likes them all and discriminates against none.

Creature of Habit.

He is the man who, if there is an audience of 20 at a Town Hall concert, is one of the 20, perhaps only out of force of habit.

He is the man in the balcony at a Philharmonic concert who listens with equal avidity to everything played and gives the soloist and conductor a big hand.

He is the nameless bystander in the vicinity of a huddle of music critics who may eavesdrop discreetly but never intrude.

He is the man who is always on time; when the concert is scheduled to begin at 8:30, he comes at 8:30 and not at 9 when it does begin.

Never Coughs.

He is the model concertgoer. He never whispers during numbers, saves his coughing spells for intermission time, noiselessly leafs through his programs.

He is the man you will always find at the opening concert of the Stadium season. He will almost certainly be seen at Tanglewood and probably at the Bach festival in Bethlehem, Pa.

He may skimp for a couple of years in order to manage a trip to Europe for the summer festivals. He is certain to include Italy.

He may write one or two anonymous cards from abroad to a New York critic, confiding a modest rapture over a soprano from Spezia or a basso from Belgrade.

Sacrifices for Seat.

He is the man who often goes without an amenity or two for a seat at the opera and has probably often rebuffed more mundane attractions for a premiere at Carnegie.

He is the man who sits motionless and sedate through the most arrant modernism, ever at attention for the chance revelation of genius, never openly hostile.

He is there to greet the newly arrived hero of the tenor wing and he is there to bid fervid farewell to the departing queen of the soprano register.

He is a philanthropist in a small way, responding to fund-raising pleas with a few dollar bills neatly folded in an envelope without return address.

Sometimes Plays Piano.

He is not a musician himself, our nameless friend, though when alone with a piano he may grope tremulously through a piano score of Bellini's "Norma."

He looks upon musicians as a people apart—mysteriously chosen by nature and art for a special and exalted role. He looks upon music as a way of life.

He is a man of simple but profound spiritual needs without whom there would be no concert halls and no orchestras to fill them.

It is for this little man of music—this unsung and unsinging hero who can only listen—that the composers write their symphonies and their operas.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 27 1955

Calendar of Events For Bay Staters

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Boston

A 1955 Calendar of Events in Massachusetts has just been issued by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

Anyone planning a summer trip to Massachusetts is invited to communicate with the Department of Commerce, which has expressed its desire to assist in any way possible.

Season-Long Events

July 1-Sept. 3—Lee	Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival
July 3—Aug. 27—Duxbury	Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama
July 6-Aug. 14—Lenox	Berkshire Music Festival—Tanglewood
Old Sturbridge Village—Sturbridge	Open Every Day
Otis Air Force Base—Cape Cod	Special Public Tours Every Thursday
Army Tours—Wellfleet	Antiaircraft Practice Every Wednesday—Public
Nauset Station—Eastham	Coast Guard Tours on Thursday—Public
Edaville Railroad—South Carver	Daily Rides on Narrow-Gauge Plantation Road
Guided Tours—Plymouth	Historical Landmarks—Daily
All Yacht Clubs	Sailing Races on Weekends

General Events

June 29 —West Springfield	Country Dance Festival — Storrowton Village, Eastern States Exposition Grounds
June 26 —Provincetown	Blessing of the Fishing Fleet
July —Sheffield	School of Antiques
July —Dalton	St. Peter Fiesta
July 3 —Gloucester	Old Home Week
July 3 —Beverly	Antique and Sportscar Parade
July 3 —Plymouth	Pilgrim Breakfast—Harlow Old Fort House
July 4 —Beverly	National Sportscar Races—Airport
July 12 —Dennis	Handcrafts Exhibition—Union Church Grounds
July 12 —Hyannis	Square Dance Festival—High School Field
July 15 —Amherst	Country Dance Festival—Univ. of Mass.
July 22 —Provincetown	Beachcombers Costume Ball—Town Hall
July 28-29—Amherst	Weavers' Seminar—University of Mass.
July 29-31—Northampton	National Morgan Horse Show—Fair Grounds
August —Plymouth	Pilgrim Progress Processional—Each Friday 5 p.m.
Aug. 4 —Falmouth	Nursing Association Fete—Village Green
Aug. 7 —West Barnstable	Henry Jacob Service—West Parish Meetinghouse
Aug. 7 —Gloucester	Fishermen's Memorial Service
Aug. 9-10—Chatham	Craftsmen's Fair—High School
Aug. 13 —Coonamessett	Cape Cod Kennel Club Dog Show
Aug. 14-18—Barnstable	All Tackle Tuna Tournament
Aug. 19 —Provincetown	Artists' Costume Ball
Aug. 20-21—South Mashpee	Indian Pow-Wow—Poponesset
Aug. 25 —Yarmouth	Bass River Rod and Gun Club Clambake
Aug. 26 —Hyannis	Fall Style Show and Beauty Pageant
Sep. 1 —Beverly	Tournament of Drums—Hurd Stadium
Sep. 4 —Plymouth	Pilgrim Breakfast—Harlow Old Fort House
Oct. 12 —Beverly	Columbus Day Fiesta—Inocenti Park
Nov. 24 —Plymouth	Thanksgiving Day Pilgrim Processional and Tableau

Celebrations

June 26-July 4—Groton	Tercentenary Celebration
July 2 —North Beverly	Bonfire—Parade—Fireworks
July 4 —Southampton	Barbecue—Old-Fashioned Auction
July 4 —Shelburne Falls	Old-Fashioned Celebration
July 4 —Cape Cod	Independence Day Celebrations—All Towns
Aug. 11-13—Charlemont	Yankee Doodle Days—Auction—Barbecue Pageant

Summer Theaters

June 24 —Beverly	North Shore Music Theater—Route 128—Exit 9
June 27 —Wellesley	Theater on the Green—Wellesley College
June 28 —Orleans	Arena Theater Opening
June 28 —Williamstown	Summer Theater Opens—Williams College
June 29 —Chatham	Monomoy Theater Opening
July —Falmouth	Highfield Theater Opening
July —Fitchburg	Lake Whalom Playhouse Opening
July —Westboro	Red Barn Theater—Route 9
July 1 —Becket	Jacob's Pillow—Dance Festival Opens
July 1 —Hyannis	Cape Cod Melody Tent Opening
July 1 —Holyoke	Valley Players Theater—Mountain Park
July 2 —Lenox	Berkshire Music Barn—Music Inn—Jazz and Folk Music Concerts
July 2 —Dennis	Cape Cod Playhouse Opening
July 4 —Provincetown	Playhouse Opens
July 4 —Falmouth	Playhouse Opens
July 4 —Duxury	Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama Opens
July 4-Aug. 14—Lenox	Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood
July 5 —Cambridge	Brattle Theater Opens
July 6- 7—Harwich	Junior Theater Opens—Exchange Hall
Aug. 13 —Stockbridge	New York Pro Musica Antiqua Concerts—Saturday Evenings

---

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUN 5 1955

Berkshire Festival On July 8

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—There's more than music in the Berkshires, but Tanglewood, of course, is still the area's Summer headliner.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Charles Munch, will have an expanded season of 24 programs, running from July 8 through Aug. 14.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this Summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

One is a Summer theatre which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theatre at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits. Marcia Henderson, Williamstown native, who is now a Hollywood and television star, will be featured in the opening performance.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multimillion dollar museum erected by Robert Sterling Clark, New York financier, was opened to the public in May.

Another Berkshire regular, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 off Jacob's Ladder (Route 20) in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn announced recently that his 1955 season will be highlighted by the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

[145]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUN 5 1955

THE WORLD OF MUSIC: OPERA AT TANGLEWOOD

Mennini One-Acter, 'The Rope,' Listed For Premiere With Mozart's 'Zaide'

By ROSS PARMENTER

TWO years ago Louis Mennini was at the Berkshire Music Center with an unusual commission. He was to hang around the opera department and learn all he could about the practical realities of putting on an opera. What is more, he was to consult with those involved about problems that occurred to him as he began work on an opera of his own. The result of that assignment was "The Rope," a one-act opera based on Eugene O'Neill's play of the same name, which will be presented at Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Mennini has scored the work for twenty-five instruments and has prepared his own libretto. With few exceptions, he has taken the play as it is and used the playwright's text. The work to be paired with "The Rope" will extend the department's record in introducing little-known Mozart operas to the United States. "Idomeneo" and "La Clemenza di Tito" are the ones it has given in the past. This summer its choice is the unfinished "Zaide." Aug. 8 and 9 will be the dates.

The opera department will also honor Boris Blacher, the visiting German composer on the center's faculty. It will present his opera "Romeo and Juliet," which was heard here in a concert version at a program of the League of Composers six years ago. Other projects of the department are scenes from Berlioz' "The Trojans" and Milhaud's "L'Abandon de Ariane."

PROCEEDS: The La Salle Quartet of Cincinnati's College of Music is one of the city's prides. Last year when the quartet was on tour in Israel a group of Cincinnati citizens sponsored one of its concerts in Tel Aviv with a special end in mind. The idea was that the proceeds of the concert would provide the prize money in a contest for a new string quartet by an Israeli composer. The winning work was to be selected by an American jury. Eleven quartets were submitted. Aaron Copland, William Schuman and Vincent Persichetti passed on them. They picked Paul Ben-Haim's String Quartet as the work to receive the box-office take.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751

JUN 5 1955

Tanglewood Opera

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., lists a number of productions for the summer. Among them are the premiere of "The Rope," a one-acter by Louis Mennini, Mozart's "Zaide," Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane" and excerpts from Berlioz' "The Trojans."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,182
MAY 21 1955

OVER THE NEXT FIVE YEARS THE ROCKEFELLER Foundation will contribute a sum equal to that raised from other sources for the operation of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra—Boston Symphony. Estimate runs as high as $125,000 for the five years.

NY Herald Tribune
June 5, 1955

Debut of 'Rope' Set

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

When Louis Mennini's "The Rope" is introduced by the Berkshire Music Center on Aug. 8 and 9 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., it will be prefaced by a little known Mozart opera, "Zaide" (K. 344), composed in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. These will probably be the first American performances of this unfinished work, which has been edited by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell for this production.

"The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title which was first staged by the Provincetown Players here in 1917. It is the first completed result of a $750 opera commission plan introduced by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in 1953. For the last two summers, the composer has worked with the Center's opera department at Tanglewood, receiving its advice and co-operation through all stages of composition and preparation.

The opera department will occupy three other evenings during the Tanglewood season, Tuesday, July 26; Monday, Aug. 1 and Tuesday, July 2. The schedule for these dates includes Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane" and excerpts from Berlioz' "The Trojans," which Mr. Goldovsky produced in Boston for the first time in America in March.

* * *

Symphony Extends Tour

The Symphony of the Air, which has been playing in Korea, Hong Kong, Okinawa and Formosa, will spend this week in Manila. The Philippine capital was scheduled to be the last stop on the former NBC Symphony's triumphant Far Eastern tour, but this has been extended for two weeks, taking the American musicians to Siam, Malaya and Ceylon.

---

165 Church

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,590 - Sat. 176,542

JUN 7 1955

Travel Talk

he Berkshire Music Barn, first summer music hall oted to concert jazz and re- d music, will open July 2, Lenox, Mass., just a mile n the road from the Boston nphony's famous Music d. . . . The Breakers Beach, Lido Beach, L. I., being lt at a cost of $900,000, will completed June 10. . . . This the second year the June sic and Arts Festival, Anne ster's informal hideaway home, Woodburne, N. Y., feature Daily Creative ists and Guests Get-To- hers.

For the second successive year the Boston Symphony Orchestra will [illegible] season of 24 programs at Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Hills, Mass., from July 8 through Aug. 14. . . . John C. Potteiger has been appointed resident manager of Charlie Geissinger's High Point Inn, Mt. Pocono, Pa. . . . The Berkshire Camp for Men, Wingdale, N. Y., a resort for male vacationers exclusively, is now going strong.

* * *

Camping and picnicking facilities in the Great Smoky Moun-

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 2 1955

Prepare for Tanglewood Opening

Charles Munch puts the [illegible] string section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra through its paces in readiness for the new Tanglewood season, which will get underway with the first of the theater-concert hall programs next week.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
SENTINEL
Circ. D. 184,155 - S. 227,930

JUN 5 1955

Johnson Back For Festival

By Edward P. Halline

THE TIRELESS Thor Johnson, just winding up a triumphal tour of the Orient with the Symphony of the Air (Toscanini's old NBC Symphony), will be back in Door County in a couple of months for the third annual Peninsula Music Festival.

On this tour the Wisconsin-born Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and Walter Hendl, conductor of the Dallas Symphony, will have performed 41 concerts. Johnson directs the orchestra at Manila today, and they all leave for the United States next Sunday.

The enthusiasm which has greeted the orchestra everywhere in Japan, Korea, Formosa, Okinawa, Hong Kong and the Philippines makes one dig up that trite saying, but true, that music is a universal language.

And an American orchestra playing music by Germans, Austrians, Russians and Americans to Asiatic audiences does more to break down the barriers of race and language than a million lofty declamations about the virtues of democracy and freedom.

(If only an orchestra such as this could break down the Milwaukee barrier and resow the seeds in this cultural—well not desert, but dust bowl.)

JOHNSON WILL KEEP busy right up to the Peninsula Festival. He will direct the early American Moravian Music Festival at Winston-Salem, N. C., conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., direct the Elkan Naumberg memorial concert in Central Park, New York City, give concerts with youth groups at the Transylvania music camp, Brevard, N. C., and at the University of Kentucky summer music clinic for high school musicians at Lexington.

Thor Johnson's enthusiasm for young people in music is significant. His superb Peninsula orchestra last year was composed of players hardly more than teenagers. He is building for the future, he said then, and he is continually amazed that Milwaukee, with an outstanding public school music program reaching thousands of pupils, has no real outlet for their talents.

THE DATES for the next Peninsula Musical Festival Saturday, Aug. 6; Sunday, Aug. 7; Tuesday, Aug. 9; Wednesday, Aug. 10; Saturday, Aug. 13; Sunday, Aug. 14; Wednesday, Aug. 17; Saturday, Aug. 20; Sunday, Aug. 21.

Now the talk is that Igor Markevitch, the brilliant European conductor whose ballet performances have been extremely impressive on Angel records, is to be the next music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There has been talk, too, of Herbert von Karajan, who led the Berlin Philharmonic on its recent tour, including Milwaukee.

But Variety, which keeps its ear to the ground even in the long hair field, reports that Conductor Charles Munch wants to return to his native France and Markevitch, whose guest conducting at Boston was acclaimed, is next in line.

who takes Glamorous Vacations?

1417

DO THESE FAMOUS PEOPLE?

Pierre Monteux
Eugene Ormandy
Dimitri Mitropoulos
Charles Münch
Yehudi Menuhin
Risë Stevens
Eleanor Steber
Hilda Gueden
Roberta Peters
Gladys Swarthout
Lily Pons
and André Kostelanetz Jackie Gleason
Lucy and Desi
Walt Disney
Ed Sullivan
Dave Garroway
Arlene Francis
Garry Moore
Sid Caesar
Ed Murrow
Eve Arden
Perry Como
Ezio Pinza
Burl Ives
Ava Gardner
Robert Taylor
Yvonne de Carlo
Yul Brynner
Elizabeth Taylor
James Dean
Jimmy Stewart
Van Johnson
Marlon Brando
Greer Garson
Jean Stafford
Robert Penn Warren
Max Shulman
John Steinbeck
Frank Yerby
Ludwig Bemelmans
Anita Loos
Truman Capote
Moss Hart and Kitty Carlisle and Eartha Kitt, among others

OR DO YOU?

"A perpetual holiday," said George Bernard Shaw, one of the most competent spoil-sports the world has ever known, "is a good working definition of hell." GBS had a terrible time in the Orkneys with damp sheets and uncooperative chambermaids; and his round-the-world cruises were blighted by poisonous insects, journalists, and broken bones. "Holidays always leave one a wreck," he concluded categorically and proceeded to hole up in his place in Hertfordshire.

Most of us, however, feel that nothing would be nicer than to magnify vacations to a jumbo three or four months. Think of all those people we admire and envy, such people as actors, singers, musicians, writers whose time is their own to dispose of. Think of the splendid summers they'll be spending. We thought—and decided to conduct a hit and miss inquiry into their plans to give ourselves a little vicarious pleasure. Instead, the results gave us pause. Only some congenial grasshoppers seem to have planned big fat vacations.

To begin with musicians. Their summers used to be their own—now they've a million festivals to keep them busy. Florence in May, Salzburg or Aspen in July and August are pleasant places to be, but choking on moths and blowing mosquitoes out of clarinets to entertain other vacationers is not exactly a rest.

Take Pierre Monteux, for instance. He doesn't even think holidays are for the strings. After a hard winter's work conducting orchestras from coast to coast you'd suppose this benign 80-year-old gentleman with the large stomach and swooping mustachios who hasn't missed a rehearsal or performance in sixty-five years would be content to take a breather. Not at all. He will be conducting opera, concerts, and recording sessions in London and Paris, in Amsterdam, Scheveningen and other lowland cities, then nipping back across the Atlantic to put in appearances at Lewisohn Stadium, Robin Hood Dell, Tanglewood, and Ravinia Park outside of Chicago. [illegible] comparative youngsters [illegible] Eugene Ormandy (one-night stands [illegible]), Dimitri Mitropoulos (Lewis[illegible] and a cross country tour), [illegible] Münch (in charge of the Berkshire [illegible] Festival).

Time [illegible] when a symphony conductor could take months off just to go touring about Europe with Greta Garbo, eating coffee-soaked cornflakes on the Italian Riviera, and doing yogi exercises in Sweden. But these days seem to be gone forever.

Yogi exercises bring to mind violinist Yehudi Menuhin who, we heard, sat on an Alpine glacier every summer picking eidelweiss and doing Hindu calisthenics to relax his bow arm. We called up Mr. Menuhin's manager and were told—no athletics in the Alps this season; instead, a series of concerts and a short stretch of domesticity in a California bungalow before starting out on the fall grind. As for other virtuosi—pianist Artur Rubinstein hoped to fit in a few relaxing luncheons at his Paris house between dashes to concert dates in Italy and Switzerland; Rudo[illegible] would play at Lewisohn and Ravinia, then commute to a teaching job at Brattleboro from his Vermont farm; violinist Isaac Stern, his summer crammed with U.S. festivals till the end of August, was hoping to clear enough time to take an old-fashioned motor tour of the U.S. national parks and all, but he couldn't be sure.

We resorted to opera stars. Now this profession demands at least three months at Baden-Baden, Cap Ferrat, or Bad Gastein, lounging in pink and gold boudoirs or [illegible] awnings, eating [illegible] reading lurid [illegible] explain those figures? [illegible] turns out are svelte and [illegible] Europe it is to sing and sing. [illegible] might be able to sneak away for a little mountain climbing in the Tyrol and the Dolomites, Eleanor Steber and Hilda Gueden admitted to planning a bit of surreptitious sightseeing between en-

---

Granite State Free Press
LEBANON, N. H.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,412

JUN 30 1955

LEBANON NEWS

Donald C. Smith went to Lenox, Mass., Tuesday to take a position as guide at Tanglewood, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its summer concerts and conducts the music school known as the Berkshire Music Center.

OHIO NEWS BUREAU CO.
Cleveland 15, Ohio
Oldest Press Clipping Bureau in Ohio
CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER

JUN 26 1955

Berkshires Offer Theater, Music and Art Events

047

There is more than music in the Berkshires. Tanglewood is, of course, the area's summer headliner. For the second season the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform from July 8 through Aug. 14.

Two other new major attractions in the Berkshire hills are both located in Williamstown. One is the summer theater which opens Tuesday. The other, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum.

The multimillion dollar museum was opened last month. It is opened to the public at no charge.

The Berkshires have an abundance of natural and historic spots: Mission House in Stockbridge, built in 1739 as an Indian mission; Monument Mountain, the great stone-faced mountain poetized by William Cullen Bryant; Natural Bridge, a geological wonder that includes marbled arches and water carved caverns.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 6 1955

Berkshire Festival Opening Tonight

047

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. at 8:30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge of $2 and $3 and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season 8,750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1,358 per concert, or well over the 1,200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007.00. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7,850.00.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 3 1955

give him 9000 degrees.

Munch to Greet Students And Guests at Lenox Today

Lenox, July 2—The Berkshire Music Centerm the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 13th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood here tomorrow. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center, who recently returned from vacation at his home in Paris, will address students and guests at opening exercises, at 3.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Cox To Preside

William Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society whose contributions help to support the school, will preside, and the faculty of the school will be introduced by Richard Burgin, acting assistant director, and dean Ralph Berkowitz.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, Hugh Ross, head of its choral department, will lead the students in "Alleluia", composed for the school's opening by Randall Thompson. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises.

The first of some 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, which the public may attend through membership in the Friends' society, will be given Thursday evening, July 7, in the Music Shed at 8.30 when, for the first time, the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Dept. I will play together. The program will consist of Copland's "Outdoor Overture"; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; Prolofieff's "Peter and the Wolf", led by student conductors, with student soloists and narrator; and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday morning, July 10, at 10.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
[illegible] Independent
[illegible]

Berkshire Festival Concerts Start JJuly 6

[illegible] choral and chamber [illegible] come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening [illegible] of Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. [illegible] annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony [illegible] by its Music [illegible] Charles Munch. For the [illegible] summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has [illegible] concerts will be given [illegible] weeks, July 6 to [illegible] 14 on the estate where [illegible] ago Nathaniel Hawthorne [illegible] a guest and told his [illegible] Tales."

[illegible] 1955 Berkshire Festival of [illegible] concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 6) with an [illegible] program by the [illegible] Quartet. On Friday [illegible] (July 8) Charles Munch [illegible] conduct a chamber orchestra [illegible] Boston Symphony players [illegible] program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. The Saturday [illegible] chamber orchestra con[illegible] Handel, Haydn and [illegible]. On Sunday afternoon (July 10) Charles Munch [illegible] the chamber orchestra [illegible] Bach's Mass in B minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society.

[illegible] above concerts and those [illegible] following week July 13 [illegible] will all be given in the [illegible] Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings [illegible] Sunday afternoon at [illegible] who [redacted] Glamorous Vacat[redacted]?

[147]

DO THESE FAMOUS PEOPLE?

[redacted]e Monteux	Ezio Pinza
Euge[redacted] Ormandy	Burl Ives
Dimitri [redacted]itropoulos	Ava Gardner
Cha[redacted]es Münch	Robert Taylor
Yehud[redacted] Menuhin	Yvonne de Carlo
Ris[redacted] Stevens	Yul Brynner
Ele[redacted]nor Steber	Elizabeth Taylor
[redacted] Gueden	James Dean
Ro[redacted]rta Peters	Jimmy Stewart
Gladys [redacted]warthout	Van Johnson
Lily Pons	Marlon Brando
and André [redacted]ostelanetz	Greer Garson
Jack[redacted] Gleason	Jean Stafford
Luc[redacted] and Desi	Robert Penn Warren
W[redacted]t Disney	Max Shulman
[redacted] Sullivan	John Steinbeck
[redacted] Garroway	Frank Yerby
Ar[redacted] Francis	Ludwig Bemelmans
[redacted]rry Moore	Anita Loos
[redacted]d Caesar	Truman Capote
[redacted] Murrow	Moss Hart and Kitty Carlisle
[redacted]ve Arden	and Eartha Kitt,
[redacted]rry Como	among others

OR DO YOU?

"A perpetual [redacted] said George Bernard Shaw, one of the most competent spoil-sports the world has ever known, "is a good [redacted]" GBS had a terrible time in [redacted] Orkneys with damp sheets [redacted] uncooperat[redacted] chambermaids; and his round [redacted] were blighted by poisonous insects, [redacted]lists, and broken bones. "[redacted] ave one a wreck," he concluded [redacted] and proceeded to hole up [redacted]ffordshire.

Most [redacted] feel that nothing would be [redacted]agnify vacations to a jumbo three or [redacted] months. Think of all those people we admire and envy, such people as actors, singers, musicians, writers whose time is their own to dispose of. Think of the splendid summers they'll be spending. We thought—and decided to conduct a hit and miss inquiry into [redacted] to give ourselves a little vicarious [redacted]sure. Instead, the results gave us pause. Only some congenial grasshoppers seem to have planned big fat vacations.

To begin with musicians. Their summers used to be their own—now they've a million festivals to keep them busy. Florence in May, Salzburg or Aspen in July and August are pleasant places to be, but choking on moths and blowing mosquitoes out of clarinets to entertain other vacationers is not exactly a rest.

Take Pierre Monteux, for instance. He doesn't even think holidays are for the strings. After a hard winter's work conducting orchestras from coast to coast you'd suppose this [redacted] other lowland cities, [redacted] across the Atlantic to put in appearances at Lewisohn [redacted] Tanglewood, Chicago. [redacted]arative young[redacted]e-night stands [redacted]poulos (Lewis[redacted] and [redacted] country tour) [redacted] Münch [redacted] of the Berksh[redacted]

Time [redacted]ductor could [redacted] months off just [redacted] touring about Eu[redacted] with Greta Garbo, [redacted] coffee-soaked co[redacted]flakes on the Italia[redacted], and doing yog[redacted] exercises in Swed[redacted] these days seem [redacted] be gone forever.

Yogi exercises bring to [redacted] violinist Yehudi Menuhin who, we [redacted] on an Alpine glacier every su[redacted]cking eidelweiss and doing Hindu [redacted] to relax his [redacted] arm. We called [redacted]enuhin's manager and were told—[redacted]s in the Alps th[redacted]; instead, [redacted] concerts and [redacted] short stretch of [redacted] in a California bun[redacted] on the fall [redacted] pianist Artur Rub[redacted] relaxing lunch[redacted] between dashes to [redacted] Switzerland; Rud[redacted] at Lewisohn and Ravinia, then commute to a teaching job at Brattleboro [redacted] farm; violinist Isaac S[redacted] crammed with U.S. festiv[redacted] of August, was hoping to clear [redacted] time to take an old-fashioned [redacted] of the U.S. national parks and all, but he couldn't be sure.

We re[redacted] Now this profe[redacted] at least three months at [redacted]-Baden, Cap [redacted]errat, or Bad Gaste[redacted] gold boudoirs or [redacted]s, eating [redacted] lurid [redacted] in those [redacted] out are [redacted]rope it is to sing and a[redacted] might be able to [redacted] mountain climbing in [redacted] and the Dolomites. Eleanor Steber [redacted] Gueden admitted to planning a bit of surreptitious sightseeing between en-

---

Granite State Free Press
LEBANON, N. H.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,412

JUN 30 1955

LEBANON NEWS

Donald C. Smith went to Lenox, Mass., Tuesday to take a position as guide at Tanglewood, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its summer concerts and conducts the music school known as the Berkshire Music Center.

OHIO NEWS BUREAU CO.
Cleveland 15, Ohio
Oldest Press Clipping Bureau in Ohio
CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER

JUN 26 1955

Berkshires Offer Theater, Music and Art Events

047 NY

There is more than music in the Berkshires. Tanglewood is, of course, the area's summer headliner. For the second season the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform from July 8 through Aug. 14.

Two other new major attractions in the Berkshire hills are both located in Williamstown. One is the summer theater which opens Tuesday. The other, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum.

The multimillion dollar museum was opened last month. It is opened to the public at no charge.

The Berkshires have an abundance of natural and historic spots: Mission House in Stockbridge, built in 1739 as an Indian mission; Monument Mountain, the great stone-faced mountain poetized by William Cullen Bryant; Natural Bridge, a geological wonder that includes marbled arches and water carved caverns.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 180,559

JUL 6 1955

Berkshire Festival Opening Tonight

047

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. at 8:30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge of $2 and $3 and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season 8,750 attended the six concerts, an average of 1,358 per concert, or well over the 1,200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007.00. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7,850.00.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 3 1955

give him 9000 degrees.

Munch to Greet Students And Guests at Lenox Today

Lenox, July 2—The Berkshire Music Centerm the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 13th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood here tomorrow. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center, who recently returned from vacation at his home in Paris, will address students and guests at opening exercises, at 3.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Cox To Preside

William Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society whose contributions help to support the school, will preside, and the faculty of the school will be introduced by Richard Burgin, acting assistant director, and dean Ralph Berkowitz.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, H[illegible] head of its choral d[illegible] lead the students [illegible] composed for the [illegible] opening by Randall Thompson. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises.

The first of some 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, which the public may attend through membership in the Friends' society, will be given Thursday evening, July 7, in the Music Shed at 8.30 when, for the first time, the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Dept. I will play together. The program will consist of Copland's "Outdoor Overture"; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun"; Prolofieff's "Peter and the Wolf" led by student conductors, with student soloists and narrator; and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday morning, July 10, at 10.

[illegible] shire Festival [illegible] Start July 6

[illegible]

---

[147]

COLUMBIA, S. C.
STATE
Circ. D. 74,543 - S. 80,990

JUN 19 1955

Berkshire Festival to Feature Boston Symphony Under Munch

Beginning early in July and continuing through mid-August, thousands of music lovers from throughout the world will pour into the beautiful Berkshire hills of Western Massachusetts for the world famous Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

World-famous conductors and artists will participate in the six-weeks long music festival including Charles Munch, Piere Monteux, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Situated on a large estate near the little town of Lenox, the festival grounds will resound weekly to the music of the masters. Concerts of the Boston Symphony are held in the acoustically perfect shed, which has a capacity of 6,000.

In previous summers up to 4,000 more concert-goers have been accommodated on the spacious lawns which surround the shed. Chamber music concerts are held in the Theatre-concert Hall which seats 1,500. Like the shed concerts, though, many bring their blankets or folding chairs and enjoy the music from the lawn around the auditorium.

Additional music is in store for those who become 'friends' of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to provide an opportunity for music study at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival Concerts. By supporting the school through a contribution, a "friend' is invited to the concerts presented by the students of the Center — their programs of opera, orchestra, chorus, student compositions and chamber music.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony has announced the concert schedule for the 1955 Berkshire Festival, which begins its season July 6.

This year's Festival will feature the music of Ludwig van Beethoven. In addition to all nine of Beethoven's symphonies, the Festival will present the Missa Solemnis, the Emperor Concerto, and the Violin Concerto. Until August 14 there will be twenty-five festival concerts on the Tanglewood grounds and an equal number of student programs.

Chamber groups to be heard in the chamber music series include the Kroll Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music Quartet. Also included in the chamber music series will be sonata recitals by Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Conductors who will appear in the chamber orchestra and Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts are Charles Munch, music director of Leonard Bernstin, and Thor Johnson. Soloists for the festival include Jennie Tourel, Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Gregor Piatigorsky, Rudolf Serkin, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, and Eugene Istomin.

The Festival performances, together with activities of the Berkshire Music Center, make concerts at Tanglewood an almost daily occurrence. A brochure with complete information is available by writing the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts.

Charles Munch Conducts Boston Symphony Orchestra at Bershire Festival

---

SEATTLE, WASH.
TIMES
Circ. D. 204,260 - S. 237,502

MAY 31 1955

Words and Music:

Studios Heed Voice Of Public in Dispute Over Film Censorship

By LOUIS R. GUZZO

POTPOURRI: Geoffrey Shurlock, who replaced Joseph Breen last year as Hollywood's chief censor, is caught in the middle of a dispute over increasing attention given sex and violence in films.

GEOFFREY SHURLOCK

When Shurlock replaced Breen on the latter's retirement, a relaxation in the movie industry's censorship code was noticeable almost overnight. Major studios had been insisting on some changes in the code for several years, but they found Breen to be no compromiser. When Shurlock took over, the changes came gradually and without publicity.

Opposition to the changes also has developed gradually, led by the Catholic Legion of Decency but by no means restricted to it. Some of the protests have come from Europe; the British particularly have become irritated over the growing number of scenes of brutality in Hollywood exports.

Shurlock says he has held the line in observing the industry's code, but the legion and other church groups have charged he is interpreting the rules too liberally. He told a reporter last week the code is being administered to the letter. Shurlock said the public, which has always accepted violence and killing in Western or costume movies, has been complaining about violence and brutality because they have been given a present-day setting.

Eric Johnston, movie czar and always a diplomat, is talking on both sides of the street. He has declared no concessions have been made to studios in censorship regulations and at the same time has warned them to start trimming objectionable scenes.

The studios apparently needed no warning. Having learned many years ago that it is folly to defy good taste and public resentment for a long period, they are studying all scripts for offensive language and scenes.

All of which seems to indicate the public remains its own best censor.

●

CORRECTION: The annual alumni all-request program by the University of Washington concert band is scheduled for tomorrow evening at Meany Hall, not tonight, as reported in this column yesterday.

Students and graduates will combine for the concert, which is complimentary.

●

The Rockefeller Foundation is in the news on two fronts with aid to symphony projects. It has granted the American Symphony Orchestra League $6,000 for a survey [illegible] legal [illegible] financial structures of orchestras in the United States and the Boston Symphony $25,000 a year for five years [illegible] support of its Berkshire Music Center.

Can't someone [illegible] a few of [illegible] Rockefeller greenbacks to the support of the Seattle Symphony?

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 1 1955

Tanglewood To Open Sunday; First Concert Is Wednesday

The gates at Tanglewood in Lenox will swing wide Sunday afternoon for opening exercises of the Berkshire Music center, to be followed Wednesday evening by the first concert of the 1955 Berkshire Music festival season.

Munch Back in U.S.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra which presents the major festival concerts, and director of the Music center, the summer school operated by the orchestra in connection with the festival, arrived in New York from Paris by air today for the opening exercises at which he

Other speakers are expected to be William Cox, chairman of the Society of Friends of the music school; Richard Burgin, acting as will speak. He will drive to Lenox late today.

sistant director of the Berkshire Music center; Ralph Berkowitz dean of the center; and George E Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Randal Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940, will be sung by students, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens.

The concert Wednesday evening at 8.30 will be the first of eight intimate programs in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall, preceding the 12 major concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra in the huge music shed which comprise the major festival season. The Kroll String quartet will perform a Beethoven program Wednesday evening, giving the C minor, F minor and C sharp minor string quartets.

Friday Evening

On Friday evening, in his first conducting appearance of the season, Mr. Munch will lead a chamber orchestra of Boston symphony members in two Bach works, the Sinfonia from the "Easter" oratorio, and the Suite No. 2 for flute and strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston orchestra as soloist; in Stravinsky's "Orpheus" and in Mozart's "Prague" symphony.

The small concert Saturday evening, July 9, in the theater-concert hall will be given by the chamber orchestra of Boston symphony players with Thor Johnson conducting. The program will consist of Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No 12; Haydn's Symphonic Concertante with oboe, bassoon, violin and 'cello, Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale, first violinist of the Boston orchestra, as soloist, and Haydn's B flat symphony, No 98.

Sunday Afternoon

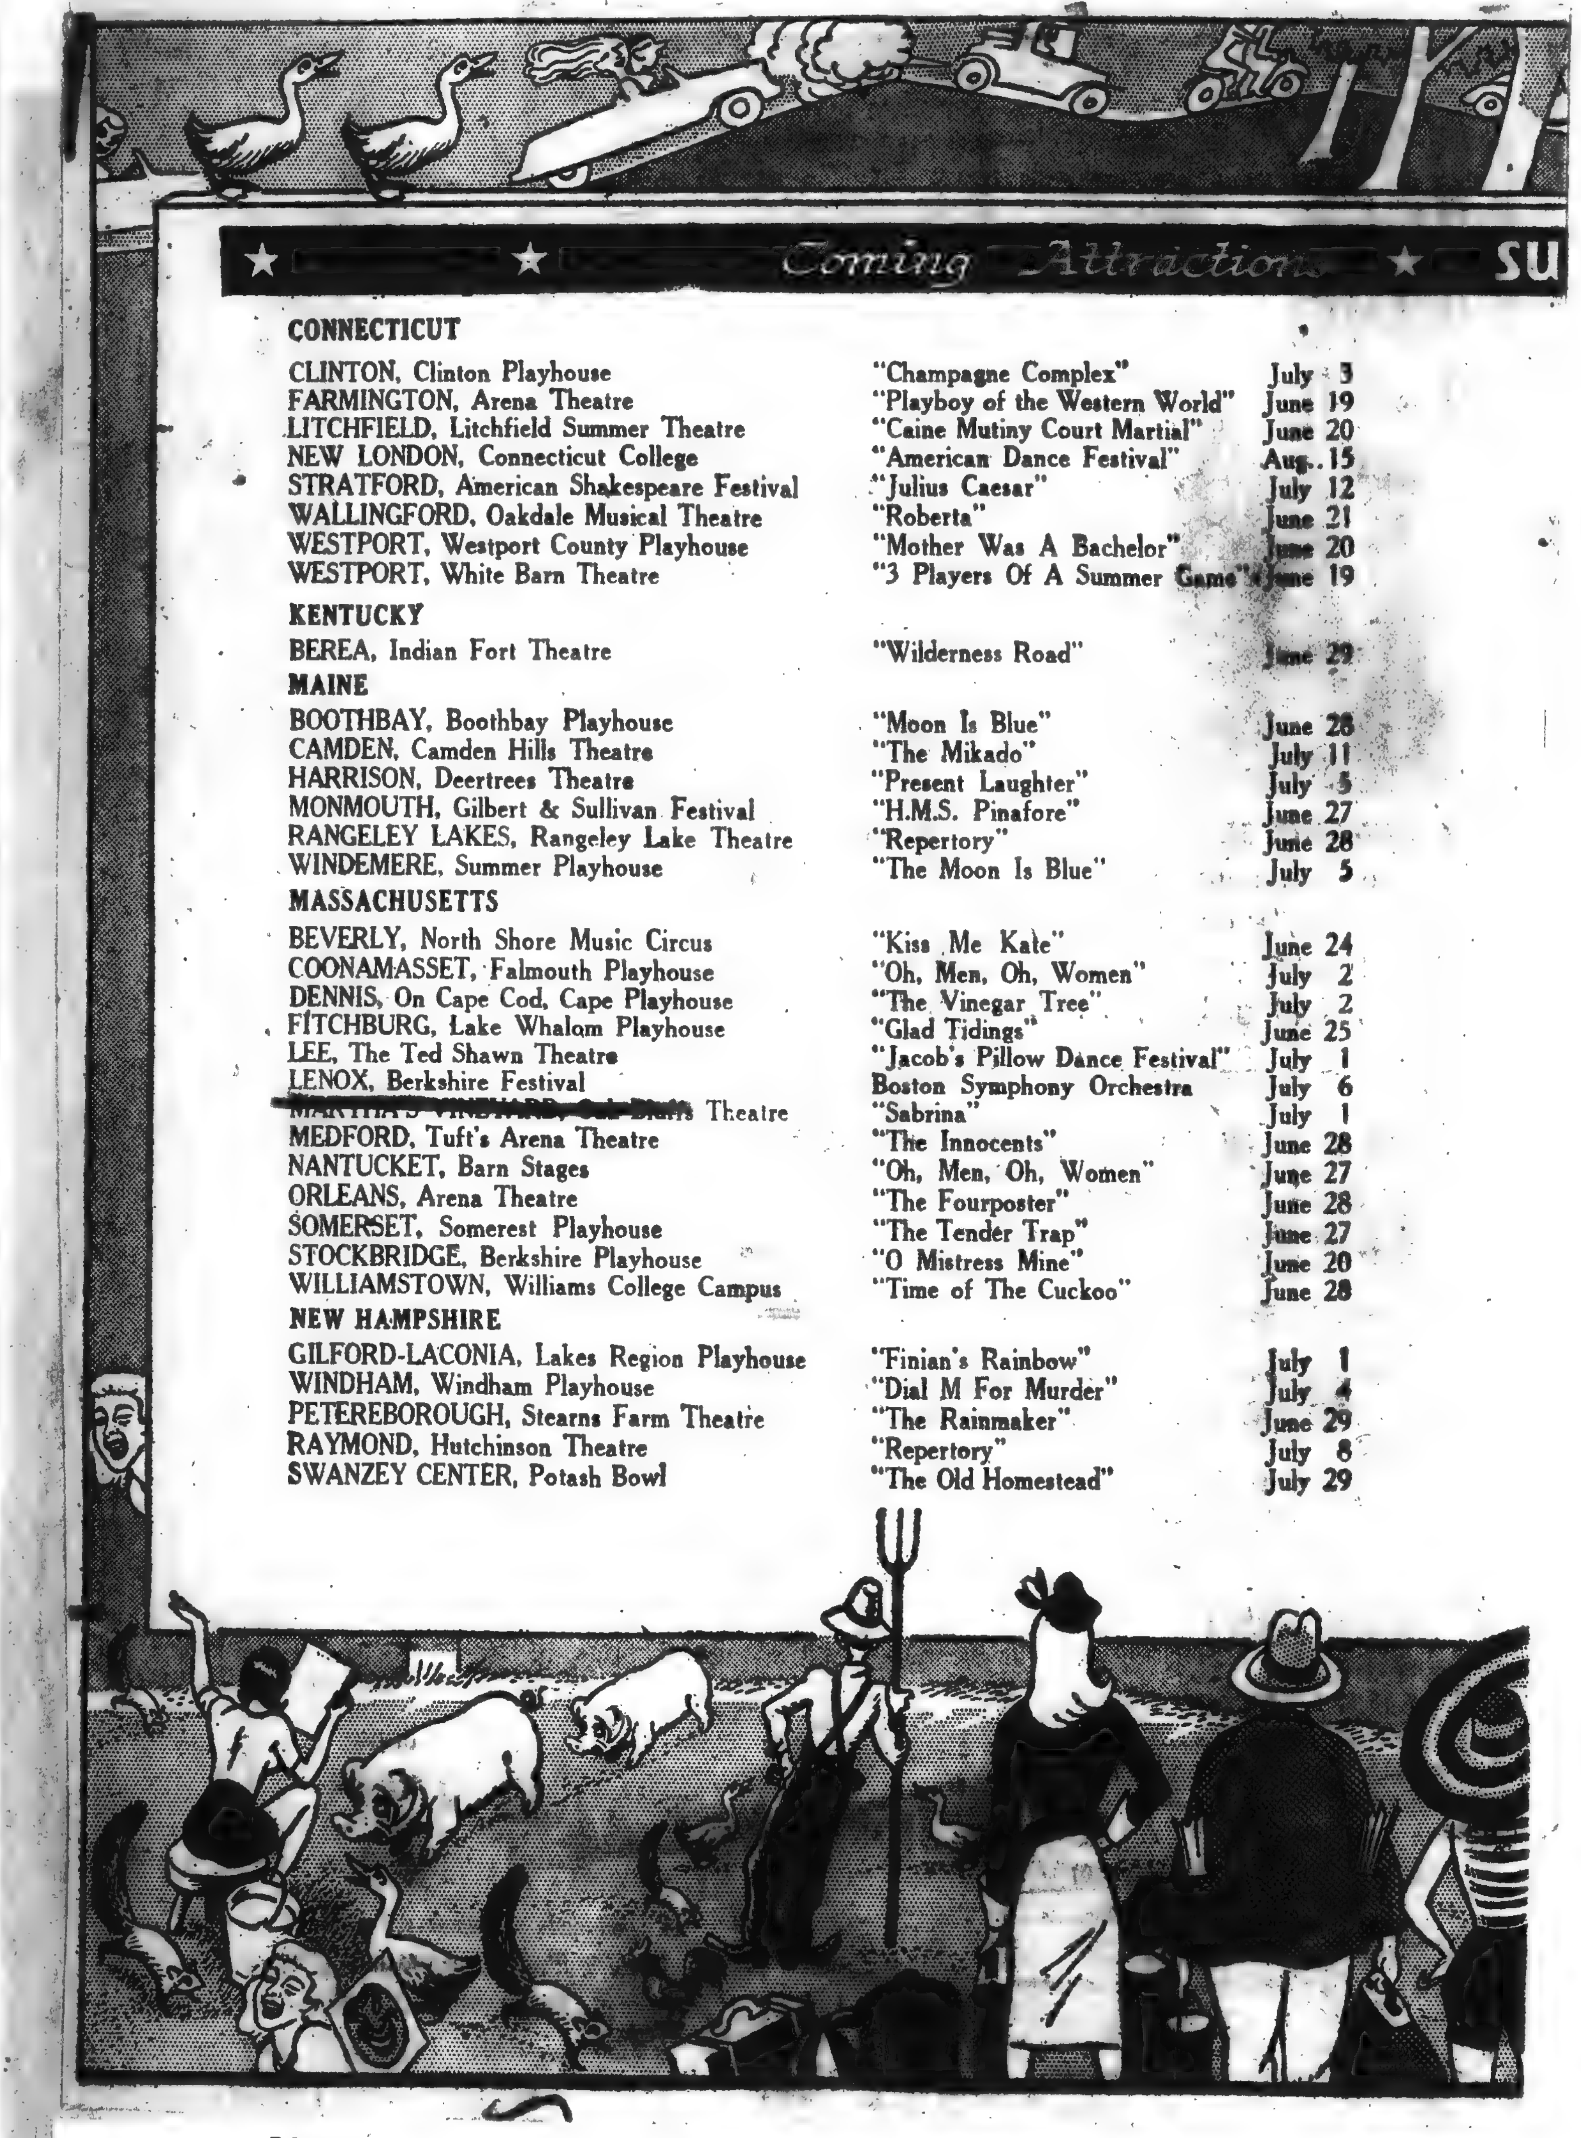
On Sunday afternoon, July 10 at 2.30, Mr. Munch will conduct a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor, by the Boston orchestra chamber group, the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe choral society, with Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists.

In the following week a similar pattern of four concerts, will be given, by a string ensemble on Wednesday evening and by the small orchestra of Boston symphony musicians on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, all in the theater-concert hall.

The 12 major festival concerts in the huge Tanglewood shed which seats 6,000, will open Friday evening, July 22. These concerts will be given on Friday and Saturay evenings at 8.30 and Sunday afternoons at 2.30 on four successive week-ends.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUN 19 1955



Coming Attractions

CONNECTICUT
CLINTON, Clinton Playhouse	"Champagne Complex"	July 3
FARMINGTON, Arena Theatre	"Playboy of the Western World"	June 19
LITCHFIELD, Litchfield Summer Theatre	"Caine Mutiny Court Martial"	June 20
NEW LONDON, Connecticut College	"American Dance Festival"	Aug. 15
STRATFORD, American Shakespeare Festival	"Julius Caesar"	July 12
WALLINGFORD, Oakdale Musical Theatre	"Roberta"	June 21
WESTPORT, Westport County Playhouse	"Mother Was A Bachelor"	June 20
WESTPORT, White Barn Theatre	"3 Players Of A Summer Game"	June 19
KENTUCKY
BEREA, Indian Fort Theatre	"Wilderness Road"	June 29
MAINE
BOOTHBAY, Boothbay Playhouse	"Moon Is Blue"	June 28
CAMDEN, Camden Hills Theatre	"The Mikado"	July 11
HARRISON, Deertrees Theatre	"Present Laughter"	July 5
MONMOUTH, Gilbert & Sullivan Festival	"H.M.S. Pinafore"	June 27
RANGELEY LAKES, Rangeley Lake Theatre	"Repertory"	June 28
WINDEMERE, Summer Playhouse	"The Moon Is Blue"	July 5
MASSACHUSETTS
BEVERLY, North Shore Music Circus	"Kiss Me Kate"	June 24
COONAMASSET, Falmouth Playhouse	"Oh, Men, Oh, Women"	July 2
DENNIS, On Cape Cod, Cape Playhouse	"The Vinegar Tree"	July 2
FITCHBURG, Lake Whalom Playhouse	"Glad Tidings"	June 25
LEE, The Ted Shawn Theatre	"Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival"	July 1
LENOX, Berkshire Festival	Boston Symphony Orchestra	July 6
~~MARTHA'S VINEYARD, Oak Bluffs~~ Theatre	"Sabrina"	July 1
MEDFORD, Tuft's Arena Theatre	"The Innocents"	June 28
NANTUCKET, Barn Stages	"Oh, Men, Oh, Women"	June 27
ORLEANS, Arena Theatre	"The Fourposter"	June 28
SOMERSET, Somerest Playhouse	"The Tender Trap"	June 27
STOCKBRIDGE, Berkshire Playhouse	"O Mistress Mine"	June 20
WILLIAMSTOWN, Williams College Campus	"Time of The Cuckoo"	June 28
NEW HAMPSHIRE
GILFORD-LACONIA, Lakes Region Playhouse	"Finian's Rainbow"	July 1
WINDHAM, Windham Playhouse	"Dial M For Murder"	July 4
PETEREBOROUGH, Stearns Farm Theatre	"The Rainmaker"	June 29
RAYMOND, Hutchinson Theatre	"Repertory"	July 8
SWANZEY CENTER, Potash Bowl	"The Old Homestead"	July 29

News
FAIRFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,850

JUL 7 1955

YMCA Will Tour United Nations

A three-hour sightseeing boat cruise around Manhattan Island and a guided tour of the United Nations headquarters will be included in the program for a Sunday outing on July 10 for YWCA members.

Families and friends of members may join the trip which will be made by train, leaving Bridgeport at 8:41 a.m. There will be free time to plan other activity if desired.

Reservations are now being taken at the YWCA information desk, Golden Hill St., Bridgeport.

This is one of several Sunday tours planned as part of the summer program for YWCA members. On Sunday, July 24, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts, will be the tour destination.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

JUL 8 1955

Chamber Music At Tanglewood Begins Tonight

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the theater - concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., a 8:30.

This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach - Mozart" concerts, will be given in the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Tonight's concert will offer two works by Bach, the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings, travinsky's music for the Ballet "Orpheus" and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the "Prague."

Saturday music by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith will be played, with Joseph de Pasquale as viola soloist in Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher."

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 the program will include Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 1171, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Telegram-News (e)
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 21,071

JUN 30 1955

Eleanor Roosevelt Says—

047

HYDE PARK, June 30—From many parts of our country people have journeyed year after year to Tanglewood in Berkshire County, Mass., to enjoy the music. And these visitors have been interested in the various teaching activities that go on there during the summer and which the late, great conductor, Mr. Koussevitsky, took such a keen interest in developing.

After his death some of the people in the county formed a committee to raise $15,000 in his memory to provide a yearly scholarship for one student. So far only $7,000 of that sum has been raised. And since the opening at Tanglewood takes place this year on July 4, and Mr. Koussevitsky's birthday comes later in the month, I have been wondering if the many who enjoy year after year the fruits of his labors would not like to make sure that between the date of the opening and the time of his birthday the rest of this fund was contributed. This achievement then could be announced at the memorial concert that is usually given on his birthday.

Mr. Koussevitsky would have liked to feel that one young person could come and have the opportunity to study there every summer. I think he understood very well that everyone was not gifted with genius, but in order to have genius discovered and rewarded there must be a vast number of people musically educated. Perhaps they would never be great artists but they would contribute to the musical appreciation of our audiences, and that is the only possible way that you can support great artists.

The countries that have had the greatest musicians, the greatest actors, the greatest writers are the countries that have appreciation of the arts among the people as a whole. It is a sign that a nation is growing up, is coming to maturity when it is really concerned to support the arts.

In the middle ages every artist had to have one individual patron who was willing to support him and let him do his work. That was a sign that civilization was still in a more or less primitive state. But the greatness of France, for instance, has been the fact that appreciation of art was present in the people as a whole. You have but to go into an art gallery in France to see that the public is there—even the people from the farm areas.

I remember seeing a woman with a market basket on her arm sitting before one of the masterpieces in the Louvre. It was her way of giving her soul a chance for a moment of peace and contemplation before the work of the day went on.

One of the things that troubles me about the future of the living drama in our country is the fact that it is so expensive that the vast majority of the people can see a play only on very rare occasions. Many people throughout our nation who live in rural areas have never seen live actors perform on the stage.

For a really healthy development of all the arts you need an educated audience as well as performers.

Shopping News
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Bi-Weekly
Circ. 98,811 Free

JUL 5 1955

Beethovan Night At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony orchestra, with Charles Munch conducting, is presenting a program of three of Beethovan's Symphonies at Tanglewood on July 24. The program will begin at 2.30 p. m. in the Music Shed with Beethovan's Symphony No. 1 in C major. This will be followed by the Symphony No. 4 in B flat and Symphony No. 6 the Pastorale Symphony.

The Y.W.C.A. is sponsoring a trip to Tanglewood for this event and a bus will leave the Y.W.C.A. at 26 Howard street, at 11.00 a. m. on July 24 and will return at the conclusion of this concert.

Sandwiches and soft drinks may be purchased at the refreshment stand but it is suggested that all persons attending the Festival bring their own lunch.

The cost of the trip is $5.00 which covers transportation and tickets. Reservations and money for the trip must be in the Y.W.C.A. no later than July 11. Please call RE 2-3121 and make your reservation.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 8 1955

Munch Conducts At Tanglewood

The first of six Chamber Orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30. This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart" concerts, will be given in the first two weekends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. In 1954 the six Chamber Orchestra concerts attracted a total audience of 16,650, an average attendance of 2,275 at each concert, or almost twice the seating capacity of 1,152. Present indications are that last season's all-time record attendance mark will be shattered this year.

At tonight's concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach—the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings—along with Stravinsky's music for the Ballet "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony. Soloist in the Bach Suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

[illegible] 1955

Second Week Of Concerts Scheduled For Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood. Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beau Arts Trio (Daniel Gullet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo", and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist, and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello (July 16); Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi: Gloria (July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhoud: Serenade (July 17); and Honneger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

Lakeville Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,771

JUL 7 1955

Programs Listed For Tanglewood Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a years leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for cello with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tangewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger.

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello (July 16); Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi: Gloria (July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honegger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Sat. July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun. July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independen
Circ. 11,205

JUL 8 1955

Italian music program slated for July 16 at Tanglewood Festival

A program of Italian music will be offered Saturday evening, July 16, during the second "Bach Mozart" concert series at the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Italian music program consists of Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in D, and Concerto Grosso in B minor; Boccherini, Concerto for cello; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with chorus.

Hugh Ross will conduct the Vivaldi work, which will feature Samuel Mayes as soloist. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

MUSIC SHED CONCERTS

The Tanglewood festival of the Orchestra will consist of six week-ends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday Afternoons starting tonight and running through August 14.

Each week-end will be preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening. These recitals will be devoted to the music of Beethoven and the concerts in the Music Shed by the full orchestra will emcompass the principal orchestral and choral works of Beethoven.

Tomorrow evening, Joseph De Pasquale, violist of the Boston Symphony, will be viola soloist in Haydn's Symphony in B flat, No. 98.

For ticket information address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 9 1955

Soloist

JENNIE TOUREL

Jennie Tourel, noted soprano, returns to Tanglewood as soloist on the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein will conduct with the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra Friday evening in the theater-concert hall. Miss Tourel will sing three arias.

Beacon
DORCHESTER, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 9,287

JUL 8 1955

Unique Music Festival to Highlight Berkshire Mountains Summer Season

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., June 30 — A music festival unique in America will be one of the highlights of the summer season in the Berkshire Mountains of Massachusetts.

It is the second annual Festival of Early Music, to be presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Town Hall at Stockbridge, Massachusetts, beginning August 13. A series of four Saturday evening concerts, extending through September 3, and a Sunday evening concert on September 4 are scheduled, at which French, English, Spanish, Italian, and German music of Middle Ages Renaissance, and Early Baroque periods will be presented.

Again this year, as at the first festival presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Berkshires last August, numerous works of early music never before performed in this country — indeed, not performed anywhere for centuries — will be heard.

Last year's festival, first of its kind in this country, was held at the Town Hall at Lenox, Massachusetts, shortly after conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Tanglewood season. The Stockbridge Town Hall has been chosen as the site of the 1955 festival because of superior acoustics and more ample parking facilities which it offers.

The New York Pro Musica Antiqua, a non-profit organization, was established in 1953 to make possible, for the first time in the United States, the presentation by professional musicians of the musical masterpieces of Medieval, Renaissance, and Early Baroque periods. The music of these periods — extending roughly from 1200 to 1700 — is now practically unknown to music lovers, although scholars acknowledge it to be among the great achievements of artistic man. Thus it is that while many people today are familiar with the great names in, say, Renaissance art — Titian, Michaelangelo or da Vinci — few have heard of (let alone "heard") a work by their great musical contemporaries — Orlando de Lassus, William Byrd, Josquin des Pres, or Giovanni Palestrina, for example.

The Stockbridge festival will be presented by six singers and four instrumentalists (the latter, incidentally, using authentic reproductions of musical instruments employed in performance of music in Medieval, Renaissance, and Early Baroque times, including recorders, harpsichord, viols, etc.) The musicians, along with husbands or wives, have moved for the summer to a twenty-room country house near Lenox to prepare for the forthcoming festival concerts and for the concerts they will give in New York City and elsewhere next winter.

During the past winter season the group presented a series of seven public concerts in New York City before capacity audiences. In addition, the group sang at the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C., at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, and at The Cloisters of The Metropolitan Museum in New York. Its most recent concert was a program of Elizabethan music at last month's Roof-Tree Raising Ceremony held at the site of the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy under contruction at Stratford, Connecticut.

Berkshire Festival Enters Second Week

Newtown Bee 7/8/55

Beethoven Trios, Chamber Orchestra Scheduled

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio, with Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, on Wednesday, July 13. In addition there will be three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony next Friday and Saturday evenings, July 15 and 16, and Sunday afternoon, July 17.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of the young American composer-conducter-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I, orchestra and conducting, of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program in which Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be soloist. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo", and Mr Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Leonard Bernstein

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first 'cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's "Gloria," which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr Ross's students.

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher", with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; nad Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sunday, July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Rad-

---

Knickerbocker News, Albany N.Y.

Beaux Arts Trio to Play Beethoven at Tanglewood

A program by the Beaux Arts Trio and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony will be presented in the second week of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

The Beaux Arts Trio, composed of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will offer a program of Beethoven trios at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday,

. The first of the three concerts by the chamber orchestra at 8:30 p. m. Friday will mark the return to the Tanglewood podium of American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein after a year's leave of absence.

JENNIE TOUREL
Festival Soloist

Mr. Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two of them from "Idomeneo." Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct concerts next Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

The chamber orchestra will perform 18th-Century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini next Saturday. Highlights of the program will be the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist, and Vivaldi's "Gloria," which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

The July 17 concert, all French orchestral music, will consist of selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger.

22—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Monday, July 11, 1955

Fritz Kreisler, Recovering, Gets BSO Bouquet

Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra called on Fritz Kreisler at Pittsfield General Hospital over the weekend and presented him with a floral bouquet on behalf of the orchestra personnel. Harry Dickson and George Zazofsky, first violinists, reported that Mr. Kreisler was in fine spirits and apparently making a good recovery from pneumonia. He was taken to the hospital a week ago from Heaton Hall, Stockbridge, where he and Mrs. Kreisler have been spending the summer.

Mr. Kreisler, dean of American concert violinists, is 80 years old.

Attendance Up First Weekend At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Boston Symphony Orchestra officials reported this morning that the attendance for the first series of concerts in the Theater Concert Hall is ahead of the same period last year. Walter Alford, press representative for the BSO, said 9,787 turned out for the concerts Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, compared to 9,350 last year. Yesterday afternoon the concert drew 3,585 and Saturday night 2,802 attended.

In Brief . . .

Our thanks to the weatherman for breaking the back of the heat wave without employing the meteorological double whammy that was predicted for this area Saturday. There are times when the unpredictability of the Berkshire elements is a blessing . . . The fact that the heat prevented neither a first-rate performance nor a better-than-ever attendance at Tanglewood's first weekend was gratifying, though not unexpected . . . Governor Herter's request that the Legislature provide for replacement of all park land taken for highway developments enunciates a principle that cities and towns in this area should follow in the scramble for school and parking lot sites. The idea of taking park land for non-park purposes "because it doesn't cost anything" is one of the most short-sighted of fallacies . . . The fact that a turnout of more than 12,000 swimmers at Pittsfield's public beaches yesterday produced only one water accident, and that a very minor one, is another fine commentary on the alertness and competence of the Park Department staff . . .

Science develops an electronic golf ball which can be found even in the deepest rough by a signal it transmits to a small receiver carried by the golfer. Just what the signal sounds like is unspecified; a nasty snicker, maybe.—Springfield Republican.

As long as wives keep borrowing their husband's razors, the difference between married men and bachelors will be a close shave.—Wall Street Journal.

B.E. Eagle 7/11/55

NY Journal American 7/11/55

Berkshire Festival:

Bach Mass Thrilling

Munch's Humility Stands Out During Tanglewood Offering

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., JULY 11.—One of the greatest pieces of music, Bach's B Minor Mass, received reverent treatment from Charles Munch, 35 members of the Boston Symphony, and 85 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society yesterday afternoon, one of the most humid days in Berkshire Festival history.

A crowd of 3,585 people attended 1,200 inside the theatre-concert hall and the remainder on the lawn and benches outside. They grew ecstatic about the performance.

High in Humility

As the work unfolded, the performance worked into its eloquence, attaining indescribable beauty in the three choruses at the heart of the "Credo." Here in the "Et Incarnatus Est," the "Crucifixui and "Et Resurrexit" everybody rose to Bach's singular inspiration: the devout humility of the first two sections, then the wonderful spirit of jubilation of the last.

The contrasts of Munch's pacing the slower parts deliberatively and the allegros rapidly might be open to question, had there not emerged a consistent pattern of interpretation both understandable and convincing.

Contributing to the general atmosphere was the fact that orchestra and chorus were small-sized, but far beyond this, Munch's own humility was the dominant factor.

A group of good voices made the solos palatable, if not especially distinguished. They were sung by Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The young singers of the chorus sang in exultation when called upon by their dynamic conductor. The soprano quality was notably fine. The instrumental solos were excellently played.

Thor Johnson made his official Tanglewood debut conducting the Saturday night concert, attended by 2,800 people. In a program opening with Handel's Concerto Grosso, opus 6, No. 12, Featuring Haydn's "Sinfonie Concertante" for violin, 'cello, oboe and bassoon and his Symphony No. 98, and including as a contrast Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," he gave a nicely-fashioned, well-disciplined performance. He senses the class style without quite conveying its essence, winning respect in doing so.

Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the orchestra, gave an excellent account of the solo part of the Hindemith. It was a tribute to his musicianship and grasp of material.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 29 1955

The Berkshires are determined to compete with Newport one way or another. Since dowager-ruled mansions are now out of style, the "last resorts" seem to be taking to jazz festivals. Newport made headlines with one last year and is going to repeat it. Now Lenox is having its jazz festival, starting off the season ahead of the big Berkshire Festival of classical music with some concerts this weekend. Coleman Hawkins is the start.

Soloist

Sp News 7/9/55

JENNIE TOUREL

Jennie Tourel, noted soprano, returns to Tanglewood as soloist on the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein will conduct with the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra Friday evening in the theater-concert hall. Miss Tourel will sing three arias.

[151]

8—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Monday, July 11, 1955

Music

Munch Conducts Bach B Minor; Thor Johnson Receives Ovation

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Thor Johnson

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the Bach B minor Mass at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with supreme calm and confidence. This was communicated to the members of the Harvard glee club and the Radcliffe choral society which had come en masse to repeat a performance given in the Symphony Hall this past winter with the result that, in spite of the excessive heat, a memorable reading was achieved.

The choruses which had been prepared with superior knowledge and skill by G. Wallace Woodworth, conducter of the choruses in the two institutions, responded with vibrant alacrity to the ease and poise of Mr. Munch and the variety of colors were as appropriate as they were effective.

* * *

THE OPENING chorus was secure and glowing at the initial entrance. This security was communicated, too, to the soloists. Adele Addison, returning to repeat the role she sang in the 1950 performance of the Mass, proved to be a tremendously matured soprano. With Munch's sangfroid to support opulent voice and with Florence Kopleff as second soprano, she gave a beautiful performance of the "Christe eleison" and later, with tenor John McCollum, an exquisite rendition of the "Domine Deus," Munch permitted the solo voices to make themselves heard without forcing, and this latter duet, with the help of flute soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, was a high moment of the afternoon.

* * * *

IN SPITE of his composure, however, Munch was erratic in his tempi, yet he was still able to maintain mood and control. The "Qui tollis" was conspicuously serene while, on the other end of the gamut, the "Cum sancto spiritu" and the "et Resurrexit" in the Credo were thrilling and exciting once Munch came back to a tempo the agile voices could negotiate. The bass solo "Et in spiritum sanctum" of Donald Gramm was another telling moment.

Munch played the Mass as though he were reading an incontrovertible document. There was firmness always but an absence of ostentation. In fact, he has never conducted with less effort or with more obvious composure. There was no attempt to dramatize. He was content to allow the music in all its serenity to speak for itself. This Bach needs nothing more.

* * *

ON THE PREVIOUS evening, Saturday, a program sagaciously chosen was conducted by a one-time Berkshire Music Center student who came back as an arrived conductor last season and now again for a second year: Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. He played a Handel concerto grosso for strings alone, a Haydn Sinfonie Concertante in which the soloists were Richard Burgin, violin, Samuel Mayes, cello, Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. He closed his program with more Haydn, the B flat symphony, No. 98, after having lead the concerto "Der Schwanendreher" of Hindemith in which the viola soloist was Joseph de Pasquale.

Johnson has not only gained baton experience but has grown in musical stature. His Handel concerto has glowing sonority and musical architecture, and the closing Haydn symphony was a thoroughly understood composition. There is a long distance from the aspirant conductors who swing batons and keep a fairly cohesive ensemble, as Johnson very likely can remember from his Tanglewood days, to having a preconceived opinion about a piece of music and trying to express it by means of the orchestra before you.

* * *

IT WAS NO EASY task he set himself by choosing the classics, most of which, in this case, were unfamiliar to Tanglewood programs. Nothing can reveal a conductor's weaknesses or strength more than these choices which demand character and style. That Johnson was able to convey just this was the mark of his achievement. The audience was quick to recognize it, but he was humbly reluctant in the presence of his old mentors to accept the homage his cordial audience was eager to bestow.

In the Hindemith concerto, de Pasquale gave a remarkable performance from the point of view of overcoming massive technical difficulties. He played with wonderfully gratifying intonation and with a tone of deep richness and vigor. But, on first hearing, the concerto is unsympathetic. The title, evidently difficult to translate properly, concerns the embellishments and improvisations a minstrel or hurdy-gurdy player makes on some serious and gay songs and dances he has brought back from foreign lands. Some pleasant tunes, apparently of folk-lore origin, appear in the interstices of labored cadenzas and midnight-oil structures, which land blow after blow on our poor heads until we are on the point of taking the count on our feet. Such viola playing and orchestral cooperation were worthy of the highest praise. Too bad we could not add them to our memories in more congenial settings.

* * *

THERE WAS plenty of light fun in the symphonie concertante of Haydn. The soloists play in all manner of ensemble during the concerto, to complement each other, and in opposition or in balance. Haydn conducted this himself at its first performance, in London, from the keyboard, where he sat, with his back to the audience, filling in with a little added bass texture.

The final movement of the symphony has several amusing breaks in which the concert master Richard Burgin, had several courtly and graceful interludes which interrupt an otherwise gay and swift final dance. The reason for it became apparent when it is realized that the symphony was written as one of several on commission of Salomon, an enterprising violinist popular at the time in the English capital.

Except for "the High Mass" which required an entire afternoon, the plan of the programs for this first week end seemed a highly successful one. The insertion of a major contemporary work within a list of otherwise early classics provided all the interest and variety these concerts, with its chamber-size orchestra, can supply. The spirit of audacity which the Stravinsky and Hindemith brought with them is a necessary and welcome ingredient from every viewpoint.

THE BEAUX ARTS TRIO, Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will present a chamber music concert Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The group will play Beethoven trios: C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); and B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke"). This will be the second of Wednesday concerts.

Music

Student Chamber Concerts Please Tanglewood Audience

SUNDAY MORNING concert-goers, in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall at 10, heard the first in a weekly series of programs by student ensembles chosen from the Berkshire Music Center's (instrumental) Department I. Yesterday's program, witnessed by perhaps 300 persons in and around the small hall near the Hawthorne house, presented fine performances of three great works of small-group music.

Three ensembles were heard in music of three periods. Haydn's string quartet, Opus 76, No. 2, was followed by Paul Hindemith's wind quintet, the "Kleine Kammermusik," Opus 24, No. 2. In the final piece, another string quartet was joined by a pianist for Schumann's E flat major quintet.

* * *

BOTH the ensembles and the works played at these Sunday morning concerts are selected from among many class assignments made each week by Richard Burgin and William Kroll, conducting the chamber music activities of Department I. And one member of the Boston Symphony serves as coach, a vital role with students playing each week in new combinations.

Yesterday's program can be scored as a triumph for the modernists, even in the matter of audience applause. Hindemith's quintet is a satirical masterpiece of the post-Versailles period, at once bright and tuneful and bitter. Its considerable difficulties were surmounted by the student players, under the coaching of BSO oboist Louis Speyer, and its changing moods were expertly expressed.

* * *

THE PLAYERS came from New Rochelle, N.Y. (flutist Suzanne Heckman), Montreal, Que. (oboist Pierre Rolland, from the New England Conservatory), Charlottesville, Va. (Elsa Ludewig of the Oberlin Conservatory, who handled the difficult clarinet part), Louisville, Ky. (Isabelle Clore, bassoonist), and Marion, N.C. (Robert Ricks, French horn). The ensemble's history is brief, and the histories of its members show only occasional professional experience. Their performance yesterday belied this background.

Unless this first program proves highly atypical, these Sunday morning concerts will be among the most rewarding events at Tanglewood this summer. They provide an opportunity of hearing great chamber works in a pleasant setting, with a variety of instrumentation helping to keep alive the interest of even a lukewarm lover of the intimate forms.

—A.D.H.

Public Events

Eagle 7/11/55

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Music Center forum, Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Fee BMC Friends.

8:45—Opening of "Sabrina Fair." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

NY Herald Tribune 7/12/55

AtTanglewood onGrant

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 11.—Eino Rautavaara, twenty-six-year-old Finnish composer, has arrived at Tanglewood to study with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher in the current summer session of the Berkshire Music Center. He was nominated by Jean Sibelius for a scholarship with full living expenses offered by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in co-operation with the Center; the Finlandia Foundation of New York is meeting his travel expenses. Arrangements are being made with the Juilliard School of Music for Mr. Rautavaara to continue his studies in America this fall.

New York Times 7/12/55

Recording industry.

Finnish Composer at Lenox

Eino Rautavaara, 26-year-old composer from Helsinki, Finland, has arrived to spend the summer as a composition student of Boris Blacher and Roger Sessions at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Mr. Rautavaara, one of thirty-three foreign students from eighteen nations at the center, was nominated by Jan Sibelius for a scholarship offered by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

Springfield Daily News, 7/9/55

Walter Alford—now there's a guy with a job! Playwrights' Company in the winter; Tanglewood in the summer. One thing, though: You have to have what it takes. Harold Abbey of the Pillow staff, who makes hard work look easy; Walter Terry, dance expert of the Herald-Tribune; Myra Kinch, who dances the week of the 20th in her opening program of the season. Yessir, on to be in the Berkshires, now that summer's here. Best in dance; best in music, and all in the cool, cool, cool of the evening.

* * *

Wednesday night the world famous Kroll string quartet playing Beethoven in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall to get the 16th season of the Berkshire Music Festival into high gear. By the way, I frequently get asked if it is possible to buy single concert tickets for Tanglewood, or is it necessary to subscribe to the series in advance? Answer: Remaining tickets are available only at single concert prices. Next year remember—cheaper by the dozen.

* * *

Same night, Wednesday, the popular Somers Playhouse got rolling again, and earlier in the week I had the pleasure of meeting a new member of the Herb and Priscilla Wells organization, who started out in one job and wound up in another. If you saw Mimi Cozzens, you'd know why. It was what you might call "non-type casting." Mimi, a blonde charmer with all kinds of stage, screen and TV experience, was going to be a typist in Somers and wound up — you know where; back of the footlights, where she belongs.

* * *

And that's the way it's going to be all summer long. Thor Johnson conducting at Tanglewood tonight, Handel, Haydn, Hindemith. Another big concert tomorow with Adele Addison one of the four soloists with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and Charles Munch conducting the Bach "Mass in B-Minor." Shed concerts begin Friday evening, the 22d, with an all-Beethoven program; Isaac Stern soloist.

* * *

The price of a ticket will buy an awful lot in Lee and Lenox these days and nights. Take your own picnic lunch; dress for comfort; sprawl on the grass. You get the most courteous treatment wherever you go. The boys and girls are there to see that you have a good time and if you don't, it isn't going to be their fault. And could anything be fairer than that?

HARVARD SUMMER NEWS TUESDAY, JULY 5, 1955

Music Concerts, Festivities Open at Tanglewood Estate

The type music heard during Summer School, Cambridge or away, may vary from the wailing call of the torrid clarinet to the classical direction of Charles Munch, Director of the Berkshire Musical Festival in Tanglewood.

The musical events of the Summer School months are always an enjoyable and pleasant interlude in the session. Many opportunities are available for those interested, or who would like to become so.

This coming Monday, July 11, Bruce Simonds and the Tanglewood Quartet will perform the first concert in Paine Hall, the music Building. Mr. Simonds, Director of the Norfolk Music School of Yale, and the Quartet will give piano quintets by Faure and Brahms. Like so many of the concerts, the program is free and open to the public, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Woodworth, Schmidt Direct

At the head of the music program is G. Wallace Woodworth, the James Edward Ditson Professor of Music, and the University Organist and Choirmaster. B esides his regular course in Choral conducting, Professor Woodworth is offering a study in the symphony from Hayden to Piston.

Working with Woodworth is Professor Harold Schmidt, of the University of California, who will direct the Summer School Chorus. The Chorus will give at least one concert in August, and all those wishing to join are asked to call the information center at KI 7-7600, Extension 2147 for details.

Air Conditioning, Natural and Otherwise

Air conditioning and music are combined on the fifth level of Lamont Library. Every Friday in the Forum, Mr. Victor Yellin of the Music Department will present recorded selections. They will be held at 4 p.m. from Friday, July 15th until August 12th.

The outstanding musical activity of the summer is the outdoor Berkshire Festival held annually at beautiful Tanglewood estate in western Massachusetts, a program with both symphonic and chamber music. A special trip to the Festival is being arranged by the Summer School for August 5th. For those without cars, transportation, lodging, and concert tickets may be secured in limited number from the Gray Hall office. Included on the program are Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II, and selections from Wagner. On this coming Sunday at Tanglewood the Harvard Glee Club, and the Radcliffe Choral Society will present Mass in B minor by Bach. The Boston Symphony is under the direction of Charles Munch, who also directs about 400 students at the Berkshire Music Center. These programs attract over 15,000 people each weekend, who flow over on to the superb lawns and terraces of the estate in Lenox.

The Esplanade concerts in the Hatch Memorial Shall on the Embankment Highway are free and more than a bargain, usually performing on week nights of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. At the Italian gardens of the Castle Hill Estate near Cran's beach at Ipswich, weekend concerts are the usual fare, at about $2.00.

Journal- American, N.Y.
Sat, July 9, 1955

Berkshire Festival:

Bach-Mozart By Boston

Delighted 1st Nighters Cold to Stravinsky Addition by Munch

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Charles Munch opened the Boston Symphony's part of the Berkshire Festival with a Bach-Mozart program in the Theatre Concert Hall last night.

The program was not, however, traditionally "pure" for he included a work by Stravinsky.

How much the ballet score "Orpheus" was an intruder could be a speculative matter, but the audience of 2,100 people showed much less enthusiasm for Stravinsky than for the "hallowed" composers of these concerts.

Yet Stravinsky's rhythms are to this century what those of Bach were to the 18th Century, and the craftsmanship of both composers is comparable, too. The difference lies in substance, wherein Bach offered a great deal and moved the audience more deeply.

Jubilant Quality

Beginning with the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio, Munch presented his characteristically virile Bach with a jubilant quality quite infectious. Roger Voisin's playing of the trumpet part contributed the right touch of brilliance, but the whole performance radiated gloriously.

The Suite No. 2 in B Minor found Munch in a mood to plumb its depths and the orchestra to respond accordingly. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute soloist of the orchestra, played her part brilliantly and wondrously.

So delighted was the crowd that the rollicking "Badinerie," which ends the work, had to be repeated. Many would have enjoyed a repitition of the whole performance, for this was the high point of the concert.

Mozart's "Prague" symphony completed the program. Munch achieved a remarkable balance between some strong fortes and some beautifully phrased pianissimos which should have satisfied the stylists, even though certain themes sounded a bit driven.

It was a performance to lift the spirit, and conveyed convincingly the inherent beauty of this particular symphony.

A Conductor Speaks Up—Revealingly

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, July 9.

VISITORS to Tanglewood for the annual Berkshire Festival this Summer will find reading Charles Munch's "I Am a Conductor" (Oxford) an excellent preparation for making the trip a richer experience. The musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has spoken out simply and directly, revealing not only much about the role of the conductor but also a great deal about an approach to music.

Knowing something about the man himself, his relation to the orchestra, and his concept of his work helps crystallize why the conductor has assumed the important place he holds in the world of music today. Simplicity is the essence of Munch, both man and artist, and dedication to the art the keynote to his interpretation of music: facts that subscribers to the concerts of the Boston Symphony should have learned by now. This little book simply puts them in tangible form that the reader may realize what leading an orchestra actually involves.

It Takes More Than Work and Study

The temptation to quote at length arises from how significantly Munch has stated the simple facts about conducting primarily and music indirectly.

"Conducting," he points out, "is not a profession at all but a sacred calling, sometimes a priesthood, and often even a disease . . . Fifteen years of work and study do not make a conductor of a man if he is not possessed by an inner exaltation, an all-consuming flame, and a magnetism that can bewitch both the musicians of his orchestra and the audience come to hear his music-making . . . The highest purpose of the conductor is to release the supernatural potential in every one of his musicians." That is no easy task in addition to mastering all the technical aspects of his work.

As for music, Munch notes that it is "an art that expresses the inexpressible. It rises far above what words can mean or the intelligence define. Its domain is the imponderable and impalpable land of the unconscious." Intangible as this statement may be, Munch firmly believes that people are "enriched, instructed, and fortified" by coming to concerts. A visit to Tanglewood confirms these thoughts as facts, especially with all nature to enhance the glory of the music.

Munch has imparted invaluable insight into the whole symphonic world through sharing his ideas about it in print.

BATON MASTER . . . Charles Munch, whom our critic Miles Kastendieck quotes at length in the column at the left, is Music Director of the Boston Symphony and conducts its concerts at the annual Berkshire Festival.

New York Journal-American, Sun., July 10, 1955

11 THE PROVIDENCE JEWISH HERALD, FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts Now Open

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13, 15, 16, and 17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P. M., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 P. M.

Springfield Union
Wed. July 13, 1955

BEAUX ARTS TRIO TO PLAY TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30.

The Beaux Arts Trio, Daniel Guilet, violin, Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

On Friday evening the second and final week-end of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist. Saturday evening Charles Munch will [illegible] a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and on Sunday afternoon the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Boston Herald
55 July 13, 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts' 2d Week

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Fat.

Tuesday, July 12, 1955

THE ECHO NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK

Berkshire Festival Begins Second Week Of Concerts At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood in Lenox, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo", and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York city. Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

During this week, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello(July, 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honneger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

During the coming week all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its 13th session at Tanglewood, will be in full operation. Friends of the Music School who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following student performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 10 and 17, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forum by Department III students (8:30 p. m., July 17, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8:30 p. m., Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, July 11 and 18); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 p. m. July 14, Music Shed.)

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends Society, will be mailed on request.

At Tanglewood This Week

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

---

ymphony, choral and chamber sic comes again to the Berkshire s in Western Massachusetts with opening this week at Tanglebd, Lenox, Mass. of the annual kshire Festival of the Boston nphony Orchestra, led by its mudirector, Charles Munch. For the eenth summer since the Boston nphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six ks, July 6 to August 14, on the te where a century ago Naniel Hawthorne was a guest and his "Tanglewood Tales."

s in 1954, an all-time record atdance year at the Berkshire tival, when it became necessary ccommodate its growing crowds music lovers with more concerts in the six-week framework of Festival, the 1955 Berkshire ival again consists of 24 con. Six Wednesday evenings are ted to the chamber music of hoven, with performances by d ensembles and soloists. Folng the first two weekends of mber orchestra concerts, the full piece Boston Symphony Orchesmoves to Tanglewood for the kshire Festival's final four week, July 22-August 14, when 12 end concerts are held in the 0-seat Music Shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

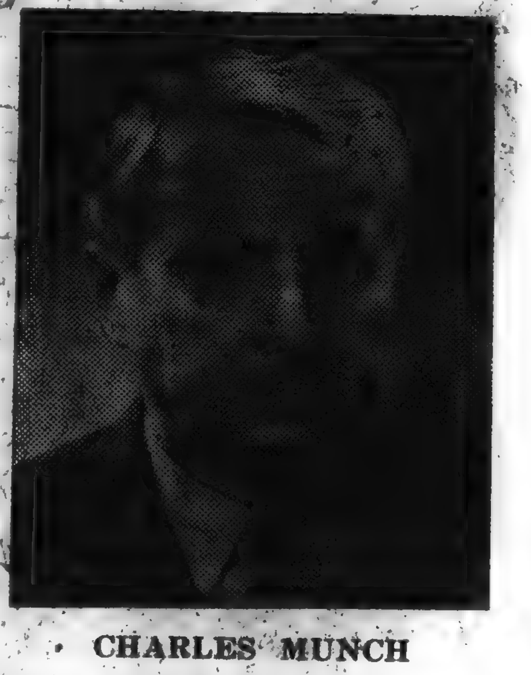
The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Betthoven's string quartets trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

Evening Sun
Hanover, Pa
Sat. July 9,

IL CORRIERE DEL BERKSHIRE — 1.o Luglio 1955

FLORENCE KOPLEFF

FLORENCE KOPLEFF, contralto, is one of the soloists in Bach's Mass in B minor, in which Charles Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday afternoon, July 10, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Adele Addison, John McCollum, Donald Gramm, and the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will assist.



CHARLES MUNCH

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 6-Aug.14. Mr. Munch is also Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth session.

JENNIE TOUREL, noted soprano, returns to Tanglewood as soloist on the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein conducts with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Fri. eve., July 15 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Many From Berkshire County Are Tanglewood Boxholders

Many Berkshire County residents are among boxholders for the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood.

They are Robert B. Anderson of Housatonic, Mrs. William F. Barrett of Great Barrington, James P. Baxter III of Williamstown, Frederick W. Beinecke of New York and Great Barrington, Alan J. Blau of Pittsfield, Miss Mabel Choate of New York and Stockbridge, Mrs. Bruce Crane and Mrs. Winthrop M. Crane Jr. of Dalton, Mrs. Winthrop S. Emmet of New York and Stockbridge and Mrs. Charles C. Griswold of New York and Stockbridge.

Also, Walter Hoving of New York and Stockbridge, Mrs. David B. Karrick of Washington, D.C., and Stockbridge, Mrs. Rodney Procter of Stockbridge, Mrs. George Otis Rockwood of Stockbridge, McA. Donald Ryan of New York and Stockbridge, Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., and Lenox, Mrs. John L. Senior of Lenox and New York, George E. Sokolsky of New York and Otis, Mrs. Edgar B. Stern of New Orleans and Lenox, Martin L. Straus II of New York and Great Barrington. Dr. Walter Von Horst of New York and Housatonic, Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington, and John S. Williams of Old Chatham, N.Y.

Others Announced

Others are Mrs. William T. Aldrich of Brookline and Marblehead, Mrs. A. Lorna Allen of Cazenovia, N.Y., Mrs. Robert A. Arms of Blandford, Baldwin Piano Co., Cincinnati, Samuel Black of Springfield, Miss Muriel M. Buttinger of Pennington, N.J., D. W. Chatterton of Craryville, N.Y., Mrs. F. D. Crowninshield of Boston and Marblehead, Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati, Mrs. Harold A. Hatch of New York and Sharon, Conn., Abraham W. Horowitz and Robert L. Horowitz of Brockton, Industrial Buildings Corp. of Chicopee, Mrs. Edwin C. Jameson of New York and Sharon, Conn., Mrs. Walter Janney of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Woods Hole.

Eldon V. Johnson of Springfield and West Granby, Conn., Mrs. Henry B. Joy of Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Watch Hill, R.I., Mrs. Alfred G. Kay of Palm Beach, Fla., and Chester, N.J., Mrs. Victor Livingstone of Providence, R.I., Mrs. Max Millman of Springfield, Dr. William J. Mulligan of Brookline, Frank W. McCabe of Rensselaer, N.Y., David R. Schoales of South Hadley Falls, Miss Edith Scoville and Mrs. Donald Warner of New York and Salisbury, Conn., Mrs. Benjamin E. Tate of Cincinnati, Ohio, Mrs. Beatrice Fox Auerbach of Hartford, Conn., and N. A. Bodgan of New York.

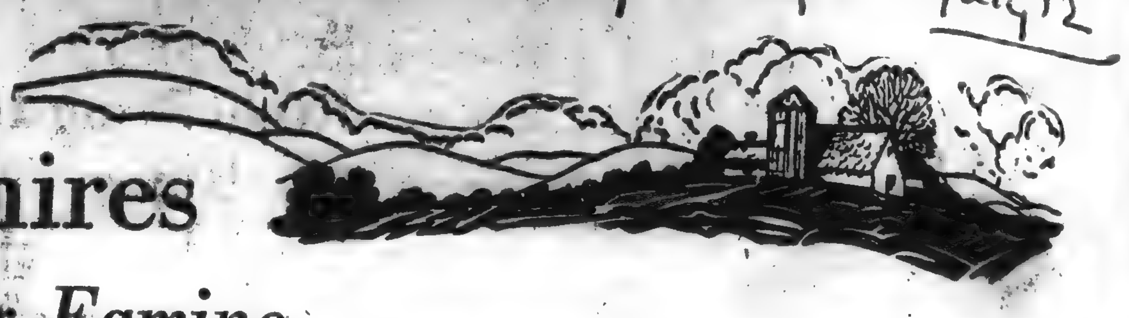
New Yorkers Listed

And, James Bolger of Montrose, N.Y., Mrs. Lillian H. Brown of Rego Park, N.Y., Miss Muriel M. Buttinger of Pennington, N.J., Arthur D. Butts of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Miss Miriam Carr of Brooklyn, N.Y., Dr. William F. Caveness of New York, Charles M. Chatfield of West Hartford, Conn., Douglas Campbell of Washington, D.C., E. I. Cichon of Montreal, Canada, Lewis G. Collins of Greenwich, N.Y., James H. Davidson of Scotia, N.Y., George N. Emory of Sharon, Conn., Mrs. E. M. Hartman of West Hartford, Mrs. Milton J. Heller of New York, Mrs. Edward C. Hinchliff and Mrs. Ira Wilson Hirchfield of New York, Dr. Edith Jacobson of New York and Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y., Mrs. P. A. Keleman of Norfolk, Conn., Charles T. Letson of Wellesley, Aaron Levine of Brooklyn, N.Y., William Levine of Worcester, G. Jarvin Lyons of Port Credit, Ontario, Mrs. Joseph M. May and Mrs. Abraham Meitlin of New York, C. H. Moore of Cos Cob, Conn., Mrs. J. Frank Morrissey of West Warwick, R.I.

Miss Emily Newman of New York, Robert Pizer of Washington, D.C., Paul Porzelt of New York, Mrs. Charles Potter of Providence, R.I., Dr. Richard L. Riley of Baltimore, Md., Hans Rose of Northport, L.I., Mrs. Estelle Rucker of Schroon Lake, N.Y., Joseph Ruffini of Westfield, N.J., Alfred H. Schwartz of New York, Dr. Nathaniel A. Seigel of Reading, Pa., Mrs. Herbert Seiner of Northport, N.Y., Herbert Semel of New York, Joseph W. Skehan of Stamford, Conn., Bert L. Smokler of Detroit, Mich., George T. Stewart of Lancaster, Pa., George B. Taylor of New Britain, Conn., Donald G. White Jr. of Monson and John W. Wibel of South Glastonbury, Conn.

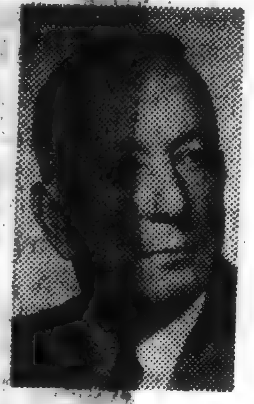
Berkshire Evening Eagle July 12

Our Berkshires



Feast or Famine

By William S. Annin



I AM continually impressed by a fact I have noticed since I knew enough to notice anything. That is, that while good and bad, excess and lack, average up in the long run, they tend to bunch over a short period of time. Neither good fortune nor misfortune comes singly. A poignant example was when some years ago three members of my family were seriously ill from widely different maladies inside of six months. And I notice in my work that subjects for editorial treatment are either so many it is hard to choose, or completely lacking.

* * *

THE CONDITION applies particularly in the field of what I will call exterior entertainment in Berkshire County. Not owning a television set, and not wanting to, I have to depend largely upon the movies for dramatic entertainment. For weeks there will be nothing at any near-by movie house that I could be dragged to except by a member of the local constabulary, and he might have to use handcuffs. The fare offered consists of "westerns" "revues," or such alleged humor as the outrages of Abbott and Costello or Martin and Lewis. Then, at the end of the seven lean weeks, suddenly all the local houses will come out simultaneously with movies I have been waiting for, but all of which I could not possibly see in the allotted time under the most favorable circumstances. And of course the circumstances are usually conspicuously unfavorable, with all my evenings and most afternoons arranged for.

* * *

The summer months are of course, the time when the glut is particularly superabundant. There is, to begin with, Tanglewood, to which I can ordinarily go two or three times a week with enjoyment. There is Jacob's Pillow, even if that particular kind of dancing does not interest me. There is the Stockbridge Playhouse; there is Malden Bridge; and now there is Williamstown. The movie market takes this opportunity to start boiling. The Berkshire Museum is starting a series. The Lee theater is putting on some of the best foreign movies two evenings a week. And to add insult to injury, the Pittsfield movie houses and drive-ins are vying in putting on pictures that I would like to see. For example, last week I would like to have seen "The Little Kidnappers" and "On the Waterfront" (even though I had seen the latter), "Hell and High Water"; "Love Me or Leave Me" (the only one I did see); "The Seven Year Itch"; "Fox Fire"; "Three Cases of Murder" and "The Living Desert"—which last I have also seen, but would like to see again. With the movie I did see, I managed to sandwich in the student orchestra performance at Tanglewood and "The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker" at Stockbridge, but it took some doing. The future looks no better. I see advance notices of several pictures I particularly want to see, including "The Cobweb."

* * *

I DON'T SUPPOSE, even if everyone agrees with me on the commonness of the sequence of feast and famine, that there is much that can be done about it. On the ordinary vicissitudes of life there certainly is not; even in the much more limited and particular field of movie production, there are insuperable obstacles. It occurred to me that some super-authority might be set up to ration good pictures—so that there would be at least one good one a week. But the impracticality of that was apparent at once, at least from my own point of view. My opinion is not shared by the majority. Apparently most movie-goers go to "Omaha" on Monday, "Dodge City" on Tuesday, "Abilene" on Wednesday, "Cow Town" on Thursday and are all set for another western on Friday. Likewise, for some reason which may some day be explained to me, they consider that Martin and Lewis are funny. This removes my attitude from the realm of popular demand, unless other movie-goers object that as things are sliced, they cannot see all the westerns that are produced.

* * *

JUST TO HEAD OFF the charge that I am setting myself up as a highbrow, I will list some of the types I like. I am as much a sucker for slapstick as a kid of 14, if only it is well done. I revel in good dancing like that of Fred Astaire or Gene Kelly; I blush to admit that while I enjoy comedies like either "Pygmalion" or "Born Yesterday," I also like gangster pictures. I even like a good western once in a while—if it is like "High Noon"—though I thought "Shane" was overrated, or at least over-touted. So I am not over-fussy and I am only asking that the raisins be distributed evenly. But I don't expect such a wish to be granted.

Berkshire Eagle Tues. July 12

Sibelius Picks Composer, 26, To Study at Tanglewood School

TANGLEWOOD—Eino Rautavaara, 26, of Helsinki, Finnish composer nominated by Jean Sibelius, has arrived at Tanglewood to spend the summer as a student of composition with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher at the Berkshire Music Center.

On of 31 students from 18 foreign lands including Canada who are at the music school's 13th session for six weeks of concentrated study, Mr. Rautavaara has come largely through the efforts of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony, who did much to pioneer the music of Sibelius in this country. Mrs. Koussevitzky is chairman of an international Sibelius Festival Committee, which will celebrate the Finnish master's 90th birthday (Dec. 8, 1955) in the season of 1955-56 by inviting conductors here and abroad to perform programs and whole cycles of Sibelius music.

Koussevitzky Scholarship

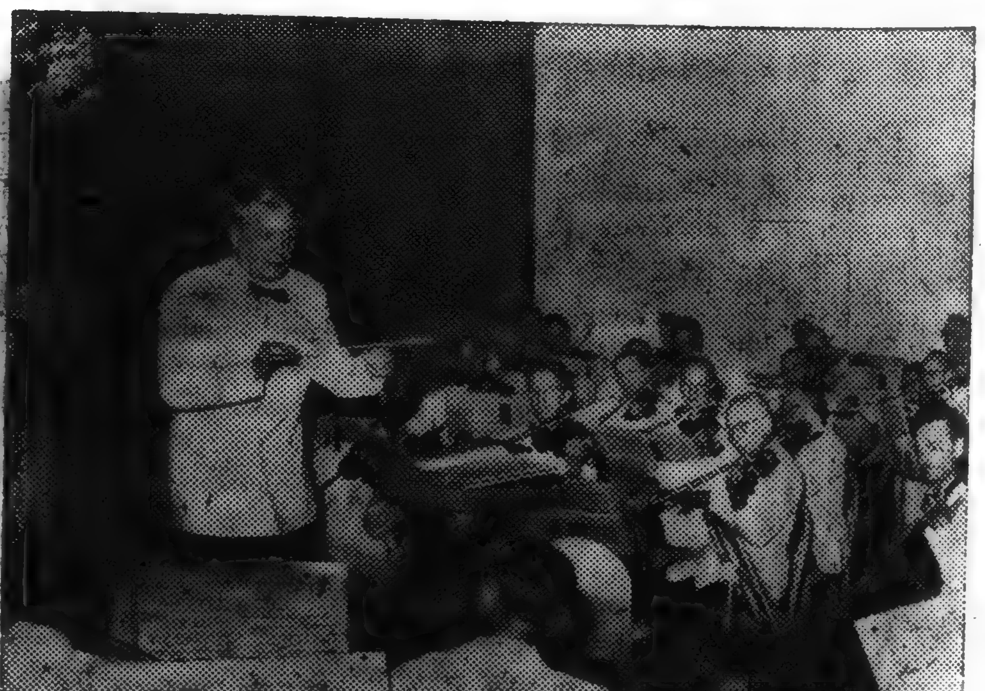
The Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in cooperation with the Berkshire Center, is offering a scholarship with full living expenses at Tanglewood to Mr. Hautavaara, whom Sibelius has personally nominated to receive the honor. The young composer's travel expenses to and from Finland are defrayed by the Finlandia Foundation of New York. Following his stay at Tanglewood, arrangements are being made with the Juilliard School of Music in New York City for Mr. Rautavaara to continue his studies in America.

Mr. Rautavaara was born Oct. 9, 1928, into a family of musicians. His father was a noted Finnish opera singer. As a pupil of Prof. Aarre Merikanto, he studied composition at the Sibelius Academy, after passing his theory examinations, and also piano. At the Helsinki University he studied musicology, aesthetics, literature and psychology, and was graduated master of arts in 1953. After his military service in 1954, and his entry into officers' school, he studied in Vienna for the past six months.

International Prize

In 1954 Mr. Rautavaara won a prize donated by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, himself a former student at the Berkshire Music Center (1940 and 1941), and guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival concert last Saturday. This was an international contest, and the prize-winning work was a composition for brass and percussion, a suite entitled "Requiem in Our Time." Other of his compositions which have been performed are "Adagio and Toccata for Orchestra," "Suite for Orchestra," "Divertimento for Strings," "Suite for Strings," a song cycle based on poems of Rilke, variations for piano.

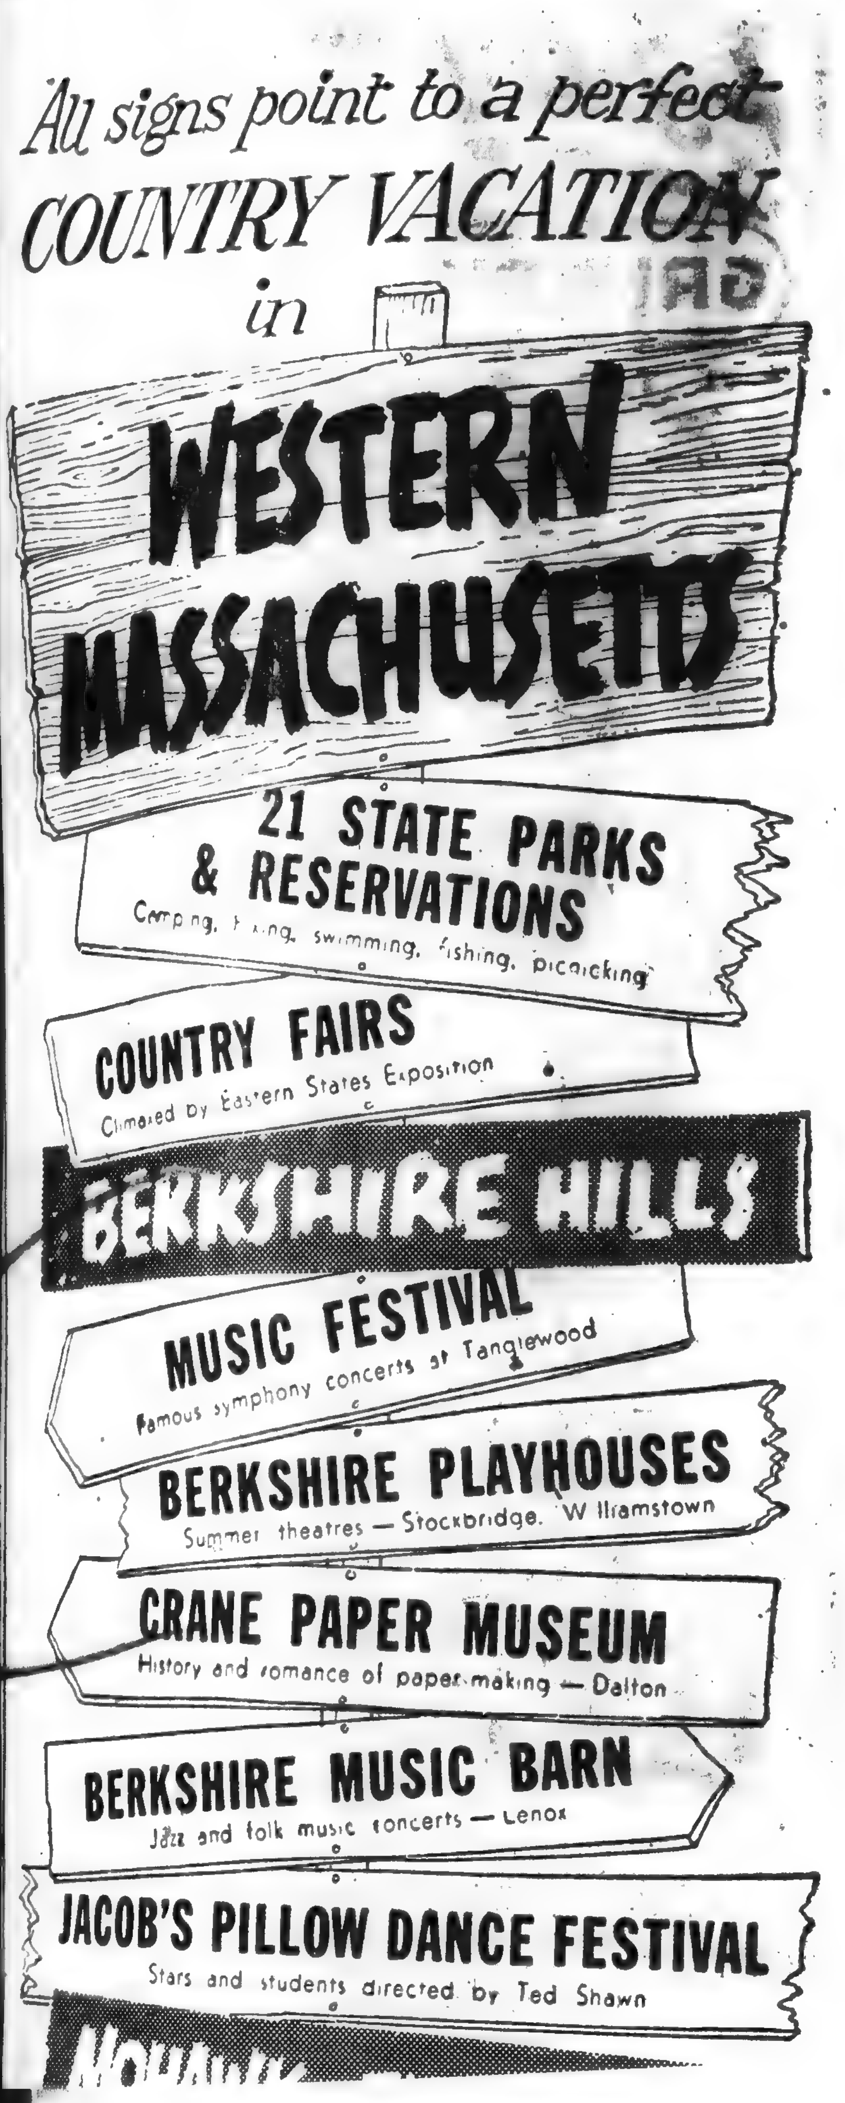
Il Corriere del Berkshire
15 Luglio, 1955



CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during tne six-week season, July 6-August 14.

Mr. Munch is also Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth session.

NY Times
Wed. July 13th, 1955



All signs point to a perfect
COUNTRY VACATION
in WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS
21 STATE PARKS & RESERVATIONS
Camping, hiking, swimming, fishing, picnicking
COUNTRY FAIRS
Climaxed by Eastern States Exposition
BERKSHIRE HILLS
MUSIC FESTIVAL
Famous symphony concerts at Tanglewood
BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSES
Summer theatres — Stockbridge, Williamstown
CRANE PAPER MUSEUM
History and romance of paper-making — Dalton
BERKSHIRE MUSIC BARN
Jazz and folk music concerts — Lenox
JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL
Stars and students directed by Ted Shawn

Il Corriere del Berkshire
15 luglio, 1955

STUDENT REGISTRATION AT TANGLEWOOD'S BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER AHEAD OF 1954 — 400 SUMMER MUSIC STUDENTS EXPECTED JULY 3-AUG. 14

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, Registrar, reports, with additional applications being processed daily, until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. Students from most of the 48 states, Canada and many foreign countries will arrive in the hills of Western Massachusetts for the opening of the 13th session of the school on Sunday, July 3, when they will be welcomed by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as Director of the Berkshire Music Center. While composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school is on leave of absence this summer, his post is being filled by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra. Ralph Berkowitz is Dean of the school; and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary.

Enrollment is ahead of last year, when 350 students had registered at this time. The 375 students to date have been chosen from 635 applications, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 174, including 102 who comprise members of the student symphony orchestra. This year, Miss Bossler reports, so far 18 students have declined scholarship tuitions, although eligible for them, twelve in the orchestra, two in composition, four in opera dramatics.

The 375 students to date include 88 with the three-year-old Dept. V, the Tanglewood Study Group, 40 of whom are registered for the full six weeks, 15 for four weeks, two for three weeks, 31 for two weeks. Department V offers advanced students of music, professional or amateur, an opportunity to spend their vacations in extensive chamber orchestra reading and practice also in early compostions for unusual ensemble. Ingolf Dahl returns to Tanglewood to head this increasingly popular department this summer.

Twenty-eight foreign students have registered in the music school, nine from Canada, three from Japan, two from Hawaii and France, one each from Chile, Puerto Rico, Israel, Greece, New Zealand, Mexico, Argentina, Iran, Brazil, Netherlands-Antilles Austria and Finland.

The Tanglewood Study Group includes four of the Canadians, one of the Hawaiians, and the student from Brazil.

Students at the Berkshire Music Center study orchestra playing and conduction under Leonard Bernstein; chamber music from first-chair members of the Boston Symphony; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from guest composers Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl.

Since enrollment in the Tanglewood Study Group may be for either the full six weeks, or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted. Members of this department have an opportunity to sing in the Festival Chorus made up of Berkshire Music Center students with the Boston Symphony in Berkshire Festival concerts, including such works this summer as Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis", Act II of "Fidelio", and the Ninth Symphony.

[156]

OUR ENGLISH SECTION

NEW ENGLAND MEMBER FOREIGN LANGUAGE NEWSPAPERS ASSOCIATION

OUR POLICY

"The purpose of the Association shall be to help preserve the ideals and traditions of our country, the United States of America, to revere its laws and inspire others to respect and obey them, and in all ways to aid in making this country greater and better"

SECOND WEEK OF BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS JULY 13-15-16-17

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeno", and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which ~~are the Boccherini Concerto~~ for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini: Concerto for Cello (July 16); Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi: Gloria (July 16); Faure: Pavane (July 17); Milhaud: Serenade (July 17); and Honneger: Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

The complete programs are:

Wed., July 13 — 8:30 P.M. — Theatre-Concert Hall — Chamber Music:

Beethoven: Trios — C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

The Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano).

Fri., July 15 — 8:30 P.M. — Theatre-Concert Hall — The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra:

Mozart: Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo"), "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo").
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, soprano
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Leonard Bernstein, Conductor

Sat., July 16 — 8:30 P.M. — Theatre-Concert Hall — The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra:

ITALIAN MUSIC

Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11
Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10
Boccherini: Concerto for Cello
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Vivaldi: Gloria, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students
Soloists: Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano
Hugh Ross, Conductor

Sun., July 17 — 2:30 P.M. — Theatre-Concert Hall — The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra

FRENCH MUSIC

Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"
Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"
Faure: Pavane
Milhaud: Serenade
Honneger: Symphony No. 4
Charles Munch, Conductor

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Sat., July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Basson, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher", with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun., July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The third week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin in three Beethoven violin sonatas (Wed., July 20 in the Theatre-Concert Hall). The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 22 when Charles Munch will give an all-Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern as soloist in the violin concerto. Pierre Monteux will conduct an orchestral program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss on Saturday evening, July 23, and Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon concert, July 24, will comprise Beethoven's first, fourth, and sixth symphonies.

During the coming week all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, now in its 13th session at Tanglewood, will be in full operation. Friends of the Music School who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following student performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 A.M., July 10 and 17, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forum by Department III students (8:30 P.M., July 17, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8:30 P.M., Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, July 11 and 18); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 P.M., July 14, Music Shed).

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' Society, will be mailed on request. For the convenience of Festival patrons, the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., will supply a list of hotel, motel, or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires and, through the co-operation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations.

SAMUEL MAYES

SAMUEL MAYES, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is soloist in the orchestra's Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday evening, July 16, in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall, when Charles Munch conducts. Mr. Mayes will perform Boccherini's Concerto for Cello at 8:30 P.M.

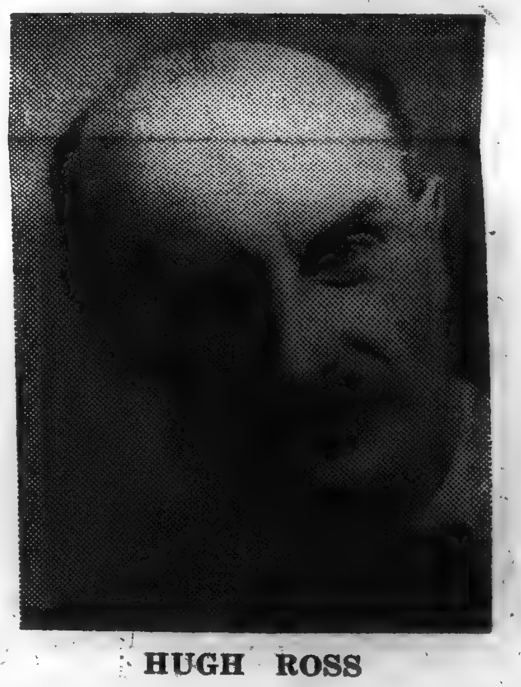
JENNIE TOUREL

JENNIE TOUREL, noted soprano, returns to Tanglewood as soloist on the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein conducts with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday evening, July 15, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, "Al Desio" (K.577); "Zeffiretti" and "Non Temer" from "Idomeneo".

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, eminent young American composer-conductor-pianist, heads the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Massachusetts is in its 13th session, July 4-August 14.

Mr. Bernstein will also conduct two Berkshire Festival concerts. An all-Mozart program on Friday, July 15, at 8:30 P.M. in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall will have Mr. Bernstein and Jennie Tourel as soloists. In the huge Music Shed on Friday, August 5 at 8:30 P.M., Mr. Bernstein will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with the Festival Chorus of students and soloists Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, David Lloyd and Mae Morgan.



HUGH ROSS

HUGH ROSS again in the summer of 1955 heads the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

With the assistance of Iva D. Hiatt and John Krueger, Mr. Ross guides music students in choral conducting, small choir singing, and trains them for the Festival Chorus which this summer participates in Berkshire Festival concerts: Samuel Barber's "The Prayers of Kierkegaard" (Friday, July 29); Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" (Friday, August 5); Beethoven's "Fidelio", Act II (Saturday, August 6); Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (Sunday, August 14).

Mr. Ross also conducts the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in Vivaldi's "Gloria" with chorus in the Berkshire Festival concert of Saturday evening, July 16.

Telefonate 6421 per Conprare il
FAMOSO CARBONE INDICATO PER IL BERKSHIRE
da
MYRA & HARO' D COOPER
29 FENN STREET

BERKSHIRE FURNITURE CO.
INC.
"Mobilia per Generazioni"
MOBILIA DI QUALITA'
A PREZZI RAGIONEVOLI
Cantone di North e Union Sts.
Telefono 2-5104 Pittsfield, Mass.

OUR ENGLISH SECTION

NEW ENGLAND MEMBER FOREIGN LANGUAGE NEWSPAPERS ASSOCIATION

OUR POLICY

"The purpose of the Association shall be to help preserve the ideals and traditions of our country, the United States of America, to revere its laws and inspire others to respect and obey them, and in all ways to aid in making this country greater and better"

The Boston Symphony Orchestra Opens Shed Series Friday, July 22nd

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next wek when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's Music Director.

Again this year twelve concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the twelve Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of 9,197.

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra).

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was Music Director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers", by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 23), for which the nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The complete programs are:

Wed., July 20 — 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall — Chamber Music:

Beethoven: Violin Sonatas — No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2; No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring"); No. 7 in C minor, No. 30, No. 2

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin

Fri., July 22 — 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed — Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Beethoven: Overture to "Coriolan"; Violin Concerto, Soloist: Isaac Stern; Symphony No. 7, in A major

Charles Munch, Conductor

Sat., July 23 — 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed — Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor
Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major
Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"
Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration"

Pierre Monteux, Conductor

Sun., July 24 — 2:30 p.m. — Music Shed — Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Beethoven: Symphony No. 1, in C major; Symphony No. 4, in B-flat; Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")

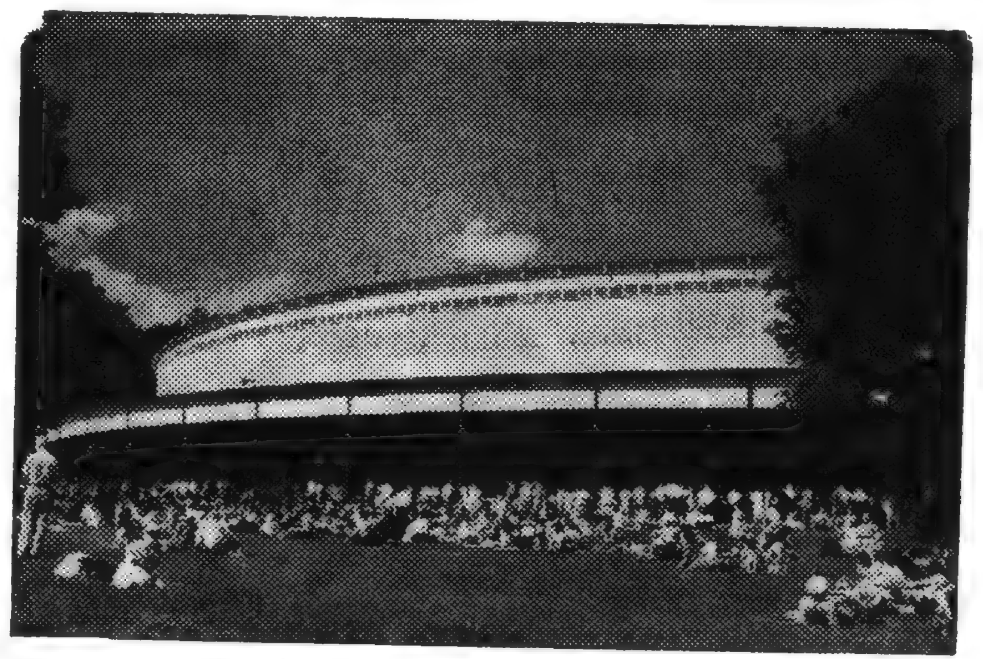
Charles Munch, Conductor

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall are: Sat., July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian Music. Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, Mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's summer music school. Sun., July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane: Milhaud: Seranade; Honegger; Symphony No. 4.

The fourth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a program of three Beethoven quartets by the New Music String Quartet (Wed., July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall). In the Music Shed, Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening (July 29) in a program of Handel, Schumann, Samuel Barber and Brahms, with Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloist; and Saturday evening (July 30) Mr. Munch directs an all-Bethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, pianist, as soloist. The Sunday afternoon (July 31) Music Shed concert is an all-Brahms program by the Boston Symphony with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor, and Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists.

During the coming week a number of concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in the midst of its 13th session at Tanglewood. Friends of the music school who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a.m., July 17, and 24, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forums by Department III students (8:30 p.m., July 17 and 24, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8:30 p.m., July 18 and 25, Sedgewick Hall, Lenox); a choral concert by the small choir of Department II students (8:30 p.m., July 19, Theatre-Concert Hall); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 p.m., July 21, Music Shed.)

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friend's Society, will be mailed on request. For the convenience of Festival patrons, the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., will supply a list of hotel, motel, or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires and, through the co-operation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations.



THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 16th season of 24 concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,775 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9.197 persons with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

ISAAC STERN

ISAAC STERN, a former student of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival, will donate his services to the music school's Revolving Scholarship Fund, in a program of violin sonatas of Beethoven, Alexander Zakin accompanying, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, on Wednesday eve., July 20.

Mr. Stern will also be soloist at two 1955 Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood: performing the Beethoven violin concerto on Fri eve., July 22, with Charles Munch conducting (8:30 p.m.); and with Gregor Piatigorsky, the Brahms Concerto for Violin and Cello, under Pierre Monteux's direction, on Sun. aft., July 31 (2:30 p.m.).

ROGER SESSIONS

ROGER SESSIONS, Professor of Music at Princeton University, and a noted modern American composer, shares with modern German composer Boris Blacher the post of guest teacher of composition in the summer of 1955 at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, now in its 13th session, July 4-August 14.

Mr. Sessions' Suite from "The Black Masters" will be performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting, at its Berkshire Festival concert of Sat., July 23 (Music Shed, 8:30 p.m.) at Tanglewood.

Telefonate 6421 per Comprare il
FAMOSO CARBONE INDICATO PER IL BERKSHIRE
da
MYRA & HARO' D COOPER
29 FENN STREET

BERKSHIRE FURNITURE CO.
INC.
"Mobilia per Generazioni"
MOBILIA DI QUALITA'
A PREZZI RAGIONEVOLI
Cantone di North e Union Sts.
Telefono 2-5104 Pittsfield, Mass.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

JUN 2 1955

25 Student Concerts at Tanglewood This Year

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Frstival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its thirteenth year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students fom all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m., commencing July 7, with the exception of the final concert, announced for Saturday afternoon, August 13.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through August 4.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
Herald of Westchester
Circ. W. 5,691

JUN 17 1955

Lindsley Burnham, Robert R. Rada

Lindsley Van Court Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Smith Burnham of Scarborough-on-Hudson, was married in the Presbyterian Church to Robert Rudolph Rada, son of Mrs. Rudolph Randolph Rada of Chicago, and the late Mr. Rada. The Rev. Robert Patton Montgomery officiated.

The bride was graduated from Scarborough School and attended Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing. Through her father she is descended from John and Priscilla Alden and from John Webster, fifth governor of colonial Connecticut in 1656.

Mr. Rada attended the University of Chicago, where he studied aeronautical engineering. He also studied at Juilliard School of Music, New York, and received a scholarship to the Berkshire Festival of Music, Tanglewood, Mass. He is a member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 22 1955

Tanglewood Tickets

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival weekend series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are reported to exceed those for last season, when the six-week festival at Tanglewood had a total attendance of 135,775, the largest in its history. Remaining tickets are on sale at the box office or by mail or telephone order.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

JUN 16 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Open At Lenox, July 6

047

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this year will consist of twenty-four concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerst of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Bernstein Conducts

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of th Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene I stomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Premieres

Tanglewood premieres- music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills- will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio"; Stravinsky, "Orpheus", Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and "Gloria" (with chorus);Faure, 'Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; Ionegger, Symphony No. 4;Sessions, Suite from "The Black Masers"; Barber, "Prayers of Ierkegaard"; Beethoven, "Fide-" Act II; Bloch, "Schelomo"; rauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkaier."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUN 18 1955

Subscriptions Set Fast Pace At Tanglewood

047

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22—August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—August 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—August 14 in the huge music shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr, announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concerts, and three overtures.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 10,258

JUN 18 1955

New One-Act Opera To Bow at Tanglewood

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass. on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August eighth and ninth.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full cooperation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

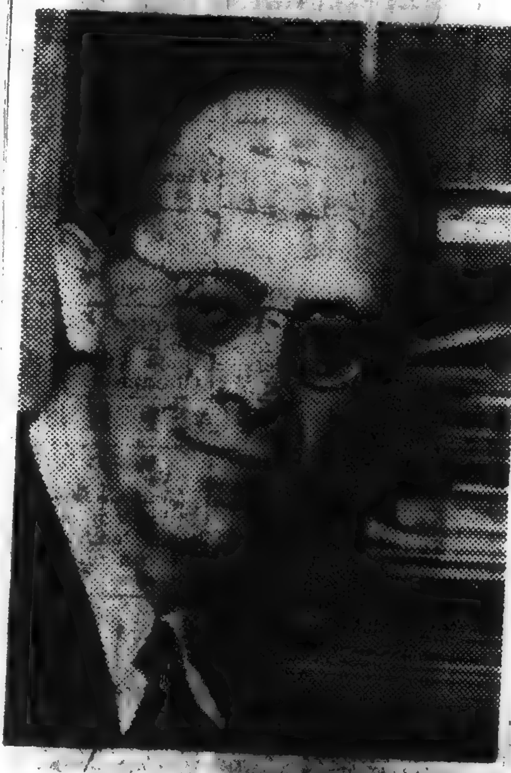
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUN 18 1955

MAJOR SEASON PREDICTED FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL

Subscriptions Already Ahead Of Last Year for Tanglewood Series

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22-Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23-Aug. 13, and four Sunday afternoons, July 24-Aug. 14 in the Music Shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr. announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.



RUDOLF SERKIN

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The box office will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; Checks and monery orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted; Phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

This year's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Noted Singers

Among the Shed season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts which are given in the intimate 1200-seat theater-concert hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors. Seats for these two weekends, July 8-9-10 and July 15-16-17 are already scarce, with Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert of Friday July 15, with the conductor doubling as piano soloists and Jennie Tourel as soprano soloist, almost sold out.

Other soloists in this preliminary series are vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm; and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, violist, Samuel Mayes, cellist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, to be held in the theater-concert hall, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund, are all devoted to Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas. Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern (accompanied by Alexander Zakin), Gregor Piatigorsky (accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz), the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music String Quartet are the performers.

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,112

JUN 19 1955

Twenty-five concerts by Berkshire Music Center students will highlight the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in the beautiful rolling Berkshire Hills...According to a reliable contributor, Treasury Agents will be the most active of all government investigators this year. Their scope is wide...Swampscott's veteran name-band musician Jimmy Athens will be featured with an instrumental trio this summer at the swank Oceanside Hotel, Magnolia. Originally scheduled as vocalist was Jimmy's wife, professionally known as Sherry Cayless, the glamorous blonde singer, model and showgirl. But the schedule was altered...The Carthusian Monks developed Chartreuse Liqueurs from a treasured family recipe given them by Marshall d'Estrees in 1605. The liqueurs are still made by the Monks who gather the herbs near their Monastery. Think I'll have a drink. Just to help the Monks, of course...As widely publicized by West Lynn Creamery, Lynn's only locally operated dairy plant, and one of the best equipped along the entire North Shore, June is National Dairy Month!

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 20 1955

In Brief . . .

Those television speed traps the state is planning to install along the east-west turnpike are doubtless bad news for latter-day Barney Oldfields who had hoped to push the sound barrier all the way to Boston, but they're a good indication that the super-road won't boost the county's accident figures as much as feared. They may also encourage a good look at Berkshire County's charms from passing motorists who might otherwise remember the area only as a purple blur . . . The report that Tanglewood's advance ticket orders point to a probable all-time record attendance this summer is fine news both for Berkshire businessmen and for the Boston Symphony management, which always approaches this annual June barometer with considerable trepidation . . . The elevation of John A. Clark to the principalship of Searles High School is a fitting reward for his years of conscientious and able service as teacher and vice principal. We hope he brings to the job a bottle of aspirin and an armor-plated epidermis . . .

The decision of Mayor Capeless yesterday to defer to retiring Principal Roy M. Strout in the awarding of diplomas at the Pittsfield High commencement was a moving and thoroughly appropriate tribute to a man who is, as the mayor described him, "a great gentleman and a beloved citizen" . . . The impending sale of the former Lenox Dale railroad station at a bargain price to the Bishop of Springfield for beautification and development is a real boon to St. Vincent de Paul's Church, which needs parking space and a site for a parish hall. It is also good news for the many Lenox Dale residents who have been working actively in recent months to improve the appearance of the village . . .

Sunday Reg
NEW HAVEN,
Independ
Circ. 91,5

JUN 19 1955

MUSIC

Berkshire Begins

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 675

JUN 2 1955

25 Student Concerts at Tanglewood This Year

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Frstival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its thirteenth year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students fom all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m., commencing July 7, with the exception of the final concert, announced for Saturday afterndon, August 13.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through August 4.

Lindsley Burnham, Robert R. Rada

Lindsley Van Court Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Smith Burnham of Scarborough-on-Hudson, was married in the Presbyterian Church to Robert Rudolph Rada, son of Mrs. Rudolph Randolph Rada of Chicago and the late Mr. Rada. The Rev. Robert Patton Montgomery officiated.

The bride was graduated from Scarborough School and attended Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing. Through her father she is descended from John and Priscilla Alden and from John Webster, fifth governor of colonial Connecticut in 1656.

Mr. Rada attended the University of Chicago where he studied aeronautical engineering. He also studied at Juilliard School of Music, New York, and received a scholarship to the Berkshire Festival of Music, Tanglewood, Mass. He is a member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 22 1955

Tanglewood Tickets

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival weekend series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are reported to exceed those for last season, when the six-week festival at Tanglewood had a total attendance of 135,775, the largest in its history. Remaining tickets are on sale at the box office or by mail or telephone order.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

JUN 16 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts To Open At Lenox, July 6

047

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this year will consist of twenty-four concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerst of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" Concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present the works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Bernstein Conducts

July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program; the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias.

Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of th Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the twelve Music Shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Premieres

Tanglewood premieres—music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills—will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio"; Stravinsky, "Orpheus", Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure, "Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; Honegger, Symphony No. 4; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard"; Beethoven, "Fidelio" Act II; Bloch, "Schelomo"; Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUN 18 1955

Subscriptions Set Fast Pace At Tanglewood

047

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22—August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—August 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—August 14 in the huge music shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr, announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concerts, and three overtures.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
Circ. D. 30,258

JUN 18 1955

New One-Act Opera To Bow at Tanglewood

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's [illegible] There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass. on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August eighth and ninth.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full cooperation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUN 20 1955

In Brief . . .

Those television speed traps the state is planning to install along the east-west turnpike are doubtless bad news for latter-day Barney Oldfields who had hoped to push the sound barrier all the way to Boston, but they're a good indication that the super-road won't boost the county's accident figures as much as feared. They may also encourage a good look at Berkshire County's charms from passing motorists who might otherwise remember the area only as a purple blur . . . The report that Tanglewood's advance ticket orders point to a probable all-time record attendance this summer is fine news both for Berkshire businessmen and for the Boston Symphony management, which always approaches this annual [illegible] with considerable [illegible] . . . The elevation of [illegible] ting reward for his years of conscientious and able service as teacher and vice principal. We hope he brings to the job a bottle of aspirin and an armor-plated epidermis . . .

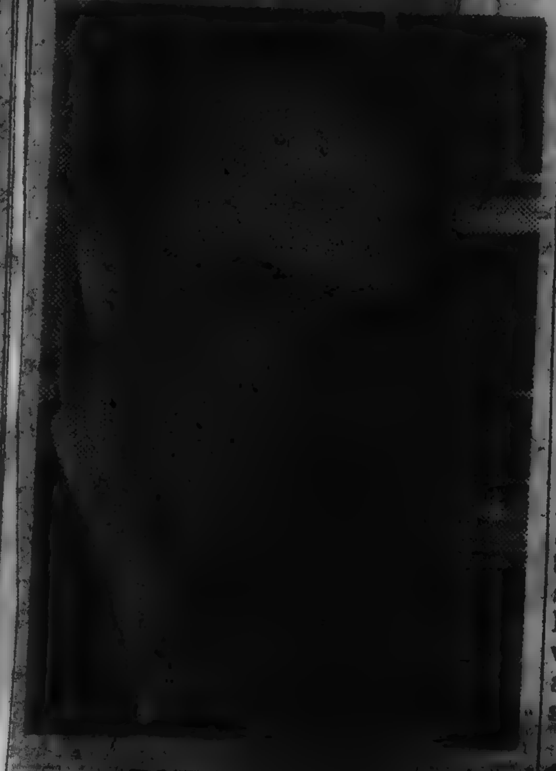
The decision of Mayor Capeless yesterday to defer to retiring Principal Roy M. Strout in the awarding of diplomas at the Pittsfield High commencement was a moving and thoroughly appropriate tribute to a man who is, as the mayor described him, "a great gentleman and a beloved citizen" . . . The impending sale of the former Lenox Dale railroad station at a bargain price to the Bishop of Springfield for [illegible] and development is a [illegible] Vincent de Paul's Church [illegible] parking [illegible] and a site for a parish hall. It is [illegible] news for the many Lenox Dale [illegible] have been working ac[illegible] months to improve the [illegible] village . . .

JUN 18 1955

MAJOR SEASON PREDICTED FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL

Subscriptions Already Ahead Of Last Year for Tanglewood Series

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22-Aug. 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23-Aug. 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24-Aug. 14 in the



RUDOLF [illegible]

Music Shed, have [illegible] those of the summer [illegible] Manager Thomas D. P[illegible] The six-week [illegible] saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. The box office will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt. Checks and monery orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted. Phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

This year's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Noted Singers

Among the Shed season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts which are given in the intimate 1200-seat theater-concert hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors. Seats for these two weekends, July 8-9-10 and July 15-16-17 are already scarce, with Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert of Friday July 15, with the conductor doubling as piano soloists and Jennie Tourel as soprano soloist, almost sold out.

Other soloists in this preliminary series are vocalists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm; and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, Joseph de Pasquale, violist, Samuel Mayes, cellist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

Six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, to be held in the theater-concert hall, proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship Fund, are all devoted to Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas. Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern (accompanied by Alexander Zakin), Gregor Piatigorsky (accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz), the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the New Music String Quartet are the performers.

Sunday Telegram-News
LYNN, Mass.
Democrat
Circ. 23,112

JUN 19 1955

Twenty-five concerts by Berkshire Music Center students will highlight the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in the beautiful rolling Berkshire Hills . . According to a reliable contributor, Treasury Agents will be the most active of all government investigators this year. Their scope is wide . . . Swampscott's veteran name-band musician Jimmy Athens will be featured with an instrumental trio this summer at the swank Oceanside Hotel, Magnolia. Originally scheduled as vocalist was Jimmy's wife, professionally known as Sherry Cayless, the glamorous blonde singer, model and showgirl. But the schedule was altered . . The Carthusian Monks developed Chartreuse Liqueurs from a treasured family recipe given them by Marshall d'Estrees in 1605. The liqueurs are still made by the Monks who gather the herbs near their Monastery. Think I'll have a drink. Just to help the Monks, of course . . As widely publicized by West Lynn Creamery, Lynn's only locally operated dairy plant, and one of the best equipped along the entire North Shore, June is National Dairy Month!

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

MUSIC

Berkshire Music Festival Begins Wednesday, July 6

BY GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Concert-goers here are fortunate in the proximity of Tanglewood, the locale of one of the world's great summer music festivals. Recent years have found an increasing number of music lovers, not only from this country but from abroad, traveling long distances to attend the concerts. A world famous orchestra giving concerts amidst the surroundings of one of nature's beauty spots has come to be an attraction for a world-wide audience. We here, comparatively speaking, have a musical "world attraction" right at our doorstep!

As was announced here recently, last year's attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival broke all previous records. Overall attendance at programs last year was approximately 18,000 over the figures of the previous year. That was certainly a substantial gain and convincing evidence of the increasing popularity of the Festival for music devotees everywhere.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, has planned the coming Tanglewood concerts to feature the music of Beethoven, including all of his nine symphonies. Other Beethoven works to be heard in the full orchestra programs are listed as follows: "Fidelio" (Act II in a concert version), the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of the late conductor of the Boston Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky). The Wednesday evening chamber music concerts will also present a representative range of Beethoven's works in this category, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano, and cello sonatas.

Among the contemporary works which will receive their Tanglewood premieres this summer are: Stravinsky's "Orpheus"; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher"; Honegger's Fourth Symphony; Suite from "The Black Maskers," by Sessions; Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"; Milhaud's "Serenade"; Bloch's "Schelomo." Other works to be played by the Boston musicians for the first time in a Festival series include; Bach's "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio"; Haydn's Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Boccherini's Cello Concerto; Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10, by Vivaldi and also this composer's "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure's "Pavanne"; "Fidelio" (Act II), by Beethoven; Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier," by Strauss.

Continuing the extended schedule inaugurated last summer, there will be 24 Festival concerts again this year, with the opening event scheduled for Wednesday evening, July 6. The first two weeks of the schedule, aside from the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, will be devoted as usual to the so called "Bach-Mozart" series. The six concerts in this group will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons, commencing July 8. The Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club will assist in a presentation of Bach's B minor Mass on the afternoon of July 10. Another highlight of this "Bach-Mozart" series will come on July 15 when Leonard Bernstein will be welcomed back to Tanglewood after a year's absence. The young conductor will both direct and perform as piano soloist in an all-Mozart program on that date, with the celebrated mezzo-soprano, Jennie Tourel, also scheduled to appear in this concert.

Bernstein will also direct one of the Shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony which will get under way on Friday, July 22. Pierre Monteux will conduct three of these main concerts with Charles Munch scheduled to conduct the other eight concerts in the Shed. The soloists are to be Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolph Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Program and ticket information for the coming Festival concerts may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or by telephoning Lenox 600.

Boston Symphony Center Of Controversy

The Boston Symphony, incidentally, was the center of an age-old controversy a few months ago between conservatives and progressives or in other words, between the proponents of the old and the new. The dispute, which was carried on through the press, was touched off when the noted author, William Henry Chamberlin wrote a letter to The Christian Science Monitor complaining of the inclusion of contemporary works in the orchestra's programs.

Chamberlin criticized conductor Munch for "the unfortunate juxtapositions of Bach and Roy Harris, Hindemith and Moussorgsky," in Symphony Hall concerts. He suggested that henceforth the orchestra relegate "modern compositions of varying degrees of cacophony and atonality" to special concerts "reserved exclusively for extreme modernist works . . ." Another correspondent wrote "an incomprehensible composition is part of almost every concert played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra." The controversy waxed hot and heavy for some time.

I wish that everyone, particularly those who share Mr. Chamberlin's views, that "there is a deep and unbridgeable chasm between violently atonal works and the musical heritage of the past," could read the entire letter sent to The Monitor by Klaus George Roy. This defender of the Munch policy (and that of Koussevitzky) wrote an eloquent and lengthy reply in which he reminded the dissenters that the perennial battle for a status-quo in the arts is one that history has shown to be a losing one.

Klaus asked, "Does Mr. Chamberlin wish to see the rise of an indigenous and genuine American musical tradition? There will be none if his plan of musical segregation were to be carried out. Did Serge Koussevitzky waste his 25 years of leadership by introducing countless new works and giving a hearing to dozens of young men now acknowledged to be the major composers of this country?"

The Munch defender says, "Our musical culture is in serious danger of stagnation by the endless repetition of the known and justly admired masterpieces. Now it is proposed that we live totally in the glorious past, with eyes and ears hermetically sealed to present and future. What a prospect!" He adds that all great modern composers drink at the fountain of our musical heritage of the past and that is why he "can be an ardent supporter of the modern composers named, can admire the styles and message of Piston, Barber, Ives, and Foss—while considering Mozart as the greatest composer who ever lived!" As for Stravinsky, Hindemith, and Bartok being atonalists, quite the contrary is true. Says Klaus, "These men have striven all their lives, consciously, to achieve and revitalize the principles of tonality almost abandoned by the hyperchromatic style of Wagner and his successors . . ."

In his letter to The Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Chamberlin had requested, among other things, more Liszt and Wagner in Boston programs. The Klaus reply to this was to give the dissenter an unpalatable dose of his own medicine by quoting certain critical appraisals which time has proved to be extremely false and silly. From a respectable English journal of 1855, Klaus quotes the following comment on Wagner, "A Communist . . . in whose work the symmetry of form is ignored or else abandoned; the consistency of keys and their relation overthrown, contemned, demolished . . . the true basis of harmony, and the indispensable government of modulation, cast away for a reckless, wild, extravagant, and demagogic cacophony."

As for the other Chamberlin "pet," Liszt, this from The Boston Gazette of 1876: "Liszt's music is an insult to art. It is gaudy musical harlotry, savage and incoherent bellowings." Comments Mr. Klaus with a coup de grace, "In 1876, Liszt's music should thus have been reserved for 'special concerts.' Is that right?" We wonder how Mr. Chamberlin would answer that one.

Because of the courage and conviction of conductors like Charles Munch, our concert repertoire has been enormously enriched in 20 years. Says Klaus, ". . . This country is coming into its own, creatively. Its composers ask not for adulation, but for interest; not for passive approval, but for avid curiosity; not for approval or disapproval in advance, but for an open, searching mind . . . In short, we must not be afraid. Afraid of the new, afraid again and again of those experiences which may 'jar and jolt' along with those which soothe or uplift. Art is not meant to be a soporific. It is a reflection of the outer life, an intensification of the inner — with all the enormous scope and range that implies."

Heath Succeeds Frantz As Conductor

Fenno Heath, director of the Yale Glee Club, will assume the conductor's post of the University Glee Club to succeed Arthur Frantz, who has resigned after conducting the local group for the past two seasons. Frantz is the conductor of the Yale Freshman Glee Club.

Youthful Heath, who is also an assistant professor in the Yale Music School, has admirably "filled the large shoes" left by his distinguished predecessor, Marshall Bartholomew, former conductor of the Yale singers.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUN 19 1955

Music

Competition Is Keen For Artists Awards

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

Competition was unusually keen at the Young Artists Awards auditions held Saturday afternoon and evening. Twenty-one young women competed for several $300 scholarships that are being given for the fifth year under the term of an anonymous trust fund. The winners will be announced shortly.

Vocalists and instrumentalists were heard at M. Steinert & Sons Co., 308 Main street. Organ auditions were given at Wesley Methodist Church.

Judges were David D. Kaplan, music instructor in the Worcester public schools; Frederick Kinsley, organist and choir director at Wesley Methodist; and Raymond Morin, music critic for the Worcester Telegram.

Applicants for the scholarships are enrolled at the following institutions: Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts, University of Michigan, Wheaton College (Illinois), Julius Hartt School of Music in Hartford, Anna Maria College in Paxton, Lowell State Teachers College, New England Conservatory of Music, Longy School of Music in Cambridge, St. Gabriel School of Music, Westminster Choir College in New York City, and the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673

JUN 23 1955

Record Subscriptions For Tanglewood 1955

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22—August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23—August 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24—August 14 in the huge Music Shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr. announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox, Mass. 600.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

For detailed Berkshire Festival programs, for a complete list of the summer's more than 25 student concerts to which the public is invited by making a voluntary contribution to the society of Friends of the music school, and for price information, write the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

OMAHA, NEBR.
World Herald (Sunday)
Circ. S. 261,246

JUN 26 1955

Best in Music Close at Hand

Midwest Boasts Good Summer Programs

Martin W. Bush

A few weeks ago we outlined a porch rocking-chair tour of European summer music festivals. One that would keep you occupied from now into the fall.

In case some of the details accompanying such a project failed to allure you, such details as vaccination, passports, visas, the prospect of accommodations of our grandparents' traveling days, and foreign tradesmen taking you for the traditional rich American sucker, here's something else.

That is a comfortable music-seeking tour around our own stomping-grounds. One which, conceivably, might be as rewarding, or even more so than if you had been doing Europe.

Attractions in Missouri

To mention but a few attractions, the list can't be complete, first consider some within the radius of a few hours of travel. Kansas City will have 10 weeks of light opera in its Starlight Theater. St. Louis tells of a season from June to September, mounting grand and comic operas and musical comedies in its open air theater.

Colorado bids you to three of its cities. In July and August Central City will have seven weeks of operas and plays. Aspen's festival in the same months will be by recitalists and ensembles. Denver again tells of its Red Rocks Amphitheater in which the Denver Symphony will hold forth over a similar period.

In the other direction, but not too far, Fish Creek in Wisconsin lists a festival in August by a symphony orchestra. Out west, Carmel, Cal., takes July for its highly reputed Bach Festival of choral and instrumental music.

Much Music in East

Edging toward the east one finds five weeks of opera in Cincinnati's Zoological Gardens. And operas, symphony concerts and chamber music for two months at Chautauqua, N. Y. In Maine, Kennebunkport has its Arundel Opera Theater; Massachusetts its Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony, a Jacob's Pillow dance festival, and a Plymouth Rock center of music and dancing at Duxbury.

In Connecticut there's New London's American Dance Festival, Falls Village's Music Mountain series. Wheeling, W. Va., has two months of concerts and opera at its Oglebay Institute. Two North Carolina cities, Brevard and Winston-Salem are listed. Finally, Stratford, Ont., and Montreal in Canada.

Add regular summer series by orchestras in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, and pop concerts in every city having a symphony. Enough?

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
Circ. D. 299,297 - S. 513,207

JUN 26 1955

Berkshires Offer Theater, Music and Art Events

There is more than music in the Berkshires. Tanglewood is, of course, the area's summer headliner. For the second season the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform from July 8 through Aug. 14.

Two other new major attractions in the Berkshire hills are both located in Williamstown. One is the summer theater which opens Tuesday. The other, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum.

The multimillion dollar museum was opened last month. It is opened to the public at no charge.

The Berkshires have an abundance of natural and historic spots: Mission House in Stockbridge, built in 1739 as an Indian mission; Monument Mountain, the great stone-faced mountain poetized by William Cullen Bryant; Natural Bridge, a geological wonder that includes marbled arches and water carved caverns.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 138,778

JUN 22 1955

Boston Symphony Schedules 24 Programs

Berkshires Add a Theater and a Museum

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — There's more than music in the Berkshires, but Tanglewood is still the area's summer headliner.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 thru Aug. 14.

Two major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare this summer are both in the college town of Williamstown.

A summer theater which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theater at Williams College. A resident company will put on recent Broadway hits.

NEW MUSEUM

The other Berkshire addition is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million dollar musuem erected by Robert Sterling Clark, New York financier. It's open to the public at no charge.

Another Berkshire regular, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 off Jacob's Ladder (Route 20) in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn's 1955 season will be highlighted by the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

JAZZ, TOO

Here are some of the Berkshire's other cultural offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Music Inn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concert, July 2 thru Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, series of medieval and Renaissance and baroque music concerts Saturday evenings, Aug. 13-Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, county courthouse, Pittsfield, this year published its first directory of what to do in the Berkshires. It may be obtained by writing to the Conference.

BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS POST
Circ. D. 219,418

JUN 20 1955

Music Festival Reservations Going Fast

By HELEN A. F. PENNIMAN

Let those Baltimore devotees of music be reminded that time is passing, and the best seats are being subscribed for the Berkshire Music Festival which opens at Tanglewood on July 6, with Charles Munch as the guiding spirit.

During the six weeks of this festival there will be a Beethoven program of chamber music on each Wednesday evening, with such familiar friends on the platform as the Kroll String Quartet (quartet in residence of the Peabody)—the New Music String Quartet—Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Isaac Stern.

Bach and Mozart will make up the principal part of the programs for the concerts on July 8, 9 and 10 and July 15, 16 and 17.

* * *

THEN the entire majesty of the Boston Symphony, the only orchestra that sponsors a summer music school, will present the programs in "The Shed" on July 22, 23, 24 and July 29, 30 and 31.

On Friday evening, August 5, the Missa Solemnis of Beethoven will be given in memory of the founder of the school and festival, Serge Koussevitsky. An all-Wagner program will occur on August 6, with Margaret Harshaw—who is coming here in October with the National—as soloist. And an all-Beethoven program follows the next evening.

Concerts on August 12, 13 and 14 close the formal program, but the activities of the school, plus the festival events, make concerts an almost daily occurrence.

* * *

IN 1955-56, the Symphony will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary, and in honor of the event, the orchestra and Mr. Munch are joining with the Serge Koussevitsky Foundation in the Library of Congress to commission 15 new works by leading living composers.

Six have been chosen from Europe, eight from the United States and one from South America.

FORT WORTH, TEX.
STAR-TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 114,857 - S. 216,735

JUN 26 1955

In Cities, Out of Doors

Summer Offers Many Musical Attractions

BY E. CLYDE WHITLOCK.

E. CLYDE WHITLOCK.

Musical activity throughout the nation by no means ceases with the coming of summer. For the student every college has a summer term, and the opportunities for study, combined with wholesome recreation, are augmented by music camps in every region, from the ultra offerings at Aspen, Colo., and the Berkshire school sponsored by the Boston Symphony to the camp in the woods where the students do their own work and live close to nature.

Then there are projects of listening music, aimed to a considerable extent in the direction of the tourist.

Closest at hand are the State Fair Musicals in air-conditioned State Fair Auditorium in Dallas. A program of far greater musical merit than that offered last summer promises worthy musical enjoyment.

Being presented this week is the Rodgers and Hammerstein success, "South Pacific." Coming events on the series will be "Bitter Sweet," July 4 to 17; "Carousel," July 18 to 31; "One Touch of Venus," Aug. 1 to 14, and "The Teahouse of the August Moon," Aug. 15 to 28.

The Lewisohn Stadium concerts of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony will continue for the 38th year until July 30, skipping Sunday and Friday nights of each week. The prices remain the same as from the opening season, $1.20 for chairs on the field and 30 to 60 cents for the bleacher seats. Conductors will be Dimitri Mitropoulos, Efrem Kurtz, Pierre Monteux, Andre Kochelanetz, Alexander Smallens and Thomas Scherman.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.

The famous Boston Pops concerts in Symphony Hall continue until July 1. The orchestra then moves to the esplande on the Charles River for concerts July 5 to 10, July 12 to 17 and Aug. 15 to 20. During the intervening weeks the orchestra is at the Berkshire Festival.

At the Berkshire-Tanglewood Festival there will be orchestra concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, under Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The first two weeks will be devoted to Bach and Mozart. All the symphonies, concertos, overtures, "Missa Solemnis" and a concert performance of Act II of "Fidelio" by Beethoven, will be interspersed through the other four weeks.

The Berkshire Music Center, the school, will run from July 4 to Aug. 14. The head of the choral department is Hugh Ross, who was in Fort Worth two weeks ago with the First Methodist Church's Conference on Protestant Church Music.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 30 1955

, was hostess.

Student enrollment for the 13th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, has now passed 375.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 50,520

JUN 27 1955

Two Festival Numbers Will Be Recorded

The last notes of the music festival sounded yesterday but there will be a very real echo around Salem today.

For bright and early this morning, six musicians and a conductor will set to work rehearsing two compositions that will be recorded later in the day.

Recording David Moritz Michael's Parthia No. 1 in E Flat Major and Parthia No. 10 in E Flat Major will be a commercial venture.

Festival officials haven't yet announced which record company will release the two Parthias. But the recordings probably will be available soon for the persons who enjoyed hearing the two compositions this week and for those who weren't able to attend the festival.

Recording artists for the compositions will be the six men who played them at the Third Early American Moravian Music Festival which ended yesterday.

William Elliott of Bowling Green State University and Wesley Riest of University of Nebraska, clarinets; Homer Pence of Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and Robert Foreman of Indiana University, bassoons; and Verne Reynolds of Indiana University and William H. Wagner of Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, horns.

Conducting them will be Dr. Thor Johnson, music director of the festival that just ended.

Yesterday's final concert was the signal for a flood of goodbyes.

But the goodbyes were just temporary ones for many members of the festival orchestra.

In August, most of the orchestra members will assemble in Fish Creek, Wis., for the Peninsula Music Festival, a three-week affair. Dr. Johnson will be their conductor again.

* * *

The rest of the summer promises to be a busy one for Dr. Johnson. But first, he plans a few days of rest at his parent's home in Kernersville.

Next musical date for the popular conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony is July 5, when he goes to Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., to conduct the Boston Symphony.

On July 19, he'll be back in North Carolina for the Brevard Music Festival. And then he'll move on to University of Kentucky in Lexington for a youth music seminar.

On July 31, he will conduct an orchestra composed of the finest musicians in New York City—at the Naumburg Memorial Concert in Central Park.

See Two, Page [illegible] Col. 2.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK CITY

JUN 1955

NATIONAL NOTES . . . .

Marlboro School of Chamber Music (Marlboro, Vt.) announces two series of Festival concerts from July 3 to Aug. 25, including orchestral, chamber music, and operatic performances. . . . Harriett Steele Pickernell has been appointed general manager of the Newport Music Festival this year. . . . The 10th annual Composers' Conference and Chamber Music Center will be held at Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., Aug. 17-31. Amateur and professional composers will participate and enjoy the opportunity of having their works performed and recorded. . . . Beginning this summer, and over a period of five years, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The five appropriations can amount to as much as $125,000. . . . Samuel Antek has been appointed conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra's Children's Concerts. . . . Henry Brant, Irving Fine, and Adolph Weiss have each been awarded the $1,000 Arts and Letters Grants by the National Institute of Arts and Letters to non-member artists. . . . The Liverette International Artists, organized by Dr. Lucia Liverette, well-known coach and voice teacher, announces an "Operatic Festival" to be given on June 4 at the Assistance League Playhouse, Hollywood, Cal., featuring excerpts from well-known operas. . . . For the 10th consecutive season, conductor Gastone Usigli has engaged soprano Phyllis Moffet as soloist for the famed Carmel Bach Festival, Carmel, Cal. . . . Singers interested in auditioning for the Ansonia Opera Circle may apply for audition by writing to Sayard Stone, Ansonia Opera Circle, Hotel Ansonia, Broadway and 74th St., N. Y. C. . . . Second Leader Albert Schoepper of the U.S. Marine Band has been appointed to serve as Leader in the rank of captain from May 1, when Lt. Col. Wm. F. Santelmann, the Band's present Leader, retires. . . .

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
Circ. D. 299,297 - S. 513,207

JUN 26 1955

Berkshires Offer Theater, Music and Art Events

There is more than music in the Berkshires. Tanglewood is, of course, the area's summer headliner. For the second season the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform from July 8 through Aug. 14.

Two other new major attractions in the Berkshire hills are both located in Williamstown. One is the summer theater which opens Tuesday. The other, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum.

The multimillion dollar museum was opened last month. It is opened to the public at no charge.

The Berkshires have an abundance of natural and historic spots: Mission House in Stockbridge, built in 1739 as an Indian mission; Monument Mountain, the great stone-faced mountain poetized by William Cullen Bryant; Natural Bridge, a geological wonder that includes marbled arches and water carved caverns.

WASHINGTON, D.C.
NEWS
Circ. D. 138,778

JUN 22 1955

Boston Symphony Schedules 24 Programs

Berkshires Add a Theater and a Museum

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — There's more than music in the Berkshires, but Tanglewood is still the area's summer headliner.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 thru Aug. 14.

Two major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare this summer are both in the college town of Williamstown.

A summer theater which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theater at Williams College. A resident company will put on recent Broadway hits.

NEW MUSEUM

The other Berkshire addition is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million dollar musuem erected by Robert Sterling Clark, New York financier. It's open to the public at no charge.

Another Berkshire regular, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 off Jacob's Ladder (Route 20) in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn's 1955 season will be highlighted by the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

JAZZ, TOO

Here are some of the Berkshire's other cultural offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Music Inn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concert, July 2 thru [illegible] Day; New York Pro Musica [illegible] Stockbridge, series of medieval and Renaissance and baroque music concerts Saturday evenings, Aug. 13-Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, county courthouse, Pittsfield, this year published its first directory of what to do in the [illegible]. It may be obtained by [illegible] the Conference.

BALTIMORE, MD.
NEWS POST
Circ. D. 219,418

JUN 2 [illegible] 1955

Music Festival Reservations Going Fast

By HELEN A. F. PENNIMAN

Let those Baltimore devotees of music be reminded that time is passing, and the best seats are being [illegible] for [illegible] the Berkshire Music [illegible] which opens at Tanglewood [illegible] 6 with Charles Munch as the guiding spirit.

During the six weeks of this festival there will be a Beethoven program of chamber music on each Wednesday evening, with such familiar friends on the platform as the Kroll String Quartet (quartet in residence at the Peabody)—the New Music String Quartet—Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Isaac Stern.

Bach and Mozart will make up the principal part of the programs for the concerts on July 8, 9 and 10 and July 15, 16 and 17.

THEN the entire majesty of the Boston Symphony, the only orchestra that sponsors a summer music school, will present the programs in "The Shed" on July 22, 23, 24 and July 29, 30 and 31.

On Friday evening, August 5, the Missa Solemnis of Beethoven will be given in memory of the founder of the school and festival, Serge Koussevitzky. An all-Wagner program will occur on August 6, with Margaret Harshaw—who is coming here in October with the National—as soloist. And an all-Beethoven program follows the next evening.

Concerts on August 12, 13 and 14 close the formal program, but the activities of the school, plus the festival events, make concerts an almost daily occurrence.

IN 1955-56, the Symphony will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary, and in honor of the event, the orchestra and Mr. Munch are joining with the Serge Koussevitzky Foundation in the Library of Congress to commission 15 new works by leadin living composers.

Six have been chosen from Europe, eight from the Unite States and one from Sout America.

FORT WORTH, TEX.
STAR-TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 114,857 - S. 216,735

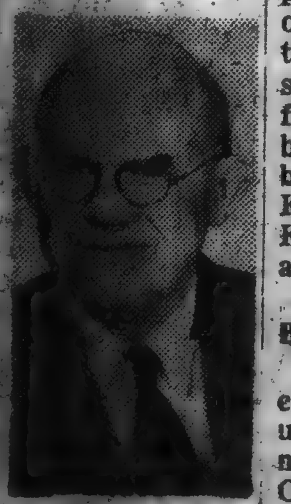
JUN 26 1955

In Cities, Out of Doors

Summer Offers Many Musical Attractions

BY E. CLYDE WHITLOCK.

Musical activity throughout the nation by no means ceases with the coming of summer. For the student every college has a summer term, and the opportunities for study, combined with wholesome recreation, are augmented by music camps in every region, from the ultra offerings at Aspen, Colo., and the Berkshire school sponsored by the Boston Symphony, to the camp in the woods where the students do their own work and live close to nature.



E. CLYDE WHITLOCK.

Then there are projects of listening music, aimed to a considerable extent in the direction of the tourist.

Closest at hand are the State Fair Musicals in air-conditioned State Fair Auditorium in Dallas. A program of far greater musical merit than that offered last summer promises worthy musical enjoyment.

Being presented this week is the Rodgers and Hammerstein success, "South Pacific." Coming events on the series will be "Bitter Sweet," July 4 to 17; "Carousel," July 18 to 31; "One Touch of Venus," Aug. 1 to 14, and "The Teahouse of the August Moon," Aug. 15 to 28.

The Lewisohn Stadium concerts of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony will continue for the 38th year until July 30, skipping Sunday and Friday nights of each week. The prices remain the same as from the opening season, $1.20 for chairs on the field and 30 to 60 cents for the bleacher seats. Conductors will be Dimitri Mitropoulos, Efrem Kurtz, Pierre Monteux, Andre Kochelanetz, Alexander Smallens and Thomas Scherman.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.

The famous Boston Pops concerts in Symphony Hall continue until July 1. The orchestra then moves to the esplande on the Charles River for concerts July 5 to 10, July 12 to 17 and Aug. 15 to 20. During the intervening weeks the orchestra is at the Berkshire Festival.

At the Berkshire-Tanglewood Festival there will be orchestra concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, under Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The first two weeks will be devoted to Bach and Mozart. All the symphonies, concertos, overtures, "Missa Solemnis" and a concert performance of Act II of "Fidelio" by Beethoven, will be interspersed through the other four weeks.

The Berkshire Music Center, the school, will run from July 4 to Aug. 14. The head of the choral department is Hugh Ross, who was in Fort Worth two weeks ago with the First Methodist Church's Conference on Protestant Church Music.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 3 0 1955

Student enrollment for the 13th annual session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, has now passed 375.

Two Fest[illegible]bers Will Be [illegible]corded

The last notes of the music festival sounded yesterday but there will be a very real echo around Salem today.

For bright and early this morning, six musicians and a conductor will set to work rehearsing two compositions that will be recorded later in the day.

Recording David Moritz Michael's Parthia No. 1 in E Flat Major and Parthia No. 10 in E Flat Major will be a commercial venture.

Festival officials haven't yet announced which record company will release the two Parthias. But the recordings probably will be available soon for the persons who enjoyed hearing the two compositions this week and for those who weren't able to attend the festival.

Recording artists for the compositions will be the six men who played them at the Third Early American Moravian Music Festival which ended yesterday.

William Elliott of Bowling Green State University and Wesley Riest of University of Nebraska, clarinets; Homer Pence of Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and Robert Foreman of Indiana University, bassoons, and Verne [illegible] University [illegible] ner of Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, horns.

Conducting them will be Dr. Thor Johnson, music director of the festival that just ended.

Yesterday's final concert was the signal for a flood of goodbyes.

But the goodbyes were just temporary ones for many members of the festival orchestra.

In August most of the orchestra members will assemble in Fish Creek, Wis., for the Peninsula Music Festival, a three-week affair. Dr. Johnson will be their conductor again.

* * *

The rest of the summer promises to be a busy one for Dr. Johnson. But first, he plans a few days of rest at his parents' home in [illegible]ersville.

Next musical date for the popular conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony is July 5, when he goes to Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., to conduct the Boston Symphony.

On July 18, he'll be back in North Carolina for the Brevard Music Festival. And then he'll move on to University of Kentucky in Lexington for a youth music seminar.

On July 31, he will conduct an [illegible] the [illegible] York [illegible] Memorial [illegible]

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK CITY

JUN 1955

NATIONAL NOTES . . . .

Marlboro School of Chamber Music (Marlboro, Vt.) announces two series of Festival concerts from July 3 to Aug. 25, including orchestral, chamber music, and operatic performances. . . . Harriett Steele Pickernell has been appointed general manager of the Newport Music Festival this year. . . . The 10th annual Composers' Conference and Chamber Music Center will be held at Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., Aug. 17-31. Amateur and professional composers will participate and enjoy the opportunity of having their works performed and recorded. . . . Beginning this summer, and over a period of five years, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The five appropriations can amount to as much as $125,000. . . . Samuel Antek has been appointed conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra's Children's Concerts. . . . Henry Brant, Irving Fine, and Adolph Weiss have each been awarded the $1,000 Arts and Letters Grants by the National Institute of Arts and Letters to non-member artists. . . . The Liverette International Artists, organized by Dr. Lucia Liverette, well-known coach and voice teacher, announces an "Operatic Festival" to be given on June 4 at the Assistance League Playhouse, Hollywood, Cal., featuring excerpts from well-known operas. . . . For the 10th consecutive season, conductor Gastone Usigli has engaged soprano Phyllis Moffet as soloist for the famed Carmel Bach Festival, Carmel, Cal. . . . Singers interested in auditioning for the Ansonia Opera Circle may apply for audition by writing to Sayard Stone, Ansonia Opera Circle, Hotel Ansonia, Broadway and 74th St., N. Y. C. . . . Second Leader Albert Schoepper of the U.S. Marine Band has been appointed to serve as Leader in the rank of captain from May 1, when Lt. Col. Wm. F. Santelmann, the Band's present Leader, retires. . . .

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,581

JUN 23 1955

CURTAIN CALL

Bruno Ussher Views Music-Drama Scene

UNUSUAL AND FINE: It is no longer news that the programs of the La Jolla Musical Arts Society combine the fine with the unusual. Not that music director Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff ever sacrifices quality to the exceptional in seeking the rare. His sense of the unusual or rarely performed is manifested again this coming Sunday.

This program (4:30 p.m. this Sunday at La Jolla High School) is devoted to chamber music. Ingolf Dahl and Shibley Boyce, two of the best ensemble pianists, will journey down from Los Angeles to perform the rarely heard Mozart "Andante and Variations" in G-major (K-501) and the Schubert F-Minor "Fantasia," opus 103, a superb work and one written in the last year of a troubled life.

DR. USSHER

Also in the program is the Brahms Sonata opus 38 in E-minor, a romantic work with piano and the Kodaly "Unaccompanied Cello Sonata." All I can foretell for the Kodaly score is that it comes from the foremost living Hungarian composer. Kodaly is a melodist who can be strikingly dramatic and humorous.

The cellist George Neikrug, remembered from his solo playing of the Tschaikowsky "Rococo" Variations with the San Diego Philharmonic under the baton of Werner Janssen. He is a brilliant performer.

Shibley Boyce needs no introduction to local concert-goers. For years official pianist of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, she enjoys a wide reputation for her excellent chamber music artistry and as a sensitive accompanist in song recitals.

Miss Boyce and Dahl will be heard in the enchanting Mozart "Variations" on a theme of his own and in the Schubert work. This composition in free fantasy form is ranked by connoisseurs with the great "Wanderer" Fantasy of Schubert.

Dahl is an exceptionally versatile musician. Besides commanding pianist skills of high order, he enjoys a wide reputation as composer-conductor. He is the director of the U.S.C. symphony. This is his first appearance here.

One of his latest works, "The Tower of St. Barbara," a symphonic legend in four parts, was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky., Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant. It was given four performances last winter.

A year ago, Prof. Dahl received a $1,000 grant from the National Institute of Arts and Letters "in recognition of creative work in music." He believed he was the first composer in this area to receive such a grant.

He has also received awards from the Society for the Publication of American Music, and a Guggenheim fellowship in composition on which he traveled to Europe in 1952-53.

Dahl was born in Germany in 1912 of Swedish parents, but has since become a citizen of the United States. He studied conducting, piano and composition at the conservatories of Cologne and Zurich, and musicology at the University of Zurich and coached and conducted at the Municipal Opera House in Zurich.

As well as teaching composition, advanced conducting and music history and literature, he has composed 15 works including two concertos, a symphony concertante, variations, prelude and fugue, and has arranged and edited music.

His works have been performed in Sweden, New Zealand, Germany, South America, and the United States, and his recordings have been broadcast in many countries. As a conductor he has introduced new works of such composers as Berg, Schoenberg, Ives, Stravinsky and Copland on the West Coast.

In 1949 he was called to the faculty of the Middlebury Composers Conference in Vermont, and in 1952 and 1953 he organized and headed an advanced department of the Tanglewood Study Group of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

1955

MEMBRINO TO COVER TANGLEWOOD MUSIC

Supervisor of Music Here to Give Weekly Resumes

George E. Membrino, supervisor of music in the local public schools for the past three years, and who resigned at the end of the current term to accept a post in Longmeadow, will cover the music programs at Tanglewood, Lenox, this season for the Berkshire Courier.

Mr. Membrino, leader of the Berkshire Symphonette musical group, has a fine background in music, in both the classical and popular. He will give a review of the concerts presented at Tanglewood.

SEATTLE, WASH.
Post-Intelligencer
Circ. D. 187,322 - S. 268,927

JUN 26 1955

Look And Listen:

Music Stars Busier Than Ever In Summer

BY JOHN VOORHEES

Summer used to be the season when musicians took a vacation, rested and worried about how to pay their bills. This is still true in Seattle, but throughout the rest of the United States and Europe, summer soon will be known as the busiest season if one may judge by the number of music festivals.

An article encompassing all the major festivals would fill this entire page, so let's just look at a few of them.

Every village in Europe, it would seem, has a music festival with some, naturally, more important than others. Aix-en-Provence in France is one of the latter. Held July 10-31, there will be performances of "Orpheus," "Mireille," "Marriage of Figaro" and "Cosi fan tutte" which will utilize the talents of such singers as Nan Merriman and Elisabeth Schwarzkopf. Concerts will spotlight pianist Wilhelm Kempff, Jean Casadesus and Leon Fleisher.

The Holland Festival, now in progress and continuing through July, has a novel plan. A central office books performers, then puts them on a circuit to The Hague, Rotterdam, Amsterdam and Scheveningen so citizens needn't travel to the festival, yet see all the attractions.

The Festival will include Britten's new opera, "The Turn of the Screw," conducted by the composer; performances by the Hungarian String Quartet, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, the Concertgebouw Orchestra conducted by Edward van Beinum, Pierre Monteux, Otto Klemperer and George Szell, operas by a group from Milan's La Scala and ballet by the New York City Ballet.

The Fifth Festival of Berlin, to be held September 17 to October 4, will include Maria Callas in "Lucia di Lammermoor" with Herbert von Karajan conducting; the Berlin Philharmonic conducted by Eugene Ormandy, piano concerts by Wilhelm Backhaus and Wilhelm Kempff, the Kabuki Dancers from Japan as well as plays and art exhibits.

IN THIS country, perhaps the best known festival is the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., running from July 6 to August 14.

The agenda of the Berkshire Festival, designed to honor Beethoven, will include his opera, "Fidelio," the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis" and most of the concertos and overtures.

Conductors include Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson, and Charles Munch. Soloists include Rufolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Jennie Tourel and the New Music String Quartet.

TURNING TO the West Coast, the Pacific Coast Music Festival will be held September 10-18 in Santa Barbara. Leopold Stokowski will be the guiding light in a series of orchestral concerts which will present much early classical music as well as an all-contemporary concert.

Next door, Los Angeles also has its Symphonies Under the Stars, an eight-week series of concerts at the Hollywood Bowl in July and August. Guest conductors engaged include Eduard van Beinum, Eric Leinsdorf, Izler Solomon, Andre Kostelanetz, Enrique Jorda, Carlos Chavez, Leonard Bernstein and George Solti.

Featured soloists and groups will be Moura Lympany, Rudolf Firkusny, Isaac Stern, Jennie Tourel, Andre Previn, Piatigorsky, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, the First Piano Quartet, William Warfield and Dorothy Kirsten.

Let's hope that Allied Arts, which hopes to someday, somehow start a Pacific Northwest Festival, is busily examining all the literature

---

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 2 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Wed, July 6—Sun, [illegible] Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Wed, July 6—Chamber Music. Kroll String Quartet. C minor, Op. 18, No. 4; F minor, Op. 95; C sharp minor, Op. 131. Fri, July 8—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Sinfonia from "Easter" Oratorio and Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Mozart, "Prague" Symphony (K. 504). Sat, July 9—Thor Johnson cond. Joseph De Pasquale, violist. Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn, Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin & Cello; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat. [illegible] 10—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists.

GUGGENHEIM [illegible] CONCERTS—Thru Aug [illegible] Franko Goldman, [illegible] Goldman, associate. [illegible] Mon, Wed, Fri, Central Park M[illegible] Thurs, Sat, Prospect Park, B'klyn. [illegible] Free.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

JUL 3 1955

Berkshire Festival Begins This Week

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Music Director Charles Munch. For the 16th Summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14.

The Festival will begin Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joesph de Pasquale, as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, Charles Munch will present Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390

JUN 30 1955

Munch To Arrive In Lenox Friday For Festival Work

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will arrive in New York Friday from his home in Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Mass., that afternoon, to his summer residence.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. 1955 marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert at 8:30 p. m. Friday, July 8, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adel Addison, soprano Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening, July 9, Festival concert, works by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music Center (1940 and 1941).

Remained In Boston

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 74th season May 1st, Charles Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra, then returned to Europe for his between-seasons vacation. On account of his heavy schedule in the U. S. during the coming season, the orchestra's 75th anniversary, the conductor has spent two months abroad, accepting no engagements during this period.

In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg, spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part has vacationed on the Riviera. There was a five-day interruption of this vacation at the beginning of June, when he made a flying visit to the U. S. to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University. Since last summer at Tanglewood, his book, "I Am A Conductor," has has been published in the U. S. by Oxford University Press, and has been widely reviewed and well received.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p. m., when other speakers are expected to be William Cox, chairman of the Society of Friends of the music school; Richard Burgin, acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center; Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the BMC; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940, will be sung by students, Hugo Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens. Two trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, C. D. Jackson and Henry B. Cabot, will be present.

Student Concerts

During the summer, more than 25 concerts and demonstrations will be given by students in the school's five departments: symphony orchestra and chamber music, composition, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group.

The first student concert will be held at 8:30 p. m. Thursday, July 7, in the Music Shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Dept. I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Copland's "Outdoor Overture," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, with Mr.

Bernstein conducting the [illegible] student conductors the first three selections. The first student chamber music concert will be held at 10 a. m. July 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The public may attend these and other student concerts through contributions to the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

[162]

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,581

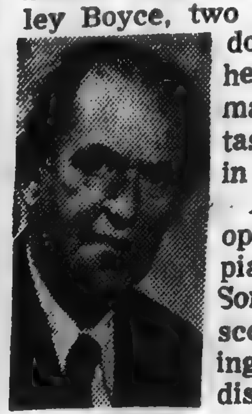
JUN 23 1955

CURTAIN CALL

Bruno Ussher Views Music-Drama Scene

UNUSUAL AND FINE: It is no longer news that the programs of the La Jolla Musical Arts Society combine the fine with the unusual. Not that music director Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff ever sacrifices quality to the exceptional in seeking the rare. His sense of the unusual or rarely performed is manifested again this coming Sunday.

This program (4:30 p.m. this Sunday at La Jolla High School) is devoted to chamber music. Ingolf Dahl and Shibley Boyce, two of the best ensemble pianists, will journey down from Los Angeles to perform the rarely heard Mozart "Andante and Variations" in G-major (K-501) and the Schubert F-Minor "Fantasia," opus 103, a superb work and one written in the last year of a troubled life.



DR. USSHER

Also in the program is the Brahms Sonata opus 38 in E-minor, a romantic work with piano and the Kodaly "Unaccompanied Cello Sonata." All I can foretell for the Kodaly score is that it comes from the foremost living Hungarian composer. Kodaly is a melodist who can be strikingly dramatic and humorous.

The cellist George Neikrug, remembered from his solo playing of the Tschaikowsky "Rococo" Variations with the San Diego Philharmonic under the baton of Werner Janssen. He is a brilliant performer.

Shibley Boyce needs no introduction to local concert-goers. For years official pianist of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, she enjoys a wide reputation for her excellent chamber music artistry and as a sensitive accompanist in song recitals.

Miss Boyce and Dahl will be heard in the enchanting Mozart "Variations" on a theme of his own and in the Schubert work. This composition in free fantasy form is ranked by connoisseurs with the great "Wanderer" Fantasy of Schubert.

Dahl is an exceptionally versatile musician. Besides commanding pianist skills of high order, he enjoys a wide reputation as composer-conductor. He is the director of the U.S.C. symphony. This is his first appearance here.

One of his latest works, "The Tower of St. Barbara," a symphonic legend in four parts, was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky., Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant. It was given four performances last winter.

A year ago, Prof. Dahl received a $1,000 grant from the National Institute of Arts and Letters "in recognition of creative work in music." He believed he was the first composer in this area to receive such a grant.

He has also received awards from the Society for the Publication of American Music, and a Guggenheim fellowship in composition on which he traveled to Europe in 1952-53.

Dahl was born in Germany in 1912 of Swedish parents, but has since become a citizen of the United States. He studied conducting, piano and composition at the conservatories of Cologne and Zurich, and musicology at the University of Zurich and coached and conducted at the Municipal Opera House in Zurich.

As well as teaching composition, advanced conducting and music history and literature, he has composed 15 works including two concertos, a symphony concertante, variations, prelude and fugue, and has arranged and edited music.

His works have been performed in Sweden, New Zealand, Germany, South America, and the United States, and his recordings have been broadcast in many countries. As a conductor he has introduced new works of such composers as Berg, Schoenberg, Ives, Stravinsky and Copland on the West Coast.

In 1949 he was called to the faculty of the Middlebury Composers Conference in Vermont, and in 1952 and 1953 he organized and headed an advanced department of the Tanglewood Study Group of the Berkshire Music Center.

SEATTLE, WASH.
Post-Intelligencer
Circ. D. 187,322 - S. 268,927

JUN 26 1955

Look And Listen:

Music Stars Busier Than Ever In Summer

BY JOHN VOORHEES

Summer used to be the season when musicians took a vacation, rested and worried about how to pay their bills. This is still true in Seattle, but throughout the rest of the United States and Europe, summer soon will be known as the busiest season if one may judge by the number of music festivals.

An article encompassing all the major festivals would fill this entire page, so let's just look at a few of them.

Every village in Europe, it would seem, has a music festival with some, naturally, more important than others. Aix-en-Provence in France is one of the latter. Held July 10-31, there will be performances of "Orpheus," "Mireille," "Marriage of Figaro" and "Cosi fan tutte" which will utilize the talents of such singers as Nan Merriman and Elisabeth Schwarzkopf. Concerts will spotlight pianist Wilhelm Kempff, Jean Casadesus and Leon Fleisher.

The Holland Festival, now in progress and continuing through July, has a novel plan. A central office books performers, then puts them on a circuit to The Hague, Rotterdam, Amsterdam and Scheveningen so citizens needn't travel to the festival, yet see all the attractions.

The Festival will include Britten's new opera, "The Turn of the Screw," conducted by the composer; performances by the Hungarian String Quartet, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, the Concertgebouw Orchestra conducted by Eduard van Beinum, Pierre Monteux, Otto Klemperer and George Szell, operas by a group from Milan's La Scala and ballet by the New York City Ballet.

The Fifth Festival of Berlin, to be held September 17 to October 4, will include Maria Callas in "Lucia di Lammermoor" with Herbert von Karajan conducting; the Berlin Philharmonic conducted by Eugene Ormandy, piano concerts by Wilhelm Backhaus and Wilhelm Kempff, the Kabuki Dancers from Japan as well as plays and art exhibits.

IN THIS country, perhaps the best known festival is the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., running from July 6 to August 14.

The agenda of the Berkshire Festival, designed to honor Beethoven, will include his opera, "Fidelio," the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis" and most of the concertos and overtures.

Conductors include Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson, and Charles Munch. Soloists include Rufolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, Jennie Tourel and the New Music String Quartet.

TURNING TO the West Coast, the Pacific Coast Music Festival will be held September 10-18 in Santa Barbara. Leopold Stokowski will be the guiding light in a series of orchestral concerts which will present much early classical music as well as an all-contemporary concert.

Next door, Los Angeles also has its Symphonies Under the Stars, an eight-week series of concerts at the Hollywood Bowl in July and August. Guest conductors engaged include Eduard van Beinum, Eric Leinsdorf, Izler Solomon, Andre Kostelanetz, Enrique Jorda, Carlos Chavez, Leonard Bernstein and George Solti.

Featured soloists and groups will be Moura Lympany, Rudolf Firkusny, Isaac Stern, Jennie Tourel, Andre Previn, Piatigorsky, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, the First Piano Quartet, William Warfield and Dorothy Kirsten.

Let's hope that Allied Arts, which hopes to someday, somehow start a Pacific Northwest Festival, is busily examining all the literature from the rest of the festivals throughout the world.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,390

JUN 30 1955

Munch To Arrive In Lenox Friday For Festival Work

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will arrive in New York Friday from his home in Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Mass. that afternoon, to his summer residence.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. 1955 marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert at 8:30 p. m. Friday, July 8, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Adel Addison, soprano Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening, July 9, Festival concert, works by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony first violist Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former student of conducting at the Berkshire Music Center (1940 and 1941).

Remained In Boston

Following the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 74th season May 1st, Charles Munch remained in Boston to record with the orchestra, then returned to Europe for his between-seasons vacation. On account of his heavy schedule in the U. S. during the coming season, the orchestra's 75th anniversary, the conductor has spent two months abroad, accepting no engagements during this period.

In France, he visited his family in Strasbourg, spent some time at his own home in Paris, but for the most part has vacationed on the Riviera. There was a five-day interruption of this vacation at the beginning of June, when he made a flying visit to the U. S. to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Music from Boston University. Since last summer at Tanglewood, his book, "I Am A Conductor," has has been published in the U. S. by Oxford University Press, and has been widely reviewed and well received.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p. m., when other speakers are expected to be William Cox, chairman of the Society of Friends of the music school; Richard Burgin, acting assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center; Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the BMC; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," composed for the opening of the school in 1940, will be sung by students, Hugo Ross, head of the choral department, conducting. Tea will be served in the formal gardens. Two trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, C. D. Jackson and Henry B. Cabot, will be present.

Student Concerts

During the summer, more than 25 concerts and demonstrations will be given by students in the school's five departments: symphony orchestra and chamber music, composition, chorus, opera, and Tanglewood Study Group.

The first student concert will be held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday, July 7, in the Music Shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Dept. I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Copland's "Outdoor Overture," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," and Dvorak's Symphony No. 2, with Mr.

Bernstein conducting the, [illegible] student conductors the first three selections. The first student chamber music concert will be held at 10 a. m. July 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The public may attend these and other student concerts through contributions to the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Festival Begins This Week

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by ~~Music Director~~ Charles Munch. For the 16th Summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14.

The Festival will begin Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Jsesph de Pasquale, as soloist, will be conducted by Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, Charles Munch will present Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

7 1955

MEMBRINO TO COVER TANGLEWOOD MUSIC

Supervisor of Music Here to Give Weekly Resumes

George E. Membrino, supervisor of music in the local public schools for the past three years, and who resigned at the end of the current term to accept a post in Longmeadow, will cover the music programs at Tanglewood, Lenox, this season for the Berkshire Courier.

Mr. Membrino, leader of the Berkshire Symphonette musical group, has a fine background in music, in both the classical and popular. He will give a review of the concerts presented at Tanglewood.

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 2 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Wed, July 6—Sun, Aug 14. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Wed, July 6—Chamber Music. Kroll String Quartet. C minor, Op. 18, No. 4; F minor, Op. 95; C sharp minor, Op. 131. Fri, July 8—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Sinfonia from "Easter" Oratorio and Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Mozart, "Prague" Symphony (K. 504). Sat, July 9—Thor Johnson cond. Joseph De Pasquale, violist. Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn, Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin & Cello; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun, July 10—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Mass in B minor, with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists.

GUGGENHEIM [illegible] CONCERTS—Thru Aug [illegible] Edwin Franko Goldman, [illegible] Richard Franko Goldman, associate [illegible] Wed, Fri, Central Park M[illegible] Thurs, Sat, Prospect Park, B'klyn. [illegible]

---

r Music vo series
ly 3 to , cham-rmances.
nell has er of the ear. . . .
Confer-r will be Benning-and pro-rticipate f having recorded. and over ckefeller n matchm other e Berk-glewood, priations
$125,000. ppointed
Orches-
. Henry
ph Weiss
e $1,000
the Na-
Letters
he Liver-rganized ll-known unces an iven on ue Play-ring ex-
as. . . .
on, con-aged sot for the Carmel, in audi-
a Circle iting to Circle,
74th St., r Albert
e Band Leader
May 1, lelmann,
ires. . . .

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 3 1955

Berkshire Festival Opening This Week

By TUCKER KEISER

As soon as the Berkshire Festival opens, the Boston Symphony gets down to the serious business of music making at once. Students arrive today to study at the Music Center, the Kroll Quartet gives the first concert Wednesday night, and a pocket edition of the B.S.O., made up primarily of first chair members who teach in the school, performs its first concert Friday evening in the theatre.

Three performances during the first and second week ends and held in the smaller, rustic theatre is commonly called "Bach-Mozart" concerts, although by no means devoted exclusively to Bach and Mozart. These chamber orchestra events draw increasingly larger crowds each year so that they would undoubtedly be scheduled for the vaster Shed were it not aesthetically necessary to preserve the intimate feeling provided by the smalled auditorium. The smallest audience I have seen there would pack Symphony Hall.

In addition to 18 appearances of the full Symphony there will be 25 student performances and six Wednesday evenings of chamber music. The Wednesday evening musicales include such favorites as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Student performances will include orchestral concerts under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, operatic scenes and premieres under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, and the chorus under the baton of Hugh Ross.

World Premiere

In the operatic department, Mr. Goldovsky never fails to provide considerable excitement. Louis Mennini's new opera, "The Rope," based on a one-act play by Eugene O'Neill, will receive its world premiere. The opera was the first tangible result of a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitsky Music Foundation, and was begun at Tanglewood in the summer of 1953 when the composer was in residence. Mr. Mennini worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts from choice of text and arrangement of libretto to scoring and scenic investiture.

On the same program, August 8 and 9, Mozart's "Zaide" (K. 344) will receive its first American performance. This version of a work left unfinished by the composer was prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

Other operatic offerings include "Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher, who will teach composition at Tanglewood this summer, "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Darius Milhaud, and scenes from Berlioz' "The Trojans".

The choice of a Beethoven Festival is a somewhat peculiar one for Mr. Munch, whose forays into the domain of this great composer have been something less than felicitous. However, it is a very realistic approach to the solution of a pressing financial problem.

Ever since the Shed was built there has been a large dead spot in the centre, where, unfortunately, the most generous donors to the Bershire Centre have their seats. Both sides, far front, and far back are good listening areas, but this central area is in the acoustical doldrums, unstirred by the aural agitation all about.

This year, at considerable expense, improvements have been made and Mr. Munch scheduled major Beethoven works to help defray that expense. Beethoven is a top box-office draw and the gate receipts should be the greatest yet at Tanglewood, assuming, of course, that the weatherman doesn't wetblanket all the enthusiasm.

At the last count, over two weeks ago, subscriptions already exceeds those of 1954, which set all-time high.

Lighter Music

The Berkshire vacationer who is wearing his hair shorter this season can enjoy a folk-music festival on Tuesday evenings and Saturday afternoons, and a jazz festival on Sunday evenings, in the town of Lenox, or medieval, renaissance and baroque music by the Pro Musica Antiqua in nearby Stockbridge on Saturday evenings from Aug. 13 to Sept. 3.

During July and August the little town of Lenox becomes the most active music centre in the Western Hemisphere. For the diversity of attractions and quality of performance no single European festival can match it.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 2 1955

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Music

Tanglewood activities will get under way Sunday afternoon with opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center at the Theater-Concert Hall. Charles Munch, director of the center will be among speakers who are expected to include Richard Burgin, acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz, dean William Cox, chairman of the center's Society of Friends; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Berkshire Festival's series of 24 concerts will begin Wednesday evening with a Beethoven program played by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Mr. Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra in a program of Bach, Stravinsky, and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as flute soloist.

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, will take the baton Saturday evening for a chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn, and Hindemith. Joseph de Pasquale will be viola soloist. On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists including Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 9 1955

Abresch

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, will be guest conductor at the Berkshire Festival concert tonight.

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 6 [illegible]

Westport Playhouse

Shelley Winters, in a breezy, bantering comedy called "Wedding Breakfast," will open as the Westport Country Playhouse Monday night, for a week's engagement, with matinees on Wednesday and Friday at 2:40 p. m.

This comedy by Theodore Reeves, about the warm-hearted love spats of two New York couples with budget and career problems, features Anthony Franciosa, Virginia Vincent and Martin Balsam. The production has been directed by Frank Corsaro, in a setting by Marvin Reiss, Playhouse scenic designer.

"Wedding Breakfast" is an urban folk-tale about two career-girl sisters and the men they are hoping to make their grooms. Of the two girls whose romances are related in the play, one spends her days at a perfume-counter and stands in awe of her sister who has a higher-status job as a researcher on Time magazine. Out of sympathy for her when she is jilted by a sweetheart, the salesgirl and her contentedly doting fiance conspire to find her a new suitor.

Now playing for the last times this week, with a matinee Friday at 2:40 p. m., is Terry Moore, in a prior-to-Broadway modern comedy about Hollywood, "Star Light, Star Bright," by S. K. Lauren and Gladys Lehman. "Star Light, Star Bright" has been directed by John C. Wilson.

Tanglewood

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday: Thor Johnson conducting Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 8, No. 12; Haydn's Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony in B flat, No. 98. On Sunday Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, [illegible]. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friends' Society. will be mailed on request. For the convenience of Festival patrons, the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., will supply a list of hotel, motel, or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires and, through the cooperation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations, will endeaver tc secure reservations.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 252,998

JUL

JENNIE TOUREL, famous French soprano, who returns to Tanglewood as soloist in the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein conducts with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony on Friday night in the Theater-Concert Hall in Lenox, Mass.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 1955

Gus Manos

Charles Munch conducts a rehearsal in the Berkshires. A chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians will present a program in the Theater-Concert Hall Friday evening, July

---

NEW YOR
DAILY N
2,092,455

JUL 6

ewood oll String ks by Bee 1955 Berksh the Tangl nox, Mass.

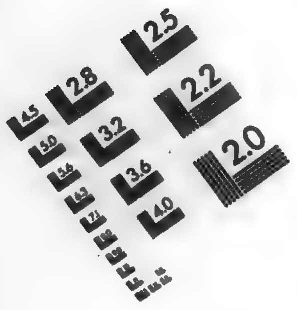
[163]

REDUCTION
RATIO
16x

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

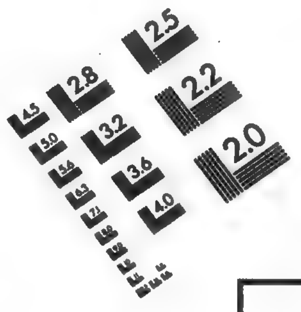
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



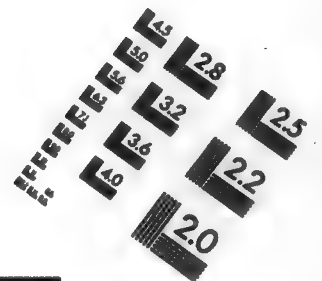
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

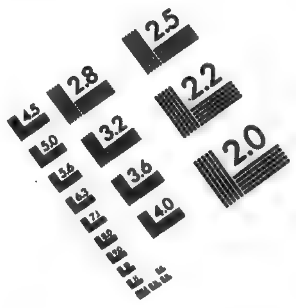
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



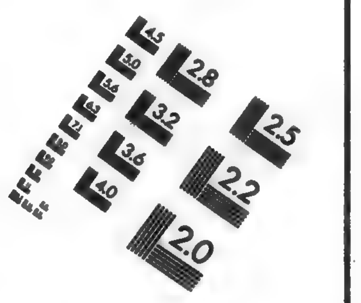
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0



2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0

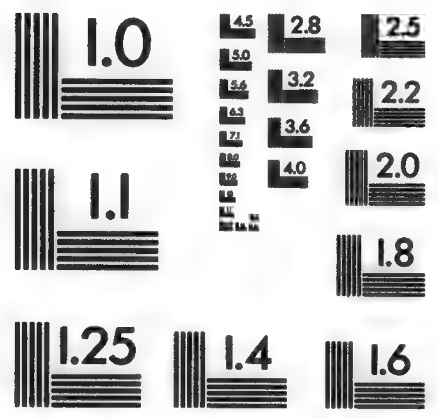


2.8
2.5
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
2.8
2.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

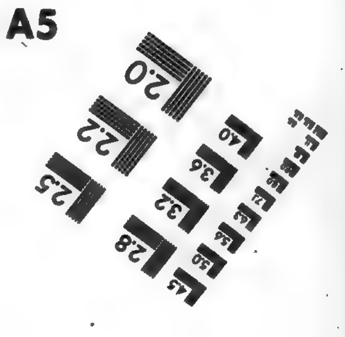
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

A5

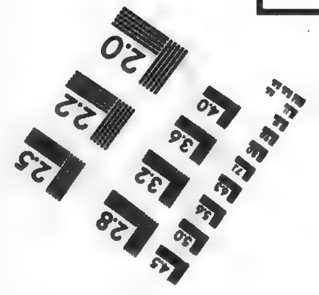


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
4.5

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3

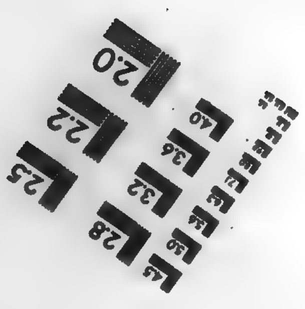


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8

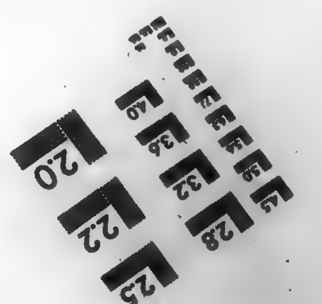
PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8



4.0
2.0
3.6
3.2
2.2
2.8
2.5

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
4.5 mm
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
3.5 mm
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
3.0 mm
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

[164]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
[illegible] 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 6 1955

Tanglewood Opens

The Kroll String Quartet, in three works by Beethoven, will open the 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at the Tanglewood Theatre, Lenox, Mass.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 9 1955

Second Chamber Concert at Lenox

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B minor; Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante in B flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as [illegible] and Haydn's Symphony [illegible] in B flat.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

Weekend for Music Lovers

Astor Concert Tours of 1846 Broadway [illegible] a new weekend trip aimed primarily at music lovers. Priced from [illegible], the tour's destination is the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Concerts begin next Friday and will continue for six weekends. In addition to music under the stars by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, music lovers can enjoy the [illegible]'s Pillow dance festival, swimming in [illegible] Lake, playing tennis and golf, and horseback riding [illegible]

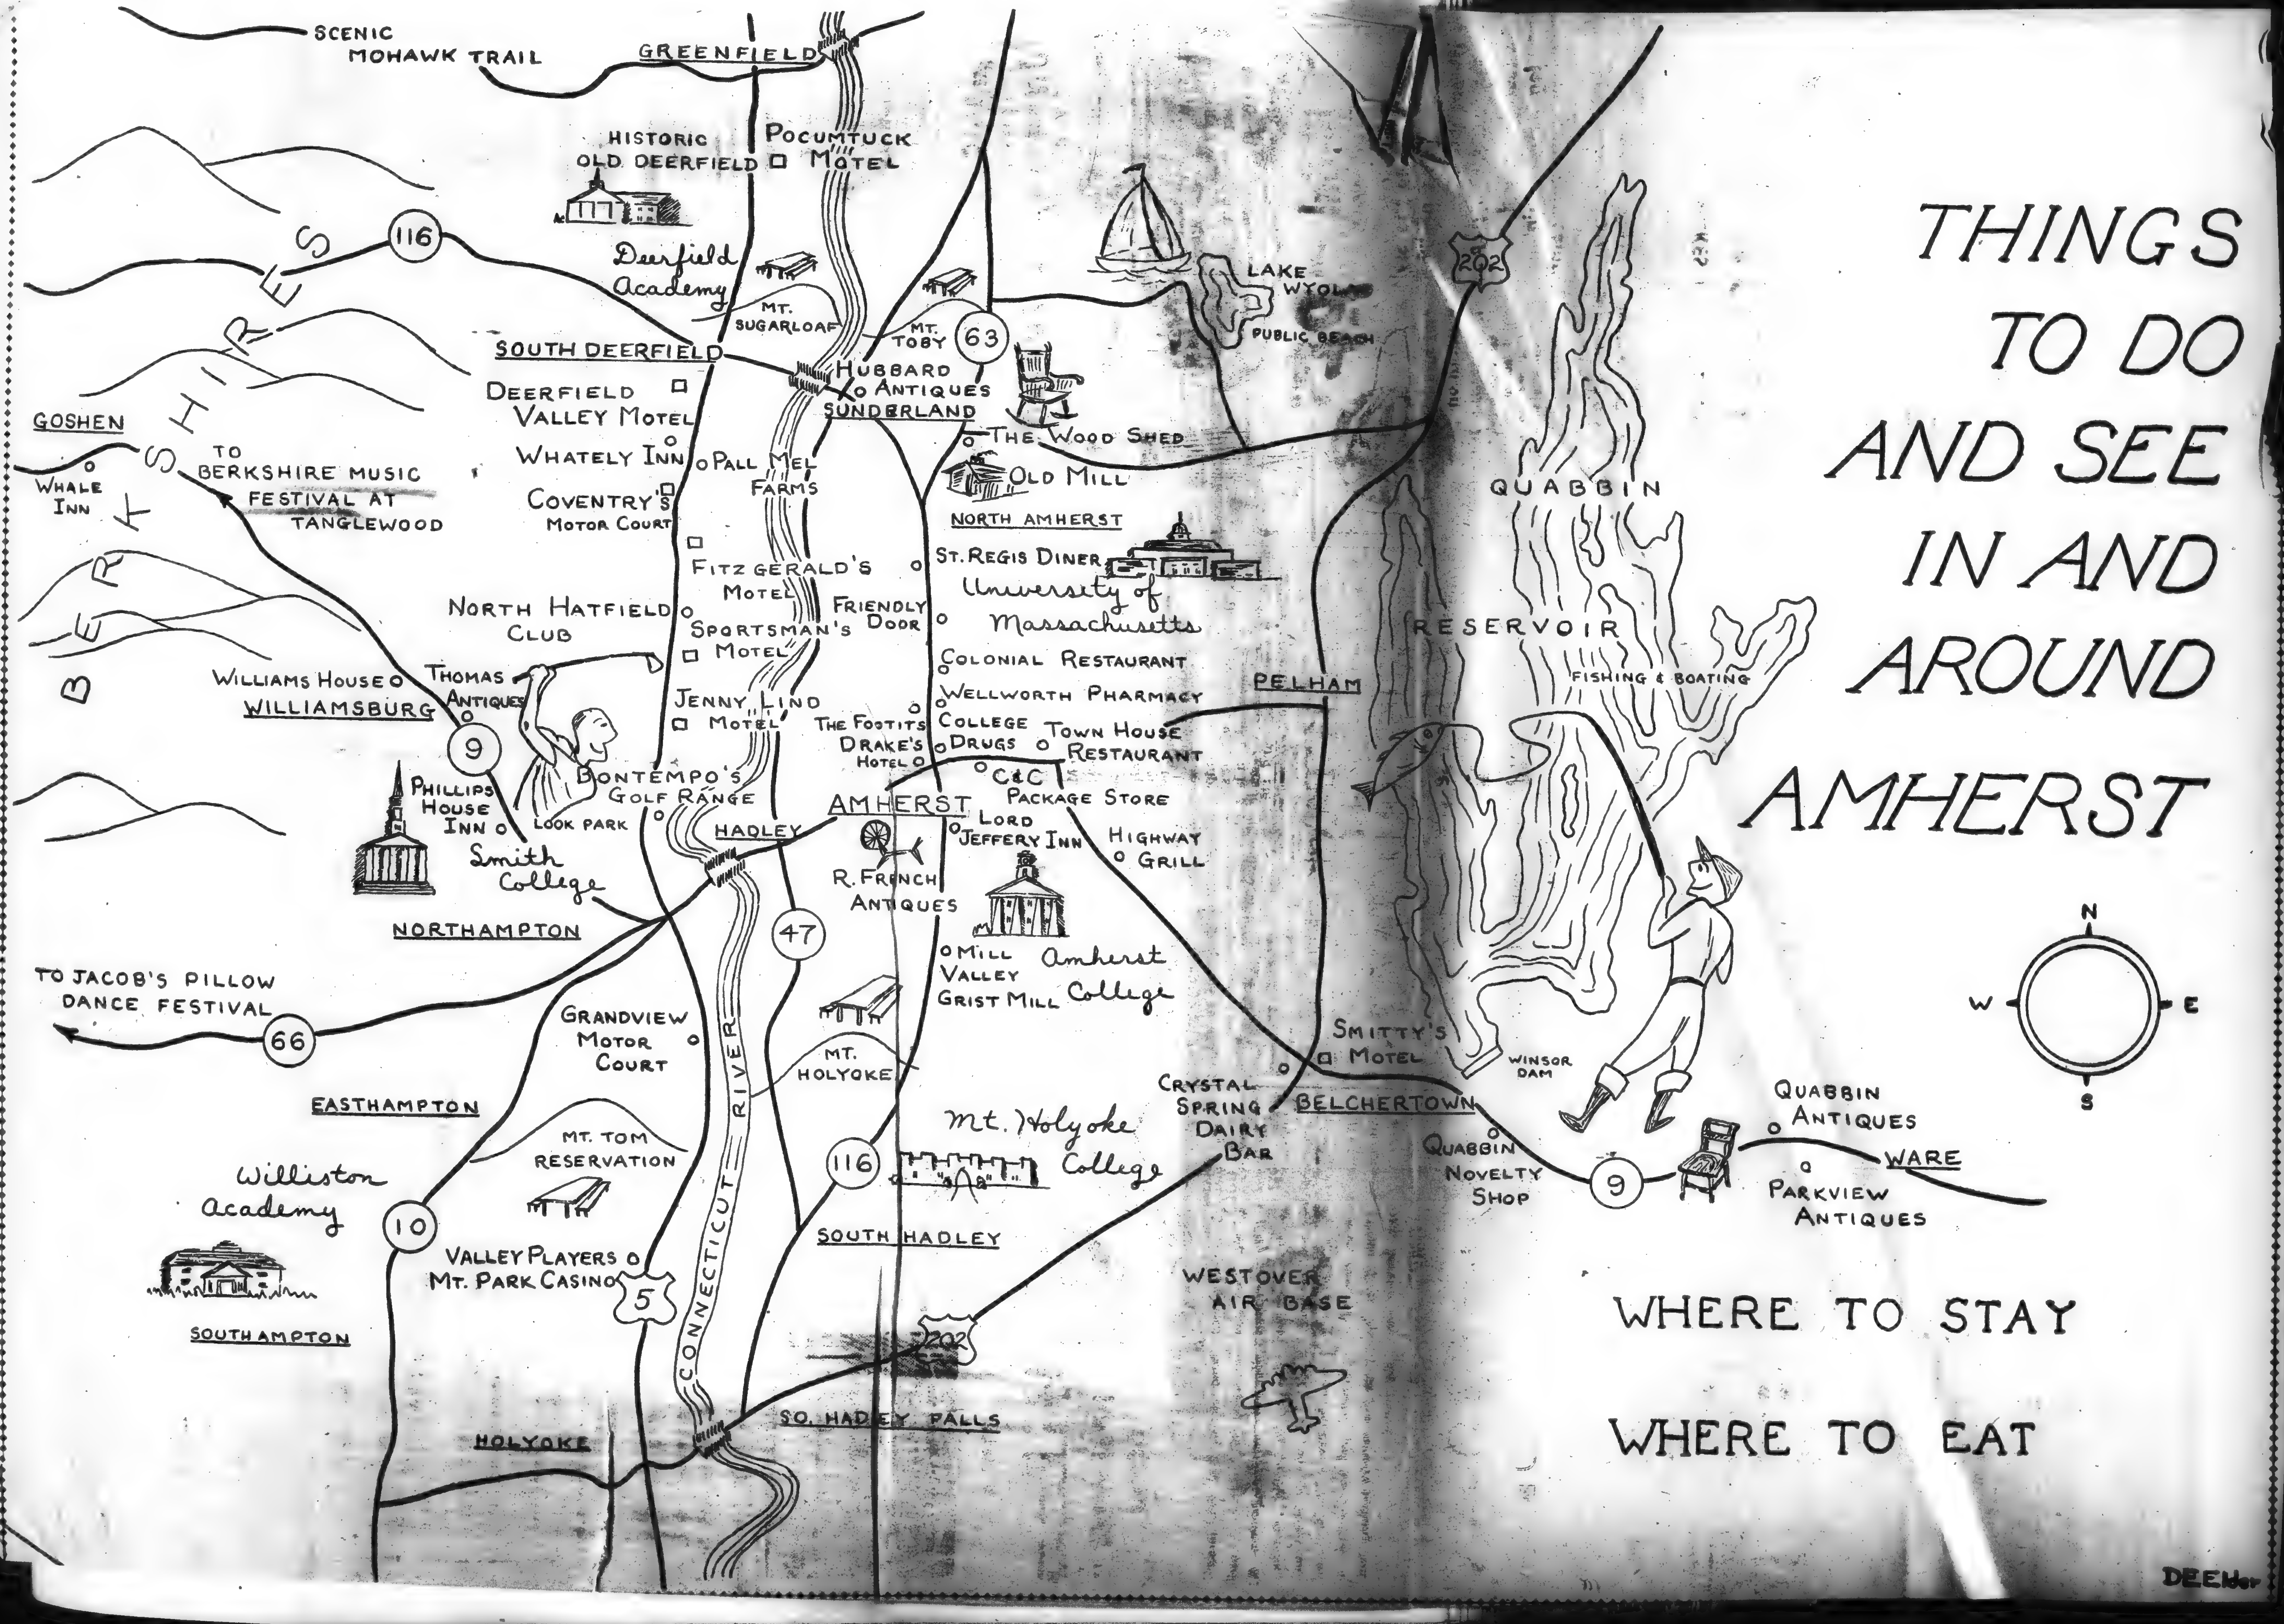
NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

Busy Berkshires

The annual Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Wednesday night with the Kroll String Quartet in an all-Beethoven concert. Friday night, Charles Munch conducts a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony men in Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. Saturday night, Thor Johnson leads the same group in Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. . . . The Berkshire Folk-Music Festival opens Tuesday at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, Mass., and will continue through Aug. 13. . . . Jimmy Rushing, Myra Johnson, Sammy Price and Brownie McGhee sing city and country blues tonight at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

THINGS TO DO AND SEE IN AND AROUND AMHERST



SCENIC MOHAWK TRAIL
GREENFIELD
HISTORIC OLD DEERFIELD
POCUMTUCK MOTEL
116 Deerfield Academy
MT. SUGARLOAF
SOUTH DEERFIELD
MT. TOBY
63
LAKE WYOLA
PUBLIC BEACH
202
BERKSHIRES
HUBBARD ANTIQUES
SUNDERLAND
DEERFIELD VALLEY MOTEL
GOSHEN
WHALE INN
TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL AT TANGLEWOOD
WHATELY INN
PALL MEL FARMS
THE WOOD SHED
OLD MILL
COVENTRY'S MOTOR COURT
NORTH AMHERST
QUABBIN
FITZGERALD'S MOTEL
ST. REGIS DINER
University of Massachusetts
NORTH HATFIELD CLUB
FRIENDLY DOOR
SPORTSMAN'S MOTEL
RESERVOIR
COLONIAL RESTAURANT
FISHING & BOATING
WILLIAMS HOUSE
WILLIAMSBURG
THOMAS ANTIQUES
JENNY LIND MOTEL
WELLWORTH PHARMACY
PELHAM
9
THE FOOTITS
DRAKE'S HOTEL
COLLEGE DRUGS
TOWN HOUSE RESTAURANT
PHILLIPS HOUSE INN
BONTEMPO'S GOLF RANGE
LOOK PARK
C&C PACKAGE STORE
AMHERST
LORD JEFFERY INN
HIGHWAY GRILL
HADLEY
Smith College
R. FRENCH ANTIQUES
NORTHAMPTON
47
N
W
E
S
MILL VALLEY GRIST MILL
Amherst College
TO JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL
66
GRANDVIEW MOTOR COURT
SMITTY'S MOTEL
WINSOR DAM
MT. HOLYOKE
CRYSTAL SPRING DAIRY BAR
BELCHERTOWN
QUABBIN ANTIQUES
EASTHAMPTON
Mt. Holyoke College
QUABBIN NOVELTY SHOP
WARE
MT. TOM RESERVATION
116
9
PARKVIEW ANTIQUES
Williston Academy
10 CONNECTICUT RIVER
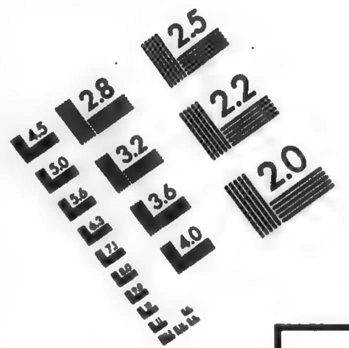
VALLEY PLAYERS
MT. PARK CASINO
5
SOUTH HADLEY
WESTOVER AIR BASE
SOUTHAMPTON
202
SO. HADLEY FALLS
HOLYOKE
DEElder

WHERE TO STAY

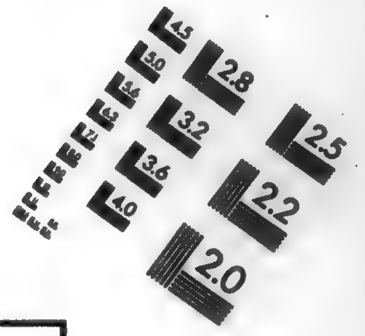
WHERE TO EAT

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

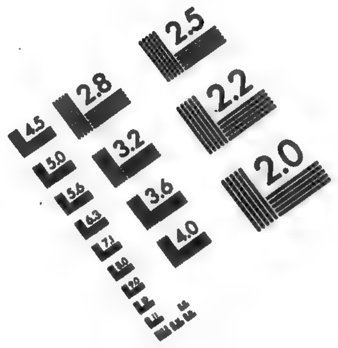
PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



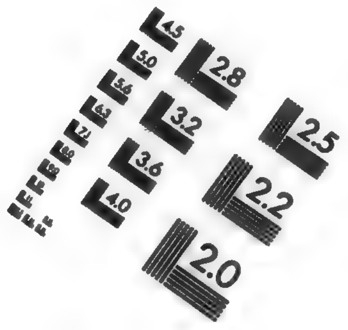
2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0



4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0



2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0

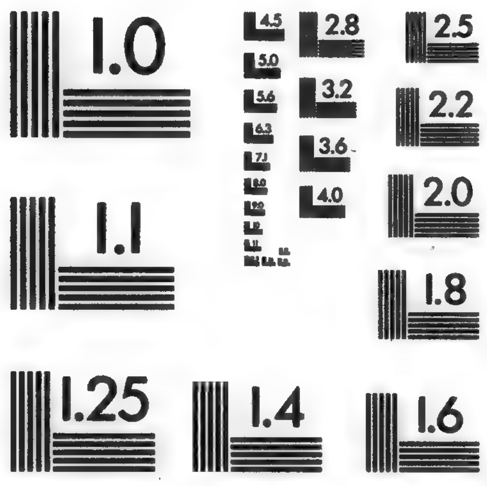


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
2.5
3.6
2.2
4.0
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

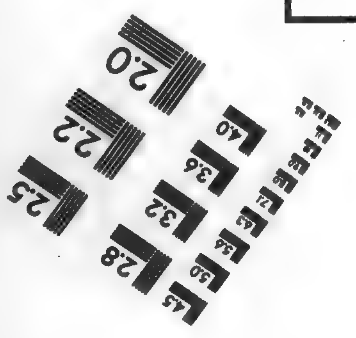
A5

2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

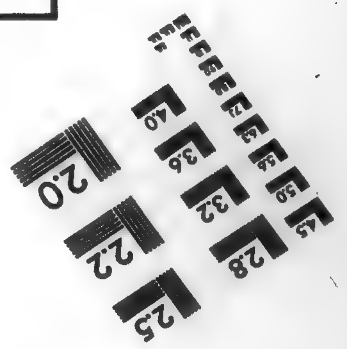
4.0
3.6
2.0
5.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
4.5
2.5

A4

A3



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5



4.0
3.6
2.0
5.0
3.2
2.2
2.8
4.5
2.5

PRECISIONSM RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[164]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 6 1955

Tanglewood Opens

The Kroll String Quartet, in three works by Beethoven, will open the 1955 Berkshire Festival tonight at the Tanglewood Theatre in Lenox, Mass.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 9 1955

Second Chamber Concert at Lenox

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B minor; Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante in B flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale [illegible] Haydn's Symphony [illegible]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

Weekend for Music Lovers

Astor Concert Tours of 1846 Broadway [illegible] with a new weekend trip aimed primarily at music lovers. Priced from [illegible] the tour's destination is the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Concerts begin next Friday and will continue for six weekends. In addition to music under the stars by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, music lovers can enjoy the Jacob's Pillow dance festival, swimming in [illegible] Lake, playing tennis [illegible] golf, and horseback riding [illegible]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

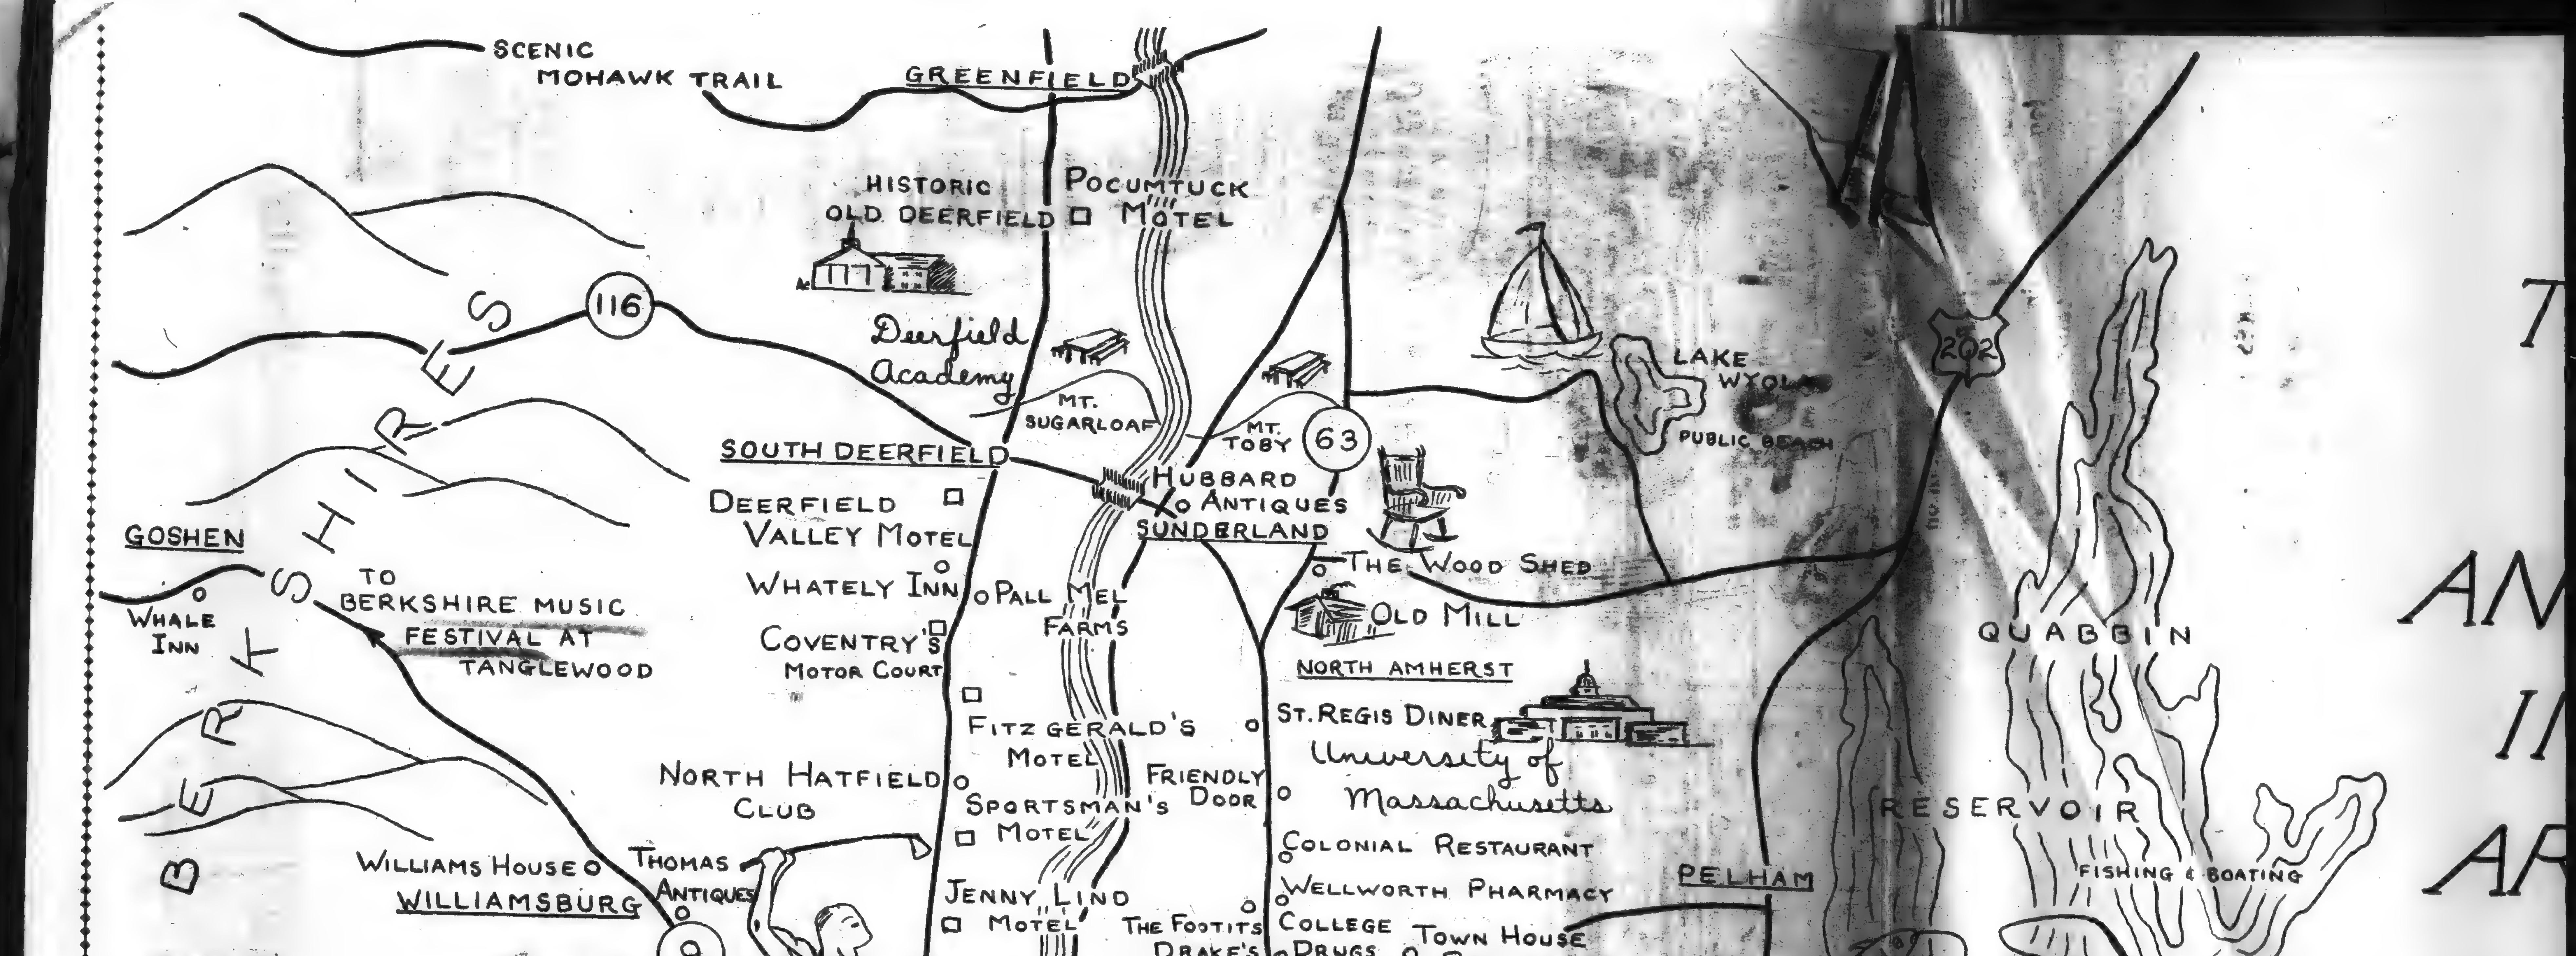
Busy Berkshires

The annual Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Wednesday night with the Kroll String Quartet in an all-Beethoven concert. Friday night, Charles Munch conducts a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony men in Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. Saturday night, Thor Johnson leads the same group in Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. . . . The Berkshire Folk-Music Festival opens Tuesday at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, Mass., and will continue through Aug. 13. . . . Jimmy Rushing, Myra Johnson, Sammy Price and Brownie McGhee sing city and country blues tonight at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Journal
AMHERST, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,400

JUL 7 1955



SCENIC MOHAWK TRAIL
GREENFIELD
HISTORIC OLD DEERFIELD
POCUMTUCK MOTEL
116 Deerfield Academy
MT. SUGARLOAF
SOUTH DEERFIELD
MT. TOBY
63
LAKE WYOLA
PUBLIC BEACH
202
BERKSHIRES
GOSHEN
WHALE INN
TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL AT TANGLEWOOD
DEERFIELD VALLEY MOTEL
WHATELY INN
PALL MEL FARMS
COVENTRY'S MOTOR COURT
HUBBARD ANTIQUES
SUNDERLAND
THE WOOD SHED
OLD MILL
NORTH AMHERST
QUABBIN
FITZGERALD'S MOTEL
NORTH HATFIELD CLUB
SPORTSMAN'S MOTEL
ST. REGIS DINER
FRIENDLY DOOR
University of Massachusetts
RESERVOIR
FISHING & BOATING
WILLIAMS HOUSE
WILLIAMSBURG
THOMAS ANTIQUES
JENNY LIND MOTEL
THE FOOTITS
DRAKE'S HOTEL
COLONIAL RESTAURANT
WELLWORTH PHARMACY
COLLEGE DRUGS
TOWN HOUSE RESTAURANT
PELHAM
9
PHILLIPS HOUSE INN
BONTEMPO'S GOLF RANGE
LOOK PARK
Smith College
HADLEY
AMHERST
C&C PACKAGE STORE
LORD JEFFERY INN
HIGHWAY GRILL
R. FRENCH ANTIQUES
NORTHAMPTON
47 MILL VALLEY GRIST MILL
Amherst College
TO JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL
66
GRANDVIEW MOTOR COURT
MT. HOLYOKE
SMITTY'S MOTEL
CRYSTAL SPRING DAIRY BAR
WINSOR DAM
BELCHERTOWN
QUABBIN ANTIQUES
EASTHAMPTON
MT. TOM RESERVATION
Mt. Holyoke College
QUABBIN NOVELTY SHOP
9
WARE
PARKVIEW ANTIQUES
Williston Academy
116
10
CONNECTICUT RIVER
VALLEY PLAYERS MT. PARK CASINO
SOUTH HADLEY
5
WESTOVER AIR BASE
SOUTHAMPTON
202
HOLYOKE
SO. HADLEY FALLS
T
AN IN AR
AMH
WHERE TO S
WHERE TO E

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 9 1955

Second Chamber Concert at Lenox

The second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B minor; Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante in B flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist, and Haydn's Symphony No. [illegible] in B flat.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

Weekend for Music Lovers

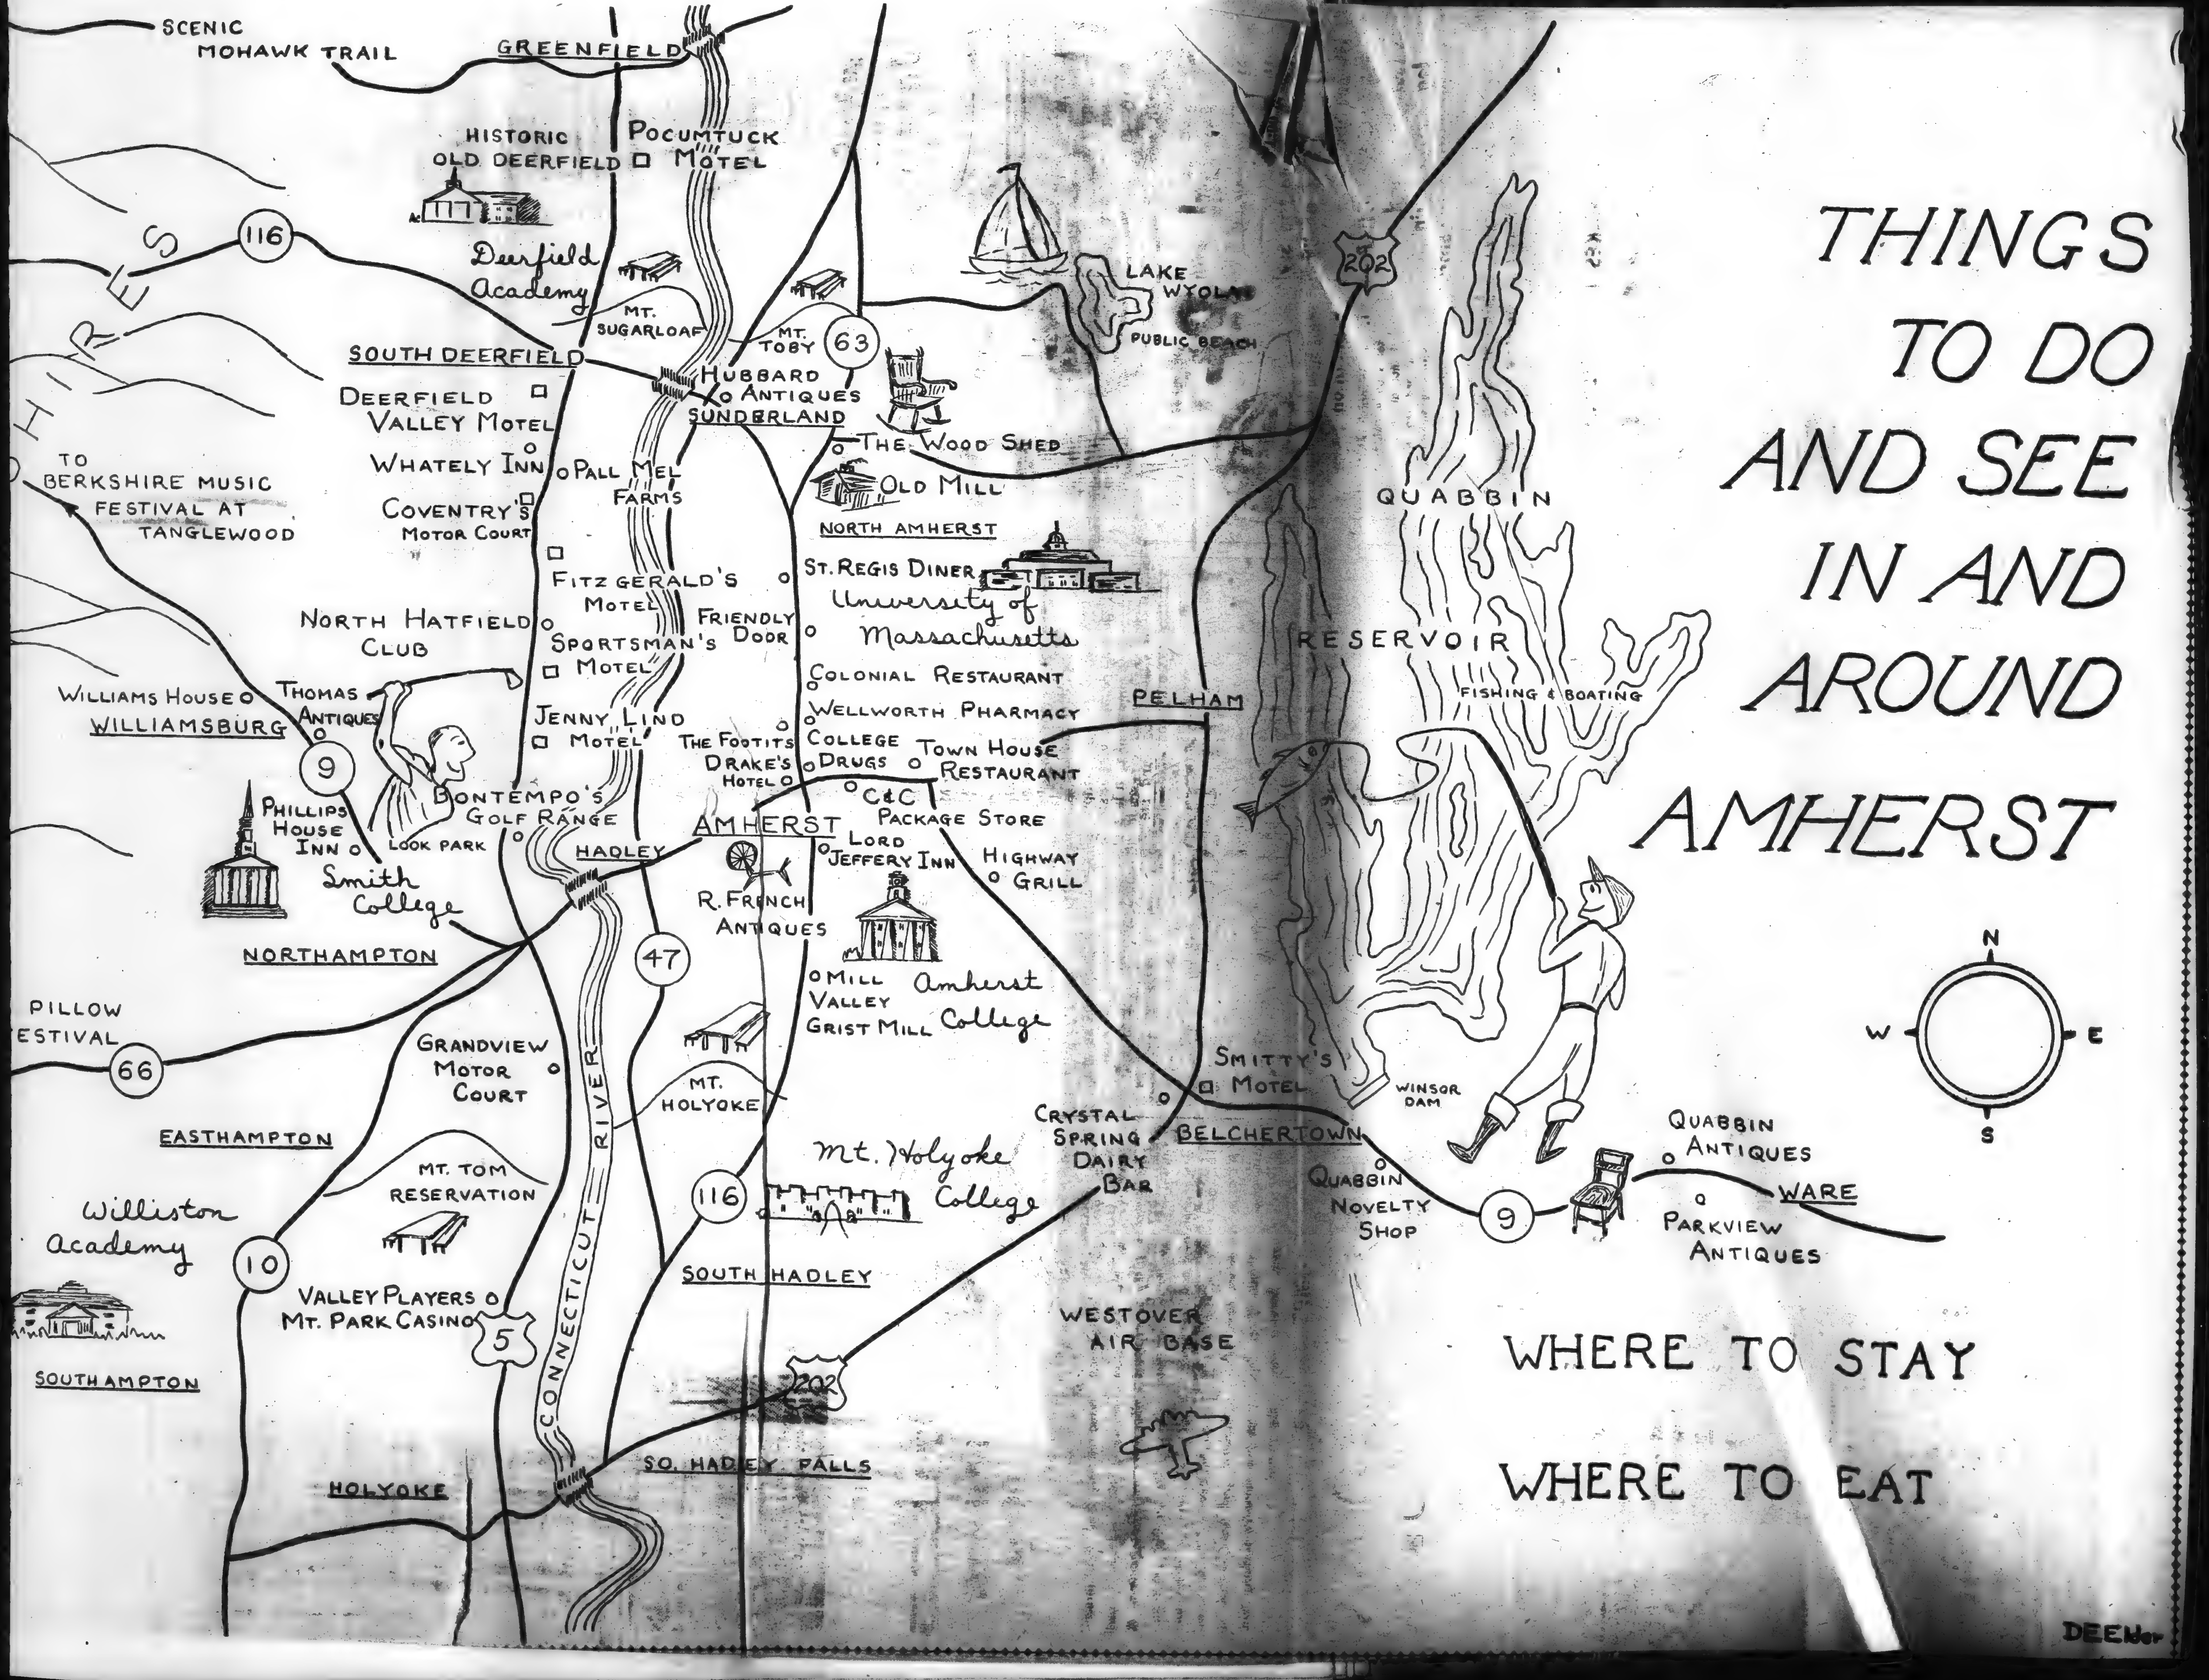
Astor Concert Tours of 1846 Broadway [illegible] with a new weekend trip aimed primarily at [illegible]. Priced from [illegible], the tour's destination is the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Concerts begin next Friday and will continue for six weekends. In addition to music under the stars by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, music lovers can enjoy the Jacob's Pillow dance festival, swimming in [illegible] Lake, playing tennis and golf, and horseback riding.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 3 1955

Busy Berkshires

The annual Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Wednesday night with the Kroll String Quartet in an all-Beethoven concert. Friday night, Charles Munch conducts a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony men in Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart. Saturday night, Thor Johnson leads the same group in Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. . . . The Berkshire Folk-Music Festival opens Tuesday at Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, Mass., and will continue through Aug. 13. . . . Jimmy Rushing, Myra Johnson, Sammy Price and Brownie McGhee sing city and country blues tonight at the Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.



THINGS TO DO AND SEE IN AND AROUND AMHERST

WHERE TO STAY

WHERE TO EAT

SCENIC MOHAWK TRAIL
GREENFIELD
HISTORIC OLD DEERFIELD
POCUMTUCK MOTEL
116 Deerfield Academy
MT. SUGARLOAF
MT. TOBY
63
LAKE WYOLA
PUBLIC BEACH
202
SOUTH DEERFIELD
HUBBARD ANTIQUES
SUNDERLAND
DEERFIELD VALLEY MOTEL
THE WOOD SHED
WHATELY INN
PALL MEL FARMS
OLD MILL
TO BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL AT TANGLEWOOD
COVENTRY'S MOTOR COURT
NORTH AMHERST
QUABBIN
ST. REGIS DINER
University of Massachusetts
FITZGERALD'S MOTEL
FRIENDLY DOOR
NORTH HATFIELD CLUB
SPORTSMAN'S MOTEL
COLONIAL RESTAURANT
RESERVOIR
WILLIAMS HOUSE
THOMAS ANTIQUES
WILLIAMSBURG
WELLWORTH PHARMACY
PELHAM
FISHING & BOATING
JENNY LIND MOTEL
THE FOOTITS
DRAKE'S HOTEL
COLLEGE DRUGS
TOWN HOUSE RESTAURANT
9
PHILLIPS HOUSE INN
BONTEMPO'S GOLF RANGE
C&C PACKAGE STORE
LOOK PARK
AMHERST
LORD JEFFERY INN
HIGHWAY GRILL
Smith College
HADLEY
R. FRENCH ANTIQUES
NORTHAMPTON
47 MILL VALLEY GRIST MILL
Amherst College
N
W
E
S
PILLOW FESTIVAL
66
GRANDVIEW MOTOR COURT
MT. HOLYOKE
SMITTY'S MOTEL
WINSOR DAM
CRYSTAL SPRING DAIRY BAR
BELCHERTOWN
QUABBIN ANTIQUES
EASTHAMPTON
MT. TOM RESERVATION
Mt. Holyoke College
QUABBIN NOVELTY SHOP
WARE
9
PARKVIEW ANTIQUES
Williston Academy
116
10
VALLEY PLAYERS
MT. PARK CASINO
SOUTH HADLEY
5
WESTOVER AIR BASE
SOUTHAMPTON
CONNECTICUT RIVER
202
HOLYOKE
SO. HADLEY FALLS
DEENer

The Jewish Herald
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Weekly
Circ. 11,979

JUL 8 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts Now Open

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14. 047

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts began on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13, 15, 16, and 17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 P. M., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 P. M.

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 10 1955

First Report of New Musical Experiment

By TUCKER KEISER

When Serge Koussevitzky retired and the Boston Symphony ceased championing [illegible] composers, neither the New York Philharmonic nor the Philadelphia Orchestra moved into the gap created by this abdication; the power and the glory went to the Louisville.

Two years ago the culture conscious Mayor of that city received a $400,000 grant to embark on the most ambitious commissioning program yet. Composers get $1500 for each composition premiered by the Louisville Orchestra and given two succeeding performances. After the third performance the work is recorded by Columbia Records and issued on a subscription basis. These records cannot be bought separately in the regular record stores but are sold as a unit.

While new music sponsored during the quarter century Koussevitzky regime now lives on primarily in memory, old program books, and occasional repetitions, the "Louisville Experiment" is indelibly preserved on LPs.

Up to the present time Columbia has sent to music critics and subscribers 19 works in this series. Fortunately they are at least equal to any other 19 new works performed during that period. There are potboilers, and there are pieces which may receive only one or two more performances by friends of the composers before they sink rightfully into oblivion, but there are three or four of considerable merit.

Two pieces which tower above mediocrity are Peter Mennin's Symphony No. 6 and Alan Hovhaness' Concerto No. 7 for Orchestra.

Still Unfamiliar

Mr. Mennin's music is largely unfamiliar to us here in Boston though quite well known in other orchestral circles as he is one of our really gifted younger composers. We have heard only a single work of his in Symphony Hall.

Symphony No. 6 is a serious piece, demanding the closest attention from the listener and utterly devoid of slick trappings designed for immediate appeal. However, it is the most rewarding work of the 19, revealing its meaning bit by bit on repeated hearings. The first impression is one of great density and even turgidity, yet on the second and third replayings one is struck by the inevitibality of the contrapuntal lines. The apparent density is seen to be a remarkable terraced series of tonal planes.

The Hovhaness Concerto is diametrically opposite to the Mennin in every respect. The composer, whose style welds Near Eastern scales to Western forms, creates the happiest sort of music with the simplest devices. Single instruments tracing intricate arabesques simultaneously over free flowing rhthymic pulsations can make vivid emotional impressions.

Both Hovhaness and Mennin are composers with something to say and who know precisely to say it.

Another piece I liked was the Sinfonietta Flamenca by Carlos Surinach, an unpretentious little piece particularly rich in its Spanish color and alternating nervous intensity with lyric meditation.

Opera was not overlooked in the commissioning process. The only one so far released is Peggy Glanville-Hicks' "The Transposed Heads," based on a novel by Thomas Mann.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 252,998

JUL 10 1955

Second Berkshire Festival Week

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, July 17.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 11 1955

The Beaux Arts Trio will be heard in three Beethoven trios at Tanglewood Wednesday evening. The players are Daniel Guilet, violin; Menahem Pressler, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUL 7 1955

1955 Music Festival Is Now in Progress

Beethoven Program Opened Season Last Night

Tomorrow [illegible] Charles Munch Will Conduct Chamber Orchestra In Selections From Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart.—Boston Symphony Opens Full Concerts July 22.

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood in Lenox of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts started last evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. Tomorrow evening Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemuth, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violinist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center. On Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13, 15, 16, 17, will all be given in the intimate 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts withing the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two week-ends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-August 14, when 12 week-end concerts are held in the 6000-seat Music Shed.

In 1954, Charles Munch's fourth summer with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over eastern United States and Canada, totaled an attendance of 135,775 to total paid admissions of $330,033. Chamber music concerts inaugurated last summer averaged 1358 persons; chamber orchestra programs drew an average of 2275, both series attracting considerably more persons than the capacity of the 1200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall. An average crowd of 9197, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, came to the final programs.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Mr. Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

The first week's Berkshire Festival programs include Tanglewood premieres of the following: Bach: Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio and Stravinsky: "Orpheus" (Friday, July 8); Hindemith; "Der Schwanendreher" and Haydn; Symphony in B flat, No. 98 (Saturday, July 9).

SPRI
C
JU

CHAMBER M SERIES OP AT TANGL

First of Six P
Tonight; M
Condu

The first of six chestra programs b
the Boston Symph conducted by Charles Munch, w
the Berkshire Fest
the Theater-Concer glewood, Lenox, at
This season the this series, know
the "Bach-Mozart be given in the ends of the Festi grams on Frida evenings and S
In First A
Tonight Mr. Mu appearance on podium this duct two works
fonia from the (first performan wood) and the for Flute and Stravinsky's
"Orpheus" (ne and Mozart's Sy
D Major, the Symphony. Solo
Suite will be Do er, first flutist phony Orches member of the Center.
Saturday
ond chamber will be given as guest conduc music director Symphony Or first student at the Berksh and he attended 1940 and 1941 as pil of the late Se founder of the Work by
The program will Concerto Grosso N
nor; the Sinfonia
B Flat with oboe, and cello, by Hayd
Concerto for violi
"Der Schwanend
seph de Pasquale, ist; and Haydn's
98 in B Flat. Both Concerto and the ny will be receiv
Tanglewood perfor
Sunday afterno
Munch will ret
Bach's Mass in B
Harvard Glee Cl
Choral Society trai lace Woodworth, vocal soloists com
Addison, soprano;
leff, contralto; Jo tenor; and Donald These same for the B Minor Mass
April during the season of the Bos
Orchestra in a conce broadcast in part during the orchestra's urday evening series o
tional Broadcasting Co
Remaining tickets fo concerts as well as ones by the Boston Sym chestra during the Berk tival, which concludes may be obtained at the wood box office, telepho
600. In case of rain the will be held in the Mu which will also seat the dience.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 8 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC SERIES OPENING AT TANGLEWOOD

First of Six Programs Set Tonight; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m.

This season the six concerts in this series, known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," will be given in the first two week ends of the Festival, with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

In First Appearance

Tonight Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings along with Stravinsky's music for the ballet, "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D Major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony. Soloist in the Bach Suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Saturday night at 8:30 the second chamber orchestra concert will be given with Thor Johnson as guest conductor. Mr. Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the center.

Work by Handel

The program will be Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with oboe, bassoon, violin and cello, by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for viola and orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale, viola, as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony will be receiving their first Tanglewood performances.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Mr. Munch will return to conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and a quartet of vocal soloists comprised of Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

These same forces performed the B Minor Mass in Boston last April during the regular winter season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert which was broadcast in part coast-to-coast during the orchestra's regular Saturday evening series over the National Broadcasting Co.

Remaining tickets for all these concerts as well as succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, telephone Lenox 500. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
ITEM
Circ. D. 111,942 - S. 113,799

JUN 27 1955

Lafitte Next? — Lagniappe

By Thomas Griffin

NEXT? — Despite all you've heard that Daniel Boone will probably follow Davy Crockett in national acclaim, don't sell our own Jean Lafitte, the pirate, short in that possibility. Broadway columnist Danton Walker says, "Walt Disney's next film venture will be the life story of Jean Lafitte, the New Orleans pirate who turned into a national hero."

Can't you just see the neighborhood kids next year breaking out with bandanas on their heads, a skull-and-crossbones flag in one hand and a cutlass in the other? Not to mention the signs that'll go up in front of all the local bars in which Jean is supposed to have sipped his absinthe.

* * * *

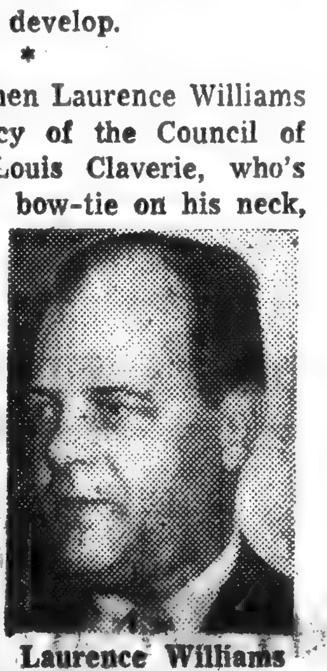
Griffin

VERSATILE FELLOW—Nick Stuart, Biloxi's Broadwater Beach Hotel entertainment director and orchestra leader, has pulled another talent out of his hat. Nick, who began his career as a movie actor before shifting to a musical maestro, now bobs up as a writer. In short, he's just received a $500 royalty check for an idea he sold TV Producer Hal Roach, Jr., of Hollywood. The idea: A series of stories based on the adventures of a newsreel cameraman.

Nick says it's a brainchild he's hurtured quite a while, so naturally he's tickled that a producer of Roach's eminence ("Public Defender," "My Little Margie," "Life of Riley," etc.) bought it. He hears the pilot film alone, first of a series of 39 half-hour shows, will cost $35,000 to make.

Incidentally, Nick also says he's got other good ideas on Gulf Coast folklore and background he's planning to develop.

* * *



Laurence Williams

OFF THE CUFF—When Laurence Williams took over the presidency of the Council of Social Agencies from Louis Claverie, who's seldom caught without a bow-tie on his neck, Williams quipped: "The fact that I wear four-in-hands doesn't mean there's going to be any drastic changes around here" . . . Mrs. Edwin Marx, chairman of the voters service committee of the League of Women Voters, has a simple problem of arithmetic; she's got 108 telephone workers trying to contact 20,000 registered voters who face disqualification (under Permanent Registration Law) for failure to vote for two years. So far they've processed 4872 calls in 10 days. The 20,000 people have to be reinstated by July 31 or go through the more complicated process of re-registration. The problem is where to get more telephone workers, so how about volunteering by calling Sue Gillean at RA 5695?

POTPOURRI—Gasper Gulotta, the "Little Mayor of Bourbon Street," is handing out keys to his domain now, too; gave his first one, a little brass number tied with white ribbon, to Carrie Finnell . . . Good news for night owls: Trend of Bourbon St. prices is slightly on the down-swing; couple of high-price spots who switched to Dixieland bands from girlie shows have cut their tariff on drinks; another spot, with a show, has a barker spieling, "Seventy-five cents for a large bottle of beer at the bar" . . . The John Dibert School badly needs a teacher to teach Braille to the blind; Mrs. Hazel Webb, who formerly taught there, will be on maternity leave next September, and the School Board's Alfred Hebeisen is having a difficult time replacing her; contact him at 703 Carondelet . . . Orleana Twitchell Miller electrified Blue Room spectators with a white fur Davy Crockett cap, plus a Liberace-pattern dress (musical notes, piano keyboard and candelabra), when she appeared on the dance floor with her favorite partner, Charlie Grundmann.

* * *

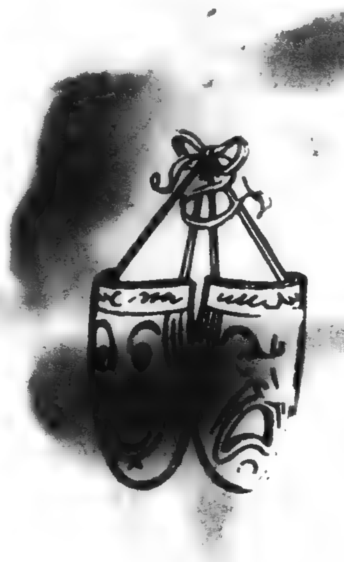
Larry Logan

SHOW BIZ—Lafayette's Larry Logan, making his Blue Room bow, gave the new show a resounding sendoff with his harmonica magic opening night; had to beg off after 17 minutes. Incidentally, the plush spot was filled to capacity to welcome the old maestro, Joe Reichman, back to one of his favorite haunts; Joe didn't let the crowd down either, returning as his same ebullient, effervescent self, after a four-year absence; headliner "Sonny" Howard, another familiar face, scored well, too . . . Local dancers "Pat" and Earl Upton, plus singer Howard De Vezin, will do their bit to aid the Werling and Roberts American Legion Post in the floor show for their benefit dance at The Jung Friday . . . Bill Hewitt, local AGVA rep, is flashing a citation he and wife Ruby (as Ching Ling and Soo, a magic act) got from the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund for charity performances rendered.

* * *

HITHER AND YON—Fred Bultman pouring cocktails for the cast of "Madama Butterfly" as a fitting fare-thee-well for a job well done . . . Laurel's Mrs. O. L. Mizelle seeing the Vieux Carre sights with her son Joe guiding her footsteps in the right channels . . . Ruth Adele Miller, the piano teacher, off in a new air-conditioned car for six weeks of music classes at Columbia U., plus further sessions in Guy Maier's workshop; she also intends to catch the Berkshire Music Festival during her stay in the East . . . Dave Taylor, popular news service photog, switching his "shots" to Dallas on a transfer as of today . . . Morris Rabe III touring the town in a sleek new gray job, upholstered in red and gray, and air-conditioned, withal.

Musical Courier, NYC, June 1955



SUMMER IS FESTIVAL TIME

By JOHN ZOREK

ON November 5, 1955, the curtain will rise in the Vienna State Opera for the first time in more than a decade, and a four-week festival will begin in one of the foremost opera houses of the world. This international event is especially significant because the Opera Company returns to its old quarters at a time when Austria has just regained her independence. The festive atmosphere is, therefore, most appropriate.

Festivals are not a phenomena of recent years, though they have gained enormously in popularity during recent decades. Sovereigns of the 16th and 17th centuries were the most important patrons of the arts and arranged special court performances to commemorate historical and other special events, in this way contributing to the support of poets, composers, and writers. Many dramatic and musical works commissioned for these occasions have retained their popularity to this day. Since then, many sovereigns have disappeared, but performances are still given in castles and halls which were built in part for the enjoyment of the arts. While in past centuries attendance at festivals was restricted to members of the courts, later to people living in the immediate vicinity of the festival, today's scientific achievements have given festivals an international character, assembling artists and audiences from far and near. Lovers of the arts all over the world are well informed by radio and the press of the offerings to be presented. Fast transportation enables the concertgoer in South Africa to reach a European music center in a day, and the New York balletomane to take an overnight trip to see the Royal Danish Ballet. The original idea of a festival—the commemoration of a person or event—is still maintained today, however. Most music festivals are arranged around the works of one composer in a city identified with him, or because the locale has some other special significance.

Salzburg, showing the Hohensalzburg Castle in the background. Photo: U. S. Army

One thing is certain:
more and more music lovers,
both long- and short-hair varieties, want to hear music
at all times of the year—though it may involve traveling halfway round the world—
and occasionally, we suspect, the cultivation of a philosophical view of accommodations.

The Bayreuth Wagner Festival (July 22 to August 21), now in its 81st year, will present a new production of The Flying Dutchman in addition to Parsifal, Tannhaeuser, and The Ring of the Nibelungen. Among the performing artists are Astrid Varnay and Ramon Vinay from New York, both of whom have sung in Bayreuth for many years. An equal if not greater international reputation is enjoyed by the annual Salzburg Festival, a tribute to Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (July 24 to August 30). At least two operas by Mozart are performed every year, this time The Magic Flute and Il Seraglio, but also Ariadne by Strauss, Palestrina by Pfitzner, and, as a new work, Irish Legend by Egk. There will be the orchestral concerts performed by the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra and recitals by Gioconda de Vito, Geza Anda, Nathan Milstein, and Enrico Mainardi. Mozarts's C Minor Mass, symphonic [illegible] exclusively devoted to works by Mozart, Serenades, Chamber Music, Ballet, and Drama (including Everyman) round out the full program. The halls where performances are held radiate an atmosphere of the past, whether it is the Residenz, the courtyard of the Castle, or the Cathedral square (an ideal setting for Everyman).

The Bayreuth and Salzburg festivals with their long tradition are now joined by a great number of events which are fast gaining popularity all over the world.

Scandinavian countries, which offer such beautiful scenery, have produced great composers as well. Norway's coastal town of Bergen honors Edvard Grieg in a festival (May 26 to June 7) in which Sir Thomas Beecham, Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, Erik Tuxen, and other leading artists will participate. Not far away, tiny Finland pays tribute to Jean Sibelius in a festival in Helsinki (June 9 to June 18), to which the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy and Yehudi Menuhin have been invited. Performances will feature, for the most part, works of Sibelius. If you miss the Philadelphia Orchestra in Helsinki, you can hear them in Stockholm during the festival (June 7 to June 16). The world-famous Royal Swedish Opera House will present Carmen, Walkuere, Orpheus in the Underworld, ballet, chamber music, and 18th-century divertissement. Scandinavian Festivals are held early because during the midsummer months the influx of tourists causes difficulties with accommodations.

Left: Astrid Varnay as Ortrud (Bayreuth). Center: Tattoo at Edinburgh Castle. Right: Overflow audience at Tanglewood.

Photos: left, German Tourist Information Office; right, Ruth Orkin.

Climatic conditions determine the May Music Festival in Florence (May 2 to June 30). The months of May and June are the most beautiful in this city of arts. An assembly of international performers has been engaged this year: New York City Ballet, the Corps de Ballet of the Belgrade Opera, the National Theatre of Athens, The Municipal Opera of Berlin and Frankfurt, the Israeli Philharmonic, the Opera Comique of Paris, and the English Opera group from London. The festival opens with Don Sebastiano by Donizetti, and will include in the course of two months: Romeo and Juliet (ballet), Otello, Cosi fan Tutte, Der Rosenkavalier, Angelique, The Turn of the Screw, Falstaff, Norma, and many other works. Some performances will be given in the arena of the Boboli Gardens, an unforgettable setting.

Apropos open-air performances, the operatic season in the Baths of Carracalla in Rome (June 30 to August 28) should be mentioned. Poliuto (Donizetti), Norma, Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Mefistofele, Aida, and Lucia di Lammermoor are programmed. The Lyric Season at Verona (July 20 to August 15) includes Otello, Carmen, Aida, and the Romeo and Juliet Ballet. A visitor to Italy during the summer should attend these events as well as the regular open-air season of the San Carlos Opera in Naples (July and August) and the Venice Festival in September (program not available yet).

Austria, the country of music from which so many beautiful works have come, can pride herself not only with Salzburg, but two more important festivals. At the Vienna Festival (June 4 to June 26) The Vienna Philharmonic will be under the baton of Leopold Stokowski. The Philadelphia Orchestra will be there, too, and there are recitals scheduled by Alexander Brailowsky, Irmgard Seefried, and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau. The Vienna Symphony will perform, under the direction of guest conductors, including Massimo Freccia, Werner Egk, Karl Etti, Otto Klemperer. At the eastern border of Austria, the charming town of Bregenz attracts many visitors to its festival (July 21 to August 15). "A Night in Venice" by Johann Strauss is performed on the lake in a beautiful setting. There are orchestral concerts by the Vienna Symphony, opera is represented by the Barber of Seville Company, and ballet by the Berlin State Opera Ballet Company.

Switzerland, generally known for her alpine beauty, has now attained an important place as a site for musical events. Zurich, the commercial capital, presents a June festival of music and drama. Orchestral concerts with soloists will be offered, with Bruno Walter among the conductors, and Edwin Fischer, Artur Rubinstein, Alexander Brailowsky, and Enrico Mainardi assisting. Only an hour away, Lucerne has successfully made its bid as a center of music. The Lucerne Festival (August 6 to August 30) also presents concerts in which some of the Zurich artists will appear. The list of conductors here include Eugene Ormandy, Ernest Ansermet, Rafael Kubelik, Herbert von Karajan, Otto Klemperer; soloists are Nathan Milstein, Geza Anda, Robert Casadesus, Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Irmgard Seefried, Andres Segovia, and others.

Crossing the border into Germany, music lovers could spend many weeks attending the numerous festivals scheduled. The Beethoven Festival in Bonn (May 15 to May 27), the Wiesbaden Festival (April 30 to May 27),

[167]

MADAME

HEFT 11/1954
HERAUSGEBER: DR. H. HEILMAIER
CHEFREDAKTEUR: HEINZ WEIGT

Verlag Dr. Heilmaier • München 3 • Tel. 2 35 83 / 2 02 46

Was tragen Sie - wann - wozu - womit?

17^{00} UHR	NACH 18^{00} UHR	20^{00} UHR	AB 21^{00} UHR
Zur Modeschau oder einer Teestunde, ein Ensemble: zart figurbetonendes Kleid und eine gerade Jacke mit Nerzkragen und Manschetten	Treffpunkt in der Bar, ruhiges ärmelloses Cocktailkleid Cocktailkleid mit Décolleté und schwingendem Rock	Dinerkleider sind schmal, lang und dezent Theater- und Konzertkleid, diesmal nicht schwarz	Das große Abendkleid ist kostbar	Sie tragen
Wolltaft	Samt, broschiert Lamé	Grosgrain Brokat	Spitzenmotive mit Duchesse	Material
schwarz	nutriabraun silbrig	schwarz feines antikes Muster	weiß, champagner	Farbe
ganz kleines Gebilde aus Nerz	Mütze aus Atlasband schön frisiert	schmuck, wie eine helle Strähne gut frisiert	Diadem und Ohrgehänge	Kopf
Nerzblende an der Jacke, Schmuck um den Hals	enge Kette am Samtband rosa Perlen	glitzerig antike Goldkette	glitzernde Kette	Halspartie
schlanke Silhouette und doch ein wenig Busty-look	runder Halsausschnitt, enge Corsage lange enge Corsage mit angeschnittener Schulterpartie	kein großes Décolleté, weiche Raffung um die Brust wie ein simpler Jumper	Corsage mit kleinen Trägern und applizierten Spitzenmotiven schwarz	nutriabraun silbrig	schwarz gold/bunt	weiß, getönt
glockig	weit in ungebügelten Falten gerafft überweiter Sonnenplisseerock	bleistifteng, ab Knie in Tütenform auf der Hüfte in Falten angesetzt	weiter Duchesserock mit Spitzenmotiven
schwarz	nutriabraun silbrig	schwarz gold/bunt	champagner
Pumps	Chevreau Riemchen-Schuhe graphitgraues Chevreau	silbergraues Leder Sandaletten	Abendschuhe
schwarz	braun silbrig	mit Straßschnalle gold	goldkäfer
Glacé, Nerzfarbe	sandfarbener Atlas weißer Atlas, halblang	rosé Glacéleder, lang türkis, kurz	weiße Duchesse mit Goldstickerei und evtl. Perlen klein und chic	Samtbeutel Silberpailletten	Petit-Point-Stickerei Pompadour aus Brokat	gold
aufregend	interessant mondän	nobel dezent	Grande Occasion ein duftendes Chiffontuch in Orange	vielleicht doch das Nutria-Bolero? Pelz-Stola	Spitzen- oder Duchesse-Stola goldene Armbänder	weißes langes Samtcape, bis zum Boden heute schon daran denken, was Sie sich zu Weihnachten von Ihm wünschen	um diese Zeit noch nicht so viel trinken 1. Unterrock aus Nylontüll, 2. aus Taft	solche Kleider verlangen gute Mieder es wirkt das Material in ganz strenger Linie	immer nur lächeln

Modell: Ida Braune
Hut: Stauber

Darstellung:
MADAME-Produktion/
Margarete/Khan/Olvar

MADAME

HEFT 11/1954 HERAUSGEBER: DR. H. HEILMAIER
CHEFREDAKTEUR: HEINZ WEIGT

Verlag Dr. Heilmaier • München 3 • Tel. 2 35 83 / 2 02 46

In einer Zeit, in der manche von der Amerikanisierung Europas reden, kann von einem geradezu gigantischen und, wie wir glauben, geglückten Versuch der Europäisierung Amerikas auf musikalischem Gebiet berichtet werden. Wir meinen die Tanglewood-Konzerte in Lenox, Mass., mitten in den Berkshire Bergen. Diese Namen mögen den meisten Lesern nur einen undeutlichen Begriff vermitteln. Wenn Sie aber vergleichsweise an die grünen, sanftgewellten Hügel des Taunus oder der Rhön denken und sich dazu noch den ausgedehnten Landsitz eines amerikanischen Millionärs vorstellen, wird das Bild eindrucksvoller. Im Schatten uralter Bäume, umgeben von weiten gepflegten Rasen, beschnittenen Hecken, Wandelgängen und Springbrunnen, die an Versailles erinnern, liegt Tanglewood. Es ist zum Mekka der Musikfreunde ganz Amerikas und in steigendem Maße sogar des Auslandes geworden. Hier ist der Traum des leider zu früh (1951) verstorbenen Dirigenten Serge Koussevitzky zur Wirklichkeit geworden. Sein Lebensziel bestand nämlich darin, eine Musikzentrale zu schaffen, in der „die bekanntesten Komponisten die Kunst der Komposition, die berühmtesten Virtuosen die der perfekten Darbietung, die größten Dirigenten das Mysterium der Orchesterleitung lehren und die hervorragendsten Denker und Gelehrten werden unterrichten können". Kurzum, es war die Idee, daß eine künstlerische Elite die musikalische Erziehung nicht nur der Ausübenden, sondern auch des amerikanischen Publikums anstreben sollte.

Zu den europäischen Gastdirigenten von Tanglewood zählt Pierre Monteux. Unter seiner Leitung wurden Stücke von Beethoven und von französischen Komponisten aufgeführt.

MUSIK FÜR DIE MASSEN

Die volle Bedeutung dieses einzig in der Welt dastehenden musikalischen Unternehmens kann nur ermessen werden, wenn man bedenkt, daß es sich nicht an einem leicht zugänglichen Platz in einer Großstadt befindet. Vergangenen Sommer pilgerten z. B. 175 000 Menschen von nah und fern in eine Sommerfrische mit reichlich hohen Preisen, um sich musikalischen Genüssen hinzugeben. Hier ist ein klassisches Beispiel, wie unrecht man den Amerikanern tut, wenn man sagt, sie seien ohne kulturelle Bedürfnisse und interessieren sich nur für Baseball. Die Massen der Musikbegeisterten treffen sich hier in echt demokratischer Gemeinschaft, ohne Klassenunterschiede. Konzerte im „Shed", der großen Musikhalle, hatten bis zu 12 000 Zuhörer, von denen die Hälfte auf dem Rasen im Freien lagerte. Das Rückgrat dieses Unternehmens wird von dem über 100 Mann starken Boston Symphony Orchester unter der Leitung von Charles Münch gebildet, das zur Zeit als das beste amerikanische Orchester bezeichnet werden darf.

[168]

MADAME

HEFT 11/1954 HERAUSGEBER: DR. H. HEILMAIER
CHEFREDAKTEUR: HEINZ WEIGT

Verlag Dr. Heilmaier • München 3 • Tel. 2 35 63 / 2 02 46

Viele Studenten der Orchester - Abteilung treffen sich zu regelmäßigen Übungsstunden für die Freitag-Abend-Konzerte.

Auch auf einem Bootssteg lassen sich Fragen der Musik besprechen. Aus allen Staaten Nordamerikas und aus dem Ausland kommen junge Leute zusammen.

TANGLEWOOD:

Amerikas Mekka der Musik

Sonderbericht unseres nach Lenox, Massachusetts (USA) entsandten Mitarbeiters Dr. Charles Carlé

HERANBILDUNG DES BERUFLICHEN NACHWUCHSES

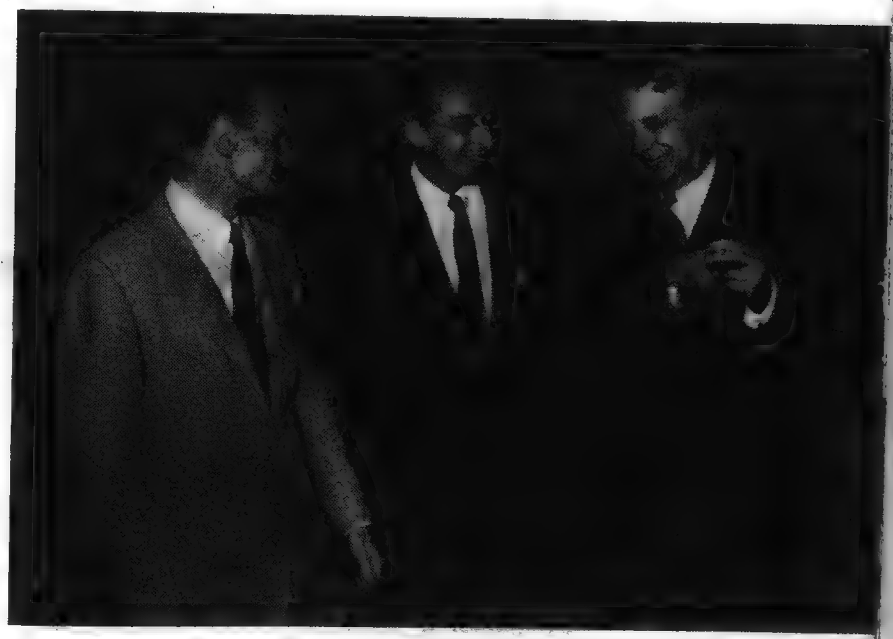
Die dieses Jahr von 400 Schülern (ausgesucht aus 1500) besuchte Musikschule ~~hatte auch Gäste aus dem Ausland, einige von ihnen kamen~~ sogar von Südafrika. Auf jedem musikalischen Gebiet wird gelehrt: Orchesterspiel, Kammer- und Choral-Musik, Oper, Dirigieren und Komponieren. Eine spezifisch amerikanische Einrichtung ist die „Study Group" für Amateure, die nicht selbst spielen, sondern nur die musikalische Atmosphäre aus nächster Nähe einatmen wollen. Sie sind nur stumme Zuhörer. Auch hier trafen sich alle Schichten. Unter ihnen befanden sich Ärzte, Chauffeure, Briefträger, wohlhabende Rentner, die sich die Langeweile vertreiben wollten, Stenotypistinnen, Bauarbeiter und ein Schuhverkäufer.

AMERIKA ÜBERNIMMT DIE EUROPÄISCHE TRADITION

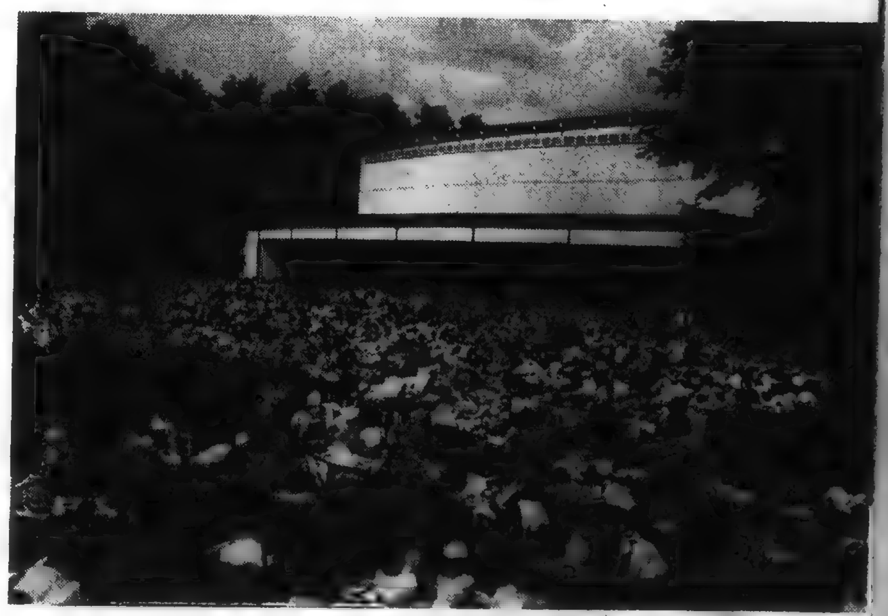
Das musikalische Programm umfaßte neben vielen kleinen Veranstaltungen 24 Konzerte mit Kammermusik, kleinem und großem Orchester sowie Opernaufführungen. Es würde aber den Rahmen jedes Berichtes sprengen, ins einzelne zu gehen. Es sei nur erwähnt, daß anläßlich des 150. Geburtstages von Berlioz das „Te Deum", die dramatische Symphonie „Romeo und Julia" und das „Requiem" aufgeführt wurden. Bezeichnenderweise lag auch der Schwerpunkt der anderen Darbietungen fast ausschließlich in europäischer und nicht zuletzt deutscher Musik von Bach, Beethoven, Wagner, Mozart, Händel, Haydn, Weber, Brahms, Franck, Strauß, Sibelius, Debussy, Ravel, Saint-Saëns, Toch, Hindemith u. a. Von Amerikanern war Copland mit einem Klavierkonzert und seiner Oper „The Tender Land", Walter Piston mit seiner 4. Symphonie vertreten. Auch die meisten Dirigenten, Münch, Morel, Lukas Foss, Pierre Monteux waren europäischer Herkunft.

Zusammenfassend läßt sich sagen, daß die erste Phase der musikalischen Entwicklung von Tanglewood in einer mehr oder weniger unkritischen Übernahme des europäischen Kulturgutes besteht. Außer tastenden Versuchen ist von einem neuen amerikanischen Stil noch wenig zu verspüren. Vielleicht ist im Zeitalter des Radios, des Fernsehens und der Flugzeuge eine rein nationale musikalische Entwicklung auch gar nicht mehr möglich.

Sie interpretieren Bach: das Boston Symphony Orchester, den Taktstock führt der bekannte Meister Charles Münch.



Sie spielen eine Hauptrolle in Tanglewood: Hugh Ross, Leiter der Chor-Abteilung, der Komponist Aaron Copland und Charles Münch, Direktor des Boston Symphony Orchesters (v. l. n. r.)



Konzertsaal im Freien: Für die musikalischen Darbietungen reichte die große Halle nicht aus. Auf dem Rasen im Park mußte die Hälfte der 12 000 Besucher die Werke ihrer Lieblingskomponisten anhören. Fotos: Trans-Atlantic Press

MADAME

HEFT 11/1954
HERAUSGEBER: DR. H. HEILMAIER
CHEFREDAKTEUR: HEINZ WEIGT

Verlag Dr. Heilmaier • München 3 • Tel. 2 35 83 / 2 02 46

MADAME-Kosmetik-Serie III

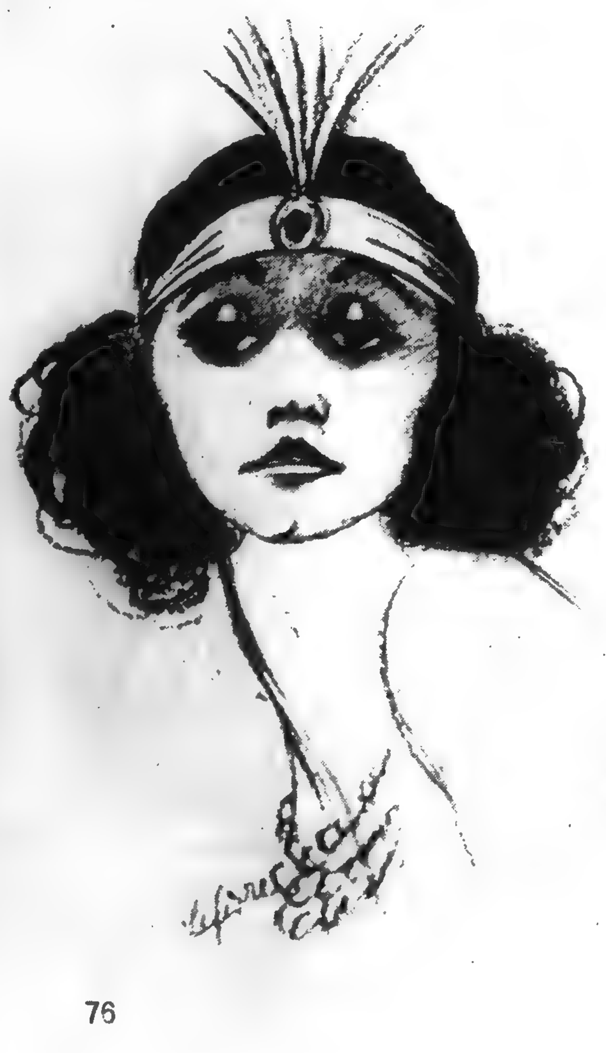
VATER und SOHN des make-up

Es war vor etwa 50 Jahren, Vater Max Factor befand sich noch im alten Europa. Mit Schminke, Nasenkitt und Mastix und viel Hingabe an seine Sache verhalf er manchem berühmten Mimen an den Bühnen der Donau- und Spree-Monarchie zu rauschendem Erfolg. Der nimmermüde Mann war jedoch damit nicht zufrieden. Er arbeitete an einer Reihe kosmetischer Mittel, an denen ja damals ein absoluter Mangel herrschte, und an Parfums. Da aber gegen Puder und Schminke außerhalb der Bühne prüde Ablehnung herrschte und auch für kosmetische Pflege kein Verständnis zu finden war, zog der damals noch junge Max als kosmetischer Kolumbus nach Amerika. Auf der Weltausstellung in St. Louis zeigte er seine Schönheitsmittel, die ihm im Verlaufe des Ausstellungsjahres recht gute Erfolge brachten. Leider verschwand sein amerikanischer Partner bei Nacht und Nebel mit dem ganzen Gewinn. Factor richtete nun mit den verbliebenen Waren einen kleinen Laden für Haarersatz und Kosmetika ein. Aber er brachte so wenig ein, daß er damit kaum seine Familie ernähren konnte.

Max Factor hörte vom Film, der damals noch geringschätzig belächelter Kintopp war, aber Max erfaßte instinktiv die Möglichkeiten, die für ihn in der Geschichte lagen. So ging es 1909 nach Los Angeles, wo die ersten tollen Streifen der flimmernden Leinwand für Amerika gedreht wurden. Hier war er am Platze, er stellte seine Bühnen-Schminktechnik auf das Schwarz-Weiß des Filmes um und hatte Erfolg. Er schminkte die blonde Mary Pickford, das „süße Mädel" der frühen „Flimmer"-Zeit, und den schwarzhaarigen Zelluloid-Vamp Pola Negri, die ihre Karriere beim Berliner Kintopp begann und in dem Großfilm „Die Augen der Mumie Ma" mit Jannings und Liedtke als Partner große Erfolge errang.

Max hatte richtig gerechnet, viele Frauen sahen den Film und wollten den Stars gleichen, die Augen der Pola Negri, die Gesichter der anderen Stars nachahmen.

1928 machte Max Factor Vater dem Filmstar Joan Crawford das neue panchromatische Make-up. Bemerkenswert ist, daß Joan Crawford die heute aktuelle H-Linie und die Dandy-Frisur trägt — es kommt alles wieder . . .



Pola Negri, der Vamp des früheren Kintopps, wurde auch von Factor sen. für die „zappelnde Leinwand" von 1920 geschminkt.

Aus dem Film - Make - up, welches die bisherigen Theaterschminken abgelöst hatte und von Max Factor zu differenzierter Feinheit und Naturnähe ausgebaut worden war, entwickelte er das Make-up für die private Schönheitspflege. Aus den alten 5 Farbtönen der Bühnenschminke hatte er bereits 12 verschiedene Schattierungen entwickelt. Er arbeitete eine genaue Tabelle, eine „Farbenharmonie" aus, woraus die Schminkanleitungen für jeden Typ von Haar-, Haut- und Augenfarbe ersichtlich waren. Das, was heute selbstverständlich ist, die Make-up-Schattierungen nach dem eigenen Hautton zu wählen, war damals eine Sensation. Alle Welt hatte sich bis dato Lilarosa (wenn auch ganz heimlich) gepudert, was bei kühlem Wetter die Nasen bläulich schimmern ließ. Die Damen waren begeistert und verlangten die neuen Factor-Präparate. Gute Freunde rieten Max Factor ab, diesen Präparaten den aus der Filmsprache entliehenen Ausdruck „Make-up" zu geben und sie doch lieber „Kosmetika" zu nennen. Aber er blieb bei dieser Bezeichnung für alles, was der unmittelbaren Verschönerung des Gesichts diente, und der Erfolg gab ihm recht. In kurzer Folge kamen ein wirkungsvolles Augen-Make-up und eine Make-up-Creme, die sogenannte Foundation, dazu. Das Geschäft entwickelte sich, Max Factor konnte te die Arbeit kaum noch bewältigen. Die Produktion seiner Präparate stieg immer mehr an, und auch der Film stellte immer neue Anforderungen an ihn. Nun hatte Max Factor einen Sohn, eine

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

MAY 15 1955

Rockefeller Grant for Berkshire Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come tto the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought. The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the center through tax-exempt donations to the organization set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Now, through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, the Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1949 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000, while drawn upon annually to assist the 1,575 students from all parts of the U. S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1949 is estimated at $325,000.

In commenting on the grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center said: "The generosity, with precedent, of the Rockefeller Foundation to support our work with young people will be a great service to the future of the art of music."

Mr. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, said: "This fine offer by the Rockefeller Foundation will be a challenge to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center to do their utmost to support this fine school. As chairman of the Friends, I urge every one to give just as much as he can."

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,279

MAY 19 1955

NMSQ Will Play At Tanglewood

The New Music String Quartet, of which Walter Trampler of Drum Hill, Wilton, is a member, will appear at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

The quartet will appear on July 27 in the fourth week of a Wednesday night Beethoven chamber music series. They will play the G major, Opus 18, number two; the E flat major, Opus 127; and the A minor, opus 132.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,016

MAY 29 1955

25 Concerts by Students Planned at Tanglewood

Scholarship Orchestra of 100 Scheduled for Six Performances in Music Shed; Dates for Opera and Chamber Music Groups Also Announced

Boston, May 28 — Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox. This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3.

Open to Friends

Young musicians of high skill—instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers—will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends. These nonpaying concerts performed to 30,800 in 1954, and 35 per cent of the Friends came from Berkshire County, indicating that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8.30 p. m., commencing July 7, with the exception of the final concert, announced for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 13. In 1954 a similar six concerts atracted an audience of 14,200.

Chamber Music

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10 a. m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through Aug. 4 Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are held Sunday evenings at 8.30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14.

Five evenings of opera, one integrated with choral works, will be given this summer in the Theater-Concert Hall. Attendance at these events on the evenings of Aug. 1, 8, 9 requires reserved tickets procurable in advance from the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

Unscheduled demonstrations by students of Dept. 5, the Tanglewood Study Group organized three years ago for the pure enjoyment of music by amateurs, will be given, as in the past, on a Friday afternoon in the Barn; and also planned are Monday evening forums, Ralph Berkowitz moderating, in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. The complete schedule of student performances:

Dept. I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8.30 p. m., July 7, 14, 21, 28, Aug. 4; 3.00 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 13

Dept. I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 10, 17, 24, 31, Aug. 7, 14

Dept. III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 17, 24, 31; 3.00 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 6

Dept. II (Chorus) and IV (Opera)—(reserved seats) Theater-Concert Hall, Monday, Aug. 1, 8.30 p. m.

Dept II (Opera)—(reserved seats) Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m., Aug. 8-9

Dept. II (Chorus) and IV (Opera)—Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 26, Aug. 2

Pension Fund Benefit rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra (admission $1), Music Shed, 10 a. m., July 23, 30, Aug. 6, 13

This Clipping From DETROIT, MICH.
FREE PRESS

APR 25 1955

Berkshire Program Outlined

Special to the Free Press

BOSTON—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six weekends from July 6 to August 14.

The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis," a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theater and the last four weekends will consist of 12 concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, with a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

* * *

IN ADDITION to the pianists Rudolf Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Bernstein will conduct from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist; and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price.

The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in 8 minor in the Bach's Mass in B minor in the Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,295

MAY 21 1955

Teacher To Study At Tanglewood

A summer scholarship to study choral and instrumental conducting at Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., has been awarded to Vincent R. Stranieri, Whitney Ext., Westport, an elementary instrumental instructor in Waterbury public schools.

Mr. Stranieri was chosen from a limited number of students for the festival's active division. He will study conducting with Leonard Bernstein and Hugh Ross. The course begins July 4 and runs to Aug. 14.

047

The festival was begun in 1940 by Serge Koussevitzky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Festival director this summer will be Charles Munch, present director of the Boston orchestra.

Mr. Stranieri received his bachelor of arts degree in music from the University of Bridgeport. He was graduated from Columbia University with a master of arts degree in music. In 1953, he won top honors in a competition at Columbia for his conducting of Verdi's 'Requiem.' He is studying violin with Paul Bernard in New York City.

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 976

MAY 18 1955

NMSQ Will Play At Tanglewood

The New Music String Quartet, of which Walter Trampler of Drum Hill Road is a member, will appear at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood this summer.

The quartet will appear on July 27 in the fourth week of a Wednesday night Beethoven chamber music series. They will play the G major, Opus 18, number two; the E flat major, Opus 127; and the A minor, opus 132.

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 976

MAY 25 1955

Tanglewood

0-47

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U.S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-0068

News
STRATFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,218

MAY 19 1955

VINCENT RICHARD STRANIERI of Whitney Street, Westport, is a recipient of a scholarship to study this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Chosen from a limited number of students to be in the active division of the Festival, he is presently employed as instrumental supervisor of the public schools in Waterbury.

Bulletin (e)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 145,400

MAY 14 1955

Rockefeller Grants To Aid Tanglewood

Boston — (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood in Lenox, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Beginning this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra.

047

Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940-41 enabled the Boston Symphony to start the summer music school. The future assistance will maintain the undertaking on a secure financial basis.

Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony trustees, said "If the friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support the future of the school is assured."

Contributions to the music school last year totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,801

MAY 20

For the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the aid of the Berkshire Music Center operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. For a five-year period beginning this Summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for support of the school, a sum which could amount to $125,000 in five years. The grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. The Berkshire Music Center opens its 13th year on July 4 with Charles Munch as director and Ralph Berkowitz as dean. Chamber music concerts begin July 6; Bach-Mozart concerts on July 8 and the 12 shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony begin July 22.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

MAY 22 1955

nual event.

Boston Symphony To Benefit From Series Of Grants

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood in Lenox, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Beginning this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra. A spokesman said the five announced donations can amount to $125,000.

Grants totaling $65,000 in 1940-41 enabled the Boston Symphony to start the summer music school. The future assistance will maintain the undertaking on a secure financial basis.

Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Trustees, said "if the friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support the future of the school is assured."

Contributions to the music school last year totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

MAY 2 6 1955

erkshire Center Students To Give Many Concerts

wenty-five concerts by students the Berkshire Music Center will given during the course of this mmer's Berkshire Festival by e Boston Symphony Orchestra at nglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the erkshire hills is now preparing r its 13th year, which will comence with the arrival of some 400 udents from all parts of U.S., anada and foreign countries on unday, July 3. The Berkshire Muic music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director: Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting Assistant Director: Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO.

Young musicians of high skill—instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends. At the end of the summer of 1954 membership totaled 5,174, from which source the Berkshire Music Center benefited by $23,545.71. In 1955 a drive will be made to increase Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources. These non-paying concerts performed to 30,800 in 1954, and 35 per cent of the Friends came from Berkshire County, indicating that Tanglewood's summer neighbors have found increasing enjoyment in observing the work of its students.

With the announcement of the 25 concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center, a full calendar for the 42 days of the six-week 1955 season is planned. There are 24 Berkshire Festival concerts, plus four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, proceeds benefiting the orchestra's Pension Fund and the six programs of "Tanglewood on Parade," bringing to a total of 59 the summer events at Tanglewood.

Sunday Telegram
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 94,348

MAY 2 9 1955

The Music World

American Composers Represented In Philadelphia Orchestra Tour

NEW YORK, May 28 (UP) — The Philadelphia Orchestra, now touring Europe, will play at least one American composition in each of the 18 cities on its itinerary.

The American composers represented were Bloch, Barber, Dello, Joio, Hanson, Harl McDonald, Thomson and Yardumian.

The European tour is the first of a major American symphony orchestra. But the New York Philharmonic-Symphony is going to tour Europe in the fall.

The Rockefeller Foundation has agreed to match dollar-for-dollar, whatever funds the Boston Symphony raises for the support of its Berkshire Music Center, which is the orchestra's summer school of music. The grant extends for five years, and could total $125,000 since the orchestra usually raises $25,000 annually. The foundation helped the orchestra establish the school in 1940 and 1941 with grants totalling $65,000.

The Metropolitan Opera has ended any chance of labor trouble with its orchestra musicians by signing a three-year contract with its local of the American Federation of Musicians. The contract assured the players of a basic season of 24 weeks, augmented by a seven-week spring tour.

Meanwhile, the Met announced that Dino Yannapoulos will stage its revival of Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" next season, and Wolfgang Roth will design the scenery and costumes.

Marian Anderson has endowed a scholarship fund in Tel Aviv, following her first concert tour of Israel. A scholarship of 600 Israeli pounds will be awarded annually to a talented young musician. The Marian Anderson Scholarship Fund in this country has so far awarded more than $27,000 to 54 American singers.

Semi-finalists in the talent search of the Experimental Opera Theater are Mignon Dunn, Memphis; John Reardon, New York; Josephine Guido, Youngstown, O.; Mary Ferriero, Pittsburgh; Robert Dunlap, Palo Alto, Calif.; Irene Salemke, Montreal; Joseph Ronleau, Matane, Que.; Maria di Gerrlando, New York, and Eddy Ruhl, New York. They will take part in the finals in New Orleans on June 19.

Journal-Courier (m)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 20,801

MAY 2 1 1955

For the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the aid of the Berkshire Music Center operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. For a five-year period beginning this Summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for support of the school, a sum which could amount to $125,000 in five years. The grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. The Berkshire Music Center opens its 13th year on July 4 with Charles Munch as director and Ralph Berkowitz as dean. Chamber music concerts begin July 6; Bach-Mozart concerts on July 8 and the 12 shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony begin July 22.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 167,096

MAY 23 1955

Scholarships for Tanglewood

Scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-Aug. 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will be the school's director, Richard Burgin, acting assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz, dean.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. The fund was established in 1947 by gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America, and since augmented from other sources. It is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so.

In addition, special scholarships this summer will include the following:

A prize of $250 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded for a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, for an outstanding student of conducting.

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, to be given to the outstanding violinist of the summer.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, for the year's best student in cello.

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition.

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, $300, to a Tanglewood composer.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award.

Two new scholarships have been announced. High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

The Koussevitzky Music Foundation has again granted $1,000 toward living expenses to help students take advantage of their tuition scholarships. The Anne M. Gannett Fund of the National Federation of Music Clubs annually provides a $400 scholarship. Through the Wyomissing Institute of Fine Arts, Pa., Mrs. Bruce Harden of Honolulu, a Tanglewood student in 1940, annually selects a Berkshire summer student. Delta Omicron, a national musical fraternity, is giving a tuition grant to a student at Tanglewood who is a member of one of its chapters. The Music Study Club of Newark and the Oranges, N.J., contributes $225 each year for use by a New Jersey student. The Louisville Philharmonic Chorus annually raises money to send a student to Tanglewood, as does the Miami Opera Guild; the Women's Committee of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra; Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, and Adelphi College, Long Island City.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

MAY 2 1 1955

Tanglewood's Programs and Soloists Listed

THE Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this Summer will consist of six weekends of concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons from July 8 to August 14, each weekend preceded by a recital of chamber music on the previous Wednesday evening, beginning July 6.

Conductor Charles Munch will return from France after two months of vacation to open the Festival.

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Festival (July 8-August 14) will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works.

The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by an orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theater.

* * *

THEATER CONCERTS:

FRI., JULY 8: Bach—Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach—Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute soloist; Stravinsky—"Orpheus"; Mozart—"Prague" Symphony.

SAT., JULY 9: Handel—Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn — Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith — "Der Schwanendreher," Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist; Haydn—Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

SUN., JULY 10: Bach—Mass in B minor, with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe and soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm.

FRI., JULY 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto, K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

SAT., JULY 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini — "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini — Cello Concerto, Samuel Mayes, soloist; Vivaldi—Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi — Gloria (with chorus).

SUN., JULY 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Faure—Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure — Pavane; Milhaud — Serenade; Honegger — Fourth Symphony.

* * *

MUSIC SHED CONCERTS:

FRI., JULY 22: Beethoven — Overture to "Coriolan", Violin Concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist; and Seventh Symphony.

SAT., JULY 23: Bach-Respighi — Passacaglia; Beethoven —Second Symphony; Sessions—Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss—"Death and Transfiguration;" guest conductor — Pierre Monteux.

SUN., JULY 24: Beethoven—First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

FRI., JULY 29: Handel — "Water Music"; Schumann — Fourth Symphony; Barber — "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with Leontyne Price; Brahms—Fourth Symphony.

SAT., JULY 30: Beethoven — "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto, Rudolf Serkin, soloist; and "Eroica" Symphony.

SUN., JULY 31: Brahms — Academic Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, soloists; Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

FRI., AUGUST 5: Beethoven —Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky; soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass.

SAT., AUGUST 6: Beethoven —Fidelio, Act II, soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan; Wagner—Excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods."

SUN., AUGUST 7: Beethoven —Fifth and Eighth Symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto, Eugene Istomin, soloist.

FRI., AUGUST 12: Brahms-Haydn Variations; Bloch — "Schelomo," Gregor Piatigorsky, soloist; Debussy — "La Mer"; Ravel — "Daphnis and Chloe", Second Suite.

SAT., AUGUST 13: Wagner—"Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms — Third Symphony; Debussy — Three Nocturnes; Strauss — "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

SUN., AUGUST 14: Beethoven — Overture, "Leonore", No. 3 and Ninth Symphony with chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm.

* * *

THE CHAMBER MUSIC of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts as follows:

JULY 6 — The Kroll String Quartet, Beethoven Quartets: Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95 (Serioso); Op. 131 (C sharp minor).

JULY 13 — Beaux Arts Trio, Trios: Op. 1, No. 3; Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); Op 97 ("Archduke").

JULY 20 — Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Violin Sonatas: Op. 12, No. 2; Op. 24 ("Spring"); Op. 30, No. 2.

JULY 27 — New Music Quartet, String Quartets: Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132.

AUGUST 3 — Rudolf Serkin, Piano Sonatas: Op. 10, Nos. 2 and 3; Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier").

AUGUST 10 — Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz, the Five Cello Sonatas: Op. 5, Nos. 1 and 2; Op. 69; Op. 102, Nos. 1 and 2.

* * *

FOR TICKETS or information about the Berkshire Music Center, this orchestra's music school at Tanglewood, please address the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., until June 1.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

MAY 2 9 1955

Summer Concerts At Tanglewood

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL has become internationally famous for the splendid programs performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. We are fortunate in having such outstanding concerts available at the end of a pleasant Summer drive west into the Berkshire hills of Stockbridge and Lenox.

The 1955 Festival programs are arranged in weekend series beginning July 8, with concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. On the weekends of July 8 and 15, the series of "Bach-Mozart" concerts will be given by the Chamber Orchestra in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

On the weekends beginning July 22, and 29 and Aug. 5 and 12, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play in the Music Shed.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct. Guest conductors will be Thor Johnson, Leonard Bernstein and Pierre Monteux. Soloists will include Jennie Tourel, Samuel Mayes, Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin, Margaret Harshaw, Eugene Istomin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Also at Tanglewood the Berkshire Music Center will conduct a six-week Summer School of music. Mr. Munch is director, and about 400 students will be enrolled for the study of orchestra, conducting, chamber music, chorus, composition and opera.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

MAY 22 1955

Hill Theatre.

Scholarships Aid Music Students at Tanglewood's Berkshire Center

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to Summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-Aug. 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the United States, Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

In addition, special scholarships in 1955 to Tanglewood students include the following:

A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting.

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the Summer.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field.

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition;

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300, to Tanglewood composer.

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

Two new scholarships have been announced: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Buildings Corporation will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

Full information about the Berkshire Music Center and its inducements to Summer music students may be secured by writing to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,279

MAY 26 1955

Tanglewood

0-47

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U.S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony as acting Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO.

Young musicians of high skill — instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

MAY 16 1955

Rockefeller Grant Given to Tanglewood

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, the foundation will donate a sum equal to funds raised from other sources for the support of the school. The annual grants can reach a total of $125,000 for the five-year period.

Contributions by music-lovers to the school in 1954 totalled $25,000 and this year $35,000 in donations will be sought. The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

The Berkshire Music Center will commence its 13th session July 4.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS

APR 19 1955

Berkshire Tryouts Will Be April 27

Final Indianapolis auditions for admission to the Berkshire (Mass.) Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund will be held in the auditorium of the Wilking Music Co. April 27 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalogue.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six weeks. This year the dates are July 4 to August 14. There will be courses in conducting, chamber music, choral music, composition and opera, in addition to a study group.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

MAY 14 1955

Rockefeller Grants To Aid Tanglewood

(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood in Lenox will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Beginning this summer, the foundation will donate a sum matching money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center, the only school of music in the country maintained by a symphony orchestra. A spokesman said the donations can amount to $125,000.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,016

MAY 22 1955

Many Scholarship Aids For Tanglewood Students

New Annual Awards Announced From High Fidelity Magazine and Industrial Buildings Corp.

Boston, May 21—More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3-Aug. 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, is the school's director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, is acting assistant director; Ralph Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

Tuition Grants

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the U. S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Established in 1947 by gifts from the RCA-Victor division of the Radio Corporation of America, and since augmented from other sources, the fund is drawn upon each year to aid students selected as instrumentalists, conductors, singers and composers, and is reimbursed by students when they are able to do so in order that others may benefit in future school years.

In addition, special scholarships in 1955 to Tanglewood students include the following:

A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitsky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer;

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting;

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the summer;

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field;

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $250 each, to students of composition;

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300 to a Tanglewood composer;

The Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award;

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

New Scholarships

In 1955 two new scholarships have been announced: High Fidelity, a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Bureck of Chicopee, the industrial Buildings Corp. will give an annual prize of $250 to a student composer, in memory of Raphael Sagalyn.

In many other ways students at the Berkshire Music Center are assisted. Again the Koussevitzky Music Foundation has granted $1000 toward living expenses to help students take advantage of their tuition scholarships.

Even the Tanglewood students who can afford to do so co-operate through the Student Council Fund to contribute toward the living expenses of needy students.

In 1955's Berkshire Festival, six Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will benefit the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Contributing their services to these concerts are such noted artists as Isaac Stern, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Full information about the Berkshire Music Center and its inducements to summer music students may be secured by writing to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
POST

APR 20 1955

Auditions

Auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at the Baldwin Piano Co., 415 Race street, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Thursday, April 28. Application forms may be obtained from the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, of the Berkshire chamber music department, will be here for the auditions.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563

MAY 23 1955

Center to Gain Rockefeller Fund

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass.—Over a period of five years, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

The Boston Symphony's summer school can receive funds amounting to an additional $125,000 from the grant.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

26 1955

0-47

Music Scholarships Offered By Center

More than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 3—August 14, in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants from all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students.

Berkshire Music Center students will work during the six summer weeks at Tanglewood with such eminent faculty members as Leonard Bernstein, head of the orchestra and conducting departments; Richard Burgin and William Kroll, heads of chamber music; Hugh Ross in the choral department; Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher, teachers of composition; Boris Goldovsky, in charge of the opera section; and Ingolf Dahl, in the Tanglewood Study Group, a special department of vocal and instrumental music available to professionals or amateurs.

In addition, special scholarships in 1955 to Tanglewood students include the following:

A prize of $250 established in 1954 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, awarded to a work written at Tanglewood by a student composer;

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, $250, established in 1954 through the efforts of Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, for an outstanding student of conducting;

The Jascha Heifetz Prize, $300, established in 1949 by the eminent violinist, awarded to the outstanding violinist of the summer.

The Gregor Piatigorsky Prize, $250, established in 1950, awarded by the noted cellist to the year's best student in that field;

The Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships, two gifts of $2.50 each, to students of composition;

The Samuel Wechsler Commission, established in 1952, $300 to a Tanglewood composer;

The Selly A. Eiseman Scholarship, value $150, a tuition award;

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, value $150, established in 1953, a tuition award.

In 1955 two new scholarships have been announced: "High Fidelity," a music magazine published in the Berkshires, has instituted an annual scholarship of $250 to an outstanding student of the Berkshire Music Center. Through the friendly interest of Archibald Burack of Chicopee, Mass., the Industrial Building Corporation will giv an annual prize of $250 to a stu dent composer, in memory of Ra phael Sagalyn.

NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER

MAY 22 1955

By IRVING KOLODIN

Speaking of finances, the Rockefeller Foundation has made a generous gesture on behalf of the Berkshire Music Center, which is the educational element in the Tanglewood activities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It has offered to parallel, with grants of its own, any amounts subscribed to the school up to a total of $125,000. It has agreed to spread the grants over a period of five years, so that contributors need not make substantial gifts at one time.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

MAY 19 1955

Music Center Gets Rockefeller Grant

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its thirteenth session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Berstein head of orchestra conducting, Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; Choral Music, with Hugh Ross in charge; Composition, with noted composers Roger Sessions (U.S.A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; Opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky; and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood Study Group aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis which Ingolf Dahl heads.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

The Man With the Wrong Tux, And Divers Other Odd Cases

AS OF TODAY

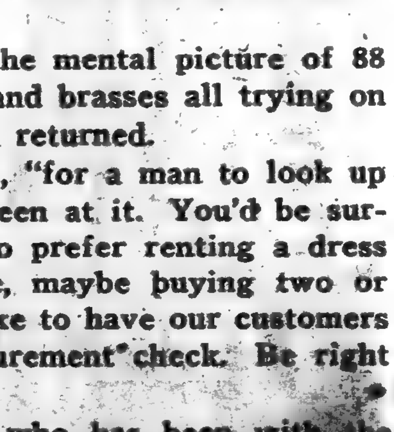
WE'VE JUST RETURNED from an interview with Louis Fain, whose business is renting men's formal attire to males of all ages and sizes from a three-year-old ring bearer to a bride's father rushing in to hire a cutaway on his way to the church, with a taxi purring at the curb.

It actually did happen once, Mr. Fain says, this particular Father of the Bride having just flown in from the Midwest on the morning of the wedding. Louis is co-owner of the business—the other owner is Brother Irving—and they have been putting people into tuxes and tails and morning coats for 25 years.

Mr. Fain, an affable fellow, sat us in a chair and positively bombarded us with information about the emergencies with which he has to cope, he and his manager, Ken Quirk.

Mr. Quirk also sat in at the interview and kept it going whenever Mr. Fain had to dash off to superintend a fitting, with a tape measure jutting out behind him like a yachting pennant.

It is now a very busy time with Mr. Fain and Mr. Quirk, for a lot of people are getting married and, as a matter of fact, when we came in we had to walk around a young man who was getting measured for a white coat and had usher written all over him.



"Once," Mr. Fain said, "we had a case where a speaker from Washington, pretty important man, arrived in Providence without his pants. His dress pants, that is. He didn't discover that his valet had forgotten to pack them until he started to dress. Excuse me a minute."

"Here's an instance," Mr. Quirk said, "where our Albany office had to get on the ball in a hurry. We have branches in many cities.

"You know about the Tanglewood concerts, of course. Well, it just so happened that the clothes for a symphony orchestra from New York or somewhere went astray, leaving 88 musicians stuck in the Berkshires without white coats for the evening pop.

"Albany got the distress call at 4:45 p.m. and by 6:45 it had two beach wagons rolling into Lee with 200 white coats."

"Two hundred coats," queried Old Stupid, "for 88 men?"

"Naturally. You never get two men with the same sleeve length or waist measurement."

While we were still fascinated by the mental picture of 88 differently girthed fiddlers, woodwinds and brasses all trying on white coats at the same time, Mr. Fain returned.

"It's a common occurrence," he said, "for a man to look up his tux and find that the moths have been at it. You'd be surprised to know the really big men who prefer renting a dress suit to being bothered by owning one, maybe buying two or three in the course of a lifetime. We like to have our customers come in every three years for a measurement check. Be right back."

"Here's a thing," said Mr. Quirk, who has been with the store since he was in junior high, "about bridegrooms. During the past five to 10 years, I've noticed that it's the fiancee and her mother who dominate the groom's selection of what he's going to be married in.

"Sometimes the boy's prospective mother-in-law brings him in for the final fitting."

Forewarned is forearmed. First Epistle to the Benedicts, twelve, twenty-two. Back came Mr. Fain:

"We get a lot of business from out-of-town customers, particularly for servicemen's weddings. Like ushers flying up from Miami or a best man coming on from Hawaii."

"Ever get any complaints?"

Messrs. Fain and Quirk looked at each other.

"I guess you can use this," Mr. Fain said, "if you put it in such a way that it won't reflect on the business.

"There was this man who rented a dress suit for his daughter's wedding. After the wedding he called up and threatened to sue. Said it was old and ragged and too big for him. He cried."

"Tough," we said.

"Naturally we investigated. You know what had happened? The suit he wore was an old one of his son's that wifey had put in his closet by mistake. Our nice, well-fitting rental was in a closet upstairs. He gave his wife hell."

We asked Mr. Fain what becomes of old tuxes.

"We give them away to relief services. A lot get sent abroad. A few years ago there must have been thousands of men in Greece going around in tuxedos."

R. L. W.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS
Circ. D. 137,699

APR 23 1955

Hold Auditions

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire music center of the Boston, Mass., Symphony— [illegible] scholarships from [illegible] scholarshp fund [illegible] be held Sunday at [illegible] Severance Hall.

Ralph [illegible] dean, and William Kroll [illegible] the chamber music department will be in charge.

Requiem. The Pop Concert sea-

TRAVEL
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAY

Lenox, Mass., is gearing for its eighteenth Berkshire Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Music fete opens July 6, with first two weekends devoted to Bach-Mozart concerts.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

MAY 28 1955

rose onto perfectly innocent paper

400 STUDENTS ENROLLED FOR 1955 FESTIVAL

Come From All Over the World To Study at Tanglewood

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting assistnat director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO.

Young musicians of high skill—instrumentalists, conductors, singers, many on the threshold of distinguished careers, will have at Tanglewood the invaluable experience of group performance. As in the past their concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school.

The complete schedule of student performances for 1955 follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8.30 p. m., July 7, 14, 21, 28, Aug. 4; 3 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 13.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 a. m., July 10, 17, 24, 31, Aug. 7, 14.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 17, 24, 31; 3 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 6.

Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera)—reserved seats: Theater-Concert Hall, Monday, Aug. 1, 8.30 p. m.

Department IV (Opera)—reserved seats: Theater Concert-Hall, 8.30 p. m., Aug. 8-9.

Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera)—Theater-Concert Hall, 8.30 p. m., July 26, Aug. 2.

Pension Fund Benefit rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed, 10 a. m., July 23, 30, Aug. 6, 13.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

MAY 1 1955

LENOX SINGERS LISTED

Vocalists to Be Heard in Five Major Works at Festival

This summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will include five major selections in which singers will be featured.

Adele Addison and David Lloyd will each appear in three of them. Both will sing in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis and Ninth Symphony. Miss Addison's third appearance will be in Bach's B minor Mass. Mr. Lloyd's third will be in the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio."

Singers engaged for two works are Mac Morgan (Missa Solemnis and "Fidelio"), and Donald Gramm (Ninth Symphony and B minor Mass). Singers who will appear in single works are Margaret Harshaw ("Fidelio"), Leontyne Price (Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"), Eunice Alberts (Missa Solemnis), Catherine Akos (Ninth Symphony) and Florence Kopleff and John McCollum (B minor Mass). Jennie Tourel will also be a soloist at the festival.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

MAY 15 1955

Will Match Other Sources

Rockefeller Fund Plans Grants for Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Rockefeller Foundation has materially brightened the financial outlook of the Berkshire Music Center, the school conducted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the summer festivals at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. For five years, beginning this summer, it will contribute a sum matching that raised for the school from other sources. The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose members are entitled to attend the Center's student concerts and operas, raised $25,000 last summer; this year's goal is at least $35,000. The five appropriations, according to the Boston Symphony's announcement yesterday, can amount to $125,000.

Rockefeller Foundation grants of $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 enabled the Boston Symphony to start the school. The new grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1949 largely from gifts by the R. C. A. Division of the Radio Corporation of America. Although drawn upon each year to assist the Center's 4,575 students, it has been increased since that time by gifts and the sums raised by the Friends.

The Center opens its thirteenth session July 4 with Charles Munch again as director. Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher will be guest teachers of composition, with Leonard Bernstein in charge of conducting. Richard Burgin and William Kroll head the chamber music activities, Hugh Ross is director of the choral department and Boris Goldovsky of the opera department. Opera or choral performances are scheduled for Tuesday nights, student orchestra concerts for Thursday nights, chamber music for Sunday afternoons and composers' forums for Sunday nights.

• • •

Berlioz Novelty

Hector Berlioz' "Lelio, or the Return to Life," Op. 14B, will have its first American performance in Saturday night's concert of the City College Symphony Orchestra and Chorus under Fritz Jahoda's direction in the college's Great Hall. The work, described as a monodrama, is a sequel to the "Fantastic Symphony." Adolph Anderson, a professor in the college's chemistry department, will sing the title role. The choristers represent the other "real persons," while three tenors figure as "fictitious persons."

• • •

Flying Philadelphians

On its first tour of continental Europe, which opens Tuesday night in Brussels, the Philadelphia Orchestra will play an American work in all but one of the eighteen cities on its route. The eight American compositions in the touring repertory are Ernest Bloch's Concerto Grosso No. 2, Richard Yardumian's "Armenian Suite," Norman Dello Joio's "Epigraph," the late Harl McDonald's "Santa Fe Trail," Aaron Copland's "Old American Songs," Samuel Barber's "Essay No. 2," Virgil Thomson's "Louisiana Story" suite, and Howard Hanson's "Sinfonia Sacra." William Warfield will sing in the Copland work. The two programs in Helsinki, the last stop on the tour, will be devoted to Sibelius' music.

The orchestra will have a municipal send-off when it leaves Philadelphia at 7:30 p. m. today on three KLM planes. Before embarking Mr. Ormandy will make a brief guest appearance as conductor of the city's Police and Firemen's Band.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 115,945

MAY 12 1955

Louis Mennini Opera to Bow At Tanglewood

A new opera, "The Rope," has just been completed by Louis Mennini, member of the Eastman School of Music faculty, and will be premiered this summer at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

Dates of the premiere are Aug. 8 and 9. The work, commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, is based on a one-act drama of the same title by Eugene O'Neil.

In the nature of a chamber opera, it requires a single set and a cast of five characters accompanied by a chamber orchestra of 25 pieces.

"The Rope," as written by O'Neil, is a sober, "rather gloomy" story, according to Mennini, who says, "I have tried to add warmth to it through the music."

---

165 -

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

MAY 22 1955

MUSIC STUDENTS GET TWO GRANTS

Magazine, Building Concern Give Scholarship and Prize to the Berkshire Center

The Berkshire Music Center's supply of scholarships and prizes has been increased by two new contributions this year. High Fidelity, the magazine published in the Berkshires, is offering an annual $250 scholarship to an outstanding student. And the Industrial Buildings Corporation is offering an annual $250 prize for a student composer.

The center has more than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids. The principal aid comes from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, which was established in 1947 and which last summer aided 196 of the 400 students. The fund is reimbursed by beneficiaries if they later earn enough money to do so.

This year the Koussevitzky Music Foundation has granted $1,000 to aid students with tuition scholarships in their living expenses during the six-week session of the center from July 3 to Aug. 14.

Among the 1955 scholarships are the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship and the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship, both of which offer $150 tuition awards, and two Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarships and the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, each of $250 for student composers.

Prizes include $250 offered to a student composer by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, $250 by Jascha Heifetz for the best violinist and $250 by Gregor Piatigorsky for the best cellist.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 372,583 - S. 247,755

MAY 25 1955

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Opens July 6

Now that the warm, humid weather has thrust its sticky personality upon us, the thought of outdoor music under the stars and away from the city's hubbub is more than tempting.

The symphonic concerts at Lewisohn Stadium, which begin June 20, offer us solace in this direction with little travel involved. But, for those who don't mind a four-hour ride by train or car, the Berkshire Festival, which opens Wednesday, July 6, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., offers the pleasure of music mixed with cooler breezes, country atmosphere together with high hills, plus a Music Shed and Theater Concert Hall, each with a roof overhead in the event of rain.

In case I sound paradoxical about this music business under the stars, the 6,000-seat Music Shed is open on three sides, and the Theater Concert Hall, holding about 1,200, is pretty vacant too in the back and on the sides. Also, there is always the extensive grass for those with or without blankets, who yearn to sit outside for little money and have music wafted to them from a slightly longer distance.

Kroll Quartet Opens

The opening Wednesday, July 6, chamber music concert will be played by the Kroll Quartet in the Theater Concert Hall, which will house all of the programs for the initial two weeks.

All-Beethoven will be the schedule, as follows: Quartets in C Minor, Op. 18, No. 4; in F Minor, Op. 95; in C Sharp Minor, Op. 131.

Friday night, July 8, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play the Bach Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with the ensemble's lady flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist, Mozart's "Prague" Symphony, K. 504, Stravinsky's "Orpheus," and Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata complete the program.

Saturday, July 9, Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, will be guest maestro for a program which includes two works by Haydn, the Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; and the Symphony in B Flat, No. 98. Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" with Joseph de Pasquale as viola soloist, and Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12, complete the concert.

Sunday afternoon, July 10, the final event of the first week-end features the "Mass in B Minor" by Bach with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Soloists will be: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Subscription tickets are being sold until June 1 at reduced rates over the single ticket price, at Symphony Hall, Boston. The Festival comprises six week-ends, ending Sunday, Aug. 14.

Music Tonight . . .

All City High School chorus and Orchestra. Carnegie Hall, 8:30.

Opera Workshop of Manhattan School of Music. "The Fatal Oath" by Boris Koutzen, world premiere. "Love Triumphant" by Cimarosa, American premiere. Hugh Ross, conductor. Hunter College Auditorium, 8:15.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
VARIETY

MAY 18 1955

The Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood, Mass., has received a $125,000 grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, spread over five years, and conditioned by the fact that the school must raise a similar amount from other sources. In 1940 and '41, the Foundation gave the Boston Symphony $65,000 to help start its summer Center.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

MAY 29 1955

STUDENT CONCERTS SET

21 Programs Are Scheduled at Berkshire Music Center

Students of the Berkshire Music Center will give twenty-one concerts during the period of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be open to those who become friends of the center by making a voluntary contribution.

Six of the concerts will be presented by the student orchestra in the Shed on July 7, 14, 21, 28 and Aug. 4 and 13. The chamber music department will give concerts in the Chamber Music Hall the mornings of July 10, 17, 24, 31, Aug. 7 and 14. The compositions department will hold forums in the same hall July 17, 24, 31 and Aug. 6.

The opera department will offer performances on Aug. 8 and 9. It will join with the chorus department in programs July 26, Aug. 1 and 2.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
TIMES-STAR
Circ D. 147,880

MAY 11 1955

Johnson Has Heavy Summer Schedule

Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, has planned an extensive summer itinerary.

Following his tour of the Far East as co-conductor of the Symphony of the Air (formerly NBC-Symphony), Johnson will return to the states to direct the Third Festival and Seminar of Early American Moravian Music (nine concerts in all), June 18 to June 27.

On July 9, the first Saturday evening concert of the Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood, Pittsfield, (Mass.) will find Johnson wielding the baton for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his first appearance as conductor at one of the regular Tanglewood concerts.

This year he will again return to Transylvania Music Camp, Brevard, N. C., where he will conduct the Transylvania Symphony Orchestra, on Sunday afternoon, July 17.

The Naumburg Memorial Concert, which will be celebrating its 50 anniversary of their summer concerts in Central Park on the Mall, New York City, will be conducted by Johnson on Sunday evening, July 31.

August will find Johnson in Wisconsin, where he will conduct the third annual Peninsula Musical Festival, in Fish Creek, (Wisconsin). This Festival was inaugurated by Johnson two summers ago.

At the completion of the above engagements, he will vacation from late August 23 to late September, at which time he will return to Cincinnati for the sixty-first season of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and his ninth season as its music director.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD

MAY 15 1955

Overtones

Ontario Festival Seen Major Repertory Scoop

BY WILLIAM FLEMING

Two music festivals of major proportions within excursion, if not commuting distance, of Syracuse are looming large on the summer horizon. One is the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which extends through six weekends from July 6 to Aug. 14; the other is the new musical adjunct of the Shakespearean Festival, July 9 to Aug. 6, at Stratford, Ont., a suburb of Toronto.

William Fleming

Beethoven is the principal composer to be feted at Tanglewood, together with a smattering of Bach, Mozart and Brahms, choices that could hardly be described as daringly different. The Boston Symphony will be on hand as usual with its regular conductor, Charles Munch, who will lead two concerts each weekend with guests taking up the baton for a third. The ranks of the latter will be made up of Pierre Monteux, still going strong at 80; Leonard Bernstein, returning after a year devoted to composition; and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony.

On the programs with Beethoven's nine symphonies and odd overtures will be a procession of soloists with Rudolf Serkin playing the "Emperor" concerto; Eugene Istomin, the Fourth Piano Concerto; Isaac Stern, who appears in Syracuse next winter, in the Violin Concerto; and Isaac Stern teamed with Gregor Piatigorsky performing the Brahms Double Concerto. The only contemporary work will be Samuel Barber's new oratorio, The Prayers of Kierkegaard, with Leontyne Price as vocal soloist.

BEETHOVEN 6 NIGHTS

Beethoven's chamber music will be performed on six successive Wednesday evenings beginning July 6 with the Kroll String Quartet The Beaux Arts Trio will feature the "Ghost" and the "Archduke" trios July 13; Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin will collaborate in Violin Sonatas July 20; the New Music String Quartet follows on July 27; Rudolf Serkin plays three Piano Sonatas including the great "Hammerklavier"; and Gregor Piatigorsky performs all five Cello Sonatas Aug. 10.

Bach's B Minor Mass will be heard July 10 with the combined forces of the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, plus Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm as vocal soloists. Beethoven's Missa Solemnis comes Aug. 5 with Leonard Bernstein conducting. Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan will comprise the vocal Quartet, together with the Berkshire Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Mr. Munch will close the festival with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Until June 1, tickets are available at the Subscription Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

CANADIAN SCOOP

Running concurrently with the Festival is the educational program of the Berkshire Music Center, which attracts students from all over the country. Aaron Copland, for the first time since the school was founded in 1940, will be on leave of absence in Europe. His place in teaching composition will be filled by Roger Sessions and the German composer, Boris Blacher. Leonard Bernstein and Seymour Lipkin head the conducting department; Richard Burgin and William Kroll, the chamber music division; Hugh Ross is, as usual, in charge of choral music; while Boris Goldovsky, assisted by Sarah Caldwell and Paul Ulanowsky, will be there for the opera workshop.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
Circ. D. 13,2

Tanglewood Season To Feature Concerts By Music Students

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire hills is now preparing for its thirteenth year, which will commence with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the U. S., Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3. The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, of Woodstock, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the BSO.

Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are held Sunday evenings at 8:30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14. An attendance of 1,485 was registered at these events last summer.

Five evenings of opera, one integrated with choral works, will be given this summer in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Attendance at these events on the evenings of August 1, 8, 9 requires reserved tickets procurable in advance from the Friends' office at Tanglewood. Five thousand persons enjoyed these evenings in 1955.

Unscheduled demonstrations by students of Department V, the Tanglewood Study Group organized three years ago for the pure enjoyment of music by amateurs, will be given, as in the past, on a Friday afternoon in the Barn; and also planned are Monday evening forums, Ralph Berkowitz moderating, in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
NEWS
Circ. D. 161,017

APR 19 1955

Berkshire Tryouts Will Be April 27

Final Indianapolis auditions for admission to the Berkshire (Mass.) Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund will be held in the auditorium of the Wilking Music Co. April 27 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalogue.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six weeks. This year the dates are July 4 to August 14. There will be courses in conducting, chamber music, choral music, composition and opera, in addition to a study group.

PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

NEWARK, N. J.
NEWS
Circ. D. 256,177 - S. 271,74

MAY 1 1955

Concerts

At Tanglewood Announced

BOSTON—The principal works of Beethoven will occupy a considerable part of the programs at the Berkshires Festival this summer at Lenox, Mass. This was announced today by Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which annually sponsors the festival in Tanglewood, the orchestra's summer home. Many visitors to the Berkshire area take in the Boston Symphony concerts during vacation.

This year the series will include nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental. The vocal soloists, here announced, will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnie to be continued by Leonard Bernstein on Aug. 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Dr. Munch will close the festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm.

Dr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on Aug. 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Cello Concert

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two weekends in the Theater Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four weekends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, Aug. 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson. The chamber music of Beethoven will be performed at six successive Wednesday evening concerts by The Kroll String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio, Isaac Stern, the New Music String Quartet, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Subscription tickets for the concerts are obtainable from the Subscription Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass., until June 1.

HIGHLANDS, N. J.
STAR
Circ. W. 975

JUN 3 1955

The Rockefeller Foundation has agred to match, dollar-for-dollar, whatever funds the Boston Symphony raises for the support of its Berkshire Music Center, which is the orchestra's summer school of music.

The grant extends for five years, and could total $125,000 since the orchestra usually raises $25,000 annually. The Foundation helped the orchestra establish the school in 1940 and 1941 with grants totalling $65,000.

DAVENPORT IA.
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
MAY 29 1955

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer —
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
"Music, that knows no country, race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

he Berkshire music center, the mer school of music sponsored the Boston Symphony orches- preceding and during the an- al Berkshire Music festival at nglewood, Mass., will be the re- ent of a series of grants from Rockefeller Foundation begin- g this summer. Under the stip- ations set forth by the Founda- n the center will receive a sum atching the money, a mini- um of about $15,000, that the nter recieves from other urces.

Last year the contributions rom Friends of the Center mounted to about $25,000. This ear the goal is $35,000. By the end f 1959, the potential gain to the cholarship fund into which the atching events will annually be aid is estimated at $325,000.

THE FOUNDATION

. . previously has assisted the erkshire Music Center. During he years 1940 and 1941, grants to- aling $65,000 were given to the oston Symphony orchestra thus nabling it to begin its summer chool at Tanglewood. Since the eginning of the school in 1940, early 5,000 students from every state in the union and from many oreign countries have been enrolled and a large enrollment is expected this year.

THE CONSERVATORY

. . of Music at Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa will have a orkshop for piano teachers at the College on June 27, 28 and 29. Participating in the event will be Polly Gibbs, professor of music at Louisiana State University and a national authority on piano teaching methods and the national chairman of Junior Piano of the Music Teachers National Association and Julian Bern, who joined the Cornell College Conservatory staff in September 1954. Mr. Bern will conduct the piano master class during the workshop. Mr. Bern will present two piano recitals and there will be additional concerts given by the students.

THE FIRST OF FOUR

. . .symphonic concerts by the world renowned Concertgebouw orchestra of Amsterdam, Holland will be broadcast at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, (Sunday) on CBS radio. Rafael Kubelik will direct the transcribed program which will include the "Berkshire Symphonies" by the young Dutch composer, Jurriaan Andriessen, who wrote the music for a documentary film about the Berkshire Music Center on commission by the late Dr. Sergi Koussevitsky. After that music was completed the Dutch government comissioned him to write a symphony which he called "Berkshire Symphonies" and dedicated to Dr. Koussevitsky.

RUDOLF FIRKUSNY

. . .pianist, a favorite with Tri-City concert goers and who has appeared as soloist with the Tri-City Symphony orchestra will be featured on the program of the Little Orchestra Society, Inc., of New York next season in an all Mozart concert in honor of the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth. He will be heard in a Mozart piano concerto in the Town Hall series on Oct. 17. The Mozart festival will also present a one-act comic opera "Der Schauspieldirektor," starring Mariquita Moll, Metropolitan opera soprano.

HIGHLIGHTS

. . .of the remainder of the season, the ninth in the Little Orchestra Society series, will be a concert performance of Ravel's opera ballet, "L'Enfante et les Sortileges," in an English translation and Morton Gould's Concerto for Tap Dancer and Orchestra with Danny Daniels as solist. Seasonal offerings will be the first New York presentation of a Christmas Cantata by Juan Orrego-Salas, Chilean composer, and Schubert's Mass in A Flat Major which has been scheduled for Easter-time presentation, as well as first performances of works by many composers. Soloists besides Mr. Firkusny will be Joseph Szigeti, violinist and the young Venezuelan pianist, Judith James, making her debut with the orchestra. The orchestra will present eight concerts and will follow the established formula of programs consisting of classic or romantic masterpieces seldom or never heard by modern audiences interspersed with important contemporary compositions.

INTERESTING BITS

. . .William Primrose has bought one of the four violas made by Guarnerius. The instrument, dating from the 1690s was formerly in a collection in Valparaiso, Chile . . .The Music Society of Santa Barbara, Calif, will give its third annual Bach Festival June 3 to 5 . . .For his work on behalf of Scarlatti, Ralph Kirkpatrick has received the Knight Cross of the Italian order, "Al Merito della Republica."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,590 - Sat. 176,542

MAY 28 1955

Music

Berkshire Festival, An Ideal in Action

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI

It is always a pleasure to hear of increasing interest in the Berkshire Festival. There has been further news of pledged support for the Tanglewood center. Musicians and music lovers both have reason to rejoice.

This has become one of America's most prized musical institutions. It can no more be abolished now than could the Stadium Concerts, the Goldman Band series or the Curtis Institute.

It took years of hard work on the part of the Boston Symphony authorities, civic-minded groups and individual patrons to keep the Berkshire Music Center going.

Devoted Pilgrims.

It took the loyalty and devotion of thousands of symphonic pilgrims, attending the summer sessions year after year, to persuade those in control that the Berkshire Festival was something they wanted and needed and were going to do their utmost to keep.

Behind it all, of course, was the dream of one man, Serge Koussevitzky. The image of this idealist is fastened securely on the Tanglewood countryside. The Festival is his monument and memorial.

Glorious Vacation Spot.

Koussevitzky had even bigger things in mind; a kind of Shangri-la of the arts, where drama, music and literature could be nurtured freely in the summer sun, and people could come from everywhere, as to a shrine, for spiritual wealth.

The Berkshire Music Center may not be quite that, but it has become several irresistible things to thousands of Americans. To begin with, it is one of the most attractive vacation spots in the country.

Center a School, Too.

It offers a prolonged holiday complete with music, music by the great names rendered by one of the greatest orchestras in the world. These concerts in the "Shed" are among the summer glories of the American scene.

But the center is a school, too, a practical training ground for eager young musicians. Several thousand youngsters have enrolled in the past decade and gained incalculable benefit from their sojourn in the Berkshire hills.

They have had the guidance of some of the best creative and pedagogic minds in world music. They have had a sort of laboratory in which to work out problems of opera staging, podium technic and composition.

Broadened by Gifts.

To support and broaden this service, gifts have come from RCA-Victor and a group of donors known as the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. To these was added recently a generous yearly grant for five summers by the Rockefeller Foundation.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Times-Picayune-States
Circ. S. 27

MAY 15 1955

THE COLUMN

On the Square

By Ed Brooks

Music Grants

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in co[illegible] with the Berkshire Fes[illegible] benefit from a series [illegible] from the Rockfeller Foundation.

Over a five-year period, commencing this summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources "for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra." The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Foundation has contributed to the Berkshire Music Center: Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 enabled the orchestra to start its music school.

All of which spawns the idea that some sort of foundation support might well be merited by the new Experimental Opera Theater of America here, with its worthy aim to professionally train and present young singers. Finals in the group's nationwide auditions are to be held here Friday at the Roosevelt hotel, winners of New Orleans and New York regional auditions competing.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

MAY 29 1955

Outdoor Music to Open With Naumburg Concert

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Tanglewood Premiere

Louis Mennini's opera "The Rope" will have its first performances M[illegible] and Tuesday nights, Au[illegible] 9, in Tanglewood's Th[illegible] Concert Hall, as a part o[illegible] Berkshire Music Center's [illegible] at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Since this is announced as included in an "evening of opera," it is presumably a short work. Counting the Berkshire Festival concerts and the Center's student performances, there will be one or more programs on thirty-six of the forty-two days [illegible] the Tanglewood session, plus three forums on Mondays, July 11, 18 and 25, in Lenox' Town Hall.

The Boston Symphony will hold public rehearsals on four Saturday mornings, beginning July 24. The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" comprehensive program is set for Thursday night, Aug. 11.

* * * *

certs under Edwin Franko Gold-

DAVENPORT IA.
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
MAY 15 1955

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

MANY VOCALISTS

. . . will be heard at the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer. There will be five major selections in which the singers will be featured. Adele Addison who has sung in Davenport and David Lloyd will appear in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" and the same composer's Ninth symphony. Miss Addison will sing in the Bach B Minor Mass and Mr. Lloyd will appear in Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mac Morgan, Donald Gramm, Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Florence Kopleff and John McCollum also will be heard and another great vocal work will be Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

the association and re up to and in

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Times-Picayune-States
Circ. S. 273,711

JUN 5 1955

Music Festival

In case you're planning a trip East this summer, we remind you of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, [illegible], scheduled for six weeks, July 6 through August 14. The Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, will close the festivities on the latter date with a performance of Beethoven's magnificent Symphony No. 9.

* * *

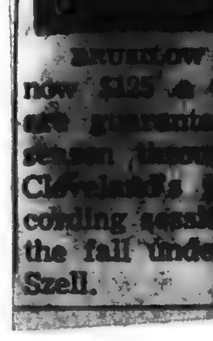
George Freedley and John A. Reeves have come up with a revised, augmented edition of "A History of the Theater," their excellent source book of theatrical information.

Its 960 large pages, including hundreds of photos, contemporary prints, posters, pictures of famous players, etc., covers theater from beginnings in Egypt to the period 1940-1955. Handsome and informative, it's published by Crown and sells for $6.

Ed Brooks

Chosen Soloist

Anshel Brusilow, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra this past season, is one of eight American-born soloists announced for the tenth Brevard Music Festival, Aug. 12 through 28, at Brevard, N. C. He'll be heard in the Sibelius Concerto on Aug. 13.



BRUSILOW

Brusilow is another of the fine musicians who won't be returning to the New Orleans orchestra this fall. He's accepted a post with the Cleveland Symphony, we understand. Minimum salary with the Cleveland orchestra is now $125 a week and the men are guaranteed at least $300 a season through recording work. Cleveland's first Epic label recording sessions are scheduled for the fall under conductor George Szell.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

DAVENPORT IA
DEMOCRAT & TIMES

MAY 29 1955

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

> "How many of us ever stop to think
> Of music as a wondrous magic link
> "With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer —
> "When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care.
> "Music, that knows no country, race or creed,
> "But gives to each, according to his need"!
> —Anonymous

The Berkshire music center, the mer school of music sponsored the Boston Symphony orches- preceding and during the an- Berkshire Music festival at glewood, Mass.. will be the re- ient of a series of grants from Rockefeller Foundation beginning this summer. Under the stip- ations set forth by the Founda- the center will receive a sum atching the money, a mini- m of about $15,000, that the ter recieves from other rces.

Last year the contributions rem Friends of the Center mounted to about $25,000. This ear the goal is $35,000. By the end 1959, the potential gain to the holarship fund into which the atching events will annually be aid is estimated at $325,000.

THE FOUNDATION

. . . previously has assisted the Berkshire Music Center. During the years 1940 and 1941, grants totaling $65,000 were given to the Boston Symphony orchestra thus enabling it to begin its summer school at Tanglewood. Since the beginning of the school in 1940, nearly 5,000 students from every state in the union and from many foreign countries have been enrolled and a large enrollment is expected this year.

THE CONSERVATORY

. . of Music at Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Iowa will have a workshop for piano teachers at the College on June 27, 28 and 29. Participating in the event will be Polly Gibbs, professor of music at Louisiana State University and a national authority on piano teaching methods and the national chairman of Junior Piano of the Music Teachers National Association and Julian Bern, who joined the Cornell College Conservatory staff in September 1954. Mr. Bern will conduct the piano master class during the workshop. Mr. Bern will present two piano recitals and there will be additional concerts given by the students.

THE FIRST OF FOUR

. . .symphonic concerts by the world renowned Concertgebouw orchestra of Amsterdam, Holland will be broadcast at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, (Sunday) on CBS radio. Rafael Kubelik will direct the transcribed program which will include the "Berkshire Symphonies" by the young Dutch composer, Jurriaan Andriessen, who wrote the music for a documentary film about the Berkshire Music Center on commission by the late Dr. Sergi Koussevitsky. After that music was completed the Dutch government comissioned him to write a symphony which he called "Berkshire Symphonies" and dedicated to Dr. Koussevitsky.

RUDOLF FIRKUSNY

. . .pianist, a favorite with Tri-City concert goers and who has appeared as soloist with the Tri-City Symphony orchestra will be featured on the program of the Little Orchestra Society, Inc., of New York next season in an all Mozart concert in honor of the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth. He will be heard in a Mozart piano concerto in the Town Hall series on Oct. 17. The Mozart festival will also present a one-act comic opera "Der Schauspieldirektor," starring Mariquita Moll, Metropolitan opera soprano.

HIGHLIGHTS

. . .of the remainder of the season, the ninth in the Little Orchestra Society series, will be a concert performance of Ravel's opera ballet, "L'Enfante et les Sortileges," in an English translation and Morton Gould's Concerto for Tap Dancer and Orchestra with Danny Daniels as solist. Seasonal offerings will be the first New York presentation of a Christmas Cantata by Juan Orrego-Salas, Chilean composer, and Schubert's Mass in A Flat Major which has been scheduled for Easter-time presentation, as well as first performances of works by many composers. Soloists besides Mr. Firkusny will be Joseph Szigeti, violinist and the young Venezuelan pianist, Judith James, making her debut with the orchestra. The orchestra will present eight concerts and will follow the established formula of programs consisting of classic or romantic masterpieces seldom or never heard by modern audiences interspersed with important contemporary compositions.

INTERESTING BITS

...William Primrose has bought one of the four violins made by Guarnerius. The instrument, dating from the 1690s was formerly in a collection in Valparaiso, Chile . . .The Music Society of Santa Barbara, Calif, will give its third annual Bach Festival June 3 to 5 . . .For his work on behalf of Scarlatti, Ralph Kirkpatrick has received the Knight Cross of the Italian order, "Al Merito della Republica."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 516,590 - Sat. 176,542

MAY 28 1955

Music

Berkshire Festival, An Ideal in Action.

By LOUIS BIANCOLLI.

It is always a pleasure to hear of increasing interest in the Berkshire Festival. There has been further news of pledged support for the Tanglewood center. Musicians and music lovers both have reason to rejoice.

This has become one of America's most prized musical institutions. It can no more be abolished now than could the Stadium Concerts, the Goldman Band series or the Curtis Institute.

It took years of hard work on the part of the Boston Symphony authorities, civic-minded groups and individual patrons to keep the Berkshire Music Center going.

Devoted Pilgrims.

It took the loyalty and devotion of thousands of symphonic pilgrims, attending the summer sessions year after year, to persuade those in control that the Berkshire Festival was something they wanted and needed and were going to do their utmost to keep.

Behind it all, of course, was the dream of one man, Serge Koussevitzky. The image of this idealist is fastened securely on the Tanglewood countryside. The Festival is his monument and memorial.

Glorious Vacation Spot.

Koussevitzky had even bigger things in mind; a kind of Shangri-la of the arts, where drama, music and literature could be nurtured freely in the summer sun, and peopie could come from everywhere, as to a shrine, for spiritual wealth.

The Berkshire Music Center may not be quite that, but it has become several irresistible things to thousands of Americans. To begin with, it is one of the most attractive vacation spots in the country.

Center a School, Too.

It offers a prolonged holiday complete with music, music by the great names rendered by one of the greatest orchestras in the world. These concerts in the "Shed" are among the summer glories of the American scene.

But the center is a school, too, a practical training ground for eager young musicians. Several thousand youngsters have enrolled in the past decade and gained incalculable benefit from their sojourn in the Berkshire hills.

They have had the guidance of some of the best creative and pedagogic minds in world music. They have had a sort of laboratory in which to work out problems of opera staging, podium technic and composition.

Broadened by Gifts.

To support and broaden this service, gifts have come from RCA-Victor and a group of donors known as the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. To these was added recently a generous yearly grant for five summers by the Rockefeller Foundation.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

MAY 29 1955

Outdoor Music to Open With Naumburg Concert

PERKINS

LINES OF SPAIN
MADISON AVE.,
W YORK CITY 17
one MUrray Hill 7-6332
r travel agent or attend tomorrow to place a plaque on the bandstand to commemorate his gift of the series and his donation of the present bandstand on the Mall [illegible] 1923. Stuart Constable, of the Department of Parks, will accept the plaque on behalf of the city.

More Outdoors

As usual, the summer season's principal features are the orchestral concerts at the Lewisohn Stadium of City College (June 20-July 30) and the Guggenheim Memorial band concerts under Edwin Franko Gold-

---

DAVENPORT IA
DEMOCRAT & TIMES

MAY 15 1955

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

MANY VOCALISTS

. . . will be heard at the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., this summer. There will be five major selections in which the singers will be featured. Adele Addison, who has sung in Davenport and David Lloyd will appear in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" and the same composer's Ninth Symphony. Miss Addison will sing in the Bach B Minor Mass and Mr. Lloyd will appear in Beethoven's "Fidelio." Mac Morgan, Donald Gramm, Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Florence Kopleff and John McCollum also will be heard and another great vocal work will be Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

[illegible] the association and re [illegible] privileges up to and in

---

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Times-Picayune-States
Circ. S. 273,711

MAY 15 1955

THE COLUMN

On the Square

By Ed Brooks

Music Grants

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Ta[illegible] Lenox, Mass., in co[illegible] the Berkshire Fes[illegible] benefit from a series [illegible] from the Rockfeller [illegible].

Over a five-year period, commencing this summer, the Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources "for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra." The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Foundation has contributed to the Berkshire Music Center: Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 enabled the orchestra to start its music school.

All of which spawns the idea that some sort of foundation support might well be merited by the new Experimental Opera Theater of America here, with its worthy aim to professionally train and present young singers. Finals in the group's nationwide auditions are to be held here Friday at the Roosevelt hotel, winners of New Orleans and New York regional auditions competing.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Times-Picayune-States
Circ. S. 273,711

JUN 5 1955

Music Festival

In case you're planning a trip East this summer, we remind you of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, [illegible], scheduled for six weeks, July 6 through August 14. The Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, will close the festivities on the latter date with a performance of Beethoven's magnificent Symphony No. 9.

* * *

George Freedley and John A. Reeves have come up with a revised, augmented edition of "A History of the Theater," their excellent source book of theatrical information.

Its 960 large pages, including hundreds of photos, contemporary prints, posters, pictures of famous players, etc., covers theater from beginnings in Egypt to the period 1940-1955. Handsome and informative, it's published by Crown and sells for $6.

Ed Brooks

Chosen Soloist

Anshel Brusilow; concertmaster and assistant conductor of the New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra this past season, is one of eight American-born soloists announced for the tenth Brevard Music Festival, Aug. 12 through 28, at Brevard, N. C. He'll be heard in the Sibelius Concerto on Aug. 13.

BRUSILOW

Brusilow is another of the fine musicians who won't be returning to the New Orleans orchestra this fall. He's accepted a post with the Cleveland Symphony, we understand. Minimum salary with the Cleveland orchestra is now $125 a week and the men are guaranteed at least $300 a season through recording work. Cleveland's first Epic label recording sessions are scheduled for the fall under conductor George Szell.

MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 118,641 - S. 105,109

MAY 29 1955

12 U-M Seniors To Appear In Commencement Concert

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Music Editor

The University of Miami School of Music will present 12 seniors as soloists and student conductors with the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra at the annual commencement concert at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the auditorium of the Miami Senior High School. Admission will be free.

Participants and the works they will present:

Wesley Collins, Concerto for Trombone and Orchestra by Paul Vidal, with Don Lee Rose, student conductor. Collins is from Sarasota, is a member of the University Band and is a student of Albert Clarke. Rose is a graduate of Miami Edison and is a student of Robert Crawford.

Richard Bullman, baritone, "O vin; dissipe la tristesse," from Ambrose Thomas' "Hamlet." Bullman is a graduate of Coral Gables High and is a voice student of Robert Crawford. He holds a Press Foundation scholarship.

Betty Dasher, Poeme for Flute and Orchestra, with Taavo Virkhaus conducting. Miss Dasher is from St. Petersburg and is a student of John Paul Murphy. Virkhaus is a native of Estonia and is a graduate of Fort Lauderdale High. He is a student of Robert Crawford and Joel Belov.

Charlene Hecker, first movement Saint-Saens Concerto in B-minor for Violin and Orchestra. Miss Hecker is from La Porte, Ind. She is a member of the University Orchestra and a violin pupil of Joel Belov.

Marilyn Grayson, Concertino for Piano and Orchestra by Jean Francaix. Miss Grayson is a graduate of Miami Senior High and is a piano pupil of Jeffrey Stoll. She holds the highest academic award of this year's graduating class.

Fred Cushman, tenor, "Che gelida manina," from Puccini's "La Boheme." Cushman is a former student of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and the Manhattan School of Music. He is a voice student of Dr. Arturo di Filippi, and holds an opera scholarship.

Taavo Virkhaus, conducting his own composition, "Theme and Development."

Catherine Carter Rhapsody for Clarinet and Orchestra, by Claude Debussy. Miss Carter is a graduate of Miami Senior High. She is a member of the University Orchestra and a clarinet student of Thomas C. Collins.

Albert Pelletier, two movements of Handel's Organ Concerto No. 10 Pelletier transferred from the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart at the end of his first year. He is an organ student of Dr. Ralph A. Harris.

Joan Cornberg, first movement of Piano Concerto No. 10 by Schuman, with William Higgins conducting. Miss Cornberg is a graduate of Miami Jackson and a Dade County scholarship student. She is the pupil of Jeffrey Stoll and president of SAI.

HERMAN BRISCH

Higgins is from Sebring, Fla. He is a member of the University Band, is president of Phi Mu Alpha and is a conducting student of Robert Crawford.

* * *

ENSEMBLE: The newly-organized Friends of Chamber Music, Inc., have elected the following officers: Frank S. Eden, president; Burton Wilson, vice president; Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, secretary; Robert Kistler, assistant secretary, and Lawrence Friedman, treasurer.

The board of directors includes, Dr. Joe Belov, Lacy Coe, Maj. Robert Crawford, Robert Tyler Davis, Dr. Bertha Foster, Mrs. A. F. French Jack Gordon, Henry Gregor, Mrs. Leland Hyzer, Mrs. Eda Keary Liddle, Edward Mandell, Mrs. Grady Norton, Paul Halvor Reno, Dr. Philipp Rezek, Mrs. Homer D. Sayre, Ernest A. Silverman, Isadore B. Simkowitz, Martin Spector, Eric Van Enter, Jacques Wolfe, Dr. Reinhold P. Wolff, and Mrs. Loe S. Wool.

* * *

AMERICAN MUSIC: The Philadelphia Orchestra, now touring Europe, will play at least one American composition in each of the 18 cities on its itinerary. American composers represented are Samuel Barber, Dello Jolo, Howard Hanson, Harl McDonald, Virgil Thompson and Yardumian. The European tour is the first of a major American Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

THE DANCE: Judith Youngerman's School of the Modern Creative Dance and Modern Ballet will present its annual recital tonight at 8 o'clock at the Lear School Auditorium, 1010 West Avenue, Miami Beach. During the program scholarships will be awarded to two students.

* * *

BERKSHIRE: The Rockefeller Foundation has agreed to match, dollar for dollar, whatever funds the Boston Symphony raises for the support of its Berkshire Music Center, which is the orchestra's summer school of music.

The grant extends for five years, and could total $125,000 since the orchestra usually raises $25,000 annually. The foundation helped the orchestra establish the school of 1940 and 1941 with grants totalling $65,000.

* * *

MUSIC CLUB: Dr. Bertha Foster announces a musical fiesta in the gardens for the Musicians Club of America, 1564 Brickell Ave., for Sunday afternoon, June 5. There will be a dinner and entertainment for the benefit of the club's philanthropic fund. A special feature of the program will be a musical travelogue by Mr. and Mrs. Ned Colby, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Preceeding the dinner, Winifred Young will present her pupils in recital at the club.

* * *

SCHOLARSHIP: Marian Anderson, Negro, contralto, has endowed a scholarship fund in Tel Aviv, following her first concert tour of Israel. A scholarship of 600 Israeli pounds will be awarded annually to a talented young musician. The Marian Anderson Scholarship Fund in this country has so far awarded more than $25,000 to 54 American singers.

* * *

NEW WORKS: Several orchestras introduced new works in the last weeks of their seasons. The Springfield (Ohio) Symphony, under Evan Whallon, contributed Jerome Neff's "La Belle Dame Sans Merci." The Seattle Symphony, led by Milton Katims, introduced "A Litany" for chorus and orchestra by R. B. Fitts. And the North Carolina Symphony, under Benjamin Swain played Theron Kirk's Adagietto, a work that won the $1,000 Benjamin prize for "restful" music.

* * *

NOTES: The Symphony Club of the University of Miami will hold its annual meeting Tuesday in the Conference Room, Administration Building, main campus. It will hear annual reports, consider a change in bylaws and elect board members . . . The Miami Public Library's Music Workshop will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m., under the leadership of Mrs. Hilda Steuerman and will study ancient instruments . . . Eileen Farrell, a favorite with Miami concert-goers, will be soloist tomorrow evening on the Telephone Hour (WIOD) . . . Herman Busch, 'cellist of the University of Miami School of Music faculty, will appear in ensemble concerts at the Marlboro (Vt.) Musical Festival this summer . . . The Rockefeller Foundation, through its Humanities Division, has just made a $6,000 grant to the American Symphony Orchestra League Inc., for a study of the by-laws and constitutions of symphony orchestras . . . Alexander Schneider, who left the Budapest Quartet in 1944, is rejoining it in the fall.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

MAY 15 1955

FOUNDATION AIDS BERKSHIRE MUSIC

Rockefeller Grants to Assist Annual Summer School Over Five-Year Period

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony at the annual summer festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., has received a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

These grants, starting this summer, will last for a period of five years. Under the conditions set forth by the Rockefeller Fonundation, the center will annually receive a sum matching the money, above a minimum of $15,000, that it receives from other sources.

Last year's contributions from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center totaled about $25,000. This year the goal is $[illegible]5,000. By the end of 1959 the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, into which the matching events will annually be paid, is estimated at $325,000.

"If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony, said yesterday, "the future of the school is assured."

The Rockefeller Foundation previously has assisted the Berkshire Music Center. In 1940 and 1941, grants totaling $65,000 weer given to the Boston Symphony, thus enabling the orchestra to start its summer school at Tanglewood.

Since the inception of the school in 1940, nearly five thousand students from all over the United States and many foreign countries have enrolled.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN-TIMES
Circ. D. 556,486 - S. 572,049

MAY 29 1955

MUSIC

U.S. Festivals Offer Top Fare

By Felix Borowski

Concertgoers who are not among the thousands making their way to European music centers this summer will find rich opportunities awaiting them at home.

Only in the field of opera are Bayreuth, Munich, Salzburg, etc., offering more than can be obtained in America. In the matter of symphonic and chamber music, the music festivals in this country are remarkable in number and high quality.

The most extensive are the Aspen Festival in Colorado and the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Aspen, at an earlier period one of the legendary silver mining towns, began its musical existence with the Goethe Festival of 1949 and, thanks to the fostering care and enthusiasm of Walter P. Paepcke, has grown [illegible] each season. Last year the Music Associates of Aspen, a nonprofit organization, was formed to maintain the festival and the music school associated with it.

The combination of the two is unique. The faculty members of the school, composed of some of the most notable artists in America, not only teach students who come from all parts of America and abroad, but take part in the concerts. The general music director is Hans Schwieger, conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic, and the dean of the music school is Norman Singer, a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School, New York.

The most remarkable feature of Aspen's concert programs is their variety. From the season's first program on June 29 to the last one, Sept. 4, there will be heard music ancient and modern in the orchestral, chamber music or recital field—music which, strangely enough, seldom or never is heard in the great centers of this country.

How many concertgoers have hearkened to works such as those enumerated in the programs sent to this department? Among the orchestral are Stravinsky's Danses Concertantes; Prokofiev's "Summer Day" Suite; Arriaga Y. Balzola's Symphony and Samuel Barber's Violin Concerto.

Or, to consider the chamber music: Hindemith's Sonatas respectively for oboe, clarinet and piano, his string quartet, Opus 10, and the Sonata for solo violin; Anton von Webern's Five Pieces for Quartet; Bartok's "Contrasts" for Violin, Clarinet and Piano; Britten's Serenade for Tenor, Horn and String Orchestra; Ibert's Capriccio for Ten Instruments; Schulhoff's Concertino for Flute, Viola and Double-bass.

All these and other modern works do not appear to crowd out the necessary classical repertory. Beethoven's, Haydn's Mozart's, Schubert's, Bach's Brahms' orchestral and chamber music are included—the whole repertory chosen by the artist members of the organization in collaboration with Schwieger.

The Berkshire Festival programs, if less varied than Aspen's, offer alluring fare, with six chamber music concerts given by the Kroll and New Music String quartets and Beaux Arts Trio, with Isaac Stern, Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz as guest artists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Pierre Monteux as conductors, will, in addition to concerts devoted entirely to works by Bach, Mozart and Beethoven, present miscellaneous programs.

Contemporary composers represented on the latter will be Stravinsky, with his "Orpheus"; Samuel Barber ("Prayers of Kierkegaard"); Bloch ("Schelomo," with Piatigorsky playing the solo violoncello part); Hindemith ("Der Schwanendreher"); Sessions (Suite from "The Black Maskers"), and Milhaud ("Serenade").

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
Circ. D. 660,509 - S. 1,151,008

MAY 7 1955

What Do You Want to Know?

Submit questions in writing and sign name and address, though not for publication.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

When will the Berkshire Festival be held this year? M.

The 1955 session of the Berkshire Music Center will be held from July 4 to Aug. 14 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., under the direction of Charles Munch. Students may study instrumental music, choral music, composition and opera for the full term of six weeks. Two and four week enrollments are accepted for the Tanglewood Study Group. The activities of the school include concerts there for the public on an almost daily basis with opera or chorus in the theater every Tuesday evening; chamber music every Wednesday evening; student orchestra every Thursday evening in the Shed. Festival concerts are held on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, student chamber music every Sunday morning and composers' concert and forum every Sunday evening. Concerts will be given on Saturday mornings of the third, fourth and fifth weeks for the benefit of the pension fund of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Students apply to Mr. Gail W. Rector, Executive Secretary, Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., prior to June 1 and after that date to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Ticket information for concerts may be obtained from Mr. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Mgr., Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

PASTE OVER

MIAMI, FLA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 118,641 - S. 105,109

MAY 29 1955

12 U-M Seniors To Appear In Commencement Concert

By EDWARD IRELAND
Miami Daily News Music Editor

The University of Miami School of Music will present 12 seniors as soloists and student conductors with the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra at the annual commencement concert at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the auditorium of the Miami Senior High School. Admission will be free.

Participants and the works they will present:

Wesley Collins, Concerto for Trombone and Orchestra by Paul Vidal, with Don Lee Rose, student conductor. Collins is from Sarasota, is a member of the University Band and is a student of Albert Clarke. Rose is a graduate of Miami Edison and is a student of Robert Crawford.

Richard Bullman, baritone, "O vin; dissipe la tristesse," from Ambrose Thomas' "Hamlet." Bullman is a graduate of Coral Gables High and is a voice student of Robert Crawford. He holds a Press Foundation scholarship.

Betty Dasher, Poeme for Flute and Orchestra, with Taavo Virkhaus conducting. Miss Dasher is from St. Petersburg and is a student of John Paul Murphy. Virkhaus is a native of Estonia and is a graduate of Fort Lauderdale High. He is a student of Robert Crawford and Joel Belov.

Charlene Hecker, first movement Saint-Saens Concerto in B-minor for Violin and Orchestra. Miss Hecker is from La Porte, Ind. She is a member of the University Orchestra and a violin pupil of Joel Belov.

Marilyn Grayson, Concertino for Piano and Orchestra by Jean Francaix. Miss Grayson is a graduate of Miami Senior High and is a piano pupil of Jeffrey Stoll. She holds the highest academic award of this year's graduating class.

Fred Cushman, tenor, "Che gelida manina," from Puccini's "La Boheme." Cushman is a former student of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and the Manhattan School of Music. He is a voice student of Dr. Arturo di Filippi, and holds an opera scholarship.

Taavo Virkhaus, conducting his own composition, "Theme and Development."

Catherine Carter Rhapsody for Clarinet and Orchestra, by Claude Debussy. Miss Carter is a graduate of Miami Senior High. She is a member of the University Orchestra and a clarinet student of Thomas C. Collins.

Albert Pelletier, two movements of Handel's Organ Concerto No. 10 Pelletier transferred from the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart at the end of his first year. He is an organ student of Dr. Ralph A. Harris.

Joan Cornberg, first movement of Piano Concerto No. 10 by Schuman, with William Higgins conducting. Miss Cornberg is a graduate of Miami Jackson and a Dade County scholarship student. She is the pupil of Jeffrey Stoll and president of SAI.

HERMAN BRISCH

Higgins is from Sebring, Fla. He is a member of the University Band, is president of Phi Mu Alpha and is a conducting student of Robert Crawford.

* * *

ENSEMBLE: The newly-organized Friends of Chamber Music, Inc., have elected the following officers: Frank S. Eden, president; Burton Wilson, vice president; Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, secretary; Robert Kistler, assistant secretary, and Lawrence Friedman, treasurer.

The board of directors includes, Dr. Joe Belov, Lacy Coe, Maj. Robert Crawford, Robert Tyler Davis, Dr. Bertha Foster, Mrs. A. F. French Jack Gordon, Henry Gregor, Mrs. Leland Hyzer, Mrs. Eda Keary Liddle, Edward Mandell, Mrs. Grady Norton, Paul Halvor Reno, Dr. Philipp Rezek, Mrs. Homer D. Sayre, Ernest A. Silverman, Isadore B. Simkowitz, Martin Spector, Eric Van Enter, Jacques Wolfe, Dr. Reinhold P. Wolff, and Mrs. Loe S. Wool.

* * *

AMERICAN MUSIC: The Philadelphia Orchestra, now touring Europe, will play at least one American composition in each of the 18 cities on its itinerary. American composers represented are Samuel Barber, Dello Jolo, Howard Hanson, Harl McDonald, Virgil Thompson and Yardumian. The European tour is the first of a major American Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

THE DANCE: Judith Youngerman's School of the Modern Creative Dance and Modern Ballet will present its annual recital tonight at 8 o'clock at the Lear School Auditorium, 1010 West Avenue, Miami Beach. During the program scholarships will be awarded to two students.

* * *

BERKSHIRE: The Rockefeller Foundation has agreed to match, dollar for dollar, whatever funds the Boston Symphony raises for the support of its Berkshire Music Center, which is the orchestra's summer school of music.

The grant extends for five years, and could total $125,000 since the orchestra usually raises $25,000 annually. The foundation helped the orchestra establish the school of 1940 and 1941 with grants totalling $65,000.

* * *

MUSIC CLUB: Dr. Bertha Foster announces a musical fiesta in the gardens for the Musicians Club of America, 1564 Brickell Ave., for Sunday afternoon, June 5. There will be a dinner and entertainment for the benefit of the club's philanthropic fund. A special feature of the program will be a musical travelogue by Mr. and Mrs. Ned Colby, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Preceeding the dinner, Winifred Young will present her pupils in recital at the club.

* * *

SCHOLARSHIP: Marian Anderson, Negro, contralto, has endowed a scholarship fund in Tel Aviv, following her first concert tour of Israel. A scholarship of 600 Israeli pounds will be awarded annually to a talented young musician. The Marian Anderson Scholarship Fund in this country has so far awarded more than $25,000 to 54 American singers.

* * *

NEW WORKS: Several orchestras introduced new works in the last weeks of their seasons. The Springfield (Ohio) Symphony, under Evan Whallon, contributed Jerome Neff's "La Belle Dame Sans Merci." The Seattle Symphony, led by Milton Katims, introduced "A Litany" for chorus and orchestra by R. B. Fitts. And the North Carolina Symphony, under Benjamin Swain played Theron Kirk's Adagietto, a work that won the $1,000 Benjamin prize for "restful" music.

* * *

NOTES: The Symphony Club of the University of Miami will hold its annual meeting Tuesday in the Conference Room, Administration Building, main campus. It will hear annual reports, consider a change in by-laws and elect board members . . . The Miami Public Library's Music Workshop will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m., under the leadership of Mrs. Hilda Steuerman and will study ancient instruments . . . Eileen Farrell, a favorite with Miami concert-goers, will be soloist tomorrow evening on the Telephone Hour (WIOD) . . . Herman Busch, 'cellist of the University of Miami School of Music faculty, will appear in ensemble concerts at the Marlboro (Vt.) Musical Festival this summer . . . The Rockefeller Foundation, through its Humanities Division, has just made a $6,000 grant to the American Symphony Orchestra League, Inc., for a study of the by-laws and constitutions of symphony orchestras . . . Alexander Schneider, who left the Budapest Quartet in 1944, is rejoining it in the fall.

MAY [illegible] 1956

FOUNDATION AIDS BERKSHIRE MUSIC

Rockefeller Grants to Assist Annual Summer School Over Five-Year Period

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony at the annual summer festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., has received a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

These grants, starting this summer, will last for a period of five years. Under the conditions set forth by the Rockefeller Fonundation, the center will annually receive a sum matching the money, above a minimum of $15,000, that it receives from other sources.

Last year's contributions from the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center totaled about $25,000. This year the goal is $35,000. By the end of 1960 the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, into which the matching events will annually be paid, is estimated at $325,000.

"If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," Henry B. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony said yesterday, "the future of the school is assured."

The Rockefeller Foundation previously has assisted the Berkshire Music Center. In 1940 and 1941, grants totaling $65,000 weer given to the Boston Symphony, thus enabling the orchestra to start its summer school at Tanglewood.

Since the inception of the school in 1940, nearly five thousand students from all over the United States and many foreign countries have enrolled.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN-TIMES
Circ. D. 556,456 - S. 572,049

MAY 29 1955

MUSIC

U.S. Festivals Offer Top Fare

By Felix Borowski

Concertgoers who are not among the thousands making their way to European music centers this summer will find rich opportunities awaiting them at home.

Only in the field of opera are Bayreuth, Munich, Salzburg, etc., offering more than can be obtained in America. In the matter of symphonic and chamber music, the music festivals in this country are remarkable in number and high quality.

The most extensive are the Aspen Festival in Colorado and the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Aspen, at an earlier period one of the legendary silver mining towns, began its musical existence with the Goethe Festival of 1949, and, thanks to the fostering care and enthusiasm of Walter P. Paepcke, has grown cumulatively each season. Last year the Music Associates of Aspen, a nonprofit organization, was formed to maintain the festival and the music school associated with it.

The combination of the two is unique. The faculty members of the school, composed of some of the most notable artists in America, not only teach students who come from all parts of America and abroad, but take part in the concerts. The general music director is Hans Schwieger, conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic, and the dean of the music school is Norman Singer, a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School, New York.

The most remarkable feature of Aspen's concert programs is their variety. From the season's first program on June 29 to the last one, Sept. 4, there will be heard music ancient and modern in the orchestral, chamber music or recital field—music which, strangely enough, seldom or never is heard in the great centers of this country.

How many concertgoers have hearkened to works such as those enumerated in the programs sent to this department? Among the orchestral are Stravinsky's Danses Concertantes; Prokofiev's "Summer Day" Suite; Arriaga Y. Balzola's Symphony and Samuel Barber's Violin Concerto.

Or, to consider the chamber music: Hindemith's Sonatas respectively for oboe, clarinet and piano, his string quartet, Opus 10, and the Sonata for solo violin; Anton von Webern's Five Pieces for Quartet; Bartok's "Contrasts" for Violin, Clarinet and Piano; Britten's Serenade for Tenor, Horn and String Orchestra; Ibert's Capriccio for Ten Instruments; Schulhoff's Concertino for Flute, Viola and Double-bass.

All these and other modern works do not appear to crowd out the necessary classical repertory. Beethoven's, Haydn's Mozart's, Schubert's, Bach's Brahms' orchestral and chamber music are included—the whole repertory chosen by the artist members of the organization in collaboration with Schwieger.

The Berkshire Festival programs, if less varied than Aspen's, offer alluring fare, with six chamber music concerts given by the Kroll and New Music String quartets and Beaux Arts Trio, with Isaac Stern, Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz as guest artists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch, Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Pierre Monteux as conductors, will, in addition to concerts devoted entirely to works by Bach, Mozart and Beethoven, present miscellaneous programs.

Contemporary composers represented on the latter will be Stravinsky, with his "Orpheus"; Samuel Barber ("Prayers of Kierkegaard"); Bloch ("Schelomo," with Piatigorsky playing the solo violoncello part); Hindemith ("Der Schwanendreher"); Sessions (Suite from "The Black Maskers"), and Milhaud ("Serenade").

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
Circ. D. 660,509 - S. 1,151,008

MAY 7 1955

What Do You Want to Know?

Submit questions in writing and sign name and address, though not for publication.

LARGEST PIPE

List the organs in the

It is almost termine posi cific organs are different ing size and instruments or otherwis in number the world's the organs
Auditoriu
lieved to b
John Wa
delphia;
Germany
Salt Lak
Church,
St. Pat
York Ci
Liverpo in Ulm torium mosa, May 6 (AP freighter Incharra lay off the Mat eased at noon t reports said.

IDE Spot
STECK'S
UTH
SHOW Weekends
ept Mon.

es dy ral era eks.
ents ngleactivi-
e con-on an n opera er every nber mu-evening;
ry Thurs-
Shed. Festival concerts are held on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, student chamber music every Sunday morning and composers' concert and forum every Sunday evening. Concerts will be given on Saturday mornings of the third, fourth and fifth weeks for the benefit of the pension fund of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Students apply to Mr. Gail W. Rector, Executive Secretary, Berkshire Music Center, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., prior to June 1 and after that date to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Ticket information for concerts may be obtained from Mr. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., Mgr., Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUN 14 1955

Massachusetts 1,800-Mile Coastline, Valleys and Hills Are Vacation Wonderland

Cape Cod, Nantucket Big Attraction

Tanglewood, North Shore, Martha's Vinyard High on Bay State Popularity List

MASSACHUSETTS is a fine blending of a series of anachronisms which impart piquant flavor to any vacation within its borders.

The state's 1,800-mile coastline offers every type of seashore vacation. It has pool-still children's bathing beaches of invigorating ocean water, while close by, one may find a vigorous boiling surf for the more expert swimmer. Sand dunes rim picturesque fishing villages. Beach buggies carry sport fishermen to outlying spits where they may cast in the surf for record game fish. Salt-water fishing has moved into high tempo along the inshore coastline of Massachusetts.

One may troll from a boat or fish from the surf or even fish from bridges or docks for a variety of game fish which include striped bass, blue fish or pollock, bluefin, tuna, marlin, mackerel and, of course, the popular bottom feeders.

Clear across on the western side of the state the Berkshire Hills rear their verdant heights to form a cultural center, the highlight of which is the annual world-renowned Tanglewood concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Nearby are schools and recitals of the dance, drama and other cultural forms.

* * *

Erickson down through the Pilgrims' arrival and, latterly, the writings of Joseph C. Lincoln, the Cape and the Islands have been samples of the perfect vacation and a Summer paradise to the traveling and vacation public of the entire world.

Of course, Boston with its historical shrines is visited annually by hundreds of thousands of persons. Here may be found Bunker Hill, and Faneuil Hall, the Old North Church, Paul Revere's birthplace and the Navy's proud "Old Ironsides," names familiar as one's own mirrored face. And within traveling distance lie other landmarks which are "musts" to every visitor to the state. These include Plymouth, "America's Home Town Concord and Lexington, th

House of the Seven Gables, Old Deerfield Village and scores of others.

Really fine eating places are on every side, where one may sample the true New England clam chowder or such exotics as quahog muddle. Here one may taste Indian pudding and ice cream as made by the descendants of the Pilgrim mothers who were first given the recipe by Massasoit's braves.

Hospitality reaches the full extremes in the state through its hotels, inns, guest homes, modern motels and tourist courts. Prices run as low as $2 per person in the guest homes and tourist courts. Cottage colonies offer accommodations for a couple for as low as $45 to $50 a week. Massachusetts hotel men boast that "there is a home for every person who would partake of the individuality of a vacation in Massachusetts."

Worcester Gazette 6/25/55

Tanglewood School To Open 13th Session

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, June 5 — Student registration at he Berkshire Music Center, the ix-week Summer school of usic maintained by the Boston ymphony Orchestra in conection with the annual Berkire Festival concerts, has ssed the 375 mark, Miss Edith Bossler, registrar, reports, ith additional applications beg processed daily, until the ll enrollment of some 400 is eached.

Students from most of the 8 states, Canada and many forign countries will arrive in e hills of western Massachuetts for the opening of the 13th ession of the school on Sunay, July 3, when they will be elcomed by Charles Munch, usic director of the Boston ymphony Orchestra, in his pacity as director of the erkshire Music Center. While omposer Aaron Copeland, asistant director of the school is n leave of absence this Sumer, his post is being filled by ichard Burgin, concertmaster f the orchestra. Ralph Berowitz is dean of the school, nd Gail W. Rector is executive ecretary.

Enrollment is ahead of last ear, when 350 students had egistered at this time. The 375 tudents to date have been hosen from 635 applications, hich resulted from some 1500 nquiries, of which 927 were ew this year. Berkshire Muic Center scholarship grants ave been awarded to 174, inluding 102 who comprise memers of the student symphony rchestra. This year, Miss Bosser reports, so far 18 students ave declined scholarship tuiions, although eligible for hem, 12 in the orchestra, two n composition, four in opera ramatics.

Dept. V Popular

The 375 students to date inlude 88 with the three-yearld Dept. V, the Tanglewood Study Group, 40 of whom are registered for the full six weeks, 15 for four weeks, two for three weeks, 31 for two weeks. Department V offers advanced tudents of music, professional r amateur, an opportunity to pend their vacations in exensive chamber orchestra readng and practice also in early ompositions for unusual enemble. Ingolf Dahl returns o Tanglewood to head this inreasingly popular department his Summer.

Twenty-tight foreign students ave registered in the music chool, nine from Canada, three rom Japan, two from Hawaii nd France, one each from Chile, Puerto Rico, Israel, Greece, New Zealand, Mexico, Argentine, Iran, Brazil, Netherlands-Antilles, Austria and England.

The Tanglewood Study Group includes four of the Canadians, one of the Hawaiians, and the student from Brazil.

Students at the Berkshire Music Center study orchestra playing and conduction under Leonard Bernstein; chamber music from first-chair members of the Boston Symphony; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition from guest composers Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera under Boris Goldovsky; or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study Group under Ingolf Dahl.

Since enrollment in the Tanglewood Study Group may be for either the full six weeks, or for periods of four weeks or two weeks, applications for this department are still being accepted. Members of this department have an opportunity to sing in the Festival Chorus made up of Berkshire Music Center students with the Boston Symphony in Berkshire Festival concerts, including such works this Summer as Beethoven's "Miss Solemnis," Act. II of "Fidelio," and the Ninth Symphony.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUN 24 1955

Music Center Registrations Running High

047

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports, with additional applications being processed daily, until the full enrollment of some 400 is reached. Students from most of the 48 states, Canada and many foreign countries will arrive in the hills of Western Massachusetts for the opening of the 13th session of the school on Sunday, July 3, when they will be welcomed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in his capacity as director of the Berkshire Music Center. While composer Aaron Copland, assistant director of the school, is on leave of absence this summer, his post is being filled by Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra. Ralph Berkowitz is dean of the school; and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary.

Enrollment is ahead of last year, when 350 students had registered at this time. The 375 students to date have been chosen from 635 applications, which resulted from some 1,500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Berkshire Music Center scholarship grants have been awarded to 174, including 102 who comprise members of the student symphony orchestra. This year, Miss Bossler reports, so far 18 students have declined scholarship tuitions, although eligible for them, 12 in the orchestra, two in composition, four in opera dramatics.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUN 10 1955

24 Concerts For Berkshire Festival

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the 16th summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts. Since 1937, this orchestra has played in Tanglewood, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped Musical Shed, designed by Finnish architect Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire Festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

In 1954 — Music Director Charles Munch's fourth summer with the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood —all attendance records were broken. In the six weeks from early July to mid-August, the Festival concert attendance totaled 135,775 (as compared with 119,950 in 1953), and total paid admissions were $330,033 (in 1953 $311,600). Attendance at six Chamber Music Concerts in the 1,152-seat capacity Theatre-Concert hall was 8,750, an average of 1,358. Attendance at the six "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the same auditorium totaled 16,650, an average of 2,275. Twelve concerts by the full orchestra given in the Music Shed, capacity 6,000 persons, attracted audiences of 129,925, an average of 9,197.

In addition, 30,800 persons attended the 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with the Festival, and the school's annual benefit, "Tanglewood on Parade," drew an all-time record of 10,050.

Music lovers, indeed, have shown their increasing awareness of the Berkshire Festival's accessibility from the Connecticut, Mohawk and Hudson Valleys by expressway, state highway, bus, train, airplane, and shown also a welcome for the plan inaugurated last year to increase the number of concerts within the Festival's six-week scope.

Again, in 1955, the Berkshire Festival will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

SPARED PRISON

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUN 13 1955

Boston Symphony Now Preparing For Tanglewood Opening

BOSTON — The Boston Symphony orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood.

At Tanglewood Since 1937

Since 1937, this ochestra each summer has played at Tanglewood, Lenox, where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago, on the plateau-like estate where the American author was a guest and where he told his "Tanglewood Tales."

Since 1938 when the huge pie-shaped music shed, designed by the Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, was erected on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine, the Berkshire festival has attracted crowds from all over the world.

In 1954—Music Director Charles Munch's fourth summer with the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood — all attendance records were broken. In the six weeks from early July to mid-August, the Festival concert attendance totaled 135,775 (as compared with 117,950 in 1953), and total paid admissions were $330,033 (in 1953 ($311,600). Attendance at six chamber music concerts in the 1,152-seat capacity theater-concert hall was 8,750, an average of 1,358. Attendance at the six "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra in the same auditorium totaled 16,650, an average of 2,275. Twelve concerts by the full orchestra given in the music shed, capacity 6,000 persons, attracted audiences of 129,925, an average of 9,197.

30,800 at Concerts

In addition, 30,800 persons attended 30-odd concerts and demonstrations by students of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston orchestra in conjunction with the festival, and the school's annual benefit, "Tanglewood on Parade," drew an all-time record of 10,050.

Again this summer the Berkshire festival will consist of 24 concerts, commencing Wednesday evening, July 6, with the first of six Wednesday concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such noted aggregations as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralp Berkowitz. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the theater-concert hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one), will lead the orchestra in the 12 music shed concerts, also on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Friday, July 22, and concluding Sunday, Aug. 14.

Tanglewood Premieres

Tanglewood premieres—music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills—will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia from the Easter Oratorio;" Stravinsky, "Orpheus;" Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher;" Haydn, Symphony in B-flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to "Don Giovanni;" Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure, "Pavane;" Milhaud, "Serenade;" Honegger, Symphony No. 4; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaad;" Beethoven, "Fidelio" Act II; Bloch, "Schelomo;" Strauss, Suite from "Der Rosenkavlier."

The festival concerts as planned by Mr. Munch, also will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act 2) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center). A representative range of Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios and violin, piano, and cello sonatas will be heard on the Wednesday evening programs.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUN 19 1955

WORLD OF MUSIC: SUMMER SITE FOR ORCHESTRA

Stony Brook and Ellenville Seek Tie-Up For Season With Symphony of the Air

By ROSS PARMENTER

THE Symphony of the Air wants to emulate the Boston Symphony in running a summer music school at a site where it will also give a summer music festival. Needless to say, the Berkshire Festival being the success it is, there are a number of places that would like to become new Tanglewoods. The result has been some cautious flirting between the orchestra and several municipalities eager to be festival centers.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 248,071

JUN 5 1955

Music, Music Everywhere in New England's Music Festivals

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Of all the phenomena surrounding the emergence of the mass market for classical music and, indeed, music of all kinds, the musical festival is the most recent and, in many ways, the most significant. I have no way of obtaining an exact count of the festivals to be held in Europe and America this summer, but from the musical releases I have received—far from complete—it is by no means foolhardy to set the figure somewhere above 150 major musical festivals of one kind or another.

The movement begun in Beethoven's day, that of removing music from the private chambers of noble and churchly patrons to the concert halls—and open air sheds and shells—of the general public has come full cyce, and the music festival is the fullest expression of the availability as well as the acceptance of good music everywhere. Who could have dreamed, even ten years ago, that today in America the box office for concerts of classical music would exceed that of big league baseball by more than five million dollars, a figure excluding recordings, music sales and all other aspects of the field?

One New England festival, that at Tanglewood, is today the largest and one of the most important in the whole world. Indeed, it may be said to be to the United States what Salzburg is to Europe though on a far larger and more elaborate scale. For its total of 25 events plus several operatic ventures, Tanglewood last season attracted something like 300,000 people from all parts of the country and Europe.

This year, with its Beethoven festival, it should considerably exceed that figure for the name of Beethoven remains a fantastic drawing power. To be sure, the Festival offers music of Bach, Mozart, Handel, Wagner, Brahms, Debussy, Haydn, Stravinsky and so on, but the chief emphasis is on Beethoven. All nine symphonies, as well as the Missa Solemnis, the Violin Concerto, several of the piano concertos and Act II of "Fidelio" will be given while in the chamber series various string quartets, trios and sonatas will be offered in series.

It is a little to be regretted, at least by those with more adventuresome tastes in music, that no important new music will be presented. Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" will be repeated from the Boston season, and so will Sessions' "Black Masquers," but otherwise there is little to attract special notice. The only event that does call for special attention is the premiere of Mennini's one-act opera "The Rope," to be given by Boris Goldovsky's opera department on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9. The first American performance of Mozart's unfinished "Zaide" will be given as a curtain raiser. Goldovsky is also doing Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane" and scenes from Berlioz' "Trojans," to carry off the honors for straying from the path.

A relatively new comer to the festival scene is Brandeis University, which begins on Tuesday with the first major performance of Maurice Valency's "The Thracian Horses." It is thus not devoted entirely to music, just as the Boston Arts Festival, now under way, is not devoted entirely to art. But its musical events are exceedingly interesting in the personal presence on the scene of Darius Milhaud, one of the most important contemporary composers, who will conduct his own Percussion Concerto and the Cantate Nuptiale with Adele Addison as soprano soloist.

This concert takes place on Thursday night at the Ullman Amphitheater beginning at 9 p. m., other works on the program by Tippett, Mozart, Berger and Hindemith being conducted by Izler Solomon with the Festival orchestra.

On the Saturday following, the Festival comes to a conclusion with the performance of two of Milhaud's works for the stage, also conducted by the composer. These are "Medea," an opera in three tableaux from the play by Euripedes with a libretto by Madeleine Milhaud and "Salade," a ballet involving both singing and dancing with carnival characters from the Italian Commedia dell 'Arte. The singers include John McCollum, Phyllis Curtin, Donald Gramm, Eunice Alberts and Laurel Hurley. Leon Danelian, premier danseur of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo will dance the leading role in "Salade."

Other events of the Brandeis Festival, now solidly established as one of the more advanced affairs, esthetically speaking, include symposia on literature and the arts, showing of art films, a concert of compositions by Brandeis graduate students and an exhibition of three notable art collections.

In the meantime, in the Public Garden, the Boston Arts Festival presents several distinguished musical events, among them Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" by Boris Goldovsky and the New England Opera Theater, a concert by the New England Conservatory orchestra under Richard Burgin and Brahms' "German Requiem" by the Framingham Choral Society under Edward F. Gilday. Three evenings of dance and ballet are also scheduled, one of them offering Martha Graham in Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring," which was composed for her.

The Castle Hill festival at Castle Hill, Ipswich, offers a lively series this summer for its sixth season at this incredibly beautiful spot on the North Shore. The festival, of all things begins on July 8 and 9 with a Jazz Festival featuring Louis Armstrong, an affair that should prove to be of the most novel and entertaining quality. Other events during the season present the Primavera Singers and Players of the New York Pro Musica, Roman Totnberg, violinist, with an orchestra conducted by Alfredo Antonini, Elena Nikolaidi, Robert Goldsand, pianist, with the New York Woodwind Quintet and finally an orchestral concert by members of the New York Philharmonic. A handsome package!

Lakeville Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,771

JUN 23 1955

Tanglewood Reports Record Sales In Concert Tickets

047

Subscriptions for the 1955 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts held on four Friday evenings, July 22-August 12; four Saturday evenings, July 23-August 13; and four Sunday afternoons, July 24-August 14 in the huge Music Shed, have surpassed those of the summer of 1954, Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr., announces. The six-week festival of 1954 saw an all-time record attendance of 135,775 persons.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the boxoffice, open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The boxoffice will also be open on Sundays, commencing July 3, with the start of the 13th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in conjunction with the Festival concerts. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt; checks and money orders should be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc. and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets. Telephone orders are accepted: phone Lenox 600.

1955's pattern of Shed concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein as guest conductors, calls for four weekends, featuring much of Beethoven's music, including all nine symphonies, the second act of "Fidelio," the "Missa Solemnis," the violin concerto, two piano concertos, and three overtures.

Among the Shed season's noted vocal soloists are Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, Leontyne Price, Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, Donald Gramm, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan. Other soloists are Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, pianists; Isaac Stern, violinist; and Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist.

The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded this year by two weekends of performances by the chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the popular "Bach-Mozart" concerts which are given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall, under the direction of Charles Munch, with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross as guest conductors. Seats for these two weekends, July 8-9-10 and July 15-16-17 are already scarce, with Mr. Bernstein's all-Mozart concert of Fri., July 15, with the conductor doubling as piano soloist and Jennie Tourel as soprano soloist, almost sold out.

Thursday, June 23, 1955

Herald New FALL RIVER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 39,447

JUN 10 1955

Boston Symphony to Play At Berkshire Festival

All nine of Beethoven's symphonies will be performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, in Lenox.

The 1955 season opens on July 6, with a program of Beethoven's chamber music. The full symphony concerts will be for the most part conducted by Charles Munch on weekends.

With Beethoven the featured composer, Munch announces that in addition to the symphonies, the following works will be performed:

Act Two of "Fidelio" in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, and the "Missa Solemnis."

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 15 1955

Tanglewood Ready For 16th Programs To Feature Beethoven

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is preparing these days for its huge annual Operation Tanglewood. For the sixteenth summer in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, music will be presented in the hills of Western Massachusetts.

The Berkshire Festival this year will consist of twenty-four concerts, commencing Wed. evening, July 6, with the first of six Wed. concerts of Beethoven's chamber music by such groups as the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio, the New Music String Quartet, and recitals by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Rudolf Serkin, and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the Music Shed will be devoted to what were originally (and still are known as) the "Bach-Mozart" concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Given Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons in the Theatre-Concert Hall, commencing Friday, July 8, the six concerts will also present works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel, Rameau, Milhaud, Honegger, Faure.

The concert on the afternoon of July 10 will have the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists (Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm), in the presentation of Bach's Mass in B Minor. July 15 will welcome Leonard Bernstein back to Tanglewood, after a year's sabbatical, in an all-Mozart program: the young conductor will also be soloist in the Concerto in G Major, and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in three arias. Thor Johnson, Music Director of the Cincinnati Symphony, and a former Tanglewood student, will lead one of these programs on July 9. Three first desk members of the Orchestra will appear as soloists in this series; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute , on July 8, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, on July 9, and Samuel Mayes, 'cello, on July 16. Also on July 16, Hugh Ross, Director of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the Orchestra and chorus in a performance of Vivaldi's "Gloria".

Charles Munch, with the assistance of Pierre Monteux (three concerts), and Leonard Bernstein (one) will lead the Boston Symphony orchestra in the twelve Music Shed concerts, also on Fri. and Sat. evenings and Sunday afternoons, commencing Fri. July 22, and concluding Sunday, August 14. Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatigorsky, Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Eugene Istomin, Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Catherine Akos, Mac Morgan and Donald Gramm.

Tanglewood premieres – music given for the first time by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire hills - will include this summer: Bach, "Sinfonia fromthe Easter Oratorio;" Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98; Mozart, Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello; Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 and "Gloria" (with chorus); Faure, "Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; Honegger, Symphony No. 4; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard"; Beethover, "Fidelio" Act II; Bloch, "Schelomo"; Strau Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier".

The Festival concerts for 1955 as planned by Mr. Munch, wil feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert performance, the violin concerto , tw piano concertos, three overtues the "Missa Solemnis" (in memor of Serge Koussevitzky, late Musi Director of the Orchestra an Director of the Berkshire Musi Center). A representative rang of Beethoven's chamber music including string quartets, trio and violin, piano, and cello sonatas will be heard on the Wednesday evening programs.

Dividends for Festival patron are four Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

At the annual "Tanglewood on Parade", scheduled this year for Thursday, Aug. 11, a crowd of more than 10,000 hears simultaneous demonstrations by all departments of the music school, has a picnic supper, then attends a gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed.

Ticket sale for the Berkshire Festival concerts has been opened. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, or by telephoning Lenox 600.

Sunday Journal, Providence, R.I., 6/5/55

Bay State Lures With Fun, Culture

Much Offered, From Boston To Berkshires

By LENOX R. BIGELOW

THERE are extra dividends of pleasure and profit along the Massachusetts seacoast between Salisbury on the north and Plymouth on the south. In either area there is every type of active sport, entertainment or lazy relaxation to be found at seashore resorts. In addition, Boston lies right in the center of this region, and there one may find the range of amusements which a big metropolis has to offer.

An important factor is that within these boundaries are more important historic landmarks and literary shrines than in any comparable region in the country. Bunker Hill, Faneuil Hall, Concord, Lexington, Salem, Plymouth, Paul Revere House, House of Seven Gables, Longfellow House—those are names tied inextricably to America's tap roots.

North of Boston the coast is rugged and rocky, but interspersed with some beautiful beaches for swimming, sunbathing and fishing. Fine harbors provide ample shelter for every type of sailing and power craft. Marblehead has attained a nationwide reputation as a yachting center and regattas are held every weekend throughout the summer season.

Art Colonies

Gloucester is not only famous as a resort, but one of the oldest and most colorful commercial fishing ports. Adjacent Rockport, and Gloucester maintain summer art colonies that are outstanding. Salem still carries the storied aura of wealthy and daring clipper ship nabobs whose vessels for years carried the American flag to far-flung foreign ports.

At Saugus, a suburb of Lynn, is the unusual First Iron Works, a restoration of the birthplace of one of America's greatest industries—steel.

South of Boston there is Nantasket, a well-known playground with carnival atmosphere, and Plymouth, the very heart of our American freedoms. Residents of this thriving community have long maintained the traditions and memorials of the original Pilgrim band. What is more, they provide a very special kind of hospitality.

Plymouth offers, too, fine fishing, both fresh and salt water; good beaches, and many other kinds of entertainment.

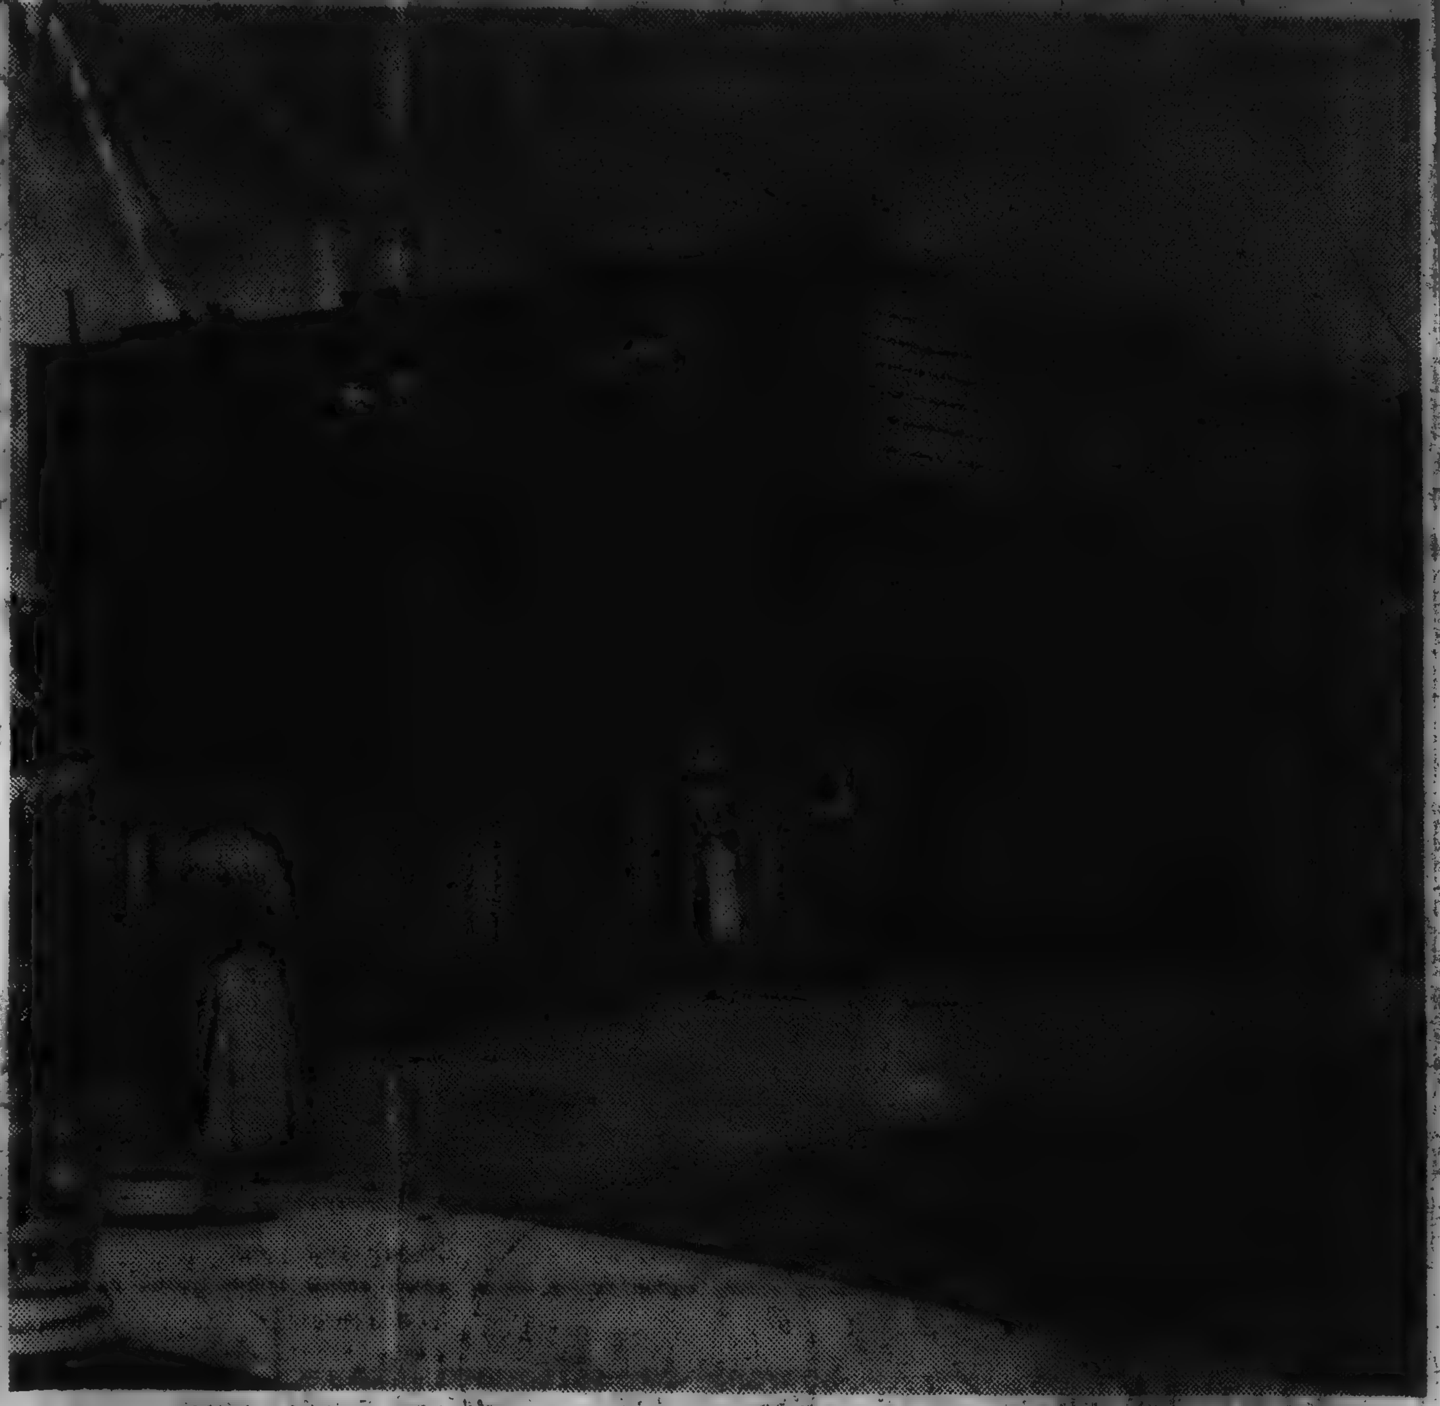
Wherever the vacationer stays, Boston is but a short drive away. In the Massachusetts capital one finds big-league baseball, horse and dog racing, the finest in theaters, night clubs and restaurants, cultural pleasures. One may take a stroll in the Public Gardens for a ride in the swan boats; attend a concert by the Boston Pops Orchestra at the Hatch Shell beside the Charles River; a sightseeing trip up the Charles River by boat; picturesque T-Wharf with its artists' studios, seafood restaurants and fishing fleet.

The unspoiled beauty of the Berkshire Hills and Pioneer Valley distinguish the western end of the state. [illegible] and streams, many with excellent fishing, offer boating and swimming. Wooded hills and fertile valleys provide as many opportunities for diversion as the seashore.

Berkshire Festival

Cultural opportunities are numerous. Berkshire Music Festival, held at the lovely Tanglewood Estate in Lenox, draws music lovers from far and wide to enjoy the weekend concerts presented by the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year they will be from July 11 through Aug. 16. In this connection there is the Berkshire Music Center where talented young musicians gather to further their studies under the finest of instructors. The Bay State's summer art colonies have been recognized as outstanding for generations at Gloucester, Rockport, Provincetown and Nantucket. Schools for all types of art are conducted by outstanding artists from late June through Labor Day.

A wide range of entertainment, such as summer theaters, the newly popular music circus, clambakes, golf, tennis, hiking, picnicking, dancing, night-clubbing will be found throughout Massachusetts resort areas. Old Sturbridge Village, a recreated Colonial community, is a living museum of the early 18th century. Its 30 dwellings, inn, mill, church and other buildings house unusual collections and skilled artisans demonstrate many of the handcrafts.



Latest thing at Plymouth is this reproduction of the Pilgrims' first fort and meeting house, replete with colonial drummer boy and costumed natives. It's near Rock.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 4 1955

New Operas To Be Given At Tanglewood

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on the evenings of Aug. 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full co-operation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope", the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center will also present a number of other evenings, on Monday, August 1, and on Tuesday, July 26, and August 2 combining with the music school's Department II (Chorus). Among the works scheduled for these evenings are three Tanglewood premieres. These are "Romeo and Juliet", a chamber opera in three parts after Shakespeare, by Boris Blacher the modern German composer who will be guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood; "L'Abandon d'Ariane", by Darius Milhaud, the French composer who was a former composition teacher in the Berkshires; and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans".

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is on a reserved seat basis, through enrollment accompanied by a voluntary contribution to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage those interested in student performances to help support the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

JUN 5 1955

Twenty-five Concerts by Berkshire Music Center Students are Scheduled

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire Hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will begin with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean, and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the B. S. O.

These concerts, for which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's Summer Music School. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

In 1955 a drive will be made to increase Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra, composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through Aug. 14.

Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14.

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,837

Please Excuse

the condition of this clip ~~copy.~~ It is not up to our usual standard because the NEWS ~~original~~ PAPER ~~clipping~~ was imperfect when it reached us.

is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the co-operation of the Opera Department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 5 1955

Berkshire Attractions Expanding

TANGLEWOOD is still the Berkshires' summer headline attraction.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14 near Lenox, Mass.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

Summer Theater to Open

One is a summer theater which will open a 10-week season June 29 in the Adams Memorial Theater at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million-dollar museum is open to the public at no charge. Two of its nine exhibition rooms have been completed and furnished with work by great artists. It is open six days a week (closed Mondays).

The Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn will present the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Other Cultural Offerings

Following are some of the Berkshire's other cultural offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concerts, July 2 through Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, Saturday evenings from [illegible] 13 to Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge summer theater, June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshires also have an abundance of natural scenic and historic spots which are of interest to the summer visitor.

Sunday Journal, Providence, R.I, 6/5/55

Bay State Lures With Fun, Culture

Much Offered, From Boston To Berkshires

By LENOX E. BIGELOW

Latest thing at Plymouth is this reproduction of the Pilgrims' first fort and meeting house, replete with colonial drummer boy and costumed natives. It's near Rock.

THERE are extra dividends of pleasure and profit along the Massachusetts seacoast between Salisbury on the north and Plymouth on the south. In either area there is every type of active sport, entertainment or lazy relaxation to be found at seashore resorts. In addition, Boston lies right in the center of this region, and there one may find the range of amusements which a big metropolis has to offer.

An important factor is that within these boundaries are more important historic landmarks and literary shrines than in any comparable region in the country. Bunker Hill, Faneuil Hall, Concord, Lexington, Salem, Plymouth, Paul Revere House, House of Seven Gables, Longfellow House—those are names tied inextricably to America's tap roots.

North of Boston the coast is rugged and rocky, but interspersed with some beautiful beaches, for swimming, sunbathing and fishing. Fine harbors provide ample shelter for every type of sailing and power craft. Marblehead has attained a nationwide reputation as a yachting center and regattas are held every weekend throughout the summer season.

Art Colonies

Gloucester is not only famous as a resort, but one of the oldest and most colorful commercial fishing ports. Adjacent Rockport, and Gloucester maintain summer art colonies that are outstanding. Salem still carries the storied aura of wealthy and daring clipper ship nabobs whose vessels for years carried the American flag to far-flung foreign ports.

At Saugus, a suburb of Lynn, is the unusual First Iron Works, a restoration of the birthplace of one of America's greatest industries—steel.

South of Boston there is Nantasket, a well-known playground with carnival atmosphere, and Plymouth, the very heart of our American freedoms. Residents of this thriving community have long maintained the traditions and memorials of the original Pilgrim band. What is more, they provide a very special kind of hospitality.

Plymouth offers, too, fine fishing, both fresh and salt water; good beaches, and many other kinds of entertainment.

Wherever the vacationer stays, Boston is but a short drive away. In the Massachusetts capital one finds big-league baseball, horse and dog racing, the finest in theaters, night clubs and restaurants, cultural pleasures. One may take a stroll in the Public Gardens for a ride in the swan boats; attend a concert by the Boston Pops Orchestra at the Hatch Shell beside the Charles River; a sightseeing trip up the Charles River by boat; picturesque T-Wharf with its artists' studios, seafood restaurants and fishing fleet.

The unspoiled beauty of the Berkshire Hills and Pioneer Valley distinguish the western end of the state. Clear lakes and streams, many with excellent fishing, offer boating and swimming. Wooded hills and fertile valleys provide as many opportunities for diversion as the seashore.

Berkshire Festival

Cultural opportunities are numerous. Berkshire Music Festival, held at the lovely Tanglewood Estate in Lenox, draws music lovers from far and wide to enjoy the weekend concerts presented by the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year they will be from July 11 through Aug. 16. In this connection there is the Berkshire Music Center where talented young musicians gather to further their studies under the finest of instructors. The Bay State's summer art colonies have been recognized as outstanding for generations at Gloucester, Rockport, Provincetown and Nantucket. Schools for all types of art are conducted by outstanding artists from late June through Labor Day.

A wide range of entertainment, such as summer theaters, the newly popular music circus, clambakes, golf, tennis, hiking, picnicking, dancing, night-clubbing will be found throughout Massachusetts resort areas. Old Sturbridge Village, a recreated Colonial community, is a living museum of the early 18th century. Its 30 dwellings, inn, mill, church and other buildings house unusual collections and skilled artisans demonstrate many of the handcrafts.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 4 1955

New Operas To Be Given At Tanglewood

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on the evenings of Aug. 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full co-operation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope", the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center will also present a number of other evenings, on Monday, August 1, and on Tuesday, July 26, and August 2 combining with the music school's Department II (Chorus). Among the works scheduled for these evenings are three Tanglewood premieres. These are "Romeo and Juliet", a chamber opera in three parts after Shakespeare, by Boris Blacher the modern German composer who will be guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood; "L'Abandon d'Ariane", by Darius Milhaud, the French composer who was a former composition teacher in the Berkshires; and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans".

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is on a reserved seat basis, through enrollment accompanied by a voluntary contribution to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage those interested in student performances to help support the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

JUN 5 1955

Twenty-five Concerts by Berkshire Music Center Students are Scheduled

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire Hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will begin with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean, and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the B. S. O.

These concerts, for which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's Summer Music School. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

In 1955 a drive will be made to increase Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra, composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through Aug. 14.

Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14.

Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 15,837

JUN

Please Excuse

the condition of this CLIP ~~copy.~~ It is not up to our usual standard because the NEWS ~~original~~ PAPER ~~clipping~~ was imperfect when it reached us.

sic, stressed that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the co-operation of the Opera Department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 5 1955

Berkshire Attractions Expanding

TANGLEWOOD is still the Berkshires' summer headline attraction.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14 near Lenox, Mass.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

Summer Theater to Open

One is a summer theater which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theater at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million-dollar museum is open to the public at no charge. Two of its nine exhibition rooms have been completed and furnished with work by great artists. It is open six days a week (closed Mondays).

The Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn will present the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Other Cultural Offerings

Following are some of the Berkshire's other cultural offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concerts, July 2 through Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, Saturday evenings from Aug. 13 to Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge summer theater, June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshires, also have an abundance of natural scenery and historic spots which are of interest to the summer visitor.

Sunday Journal, Providence, R.I., 6/5/55

Bay State Lures With Fun, Culture

Much Offered, From Boston To Berkshires

By LENOX E. BIGELOW

Latest thing at Plymouth is this reproduction of the Pilgrims' first fort and meeting house, replete with colonial drummer boy and costumed natives. It's near Rock.

THERE are extra dividends of pleasure and profit along the Massachusetts seacoast between Salisbury on the north and Plymouth on the south. In either area there is every type of active sport, entertainment or lazy relaxation to be found at seashore resorts. In addition, Boston lies right in the center of this region, and there one may find the range of amusements which a big metropolis has to offer.

An important factor is that within these boundaries are more important historic landmarks and literary shrines than in any comparable region in the country. Bunker Hill, Faneuil Hall, Concord, Lexington, Salem, Plymouth, Paul Revere House, House of Seven Gables, Longfellow House—those are names tied inextricably to America's tap roots.

North of Boston the coast is rugged and rocky, but interspersed with some beautiful beaches, for swimming, sunbathing and fishing. Fine harbors provide ample shelter for every type of sailing and power craft. Marblehead has attained a nationwide reputation as a yachting center and regattas are held every weekend throughout the summer season.

Art Colonies

Gloucester is not only famous as a resort, but one of the oldest and most colorful commercial fishing ports. Adjacent Rockport, and Gloucester maintain summer art colonies that are outstanding. Salem still carries the storied aura of wealthy and daring clipper ship nabobs whose vessels for years carried the American flag to far-flung foreign ports.

At Saugus, a suburb of Lynn, is the unusual First Iron Works, a restoration of the birthplace of one of America's greatest industries—steel.

South of Boston there is Nantasket, a well-known playground with carnival atmosphere, and Plymouth, the very heart of our American freedoms. Residents of this thriving community have long maintained the traditions and memorials of the original Pilgrim band. What is more, they provide a very special kind of hospitality.

Plymouth offers, too, fine fishing, both fresh and salt water; good beaches, and many other kinds of entertainment.

Wherever the vacationer stays, Boston is but a short drive away. In the Massachusetts capital one finds big-league baseball, horse and dog racing, the finest in theaters, night clubs and restaurants, cultural pleasures. One may take a stroll in the Public Gardens for a ride in the swan boats; attend a concert by the Boston Pops Orchestra at the Hatch Shell beside the Charles River; a sightseeing trip up the Charles River by boat; picturesque T-Wharf with its artists' studios, seafood restaurants and fishing fleet.

The unspoiled beauty of the Berkshire Hills and Pioneer Valley distinguish the western end of the state. Clear lakes and streams, many with excellent fishing, offer boating and swimming. Wooded hills and fertile valleys provide as many opportunities for diversion as the seashore.

Berkshire Festival

Cultural opportunities are numerous. Berkshire Music Festival, held at the lovely Tanglewood Estate in Lenox, draws music lovers from far and wide to enjoy the weekend concerts presented by the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra. This year they will be from July 11 through Aug. 16. In this connection there is the Berkshire Music Center where talented young musicians gather to further their studies under the finest of instructors. The Bay State's summer art colonies have been recognized as outstanding for generations at Gloucester, Rockport, Provincetown and Nantucket. Schools for all types of art are conducted by outstanding artists from late June through Labor Day.

A wide range of entertainment, such as summer theaters, the newly popular music circus, clambakes, golf, tennis, hiking, picnicking, dancing, night-clubbing will be found throughout Massachusetts resort areas. Old Sturbridge Village, a recreated Colonial community, is a living museum of the early 18th century. Its 30 dwellings, inn, mill, church and other buildings house unusual collections and skilled artisans demonstrate many of the handcrafts.

MASSACHUSETTS

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 4 1955

New Operas To Be Given At Tanglewood

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on the evenings of Aug. 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full co-operation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope", the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center will also present a number of other evenings, on Monday, August 1, and on Tuesday, July 26, and August 2 combining with the music school's Department II (Chorus). Among the works scheduled for these evenings are three Tanglewood premieres. These are "Romeo and Juliet", a chamber opera in three parts after Shakespeare, by Boris Blacher the modern German composer who will be guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood; "L'Abandon d'Ariane", by Darius Milhaud, the French composer who was a former composition teacher in the Berkshires; and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans".

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is on a reserved seat basis, through enrollment accompanied by a voluntary contribution to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage those interested in student performances to help support the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

JUN 5 1955

Twenty-five Concerts by Berkshire Music Center Students are Scheduled

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this Summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This orchestra's school in the Berkshire Hills is now preparing for its 13th year, which will begin with the arrival of some 400 students from all parts of the United States, Canada and foreign countries on Sunday, July 3.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz as dean, and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl and first-chair members of the B. S. O.

These concerts, for which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's Summer Music School. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

In 1955 a drive will be made to increase Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The schedule of student performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra, composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through Aug. 14.

Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are to be held Sunday evenings at 8:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14.

[illegible] THE ROPE

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere this summer at the Berkshire Music Center. The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced. Performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., have been set for Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, originally produced by the Provincetown Players at Provincetown, Mass., in 1917, Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stressed that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the co-operation of the Opera Department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 176,827

JUN 5 1955

Berkshire Attractions Expanding

TANGLEWOOD is still the Berkshires' summer headline attraction.

For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14 near Lenox, Mass.

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown.

Summer Theater to Open

One is a summer theater which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theater at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits.

The other Berkshire addition, already in operation, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. The multi-million-dollar museum is open to the public at no charge. Two of its nine exhibition rooms have been completed and furnished with work by great artists. It is open six days a week (closed Mondays).

The Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, will open a 10-week season July 1 in the hill town of Becket. Director Ted Shawn will present the American debut of the Royal Danish Ballet.

Other Cultural Offerings

Following are some of the Berkshire's other cultural offerings this season: Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, a weekly series of jazz and folk music concerts, July 2 through Labor Day; New York Pro Musica Antiqua concerts, Stockbridge, Saturday evenings from Aug. 13 to Sept. 3; Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge summer theater, June 20-Sept. 4.

The Berkshires, also have an abundance of natural scenery and historic spots which are of interest to the summer visitor.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUN 14 1955

Nearby Vacation Opportunities

More and more for people living in this area summer presents the pleasant choice between going away for a vacation or staying in what is becoming an increasingly popular vacation region. Especially for a family with a car, Holyoke can make a very satisfactory vacation headquarters unless strange beds and breakfasts are essential to a holiday feeling. Right now we are struck particularly with the number of things available to people with cultural tastes, for the "festival" programs are piling up on our desk. It is abundantly clear that you could spend the whole summer going from one performance to another without ever going beyond a 100-mile radius from this city.

There is the grandfather of them all — the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, with concerts going on practically every day from July 6 thru Aug. 14. There are great symphony concerts, small chamber concerts, opera, instrumental soloists, choruses, even rehearsals open to the public. And in the same area there are going on at the same time art exhibits, plays at the Berkshire playhouse, Chamber music at South Mountain, and a new jazz festival.

Then there is Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow dance festival that offers all sorts of dancing with the Royal Danish Ballet the big feature this year.

This year there is a newcomer competing for attention in the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn., where a wonderful new theatre has been put up and where casts trained in classical Shakespearean drama will support star actors and actresses. The grand opening of this festival will be July 12, with Raymond Massey in "Julius Caesar". Though Stratford is a fairly good distance from here, the unique opportunity to see Shakespeare presented in first-class style will make the trip worthwhile for many.

For nights when lighter entertainment and less driving are called for, there is our own pride and joy, the Valley Players, now getting ready to open up the Mountain Park casino for another summer of good dramatic fare.

If you stay home this summer the chances are you'll take in one of these outdoor "shows". They are so much a part of our New England summer life now that when 8:30 comes on a summer evening there is a general hush while the house lights dim and the bow hovers over the violin, the ballerina stands in the wings, and the maid starts dusting [illegible] stage telephone that [illegible] to ring.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 357,463

JUN 5 1955

Premiere of Mennini Opera, "The Rope" at Berkshire Music Center August 8-9

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9.

The Mennini work was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, originally produced by the Provincetown Players, at Provincetown, Mass., on April 26, 1917. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music, notes that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the Summer of 1953, with the full cooperation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood.

The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

Mozart Premiere

"By providing an opportunity for young composers to live with the musical theatre," says Mr. Goldovsky, "the Koussevitzky commission is enabling them to learn of the problems peculiar to it, and help them towards the solution of these problems that must precede the creation of a successful opera."

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope," the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center will also present programs on Monday evening, Aug. 1, and on Tuesday, July 26, and Aug. 2 combining with the music school's Department II (Chorus). Among the works scheduled for these evenings are three Tanglewood premieres. These are "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts after Shakespeare, by Boris Blacher, the modern German composer who will be guest teacher of composition this Summer at Tanglewood; "L'Abandon d'Ariane," by Darius Milhaud; scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans." Mr. Blacher will assist in the mounting of his work.

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performance is on a reserved seat basis, through enrollment accompanied by a voluntary contribution to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage those interested in student performances to help support the Berkshire Music Center. Five thousand persons enjoyed opera evenings in the summer of 1954. Membership in the Friends also carries the privilege of attending all others of the 25 concerts by students during the Tanglewood season, July 6-Aug. 14.

Associated with Boris Goldovsky in the opera department at Tanglewood this summer are Sarah Caldwell, stage director; Robert Gay and Arthur Schoep, assistant stage directors; Leo Van Witsen, costume and make-up; Thomas De Gaetani, technical director. Amanuel Balaban, Paul Ulanowsky and Elsa Fiedler are coaches. Ludwig and Laura Zirner head the Associate Division.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

Rockefeller Grant Aids Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center; grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35.000 is sought.

The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assists the Center through tax-exempt donations to the organization set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Now, through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, the Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2325

JUN 9 1955

SOLOISTS ANNOUNCED FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL

Principal Works of Beethoven to Form Large Part of Program

The principal works of Beethoven, occupying a considerable part of the programs in the course of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, July 6 to August 14, will include the nine symphonies, choral works, concertos, and chamber works. This will require a number of soloists, both vocal and instrumental.

The vocal soloists will consist of the following quartet for the Missa Solemnis, to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein on August 5 in memory of Serge Koussevitzky; Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and Mac Morgan, bass. The Ninth Symphony, with which Charles Munch, director, will close the Festival, will have the following soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, and Donald Gramm.

Mr. Munch will also conduct the Second Act of Beethoven's "Fidelio" in concert form on August 6 with the following soloists: Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan. Bach's Mass in B minor will be given on July 10 with the following soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Jennie Tourel, soprano, will sing airs of Mozart on July 15. Leontyne Price, soprano, will sing in Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" on July 29.

Instrumental soloists in the "Bach-Mozart" concerts during the first two week-ends in the Theatre Concert Hall will include Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, July 8 (Bach's Suite No. 2); Joseph de Pasquale, viola, July 9 ("Der Schwanendreher"); and Samuel Mayes, July 16 (Boccherini's Cello Concerto).

The concerts in the Music Shed through the last four week-ends will include Isaac Stern, July 22 (Beethoven's Violin Concerto); Rudolf Serkin, July 30 (Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto); Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky, July 31 (Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello); Eugene Istomin, August 7 (Beethoven's Fourth Concerto); and Gregor Piatigorsky, August 12 (Bloch's "Schelomo"). Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, Leonard Bernstein and Thor Johnson.

Advertiser
NEW CANAAN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,669

JUN 9 1955

Tanglewood Premiere Of "The Rope" Slated

047

"The Rope," a one act opera by Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester (N.Y.), will have its world premiere this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, according to an announcement by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There will be two performances in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one act play, originally produced by the Provincetown (Mass.) Players, in 1917, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stated this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope," the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood opera department of the music center will also present a number of other evenings, combining with the music school's choral department. Among the works scheduled are three Tanglewood premieres: "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera by Boris Blacher; "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Darius Milhaud, and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans."

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is on a reserved seat basis, through enrollment accompanied by a voluntary contribution to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage those interested in student performances to help support the Berkshire Music Center.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUN 26 1955

375 TO STUDY MUSIC

6-Week School at Berkshire Center Opens Next Sunday

More than 375 students have registered for the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with the annual Berkshire Festival. The thirteenth session of the center will open next Sunday.

Young musicians from most of the forty-eight states are represented. There also are twenty-eight foreign students, including three from Japan, two from Hawaii and France, and one each from New Zealand, Iran, the Netherlands Antilles, Austria and Finland. Scholarship grants were awarded to 174 of the applicants, including 102 who comprise the student symphony orchestra.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

JUN 9 1955

Music Center Lists Student Concert

047

The complete schedule of student performances at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., for 1955 is as follows:

Department I (Orchestra): Music Shed, 8:30 p.m., July 7,14,21,28, August 4; 3:00 p.m., Saturday August 13.

Department I (Chamber Music): Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m., July 10,17,24,31, August 7,14.

Department III (Composition): Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m., July 17,24,31; 3:00 p.m., Saturday, August 6.

Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera)-reserved seats: Theatre-Concert Hall, Monday, August 1, 8:30 p.m.

Department IV (Opera)-reserved seats: Theatre Concert-Hall, 8:30 p.m. August 8-9.

Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera) -Theatre Concert-Hall, 8:30 p.m., July 26, August 2.

Pension Fund Benefit rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestr (admission $1.00), Music Shed, 1 a.m., July 23,30, August 6,13.

merican (e)
OSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 185,401

UN 1 3 1955

efeller nt Aids c Center hire Music Center, school of music oper-

Boston Symphony
Lenox, in connection shire Festival, will a series of grants
efeller Foundation.
iod of five years,
this summer, the Foundation will do-matching equally from other sources of the only school
this country main-
symphony orchestra.
propriations, to be lly, can amount to ond time the Rocke-ation has come to the

of the Berkshire grants totalling 940 and 1941 to the phony Orchestra en-chestra to start its
l. Now, the Foundaassistance to main-undertaking on a sel basis.
petus is thus given to public to increase its f the Friends of the sic Center will really pport," was the comnry B. Cabot, presi-
e Boston Symphony trustees, "the future l is assured." Contrithe music school in d some $25,000. This of at least $35,000 is tions are made by who enjoy attending the 400 students en-summer by the Berk-Center, as well as s and organizations the Center through donations to the or-for that pur-

of the Berkshire ow, through the oundation grants, ter will benefit an-
the amount raised nds, in excess of

MILWAUKEE WISCONSIN
JOURNAL
JUN 1 2 1955

Music Festivals Are Close at Hand

Summer Brings Annual Selection of Tuneful Events

OR many thousands of Wisconsin residents and for millions on the continent, sum- er means festival time in the rts. One doesn't need to go to urope, where the great festi- als of Edinburgh, Salzburg, Baireuth and other musical capi- als are presented with ever in- reasing grandeur. There are other impressive events much nearer home.

A truly unique festival is that of Stratford, Ontario, which is only a two hour drive from the Michigan eastern border. In its first two editions, 1953 and 1954, only dramas were presented—Shakespeare and Sophocles. This year there will be three dramatic classics—"Julius Caesar," "Merchant of Venice" and "Oedipus Rex" in the Yeats version—and four weeks of music also. Prom- inent actors of Canada, Europe and the United States will be starred in the plays, which will run from June 27 to Aug. 27.

From July 9 to Aug. 6 an unusual series of concerts will be held, featuring Boyd Neel's Hart house orchestra, Stravinsky's "A Soldier's Tale" (a narrative with mimes), and celebrated soloists: Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Isaac Stern, Lois Marshall, Franchot Tone (the Stravinsky narrator) and many others. (Miss Marshall also will be featured at the Peninsula music festival, Door county, in August.) The Stratford festival headquarters, at 109 Erie st., Stratford, Ont., will supply dates, prices and room accommodations.

The world renowned Berkshire festival, at Lenox, Mass., will run from July 6 to Aug. 14. Donald Gramm, Milwaukee bass-baritone, will be a soloist in the Bach B minor Mass July 10, and the Beethoven 9th symphony Aug. 14.

* * *

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUN 2 1955

Premiere Of Opera At Music Center

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday eevnings, August 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, originally produced by The Provincetown Players, at Provincetown, on April 26, 1917, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953, with the full co-operation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

"By providing an opportunity for young composers to live with the musical theatre," says Mr. Goldovsky, "The Koussevitzky commission is enabling them to learn of the problems peculiar to it, and help them towards the solution of these problems that must precede the creation of a successful opera."

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope," the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344), by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

News-Tribune (e)
WALTHAM, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 13,418

JUN 2 1955

The Stroller

New England, a land of factories, farms and homes, of seaside summer resorts and winter ski-lifts, of covered bridges, museums and colleges, unfolds in a new National Geographic Society wall map.

The 10-color map, 29 by 42 inches, goes out to the Society's 2,150,000 members all over the world as a supplement to the June issue of the National Geographic Magazine.

It displays 4,442 place names and 553 descriptive notes, many attached to states and provinces near New England—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Quebec and New Brunswick. The resort-dotted Pocono, Catskill and Adirondack mountains, for instance, and the stately stretch of the St. Lawrence from Montreal to Quebec are included.

The chief place name on the map, "New England," was coined by Capt. John Smith who explored the coast south from Penobscot Bay in 1614. He also deserves thanks for shortening mouth-filling Cape Tragabigzanda to simple Cape Anna (Ann).

Since then "those spatious Tracts of Land," as he called New England, have added the manifold features of industrialized society, among them airports (shown as red stars on the new map), railroads (black lines) and roads and superhighways (in red).

From top to bottom of the map, a sampling of the blue-lettered notes depicts the six New England states as follows:

Maine, noted for: Aroostook County potatoes; Mt. Katahdin, 5,268 feet, terminus of the Appalachian Trail; Passamaquoddy Bay, where tides range to 27½ feet; West Quoddy Head, the United States' easternmost point; Mount Desert Island, highest point on the eastern seaboard; and Desert of Maine's 500 acres of shifting dunes.

New Hampshire, dotted by: a 171-foot steel ski-jump tower near Berlin; Mt. Washington, 6,288 feet, highest point in New England; a chair lift to the top of Rowe Mt., 1,680 feet; the museum with 50,000 buttons at Acworth; and the Nelson Bird Museum displaying 250 New England species.

Vermont, land of: Shelburne's 19th century reconstructed village; the only 2-lane covered bridge left on a New England highway, at Middlebury; the 380-foot bridge of buoyed tar barrels at Brookfield; and the home of Rudyard Kipling (1892-1896), north of Brattleboro.

Massachusetts, pinpointed by: Pittsfield's Berkshire Museum containing the original "one-hoss shay"; Tanglewood where the Boston Symphony plays in July and August; dinosaur tracks near Holyoke; Princeton's museum of antique autos; Old Sturbridge, reproduction of a village of 150 years ago; a house in Dedham considered the oldest frame dwelling in the United States (1636); and the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Rhode Island, site of: Pawtucket's Slater Mill, (1793), first successful cotton spinning plant in America; Old Windmill near Jamestown that once ground meal for journey cakes (johnny cakes); and a clambake at Point Judith for Atlantic Tuna Tournament contestants.

Connecticut, marked by: the Webb House in Wethersfield where Washington and Rochambeau met in 1781; the Whitfield House at Guilford, one of America's oldest stone homes (1640); Danbury where the State's largest fair is held each October; and the Connecticut Valley's cigar-wrapper tobacco, shade-grown under cheesecloth.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUN 5 1955

Premiere of One-Act Opera At Tanglewood in August

'The Rope' by Louis Mennini, Based On O'Neill Play; Mozart's 'Zaide' and Other Features Planned by Opera Department This Summer

Boston, June 4—"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will have its world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two perfomances in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9.

In announcing the Mennini work, which was inspired by Eugene O'Neill's one-act play, originally produced by the Provincetown Players, at Provincetown, April 26, 1917, Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, stresses that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

Begun At Tanglewood

"The Rope" was conceived and begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in resdence in the summer of 1953, with the full cooperation of the opera department, especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope," the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344) by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779, to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The Tanglewood Dept. 4 (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center will also present a number of other evenings, on Monday, Aug. 1, and on Tuesday, July 26, and Aug. 2 combining with the music school's Dept. 2 (chorus). Among the works scheduled for these evenings are three Tanglewood premieres.

Other Premieres

These are "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts after Shakespeare, by Boris Blacher, the modern German composer who will be guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood; "L'Abandon d'Ariane," by Darius Milhaud, the French composer who was a former composition teacher in the Berkshires; and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans."

The opera department at Tanglewood has given the American premieres of such noted works as Mozart's "Idomeneo" (1947), Britten's "Pefer Grimes," (1946) and "Albert Herring," (1949), and Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot" (1950). Among its other notable productions have been Mozart's "La Finta Giardiniera," Rossini's "The Turk in Italy (1948), Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris" (1949), Tchaikowsky's "Pique Dame" (1951), Mozart's "Titus" (1949), Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" (1953), and Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" (1954).

Associated with Boris Goldovsky in the opera department at Tanglewood this summer are Sarah Caldwell, stage director; Robert Gay and Arthur Schoep, assistant stage directors; Leo Van Witsen, costume and makeup; Thomas De Gaetani, technical director. Amanuel Balaban, Paul Ulanowsky and Elsa Fiedler are coaches. Ludwig and Laura Zirner head the associate division.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,448

JUN 2 1955

25 Concerts To Be Held At Center

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Music Center has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as Director; Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, as acting Assistant Director; Ralph Berkowitz as Dean; and such eminent musicians on its faculty as Leonard Bernstein, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Roger Sessions, Boris Blacher, William Kroll, Ingolf Dahl.

As in the past these concerts, at which no charge is made, are open to those who enroll in the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

At the end of the summer of 1954 membership totaled 5,174, from which source the Berkshire Music Center benefited by $23,545.71. In 1955 a drive will be made to increase Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The schedule of students performances calls for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30 p.m., commencing July 7, with the exception of the final concert, announced for Saturday afternoon, August 13.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10:00 a.m. on Sunday mornings, July 10 through August 4.

Five evenings of opera, one integrated with choral works, will be given this summer in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Attendance at these events on the evenings of August 1, 8, 9 requires reserved tickets procurable in advance from the Friends' office at Tanglewood.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
Reporter Dispatch
Circ. D. 21,931

JUN 6 1955

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman

JUNE EARING IN NEW EDITION OF AQUASHOW

OF WATER, MUSIC AND DANCE

The end of May having signalized the end of the current theatre season, a fact that interests managers more than playgoers since nothing really happens to stem the flow of trade to the hits and the ebb of customers to the weaker ones, the weeks ahead finds emphasis on the out of city attractions. These include the mammoth water shows, the summer theatres and tents and the music and dance festivals at Berkshire and Jacob's Pillow, the latter two luring many pilgrims.

The decorative lass above is Elliott Murphy's challenge to the heat waves. She is one of the major attractions at the Aquashow which opens Tuesday Evening, June 21st, at the Amphitheatre in Flushing Meadows Park. Mr. Murphy, who is the chief host and devisor of eye catching spectacle there has secured the first American rights to present the new European illusion "Magic Mirrors". The device, which is described as gigantic and dazzling wil serve as background for the Ice Revue which will be produced on the world's largest revolving stage. Duke Ellington and his band will be on hand with a cast of 200 to inaugurate the annual summer festival.

* * *

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, which is a dynamo of musical energy and has made Lenox, Mass. a center of national attraction, goes into high gear for its season commencing July 3rd and continuing through August 14th in the six weeks of music Beethoven will be given preference and a feats of the composer's works has been planned.

The Berkshire music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 will benefit this season from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. This largesse in the next five seasons will amount to $125,000 in five annual appropriations.

Also more than a dozen special scholarships and tuition aids to summer music students are being offered by the Berkshire Music Center, the school of music which has Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, as the school director. The principal aid to the 400 students selected annually from applicants all over the U.S., Canada and abroad, is the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund, which in 1954 awarded grants for the tuition of 196 students. Leonard Bernstein as head of the orchestra conducting departments works with equally top music men to lend their knowledge and beat to the students.

* * *

The Dance, ballet (modern and classic) each year finds an ever increasing audience and today it is a large arm of the artistic and financial structure of the entertainment field. Summer finds one talking of the innovations at Jacob's Pillow which is situataed 9 miles East of Lee, Massachusetts, just far enough to lose the last wandering strains from the Berkshire Music Festival.

This season, a significant importation to the U. S. will be the Royal Danish Ballet which with its 200 years tradition antedates the Imperial Russian ballet theatre. The Danes have had an enthusiastic reception where they have appeared in England and the continent; and Ted Shawn, co-founder of the Jacob's Pillow Festival is quite pleased with his coup of bringing ten leading dancers of the Royal Company to his end of the "Festival Corridor." The separate wings of the dance art will see many phases led by leading exponents of classic, modern and ethnic forms. The Danish ensemble will make friends and compare notes with Mia Slavenska, Danilova and Van Orden, among others. The brochure that announces the weekly programs is full of all that makes the dance an exciting and colorful art and the festival folk at Jacobs Pillow represent all of the dance high and mighty.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUN 2 1955

Berkshire Music Center Plans

Students To Present 25 Concerts

Twenty-five concerts by students of the Berkshire Music Center will be given during the course of this summer's Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Their concerts, for which no charge is made, are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a tax-exempt organization set up to encourage donations to the work of the orchestra's summer music school. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

In 1955 a drive will be made to increase the Friends' memberships and contributions to some $35,000, stimulated by the recent announcement that the Rockefeller Foundation will give a matching grant for all money raised over $15,000 from outside sources.

The schedule of student performances call for six concerts of symphony music by the orchestra composed of 100 scholarship students. These will be held on Thursday evenings in the Music Shed at 8:30, commencing July 7, with the exception of the final concert, announced for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 13.

Six concerts of chamber music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 10 o'clock on Sunday mornings, July 10, through Aug. 4.

Four forums, wherein young composers accepted for study at Tanglewood discuss their own and fellow students' work, are held Sunday evenings at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall, July 10 to Aug. 14.

Five evenings of opera, one integrated with choral works, will be given this summer in the Theater-Concert Hall. Attendance at these events on the evenings of Aug. 1, 8, 9, requires reserved tickets procurable in advance from the Friends' office at Tanglewo

---

4-55

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUN 7 1955

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music, will be presented in a world premiere by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center on the evenings of Aug. 8 and 9.

* * *

BORIS GOLDOVSKY, head of the Tanglewood opera department, has announced that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation.

Mozart's "Zaide," written in 1779 but unfinished, will be used as a curtain-raiser. The Mozart number has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

The opera department has also scheduled other works including "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts by Boris Blacher; "L'Abandon d'Ariane," by Darius Milhaud, and scenes from Hector Berlioz' "The Trojans."

Herald Tribune
5/29

* * *

Tanglewood Premiere

Louis Mennini's opera "The Rope" will have its first performances Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, as a part of the Berkshire Music Center's activities at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Since this is announced as included in an "evening of opera," it is presumably a short work. Counting the Berkshire Festival concerts and the Center's student performances, there will be one or more programs on thirty-six of the forty-two days of the Tanglewood season, plus three forums on Mondays, July 11, 18 and 25, in Lenox Town Hall.

The Boston Symphony will hold public rehearsals on four Saturday mornings, beginning July 24. The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" comprehensive program is set for Thursday night, Aug. 11.

* * *

The Season's Score

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,109,601 - S. 3,776,751
26

JUN 19 1955

Berkshire Hills Add Culture to Scenery

(Special to THE NEWS)

Pittsfield, Mass., June 18.—There was a time when the Berkshire Hills' chief claim to fame as a vacation region was their scenery, uncluttered resorts and an abundance of historic and natural sites.

These attractions still make the area intriguing but something else has been added—culture, in the form of music and dance festivals, art exhibits and stage presentations.

Music now ranks right along with scenery as the Berkshires' big drawing card, with Tanglewood still the area's summer headliner. For the second successive year, the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch, will have an expanded season of 24 programs running from July 8 through Aug. 14.

New Attractions

There are two new major additions to the Berkshire Hills' bill of fare for this summer's vacationist. Both are located in the college town of Williamstown

One is a summer theatre which will open a 10-week season June 28 in the Adams Memorial Theatre at Williams College. A resident company of nine women and 10 men will put on recent Broadway hits.

The other Berkshire addition, in operation since May, is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Museum. No admission is charged and two of the museum's nine exhibition rooms have been completed and furnished with examples of work by some of the great artists of all time. It is open six days a week (closed Mondays) from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 190,545 - S. 163,283

APR 20 1955

Berkshire Auditions Slated In Cleveland

Regional auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be in Severance Hall, Cleveland, Sunday, 3 to 5 p.m. (DST); at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Warner Hall, Oberlin, Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon (DST).

The following faculty will teach this year at Tanglewood: Orchestra and conducting, Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; choral music, Hugh Ross; composition, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera, Boris Goldovsky; Tanglewood Study Group, Ingolf Dahl. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and Mr. Kroll will be present at all auditions.

Newburyport, Mass.
News
3/16/55

Summer School Of Music To Be In Berkshires

Boston Symphony orchestra announces plans for its Summer Schoo of Music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, which will ope on July 4 for a six week session, it 13th. Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston symphony, wi again serve as director.

Richard Burgin, concertmaste and associate conductor of the orchestra, will serve as assistant director while Aaron Copland is in Europe on leave of absence, his firs since the school was founded i 1940.

Boris Blacher, the German composer and Diretcor of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin will come to this country for the first time to teach composition. Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer will be associated with him in the composition department. Each of these composers has received a commission for a work to celebrate the orchestra's 75th anniversary in the season of 1955-56.

Street - New York

RICHMOND, VA.
AFRO AMERICAN
Circ. W. 12,048

APR 16 1955

Leontyne Price invited to sing at Tanglewood

BOSTON—Dr. Charles Munch, director of the world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, said that Leontyne Price is among the guest soloists chosen by the orchestra for its summer concerts at famed Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

Miss Price, former star of the folk opera "Porgy and Bess," will be soloist on the Water Music program dated for July 20, when she will do "The Prayers of

She sang this role at Symphony Hall two successive evenings during the Council of Churches convocation here in Boston last November 25 and 26.

Miss Price also appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood twice last summer, as did her husband, William Warfield, baritone.

The young singer is a graduate of Central State College, Wilberforce, Ohio, and of the famed Juilliard School of Music, New York City. For two years she appeared opposite her husband as Bess, in the opera "Porgy and Bess," and gave recitals between acts in various cities while the company was on tour.

She won success both on Broadway and in Europe singing in the Rome, Italy Festival, in 1954 as the only American artist to appear as a vocalist there.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
POST
Circ. D. 155,426

APR 20 1955

Auditions

Auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at the Baldwin Piano Co., 415 Race street, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Thursday, April 28. Application forms may be obtained from the Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, of the Berkshire chamber music department, will be here for the auditions.

BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, MAY 15, 1955

Rockefeller Grant for Berkshire Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, commencing this summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come tto the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: Grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will really rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured." Contributions to the music school in 1954 totalled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought. The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the center through tax-exempt donations to the organization set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Now through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, the Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund established in 1949 largely from a series of gifts from the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000, while drawn upon annually to assist the 4,575 students from all parts of the U. S. and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1949 is estimated at $325,000.

In commenting on the grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Director of the Berkshire Music Center said: "The generosity, with precedent, of the Rockefeller Foundation to support our work with young people will be a great service to the future of the art of music."

Mr. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, said: "This fine offer by the Rockefeller Foundation will be a challenge to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center to do their utmost to support this fine school. As chairman of the Friends, I urge every one to give just as much as he can."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAY 1 - 1955

LENOX SINGERS LISTED

Vocalists to Be Heard in Five Major Works at Festival

This summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, ~~near~~ Lenox, Mass., will include five major selections in which singers will be featured.

Adele Addison and David Lloyd will each appear in three of them. Both will sing in Beethoven's Missa Solemnis and Ninth Symphony. Miss Addison's third appearance will be in Bach's B minor Mass. Mr. Lloyd's third will be in the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio."

Singers engaged for two works are Mac Morgan (Missa Solemnis and "Fidelio"), and Donald Gramm (Ninth Symphony and B minor Mass). Singers who will appear in single works are Margaret Harshaw ("Fidelio"), Leontyne Price (Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"), Eunice Alberts (Missa Solemnis), Catherine Akos (Ninth Symphony) and Florence Kopleff and John McCollum (B minor Mass). Jennie Tourel will also be a soloist at the festival.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

APR 20 1955

Berkshire Auditions Slated In Cleveland

Regional auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be in Severance Hall, Cleveland, Sunday, 3 to 5 p.m. (DST); at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Warner Hall, Oberlin, Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon (DST).

The following faculty will teach this year at Tanglewood: Orchestra and conducting, Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; choral music, Hugh Ross; composition, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera, Boris Goldovsky; Tanglewood Study Group, Ingolf Dahl. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and Mr. Kroll will be present at all auditions.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
POST-GAZETTE
Circ. D. 259,074

APR 19 1955

Berkshire Center Auditions April 29

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund will be held Friday, April 29, from 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. in Exhibition Hall at Carnegie Tech.

Those who intend to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

PITTSBURGH, PA.
[illegible] 02,727

Staccato Notes

The Pittsburgh Concert Society major auditions for the 1955-56 season will be held June 23, 24, 25 at Foster Memorial. Singers, instrumentalists or any ensemble of either category may apply.

Audition blanks may be obtained (no later than June 10) from Miss Agnes O'Connor, 6412 Darlington Road, or telephone, evenings and week ends, Jackson 1-4431.

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Ranglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be held in Carnegie Tech College of Fine Arts Exhibition Hall Friday 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for six weeks of music study during the summer in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

* * *

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
Circ. D. 312,730

APR 23 1955

Anyone for Berkshires?

Some persons have expressed interest in a trip to the ~~Berkshire Music Festival at~~ Tanglewood, Mass., over the week end of ~~July [illegible] or July~~ 29. Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony, featuring Beethoven. If such a trip would attract you, drop a post card to Jim Frankel, The Press, Cleveland 14.

LANSING, MICH.
STATE JOURNAL
Circ. D. 58,799 - S. 57,957

APR 24 1955

Final Scholarship Auditions Slated

Final auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund will be held at the University of Michigan in Hill auditorium Monday from 9:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

Applicants should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music center, Symphony hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music center is maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of music study during the summer in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire festival. This summer from July 4 to Aug. 14, the 13th session of the school will be held. Charles Munch is the director.

The following departments form the Berkshire Music center: Orchestra and conducting—Leonard Bernstein; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; choral music, Hugh Ross; composition, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher; opera, Boris Goldovsky, and Tanglewood study group, Ingolf Dahl. Pianists and string players may apply for this division as a full time activity.

NEW YORK AGE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

APR 9 - 1955

Auditions At Tanglewood Opera Co.

Auditions for admission to the Opera department of the Berkshire Music center, Tanglewood, will be held at the Carnegie Recital hall on Thursday, April 14, from one to 3 p. m. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with the festival at Lenox, Mass. This summer marks the 13th session and extends from July 4 to August 14.

Applicants should notify the school office of their intention to attend these auditions. Address the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

APR 14 1955

Final Auditions For Tanglewood On April 29

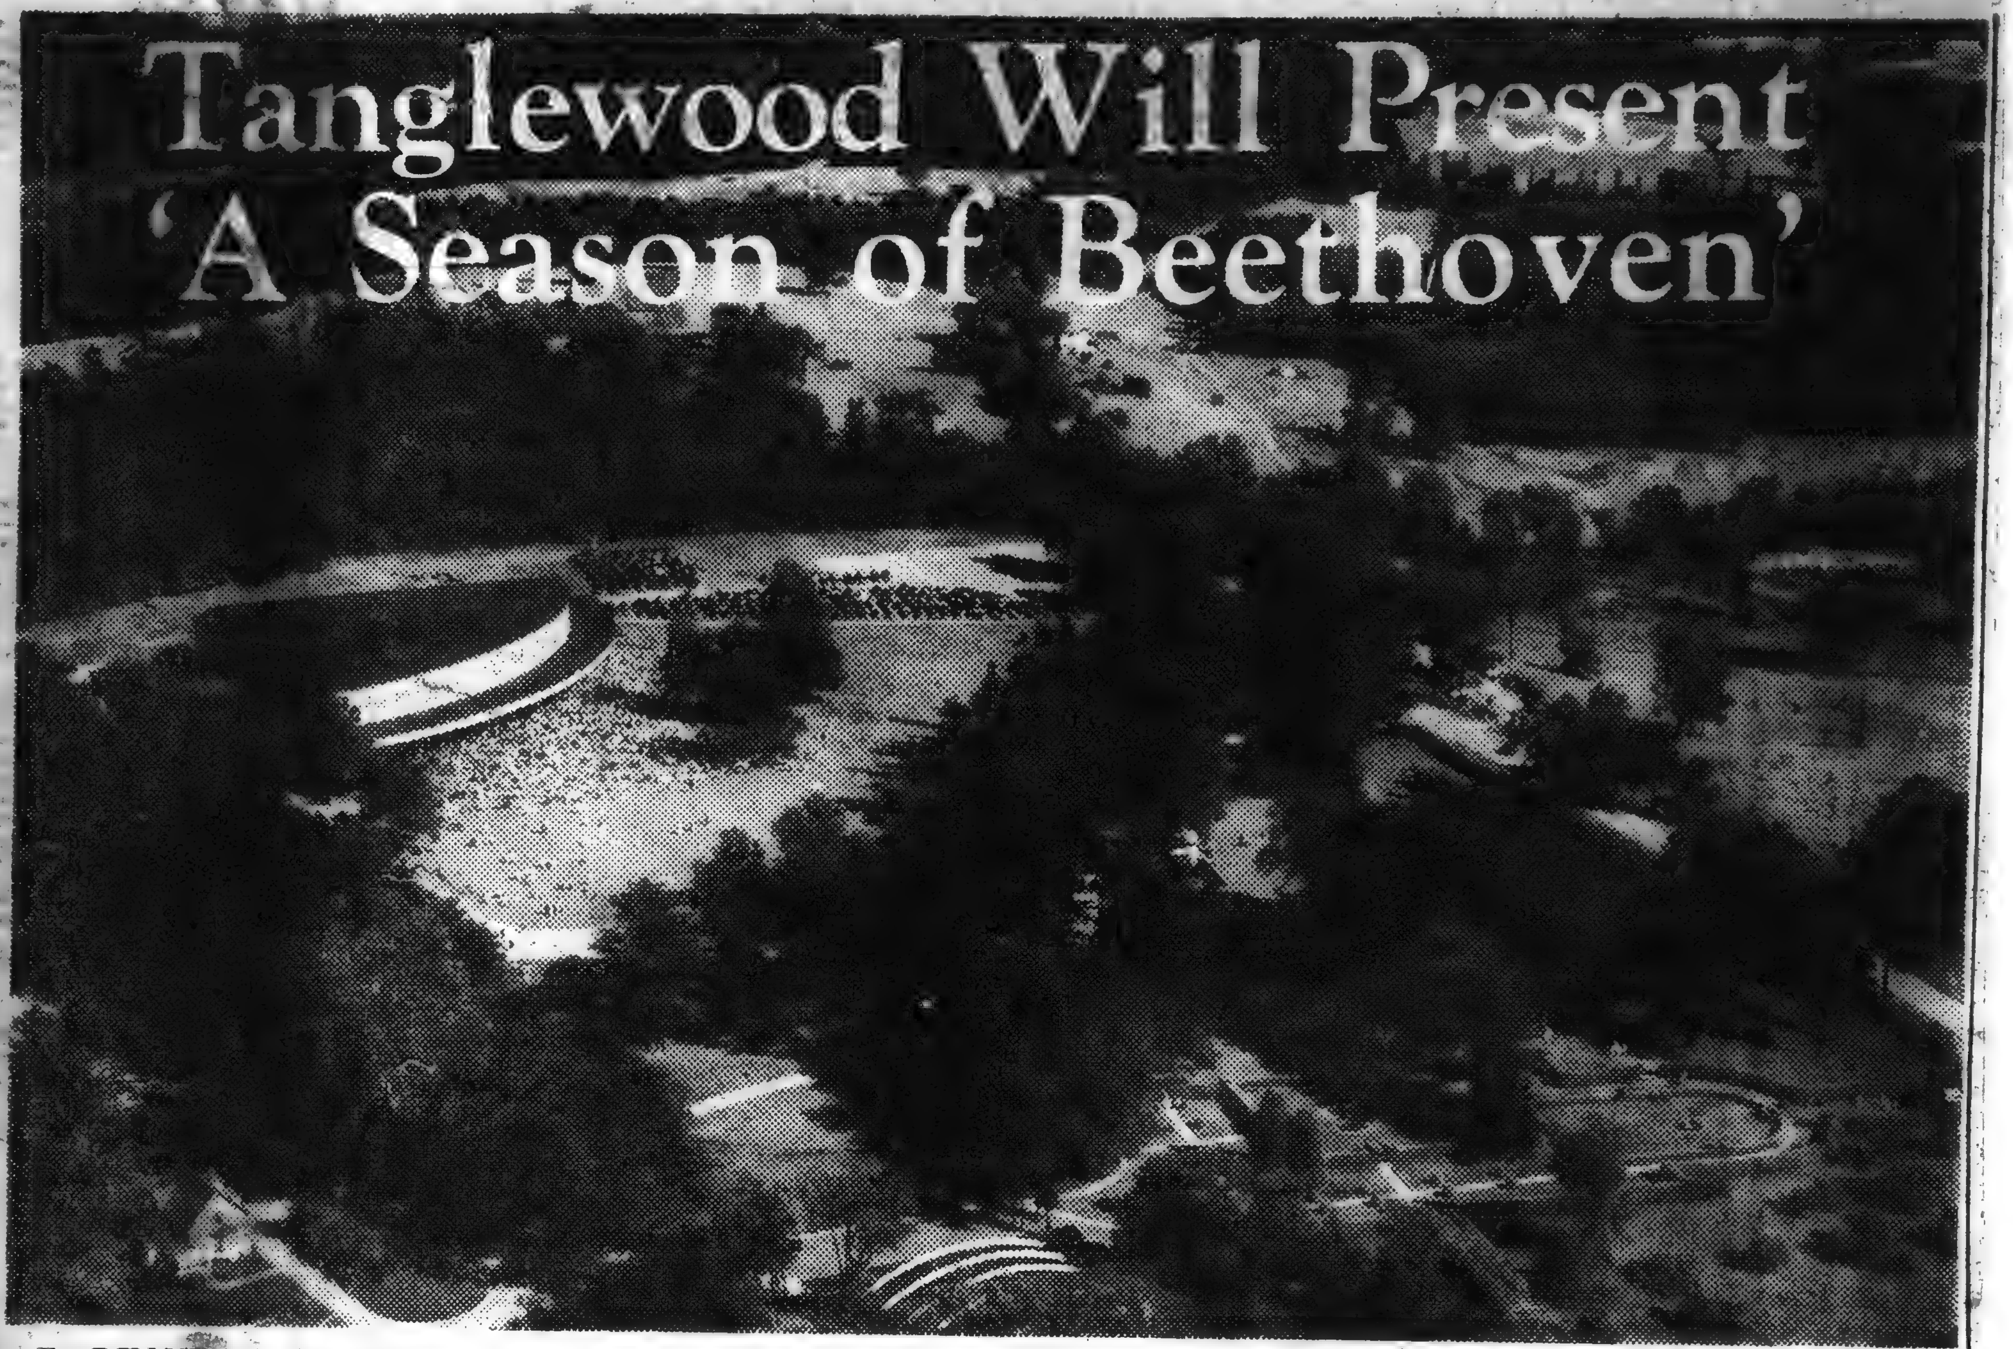
BOSTON—Final auditions for instrumental applicants to the Berkshire Music Center, and for tuition scholarships from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund will be held at Symphony Hall on Friday, April 29, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Pianists and string players may apply for the chamber music division as a full time activity. All applicants intending to audition should notify the registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, for application forms and catalog.

The Berkshire Music Center is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra as an opportunity for six weeks of music study durin the summer in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. This summer, from July 4 to Aug. 14, the 13th session of the school will be held. Charles Munch is the director. The faculty includes principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Albany Knickerbocker News May 31/55

Tanglewood Will Present 'A Season of Beethoven'



By DUANE LA FLECHE

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony, is calling its festival this year "A Season of Beethoven."

It really means it, for in the six weeks of the festival folks who drive over from Albany will have the opportunity to hear the nine Beethoven symphonies, two piano concertos, the violin concerto, three overtures, the Missa Solemnis, and Act II of Fidelio—plus a vast range of Beethoven's chamber music, including string quartets, trios, and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

It is a lot of Beethoven, but who is there to say a lot isn't good?

In the chamber music season, which runs for six Wednesday nights beginning July 6, the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio and the New Music String Quartet will be heard. The violin sonatas programmed will be played by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin; the piano sonatas by Rudolf Serkin and the cello works by Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz.

6 Soloists Listed

In the four weekends beginning July 22, when the Boston Symphony will be playing in the music shed, Mr. Stern, Mr. Piatigorsky and Mr. Serkin will appear as soloists, as well as Eugene Istomin, Margaret Harshaw and Leontyne Price.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct nine of the 12 concerts. Pierre Monteux will conduct two, and the effervescent Leonard Bernstein will be on the podium, when the orchestra, with chorus and soloists, presents the Missa Solemnis. That program will be in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late director of the orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The two weeks preceding the appearance of the full orchestra in the music shed will be devoted to what were originally (and are still known as) the "Bach-Mozart Concerts." They are played in the theater concert hall.

There is still an afternoon of Bach and a night of Mozart on the two-week program of six concerts, but also to be heard are works of Stravinsky, Handel, Hindemith, Vivaldi, Boccherini, Haydn, Ravel and others.

Bach Mass to Be Given

The afternoon of Bach will come on July 10, when, with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists, the Mass in B minor will be presented.

The night of Mozart, July 15, will see Mr. Bernstein in the dual role of conductor-soloist. He will play the Concerto in G major. That night Jennie Tourel, soprano, will be heard in two arias. It promises to be a pleasant evening, for Mr. Bernstein, when he is not engaged in such miscellaneous chores as writing a Broadway show, conducting abroad, or just showing off, is a delightful interpreter and a wondrous performer of that composer's music.

Ticket sale for the festival program has been opened. Both tickets and programs may be obtained by writing to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, 15. After mid-June programs may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE—MAY 15, 1955

The Rockefeller Foundation to Match Berkshire Music Center Contributions

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 at Tanglewood, Lenox, in connection with its Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Over a period of five years, starting this Summer, the Rockefeller Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for the support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The five appropriations, to be made annually, can amount to $125,000.

It is the second time the Rockefeller Foundation has come to the generous support of the Berkshire Music Center: grants totalling $65,000 in 1940 and 1941 to the Boston Symphony Orchestra enabled the orchestra to start its music school. Now, the Foundation is giving assistance to maintaining this undertaking on a secure financial basis.

A great impetus is thus given to the general public to increase its generosity. "If the friends of the Berkshire Music Center will rally to its support," was the comment of Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees, "the future of the school is assured."

Contributions to the music school in 1954 totaled some $25,000. This year a goal of at least $35,000 is sought. The donations are made by music-lovers who enjoy attending concerts by the 400 students enrolled each Summer by the Berkshire Music Center, as well as by individuals and organizations who assist the Center through tax-exempt donations to the organization set up for that purpose, the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Now, through the Rockefeller Foundation grants, the Music Center will benefit annually by twice the amount raised through the Friends, in excess of $15,000 annually.

The five-year matching grants will be paid into the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established in 1949 largely from a series of gifts from the R. C. A. Victor Division of the Radio Corporation of America. The original capital of $50,000, while drawn upon annually to assist the 4575 students from all parts of the United States and many foreign lands who have been enrolled in the school during its 12 sessions, has been increased substantially each year through contributions and the monies raised by the Friends. Under the terms of the Rockefeller Foundation grant, the potential gain to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund by the end of 1959 is estimated at $325,000.

The Berkshire Music Center will begin its 13th session at Tanglewood July 4. Its five departments are: Instrumental music, with Leonard Bernstein head of orchestra conducting; Richard Burgin and William Kroll heads of chamber music; choral music, with Hugh Ross in charge; composition, with noted composers Roger Sessions (U.S.A.) and Boris Blacher (Germany) this year's guest teachers; opera, headed by Boris Goldovsky, and the new and increasingly popular Tanglewood study group, aimed at lovers of music on a non-professional basis, which Ingolf Dahl heads. Charles Munch is director of the Berkshire Music Center; Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

Schenectady Gazette 6/21/55

Schermerhorn Awarded Tanglewood Scholarship

Kenneth Schermerhorn of 914 Hazelwood avenue, just out of khaki, has been awarded a scholarship in conducting and living expenses at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

* * *

WHILE IN SERVICE Schermerhorn distinguished himself as conductor of the Seventh Army Symphony Orchestra, 70 pieces, in a repertory of some 25 symphony selections, including the works of Beethoven, Mozart and Brahms, and since he had a first-rate concertmaster, in all the standard violin concertos. Some 10 works by American composers were included in the orchestra repertory and works composed in this country by Bartok Hindemith, Copland and Barber.

Schermerhorn registered at Tanglewood Thursday after visiting his teacher, Roger Voisin, first trumpet player in the Boston Symphony.

Among honors Schermerhorn received during the past year was being chosen to conduct two performances of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio" at the summer music festival at Passau in Bavaria and being named as one of three persons to receive the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Award for 1955.

In April his orchestra gave a concert in Milan and he looked up Leonard Bernstein, who was conducting the famous LaScala Opera House orchestra there. It was at Bernstein's advice that he is returning to Tanglewood. When he went into the army in 1951 he managed to work in studies at the Munich Staatsoper and the Stuttgard Staatsoper.

* * *

THIS SUMMER he will conduct the Berkshire Music Center student symphony in several selections on its Thursday evening concerts, which are open to the public. The orchestra is formed from 100 music students who come from some 45 states, Canada, and 15 foreign lands to study and perform music at Tanglewood.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUL 9 1955

Tanglewood Festival

Music Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 8 — Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony orchestra opened the 18th season of the Berkshire Festival tonight before an audience of 2000. Presented in the theatre-concert hall rather than in the larger shed, tonight's chamber music concert, like that scheduled for next week end, is popularly known as a Bach-Mozart affair, although other composers often muscle in, as did Stravinsky tonight.

Stravinsky's "Orpheus" ballet music is not, it is true, particularly muscular; indeed it is a study in pianissimos, with recurrent decrescendos from inaudibility. However, it afforded a half-hour's repose in a program which was appropriately jubilant and festive.

The program opened with Bach's short but brilliant sinfonia from the "Easter" oratorio in which two trumpets are arrogantly dominant. Roger Voisin and Armando Chitalla performed with characteristic eclat.

Bach's Suite No. 2 for flute and strings provided Doriot Anthony Dwyer an opportunity to prove what a superb flutist she is. An encore on a Boston Symphony program is as rare as a July snowstorm but it is becoming standard practice to have the flutist give a reprise of the presto badinerie in this suite. Tonight she was recalled repeatedly even after the second sprint through the score.

The program closed with a sparkling reading of Mozart's "Prague" symphony.

The playing tonight was unusually good. In the past opening performances in the Tanglewood season have exhibited an orchestra tired after a long winter season and a taxing Pops season.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 11 1955

Munch and Thor Johnson Conduct Weekend Concerts

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

They were in fact "Bach-Mozart" programs when Serge Koussevitzky inaugurated concerts with a chamber orchestra to precede the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The "Bach-Mozart" name has been retained but other composers have been added. As if to emphasize the fact that great music does not depend on the number of persons involved, the honor of opening the festival now is given to a chamber music ensemble.

This year it was the Kroll String Quartet which launched the proceedings in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday evening, July 6, with three quartets by Beethoven—Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95, and Op. 131. The program also served to open a series within a series—music by Beethoven with all nine symphonies and much chamber music to be heard throughout the festival.

* * *

Charles Munch received a warm welcome from a large audience at the first orchestral concert on Friday evening. The program included Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata, the same composer's Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist, the Stravinsky "Orpheus" Ballet, and the Mozart "Prague" Symphony.

Two rarely heard works provided interest and variety the following evening with Thor Johnson as guest conductor. The leader of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra was a member of Dr. Koussevitzky's conducting classes at the Berkshire Music Center in 1940 and 1941. Mr. Johnson's somewhat overenergetic style did not always cope successfully with all the elements of grace and subtlety to be found in the music, but the main outlines were clear and some excellent individual performances by members of the orchestra made this an outstanding concert.

* * *

A novelty for most persons in the audience was Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," Concerto on Old Folk-Melodies for Viola and Small Orchestra. The composer utilizes songs from the 15th and 16th centuries to weave skillful and intricate patterns both for soloist and orchestra. Omission of violins and violas from the busy accompaniment gives it a wind-band quality and allows the solo instrument to speak with clear accents.

Joseph de Pasquale played the not always grateful solo part with distinction. His tone was rich and full, and his precision made light of the work's many difficulties in technique and pitch.

Another seminovelty was the Symphonie Concertante in B-flat major, Opus 84, by Haydn. Written in the old concerto grosso style with a small solo group instead of an individual soloist, the work combines oboe, bassoon, violin, and cello in the concertino. While the composer was not particularly successful in joining baroque and classic elements in the same work, much opportunity is given to test the abilities of the soloists.

Particularly noteworthy here was the purity of tone and remarkable sense of phrasing shown by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Sherman Walt, bassoon, and the impeccable musicianship of Richard Burgin, violin, and Samuel Mayes, cello. The audience afforded soloists, orchestra and conductor a real ovation.

* * *

The Handel Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, in B minor, Op. 6, No. 12, and the Haydn Symphony in B-flat, No. 98, opened and closed the program.

Mr. Munch returned for the Sunday afternoon concert to conduct a glorious performance of the Bach Mass in B minor. In spite of the exceedingly warm weather which must have tried the performers, the results scarcely could have been improved. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society sang splendidly and the soloists conveyed all the dignity and fervor demanded by their parts. Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, added to the high regard which their previous appearances in Boston and Tanglewood have brought them.

Above all, Mr. Munch was inspired with a fervor which brought orchestra, soloists and chorus together in a rhapsody of praise and devotion. One did not merely listen to the music, one surrendered to it. This was the finest of endings to a week of excellent music-making.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 7 1955

First Tanglewood Concert Thrills 1,172 Music Lovers

An audience of 1,172 music lovers last evening heard the first public concert of the Berkshire Music Festival season at Tanglewood, Lenox.

One of Six Concerts

The concert was given by the Kroll string quartet in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, and was one of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts to be presented there in connection with the festival during this season.

The ensemble played four of Beethoven's quartets, putting in this opening performance of the season the strong emphasis on Beethoven which will be found throughout the year's programs.

Tomorrow evening the first of the six "Bach-Mozart" concerts to be given in the theater-concert hall by a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony orchestra members, will be presented. While these six concerts preliminary to the main festival concerts in the big music shed by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, originally were devoted to the works of Bach and Mozart and the first one this year will be, other composers are represented in subsequent programs.

These concerts will be given on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.30 and Sunday afternoons at 2.30 this week and next with Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony, conducting the first, third and sixth.

Program Tomorrow

The program tomorrow evening will include the Sinfonia from Bach's "Easter" cantata, his Suite No. 2 for flute and strings with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Berkshire orchestra, as soloist, and Mozart's "Pague symphony.. Saturday evening Thor Johnson will conduct the small orchestra in performances of Handel's Concerto Grosso, Haydn's Symphonie Concertante, Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" with Joseph DePasquale of the Boston orchestra as viola soloist, and Haydn's B-flat symphony, No 98. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra, the Harvard Glee club and the Radcliffe Choral society in Bach's mass in B minor with Adelle Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm as soloists.

The Berkshire Symphonic festival corporation yesterday announced that it will bring out next weekend "Music Under the Moon," a history of the festival in its first 11 years, written by John G. W. Mahanna, Pittsfield newspaperman. Its 30,000 words and 48 pages of illustration cover the story of the festival from its founding in 1934 to 1945 when the Tanglewood music shed was presented to the Boston orchestra and it took over from the county organization the operation of the annual festival at which it had played in preceding years under a contract arrangement.

B.E. Eagle
7/13/55

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Beaux Arts Trio in Beethoven program, Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:40—"Gigi," Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"Sabrina Fair," Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"Gigi." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Theater.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival featuring dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.

The Berkshire Courier, 7/14/55

Beethoven Chamber Music Lovers Will Hear It Every Wednesday at Tanglewood

By George E. Membrino

For the sixteenth summer in succession the Boston Symphony Orchestra has returned to its permanent summer home at Tanglewood in Lenox, for six glorious weeks of the best in music under the stars. With its conductor, Charles Munch, recently returned from a visit to France, this week marked the opening of the 1955 Tanglewood season.

Replacing the performances of chamber music, which in former years was donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, the Kroll String Quartet, sponsored by the Berkshire Festival with proceeds going to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, was heard last Wednesday night. A large audience gathered in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

A program of all-Beethoven String quartets was heard. Performed were the String Quartets in C minor, F minor, and C sharp minor. The delightful writing of Beethoven in the quartet style has never been equalled since his time. This year will be a blessing to Beethoven chamber music lovers, for the season calls for Beethoven every Wednesday night throughout the entire festival.

The second program of the festival series was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber group. This group is formed of a limited number of Boston Symphony Orchestra players especially chosen to fulfill the role of playing this type of music in its best fashion, a point fully achieved this past week-end.

Soloist for the Bach Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings, was flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Her faultless technical facility, which was evident throughout, was most certainly worthy of the ovation accorded her at the conclusion of the suite. In fact, so overwhelming was the audience's applause that Conductor Munch asked her to repeat the final number of the suite, the Badinerie.

It was almost two years to the day that this same performer with the same group and at the same place, rendering the same composition, displayed flute playing at its best. It was at that time that Mr. Munch broke with tradition in having her repeat the last phase as was repeated last Friday night. When one has as little chance to hear such a brilliant performance under such favorable conditions, it is a tribute to all who had a hand in it, including the orchestra and composer.

Tanglewood Turn to sixth page

Tanglewood

(Continued from first page)

Following the Bach Suite in pre-classic style the opposite extreme, musically, was then offered—"Orpheus" Ballet in Three Scenes by Igor Stravinsky. This ultra-modern conception of music composition is a talking point whenever mentioned. In flavor it seems to be poly-everything. Rhythms, themes, and harmonies take on such an abundant air that in analysis we actually at times must separate all of the musical [illegible] double meanings. Probably the infrequency of music in as modern a flavor is the reason for the great debate. With more intensified and frequent hearings, however, the listener finds it more acceptable. The orchestra, in

---

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 10 1955

Music Review

TANGLEWOOD, July 9—Thor Johnson conducted members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here tonight in the second program in the Berkshire Festival. The theatre-concert hall was packed and an even larger crowd heard the concert seated on the grass. The total audience was about 3000.

Mr. Johnson, the very capable conductor, has come a long way in the musical world since his student days here as a pupil of Dr. Koussevitzky. He is permanent conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra and has just returned from the history-making Japanese tour of the Symphony of the Air (the former NBC Symphony) during which he led more than half of the concerts.

As a conductor, Thor Johnson is in the German tradition. He is happily painstaking in the quality of tone he draws from the orchestra; he is concerned with the formal patterns of his scores; and he is not ashamed of sentiment when the music calls for it. He does not, however, scientillate or give off sparks on the podium, and he is not a "personality" conductor. But his music is good and interesting.

The three H's, Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, gave Bach and Mozart a night off, programwise. Handel's Concerto Grosso in B Minor opened the concert. The slow movement was particularly beautiful, warm and full-textured, but the final allegro wanted a trifle more bounce.

Haydn's Symphonie Concertante, op. 84, one of the jolliest pieces ever penned by the composer, came next. Here the orchestra displayed its remarkable verve when the music gives it a chance. Not even the few slips in intonation, caused undoubtedly by the muggy, humid weather which can play havoc with string pitch, marred the exhilarating mood of the music.

Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" featured Joseph De Pasquale as the viola soloist. Not one of the most rewarding works of Hindemith, it does provide a spectacular part for the viola and from time to time a hummable tune for the listener. Mr. De Pasquale was roundly applauded for his playing.

The concert came to a delightful close with Haydn's beloved Symphony No. 98 in B-flat Major. T. K.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, BOSTON, MONDAY, JULY 11, 1955

rman Art in Cambridge—Castle Hill—

The Beaux Arts Trio will be heard in three Beethoven trios at Tanglewood Wednesday evening. The players are Daniel Guilet, violin, Menahem Pressler, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello.

'Hour of Music' At Tanglewood

"The Hour of Music, Inc.,' announces that two of its scholarship winners, Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, will be soloists at Tanglewood, Mass., on Saturday in Vivaldi's "Gloria," with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students.

Officers of the organization are Mmes. J. Robert Hewitt, Reginald B. Lanier, Alan T. Schumacher and Cleveland F. Bacon.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUL 11 1955

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

047

TANGLEWOOD, July 10—For the final concert in the first week end of the Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch chose the Bach Mass in B Minor. As it turned out a more unfortunate choice could hardly be imagined, for the weather was so hot and the theatre-concert hall was so uncomfortable that a Strauss waltz would have been taxing on both performer and listener.

The assisting forces, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, were the same ones that gave an excellent reading of the score last winter in the regular Boston season.

Normally we would expect a performance equal to the first if not superior. However, such was far from the case.

This afternoon's concert exhibited one of those instances in which an accident toward the beginning sets the tone for the remaining portion of the performance.

After a beautiful, heartfelt reading of the opening, Kyrie Eleison, promising a glorious afternoon of music, Mr. Munch misjudged his tempo for the following Gloria. He took it so fast that neither singer nor musician could keep up with him and the music simply fell apart.

There is a speed limit for any chorus, no matter how virtuoso a group; with pitch, consonants and vowels posing all sorts of problems, a chorus must have some consideration. If the performance is a steeplechase, one may expect a melee at every hazardous passage.

In succeeding choruses the singers never quite recovered their poise, and the concert was sometimes extremely trying.

However, the soloists did as well as could be expected under the circumstances, even bringing some moments of distinction to the various arias.

The attendance for the first week has set a record for the Berkshire Festival with 10,000 people clocked through the gate

---

Art—Music—Theater

Berkshire Festival

Munch and Thor Johnson Conduct Weekend Concerts

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

They were in fact "Bach-Mozart" programs when Serge Koussevitzky inaugurated concerts with a chamber orchestra to precede the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The "Bach-Mozart" name has been retained but other composers have been added. As if to emphasize the fact that great music does not depend on the number of persons involved, the honor of opening the festival now is given to a chamber music ensemble.

This year it was the Kroll String Quartet which launched the proceedings in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday evening, July 6, with three quartets by Beethoven—Op. 18, No. 4; Op. 95, and Op. 131. The program also served to open a series within a series—music by Beethoven with all nine symphonies and much chamber music to be heard throughout the festival.

* * *

Charles Munch received a warm welcome from a large audience at the first orchestral concert on Friday evening. The program included Bach's Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata, the same composer's Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist, the Stravinsky "Orpheus" Ballet, and the Mozart "Prague" Symphony.

Two rarely heard works provided interest and variety the following evening with Thor Johnson as guest conductor. The leader of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra was a member of Dr. Koussevitzky's conducting classes at the Berkshire Music Center in 1940 and 1941. Mr. Johnson's somewhat overenergetic style did not always cope successfully with all the elements of grace and subtlety to be found in the music, but the main outlines were clear and some excellent individual performances by members of the orchestra made this an outstanding concert.

* * *

A novelty for most persons in the audience was Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," Concerto on Old Folk-Melodies for Viola and Small Orchestra. The composer utilizes songs from the 15th and 16th centuries to weave skillful and intricate patterns both for soloist and orchestra. Omission of violins and violas from the busy accompaniment gives it a wind-band quality and allows the solo instrument to speak with clear accents.

Joseph de Pasquale played the not always grateful solo part with distinction. His tone was rich and full, and his precision made light of the work's many difficulties in technique and pitch.

Another seminovelty was the Symphonie Concertante in B-flat major, Opus 84, by Haydn. Written in the old concerto grosso style, with a small solo group instead of an individual soloist, the work combines oboe, bassoon, violin, and cello in the concertino. While the composer was not particularly successful in joining baroque and classic elements in the same work, much opportunity is given to test the abilities of the soloists.

Particularly noteworthy here was th. purity of tone and remarkable sense of phrasing shown by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Sherman Walt, bassoon, and the impeccable musicianship of Richard Burgin, violin, and Samuel Mayes, cello. The audience afforded soloists, orchestra and conductor a real ovation.

* * *

The Handel Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, in B minor, Op. 6, No. 12, and the Haydn Symphony in B-flat, No. 98, opened and closed the program.

Mr. Munch returned for the Sunday afternoon concert to conduct a glorious performance of the Bach Mass in B minor. In spite of the exceedingly warm weather which must have tried the performers, the result scarcely could have been improved. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society sang splendidly and the soloists conveyed all the dignity and fervor demanded by their parts. Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, added to the high regard which their previous appearances in Boston and Tanglewood have brought them.

Above all, Mr. Munch was inspired with a fervor which brought orchestra, soloists and chorus together in a rhapsody of praise and devotion. One did not merely listen to the music, one surrendered to it. This was the finest of endings to a week of excellent music-making.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

JUL 3 1955

Martin Bookspan Concerts From

047

Martin Bookspan is originating his WCOP "Sunday Evening Concert" programs, 8:00 to 12:00 midnight, from Pittsfield and Tanglewood, where he has gone for this Summer's Berkshire Festival as radio and television coordinator for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The emphasis at this Summer's Berkshire Festival will be on the music of Beethoven, with all nine Symphonies, three Concertos, and the Second Act of the opera "Fidelio" scheduled for performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Outstanding soloists will include Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern, Eugene Istomin, Gregor Piatigorsky and Jennie Tourel.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 9 1955

BACH PERFORMED BRILLIANTLY BY DORIOT DWYER

Flutist Received Enthusiastically in Performance At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 8—There were two bright stars contributing to the first of the Bach-Mozart chamber concerts given tonight in the theater-concert hall. The first was Johann Sebastian Bach; the second was the premiere flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Both Beethoven and Mrs. Dwyer were magnificently aided by the Boston Orchestra virtuosi and Charles Munch who was making his first appearance of this festival season.

Stravinsky 'Orpheus'

In addition to Beethoven the program contained the Stravinsky "Orpheus," a ballet in three scenes, and Mozart's "Symphony in D. Major" known as the "Prague." There was a good sized audience with many preferring to sit outside the concert hall, benefiting from what cool breezes there were.

The program opened with the Sinfonia from the "Easter" ratorio by Bach. What a glorious bit of music this is. It is exultant with its brilliant horn passages heralding the advent of the Easter season. Then followed Bach's "Suite No. 2 in B Minor" for flute and strings. Mrs. Dwyer was the soloist. Surely this unassuming, attractive young woman is one of the greatest flutists of the day. Her command of her instrument is absolute and she has a great sensitivity and a wonderful feeling for phrase and color.

The finale of this delightful suite, with its overture, rondo and little dances, is a tremendous Badinerie-Presto. Mrs. Dwyer played it at dazzling tempo. It was no surprise that the audience applauded and cheered at its conclusion. She was recalled at least six times and finally played a portion of the finale over again. Mr. Munch and the string players provided stunning assistance.

It is a far distance from Bach to Stravinsky, but somehow the music of the ballet "Orpheus" seemed to fit perfectly into the program. The ballet was written in 1947 and had its first performance the following year by the ballet society in New York City Center. George Balanchine was the choreographer.

The ballet relates the story of Orpheus and Eurydice. For the most part the music is subdued, dark and sad. It contains many lovely lyrical passages for solo strings and woodwinds and it also contains some of the barbaric color and tonal dissonance characteristic of the composer. Even without the dancers, this music is powerful, often ruthless. The performance was illuminating and it was clear that Mr. Munch realized its emotional depths and strength.

The concluding work was the Mozart "Symphony in D Major," known as the "Prague," probably because it was given its first performance in that city. Mr. Munch and his men provided a fluent reading of the work, one which had both the grace and the strength inherent in the music.

Tomorrow night Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra will make his first appearance here as conductor. He has chosen to program the "Concerto Grosso for string orchestra in B Minor" by Handel; the Haydn "Sinfonie concertante" for violin, cello, oboe and bassoon; Hindemith's "Concerto on old folk melodies for vila and small orchestra, with Dipasquale as soloist, and Haydn's "Symphony in B-Flat Major, Op. 98."

Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra, Harvard and Radcliffe clubs and soloists in a performance of Bach's "Mass in B Minor." Adele Addison will make the first of three appearances in this work, singing with Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass.

Berkshire E. Eagle 7/13/55

Brook

SOLOIST Jennie Tourel rehearses at Tanglewood with Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor, for the all-Mozart program to be given by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony in the Theater Concert Hall Friday evening. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, "Al Desio," "Zeffiretti," and "Non Temer" from Idomeneo.

Tanglewood Tales

23 Composers Here

Twenty-three young composers are in residence at Tanglewood this summer, studying with the noted composers Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. Five of them are distaff students of the Berkshire Music Center, and six are from foreign lands. Emma Lou Diemer, of Warrensburg, Va., Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Michiko Toyama, of Osaka, Japan, Claire C. J. Polin, of Philadelphia are students of Mr. Sessions; Elaine Radoff is working with Mr. Blacher. From Wellington, New Zealand, has come Douglas G. Lilburn; from Sarnia, Ont., Canada, William J. Sydeman; from Helsinki, Finland, Eino Rautavaara, to work with Mr. Sessions. Mr. Blacher's foreign students are Tossi Ichiyanago, of Tokyo, and George Sicilianos, of Athens, Greece.

The ifrst concert by Tanglewood's young composers, at which they perform their own works and argue with each other and ther audience their respective merits, will be held Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. The Composers' Forums are open to the public through membership in the Friends' society.

* * *

Sunday Morning Concert

Sunday morning will witness the second concert this summer by chamber music students of the Berkshire Music Center, at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program consists of: Beethoven: String Quartet in B flat major, Opus 18, No. 6, performed by Edward Filmanowicz (Chicago), Pandora Hopkins (Brooklyn, N.Y.), violins; Edward Gerber (Bronx, N.Y.), viola; Alice Ober (Pasadena, Cal.), cello. Beethoven: Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello in C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; performed by Eleanor Siranossian (Watertown), violin; David Spinks (Albany, N.Y.), cello; Jerome Lowenthal (Philadelphia, Pa.), piano. Beethoven: Quintet for Winds and Piano in E flat, Op. 16, performed by Nicholas Apostle (Kenton, O.), oboe; William Kaplan (Madison, Wis.), bassoon; Max Watras (Chicopee), clarinet; Edwin Thayer (Weymouth), French horn; Gilda Frishberg (Flushing, N.Y.), piano. This concert is also open to the public through membership in the Friends' Society.

* * *

Opera Scenes Monday

Two unannounced extra concerts Berkshire Music Center students are being given at Tanglewood during the coming week. Members of the Friends are invited to a program of opera scenes, to be performed under the guidance of Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, on Monday afternoon, July 18, at 4:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Ingolf Dahl's Tanglewood Study Group (Department V), set up for amateurs of music who spend their vacations in an atmosphere of music, rather than in making music their careers, will give an informal program in the Barn at Tanglewood, on Saturday, July 23, at 4 p.m., which is open to the public without admission.

Three Beethoven Piano Trios On Festival Program Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven.

At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

NBC Concertmaster

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the NBC Symphony Orchestra, now called the Symphony of the Air. He has just returned from that orchestra's extensive tour of the Far East, concerts having been given in Japan, Korea, Burma, Ceylon, Formosa, Okinawa, Siam, French Indochina and Hawaii.

Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music.

The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

Bernstein To Conduct

On Friday evening the second and final weekend of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist. Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist; and on Sunday afternoon the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office.

HARTFORD COURANT 6/24/55

The Lively Arts—

Safe at Tanglewood

By T. H. Parker

The complete programs for the Berkshire Music Festival, to be given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, from July 8 to August 14, have been announced, and in temper they vary little from those of the past.

As was printed in this column before, Mr. Munch will give the big play to Beethoven, and that will be refreshing, at least, if hardly novel. As for the rest of the works to be heard, they represent standard concert-hall fare, winter or summer. The number of compositions that will be new or otherwise unfamiliar, remain at the microscopic minimum.

★

Tanglewood represents the goose that lays the golden egg, for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and those who direct the orchestra's affairs are not going to see it killed off. Thousands upon thousands of people will flock through the gates on six week ends this summer, for a variety of purposes, including that of hearing music. The Boston Symphony board proposes to treat them to the tried and true in that department. Thereby the Symphony accomplishes two ends: It won't have to spend money rehearsing any new works, and it won't scare away any customers by playing them.

With the cost of running symphony orchestras what it indubitably is, one understands this sense of caution and precaution. On the other hand, there are numerous fresh works which the orchestra already has in its repertoire, having played them during the past winter. And in this viewer's mind there is the impression that, Tanglewood being the tourists' mecca it is, the many-headed will still show up in droves, regardless of what is being performed.

Since on this basis alone the playing of fresh or new music seems perfectly feasible, it hardly is necessary to raise moral arguments. Nevertheless, it does not seem to occur to the Boston Symphony that it owes education as well as performance to its audiences, and advancement to music. At the end of the Tanglewood season, the orchestra's publicity staff will announce how many thousands of persons attended the concerts, which is the new way of measuring the value of endeavors in all the arts. To many, this music-by-quantity will seem some kind of triumph or other. Perhaps it is, but it will not have done a great deal toward building great audiences, which, after all, Beethoven himself said are the sine qua non of great music.

However, to desist from crying in the wilderness, here are the programs:

Friday, July 8: Bach, Sinfonia from the "Easter" Cantata; Bach, Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Mozart, "Prague" Symphony.

Saturday, July 9: Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn, Symphonie Concertante; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony No. 98; guest conductor, Thor Johnson.

Sunday, July 10: Bach, Mass in B minor, with choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe.

Friday, July 15: Mozart program, including "Don Giovanni" Overture, "Linz" Symphony, Piano Concerto K. 453, and arias sung by Jennie Tourel; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor and piano soloist.

Saturday, July 16: Program of Italian music, including Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture; Boccherini, Cello Concerto (Samuel Mayes); Vivaldi, Concerto Grosso for Four Violins; Vivaldi, Gloria (with chorus).

Sunday, July 17: French program including Rameau Suite from "Dardanus"; Faure, "Pelleas and Melisande" Suite; Faure, Pavane; Milhaud, Serenade; Honegger, Fourth Symphony.

Friday, July 22: Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan," Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern), and Seventh Symphony.

Saturday, July 23: Bach-Respighi, Passacaglia; Beethoven, Second Symphony; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss, "Death and Transfiguration"; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, July 24: Beethoven First, Fourth and Sixth symphonies.

Friday, July 29: Handel, "Water Music"; Schumann, Fourth Symphony; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (with Leontyne Price); Brahms, Fourth Symphony.

Saturday, July 30: Beethoven, "Egmont" Overture, Fifth Piano Concerto (Rudolf Serkin) and "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, July 31: Brahms, "Academic" Overture, Concerto for Violin and Cello (Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky), Symphony No. 1; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Friday, August 5: Beethoven, Missa Solemnis, conducted by Leonard Bernstein in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

Saturday, August 6: Beethoven, "Fidelio," Act II; Wagner, excerpts from "The Dusk of the Gods" (soloists to include Margaret Harshaw).

Sunday, August 7: Beethoven Fifth and Eighth symphonies and Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin).

Friday, August 12: Brahms, Haydn Variations; Bloch, "Schelomo" (Piatigorsky); Debussy, "La Mer"; Ravel, "Daphnis and Chloe" Second Suite.

Saturday, August 13: Wagner, "Flying Dutchman" Overture; Brahms, Third Symphony; Debussy, Three Nocturnes; Strauss, "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite; guest conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Sunday, August 14: Beethoven, Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 and Ninth Symphony (with chorus and soloists).

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 7 1955

Kroll Quartet At Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass. — This is the Beethoven year at Tanglewood. In consequence the chamber music concerts, devoted exclusively to his music, assume especial significance in the Festival activities.

* * *

LAST NIGHT the Kroll Quartet initiated the Wednesday evening series in the Theater-Concert Hall; and it was a felicitous choice of ensemble. For if string quartet is the purest form of chamber music, it is also the medium in which the Master of Bonn achieved his sublimest expression and the utmost profundity.

And the Krolls kept the program on a high plateau of interest with a representative selection from each of his creative periods. This chronological survey included the youthful intensity of Opus 18, No. 4; the Opus 95 ("Serioso") with its mastery of materials; and one of the last, great quartets, Opus 131 in C-Sharp Minor.

There is no point in stressing the derivative qualities in the Opus 18, No. 4; there is too much of Beethoven in it. Immediately apparent are the sforzandi and the rhythmic restlessness. And the vigorous and rich-toned interpretation of the Kroll group did not allow you to mistake it for Mozart or Haydn.

Subtitles, usually unauthorized by the composer, are often misleading as well. "Serious," in the case of Opus 95, hardly approximates the tragic tone of this work. Like the C-Minor Symphony, it depicts a titanic struggle which, in this instance, is not happily resolved. And very seldom did Beethoven write more succinctly and with more concentrated power.

It was in this work that the Kroll Quartet impressed as an ideal Beethoven ensemble. There may be more tonal refinement in the Budapest and a few other groups, but it would be difficult to match the drive and forceful utterance that the Kroll brought to this middle period work.

THE CULMINATION of the evening came, of course, with Opus 131. This reviewer has heard the work a number of times but another performance invariably reveals new beauties. Its variety is infinite and never-failing. This is Beethoven the liberator of form, the genius extempore.

The warm enthusiasm of the audience at the end was a tribute not only to a musically and moving performance but to an enduring work of art.

[186]

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 9 1955

Tanglewood Concerts Will Feature Trios

An evening of Beethoven trios will open the second week of the Berkshire Music Festival concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30 p. m. Wednesday.

The "eaux Arts Trio will be featured Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

The Friday program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium after a year's leave of absence, of composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

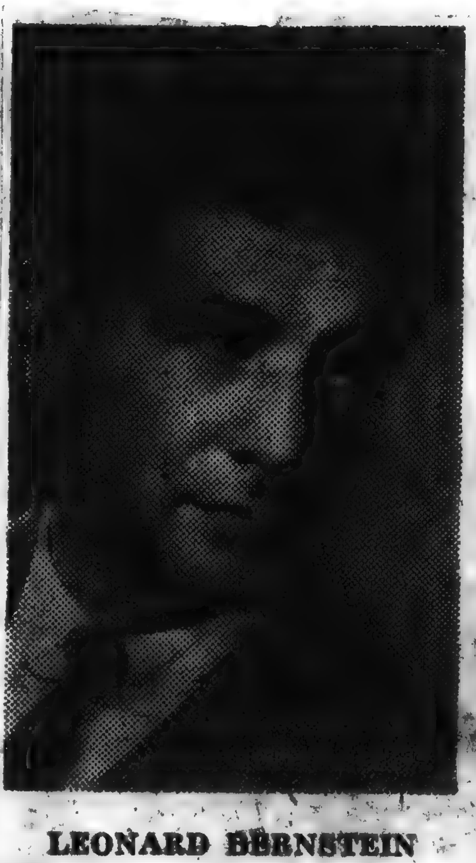
Mr. Bernstein will present an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, who teamed two years ago with Mr. Bernstein at a Festival concert.

The program is designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the Fall music season.

Miss Tourel will sing tree arias two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G. major.

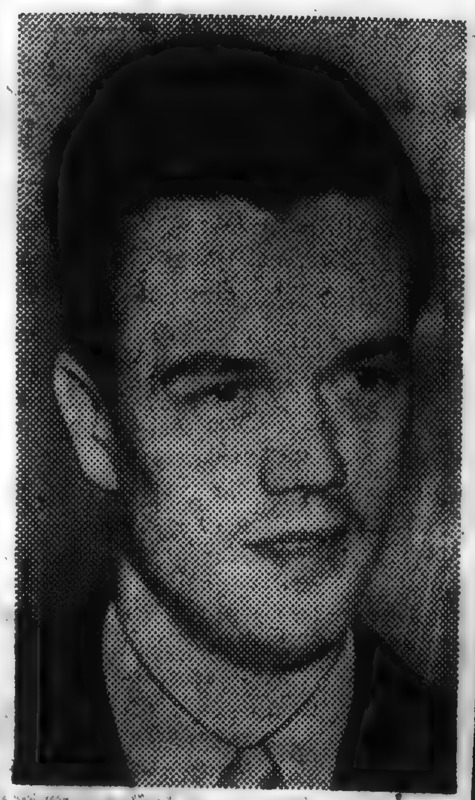
Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students, including soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York City. Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this Summer. Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program is all French orchestral music.

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8.30 p. m. and Sunday at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance. In the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the Music Shed.



LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Composer-Conductor-Pianist

JENNIE TOUREL
Mezzo-Soprano



SAMUEL MAYES
Boston Symphony Cellist

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUL 16 1955

Stratford-on-Housatonic

The world watched and applauded when the new Shakespeare Festival Theatre opened last Tuesday in Connecticut. From England, Sir Winston Churchill cabled to this effect: "Now the third side of the triangle is complete, with Stratford in England, Stratford in Canada and now Stratford in Connecticut."

The English Stratford is, of course, the birthplace of Shakespeare. The festival theatres in all three Stratfords are dedicated to perpetuating the works of the greatest of English poets as a living heritage.

The new playhouse at our Stratford is imposing and impressive. It will become another of the great festival centres of New England, along with the Berkshire Festival and the Boston Arts Festival. Visitors will seek it out from all parts of the globe. It is happily situated and well launched.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 9 1955

Bernstein To Conduct Mozart Program At Tanglewood, Jennie Tourel Soloist

Bernstein Leading Orchestra

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday; and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Benrstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, music director of theBoston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct bot hthe Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. Boccherini, highlights of which are the Bocchedini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum.

The complete programs are:

Beethoven: Trios — C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke"). The Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano).

Mozart: Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425); Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zeffiretti" "Idomeneo"), "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo"). Soloist, Jennie Tourel, soprano; Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453). Soloist, Leonard Bernstein. Leonard Bernstein, conductor.

Italian Music

Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini: Concerto for Cello. Soloist, Samuel Mayes; Vivaldi: Gloria, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Soloists: Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano. Hugh Ross, conductor.

French Music

Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger: Symphony No. 4. Charles Munch, conductor.

This weekend's opening Festival concerts by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday, July 9: Thor Johnson conducting Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn: Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello; Hindemith: "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn: Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sunday, July 10: Charles Munch conducting Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Adele Addison and other soloists.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 10 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL ON RADIO MONDAYS

Concerts of the world-renowned Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be broadcast by the NBC Radio network on Mondays (8.15-9 p. m.) starting tomorrow. The programs will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra with distinguished vocal and instrumental soloists. Ben Grauer will be narrator.

The concerts take place in Tanglewood, where thousands of visitors flock each week to the many orchestral, chamber and operatic programs. In addition to the concerts, the major activity is the Berkshire Music Center, where many young professionals complete their musical education. The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the late Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 10 1955

FIRST TANGLEWOOD CONCERT BY MUSIC SCHOOL IS SUCCESS

Student Conductors Outstanding in Performance Of Difficult Numbers

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, June 9—This is the first time we have been close enough to Tanglewood for a full season to permit our viewing the various activities of the student body of the Berkshire Music School, sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This season we propose to view in detail many of these student activities.

Speedily United

Thus, Thursday night found us in the Music Shed listening to the first concert by the Orchestra of Department 1. These young musicians got together for the first time on Monday, but being musicians they speedily united and their performance, under student conductors and under Seymour Lipkin, who is assisting Leonard Bernstein in the conducting department, was something of a revelation.

The word "fear" is apparently unknown in the vocabulary of youth. James Yannatos, 26, of New York put the orchestra through its paces in Aaron Copland's "An Outdoor Overture." This is a rugged work which places considerable technical demands upon orchestra and conductor. That all got through it so well was tribute to Lipkin's coaching, the innate musicianship of Yannatos and the caliber of the orchestra.

Then came on stage 27-year-old Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg of New York who is said to be related to the great Mengelberg, longtime conductor of the Concertgebow Orchestra. Be that as it may, this young man is a musician to his finger tips. He chose to conduct Debussy's "Prelude a L'Apres-midi d'un Faune," one of the most demanding works, from an interpretive standpoint, in the repertoire. He provided a sympathetic, controlled emotional reading of this work; one which was sensitive without being maudlin.

Again, Bauer-Mengelberg had the wholehearted assistance of this admirable orchestra and he did not fail to acknowledge the splendid performance by flutist Janet Sillars of University City, Mo.

Lipkin took over after intermission to conduct Schumann's second symphony. As always, this splendid pianist and admirable conductor provided a performance rich in detail, depth, and tonal beauty. It was a scholarly reading, but never stodgy. This young conductor would grace any podium in distinguished fashion. His pianistic journeyings would add lustre to any orchestra he conducted.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 196,593

JUL 12 195

Now Is When Musicians Watch Weather Closely

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that vegetables are ready to pick in the garden, now that fruit is taking shape and color in the orchard, now that the time for harvest is drawing nearer, who watches the weather every minute with an anxious eye?

The music lover.

The big halls in the big squares in the big cities have closed their doors, cut off the lights; the caretakers are all off on vacation.

EVERYBODY IS WEATHER CONSCIOUS

But not the artists! They are busy right this minute, have been for a month, will be for another two months, taking a busman's holiday at summer concerts in this country and Europe.

Many or most of our concerts are outdoors, in the park, at the Bowl, in the Stadium, at the river's edge. No farmer watches the sky with more concern, or reads weather forecasts with livelier hopes and fears, than the concert manager who may sell 10,000 tickets if it stays fair tonight, but lose his shirt if a single rain-bearing cloud blows up.

After the managers and their performers, it's the countless patrons, like the thousands going to the two big outdoor attractions in this city, who are weather conscious right up to starting time. They don't forget about it, either, during the Beethoven and Brahms and so on, for a shower can call it all off in the middle and send them scurrying for cover.

But it's more fair than foul, and more scheduled concerts, by far, are presented than cancelled—in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, the Berkshires, the Colorado mountains.

CONCERTS HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

In this city Stadium concert with the Stadium Symphor orchestra conducted by Mitr poulos, Smallens, Monteu Kurtz, among others, are he at Lewisohn Stadium, get the soloists from among the ver best names: Serkin, Elma Morini, Warfield, Peerce. Th Guggenheim Memorial concert which besides their Centr Park programs are given ever week in Brooklyn's Prospec Park, feature Goldman's Banc Both series are now in thei 38th seasons.

Cincinnati Zoo opera is unde way, with such stars as Herv Nelli and Roberta Peters. Th Philadelphia orchestra, bac from Europe, has now become for this month, the Robin Hoo Dell orchestra and plays at th Dell for summertime audiences.

The open-neck, shirt-sleeved, slack-wearing audiences gathered this week for the famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Main attraction will be the Boston Symphony, and principal composer will be Beethoven.

The Newport (R. I.) festival opens today. The Marlboro (Vt.) music festival runs to Aug. 25. There are, here, there and everywhere, pop concerts, Bach festivals, jazz festivals, light opera series, folk singing, barbershop quartet sings.

NEW TO SUMMER CONCERT FIELD

The Aspen (Colo.) music festival, which like the Berkshire has its own school, is in session to Aug. 27. Conducted this year under the management of participating musicians, it has a special attraction for students from the Universities of Colorado, Denver and Wyoming: they get academic credit for attendance. Among the artists performing there are Primrose, Vronsky and Babin, and Uninsky.

A newcomer to the summer-concert field is the Empire State Music festival planned for Ellenville, N. Y., on the edge of the mountain resort area, in August. It is hoped that members of the Symphony of the Air will take part.

There is also a newcomer aboard: the first annual Festival of Athens opening Aug. 27. Dino Yannapoulos, of New York's Metropolitan, is artistic director, and among the stars will be Mitropoulos and the singers Nikolaidi, Thebom, Stevens and Steber.

The Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama opens Aug. 21 and continues to Sept. 20. The Salzburg festival runs from July 24 to Aug. 30. The fifth Festival of Herlin will open Sept. 17.

In France several popular events are scheduled. At the moment the Prades Festival, under the direction of Pablo Casals, is under way and will last another week. The Aix-en-Provence programs start tomorrow and continue through the month.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 16 1955

Tanglewood Programs

Concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin at Tangglewood next week. They follow the Berkshire Festival's opening weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, which conclude with an Italian program Sunday afternoon, both under Charles Munch.

On Wednesday evening, Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin will present an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas in the Theater-Concert Hall. On Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven concerts in the Music Shed. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday evening Music Shed program of compositions by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Roger Sessions, and Richard Strauss. The first of four public rehearsals by the Boston Symphony will be held Saturday morning in the Music Shed.

Next week's programs include:

Wednesday Evening

Sonata No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 ....Beethoven
Sonata No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ....Beethoven
Sonata No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 ....Beethoven
Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin

Friday Evening

Overture to "Coriolan" ....Beethoven
Violin Concerto ....Beethoven
Isaac Stern, soloist
Symphony No. 7 in A major Beethoven
Charles Munch, conductor

Saturday Evening

Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor ....Bach-Respighi
Symphony No. 2 in D major ....Beethoven
Suite from "The Black Maskers" ....Sessions
"Death and Transfiguration" Strauss
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Sunday Afternoon

Symphony No. 1 in C major ....Beethoven
Symphony No. 4 in B-flat ..Beethoven
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") ....Beethoven
Charles Munch, conductor

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUL 12 1955

innish Composer Here

ino Rautavaara, 26, Finnish mposer nominated by Jean ibelius, has arrived at Tanglewood to spend the summer as a tudent of composition with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher at the erkshire Music Center.

One of 33 students from 18 foreign lands who are at the music school's 13th session for six weeks of concentrated study, Rautavaara has come largely through the efforts of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony who did much to pioneer the music of Sibelius in this country.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 10 1955

(Continued On Page 1A)

CONCERT PLEASES AUDIENCE OF 3000 AT TANGLEWOOD

Handel, Haydn, Hindemith Works Played Under Thor Johnson's Baton

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 9—Nearly 3000 people listened tonight to one of the most enjoyable programs any conductor has put together for a long time. It was the young conductor Thor Johnson, a former pupil of Koussevitzky and now conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra who was responsible. It may also be noted that Mr. Johnson was eminently satisfying in his interpretations and revealed a fine musicianship and imagination.

Handel Work Played

The program opened with a rewarding performance of the last of the 12 concerti grosso that Handel wrote. Written for string orchestra, these 12 concerti explore every possibility of a string orchestra, yet they are not in the least sense academic. In fact, there is a fascinating spontaneity about them. Handel wrote them at the rate of one a day and there is a freshness of approach and a deal of enjoyment in every one.

(Continued On Page 1A)

(Continued From Page 1A)

Every change of emotion makes itself felt.

Mr. Johnson's reading of the work was broad in outline and meticulous as to detail and he had the full co-operation of his players.

The second work was the all too seldom heard Concertante in B-Flat Major, Op. 34, for oboe, bassoon, violin and cello by Haydn. The admirable soloists were Richard Burgin, violin; Samuel Mayes, cello; Ralph Gomberg, oboe and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Haydn follows the old concerto grosso style, combining and alternating the two groups, the tutti and the concertino of four instruments.

Plays as Quartet

The small group plays for the most part as a quartet, a high string and wind instrument balancing a low string and wind instrument. There are brief solos for each instrument and all were finely played. We have seldom heard Richard Burgin play as beautifully as he did tonight.

The rapture of the audience was somewhat dimmed before the ensemble and violist Joseph Depasquale finished the performance of Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher."

Performance Enjoyable

Regardless of what Hindemith has done to some of these really charming 15th and 16th century folk songs, one could enjoy and marvel at the splendor of Mr. Depasquale's performance. It was tonally handsome and technically dazzling. There were several lovely episodes for harp and viola just as there were unlovely episodes which seemed to caricature the melodies. Mr. Johnson conducted this work knowingly.

The concert concluded with a thoroughly satisfying performance of Haydn's "Symphony in B-Flat Major." The Haydnesque humor is somewhat moderated in the opening movement, but it breaks wide open before the end of the symphony. The slow movement is one of the finest Haydn wrote, broad and grave. Mr. Johnson and his players provided a finely integrated and imaginative performance.

Tomorrow afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the first choral work of the season, namely the "Mass in B-Minor" by Bach. The chorus will be made up of the Radcliffe and Harvard Glee Clubs. Adele Addison of Springfield will make the first of three appearances at the festival in this work. With her will be Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 10 1955

Leonard Bernstein Back To Conduct at Tanglewood

Also Soloist in Piano Concerto on All-Mozart Program Friday; Beaux Art Trio to Play Wednesday; Bach's B-Minor Mass Today

Lenox, July 9—The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menaham Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July 13), and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

Bernstein to Conduct

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Dept. I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano who teamed with Bernstein for a memorable Festival concert two summers ago, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Bernstein will double as soloist in the piano concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th-century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini concerto for cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's "Gloria," which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross' students and among the soloists Saramae Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum.

Next Sunday afternoon's program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honneger.

"Firsts" Scheduled

Of the week's music, first performances at Tanglewood will be given of Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni" (July 15); Boccherini, concerto for cello (July 16); Vivaldi, concerto grosso in B minor (July 16); Vivaldi, "Gloria" (July 16); Faure, "Pavane" (July 17); Milhaud, "Serenade" (July 17); and Honneger, Symphony No. 4 (July 17).

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p. m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the week-end concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed. The programs:

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
Chamber Music
Beethoven: Trios—C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").
The Beaux Arts Trio—
Daniel Guilet, violin
Bernard Greenhouse, cello
Menahem Pressler, piano

FRIDAY, JULY 15—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
Mozart: Overture to "Don Giovanni"
Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425)
Arias, "Al Desio" (K. 577), "Zeffiretti" ("Idomeneo"), "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo")
Soloist: Jennie Tourel, soprano
Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453)
Soloist: Leonard Bernstein
Leonard Bernstein, conductor

SATURDAY, JULY 16—8:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
Italian Music
Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11
Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10
Boccherini: Concerto for Cello
Soloist: Samuel Mayes
Vivaldi: "Gloria," with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students
Soloists:
Saramae Endich, soprano
Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano
Hugh Ross, conductor

SUNDAY, JULY 17—2:30 P. M.
Theater-Concert Hall
The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra
French Music
Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"
Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"
Faure: Pavane
Milhaud: Serenade
Honegger: Symphony No. 4
Charles Munch, conductor

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch will conduct Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

New Yorker 7/17/55

IN THE COUNTRY

Berkshire Festival—Friday, July 15, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein conducting a chamber orchestra made up of members of the Boston Symphony in an all-Mozart program, with himself as piano soloist and Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 16, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the chamber orchestra in a program of Italian music, with Samuel Mayes, cello, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 17, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the chamber orchestra in a program of French music; no soloists. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 20, at 8:30: The third in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one composed of sonatas played by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano. . . . ¶ Friday, July 22, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern, violin. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 23, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony; no soloists. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 24, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program; no soloists. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

Marlboro Music Festival—Thursday, July 14, at

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 13 1955

Berkshire Festival Concerts' 2d Week

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Fat.

16 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, July 14, 1955

Grace Notes

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

JUL 12 1955

Finnish Composer Here

Eino Rautavaara, 26, Finnish composer nominated by Jean Sibelius, has arrived at Tanglewood to spend the summer as a student of composition with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher at the Berkshire Music Center.

One of 83 students from 18 foreign lands who are at the music school's 13th session for six weeks of concentrated study, Rautavaara has come largely through the efforts of Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the Boston Symphony who did much to pioneer the music of Sibelius in this country.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 8
By G. R.

Program: Bach: Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio; Bach: Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings; Stravinsky: "Orpheus" Ballet in Three Scenes; Mozart: Symphony in D Major, "Prague," No. 38 (K. 504), Boston Symphony Orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Flutist, Charles Munch conducting.

The first orchestral program of the season at Tanglewood was presented on July 8, in the Concert Hall, before an audience of about 1700.

The "Easter" overture of Bach was a pleasant opening and was followed by the Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, performing the solo parts. Mrs. Dwyer played beautifully, with fine tone and excellent breath control. Her legato playing was not entirely secure at all times, but her brilliant playing of the final section, marked "Presto" was beyond reproach. The audience's applause was so sustained that Mrs. Dwyer was forced to repeat the final sections.

Stravinsky's fame and ability as a composer for ballet are established and not likely to be questioned. In his music for the "Orpheus" ballet, he played all his usual rhythmic tricks to achieve a syncopated score and demonstrated again his wonderful writing for wind instruments. However, when the pece is taken as a whole, it is dull; to be blunt, it is a bore.

Charles Munch concluded the concert with the great "Prague" Symphony of Mozart. Mr. Munch ably set forth the dramatic slow "Introduction" and the "Allegro" was as agitated and tense as the music demands. The long lines of the "Andante" were set forth in some of the best playing by the Boston Symphony heard recently. The "Finale" presents a problem for Mr. Munch. The last movement is made up of three themes resembling those of light, German, popular tunes of the day. Mozart molds these together to make a most charming and carefree conclusion. Mr. Munch seemed to see this movement as a chance to demonstrate how well and how fast his orchestra can play. It was fast, expert, but not Mozart. The finesse and charm were gone.

As a whole, it was a good concert. It seemed most pleasant to be again at Tanglewood.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 9
By E. G. B.

Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra, wielded the baton Saturday night at Tanglewood over the reduced number of Boston Orchestra members who perform in the chamber music series in the smaller concert hall. In three of the four works presented, various single instruments had important solo passages.

Handel's Concerto Grosso in B Minor, Opus 6, No. 12, makes liberal use of individual stringed instruments and the harpsichord, alternating with the tutti. The disciplined and experienced players were impressive in sonority and rhythm and in producing true Handelian feeling.

Another concerto grosso, written fifty-three years later by Haydn, and called Symphonie Concertante, in B Flat Major, Opus 84, was next presented. The solo nstruments were oboe, bassoon, violn and violoncello, played respectively by Ralph Gomberg, Raymond Allard, Richard Burgin, and Samuel Mayes. Each showed a high degree of virtuosity in a compostion possessing many facets of beauty.

Modern musc was represented by Hindemith's Der Schwanendreher, a concerto for viola and small orchestra. Fifteenth and sixteenth century folk melodies are here developed and varied with richness of invention, their poetc lyricsm woven by the viola against unusual orchestral texture. Joseph de Jasquale was the solost. He played superbly on a superb instrument, noted in the program as a 1798 Cerutti.

The concert ended with Haydn's B Flat Major Symphony, Opus 98. This was delineated clearly and its dramatic contrasts brought out. Thor Johnson did a capable, understanding and neat piece of work in guiding each offering on the program.

TANGLEWOOD
By A. R. B.

A large audience, one that would almost do justice to the Shed concerts that follow soon, heard Dr. Munch give the glorous Bach Mass in B minor as the Festival's first Sunday Theatre-Concert program.

The small Festival Orchestra and a group of distinguished soloists were most ably abetted by the fresh young voices of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society in filling the warm summer afternoon air wth this magnificent music. Unquestionably one of mankind's great artistic achievements, the Bach B minor must be ranked in the very forefront of choral work.

Dr. Munch conducted a vigorous and lively Mass. While lofty and inspiring as indeed it must be, the Boston's B minor was nonetheless sung as a sturdy and straghtforward expression of man's faith. How fortunate for the music world that the great Johann Sebastian Bach had such deep devotion!

The afternoon's soloists, Adele Addson, Soprano; Florence Kopleff, Contralto; John McCollum, Tenor and Donald Gramm, Bass; along with such regular orchestra favorites as Richard Burgin, Dorot Anthony Dwyer and Roger Voisin, all contributed excellent performances and joined with the men and women of Harvard and Radcliffe toward an afternoon that may be one of the season's high spots.

Berkshire Eagle
7/15/55

Public Events

Tonight

8:30-11:00—Teen-age dance sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians Union. Masonic Temple.

8:30—Symphony concert by Berkshire Music Center students. Tanglewood, Lenox. (For BMC Friends.)

8:40—"Gigi." Willimstown summer theater.

8:45—"Sabrina Fair." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"Gigi." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

[illegible]:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

9:00 a.m.—Opening of fourth annual Great Barrington horse show, for benefit of Boy and Girl Scouts. Fair Grounds.

4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival.

Red Lion Extends Dining Room Hours

STOCKBRIDGE—On Fridays and Saturdays during the remainder of the Tanglewood season, the dining room of the Red Lion Inn will close an hour later and open a half-hour earlier, it was announced today by Byrne Bauer, owner-manager. It will open at 6 p.m. and close at 8:30.

Among the recent arrivals at the inn are Mrs. Gammell Cross of Providence, R.I., who has been a guest each summer for 15 years; Mr. and Mrs. Dougall Cushing and Miss Edith R. Cushing of Westmount, Montreal, Canada; and Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Tufts of the Carolina in Pinehurst, N.C.

Mrs. Bauer, who has been on a brief visit in Bronxville, N.Y., her former home, returned today to the inn.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 11 1955

BACH B-MINOR MASS THRILLS LARGE CROWD

Two Choral Groups, Soloists And Orchestra in Festival Event

By W. H. R.

Theater-concert hall patrons at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood yesterday were treated to a technically perfect and musically inspired presentation of the Bach Mass in B Minor, with all units beautifully co-ordinated under the baton of Conductor Charles Munch.

This is a massive musical structure of great tensile strength. It soars to heights of rare, delicate beauty, and to attain the fullest effect those who produce this music must be able to feel at least some of the sublimity that went into its composition.

Yesterday's production was a delight to the ear, with special emphasis on the duet passages shared by Adele Addison, soprano and Florence Kopleff in the "Christe Eleison."

Largely, the honors were evenly divided, with the male soloists, John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra all contributing to a fitting climax to the first week of the Tanglewood Festival.

The B-Minor Mass is extremely difficult music to sing. It is a real challenge to the performer, and yesterday's musicians rose to that challenge with a confidence and excellence that showed ease and familiarity and with no evidence of strain or awkwardness.

Continuing the Beethoven cycle, the Beaux Arts trio will be heard in another theater-concert hall recital Wednesday evening, performing the C-Minor, the D-Major ("The Ghost") and the B-Flat, styled "The Archduke" trio. Friday evening will feature the music of Mozart, with Jennie Tourel soprano soloist, and Leonard Bernstein conducting.

Berkshire Evening Eagle
7/15/55

Manes

WINNER of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for a student conductor at Tanglewood is Kenneth Schermerhorn, right, 25, of Schenectady, who goes over a score with Leonard Bernstein, who teaches conducting at the Berkshire Music Center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 12 1955

Gus Manos

Eino Rautavaara (left), Finnish composer from Helsinki, has arrived at Tanglewood after being nominated by Jean Sibelius to study composition at the Berkshire Music Center under a scholarship given by the center and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Mr. Rautavaara is shown here with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 11 1955

Small Orchestra Concerts Draw 6,385 to Tanglewood

Small orchestra concerts in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon were heard by 6,385 persons, bringing to a record 9,787 the total attendance at the first week's four concerts of the 1955 Berkshire Music festival season.

3,583 Present

Despite the searing sun and and smothering heat, 3,583 persons were in and on the lawns around the small auditorium yesterday afternoon for a magnificent program in which Charles Munch directed an orchestra of chamber propor tions, the Harvard Glee club, the Radcliffe Choral society and soloists in Bach's Mass in B minor.

Saturday evening when the weather was almost as discouraging, 2,802 persons attended to hear Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati symphony orchestra, conduct musicians from the Boston Symphony orchestra in works of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith.

On Friday evening 2,100 had attended the first of the so-called Bach-Mozart concerts preceding the main offering of the Tanglewood season, and on Wednesday night, an audience of 1,300 had heard the first of six chamber music concerts given by the Kroll string quartet.

Last year, the first week of Tanglewood attracted 9,350 compared with this year's 9,787.

Vocal Soloists

Adelle Addison of Springfield, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, were the vocal soloists in the performance of the Bach mass yesterday while Richard Burgin, concertmaster; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; James Stagliano, horn; Louis Speyer and Jean Devergie, oboi d'amore; E. Power Biggs, organist; Daniel Pinkham, harpsichordist, and Roger Boisin, trumpeter, all of the Boston symphony, played the instrumental solo passages.

The Harvard and Radcliffe musical groups had performed the work with the Boston orchestra in Boston a few weeks ago and their singing yesterday reflected full familiarity with the majestic music.

This week's festival activities at Tanglewood will follow the same pattern as last week's. On Wednesday evening at 8.30, the Beaux Art trio will present the second of the six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, performing three Beethoven trios. On Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30, the small orchestra composed of Boston Symphony orchestra musicians, will continue the so-called Bach-Mozart series in the theater concert hall.

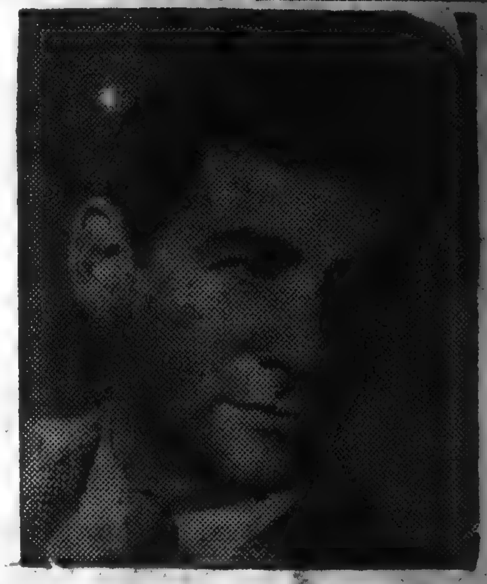
Leonard Bernstein will conduct Friday evening when an all-Mozart program will be given with Jennie Tourel as vocal soloist. On Friday evening, Mr. Munch will conduct a program of the works of Vivaldi and Boccherini with the Berkshire Music center chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross assisting. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will again conduct. The program will consist of works of Rameau, Ravel Faure and Honegger.

INTERESTING AND AMUSING

12 THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL Thursday, July 14, 1955

Big Shed Concerts Start Next Week

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, havng completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's Music Director.



BRILLIANT MUSICIAN . . . Leonard Bernstein, American composer-conductor-pianist, who with Jennie Tourel will be a soloist in an all-Mozart program this Friday evening at Tanglewood.

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was Music Director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podum since 1951.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Rogers Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers," by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of compostion at Tanglewood this summer.

Big Shed Concerts

(Continued from Page Twelve)

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall are: Sat. July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian music. Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sade Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's summer music school. Sun. July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus;" Ravel "Le Tombeau de Coupern;" Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger: Symphony No. 4.

Berkshire Eagle
7/15/55

Mac Morgan To Sing At First Church

Mac Morgan will sing "God, My Father" from the "Seven Last Words" by Dubois, at the 10 a.m. morning worship service at the First Congregational Church, Sunday. He has recorded this solo with chorus and organ under the label "Sounds of Our Times."

Mr. Morgan toured last fall with the New England Opera Theater, singing in the "Barber of Seville," under the direction of Boris Goldovsky and also sang with the National Symphony Orchestra last January. He will tour with the New England Opera Theater this fall.

Mr. Morgan is singing at Tanglewood on Aug. 5 and 6, doing solo work in the "Missa Solemnis" and "Fidelio" under the direction of Carl Munch.

St. Stephen's Soloist Is Mary McKenzie

Miss Mary McKenzie, mezzo soprano, will be soloist at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 10 a.m. Sunday.

Miss McKenzie graduated from Juilliard School of Music, New York, and ofr the past two seasons has been a student at Tanglewood. She won the Naumburg prize this year entitling her to a New York Town Hall recital. She has also won the Federated Music Club prize and recently won a six-week tour of Italy with the European Opera Co., in September.

Miss McKenzie will sing "But the Lord is Mindful of His Own," by Mendelssohn and "The Lord is My Shepard," by Millott.

Public Events

Eagle 12B 7/15

Tonight

8:30—Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in Berkshire Festival concert, Leonard Bernstein conducting Mozart program. Tanglewood theater, Lenox.
8:40—"Gigi," Williamstown summer theater.
8:45—"Sabrina Fair," Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
8:45—"G[illegible]" Malden [illegible] [illegible] Playhouse.
9:00—Jacob's Pillow Dance festival featuring leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.
9:00—City observatory open. Sprin[illegible] Park.

Springfield Union
7/15/55

FINAL CHAMBER CONCERT SERIES STARTS TONIGHT

Leonard Bernstein to Conduct All-Mozart Program At Tanglewood

The final week end of chamber orchestra concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in this summer's Berkshire Festival will begin this evening at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox. Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor, will lead an all-Mozart program in which Jeanie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will be soloist. Mr. Bernstein also will play a Mozart piano concerto, conducting from the keyboard.

Program Listed

The full program will be: the Overture to the opera "Don Giovanni" (to be performed at Tanglewood for the first time); the Symphony No. 36 in C Major, the "Linz" Symphony; and the Piano Concerto No. 17 in G Major. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from the opera "Idomeneo" ("Zeffiretti" and "Non temer"), and the concert aria "Al desio."

Saturday night's all-Italian concert conducted by Charles Munch, will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi—his Concerti Grossi Numbers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (Harmonic Inspiration), and the "Gloria" Mass in D Major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire Festival Chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire Music Center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D Minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Sunday's all-French concert, also conducted by Mr. Munch, will be comprised of a suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's orchestral suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; the Pavane, by Gabriel Faure; Milhaud's "Serenade" for Small Orchestra (also known as the Symphony No. 3); and the Symphony No. 4 by Artur Honegger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honegger compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood.

Music Shed Concerts

Commencing next week end (July 22 and 23 evenings, July 24 afternoon), the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will assemble at Tanglewood to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed, which Mr. Munch will open Friday evening (July 22) with an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Remaining seats for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be given in the Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200
Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 11 1955

Bach's B Minor Mass Heard In Concert at Tanglewood

By EVANS CLINCHY
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch led a spirited and energetic performance of Bach's B Minor here Sunday to close Tanglewood's first weekend of music in fine style.

* * *

THE CONCERT was given, as are all the Bach-Mozart presentations, in the Theater Concert Hall, which was crowded but not so mobbed that this could be called the best-attended performance of the B Minor at Tanglewood.

Since the Mass was given in the theater and not the Shed, the forces employed were generally smaller than those normally used in the larger hall. This was all to the good.

The chorus, made up of members of the Radcliffe and Harvard glee clubs, numbered about 100. The orchestra was the regular chamber group from the Boston Symphony. Because of these relatively small numbers, the music was allowed to breathe, there was a pleasing flexibility and lightness of texture to the performance that was admirable.

A case could easily be made out that this is still too large an ensemble for the B Minor. It is a big, moving work, a very great piece of music. But it also is possessed of a complex, contrapuntal structure whose interweaving lines must be very carefully sorted out and clearly sung.

* * *

ACTUALLY, the two glee clubs and, of course, the orchestra did quite a neat job of presenting clarity and also the bright gleam of sound that it must have.

And Mr. Munch proved to be the force that energized the entire performance and gave it the tingling excitment.

He took the faster sections, notably the Gloria, the Resurexit and the Osanna, at a tremendous clip, and he had the chorus in these sections fairly shouting out its joy.

In the quiet moments, especially the solos, he laid aside the blaring trumpet and concentrated upon melody and a devout tenderness.

His soloists, Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, were all quite adequate if not sensational, and it was pleasant to hear an honest to goodness oboe d'amore in several of the solo accompaniments rather than the plain oboe.

This may not have been the finest performance of the B Minor ever heard, but it was a lively one for which we can all be grateful.

Boston Herald 7/15

Student Conductor Scholarship Winner

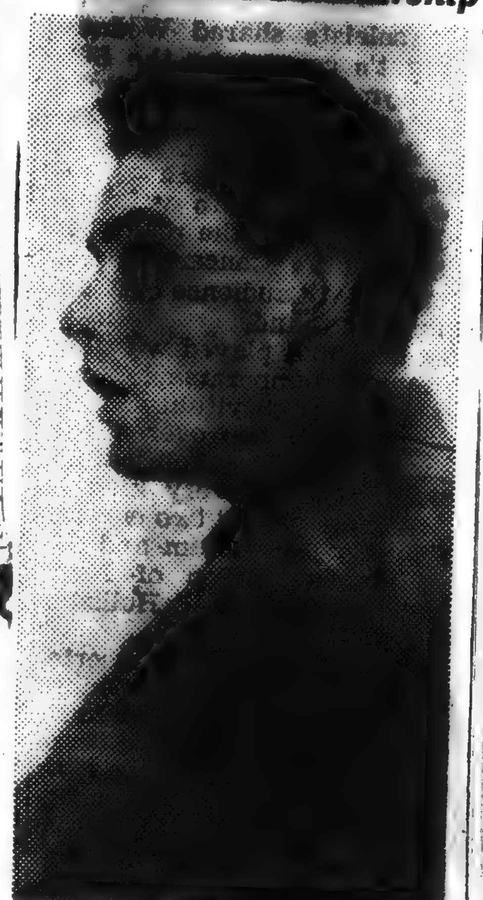
The annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Charles Munch, director, has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, of Schenectady, N.Y., it was announced today.

The scholarship was instituted last year by Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County, to express their gratitude for concerts of symphony music performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center from the U.S., Canada and many foreign lands, who train under the young American composer-conductor, Leonard Bernstein. During the six-week session of the music school weekly symphonic programs are given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Thursday nights, and on the final Saturday, August 13, of the Berkshire Festival, attracting an average audience of [illegible] persons, mostly within a [illegible] of 50 miles.

The scholarship was organized as a memorial to the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who instituted student symphony concerts in 1940.

FRIDAY, JULY 15, 19

Student Conductor Wins Berkshire Scholarship



Kenneth D. Schermerhorn

The Berkshire Music Center's annual scholarship to a student of conducting has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25 years old, of Schenectady, N. Y.

The scholarship was organized last year as a memorial to the late Serge Koussevitzky, former music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and organizer of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.

Mr. Schermerhorn, a graduate of the New England Conservatory, has studied with Hans Schwieger, conductor of the Kansas City (Mo.) Symphony. Last year, while serving in the Army, he conducted concerts by an orchestra of enlisted men in Germany, Austria, Italy, France and England. He made his debut at Tanglewood last night conducting Brahms' "Tragic Overture" at a student concert.

Sunday Journal, Providence RI - 7/10

Composer Roger Sessions confers with Rhode Islanders attending Boston Symphony's music school, l-r, Annette Guay, Harold Lawton, John Pandolfii, John Carbone.

647

4 From R.I. Study At Tanglewood

Four Rhode Islanders are among the 405 students attending the Boston Symphony's music school at Tanglewood in the Berkshires this summer. They are:

Annette L. Guay, 21, of 54 Cambridge St., Providence, pianist and soprano vocalist, holder of the annual award by the Chopin Club of Providence.

John V. Carbone, 20, of 491 Douglas Ave., Providence, contra bass player in the Tanglewood student orchestra.

John R. Pandolfi, 25, of 129 Church St., Manville, former first clarinetist in the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra who will take the same post with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra next season.

Harold R. Lawton, 18, of Putnam Ave., Greenville, auditor with the orchestral department of the music center under Leonard Bernstein. Lawton, a textile worker in Greenville, is studying to be a conductor.

There are 372 students at Tanglewood this year from the United States, 10 from Canada and 23 from foreign countries. Among the young foreign musicians are students from Japan, Iran, New Zealand, France, Holland, Israel and Brazil.

About 150 students are instrumentalists and the others are studying voice, conducting and composing.

AUFBAU

Eröffnung der Saison 1955 in Tanglewood

"Zwischen Berg und tiefem Tal" ist das altdeutsche Volkslied, das Hindemith, Schwanendreger zugrunde liegt, dem sich bei wiederholtem Hören immer mehr erschliessenden Konzert für Viola, das am Samstag Abend von Joseph DePasquale hervorragend wiedergegeben wurde.

Zwischen Berg und tiefem Tal ist das Motto, das über Tanglewood stehen könnte, wo die für die Musik so massgebende Beziehung zur Natur eine ideale Lösung findet. Umgeben von den schönsten Wiesen, Seen und Bergen, einige Stunden — und das kann oft eine Welt bedeuten — entfernt vom tiefen Tal, ist man subjektiv unendlich aufnahmefähiger, völlig geöffnet für den Ausdruck und die Schönheit von Klängen, die sonst oft am Abend eines mühsamen Arbeitstags nicht mehr den richtigen Weg zu unserem Herzen finden. Jeder, der Musik wirklich liebt, sollte sich der Tiefen-Wirkung dieser Berkshire-Konzerte hingeben.

*

Die offizielle Eröffnung am Freitag war etwas steif in äusserlicher und musikalischer Beziehung. Trotz des warmen Wetters war die Kleidung sehr formell. Man sah Abendkleider und Smokings und fiel in sommerlicher Kleidung ohne Krawatte beinahe aus dem Rahmen. Das hatte sich glücklicherweise am Samstag und Sonntag ganz geändert. Jugend aus den benachbarten Städten und Camps hatte sich eingestellt und verlieh den Konzerten den der Landschaft viel mehr angebrachten freien und gelösten Charakter. Doriot Anthony Dwyer spielte die Soloflöte der 2. Bach-Suite hervorragend, während Mozarts Prag Symphony unter Charles Muench eine etwas rauhe und ungelokkerte Darbietung erhielt.

Samstag brachte das erfolgreiche Tanglewood Debut von Thor Johnson, der hier vor 15 Jahren Schüler von Koussevitzky war und jetzt ständiger Leiter des Cincinnati-Orchester ist. Höhepunkt dieses Abends war die Concertante Symphony op. 84 von Haydn, ein in all' seiner Schönheit viel zu unbekanntes Werk, das in vollkommener Abtönung zwischen den vier Solisten und dem Orchester dargeboten wurde.

Der Eindruck der beiden ersten Konzerte wurde jedoch durch die von tiefem Ernst getragene Wiedergabe von Bachs Hmoll-Messe am Sonntag, unter der Leitung von Muench, weit in den Schatten gestellt. Das — nur bedauerlicherweise stark gekürzte — Werk fand eine in den lyrischen Teilen so intensive, in den dramatischen so feurige Gestaltung, dass der Gesamteindruck schlechthin überwältigend war. Der Sturm der Begeisterung am Ende war nur allzu verständlich. Kein Hörer wird dieses Konzert vergessen.

Walter Strauss.

Ein aufgehender Stern: Geza Anda

A.H. Wenn in der kommenden Saison ein junger ungarischer Pianist, Geza Anda, seine erste amerikanische Tournee machen wird, dann kann er ähnlich wie der deutsche Sänger Fischer-Dieskau bei seinem Debut in New York auf einen vollen Saal rechnen. Denn die Schallplatte wird inzwischen für dieses grosse Talent als wirksamster Propagandist aufgetreten sein. Angel Records haben soeben eine Anzahl von Anda bespielte Platten herausgebracht, die keinen Zweifel darüber lassen, wen man vor sich hat.

Der Pianist erinnert sofort an Horowitz, durch die Brillanz des Anschlages

[191]

7/10

GALA MUSIC EVENT ON

BOSTON SYMPHONY OPENS ANNU TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL.

First Night of 6-Week Schedu at Lenox, Mass., Features Work of Bach, Mozart and Stravinsky.

Kansas City Star 7/9

By Joseph Kaye

Lenox, Mass., July [illegible]—The prelude to America's greatest music festival was heard last night when members of the Boston symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch gave the opening concert of the Tanglewood series. The Tanglewood festival, now celebrated internationally, starts at this time every year and continues for six weeks, during which the Boston symphony and eminent artists perform.

The first two weeks this summer are devoted to small orchestral concerts and chamber music recitals. Beginning July 22, the full Boston symphony begins a month's week-end concerts in the Great Shed, a wooden structure open on three sides which acts as a perfect soundboard for the instruments.

Source of Pride.

The Missouri-Kansas area is contributing to this fine music event. As part of the festival, the Boston symphony maintains the Berkshire music center, a school for advanced and especially gifted music students. This year eight students from Missouri and Kansas are at the school. They were chosen from the finest young musicians in the land.

The students are: Gwendolyn Louise Belle, St. Louis; Connie Lou Converse, Hays, Kas.; Robert Arthur Dennis, University City, Mo.; Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg, Mo.; Anne M. Nelson, Lawrence, Kas.; David Allan Sallade, Overland, Mo.; Janice Darlene Seward, University City and Patricia Ruth Ashley, Canton, Mo.

Tonight's concert began with a joyous greeting to Munch from the overflow audience. On the parking lots were cars with license plates from the forty-eight states.

Bach Is Featured.

The "Sinfonia" of Bach, from the "Easter Oratorio," the Bach suite No. 2, Stravinsky's "Orpheus" ballet music and the Mozart Prague symphoney comprised the program. The purity of tone in Bach, the lovely lyricism and beautiful form of Mozart, the singing of Stravinsky, were all presented with complete artistry by Munch and his men.

Tanglewood is a beautiful estate of 210 acres in the Berkshire hills, facing Lake Makheenac, which always seems blended with a fairylike mist. It was on this estate that Nathaniel Hawthorne planned his Tanglewood Tales (hence its name), prepared the material for "The House of Seven Gables," and wrote "The Wonder Book." The cottage in which he lived burned down, but a replica was erected by the National Federation of Women's Music Clubs, and is used as a studio.

Lenox was once the summering place of millionaires—Andrew Carnegie and George Westinghouse were among them.

Carnegie's magnificent mansion, Shadowbrook, is now a Jesuit novitiate, and many of the other great houses are private schools. The town just faded out. Then came the festival, first started by the composer and conductor, Henry Hadley, and developed by Serge Koussevitzky. In the eighteen seasons that followed the town began to live again. Crowds came, its prestige rose high and prosperity flowed in from the visitors.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4390
Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

JUL 9 1955

1,700 Attend Opening At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 8 (Special) — The long-hair, little season of the 18th-Berkshire Music Festival got under way here at Tanglewood tonight.

Morethan 1,700 persons heard Charles Munch and 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra play the first of the so-called "Bach-Mozart" programs which will continue for the next two weekends before the major concert series starts.

Some half of tonight's populace sat outside the theater-concert hall where the performance was given. They were the shirt-sleeve crowd and the lucky ones. They enjoyed, as well as the music, whatever breath of air was stirring among the ancient pines and the hemlocks. Inside the hall the atmosphere was so dence you could wring water out of it with a simple twist of the hands. Here the audience was more decorously dressed, and for their formality sat and fanned themselves with their programs, steeping in tepidity.

Flutist Resplendent

Yet, despite the heat and the mugginess, everone was quick to applaud himself into a lather at the high points of the concert. Of these, the first of course was the entrance of Mr. Munch, reclaiming the podium where he had not presided since last year. He came in briskly, looking very fit and well-fleshed, and the house gave him a salvo that appeared to cheer his heart greatly.

The evening's second cresting came when Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's Incredible Flutist played the Bach Suite No. 2 in B. Minor. Dazzling Doriot was simply resplendent, performing the endless running passages with the utmost perfection and poise, shading and phrasing the writing exquisitely, and ending up with such an elegant account of the final presto that the audience would not let the concert go on until she had repeated it. Even her appearance was compact of charm as she swayed like a Balinese dancer to coax the heart and grace out of this suite that can be so dull.

Sinfonia Bright And Bold

The program had opened with a considerably more engaging piece of Bach, the Sinfonia from the "Easter" oratorio. Into this Mr. Munch threw himself with enormous animation, and the music came up joyous and triumphant, bright and bold. In the suite, however, the conductor and orchestra trapped themselves with dullness. The playing itself was finished enough, better by considerable than it had been, actually, in the Sinfonia. But somehow, it was not informed with any special eloquence, and in view of the music, this was no help at all.

Though this series of concerts is tabbed "Bach-Mozart," Mr. Munch has undertaken of late to add small, contemporary pieces to these programs. Tonight's variant was the score which Igor Stravinsky wrote in 1947, for a ballet on the subject of Orpheus and Eurydice. It is not a high interesting work. One felt that Mr. Stravinsky had nothing particular to say on the matter, and that he was saying it in the way he had said many thngs before. In this "Orpheus," one felt that the man had become the style. There was nothing moving about the music, nor on the otherhand anything that one could imagine being translated into evocative dance. It had not been played here before, and drew only a mild hand from the audience whose ears it puckered after the rich sweetness of Bach.

The evening closed with a performance of Mozart's "Prague" symphony. Or rather, let me say that it is closing right now, and by discontinuing this concerto for typewriter and deadline, I shall be able to hear some of it, but not in time for tomorrow's paper.

T.H.P.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4390
Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 9 1955

Audience of 1,000 Welcomes Munch To Tanglewood Podium

An audience of more than 1,000 persons enthusiastically greeted Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony orchestra, as he took the podium at Tanglewood, Lenox, last night for the first time in the 1955 Berkshire Music festival season.

Mr. Munch conducted an orchestra of chamber dimensions, composed of members of the Boston symphony, in a Bach-Mozart program in the theater-concert hall, sharing the applause with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the orchestra, who was soloist in a performance of Bach's Suite No. 2 for flute and strings.

The festival season opened Wednesday evening with the first of a series of six weekly chamber music concerts. Last night's performance was the first of six preliminary small-orchestra concents, to be given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons before the opening July 22 of the major festival concerts by the full Boston orchestra in the huge Tanglewood music shed.

Besides the Bach suite, the small orchestra last evening performed also the Sinfonia from Bach's "Easter" cantata, Mozart's "Prague" symphony and Stravinsky's "Orpheus."

This evening at 8.30, Thor Johnson, music director of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, will conduct the small orchestra in a program of Handel, Hadyn and Hindemith works. Tomorrow afternoon at 2.30, Mr. Munch will return to the director's stand to conduct the orchestra, the Harvard Glee club, the Radcliffe chorus and four soloists in Bahc's B-minor mass.

Tanglewood Tales

Choral Department Performs Tuesday

The Tanglewood choral department, under Hugh Ross' direction, will make its season's bow to the public on Tuesday at [illegible] p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. Two Tanglewood premieres by modern composers will highlight the evening. "The Easter Cantata" by young Boston composer Alan Hovhaness, which was commissioned by Columbia Broadcasting System for Easter Day, 1953, and which had its first concert performance two months ago at Boston University, is a 15-minute work for soprano soloist, chorus and orchestra. The soprano role will be sung by Marguerite Willauer, who has sung with the New York City Opera Company and who is the wife of Boston Symphony Orchestra French horn player James Stagliano. Mr. Ross' Tanglewood Choir of 50 voices will be accompanied by an orchestra composed of two horns and an oboe from the Tanglewood Study Group, strings, oboe, harp and celeste from the student orchestra of Department I. The second new work is "The Song of the Soul," written for the London Bach Society in 1953 by Edmund Rubbra, English composer little known in this country. A work for chorus, strings, harp and timpani, it will be led by Mr. Ross' assistant, Miss Iva D. Hiatt, director of the Smith College Choral Society. Four motets by Alan Hovhaness will be sung on the same program, conducted by Mr. Ross' students.

Berkshire Eagle 7/15

Music

Beaux Arts Trio Delivers Uneven Chamber Performance

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BEAUX ARTS trio gave the second concert in the Wednesday evening Beethoven series of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night. Menahem Pressler is the pianist, Daniel Guilet, the violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, the cellist.

They progressed chronologically from one of the first compositions Beethoven allowed to be published, his opus 1, No. 3, in C minor, to the D major, opus 70, No. 1, to end with the B flat major, opus 97. These last two have acquired names somewhere en route: the D major has become known as the "Ghost" because someone detected a possible reference to unearthly characters in the slow movement; the opus 97 is known as the "Archduke" because of its dedication. With or without designations they include some of Beethoven's richest soil. How much the Beaux Arts cultivated it is a moot question.

* * *

THE EVENING abounded in dazzling individual playing and, on the [illegible] excellent ensemble playing, [illegible] how artists of such technical security could play at times with such musical insecurity was unaccountable. Granted that they have not worked together too long, yet the caution exhibited at all the main crossroads were curious changes of pace from the brilliant work they did once they were in a movement and in high gear.

The majestic theme and variations of the "Archduke" were magnificently realized, although Mr. Greenhouse's superb tone did not really emerge at any time before this, and there were many instances where recognition of tradition and outstanding expression of it were happily apparent. Mr. Menahem's fulfillment of the piano's assignment throughout the evening was a constant marvel of tonal discipline, dextrous limpidity and artistic flexibility.

* * *

IF, HOWEVER, one of the results and/or the purposes of these concerts is to afford the entire student body of the Berkshire Music Center examples of highest musical achievement, certain standards should be established. Such different bowings as the violinists and cellist used to express the same phrase in its turn in several instances were not good chamber music. A good vocal coach would not have allowed them to "breath" that way. It was neither proper nor in good taste to insert a ritard in the first 10 bars of the allegro con brio of the first trio. In fact, the attenuation of phrases of repose was often stretched beyond endurance. Students should not think they should emulate playing of the "Archduke" scherzo so inexactly in time values nor should they enter the chromatic second subject so indecisively.

* * *

IF WE WERE dealing with inexperienced performers or even fine ones with limited chamber music experience, it might be charitable to overlook many details and quibbles, but the individual competence of these three artists is above debate. They gave their audience tremendous pleasure. Such playing could not fail to do so. But if Tanglewood is not the place for the most lofty ideals of musical performance, where else?

In response to the spontaneous thunders of applause, they added the lovely little short movement of the eighth trio, a work of Beethoven discovered and published posthumously.

Berkshire Evening Eagle 7/15/55

Five-Week South Mountain Concert Season Will Open With New Music String Quartet

NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET will present two concerts to open the season July 29-30 at South Mountain Temple of Music. Left to right: Broadus Erle, violin; Walter Trampler, viola; David Soyer, cello; and Matthew Raimondi, viola. The morning concert on July 29 will be a Young Audiences concert. The quartet uses the workshop approach to broaden understanding for chamber music.

The New Music String Quartet will present two concerts, on July 29 and 30 at South Mountain Temple to open the five-week concert season, it was announced today by Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director.

The first concert, Friday morning at 10, will be a Young Audiences concert for parents and children. It will be given in honor and memory of the 75th birthday of the late Willem Willeke, director of music at South Mountain for 30 years.

The second concert will open the five-concert [illegible] scheduled for Saturday afternoon [illegible]. The programs will be announced at a later date.

Fosters Appreciation

The New Music String Quartet, whose purpose has been to broaden the appreciation for chamber music throughout the country has found an encouraging aid in a new approach which the group calls a workshop demonstration.

This lecture-recital technique will be displayed at the Young Audiences concert. It is an innovation in the field of music and consists of an hour of informal music-making that generally begins by the quartet's performance of a great classic work, or a composition of a major contempory composer. After the music is played, it may be a Beethoven quartet or the Bela Bartok string quartet No. 3 or "Five Pieces" by Anton Webern, questions and opinions of the audience are invited.

In the course of the workshop demonstration, the members of the quartet—Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello—call upon personal experiences, describe reactions of audiences in other parts of the country, illustrate solo passages and join with the other instrumentalists to show how each instrument is integrated with the ensemble.

Mr. Erle was born in Chicago in 1918 and at the age of three began his violin study in Canada. He made his first professional appearance when he was six and had become a scholarship student at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia at the age of ten. After this he studied with Alexander Bloch, whom he considers his most important teacher. Besides tours as a solo artist, Mr. Erle has been a concertmaster with the Ballet Theater orchestra and Columbia Recording orchestra under such noted conductors as George Szell, Bruno Walter and Efram Kurtz. He was 15 when he joined his first string quartet and chamber music has been his absorbing interest.

Scholarship Student

Born in New York in 1928, Mr. Raimondi studied with Adolfo Betti, first violinist of the Flonzaley Quartet, who was an inspiration in turning Mr. Raimondi to chamber music. As a scholarship student at the Juilliard School of Music, he studied violin with Ivan Galamian, and chamber music with Felix Salmond and Hans Letz. Following his graduation from Juilliard he continued graduate work at Columbia University in musicology under Professor Paul Henry Lang. Mr. Raimondi is the only native New Yorker of the group and is an alumnus of the High School of Music and Art.

Walter Trampler, violist, was a member of the famed Strub String Quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. He was born in Munich in 1915 and started playing at the age of five. Following graduation from the Munich State Academy he became first violist of the Berlin Radio Symphony Orchestra and joined the Strub Quartet. He came to the United States in 1939 and taught violin, viola and chamber music at Rollins College. In 1942, he left to play at Tanglewood under Serge Koussevitzky, then joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. After active service in the Army, he became first violist of the New York City Opera and City Center Symphony, appearing twice as soloist with that orchestra.

David Soyer, cellist, has achieved wide recognition for his concert performances throughout the country. He was born in Philadelphia in February, 1923. He has presented recitals at Carnegie Hall and Town Hall in New York.

Movie Timetable

[illegible] Drive-In — "Crosswinds," at dusk; "The Violent Men," 10:30.

Capitol — "Angela," 1:05, 4:40, 8:10; "House of Bamboo," 2:40, 6:10, 9:40.

Little Cinema — "Romeo and Juliet," 8:15.

Palace — "Seven Little Foys," 1:00, 3:45, 6:35, 9:20; "Double Jeopardy," 2:30, 5:20, 8:10.

State — "The Cobweb," 1:20, 4:00, 6:30, 9:00.

Sunset Drive-In — "Black Widow"; "The Outcast," at dusk.

Tyler — "Bedevilled," 7:40; "Bitter Creek," 6:00, 9:00.

Union Square — "Chicago Syndicate," 1:00, 3:49, 6:21, 9:10; "Bring Your Smile Along," 2:23, 5:12, 7:44.

County Timetable on Page 18

Tanglewood Tales

Auditions Monday

Alexander Hilsberg, conductor of the New Orleans Philharmonic, will be in Tanglewood Monday to hold auditions for violinists and cellists for this noted orchestra. String players from the Berkshires are invited to compete. The auditions will be held at 4:30 p.m. in the administration office of the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Opera Department

The Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department is now in full force, preparing for its summer works. On Monday, Aug. 1, it will combine with the music school's choral department in a concert presenting Tanglewood premieres of "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Darius Milhaud, guest composer at the music school in 1948; and "Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher, guest composer this summer. On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the opera department will perform the rare Mozart opera "Zaide," in two acts, and give the world premiere of "The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, especially composed for performance at Tanglewood. Seats for these evenings are reserved, and must be applied for through the office of the Friends at Tanglewood.

* * *

Bernsteins Name Baby

The Leonard Bernsteins (television actress Felicia Montealegre) have named their seven-pound four-ounce son, born in New York City July 6, Alexander Serge. The Serge is in honor of the late Serge Koussevitzky, under whose musical aegis the young composer-conductor-pianist from Lawrence, got his start. Mrs. Bernstein, the couple's two-year-old daughter Jamie, and the new-born son arrived in Tanglewood Tuesday to join Mr. Bernstein, and will make their summer home near Great Barrington.

* * *

Visitors Coming in Groups

As in past years, a number of groups will visit Tanglewood during the Berkshire Festival weekends. On July 30 and 31, 53 members of the United Nations Secretariat will be guests of Pittsfield hostesses, and will lunch at Tanglewood on Sunday. The visit is arranged by K. K. Paluev, chairman of the Workshop for World Understanding. July 23 Rudolph F. Nunnemacher will bring 40 summer session students of Clark University, Worcester, to Tanglewood, in time for a swim and a box lunch supper at Stockbridge Bowl before the concert.

Music

Munch, Scholarship Winner Conduct Student Orchestra

by A. D. HORNE

LAST NIGHT in the Shed at Tanglewood, Charles Munch joined student conductors Kenneth Schermerhorn and George Mester to lead the Berkshire Music Center's Department I orchestra in performances of familiar works.

After the concert, Mr. Munch, Leonard Bernstein and Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky were among those backstage to present a check for $500 to Mr. Schermerhorn, a 25-year-old Schenectady man. The check, covering tuition and living expenses for the six-week Tanglewood season, is a vital portion of the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship founded last year by a committee of Berkshire residents. Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, chairman of the committee, which raised $5,000 from more than 135 donors, was at last night's presentation ceremony.

* * *

MR. SCHERMERHORN, who made his debut on the Music Shed podium with Brahms' "Tragic Overture," is a graduate of the New England Conservatory, and a past member of the Kansas City (Mo.) Symphony.

After two years of Army life in West Germany (with music studies in Munich and Stuttgart), Mr. Schermerhorn found himself a beneficiary of a State Department policy stressing the mature aspects of American culture. Put in charge of a 70-piece orchestra made up of enlisted men in the U.S. 7th Army, Mr. Schermerhorn in the course of one year conducted 80 concerts throughout Western Europe and gained wide recognition. Leonard Bernstein, meeting him in Milan last April, suggested his return to Tanglewood as a student conductor this summer. Following his Army discharge in early June, Mr. Schermerhorn followed this counsel.

* * *

GEORGE MESTER worked up a good sweat in the final movement of Shostakovich's fifth symphony, after a very largo reading of the third movement. Last week he was heard leading Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf," and in 1952 and 1953 he was at Tanglewood as a student of violin and conducting. Twenty years old and a native of Mexico City, he took up the violin at the age of five and continued his studies in Los Angeles and at the Juilliard School in New York.

Concertmaster last night was Paul Gurevich, 21, a native of Moscow and a resident of the Bronx, N.Y. Mr. Gurevich, who also made his violin bow (no pun) at five, has already been heard in the Sunday morning chamber music series and will be soloist with the student orchestra in the Shed next Thursday night, playing two movements of Prokofieff's G minor concerto.

Mr. Munch's part of the program followed the intermission, and included an impressive reading of Schubert's eighth symphony. (Two movements per work seemed to be the limit last night.) The final work was Paul Dukas' too-familiar scherzo, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice." The audience, which filled the Shed as far back as the boxes (with couples on the grass, alas), seemed well pleased with it all.

FINAL PROGRAMS IN BERKSHIRE CHAMBER SERIES

Winsted Citizen 7/16/55

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi, the Concerti Grossi Nos. 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (harmonical inspiration), and the "Gloria" mass in D major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire festival chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and [illegible] Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire music center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccerini's cello concerto in B flat with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Composers' Forum Tomorrow Night At Chamber Hall

Berkshire Eagle 7/16/55

TANGLEWOOD—Works by four students of composition at the Berkshire Music Center will be heard and discussed tomorrow night at 8:30 in the season's first Composers' Forum at the Chamber Music Hall here. Members of Tanglewood's Society of Friends will hear a choral work and three quintets performed by students of the choral and instrumental departments.

The composers represented, students of Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher at the Music Center's Department III, include two—Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg, Mo., and Claire C. J. Polin of Philadelphia—who studied at Tanglewood last summer. The others are William J. Sydeman of Sarnia, Ont., and Paul Glass of Los Angeles.

Throughout this weekly series, the audience will be invited to contribute questions and opinions in the discussion following each performance.

The program follows:

Three Poems for Chorus — Emma Lou Diemer

Lament — Edna St. Vincent Millay
Between Two Hills — Carl Sandburg
Faery Forest — Sara Teasdale
Kalman Novak (Cambridge, Mass.), student of Dept. [illegible] conductor.

Harp Quintet — Claire C. J. Polin

Elizabeth Frye, Charleston, W. Va., violin; Reuben Bennett, Chelsea, viola; Charles Sweers, Curacao, Netherlands Antilles, violin; [illegible], Brooklyn, N.Y., cello; Kathryn Rapp, [illegible], Calif., harp.

Quintet for Winds — William J. Sydeman

[illegible] Slimon, New York City, flute; Elsa Ludewig, Charlottesville, Va., clarinet; Sylvia Sherman, Brooklyn, [illegible] oboe; Thomas Grove, Flemington, Pa., bassoon; Robert Ricks, [illegible], N.C., French horn.

George Mester, Mexico City, student of Dept. I, conductor.

Quintet for Clarinet and Strings — Paul Glass

Paul Gurevich, Bronx, N.Y., violin; Midhat Serbaji Jr., Brighton, viola; Elizabeth Beebe, Muskegon, Mich., violin; Bruce Kingbell, Bay City, Mich., cello; John Grande, Long Island City, N.Y., clarinet.

Stefan Bauer, Mengelberg, New York City, student of Dept. I, conductor.

Public Events

Eagle 7/16/55

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Festival chamber orchestra concert, Charles Munch conducting. Tanglewood theater, Lenox.
8:40—"Gigi." Williamstown summer theater.
8:45—"Sabrina Fair." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
8:45—"Gigi." Malden Bridge
9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.—Student chamber music concert. Tanglewood chamber music hall, Lenox. (For BMC Friends)
12:45 p.m. — Great Barrington horse show for benefit of Boy and Girl Scouts. Fair Grounds.
2:00 p.m.—Water carnival of Pittsfield Boating Club. Onota Lake.
2:30 p.m. — Berkshire Festival chamber orchestra concert of French music, Charles Munch, conducting.
3:00 p.m.—Chamber music concert at Cummington School of the Arts. Music shed, Cummington.
4:00 p.m.—Chamber music concert by Berkshire Quartet. Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.
7:00 p.m. — "Gigi." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
8:30 p.m.—Composers' forum. Chamber music hall, Tanglewood, Lenox. (For BMC Friends)
8:30 p.m.—Concert by Roach-Brown Jazz Quintet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood. Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Soloist, Samuel Mayes. Works by Cherubini, Boccherini and Vivaldi.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, [illegible]."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, [illegible]."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "Gigi."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Final performance, [illegible] Ballet.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events for the next seven weeks, see the [illegible] the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

Berkshire Eagle
7/16/55

Music Publicists Had Tough One To Munch Over

FOR A SPELL, right after Charles Munch was appointed director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the publicity bureau at Tanglewood was stumped at just how to spell his name.

Writing it "Muench" would be French, only he is Alsatian which is a little different. To be entirely correct, it should be written "Munch" with two dots over the "u." Most United States type has no such character.

In despair, the public relations men put it up to the conductor himself. He wrinkled his brow, then settled for the simple "Munch" as it is now carried in all their releases.

However, he presented them with another poser, along with his decision. "Be sure and give it the French pronunciation," he admonished. But French is pronounced so many different ways, they aren't sure to this day just which way is the right way.

Berkshire Eagle
7/16/55

Evening Citizen
Winsted 7/14/55

Finnish Composer To Study Music At Berkshire Center

Lenox, Mass., July 14—Eino Rautavarra, 26, a Finnish composer, will study at the Berkshire Music center this summer under the sponsorship of his famed countryman, Jan Sibelius.

Rautavarra is one of 33 students from foreign nations who entered the school's 13th session at Tanglewood.

Festival Program • Eagle 7/15

Bernstein To Conduct Tonight With Jennie Tourel as Soloist

TANGLEWOOD—Leonard Bernstein will lead an all-Mozart program in which Jennie Tourel, mezzo soprano, will be soloist tonight at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall to open the final weekend of chamber orchestra concerts at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Bernstein will also play a Mozart piano concerto, conducting from the keyboard.

The full program will be; The Overture to the opera "Don Giovanni" (to be performed at Tanglewood for the first time); the Symphony No. 36 in C Major, the "Linz" Symphony; and the Piano Concerto No. 17 in G Major. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from the opera "Idomeneo" ("Zeffiretti" and "Non temer"), and the concert aria "Al desio."

Working on New Musical

Mr. Bernstein, who returns to Tanglewood this summer after a year's leave of absence, is in charge of the department of orchestra conducting and also of the student orchestra at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. Since his last Tanglewood appearances, Mr. Bernstein has been busy both composing and conducting. He wrote the score for the oft-Oscared film "On the Waterfront" and just completed the music for a full-length opera based upon "Candide," with a libretto by Lillian Hellman. He currently is working on a new musical play for Broadway to be called "East Side Story." He has also been busy conducting in various European and South American musical capitals, most notably at La Scala in Milan and with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra both at home and on tour.

Jennie Tourel returns to Tanglewood tonight for the first time since three memorable appearances at the 1953 Berkshire Festival, when she sang in Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" under Mr. Munch, Ravel's "Scheherazade" cycle and Mahler's Second Symphony under Mr. Bernstein. She has just completed her 10th consecutive transcontinental tours of the United States and Canada, and also recently appeared in South Africa, South America and Israel.

Tomorrow evening and Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will return to the podium to conduct concerts of Italian and French music respectively. The Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, is soloist in the former.

Concert Bits

Humphrey Doulens, Columbia Artists Mgt. v.p., bedded at home in Norwalk, Conn., for last round against hepatitis following discharge from hosp.

The London Philharmonia, which will make its U.S. debut this fall, with Herbert von Karajan conducting, will also appear at Salzburg next January for that city's Mozart Week, and not the London Philharmonic, as erratumed.

Ten leading dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet will make their New York debut at Lewisohn Stadium July 21.

Leon Daniellen has been re-signed by Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo for the coming season.

Thor Johnson, Cincy Symph maestro, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in the "Berkshire Festival" broadcast next Monday (18) on NBC Radio.

Dr. Moshe Paranov, director of the Julius Hartt Musical Foundation in Hartford, Conn., has been engaged for a second season as musical director and conductor of the Brockton (Mass.) Orchestral Society. Rodney May, newly-elected president of the board of directors, and supervisor of the Brockton Public Schools Music Dept., will continue as the orch's associate director.

Variety, N.Y.
Wed! July 13, '55

Spfield Union
7/16/55

MOZART WORKS SUPERBLY DONE AT TANGLEWOOD

Chamber Orchestra, Bernstein, Miss Tourel Delight Audience of 3129

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 15—I am not sure whether it was Mozart, Leonard Bernstein, Jennie Tourel or the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra that drew 3129 people to Tanglewood tonight. Whatever it was, the audience has heard the music of Mozart played and sung as he must have wished to have it performed.

Touch of Glamor

In Leonard Bernstein, the orchestra had a conductor worthy of its best and tonight the members gave of their best. The silken tones of the string section were matched by the beauty of brasses and winds. It was the kind of orchestra tone one has learned to expect from the Boston Symphony players. It is always good to have Mr. Bernstein at the helm. He brings back something of the glamor and sense of the theater that was Koussevitzky.

The concert opened with a beautiful performance of the overture to "Don Giovanni," phrases were handsomely moulded and there was a constant play of light and shade.

Seldom have we heard a more communicative performance than Bernstein offered of the 'Symphony in C Major, K. 425," known as the "Linz." It seems impossible that this full length symphony with its provocative treatment of details and daring innovations could have been written in three days. As is his custom, Mr. Bernstein conducted without score. He felt and made konwn the myriad beauties of this happy work, treating it with elegance and delicacy; missing no nuance and bringing to light the power and imagination that lies in this music. There was a poignance to the slow movement, feather lightness in the minuet and brio in the closing presto.

Jennie Tourel and Mr. Bernstein make a musical team that is hard to equal. Both are superb musicians, intellectually able to meet any problem. Miss Tourel has always seemed to us to be a "singer's singer." Her style is impeccable and her techniques faultless. The voice has never been extraordinary in volume or beauty, but the intelligence that marks all she does, has placed this singer in the top rank of recitalists. Tonight she sang two demanding arias from "Idemoneo" and a seldom heard aria, written for a performance of "The Marriage of Figaro."

The opening aria from "Idemoneo" was "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri" which provided ample opportunity for the singer to warm up and give early evidence of her great art. The air from "Figaro," a rondo, "Al Desio, Di Chi T'Adora" was charmingly sung, with a grace, lightness and flexibility that was fascinating. Top notes were handled carefully, but they came through.

Several Recalls

The second aria, with its interesting piano obbligato, is an air interpolated in the opera for a soprano. It has real bravura qualities and Miss Tourel sang it with warmth and full realization of its emotional character. The audience was enthusiastic and there were several recalls. The orchestra accompaniments were worthy of the music and the singer.

The final work on the program brought Mr. Bernstein to the stage in the role of pianist-conductor, as he both played and conducted the "Piano concerto in G Major, K. 453." We have always admired this pianist's performance of Mozart. He has the technique and the sensitivity to make this music live anew. The dual job of playing and conducting disturbed him not at all and everything went about as it should have.

Tomorrow night Charles Munch will open the program with the "Concerto Grosso in D Minor" by Vivaldi, following this with the same composer's "Concerto Grosso in B Minor," for four violins and string orchestra. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, will be heard in the "Concerto for Violincello in B-Flat Major" by Boccherini. The concluding work will be the Vivaldi's "Gloria," sung by the festival chorus under Hugh Ross.

Music Berkshire Eagle 7/16/55

Bernstein, Tourel Captivate Big Audience

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Leonard Bernstein

THE PROGRAM in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night was entirely from Mozart. Leonard Bernstein, making his first appearance there in two years, conducted the overture to "Don Giovanni," the C major "Linz" symphony, played the solo and conducted from the keyboard of the G major concerto and led the orchestra in the accompaniments for soprano Jennie Tourel in three arias.

It is a fair guess that no program will exceed in glamor that of last night. Bernstein made some beautiful music, but he injected his own galvanic personality into the least consequential detail to the utter delight of one of the largest audiences of the season.

A gray sky and the feel of rain threatened in the pre-concert hours but evidently did not keep the crowds away and, happily, nothing occurred to mar the thrill of the evening.

* * *

THE OVERTURE and the symphony both start with slow introductions of approximately the same length and lead into the main parts of the movements of not basically too remote a nature. The orchestra sounded in top form for Bernstein and he gave the music authentic style. His contrasts were not violent yet were clear and valid, and his tempi were very satisfying. There was a piquancy on occasion and a long singing line where appropriate.

In the piano concerto, he usurped the function of the concertmaster and conducted from the keyboard. Many of his indications here were rebundant and extravagant and never have we imagined the andante to contain so much Weltschmerz. Nevertheless it was wonderfully stimulating and excited the audience to peaks of exhilaration.

* * *

THE PIANO was placed obliquely so that the soloist's back was to the left half of the audience. It was evidently the custom before conductors stood before their men and when the orchestra was led from the keyboard, to point the piano directly in so that the pianist had his back entirely to the hall. The leader of the first violins acquired the nomenclature of concertmaster under such conditions when he assumed the responsibility of accompanying the soloist. Bernstein embraced concertmaster Richard Burgin last night after the concerto in an outburst of gratitude for the integrated collaboration the orchestra provided.

Bernstein's piano playing was a combination of keyboard artist, orchestral leader and dramatic actor. His grasp of orchestral tone and effects influenced him somewhat in his tone production. His confidence and mastery of the music provided a base upon which he built his graphic conception. His enthusiasm and complete immersion in his task leads him into demonstrations that might be disciplined, particularly his audible foot beating to mark time.

* * *

MISS TOUREL sang the aria "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri" from "Idomeneo" and the rondo "Al Desio, di chi t'adora," and later, the scene and rondo "Non Temer, amato bene," this latter with Mr. Bernstein playing the piano obbligato. The "Idomeneo" aria was most beautifully suited to Miss Tourel's voice and the opportunities it affords of showing the control and judgment she possesses were eminently realized.

Her tone was fresh and warmly glowing and she gave unalloyed joy in her phrasing and even the variety of color with which she invested certain propitious and long-sustained notes. The operatic demands of the ensuing choices were a slight degree less perfectly suited to the attributes of her voice, yet nothing could diminish the pure beauty and classic style with which she used it.

[194]

Berkshire Evening Eagle 7/16/55

Manos

CELLO SOLOIST Samuel Mayes, left foreground, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, discuss a portion of the score at rehearsals for tonight's performance of Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat to be given at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Final Chamber Orchestra Events At Tanglewood Tonight, Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—The two final programs in this season's Berkshire Festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

All-Italian Concert

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of the 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi—his Concerti Grossi Nubers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (Harmonic Inspration), and the "Gloria" Mass in D Major, which Hugh Ross will conduct. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire Music Center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D Minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Mr. Mayes joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo cellist at the start of the 1948-1949 season, Serge Koussevitzky's last season as conductor. Previously he had been solo cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra for a decade, having joined that orchestra at the age of 19. He is the grandson of a Cherokee Indian and his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers. He has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of our principal cities. Last season he introduced the new Cello Concerto by Kabalevsky to American audiences.

All-French Program

Sunday's all-French concert, which will also be conducted by Mr. Munch, will be comprised of a Suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's orchestral suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; the Pavane by Gabriel Faure; Milhaud's "Serenade" for Small Orchestra (also known as the Symphony No. 3); and the Symphony No. 4 by Artur Honegger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honegger compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood.

Beginning next weekend, the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will assemble at Tanglewood to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, which Mr. Munch will open on Friday evening with an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

AREA RESIDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD, SOME HAVE BOXES

The Berkshire symphonic festival at Tanglewood is well under way this season and as usual is attracting large crowds. People from Winsted and the surrounding area in numbers attend the concerts or the events in the music barn at one time or another during the summer.

In addition to those who attend only occasionally, there are many from here who hold season passes. There are even two or three who have boxes, including Mrs. P. A. Kelemen of Norfolk.

The events of Tanglewood have now become known the world over, and each year brings thousands more to this spot, which is a sort of summer music Mecca. Winsted is fortunate to be within easy driving distance of Tanglewood, and it is heartening to know many local persons are taking advantage of the offerings there.

Winsted Citizen 7/14

Bernstein Conducts All-Mozart Program

N.Y. Times By JOHN BRIGGS Sat. July 16

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 15—The second week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts got under way tonight with an all-Mozart program played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano was the soloist.

Mr. Bernstein as a Mozart interpreter has gained poise and maturity with the passing seasons. His conducting of the "Linz" symphony (K. 425) gave evidence of his increasing stature and deeper insight as a performer.

•

Mr. Bernstein's conducting style, too, is less hectic and more self-assured than it used to be. To be sure, there are moments when one had the disconcerting momentary impression that the late Serge Koussevitzky was again on the podium. On the other hand, it seems quite fiting that the Koussevitzky mannerisms should live on in the conducting of the man who is perhaps Koussevitzky's most gifted student.

Mr. Bernstein displayed another facet of his talent by playing, and conducting from the piano, the Mozart G major Concerto (K. 453). Aside from Bruno Walter, few conductors of present times have attempted this particular tour de force. Mr. Bernstein's fluent playing of the concerto tonight was all the more remarkable in that he is, so to speak, a part-time pianist in the intervals when he is not composing or conducting. One wonders when the talented young maestro has time to practice.

Miss Tourel was heard in the aria, "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri" from "Idomeneo," the rondo, "Al Desio, di Chi t'Adora" (K. 577) and the scene and rondo, "Non Temer, Amato Bene," (K. 453), the latter with piano obligatto played by Mr. Bernstein.

Miss Tourel's singing of Mozart was, as always, a delight. The purity of her intonation, and the accuracy and seeming ease with which she negotiated the most difficult florid passages, were matters for admiration.

The concert began with a spirited performance of the overture to "Don Giovanni."

NY Times Sunday July 17

62

Concert: In Berkshires

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 15—The second week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts got under way Friday with an all-Mozart program played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano was the soloist.

Mr. Bernstein as a Mozart interpreter has gained poise and maturity with the passing seasons. His conducting of the "Linz" Symphony (K. 425) gave evidence of his increasing stature and deeper insight as a performer.

•

Mr. Bernstein's conducting style, too, is less hectic and more self-assured than it used to be. To be sure, there were moments when one had the disconcerting momentary impression that the late Serge Koussevitzky was again on the podium. On the other hand, it seems quite fiting that the Koussevitzky mannerisms should live on in the conducting of the man who is perhaps Koussevitzky's most gifted student.

Mr. Bernstein displayed another facet of his talent by playing, and conducting from the piano, the Mozart G major Concerto (K. 453). Aside from Bruno Walter, few conductors of present times have attempted this particular tour de force. Mr. Bernstein's fluent playing of the concerto Friday was all the more remarkable in that he is, so to speak, a part-time pianist in the intervals when he is not composing or conducting. One wonders when the talented young maestro has time to practice.

Miss Tourel was heard in the aria, "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri" from "Idomeneo," the rondo, "Al Desio, di Chi t'Adora" (K. 577) and the scene and rondo, "Non Temer, Amato Bene," (K. 453), the latter with piano obligatto played by Mr. Bernstein.

Miss Tourel's singing of Mozart was, as always, a delight. The purity of her intonation, and the accuracy and seeming ease with which she negotiated the most difficult florid passages, were matters for admiration.

The concert began with a spirited performance of the overture to "Don Giovanni."

Boston Sunday Herald: 7/17

Berkshire Festival Programs

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week, when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles river in Boston moves over to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed, which will continue until the conclusion of the festival on Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides, so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the 12 Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of 9,197.

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will [illegible] music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra.

The concerts this week include a program of Beethoven violin sonatas in the Theater-Concert Hall given Wednesday night by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin; the first Shed concert Friday night with Charles Munch conducting a program consisting of Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist; the second Shed concert on Saturday night when Pierre Monteux presents Respighi's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, Sessions' suite from "The Black Masquers," and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

On Sunday, July 22, Mr. Munch will conduct the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies of Beethoven in the Music Shed at 2:30 p. m.

Noted Modern Composers

Roger Sessions, left, professor of music at Princeton University, and Boris Blacher, right, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, are in charge of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department at Tanglewood this summer. Students of the noted modern composers give their first forum tonight at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the concert open to the public through membership in the Friends' Society.

Springfield Sun Republican 7/16/55

Berkshire Festival

[illegible] 7/17

The final concert in the chamber orchestra series at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be given this afternoon. Next Friday night the major portion of the Festival will begin with the initial concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in full numbers. Programs of this week will be as follows:

Today at 2:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger: Symphony No. 4.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano in Beethoven Sonatas: No. 2, A major, Op. 12, No. 2; No. 5 in F major ("Spring"); No. 7, C minor, Op. 30, No. 2.

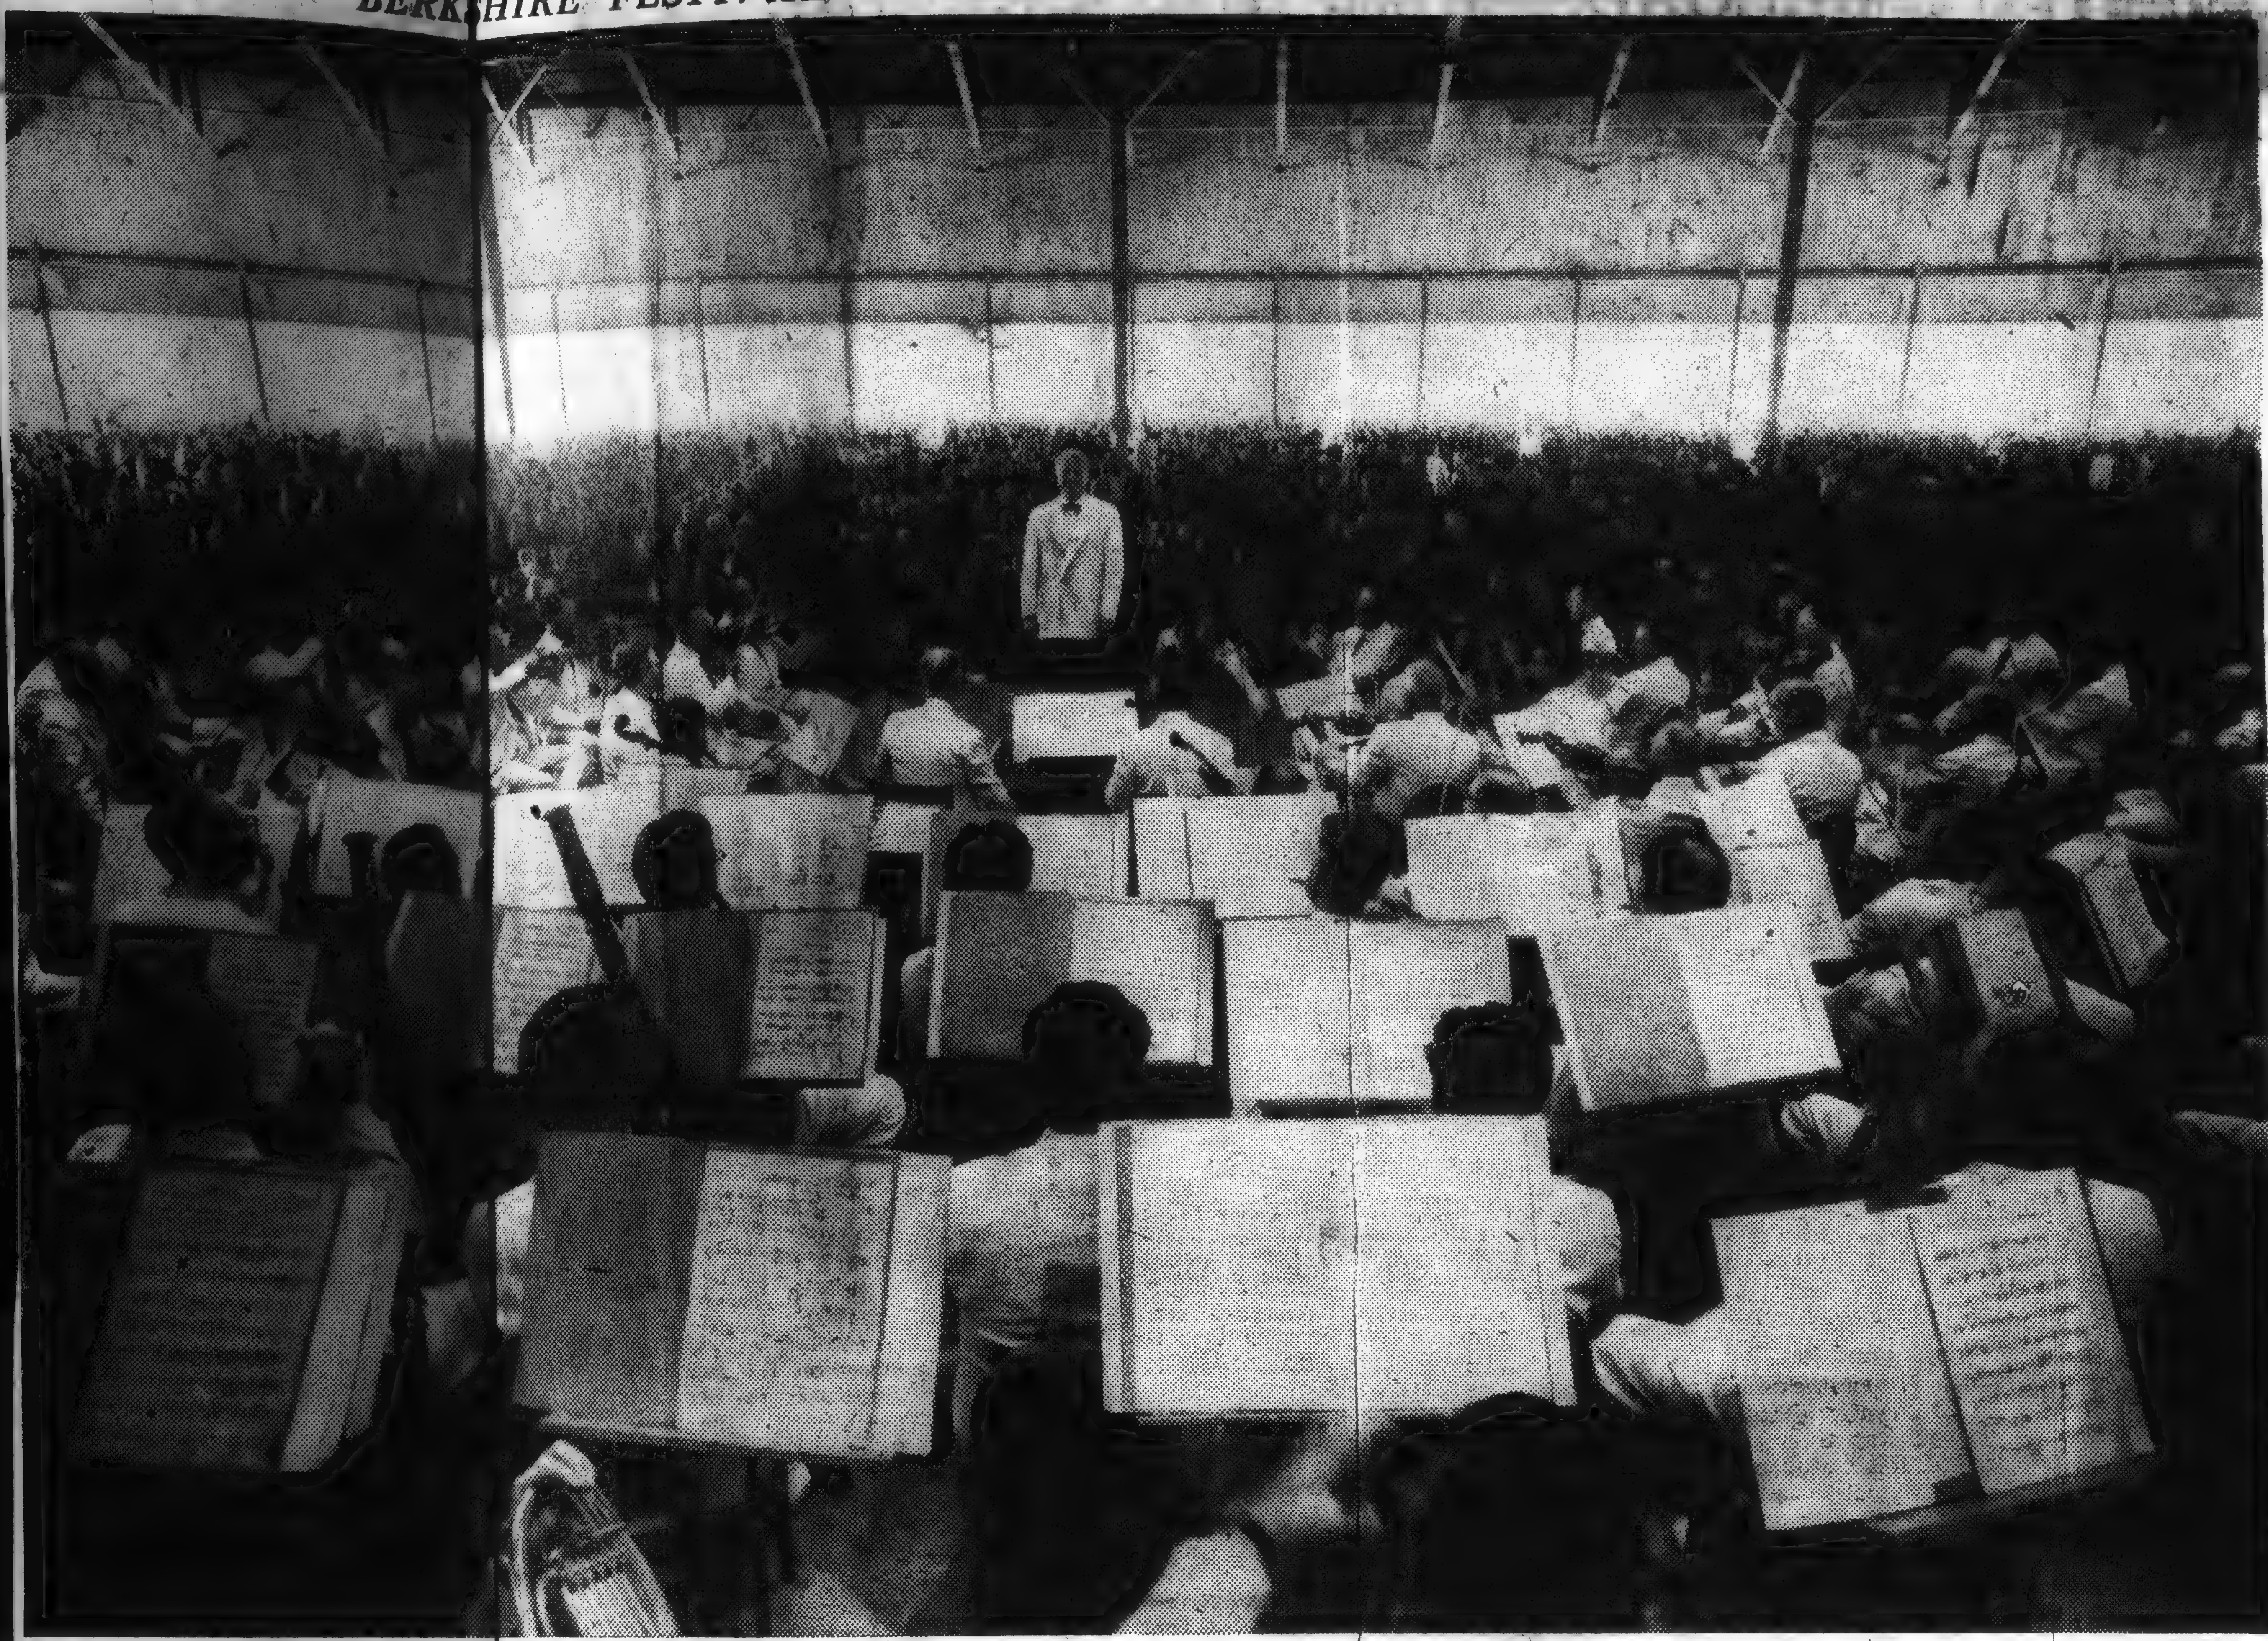
Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Beethoven: Overture to "Coriolan"; Violin Concerto (soloist, Isaac Stern); Symphony No. 7.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2; Roger Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration."

Sunday, July 24, at 2:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Beethoven: Symphony No. 1; Symphony No. 4; Symphony No. 6 ("Pastoral").

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 17, 1955.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS MOVE INTO BIG SHED FRIDAY



The New York Times (by Sam Falk)

The Boston Symphony, its permanent conductor, Charles Munch, and the large audience as seen from behind the orchestra in the band shell at Tanglewood.

VISITING COMPOSER

Blacher of Berlin Tries 'Variable Meter' Style

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE Berkshire Music Center has two distinguished composers as guest teachers at Tanglewood this summer. Usually the quota is one, but this year Aaron Copland, executive head of the center, has taken a sabbatical, and two have been invited. They are Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher.

Mr. Sessions, one of this country's ablest composers and teachers, is a well-established figure in our musical life. Mr. Blacher, however, is a relatively unknown quantity. A little of his music has been performed here, but not enough to give one a thorough idea of his standing, and this is his first visit to the United States.

Mr. Blacher would have to be described as a German composer. He was born in China of Russian parents and spent some of his childhood in Siberia. But in 1922, when he was 19, he went to Germany and has remained there, residing for the most part in Berlin.

He is a lean-faced, bright-eyed, gray-haired man who speaks a variety of languages, including English. He has a keen awareness of the international musical scene, is familiar with all modern trends and, he said the other day during a chat in Lenox, Mass., is not committed to any.

At His Will

"I write twelve-tone music when I feel like," he said, "and I don't when it doesn't suit my purpose."

He admitted he had been working on a system of his own of late, but he made no special claims for it. He described it as a technique of "variable meters." Its aim was to systematize irregular rhythms. If one understands his theory—and Mr. Blacher assured one with a smile that "it was quite simple"—a rhythm row much like a tone row in twelve-tone music is selected in advance. It is worked out on a set mathematical formula. All that the composer has to do, Mr. Blacher remarked without ingenuousness, is to make it work and to give it vitality.

It was difficult to make out whether Mr. Blacher regarded his experiments as important or not. Clearly he believed that the secret of the energy and excitement of even some of the great works of bygone eras rested at least in part on occasional variable meters. It was equally obvious that he felt something fresh could be accomplished in the direction of his experiments. But there was nothing of the zealot in his discussion. The speculation interests me, his manner seemed to say, take it or leave it.

Mr. Blacher flew in from Berlin just before the Tanglewood session opened. He had just two days in New York and managed to get to see "The Pajama Game," which fascinated him for its all-around professionalism. Thanks to a relative who played in the orchestra, he saw the musical from a seat in the pit. "I was willing to play the celesta or something," he said, "but they didn't need any help. So I sat on a seat near the conductor and just enjoyed myself."

In his student days in Berlin Mr. Blacher earned some extra money by pounding the piano in movie houses while silent films were being shown. His seat at "The Pajama Game" made him feel nostalgic for those days.

Conservatory Head

In Germany today Mr. Blacher is the head of Berlin's Hochschule fuer Musik. When Werner Egk left the post in 1953, an effort was made to get Paul Hindemith to take it, but he declined. It fell to Mr. Blacher by default, he made it appear. He preferred his old position as teacher of composition, which gave him more time to write. But a job needed to be done, and he felt it was his duty to do it.

Of musical conditions in Germany, he said that instrumental virtuosos were slow in developing but promising singers and composers were coming along. Among the composers there are no new and great individual talents, he observed.

"But we must not be disheartened," he added. "It takes time and perspective. How many composers were there in the nineteenth century? Thousands. How many remain? A few. In our own time we can see that Schoenberg, Stravinsky and Bartók will endure. Possibly Hindemith and Prokofieff, too. That makes five. Not at all bad."

Was he so sure that Schoenberg, for example, would be accepted by the general public? Give it time and a chance to hear the music and it might, he said.

How did he make out in Germany during the Hitler years?

Mr. Blacher said that he gave private composition lessons and wrote. Some of his pieces were not in line with Nazi party policy, and some were [illegible] played by friends for friends. He was a stateless person during all that period, receiving German citizenship only several years ago. The implication of his remarks was that he had no alternative but to remain quiet and [illegible] to survive.

Globe - Boston;

JUL 15 1955

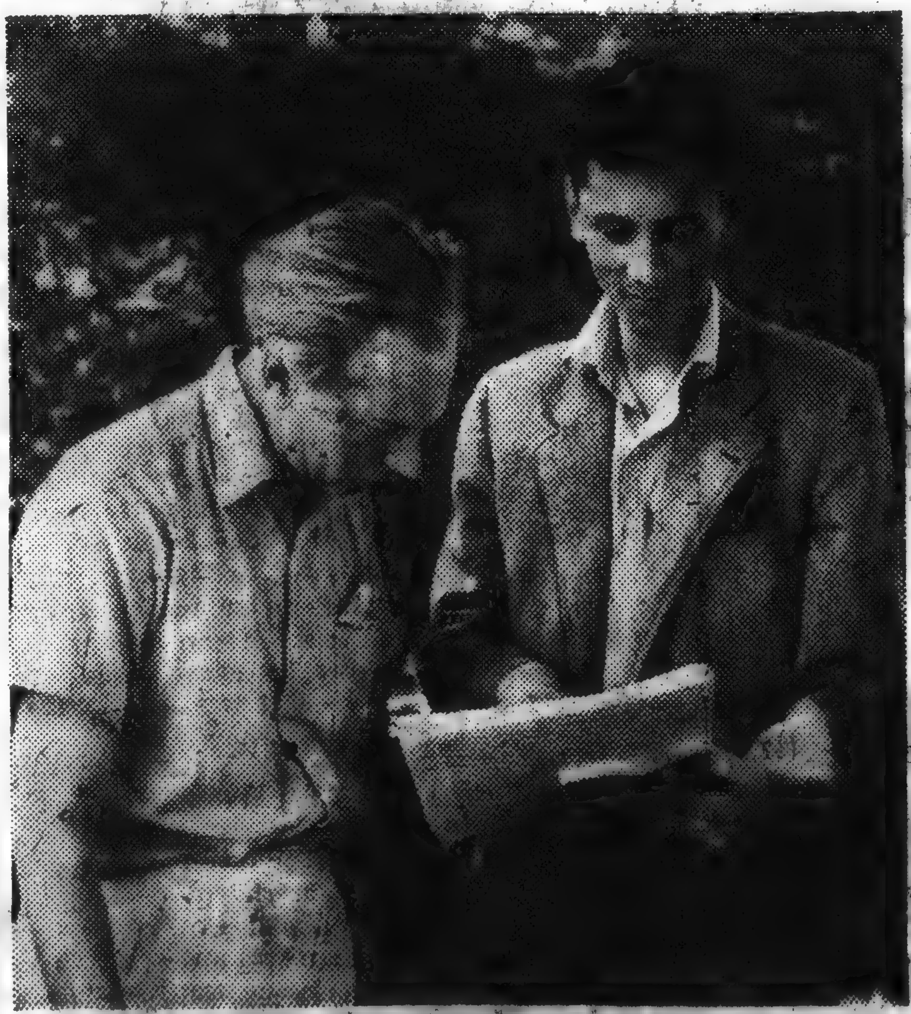
popular stars.

Berkshire Scholarship

The annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, of Schenectady.

The scholarship was founded last year by Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, who instituted student symphony concerts in 1940.

COMPOSERS FROM ABROAD



Boris Blacher, left, who is teaching at Tanglewood, with Eino Rautavarra, studying there at suggestion of Sibelius.

BSO Brilliance Partly Due to Its Special Pitch

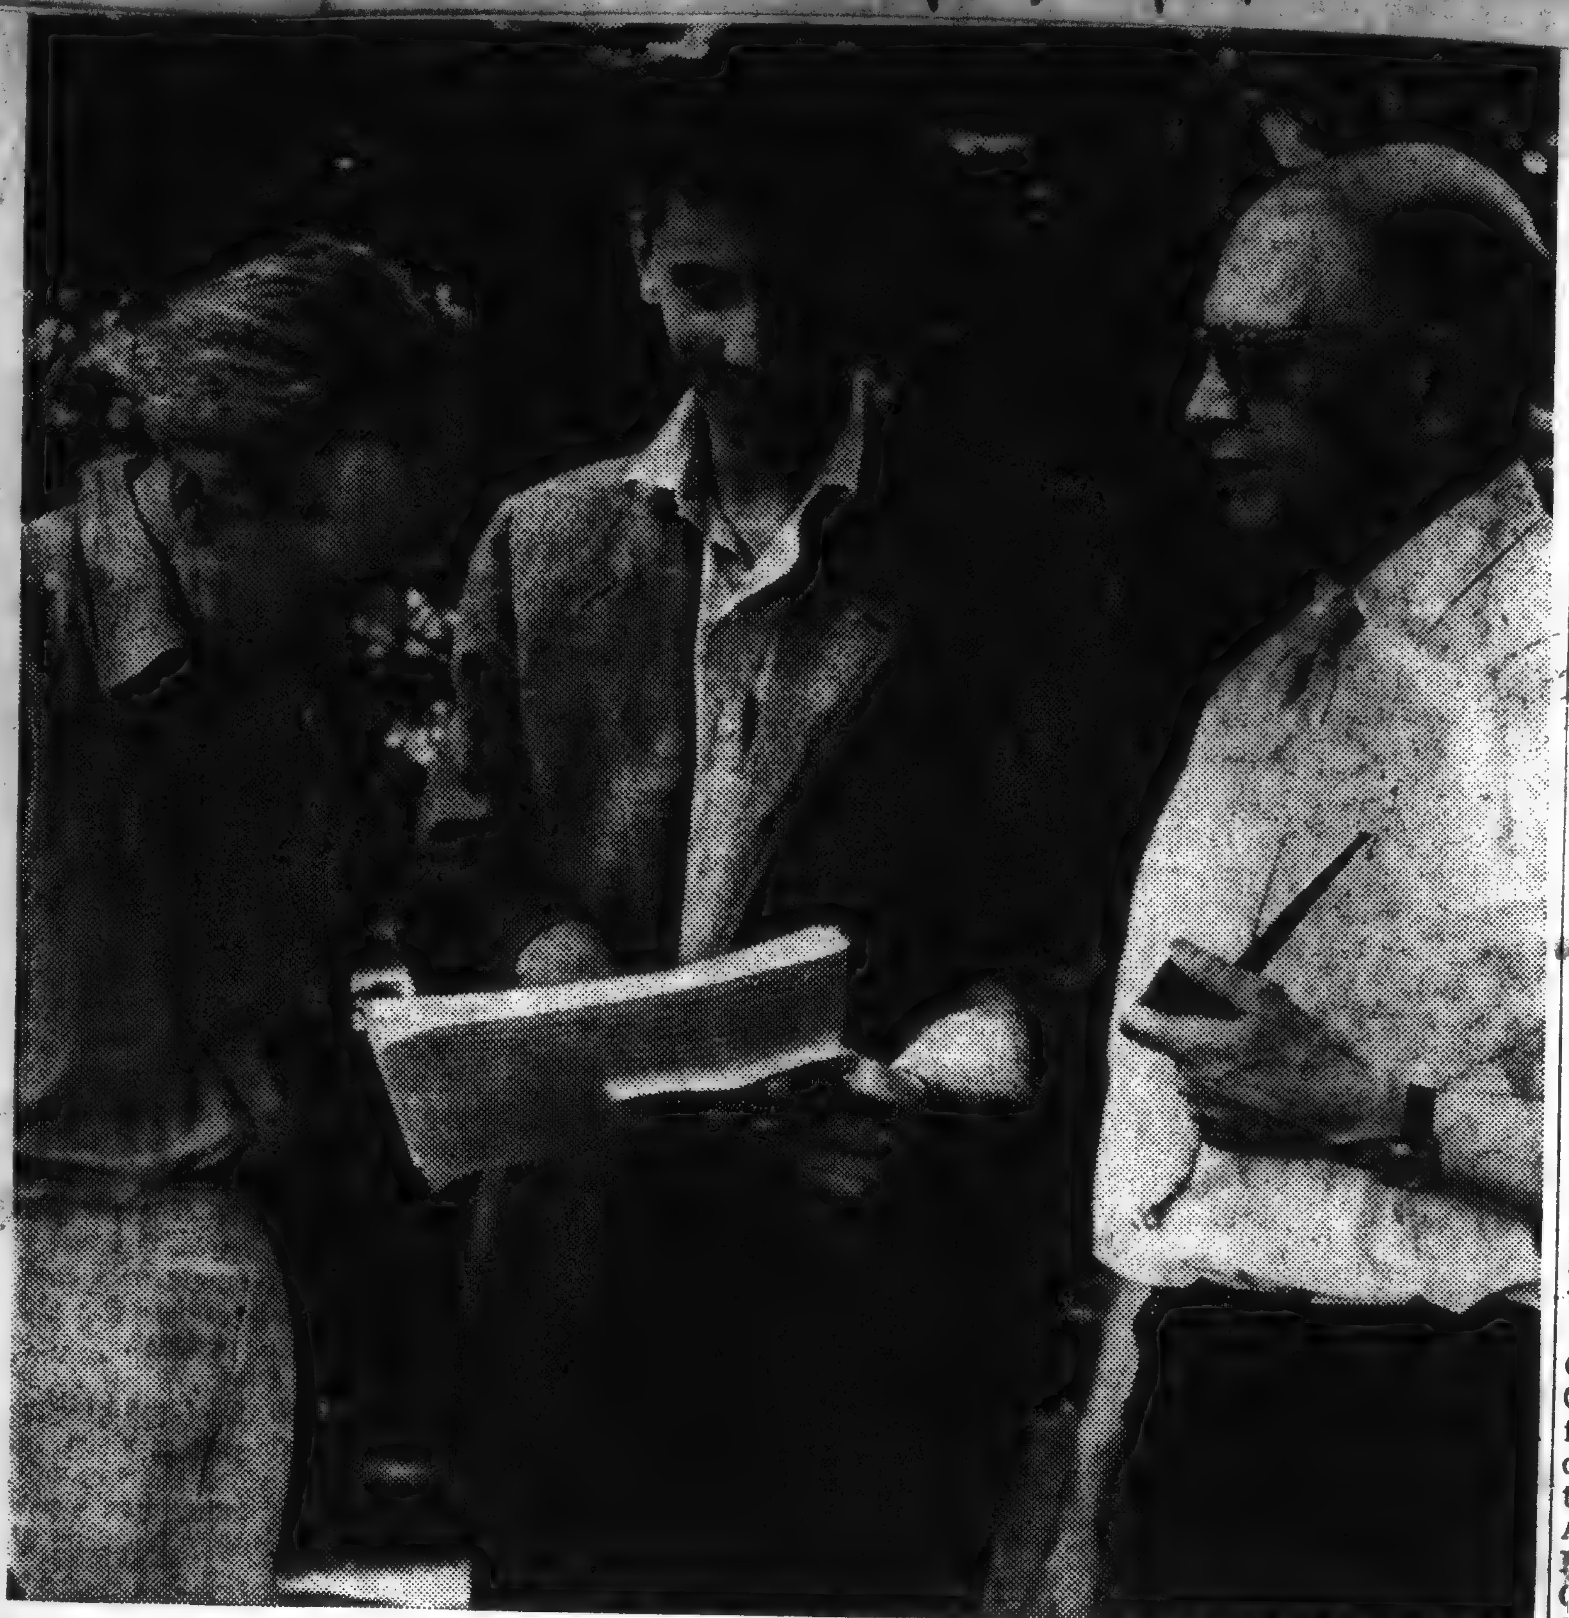
LISTENERS at Tanglewood need not be trained musicians to realize the Boston Symphony Orchestra has a tonal brilliance all its own. Nor is it by chance. The classical musical "A" is exactly 422 vibrations a second, to which most orchestras are attuned. The Boston Symphony, however, is pitched to 444 per second.

The late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky raised the pitch years ago when he took over leadership of the organization. This high pitch is considered one reason for the popularity of the orchestra.

During the recent BSO European tour however, so unused were listeners there to the unusual pitch that it required half a concert for them to accept the difference, according to reports. To change the pitch to natural "A" in all the hundreds of instruments employed by the orchestra would cost thousands of dollars, and would be neither feasible nor advisable since the public still prefers the higher register.

Berkshire Eagle, 7/16/55

N Adams Transcript, 7/12/55



SIBELIUS PROTEGE AT TANGLEWOOD—Nominated for a scholarship at the Berkshire Music center by his famous compatriot, Jean Sibelius, Eino Rautavaara, 26-year-old Finnish composer (center), goes over a score at Tanglewood with Boris Blacher (left), noted modern German composer, and Roger Sessions, modern American composer, members of school faculty.

Finnish Composer, 26, Picked by Sibelius, Tanglewood Student

Eino Rautavaara, 26, of Helsinki, Finnish composer nominated by his famous fellow countryman Jean Sibelius, has arrived at Tanglewood to spend the summer as a student of composition with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher at the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in conjunction with its annual Berkshire festival concerts.

One of 33 students from 18 foreign lands including Canada who are at the music school's 13th session for six weeks of concentrated study, Mr. Rautavaara has come largely through the efforts of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the Boston symphony who did much to pioneer the music of Sibelius in this country. Mrs. Koussevitzky is chairman of an international Sibelius Festival committee, which will celebrate the Finnish master's 90th birthday in the season of 1955-6 by inviting conductors here and abroad to perform programs and whole cycles of Sibelius music.

The Koussevitzky Music foundation, in co-operation with the Berkshire Music center, is offering a scholarship with full living expenses at Tanglewood to Mr. Rautavaara, whom Sibelius personally nominated to receive the honor. The young composer's travel expenses to and from Finland are defrayed by the Finlandia foundation of New York. Following his stay at Tanglewood, arrangements are being made with the Juilliard school of music in New York city for Mr. Rautavaara to continue his studies in America.

In Musical Family

Rautavaara was born Oct. 9, 1928, into a family of musicians. His father was a noted Finnish opera singer. As a pupil of Prof. Aarre Merikanto, he studied composition and piano at the Sibelius academy after passing his theory examinations. At the Helsinki university he studied musicology, aesthetics, literature and psychology, and was graduated master of arts in 1953. After his military service in 1954, and his entry into Officers' school, he studied in Vienna for the past six months.

In 1954 Mr. Rautavaara won a prize donated by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati symphony, himself a former student at the Berkshire Music center and guest conductor at the Berkshire festival concert last Saturday. This was an international contest, and the prize-winning work was a composition for brass and percussion, a suite entitled "Requiem in our Time." Other of his compositions which have been performed are "Adagio and Toccata for Orchestra," "Suite for Orchestra," "Divertimento for Strings," "Suite for Strings," a song cycle based on poems of Rilke, variations for piano.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 S. 3,653,302

JUL 10 1956

Newport Opera; Chautauqua Play

The Newport (R. I.) Music Festival opens its three-program summer series tonight at the Newport Casino with a production of "Carmen," in which Richard Tucker and Gloria Lane will sing the leads under the direction of Remus Tzincoca . . . At the Chautauqua (N. Y.) Festival, "Mrs. McThing" will hold down the boards Wednesday and Saturday nights, while lectures and song-and-dance programs will take over during the rest of the week . . . The Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., brings back composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein this week. He'll conduct the Boston Symphony in an all-Mozart program Friday night, featuring mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel.

CELLIST HAILED AT TANGLEWOOD

Sp'field Sun. Repub 7/16/55

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 16—Long live the music of Antonio Vivaldi, music which remains as fresh in texture and as vital as the day it was written; music which Johann Sebastian Bach did not hesitate to appropriate as his own.

Charles Munch directed the chamber-orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two handsome works by Vivaldi tonight, the "Concerto Grosso in D Minor" and the "Concerto Grosso in B Minor for four violins and string orchestra, Op. 3 No. 10."

The third Vivaldi work, the "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra was directed by Hugh Ross. In spite of the heat and humidity 4064 were on hand to enjoy and applaud.

In spite of this wealth of Vivaldi music, the cheers of the evening

CELLIST HAILED

(Continued From Page 1A)

went to Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, who played in superb fashion the Boccherini "Concerto for Violoncello in B-Flat Major."

We have witnessed many personal triumphs at Tanglewood, but few have approached the tribute the orchestra paid Mayes. When Mr. Munch asked them to stand with Mayes to acknowledge applause, they did, but they remained standing until he had returned three times. The audience reaction to the performance of the concerto by this young man was equally enthusiastic.

Tonal Beauty Rare

When the string players of the Boston Symphony, Orchestra choose, they can play with incomparable beauty of tone. Tonight they chose so to play and the opening "Concerto Grosso in D Minor" was given a performance of rare tonal beauty. Mr. Munch communicated the innate strength of the work as well as its delicacy and quiet charm.

In the "Concerto Grosso in B Minor," which calls for four violins and string orchestra, Vivaldi opened new vistas in orchestral writing. Colors never before realized were created and a new world of sound was created. There was splendid playing by the four violins, alone, in duets and ensemble. The string ensemble played with a flexibility and warmth of tone that raised this work to its rightful place.

The Boccherini cello concerto is a work of great charm, brilliance and emotional impact. It has been long a favorite vehicle for the art of Casals whose recording of it still remains definitive. The Casals cadenzas were used tonight by Mr. Mayes. This young cellist played with beauty of tone, vitality, poetry and emotional control. It was one of the finest performances of this concerto we have heard. He recieved the finest collaboration from his colleagues and Mr. Munch.

Soloists Appear

Vivaldi, like many other composers who were musically attached to conservatories or the church, wrote a quantity of religious choral music. The "Gloria" heard tonight, is set from the ritual mass. It is a balanced musical unit beginning and ending brilliantly, and taking an alternate course of lively and contemplative music from first to last. It calls for two soloists who tonight were Sara Mae Endrich, soprano, and Sadie McCullum, contralto. Both filled their assignments creditably.

Once again Hugh Ross worked his magic on the festival chorus so one heard a finely balanced group of singers perform with a freshness of tone, technical surety and vitality. The choral demands of the work were admirably met and the "Cum Sancto Spirito" which utilities the full orchestra with trumpets and the final "amen" were magnificent in their power and impact.

Tomorrow the chamber-orchestra will be heard in a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch. Music by Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger will be heard.

HANDEL AND HAYDN ON BSO'S PROGRAM

The Berkshire Festival Concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thor Johnson will offer Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 and Haydn's "Symphonie Concertante" tomorrow (8.15-1 EDT)

Isaac Stern, violinist, will be guest soloist on the Telephone Hour tomorrow. His selections include the first movement of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor and Kreisler's "Sicilienne and Rigaudon".

On the same evening, the Cities Service Band of America, conducted by Paul Lavalle, will offer Basile's "Big Time March" and selections from Rodgers' "Oklahoma!"

RECEPTION HALL, TANGLEWOOD: Exhibition of paintings by Helmut Siber of Mill River entitled "Paintings of the Weather" through Friday. Sculpture by Peter Abate opens Saturday.

BERKSHIRE INN, GREAT BARRINGTON: Annual exhibition of painting, sculpture and graphic

---

This Week's Music

Concerts and Recitals

Stadium Concerts

Stadium Symphony Orchestra of City College, Convent and Amsterdam Aves., 138th and 139th Sts., 8:30.

Monday. Conductor, Thomas Scherman; soloists, Camilla Williams and Louise Whetsel, sopranos; Richard Tucker and Howard Fried, tenors; Martial Singher and Francis Monachino, baritone, and the Margaret Hillis Choir. "La Traviata," Verdi. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Tuesday. Conductor, Thomas Scherman; soloist, Ozan Marsh, pianist (Stadium debut). Symphony No. 2 in D minor, Dvorak; Todentanz, Liszt; Introduction and Allegro Appassionato in G major, Op. 92, for Piano and Orchestra, Schumann; Till Eulenspiegel, Strauss.

Wednesday. Conductor, Thomas Scherman; soloists, Joan Field, violinist, and Phillipa Schuyler, pianist. Suite "Impressions of Italy," Charpentier; Symphonie Espagnole, Lalo; Concerto No. 2 in G minor, for Piano and Orchestra, Saint-Saens; The Sorcerer's Apprentice, Dukas.

Thursday. Conductor, Thomas Scherman; soloists, Ten Leading Dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet: Inge Sand, Mona Vangsaae, Kirsten Ralov, Kirsten Petersen, Mette Mollerup; Viveka Segerskov, Fredbjorn Bjornsson, Frank Schaufuss, Stanley Williams and Fleming Flindt. Symphony in C major, Bizet; Divertissements from Acts I and II of "Coppelia" (Danish Version), Delibes; Overture to "The Merry Widow," (first performance in the United States), Lehar; Dream Pictures, Lumbye. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Saturday. Conductor, Julius Rudel; soloists, Jarmila Novotna, soprano, and Kurt Baum, tenor. Overture to "Die Fledermaus"; Als Flotter Geist, from "The Gypsy Baron," Strauss; Yours Is My Heart Alone, from "Land of Smiles," Lehar; Voices of Spring, Strauss; Walzer Lied, Strauss-Korngold; Say Not Love Is a Dream, from "The Count of Luxembourg," Lehar; Tritsch-Tratsch Polka; Pizzicato Polka; Thunder and Lightning Polka, Strauss; Tanzen Moecht Ich, from "The Gypsy Princess," Kalman; Wiener Volksmusik, Komzak; Highlights from "The Merry Widow," Lehar; Radetzky March, Strauss. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Ravel; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Symphony No. 4, Honegger.

Wednesday, 8:30. Isaac Stern, violinist; and Alexander Zakin, pianist. Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2; No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring"); No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2, Beethoven.

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; soloist, Isaac Stern, "Coriolanus" Overture; Violin Concerto; Symphony No. 7, Beethoven.

Saturday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Respighi; Symphony No. 2 in D major, Beethoven; Suite from "The Black Maskers," Sessions; "Death and Transfiguration," Strauss.

Sunday, July [illegible], 2:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Symphony No. 1 in C major, Symphony No. 4 in B flat, Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale"), Beethoven.

Other Events

Recorded Music: New York Public Library series, Bryant Park, Monday through Friday, 12 noon.

McClain Chorale, Brooklyn Museum, today, 2.
George McClain conducting. Selection from "Porgy and Bess," Gershwin; Negro spirituals, Creole Folk Songs.

Open Sings, Brooklyn College, Bedford Ave. and Avenue H, Brooklyn, Monday, 8:30.

American Music Concert, Harlem Meer, Central Park, 110th St. and Fifth Ave., Tuesday, 8:30.

"New York Queen of Commerce Festival Concert," Battery Park, Tuesday, 12 noon.

"Evenings-by-the-River," East River Park Amphitheatre, F. D. R. Drive and Grand St., Tuesday, 8:30.

Symphony of the Air, Dogwood Hollow Open Air Theater, Stony Brook, N. Y., Saturday, 8:30.
D'Artega conducting; soloists, Lily Windsor, soprano; John Corigliano, violinist. Works by Debussy, [illegible], Lalo, Harkness, Delibes.

Mozart's "Bastien and Bastienne" and Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," John Hall Memorial, 342 E. [illegible] St., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 8:30.

Amato Opera Theater, 159 Bleecker St., Verdi's "La Traviata," today, Tuesday, Friday, Saturday, 8:15.

Opera Workshop, Lillie Deverreaux Blake, P. S. No. 6, 45 E. 81st St., Puccini's "La Boheme," Wednesday; Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," Thursday, 8.

City Symphony [illegible], Mall, Central Park, [illegible], 8:30.
Conductor, Franz Bibo; soloist, Joshua Hecht, bass-baritone. Works by Nicolai, Smetana, Mozart, Verdi, Gounod, Faure, Rodgers, Strauss.

NY Herald Tribune, S.

[197]

CINCINNATI, OHIO
ENQUIRER
Circ. D. 200,412 - S. 282,550

JUL 3 1955

Johnson Goes To Tanglewood

AMONG THE celebrated artists and conductors taking part in the Tanglewood Concerts, known as the Berkshire Festival, will be Dr. Thor Johnson, musical director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

The festival, which opens this year on July 6, for a six-week period, closing August 14, is planned under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and will be largely devoted to Beethoven's music. It is held annually at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The July 9 program, with

---

26 SYRACUSE HERALD-AMERICAN, Sunday, July 10, 1955

Music

Bernstein to Conduct Tanglewood Concerts

By E. V. W.

Next weekend, in the Theater Concert Hall, "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., Leonard Bernstein, distinguished young American conductor and pianist-composer, and Jenny Tourel, noted soprano, will appear in an all-Mozart program. Director Bernstein will be soloist in the Piano Concert in G Major (K 453); Miss Tourel will sing three arias: "Al Desio" (K 577); "Zeffiretti" and "Non Temer" from "Idomeneo."

On Friday night, Aug. 5, in the Music Shed, Mr. Bernstein will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in memory of the Symphony's conductor Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," summer home of the Symphony. The Festival Chorus of students will sing, soloists including Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, David Lloyd and Mac Morgan.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

This afternoon, in the Theater Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, who recently returned from Europe, will conduct Bach's Mass in B Minor with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Chorale Society, trained by G. Wallace Woodworth. The vocal quartet to participate: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. These musical forces performed the Mass in Boston last April in a concert broadcast in part, coast-to-coast.

Admission for listening from the lawns for the concerts in the Theater Music Hall will be available days of concerts. In event of rain, these Chamber Music programs will be in the Music Shed, which also will seat lawn audiences. Concerts by the full Boston Symphony will start in The Shed the week-end of July 22 continuing through mid-August.

* * *

This date in music, 1873, Theodore Thomas directed his orchestra in the first American performance of the Glinka "Russlan and Ludmilla" overture, in New York City.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 9 1955

Berkshire Festival:

Bach-Mozart By Boston

Delighted 1st Nighters Cold to Stravinsky Addition by Munch

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 9.—Charles Munch opened the Boston Symphony's part of the Berkshire Festival with a Bach-Mozart program in the Theatre Concert Hall last night.

The program was not, however, traditionally "pure" for he included a work by Stravinsky.

How much the ballet score "Orpheus" was an intruder could be a speculative matter, but the audience of 2,100 people showed much less enthusiasm for Stravinsky than for the "hallowed" composers of these concerts.

Yet Stravinsky's rhythms are to this century what those of Bach were to the 18th Century, and the craftsmanship of both composers is comparable, too. The difference lies in substance, wherein Bach offered a great deal and moved the audience more deeply.

Jubilant Quality

Beginning with the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio, Munch presented his characteristically virile Bach with a jubilant quality quite infectious. Roger Voisin's playing of the trumpet part contributed the right touch of brilliance, but the whole performance radiated gloriously.

The Suite No. 2 in B Minor found Munch in a mood to plumb its depths and the orchestra to respond accordingly. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute soloist of the orchestra, played her part brilliantly and wondrously.

So delighted was the crowd that the rollicking "Badinerie," which ends the work, had to be repeated. Many would have enjoyed a repitition of the whole performance, for this was the high point of the concert.

Mozart's "Prague" symphony completed the program. Munch achieved a remarkable balance between some strong fortes and some beautifully phrased pianissimos which should have satisfied the stylists, even though certain themes sounded a bit driven.

It was a performance to lift the spirit, and conveyed convincingly the inherent beauty of this particular symphony.

RUSSKY GOLOS — 6 — RUSSIAN DAILY ВОСКРЕСЕНЬЕ, 17 ИЮЛЯ 1955 ГОДА

Известный виолончелист Григорий Пятигорский выступит в 3-х концертах на Беркширском Фестивале. 31 июля Г. Пятигорский исполнит концерт Брамса для скрипки и виолончели.

[illegible]ЮМОР

Г. К.

МОЯ «ДЕКЛАРАЦИЯ»

(ЛИ[illegible]ЧЕСКИЙ ФЕЛЬЕТОН О «РУССКОМ ГОЛОСЕ»)

Гримасы бы[illegible] не жалея,
Размажет [illegible]тая печать,
Зато в мир[illegible]ассамблее
Она решил[illegible] промолчать.

⁂

Как будто [illegible] в Хельсинки речи
Не стоят [illegible]щества вниманья,
Борцов за [illegible]ир, как будто, вече
Дешевле [illegible]тнего купанья,

⁂

Дешевле [illegible]кта сумасброда,
Что [illegible] в чужие двери,
Дешевле третьего развода
Актрисы Бетси или Мэри;

⁂

Дешевле пива жалкой кружки,
Что стала центром общей драки,
Дешевле болтовни пьянчужки
[illegible] крепкой брани забияки...

⁂

Как будто, люди все уснули,
Оглохли, или обалдели,
И вздор в золоченой пилюле
Готовы лопать всю неделю.

⁂

Н[illegible] всех дурачить не так просто;
Не[illegible]я вторить ложь непрестанно;
Нам [illegible]инкольн истину поднес ту
В сло[illegible] простых довольно рано.

⁂

Читатель [illegible]желтую газету
Просмотри[illegible] вскользь без уваженья,
Не ищет пра[illegible] в ней, ни света,
А только спор[illegible]ль об'явленья.

⁂

И нам не надо п[illegible]одить
На милю [illegible]же к д[illegible]и это[illegible]
И надо всем [illegible] ДО[illegible]КИ[illegible]
Своей культурно[illegible]

⁂

Хотя у ней ни средств больших.
Ни даже малых, просто, нету,
Но для людей передовых
ОНА — МАЯК, СВОЯ ГАЗЕТА.

⁂

[illegible]
Ни лжи, ни оргий сексуальных,
Столбцы ее зато полны
Вестей с районов близких, дальных.

⁂

Из массы всяких новостей
Она все важное отметит
И все, что ценно для людей
С большою зоркостью заметит.

⁂

Находим в ней ПУЛЬС ЖИЗНИ мы,
Подход прямой к проблеме
спорной,
Борьбу с апостолами тьмы,
Что день за днем идет упорно.

⁂

В ней живо и правдиво все,
Толково, целеустремленно,
Не винегрет (и то, и се),
А мир, идеей освещенный.

⁂

Она—не «гарбэдж кэн» для нас,
Не ящик мусорных эмоций,
И учит нас статья, рассказ,
За что нам надобно бороться.

⁂

Такой мы пользы пятачком
Друзья, не купим, не оплатим,
Такого блага не найдем,
Коль больше в десять раз потратим.

⁂

ВЕРНЕМ же мы свой долг, друзья,
Долг старый спутнику и другу
ПОДДЕРЖКОЮ ДЕНЬ ИЗО ДНЯ
И в дни труда, и в дни досуга.

⁂

Поймут меня «Р. Г.» друзья,
Как пахарь колос нивы тучной,
Пусть «декларация» моя
Найдет в них отклик
ПОЛНОЗВУЧНЫЙ.

⁂

Газета наша пусть цветет,
Как тучной нивы пышный колос,
С ПОДДЕРЖКОЙ вашей
«Русский Голос»!

Черльз Мунч, дирижер Бостонского Симфонического Оркестра, дирижирует концертами на годичном Фестивале в Беркшире. — Сезон этих концертов на открытом воздухе, на холмах штата Массачузетс, длится с 6 июля по 14 августа.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 10 1955

A Conductor Speaks Up—Revealingly!

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, July 9.

VISITORS to Tanglewood for the annual Berkshire Festival this Summer will find reading Charles Munch's "I Am a Conductor" (Oxford) an excellent preparation for making the trip a richer experience. The musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has spoken out simply and directly, revealing not only much about the role of the conductor but also a great deal about an approach to music.

Knowing something about the man himself, his relation to the orchestra, and his concept of his work helps crystallize why the conductor has assumed the important place he holds in the world of music today. Simplicity is the essence of Munch, both man and artist, and dedication to the art the keynote to his interpretation of music: facts that subscribers to the concerts of the Boston Symphony should have learned by now. This little book simply puts them in tangible form that the reader may realize what leading an orchestra actually involves.

It Takes More Than Work and Study

The temptation to quote at length arises from how significantly Munch has stated the simple facts about conducting primarily and music indirectly.

"Conducting," he points out, "is not a profession at all but a sacred calling, sometimes a priesthood, and often even a disease . . . Fifteen years of work and study do not make a conductor of a man if he is not possessed by an inner exaltation, an all-consuming flame, and a magnetism that can bewitch both the musicians of his orchestra and the audience come to hear his music-making . . . The highest purpose of the conductor is to release the supernatural potential in every one of his musicians." That is no easy task in addition to mastering all the technical aspects of his work.

As for music, Munch notes that it is "an art that expresses the inexpressible. It rises far above what words can mean or the intelligence define. Its domain is the imponderable and impalpable land of the unconscious." Intangible as this statement may be, Munch firmly believes that people are "enriched, instructed, and fortified" by coming to concerts. A visit to Tanglewood confirms these thoughts as facts, especially with all nature to enhance the glory of the music.

Munch has imparted invaluable insight into the whole symphonic world through sharing his ideas about it in print.

BATON MASTER . . . Charles Munch, whom our critic Miles Kastendieck quotes at length in the column at the left, is Music Director of the Boston Symphony and conducts its concerts at the annual Berkshire Festival.

New York Journal-American, Sun., July 10,

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Bernstein Conducts at Tanglewood

Also Is Soloist in Mozart Program

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 16.—An all-Mozart program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Friday night, brought forward Leonard Bernstein in at least two of his musical manifestations, and nobly, too. He conducted the entire program and appeared as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major, K. 453. For good measure he also played the piano obbligato in the Scena and Rondo "Non Temer, Amato Bene," which was beautifully sung by Jennie Tourel.

The night, for all the charms elsewhere observable, was definitely his and, perhaps, it is not too soon to say that this prodigiously gifted young man, at long last, has come into his own. This was a dedicated Bernstein, a musician inspired, yet self-effacing, who worked exclusively in the cause of art—no corny emoting, no harlequinade on the podium or at the piano.

A Devoted Interpreter

The music of Mozart, it goes without saying, gained infinitely from its treatment by so devoted an interpreter. Whether in the Overture to "Don Giovanni," or the "Linz" Symphony, Mr. Bernstein obtained all the effects he was after, thanks to the jewel-mechanism response of the Boston Symphony, a chamber orchestra—and a perfect one—for this Theater-Concert Hall event.

The bright particular ornament of the evening was the performance by Mr. Bernstein, as conductor-soloist, and the orchestra of the Andante in the Piano Concerto. The limpid beauty of this section, with its tender warmth, was most affectingly rendered. Nor did the interpreters slight one detail of the lively interchange between piano and orchestra in the delicious theme - and - variations finale. The ensemble work in the concerto could scarcely have been improved upon, and at its conclusion the listener could truthfully say that he heard chamber music of the first order.

Miss Tourel's Performance

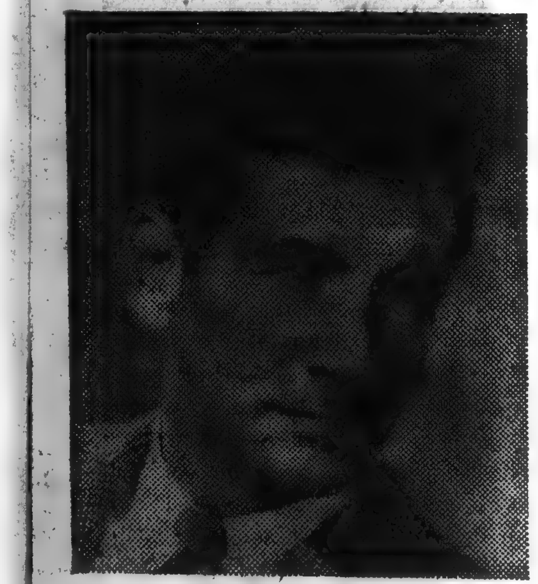
From Jennie Tourel, soprano (formerly mezzo-soprano), one normally expects singing of superior style and finish. No less so this time, for Miss Tourel delivered these pieces convincingly, Besides the Scena and Rondo aforementioned, she sang the aria, "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri," from "Idomeneo," and Rondo for Soprano and Orchestra, "Al Desio di Chi t'Adora." None of these, by the way, is a sinecure, and though one was made the more aware of the taxing demands in certain arduous passages by her careful approach to them, she negotiated all successfully.

An overflow audience of 3,129—the greater part of it settled in surrounding lawns—enjoyed the proceeding hugely, calling out Miss Tourel and Mr. Berstein for numerous bows. And these principals, in turn, generously called upon the orchestra to share the plaudits with them.

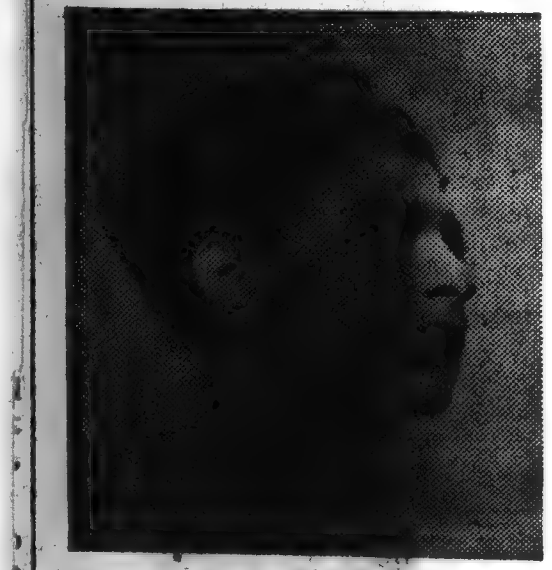
Thurs. July 14th

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Tanglewood Artists



Leonard Bernstein, eminent young American composer-pianist, heads the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood.



Jennie Tourel, noted soprano, returns to Tanglewood as soloist on the all-Mozart program which Leonard Bernstein conducts with the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Fri. eve. July 15, in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, "Al Desio" (k.577); "Zeffiretti" and "NZon Temer" from "Idomeneo."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 10 1955

Don Short's Trip of the Week:

Tanglewood Week End

THERE'S music in the air all Summer long in the Berkshires of Massachusetts and it emanates from the lovely rolling greens of Tanglewood, where Bach, Beethoven and a little bit of Respighi are offered for the enjoyment of music lovers.

The Berkshires are a center of cultural pursuits during the Summer months. There's the Tanglewood Music Festival, Jacobs Pillow Dance Festival and Summer theatre. Astor Concert Tours, through Ski Bird Tours, is offering a Summer-long series of packaged weekends specifically designed for the aesthetically-inclined.

A weekend in the Berkshires, including transportation by motor bus, tickets to two concerts and the dance festival, a room at the Wendell-Sherwood Hotel in Pittsfield, and Summer sports at Lake Pontoosuc will cost $31.70, minimum. The price varies according to the type of hotel accommodations occupied and the price ticket you want for the concerts.

The $2 general admission ticket to Tanglewood is one of the most pleasant ways to spend your money. You sit on the grass under the stars and listen to the music. If you like to watch the conductor and the musicians, you should buy a reserved seat within the Concert Hall, which will cost from $2.50 to $6.50.

Tours will leave every Friday at 6 p. m. from now through and including Aug. 11 from the Astor Travel Bureau, 1846 Broadway on 61st st.

Your travel agent will make your reservation for you and folders, including a concert schedule, will be sent to you by the New York Journal-American Travel Club, 316 W. 57th st.

NEW [illegible] N. Y.
POST
[illegible] 258,545
[illegible] 1955

Tanglewood Concerts on Air

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast by NBC radio, July 11 at 8:15 p.m., featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Thurs. July 14th

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Second Week of Berkshire Festival Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Grenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday (July13); and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer - conductor - pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, the ummer chool of muic maintained by the Boton Symphony Orchetra in conjunction with it Berkhire Festival concerts. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano.
Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idoméneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure Milhaud and Honneger.

All four of next week's Berkshire Festival concerts are given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 p.m., Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and in the event of rain the weekend concerts will be moved to the capacious Music Shed.

10 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Wednesday, July 13, 1955

TALKIN[illegible] IT OVER

Sibelius Selects Young F[illegible] To Study in Berkshire C[illegible]

By [illegible]A VAN WORMER

The Koussev[illegible] Music Foundation Scholarship for study in "Tanglewood," Le[illegible] Mass., during the Ber[illegible] Music Center summer session is [illegible] Eino Rautavaara, [illegible] [illegible]h composer nominated by th[illegible] ated composer Jea[illegible]

The world famous [illegible]sician will observe h[illegible] birthday on Dec. 8 ne[illegible] to be celebrated by th[illegible]ernational Sibelius Fes[illegible] Committee, with progr[illegible] Finnish music urged. C[illegible] of the committee is Mrs[illegible] Koussevitzky, widow of th[illegible] noted director of the [illegible] Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire [illegible] Festival. The traveling expenses of Rautavaara to and from Finland are defrayed by the Finland Foundation of New York. The Berkshire Scholarship offers full living expenses to the recipient.

Rautavaara is studying composition with Dr. Roger Sessions of Princeton, N. J. and with the German composer Boris Blacher. Following his "Tanglewood" stay, arrangements are with the Julliard School of Music in [illegible] York City for Rautavaara [illegible] continue studies in America. [illegible] teacher, Dr. Sessions is widely known here, having visit[illegible] quently in the home of his brother-in-law and sister Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shipman Andrews in Taunton. A few seasons ago, Dr. Sessions was at the piano for one of his compositions, Prof. Louis Krasner of Syracuse University playing the violin.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 12 1955

AtTanglewood onGrant

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 11.—Eino Rautavaara, twenty-six-year-old Finnish composer, has arrived at Tanglewood to study with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher in the current summer session of the Berkshire Music Center. He was nominated by Jean Sibelius for a scholarship with full living expenses offered by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation in co-operation with the Center; the Finlandia Foundation of New York is meeting his travel expenses. Arrangements are being made with the Juilliard School of Music for Mr. Rautavaara to continue his studies in America this fall.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 8 1955

Leonard Bernsteins Welcome 2d Child

Felicia Monteleagre, actress wife of composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein gave birth to a boy in Doctors Hospital yesterday, the parents announced early today. The father who has been attending the Berkshire music festival at Tanglewood, raced back to the city to be on hand. It is their second child.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 5 1955

Kroll String Quartet to Open Berkshire Concert Season

The Berkshire Festival Concerts will open tomorrow with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced 24 concerts during the festival season which will continue to Aug. 14.

The programs for the first two weeks will be held in the 1,200 Theatre-Concert hall with evening programs at 8:30 o'clock and Sunday afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

This week's program will include the program tomorrow night, a chamber orchestra program of Boston Symphony players in music by Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart on Friday night; a chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemeith Saturday evening with Thor Johnson as conductor.

Sunday afternoon Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in the Bach "Mass in B minor" with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. Soloists for the Bach will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

THE FINAL FOUR weekends of the festival, July 22 through Aug. 14, will bring the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra for the 12 weekend concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

The festival concerts for this season as planned by Conductor Munch will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symphonies; "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance; the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis." During the Wednesday evening series the programs will include a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and the violin, piano and cello sonatas.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 11 1955

ON RADIO

WAAT .. 970	WHOM ..1480	WNEW .1130	WPAT .. 930
WABC .. 770	WINS ...1010	WNIR ...1430	WQXR ..1560
WBNX ..1380	WLIB ...1190	WNYC .. 830	WRCA .. 660
WCBS .. 880	[illegible]	[illegible] 710	WVNJ .. 620
WEVD [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	WWRL ..1600

3:30-3:45—Presenting Claude Rains in a series of dramatic readings. To be heard Monday through Friday—(WRCA) (Première).

4-5—Colgate University Conference on American Foreign Policy continues with a discussion of "The Strengths and Weaknesses of Our Foreign Policy." Senator Hubert Humphrey and Columnist Doris Fleeson are speakers. Paul L. Martin is chairman—(WNYC).

7-7:30—Summer Serenade: With Guy Lombardo and Jim Coy in a nightly series, Monday through Friday—(WRCA) (Première).

7:30-8—Fifty Years of Opera: George Marek interviews Musicologist Philip Miller in discussion of the third decade (1920-30)—(WQXR).

8:05-9—Symphony Hall: Rudolf Serkin plays Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 with the Philadelphia Orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy—(WQXR).

8:15-9:30—Berkshire Festival: Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bach's Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings; Mozart's Symphony No. 35 in D—(WRCA) (Première).

8:30-9—Concert: Howard Barlow conducts the orchestra in an all-request program. Members of the chorus are featured singers in this simulcast—(WABC).

[illegible]—Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts—(WCBS).

[illegible]—Colgate University Conference on American Foreign Policy: Edgar R. [illegible], Time-Life International, leads a discussion on "How Can We Achieve Peace and Stability in Asia?" Speakers are Gaganvihari L. Mehta, Ambassador from India; New York Attorney General Jacob K. Javits; Sir Percy C. Spender, Ambassador from Australia—(WNYC).

9-9:30—Telephone Hour: Lubon Vichey, Metropolitan Opera basso, sings selections from "The Magic Flute" and "Faust." Donald Voorhees conducts the orchestra at Carnegie Hall—(WRCA).

9:30-10—Band of America: Paul Lavalle leads the band in a program ranging from motion picture music to opera ballet—(WRCA).

10:30-11—All-Star Baseball Preview: With guests, including Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick, League Presidents Will Harridge and Warren Giles, Team Managers Al Lopez and Leo Durocher—From Milwaukee—(WOR).

11:07-12—Music for Orchestra: Appalachia, by Delius—(WQXR).

12:05-12:30—Wheel of Fortune: New record releases, with Jack O'Reilly—(WOR) (Première).

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

JUL 3 1955

Music

Ne[illegible]e [illegible]le of 'Merry [illegible]dow'

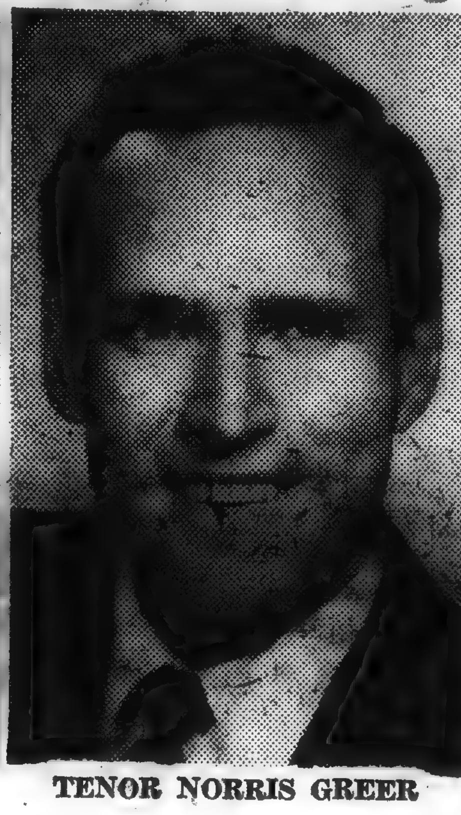
By E. V. W.

The Finger Lakes Lyric Circus presentation of Franz Lehar's operetta "The Merry Widow," will open Tuesday night in The Tent near Skaneateles and will run through next Sunday night, July 10, with Saturday matinee. Tonight, with curtain at 7:30 o'clock, marks final performance of Rodgers & Hammerstein's "South Pacific" in the Circus, closing a two-weeks' run.

The cast of "The Merry Widow" will include Jen Nelson, popular and personable soprano as Sonia; Ralph Magelssen as Danilo; Norris Greer as Jolidon. Miss Nelson and Greer are favorites with Lyric audiences; Magelssen, a newcomer, toured 77,000 miles in "This Is the Army" and has starred in the Paper Mill Playhouse, as well as in opera companies in Memphis, Louisville, Dallas and Cleveland.

Other principals: Claire Alexander as Natalie; Leslie Litomy as Popoff and Lionel Wilson as Nisch. Ray O'Brien conducts. Weekdays curtain is 8:30. Among the numerous song hits in the score: "Maxim's," "Vilia," "Women, Women," "Valse Duet" and "Love in My Heart."

SOPRANO JEN NELSON



TENOR NORRIS GREER

The Berkshire Music Center, summer school for music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra annually since 1940 in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will benefit from a series of grants from the Rockefeller Foundation. The five appropriations, commencing this summer and extending over a period of five years, can amount to $125,000. The Foundation will donate a sum matching equally money raised from other sources for support of the only school of music in this country maintained by a symphony orchestra. The Rockefeller Foundation appropriations will be made annually.

This date in music: 1848, Thedore Presser born. He became founder of the Presser Co. in Philadelphia, publisher of Etude. Mr. Presser established the fund, bearing his name, in aid of musicians.

The 1955 pattern of concerts in The Shed by the 104 piece Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, calls for four weekends starting July 22 and closing Aug. 14 with symphonic programs Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein. The Berkshire Festival Shed series is preceded by two weekends by the Chamber Section of the Boston Symphony, with Bach-Mozart concerts given in the Theater Concert Hall under direction of Conductor Munch with Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Hugh Ross guest conductors.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 9 1955

Chamber Group Concerts Continue At Tanglewood

The Second Chamber Orchestra concert in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson, guest conductor, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30.

Mr. Johnson, who is music director of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was the very first student accepted for study at the Berkshire Music Center and he attended the sessions of 1940 and 1941 as a conducting pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center. During the war he spent four years in the Army Signal Corps and during this period, with the Army's permission, he fileld his first big guest engagement with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Chicago Symphony, the New York Philharmonic and the Boston "Pops."

At the concert tonight, Mr. Johnson will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 in B Minor; the Sinfonia Concertante in B Flat with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin and Cello by Haydn; Hindemith's Concerto for Viola and Orchestra, "Der Schwanendreher," with Joseph de Pasquale as soloist; and Haydn's Symphony No. 98 in B Flat. Both the Hindemith Concerto and the Haydn Symphony will be receiving their first Tanglewood performances.

CONDUCTOR JOHNSON

The noted young American conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, Thor Johnson, a former student of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Chamber Orchestra next Saturday night in the Theater Concert Hall, the program including compositions by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith with Joseph de Pasquale, principal violinist, of the Orchestra as soloist.

Other soloists during weekends in the Theater Concert Hall programs will be Bernstein, who will be piano soloist as well as conductor on July 15, an all-Mozart program, with soprano Jennie Tourel, Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, vocalists, and from the first chairs of the Boston Symphony, in addition to de Pasquale, Samuel Mayes, cellist and Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist.

There will be six Wednesday night chamber music concerts with proceeds going to the Berkshire Music Center's Revolving Scholarship fund. These will be devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. Performers: Rudolf Serkin, Isaac Stern, Gregor Piatigorsky, the Kroll String Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio and the New Music String Quartet.

8 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Friday, July 15, 1955

TALKING IT OVER

GI Recently Separated From Army, Wins Berkshire Award

Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, son of Mrs. Charlotte Schermerhorn, 914 Hazelwood Ave., Schenectady, until recently in the Army, today will receive the annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center.

The scholarship was instituted last year by residents of Berkshire County, Mass., to train under the noted young American conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein. Donors of the scholarship thus express their gratitude to the students in Berkshire Music Center who come from many lands and who give weekly symphonic programs in Tanglewood, with audiences of 3,000, mostly within a radius of 50 miles. The scholarship is a memorial to Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony, who instituted symphony concerts by students in the Symphony's summer home. Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, Mass., heads the scholarship committee.

* * *

Graduates from the podium in "Tanglewood" include such distinguished conductors as Maestro Bernstein, Thor Johnson, Cincinnati; Walter Hendl, Dallas and Chautauqua; Lukas Foss, Los Angeles; Eleazer de Carvalho, Rio de Janiero; Robert Whitney, Louisville; Richard Bales, National Gallery, Washington, D. C.; Thomas Schippers, New York City and Metropolitan Opera Companies; Robert Zeller, Sadlers Wells Ballet, and Herman Herz, Duluth.

* * *

Recently Kenneth Schermerhorn made his debut on the Music Shed podium in Tanglewood, opening the student concert program with Brahms "Tragic Overture." He has former associations with Tanglewoodand the Boston Symphony. He studied three years in the New England Conservatory in Boston and did private work with Roger Voisin, first trumpet, and Gaston DuFresne, bass player of The Boston. He was with the Kansas City, Mo., Symphony for a season under Hans Schweiger.

Last spring when Schermerhorn was in the U. S. Army in Milan, Italy, he met Bernstein, who recommended he return to Tanglewood this summer. Bernstein was guest conducting the famous La Scala Opera House orchestra, and Schermerhorn, a sergeant first class in the U. S. Army, was in the Italian city to give a concert with the 7th Army Symphony Orchestra, composed of enlisted men. Recognizing his musical talents after he had been in khaki a couple of years in West Germany, where he had an opportunity also to study at the Munich and Stuttgart Staatsoper, Army officials with the approval of the U. S. State Department put Schermerhorn in charge of a 70-piece orchestra to travel through Europe and perform Symphonic works, as evidence of the cultural maturity of American music and musicians.

From June, 1954, to May, 1955, Schermerhorn conducted 80 concerts in Germany, Austria, Italy, France, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the repertory consisting of some 25 standards, Beethoven, Mozart, Brahms symphonies, violin concertos, and including 10 contemporary works composed in the U. S. by Copland, Barber, Hindemith, Bartok. The Army symphony also accompanied a small group performing Menotti operas. Two honors befell the young conductor's way while in uniform. He was invited to conduct two performances of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio" in Passau, in Bavaria, at last summer's music festival. He was also chosen one of three outstanding young conductors of the year, along with James Dixon, a pupil of Dimitri Mitropoulos, and Christopher Whelan, of England, for the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge award.

SCHERMERHORN

* * *

Show Paintings In 'Tanglewood' Glassed Hall

In the glassed exhibition hall at the main gate at "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., starting tomorrow and continuing a week, paintings of the weather by Berkshire artist [illegible] C. Siber of Mill River, Mass., will be on display in conjunction with Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Commencing this week-end and continuing through the close of the Festival on Aug. 14, the formal gardens in "Tanglewood" will display also five large pieces of outdoor sculpture by Peter Abate of Brookline, Mass. Sculptor Abate's Carrara marble work "The Pearl" attracted much favorable comment last summer in "Tanglewood." Abate also will be represented later this summer in the Berkshire center by an exhibition of portraits of people in the musical world.

[illegible] designed and [illegible] memorial for Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the Boston Symphony, the marble being on the conductor's grave near Church-on-the-Hill, Lenox. This year Abate had a one-man show in Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts which bought the "K-Night" in black Carrarra marble for the permanent exhibit. Syracuse University gallery also showed Abate sculptures.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 2 1955

Tanglewood to Offer First Program Wednesday

Tanglewood will present its first program of the season Wednesday night and its first weekend of music July 8, 9 and 10.

The Wednesday program will be the first of six Wednesday nights devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. Performing will be the Kroll String Quartet.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts will open July 8 in the theater-concert hall. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the opening program of two Bach works, the Prague Symphony of Mozart and Stravinsky's "Orpheus."

Saturday night, July 9, Thor Johnson, former student at Tanglewood and conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony since 1947, will conduct works of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Joseph DePasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be the soloist.

The Sunday afternoon program of that weekend will present the Bach in B minor with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society under the direction of Mr. Munch. Soloists will be Adele Addison, John McCollum, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm.

A second series of programs will be presented in the theater-concert hall July 15, 16 and 17.

Beginning July 22, the full Boston Symphony will be at Tanglewood for four weekends. All nine Beethoven symphonies will be presented this season.

Mr. Munch will conduct the symphonies, while in other programs Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein will conduct.

THOR JOHNSON

JOSEPH DE PASQUALE

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 10 1955

Berkshire Festival Programs Listed For Second Week

LENOX, Mass. — The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony next Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchesra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts.

The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini.

---

p Agency, Inc.
Ichmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 13 1955

Beaux Arts Trio Opens Tonight At Lenox Festival

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m.

At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists.

On Friday evening (July 15) the second and final weekend of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist.

Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist; and on Sunday afternoon (July 17) the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 13 1955

Beaux Arts Trio At Lenox Tonight

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 13 1955

Dr. and Mrs. Baxter Tanglewood Boxholders

Dr. James P. Baxter, 3rd, president of Williams college, and Mrs. Baxter are the only Northern Berkshire residents who will be boxholders for the 12 major concerts of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, this season. The boxholders for the major concerts which open in the huge Tanglewood music shed Friday evening of next week, were announced today.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

JUL 13 1955

Chamber Music Ends This Week At Tanglewood

The Bach - Mozart chamber orchestra concerts by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony, [illegible] this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Saturday, beginning at 8:30, the program will be devoted to Italian composers. It will offer the Concerto Grosso in D, Opus 3, No. 11, the Concerto Grosso in B Minor and the "Gloria," all by Vivaldi; and the Boccherini Concerto for 'Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist.

Sunday at 2:30, the program will feature French music, including a Suite from Rameau's "Dardanus;" Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" a Pavane by Faure; a Serenade by Milhaud; and Honegger's Symphony No. 4.

8 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Friday, July 15, 1955

TALKING IT OVER

GI Recently Separated From Army, Wins Berkshire Award

Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, son of Mrs. Charlotte Schermerhorn, 913 Hazelwood Ave., Schenectady, until recently in the Army, today will receive the annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center.

The scholarship was instituted last year by residents of Berkshire County, Mass., to train under the noted young American conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein. Donors of the scholarship thus express their gratitude to the students in Berkshire Music Center who come from many lands and who give weekly symphonic programs in Tanglewood, with audiences of 3,000, mostly within a radius of 50 miles. The scholarship is a memorial to Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony, who instituted symphony concerts by students in the Symphony's summer home. Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, Mass., heads the scholarship committee.

Graduates from the podium in "Tanglewood" include such distinguished conductors as Maestro Bernstein, Thor Johnson, Cincinnati; Walter Hendl, Dallas and Chautauqua; Lukas Foss, Los Angeles; Eleazer de Carvalho, Rio de Janiero; Robert Whitney, Louisville; Richard Bales, National Gallery, Washington, D. C.; Thomas Schippers, New York City and Metropolitan Opera Companies; Robert Zeller, Sadlers Wells Ballet, and Herman Herz, Duluth.

Recently Kenneth Schermerhorn made his debut on the Music Shed podium in Tanglewood, opening the student concert program with Brahms "Tragic Overture." He has former associations with Tanglewoodand the Boston Symphony. He studied three years in the New England Conservatory in Boston and did private work with Roger Voisin, first trumpet, and Gaston DuFresne, bass player of The Boston. He was with the Kansas City, Mo., Symphony for a season under Hans Schweiger.

Last spring when Schermerhorn was in the U. S. Army in Milan, Italy, he met Bernstein, who recommended he return to Tanglewood this summer. Bernstein was guest conducting the famous La Scala Opera House orchestra, and Schermerhorn, a sergeant first class in the U. S. Army, was in the Italian city to give a concert with the 7th Army Symphony Orchestra, composed of enlisted men. Recognizing his musical talents after he had been in khaki a couple of years in West Germany, where he had an opportunity also to study at the Munich and Stuttgart Staatsoper, Army officials with the approval of the U. S. State Department put Schermerhorn in charge of a 70-piece orchestra to travel through Europe and perform Symphonic works, as evidence of the cultural maturity of American music and musicians.

From June, 1954, to May, 1955, Schermerhorn conducted 80 concerts in Germany, Austria, Italy, France, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the repertory consisting of some 25 standards, Beethoven, Mozart, Brahms symphonies, violin concertos, and including 10 contemporary works composed in the U. S. by Copland, Barber, Hindemith, Bartok. The Army symphony also accompanied a small group performing Menotti operas. Two honors befell the young conductor's way while in uniform. He was invited to conduct two performances of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio" in Passau, in Bavaria, at last summer's music festival. He was also chosen one of three outstanding young conductors of the year, along with James Dixon, a pupil of Dimitri Mitropoulos, and Christopher Whelan, of England, for the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge award.

SCHERMERHORN

* *

Show Paintings In 'Tanglewood' Glassed Hall

In the glassed exhibition hall at the main gate at "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., starting tomorrow and continuing a week, paintings of the weather by Berkshire artist [illegible] of Mill River, Mass., will be on display in conjunction with Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Commencing this week-end and continuing through the close of the Festival on Aug. 14, the formal gardens in "Tanglewood" will display also five large pieces of outdoor sculpture by Peter Abate of Brookline, Mass. Sculptor Abate's Carrara marble work, "The Beast," attracted much favorable comment last summer in "Tanglewood." Abate also [illegible] represented later this summer in the Berkshire center [illegible] an exhibition of portraits of people in the musical world, [illegible] and [illegible] Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the Boston Symphony, the marble being on the conductor's grave near Church-on-the-Hill, Lenox. This year Abate had a one-man show in Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts which bought the "K-Night" in black Carrara marble for the permanent exhibit. Syracuse University gallery also showed Abate sculptures.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,205

JUL 2 1955

Tanglewood to Offer First Program Wedn

Tanglewood will present its first program of the season Wednesday night and its first weekend of music July 8, 9 and 10.

The Wednesday program will be the first of six Wednesday nights devoted to Beethoven's chamber music. Performing will be the Kroll String Quartet.

The "Bach-Mozart" concerts will open July 8 in the theater-concert hall. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the opening program of two Bach works, the Prague Symphony of Mozart and Stravinsky's "Orpheus."

Saturday night, July 9, Thor Johnson, former student at Tanglewood and conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony since 1947, will conduct works of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Joseph DePasquale, first violist of the Boston Symphony, will be the soloist.

The Sunday afternoon program of that weekend will present the Bach in B minor with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society under the direction of Mr. Munch. Soloists will be Adele Addison, John McCollum, Florence Kopleff and Donald Gramm.

A second series of programs will be presented in the theater-concert hall July 15, 16 and 17.

Beginning July 22, the full Boston Symphony will be at Tanglewood for four weekends. All nine Beethoven symphonies will be presented this season.

THOR JOHNSON

JOSEPH DE PASQUALE

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 10 1955

Berkshire Festival Programs Listed For Second Week

LENOX, Mass. — The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, comprises an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano) on Wednesday and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony next Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads the department or orchestra and conducting of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist, the program designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orcheara, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts.

The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 13 1955

Beaux Arts Trio Opens Tonight At Lenox Festival

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30 p.m.

At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists.

On Friday evening (July 15) the second and final weekend of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist.

Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist; and on Sunday afternoon (July 17) the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 13 1955

Beaux Arts Trio At Lenox Tonight

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,326

JUL 13 1955

Dr. and Mrs. Baxter Tanglewood Boxholders

Dr. James P. Baxter, 3rd, president of Williams college, and Mrs. Baxter are the only Northern Berkshire residents who will be boxholders for the 12 major concerts of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, this season. The boxholders for the major concerts which open in the huge Tanglewood music shed Friday evening of next week, were announced today.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

JUL 13 1955

Chamber Music Ends This Week At Tanglewood

The Bach-Mozart chamber orchestra concerts by Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony, [illegible] this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Saturday, beginning at 8:30, the program will be devoted to Italian composers. [illegible] will offer the Concerto Grosso in D, Opus 3, No. 11, the Concerto Grosso in B Minor and the "Gloria," all by Vivaldi, and the Boccherini Concerto for 'Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist.

Sunday at 2:30, the program will feature French music, including a Suite from Rameau's "Dardanus;" Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" a Payane by Faure; a Serenade by Milhaud; and Honegger's Symphony No. 4.

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 61,159

JUL 1 0 1955

TURNING THE DIALS

BY FRED H. RUSSELL

Bob Dixon is one of the "non-glamorous" category of radio stars. The affable, good-humored host of CBS radio's "Rhythm on the Road," heard Sunday afternoon, has passed the most difficult test of them all. The engineers say "He's on at least 15 radio programs and seven television programs a week, and he still wears the same size hat." Robert Roy Dixon was born on a farm near Stamford. The good looking six-foot, four-inch 238-pounder attended the Tennessee Military Institute, Virginia Military Institute and Springfield (Mass.) college. He received a BS degree in physical education and an MA in education.

Not long after he finished school, Dixon took the plunge into learning radio. In 1941, he found himself in Holyoke, Mass., working at WHYN, a radio station he helped to found.

"I worked at everything, from radio time salesman to engineer," he recalls.

Though his college training centered around athletics, his business interests channelled into radio, because, as Mr. Dixon puts it, "I love to sell, and I believe that radio is the best medium, not only for selling but for preparing the customer for the sale. I've had this thought since I first started in radio and I still believe it. As for my college interests, boxing and football, I guess I've outgrown them."

He says he will not accept a product that he is not reasonably sure he can sell.

"And that policy has paid off," he says. "I get mail from housewives thanking me for telling them about my products. Many of them say they prefer my word over that of their husbands, on advice about the products that I am selling."

Dixon still works on his farm near Stamford. He breeds and raises Aberdeen Angus cattle, chickens, turkeys and pheasants, and for his pet project he breeds Palomino horses. He also does extensive truck farming.

In 1942 Dixon worked for WTAG, the CBS station in Worcester, Mass. He left in 1944 and went to CBS radio in New York, working on "Hobby Lobby."

"I learned to be a magician, somewhere along the way, and I used magic tricks to warm up the studio audience," he recalls with a chuckle. Other hobbies included gun collecting, camping, canoeing and hunting.

Dixon lives on his farm with his wife Phyllis. They have two children, Roy, who is studying geology at Darmouth and Roberta, a Stamford High school student.

About "Rhythm on the Road," Mr. Dixon says he doesn't know a thing about music. "I wouldn't know a quarter-note if I fell over one," he explains, "but I certainly enjoy listening to the good music sung and played by the musical cast on the program."

Civil Defense

The vital question, "Where Do We Stand on Civil Defense?" will be the subject discussed on America's Town Meeting of the Air tonight from 8 to 9 o'clock over WNAB and WABC.

Val Peterson, Civil Defense administrator, Mayor August Walz of Wilmington, Del., and Congressman Daniel Flood (D-Penn.) will be the guests. Gummar Back will be the moderator.

The program will originate from Washington, D. C.

Foreign Policy

Devoting 10 hours of airtime for important addresses by leading world figures, WNYC will broadacst sessions of the Colgate University Conference on American Foreign Policy, today through Thursday. With the theme of "Peace Through Strength," the seventh annual conference at Hamilton, N. Y., will attepmt to evaluate recent actions relating to our foreign policy, particularly in relation to the Far East.

Speakers will include political and diplomatic representatives of the U. S. State department and official representatives or more than 30 foreign nations, with more than 200 delegates from a majority of the countries outside the Iron Curtain to be in attendance at the five-day conference.

Rep. Hugh Scott, of Pennsylvania, former chairman of the Republican National commitee, will be the opening speaker at today's session on "Basic Tenets of Our Foreign Policy," which will be broadcast from 10 to 10:55 p.m.

Boston Symphony

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in the first broadcast concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tomorrow night over WRCA radio at 8:15 o'clock.

The concerts in the series, each 45 minutes long, are recorded especiall for broadcast at Tanglewood, which thousands of music lovers visit for the musical events.

Munch will conduct the orchestra, reduced in size, for this special Bach-Mozart program. The concert will open with Bach's "Suite No. 2 in B Minor for Flute and Strings" with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist. The remainder of the broadcast will be devoted to Mozart's "Symphony No. 38 in D" subtitled the "Prague" symphony.

Shakespeare Music

The Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Drama and Music at Stratford, Oontario, Canada, will be the site of four special Saturday night concerts to be heard on WOR radio from 10 to 11 p.m., begining next Saturday night.

The Festival replaces the vacationing CBS Symphony orchestra which returns to the schedule on Oct. 1.

The initial broadcast will present the Hart House orchestra conducted by Boyd Neel and feature Isaac Stern and Alexander Schneider, violin soloists.

TV SETS INCREASE

Television installations in the U. S. increased 291,000 during May, to reach a total of 36,100,000 as of June 1, 1955, according to an estimate released today by Hugh B. Beville, director of research and planning for the National Broadcasting company.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,951

JUL 11 1955

Bach Mass Impressive At Festival

Those interested in the choral tradition of America, in musical standards and achievements among American college students as illustrated by undergraduates from two institutions of learning on the river Charles or in the continuing substantial contributions to civilization in these United States made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its Berkshire Festival, or in all three, will be glad to hear of the climactic concert, Sunday afternoon, of the festival's first week.

Johann Sebastian Bach's great Mass in B minor received a performance of authority, brilliant and deeply reverent, forceful and tenderly intimate as the sections of this work of mystic grandeur and beauty demand. The Boston Symphony, reduced in size for the occasion, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass, were the performers whom Charles Munch, the conductor, directed in this great re-creation.

Description of the excellent work of the choristers must be limited to the inspiring heights of the Credo; the tenderly simple Et Incarnatus Est, the intensely yearning sadness of the Crucifixus with its Et Sepultus Est, one of the supreme moments in music, and the brilliant outburst of Easter gladness, not at all diminished by the trumpets soaring to high D's of the Resurrexit. Trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, their security and enthusiasm were a joy to hear and to behold; a contributing factor to yesterday's achievement was the fact that this was their fifth concert performance of the Mass this season. Mention must be made of the need in occasional passages for more fullness in the tenor section, greater depth in the bass, that the addition of the voices of some older men would have provided.

The contributions of all the soloists were on the high plane set by the conductor, the orchestra and the chorus but notice must be taken of the final solo section, Agnus Dei, reserved by Bach for the alto; Miss Kopleff filled its sweeping phrases with the atmosphere of peace and reconciliation. The obligato passages of the concert master, the flute, horn and oboi d'Amore soloists were distguished and Power Biggs' organ continuous were most discreet, those of Daniel Pinkham on the harpsichord full of vigor and brightness.

The soloists joined the chorus in the Dona Nobis Pacem, in breadth and austerity more a song of praise than of prayer, to bring to a close a memorable afternoon of music.

G.M.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 11 1955

Thor Johnson Handles Baton At Tanglewood

Saturday night at Tanglewood was one seemingly dedicated to the letter H. A hot humid night, harmoniously made up of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Thor Johnson, youthful conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was guest interpreter of the evening and showed himself to be more than able as alternate to the celebrated Boston Symphony orchestra director, Charles Munch.

We could not stay to hear the final word, Haydn's "Symphony in B Flat Major, No. 8, but feel sure that Mr. Johnson and members of the famed orchestra gave all they could summon in spite of the warmth of the evening.

The large first Saturday night audience of this season, totaling 3,000, many of whom were enthroned outside on the spacious green lawns, were very enthusiastic over Mr. Johnson's approach and treatment of the works in the first half of the program.

Handel's Concerto Grosso for string orchestra, in B Minor, Op. 6, No. 12, opened the program. This last of the concerti grossi of Handel has a brightness, buoyancy and grace which Mr. Johnson outlined in an expressive freshness of manner which was aided and abetted by the concertino and string orchestra. Haydn's Symbolic Concertante for Violin, Cello, Oboe and Bassoon, Op. 84, contained some very pleasurable listening mainly in a variety of tonal combinations in the solo instruments.

At the start of the second movement there is a short duet between the violin and bassoon which was intriguing indeed. Der Schwanendreher, Concerto on Old Folk Melodies for Viola and Small Orchestra, by Paul Hindemith was chiefly remarkable, not in itself as much as, for the artistically beautiful viola playing of Joseph De Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Here, as in the Haydn work, a duet between the soloist and, in this case, the harpist was very nice, making up partially for a difficult first movement. The third movement was the most robust of the three and slightly less enjoyable than the second. Hindemith has among his compositions others with more audience appeal.

Sunday afternoon's performance of Bach's B Minor Mass with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm and accompanied by an ensemble made up of first desk performers of the Boston Symphony, was an immensely rewarding endeavor.—F. M. [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 13 1955

Weekly Painting Exhibit On Again at Tanglewood

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture, prints and photographs again is a feature of the Berkshire Music festival season, housed in the reception hall at the main gate at Tanglewood, Lenox. The exhibits are arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

On display this week are contemporary prints by noted modern artists, lent by Ferdinand Roten, print dealer of Baltimore, Md. From July 16-23, Helmut Siber of Mill River will display a collection entitled "Paintings of the Weather." July 23-30 will be devoted to small sculpture by Peter Abate, Brookline, and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge.

During the week July 30-Aug. 6, paintings, drawings and prints will be shown by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz school of art at the Lenox school. A showing of sculpture and drawings by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox, director of the Sculpture workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox library gardens will complete the summer shows the week of Aug. 6-14. A collection of photographs of Tanglewood personalities, Boston Symphony orchestra personnel, staff and students of the Berkshire Music center, by Gus Manos, official Tanglewood photographer, from Columbia, S. C., will be held during mid-season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 13 1955

Modern Artists Exhibit Prints At Tanglewood

An exhibition of nine contemporary prints by noted modern artists is on exhibition this week (until Saturday, July 16), at the exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The print show, as well as succeeding exhibits of paintings, sculpture and photographs from now until the close of the Festival Aug. 14, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

On loan from the collection of Ferdinand Roten, Baltimore, Md., are Bonnard's "Man With a Dog," a four-color lithograph; a Braque etching from the Theogonie series; a Matisse, "Head With a Hand" lithograph; Toulouse-Lautrec: "Entree de Brasseur," a valuable limited edition 1895 lithograph; Vuillard's lithograph "Lisez la Revue Blanche, Freres"; a Daumier lithograph; and three Chagalls: "The Upset of the Coach" from Gogol's "Dead Soul" on Japan paper, and two from his Bible series, "Abraham's Offering of Isaac" and "Abraham."

The Tanglewood exhibition hall next will house a series "Paintings of the Weather" by Berkshire county artist Helmut Siber of Mill River from July 16-23.

FINAL PROGRAMS IN BERKSHIRE CHAMBER SERIES

Wusted 7/16/55

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi, his Concerti Grossi Nos. 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (harmonica inspiration), and the "Gloria" mass in D major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire festival chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire music center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccerini's cello concerto in B flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. [illegible] the D minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

[202]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 13 1955

New Concert Trio Opens Second Tanglewood Week

Beaux Arts Instrumental Group Continues Beethoven Chamber Music Cycle in Theater-Concert Hall Series

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet which inaugurated this summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major; and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

New Ensemble

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the NBC Symphony Orchestra, now called the "Symphony of the Air." He has just returned from that orchestra's extensive tour of the Far East, concerts having been given in Japan, Korea, Burma, Ceylon, Formosa, Okinawa, Siam, French Indo-China and Hawaii.

Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juiliard and Manhattan schools of music.

Israeli Pianist

The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening the second and final week-end of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist. Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist; and on Sunday afternoon the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

SCREEN TIME

LOEW'S POLI—"Seven Year Itch," 11.42, 3, 6.08, 9.26; "Angela," 1.32, 4.40, 7.58.

PARAMOUNT — "Naked Amazon," 11.04, 1.45, 4.26, 7.07, 9.48; "I Cover the Underworld," 12.26, 3.07, 5.48, 8.29.

CAPITOL—"Foxfire," 12.40, 3.40, 6.40, 9.30; "Abbott and Costello Meet the Mummy," 11.15, 2.10, 5.10, 8.10.

BIJOU—"Big Street," 12, 3.10, 6.20, 9.30; "Berlin Express," 1.30, 4.40, 7.50.

ART — "Hiroshima," 6.40, 9.30; "Mystery Lake," 5.35, 8.05.

ARCADE—"Strategic Air Command," 1.25, 5.15, 9.05; "Magnificent Matador," 11.30, 3.30, 7.20.

BING—"Strategic Air Command," 2.10, 6.30, 9.05; Shorts, 1.30, 8.20.

PHILLIPS—"Kiss Me Deadly," 3, 8.15; "Jump Into Hell," 1.30, 7.45, 10.

JEFFERSON—"This Is My Love," 7; "The Big Combo," 8.40.

MAJESTIC, West Springfield—"A Man Called Peter," 8; "Masterson of Kansas," 6.30, 9.40.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 13 1955

Berkshire Festival 2nd Week Concerts Will Open Tonight

The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Music festival will begin this evening at 8.30 with a concert by the Beaux Arts trio in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Beaux Arts Trio

Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll string quartet which inaugurated this summer's festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven. At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, 'cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven, the trio in C minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" trio in D major; and the "Archduke" trio in B flat.

The Beaux Arts trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the NBC symphony orchestra, now called the Symphony of the Air. He has just returned from that orchestra's tour of the Far East.

Since his New York Town hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music.

Israeli Pianist

The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying fro Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

On Friday evening the second and final week-end of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist. Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon the series of six chamber orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony orchestra during the Berkshire festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, where telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 15 1955

Student Conductor Scholarship Winner

The annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Charles Munch, director, has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, of Schenectady, N.Y., it was announced today.

The scholarship was instituted last year by Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County to express their gratitude for concerts of symphony music performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center from the U.S., Canada and many foreign lands, who train under the young American composer-conductor, Leonard Bernstein. During the six-week session of the music school weekly symphonic programs are given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Thursday nights, and on the final Saturday, August 13, of the Berkshire Festival, attracting an average audience of 3000 persons, mostly within a radius of 50 miles.

The scholarship was organized as a memorial to the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who instituted student symphony concerts in 1940.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4300

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 14 1955

Audience of 1,255 At Tanglewood Hears 3 Beethoven Trios

An audience of 1,255 persons at Tanglewood, Lenox, last evening heard the Beaux Arts trio present the second of the series of six concerts of chamber music scheduled during the annual Berkshire Music festival season.

Some on Lawns

The attendance just about equaled the capacity of the theater-concert hall where the program was presented, but despite the cool evening air some of the crowd chose to hear the concert from the lawns around the building.

The small ensemble played three of Beethoven's trios, in C minor, in D major, known as the "Ghost" trio, and in B flat, called the "Archduke" trio.

Tomorrow evening, a small orchestra composed of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will open the second week-end series of concerts in the theater-music hall, preliminary to the 12 major festival concerts in the music shed.

Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire music center conductors' school and protege of the late Serge Koussevitzky for whom he has just named a new-born son, will conduct the orchestra in an all-Mozart program. It will include the overture to the opera "Don Giovanni" in its first Tanglewood performance, the C-major symphony, No. 36, and the piano concerto in G major in wihch Mr. Bernstein will play the piano part and conduct the orchestra from the piano. Between the symphony and this work, Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, will sing three Mozart arias, two from the opera "Idomeneo," "Zeffiretti" and "Non temer") and the concert aria, "Al desio."

Saturday Evening

On Saturday evening, in the second of this week-end's small concerts, Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in a performance of two concerti grossi by Vivaldi, Boccherini's concerto for 'cello with Samuel Mayes of the Boston symphony as soloist, and Vivaldi's "Gloria" with the Music center chorus, conducted by Hugh Ross, assisting.

The Sunday afternoon program, winding up the six preliminary small concerts of this festival season, also will be conducted by Mr. Munch. It will include Rameau's Suite "Dardanus" Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's Pavane, Milhaud's Serenade, and Honegger's Fourth symphony.

Next week's program will consist of a chamber music concert Wednesday evening and the first three major festival concerts in the huge music shed by the Boston Symphony orchestra, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUL 15 1955

Berkshire Scholarship

The annual scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer music school at Tanglewood, has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, of Schenectady.

The scholarship was founded last year by Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire County as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, who instituted student symphony concerts in 1940.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

ROANOKE, VA.
TIMES
Circ. D. 43,917 - S. 79,504

JUN 24 1955

Historic Summer Resort To Celebrate Anniversary of Coming of Rochambeau

By ALICE HUGHES

Newport, anyone? Whoever has no place to go and wishes to see this aristocratic Rhode Island summer resort at its historic best, had better set aside some time between July 4 and 14. That's when this fashionable New England seacoast area will celebrate the 175th anniversary of the coming of Army Commander Rochambeau to Newport and other parts of this country to cooperate with General George Washington at the siege and capture of Yorktown in the American war for independence. As part of our current Salute to France, a treasure of materials relating to French and American participation in the American Revolution will be on display in Newport's Redwood Library during this Washington-Rochambeau celebration. Many import relics of this historic chapter in America's founding, are the possessions of Bucher, a well-known New York art dealer who has dedicated himself to this particular epoch, as exemplified in his collection of art and memorabilia of this naval-and-land forces defense of our Eastern seacoast in 1778.

Some of the original military maps used in Rhode Island by the French, our allies at the time, against the British, are in the Bucher collection. Also busts of George Washington and Count D'Estaing, the French admiral who preceded Rochambeau to Newport by two years. New York's subtreasury building owns these busts, and has placed them on loan to Newport for the 10-day celebration. Rare prints, first edition books, the first volume in French ever written about the American Revolution, and all the original papers marking the surrender of the British in Grenada in 1781, are to be seen by followers of the history of this particular period. Rochambeau is a revered name in Newport, for the part he played when the British, French and Americans met in sea battle just off Newport Harbor. To many, Rochambeau is the name of one of the French Line's Atlantic passenger ships between France and America.

Music lovers should begin making reservations for this season's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. That's the summer gathering place for the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Muench, in a distinguished series of music events lasting from July 8 through Aug. 18. This delightful concentration on the world's best music takes place on the grounds which New England writer Nathaniel Hawthorne made famous in his "Tanglewood Tales," hence the name of the series. The 12 major concerts take place in the vast open air music shed which holds 8,000 persons. Another 4,000 are accommodated on the lawn and in the bleachers, which surround the area, forming a beautiful park. On the same grounds are located a music school and also a theatre school, where students come to pursue all branches of music and drama. The combination of music, nature and youth forms an irresistible trio which results in quite a few romances and marriages each summer, among the pupils of the Tanglewood courses.

EACH SUMMER, conductor Charles Muench invites a few guest baton-wielders. This summer they will include Thor Johnson, Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein. The last, who is also a teacher in the music school, always conducts the special concert dedicated to the memory of Koussevitzky, whose special protege Bernstein was. Another concert will offer a music Salute to France. Soloists of distinction are invited to take part in the dozen Music Shed orchestral concerts which attract attendance from all over the United States. These special performers this summer are to be Isaac Stern, Leontine Price, Rudolf Serkin, Gregor Piatagorsky, David Lloyd, Max Morgan, Eugene Istomin and Jennie Tourel. Many people make an annual pilgrimage to the Berkshire Music Festival which takes place in the center of three small towns—Lenox, Lee and Stockbridge. Accommodations are not too expensive, nor, as yet, too difficult to find. The area struggles to maintain its quaint New England atmosphere, despite the summer influx of noted musicians and other personages from all over the world.

[203]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 16 1955

BEETHOVEN TRIOS ARE PERFORMED AT TANGLEWOOD

1255 Hear Notable Recital By Beaux Arts Group

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 13—The lure of Beethoven's chamber music, in this case three trios for piano, violin and cello, drew 1255 to the theater-concert hall tonight. The performers, known as the Beaux Arts Trio, were Manahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Benjamin Greenhouse, cello.

Trace Creative Growth

They played the "Trio in C Minor, Op. 1, No. 3," "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1," labeled the "Ghost," and "Trio in B-Flat, Major, Op. 97," known as the "Archduke." Like the recital of three string quartets last week by the Kroll string quartet, the three trios played tonight traced the creative growth of Beethoven in this medium.

Beethoven put his best efforts forward when he started writing trios for piano, violin and cello, but he did not force the issue or hurry. Indeed the Opus 1 trios reveal the care which he took with this initial opus. The fine blending of instruments, the smooth handling of this form and the clarity of thematic material, particularly in the "Trio in C Minor" are indications of the Beethoven-to-be, the Beethoven who reached his zenith in this medium in the "Archduke." Messrs. Pressler, Guilet and Greenhouse are excellent musicians, able to submerge self and to merge their considerable talents into a smooth ensemble.

Ringing Sonority

The "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1," reveals the immense growth of the composer. There is much more brilliant writing for piano and the sustaining instruments are more flexible and eloquent, with the result that one hears a ringing sonority. The virtuoso character of this trio is recognized at once from the flamboyant octaves of the opening theme. It is the dark quality of the slow movement, its melancholy and forbidding tones which prompted the title "Ghost" for this trio. In fact, John Burke has called this trio an "Adventure in Morbidity."

It is in his final trio, the "Archduke," that Beethoven reaches the heights. Its musical current is powerful and determined. The instruments build up sonorities suggestive of more than three instruments. In other words, this trio reveals the heroic Beethoven, confident, inspired and wholly concerned with the subject at hand. The piano part has many implications of the concerto style, grandeur of broadly singing themes for example.

Very Fine Playing

Now what of the playing of the Beaux Arts Trio? It was very fine playing indeed. Mr. Guilet is concertmaster of the Symphony of the Air, formerly the NBC Symphony. Mr. Pressler is one of the brilliant young pianists, with a tremendous technical capacity linked to a sensitive approach to whatever he plays, while Mr. Greenhouse is thoroughly at home in chamber music.

Whether it was the youthful ardor of the Opus 1, the eerie quality of the slow movement of Opus 70 or the concerto brilliance of Opus 97, the three players performed with a sure instinct for style and feeling. Mr. Pressler has a tremendous power of projection and sometimes it was a bit overdone, though it is doubtful if he realized it. Every mood of the music was reflected in his face and when something went unusually well, there was a smile on his lips.

Mozart Tomorrow

The performances, on the whole, were rewarding for one felt the devotion of the players to the music and it was apparent that they were enjoying themselves as well as pleasing the audience. This splendid trio should be considered for a Springfield appearance.

Friday night we shall turn from Beethoven to Mozart when Leonard Bernstein will lead the chamber orchestra in a performance of the overture to "Don Giovanni"; the "Symphony in C Major" and the "Piano Concerto in G Major" in which he will be the pianist as well as conductor. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano will be heard in three Mozart arias, two of which are from the opera "Idomeneo."

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,581

JUL

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Tanglewood Music Center Aids National Art Cause

HYDE PARK (Special) — From many parts of our country people have journeyed year after year to Tanglewood in Berkshire County, Mass., to enjoy the music.

These visitors have been interested in the various teaching activities that go on there during the summer and which the late, great conductor, Sergei Koussevitsky, took such a keen interest in developing.

After his death some of the people in the county formed a committee to raise $15,000 in his memory to provide a yearly scholarship for one student.

So far only $7,000 of that sum has been raised. And since the opening at Tanglewood takes place this year on July 4, and Koussevitsky's birthday comes later in the month, I have been wondering if the many who enjoy year after year the fruits of his labors would not like to make sure that between the date of the opening and the time of his birthday the rest of this fund was contributed.

This achievement then could be announced at the memorial concert that is usually given on his birthday.

Koussevitsky would have liked to feel that one young person could come and have the opportunity to study there every summer.

I think he understood very well that everyone was not gifted with genius, but in order to have genius discovered and rewarded there must be a vast number of people musically educated.

Perhaps they would never be great artists but they would contribute to the musical appreciation of our audiences, and that is the only possible way that you can support great artists.

The countries that have had the greatest musicians, the greatest actors, the greatest writers are the countries that have appreciation of the arts among the people as a whole.

It is a sign that a nation is growing up, is coming to maturity, when it is really concerned to support the arts.

In the Middle Ages every artist had to have one individual patron who was willing to support him and let him do his work. That was a sign that civilization was still in a more or less primitive state.

But the greatness of France, for instance, has been the fact that appreciation of art was present in the people as a whole. You have but to go into an art gallery in France to see that the public is there— even the people the farms.

For a really healthy developme all the arts you need an educated ence as well as performers.

Copyright, 19 5, United Features Syndicate.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 901,735 - S. 1,709,854

JUL 13 1955

Robert Coleman's THEATRE:

Wonderland of U.S. Only Hop From City

• Hudson River valley, nearby areas offer tops in Summer entertainment.

Are you an average New Yorker? Have you been reading those exotic travel ads about foreign places? Have you been wanting to visit them, and found that you didn't have the wherewithal? Well, so have we. But, over the last several years, we have discovered that America has everything or more than Europe has to offer. In diamonds or spades, as you prefer.

You've heard of the wonderful Rhine River. It is wonderful. But our own Hudson River is even more wonderful. Of course, the Rhine has dozens of centuries of tradition and folklore in its favor. Nevertheless, our own Washington Irving—and even the later Maxwell Anderson—established legends about our fabulous and favorite river.

AS FOR BEAUTY, we challenge our friends in the Rhineland to present more sumptuous sights than are to be found along the Hudson. We have covered almost every foot, on both sides, of our cherished river. We have stool on the Palisades and surveyed it up and down.

From experience, we can tell you that Day Line steamers can take you to Bear Mountain, Indian Point or even Poughkeepsie. We have taken the day tours, but more often the night ones. We have seen Broadway revues presented on Hudson River showboats in the bus or plane, enjoy the equivalent right here in the U. S. In fact, you can enjoy most of it within a day or two's travel from New York.

YOU CAN SEE, within an evening, St. John Terrell's Music Circuses at Neptune and Lambertville, N. J., or Paton Price's historic Grist Mill Playhouse at Andover, N. J. Or you may want to go further for scenery and art, via the Berkshire Theatre, the Berkshire Music Festival or Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—all within an afternoon's driving distance from Manhattan into the hills of Massachusetts.

If you want to escape the heat, we recommend two methods. Visit an air-conditioned theatre on Broadway, tenanting a drama, musical or comedy hit. Or, try Elliott Murphy's "Aquashow" at the Flushing Meadow Amphitheatre, or Guy Lombardo's "Arabian Nights" at the Jones Beach Theatre.

Over the years, we have been outlining one- two- and even four day tours, encompassing the best in Summer theatre, historic and scenic sights, and transportation to suit your needs. The response from our readers has encouraged us to continue this program. Over the next few weeks we'll be viewing interesting territory and lining up new tours for our faithful readers.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200
Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 15 1955

H. S. Babbitt, Jr.

Leonard Bernstein conducting at the piano in Tanglewood. This evening he will conduct a chamber orchestra in a Mozart program, including the Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453), with himself as soloist.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 10 1955

COUNTY LINES

By PAT BERGEN

ALTHOUGH PARKING METERS are still new in Rutherford, but motorists are up to their old tricks. They signal one another that there's still time left when pulling out so fellow drivers inherit a penny or more worth of parking.

Carol Lazarides

After 51 years on the job, George Forbes retiring from the Paterson post office . . . Three vet cops upped in Cliffside Park. Joe Borrell to captain, Tom Marsden to lieutenant and Johnny Gerrity to sergeant . . . Nice guy Mike Basile of Totowa doing a fine job with Little Leaguers. Mike's a former top athlete himself.

Abe and Mrs. Vreeland of Bloomingdale, married when each was 17, just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary . . . Ridgewood's Art Giardano Jr. turning out to be quite a fisherman like his dad . . . Hawthorne's Bill Giger and Paterson's Pete Simone weekending at Carpi's Lake . . . Dial type phones being installed in Little Falls but service still is many months away.

* * *

The Citizen's United Transit Committee of Englewood says almost 3,000 train riders will ignore bus service if the West Shore trains quit running. . . . Lt. Jim Kaywood retired from the Passaic fire department which he joined after returning from World War I. . . . Mayor Joe Ryan of Totowa holding summer sessions twice a month instead of usual every Friday night. . . . Clifton's Patricia Watkins plays a hit accordion. . . . The grading job along John St. from Belmont to Lee Ave. in Haledon will have concrete curbs on both sides.

* * *

Passaic's Henry Janiec to conduct the premiere of the new opera, "The Rope," next month at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. . . . Shallow and slow-moving streams that feed Twin Lakes breed bacteria.

he was appointed by Woodrow Wilson. . . . The Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Church in Lyndhurst is considering posting 24-hour guards to prevent robberies in the church. Poor box has been broken into three times recently. . . . Dr. and Mrs. Robert Fear, Bergen Dental Society prexy, vacationed at Cape May with daughters, Marcia and Mary Ann.

Tanglewood Shed Concerts To Begin

Echo 7/19

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates the annual series of week end concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch. Again this year twelve concerts will be performed. A feature of the Shed series this year will be music by Beethoven.

Jennie Tourel, soprano, who will sing three arias in the Berkshire Festival Mozart program tonight.

[204]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 16 1955

BEETHOVEN TRIOS ARE PERFORMED AT TANGLEWOOD

1255 Hear Notable Recital By Beaux Arts Group

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 13—The lure of Beethoven's chamber music, in this case three trios for piano, violin and cello, drew 1255 to the theater-concert hall tonight. The performers, known as the Beaux Arts Trio, were Manahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Benjamin Greenhouse, cello.

Trace Creative Growth

They played the "Trio in C Minor, Op. 1, No. 3," "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1," labeled the "Ghost," and "Trio in B-Flat, Major, Op. 97," known as the "Archduke." Like the recital of three string quartets last week by the Kroll string quartet, the three trios played tonight traced the creative growth of Beethoven in this medium.

Beethoven put his best efforts forward when he started writing trios for piano, violin and cello, but he did not force the issue or hurry. Indeed the Opus 1 trios reveal the care which he took with this initial opus. The fine blending of instruments, the smooth handling of this form and the clarity of thematic material, particularly in the "Trio in C Minor" are indications of the Beethoven-to-be, the Beethoven who reached his zenith in this medium in the "Archduke." Messrs. Pressler, Guilet and Greenhouse are excellent musicians, able to submerge self and to merge their considerable talents into a smooth ensemble.

Ringing Sonority

The "Trio in D Major, Op. 70, No. 1," reveals the immense growth of the composer. There is much more brilliant writing for piano and the sustaining instruments are more flexible and eloquent, with the result that one hears a ringing sonority. The virtuoso character of this trio is recognized at once from the flamboyant octaves of the opening theme. It is the dark quality of the slow movement, its melancholy and forbidding tones which prompted the title "Ghost" for this trio. In fact, John Burke has called this trio an "Adventure in Morbidity."

It is in his final trio, the "Archduke," that Beethoven reaches the heights. Its musical current is powerful and determined. The instruments build up sonorities suggestive of more than three instruments. In other words, this trio reveals the heroic Beethoven, confident, inspired and wholly concerned with the subject at hand. The piano part has many implications of the concerto style, grandeur of broadly singing themes for example.

Very Fine Playing

Now what of the playing of the Beaux Arts Trio? It was very fine playing indeed. Mr. Guilet is concertmaster of the Symphony of the Air, formerly the NBC Symphony. Mr. Pressler is one of the brilliant young pianists, with a tremendous technical capacity linked to a sensitive approach to whatever he plays, while Mr. Greenhouse is thoroughly at home in chamber music.

Whether it was the youthful ardor of the Opus 1, the eerie quality of the slow movement of Opus 70 or the concerto brilliance of Opus 97, the three players performed with a sure instinct for style and feeling. Mr. Pressler has a tremendous power of projection and sometimes it was a bit overdone, though it is doubtful if he realized it. Every mood of the music was reflected in his face and when something went unusually well, there was a smile on his lips.

Mozart Tomorrow

The performances, on the whole, were rewarding for one felt the devotion of the players to the music and it was apparent that they were enjoying themselves as well as pleasing the audience. This splendid trio should be considered for a Springfield appearance.

Friday night we shall turn from Beethoven to Mozart when Leonard Bernstein will lead the chamber orchestra in a performance of the overture to "Don Giovanni"; the "Symphony in C Major" and the "Piano Concerto in G Major" in which he will be the pianist as well as conductor. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano will be heard in three Mozart arias, two of which are from the opera "Idomeneo."

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 108,581

JUL [illegible]

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Tanglewood Music Center Aids National Art Cause

HYDE PARK (Special) — From many parts of our country people have journeyed year after year to Tanglewood in Berkshire County, Mass., to enjoy the music.

These visitors have been interested in the various teaching activities that go on there during the summer and which the late, great conductor, Sergei Koussevitsky, took such a keen interest in developing.

After his death some of the people in the county formed a committee to raise $15,000 in his memory to provide a yearly scholarship for one student.

So far only $7,000 of that sum has been raised. And since the opening at Tanglewood takes place this year on July 4, and Koussevitsky's birthday comes later in the month, I have been wondering if the many who enjoy year after year the fruits of his labors would not like to make sure that between the date of the opening and the time of his birthday the rest of this fund was contributed.

This achievement then could be announced at the memorial concert that is usually given on his birthday.

Koussevitsky would have liked to feel that one young person could come and have the opportunity to study there every summer.

I think he understood very well that everyone was not gifted with genius, but in order to have genius discovered and rewarded there must be a vast number of people musically educated.

Perhaps they would never be great artists but they would contribute to the musical appreciation of our audiences, and that is the only possible way that you can support great artists.

The countries that have had the greatest musicians, the greatest actors, the greatest writers are the countries that have appreciation of the arts among the people as a whole.

It is a sign that a nation is growing up, is coming to maturity, when it is really concerned to support the arts.

In the Middle Ages every artist had to have one individual patron who was willing to support him and let him do his work. That was a sign that civilization was still in a more or less primitive state.

But the greatness of France, for instance, has been the fact that appreciation of art was present in the people as a whole. You have but to go into an art gallery in France to see that the public is there— even the people from the farms.

For a really healthy development of all the arts you need an educated audience as well as performers.

Copyright, 19[illegible], United Features Syndicate, Inc.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
MIRROR
Circ. D. 901,735 - S. 1,709,854

JUL 13 1955

Robert Coleman's THEATRE:

Wonderland of U.S. Only Hop From City

• Hudson River valley, nearby areas offer tops in Summer entertainment.

Are you an average New Yorker? Have you been reading those exotic travel ads about foreign places? Have you been wanting to visit them, and found that you didn't have the wherewithal? Well, so have we. But, over the last several years, we have discovered that America has everything or more than Europe has to offer. In diamonds or spades, as you prefer.

You've heard of the wonderful Rhine River. It is wonderful. But our own Hudson River is even more wonderful. Of course, the Rhine has dozens of centuries of tradition and folklore in its favor. Nevertheless, our own Washington Irving—and even the later Maxwell Anderson—established legends about our fabulous and favorite river.

AS FOR BEAUTY, we challenge our friends in the Rhineland to present more sumptuous sights than are to be found along the Hudson. We have covered almost every foot, on both sides, of our cherished river. We have stool on the Palisades and surveyed it up and down.

From experience, we can tell you that Day Line steamers can take you to Bear Mountain, Indian Point or even Poughkeepsie. We have taken the day tours, but more often the night ones. We have seen Broadway revues presented on Hudson River showboats in the past. In fact, we have even transferred from steamers to squareriggers, to see shows.

So, if you feel frustrated because you don't have enough folding money this Summer, read this and start counting your blessings. You don't have to go to Europe to sample the wonders of the world. You can, by car, bus or plane, enjoy the equivalent right here in the U. S. In fact, you can enjoy most of it within a day or two's travel from New York.

YOU CAN SEE, within an evening, St. John Terrell's Music Circuses at Neptune and Lambertville, N. J., or Paton Price's historic Grist Mill Playhouse at Andover, N. J. Or you may want to go further for scenery and art, via the Berkshire Theatre, the Berkshire Music Festival or Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—all within an afternoon's driving distance from Manhattan into the hills of Massachusetts.

If you want to escape the heat, we recommend two methods. Visit an air-conditioned theatre on Broadway, tenanting a drama, musical or comedy hit. Or, try Elliott Murphy's "Aquashow" at the Flushing Meadow Amphitheatre, or Guy Lombardo's "Arabian Nights" at the Jones Beach Theatre.

Over the years, we have been outlining one- two- and even four day tours, encompassing the best in Summer theatre, historic and scenic sights, and transportation to suit your needs. The response from our readers has encouraged us to continue this program. Over the next few weeks we'll be viewing interesting territory and lining up new tours for our faithful readers.

H. S. Babbitt, Jr.

Leonard Bernstein conducting at the piano in Tanglewood. This evening he will conduct a chamber orchestra in a Mozart program, including the Piano Concerto in G major (K. 453), with himself as soloist.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,653,302

JUL 10 1955

COUNTY LINES

By PAT BERGEN

ALTHOUGH PARKING METERS are still new in Rutherford, but motorists are up to their old tricks. They signal one another that there's still time left when pulling out so fellow drivers inherit a penny or more worth of parking.

After 51 years on the job, George Forbes retiring from the Paterson post office . . . Three vet cops upped in Cliffside Park. Joe Borrell to captain, Tom Marsden to lieutenant and Johnny Gerrity to sergeant . . . Nice guy Mike Basile of Totowa doing a fine job with Little Leaguers. Mike's a former top athlete himself.

Abe and Mrs. Vreeland of Bloomingdale, married when each was 17, just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary . . . Ridgewood's Art Giardano Jr. turning out to be quite a fisherman like his dad . . . Hawthorne's Bill Giger and Paterson's Pete Simone weekending at Carpi's Lake . . . Dial type phones being installed in Little Falls but service still is many months away.

Carol Lazarides

* * *

The Citizen's United Transit Committee of Englewood says almost 3,000 train riders will ignore bus service if the West Shore trains quit running. . . . Lt. Jim Kaywood retired from the Passaic fire department which he joined after returning from World War I. . . . Mayor Joe Ryan of Totowa holding summer sessions twice a month instead of usual every Friday night. . . . Clifton's Patricia Watkins plays a hit accordion. . . . The grading job along John St. from Belmont to Lee Ave. in Haledon will have concrete curbs on both sides.

* * *

Passaic's Henry Janiec to conduct the premiere of the new opera, "The Rope," next month at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass. . . . Shallow and slow-moving streams that feed Twin Lakes breed bacteria.

he was appointed by Woodrow Wilson. . . . The Holy Name Society of Sacred Heart Church in Lyndhurst is considering posting 24-hour guards to prevent robberies in the church. Poor box has been broken into three times recently. . . . Dr. and Mrs. Robert Fear, Bergen Dental Society prexy, vacationed at Cape May with daughters, Marcia and Mary Ann.

Tanglewood Shed Concerts To Begin

Echo 7/19

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra inaugurates the annual series of week end concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch. Again this year twelve concerts will be performed. A feature of the Shed series this year will be music by Beethoven.

Jennie Tourel, soprano, who will sing three arias in the Berkshire Festival Mozart program tonight.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 27,538

JUL 13 1955

Tanglewood Tales

23 Composers Here

Twenty-three young composers are in residence at Tanglewood this summer, studying with the noted composers Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. Five of them are distaff students of the Berkshire Music Center, and six are from foreign lands. Emma Lou Diemer, of Warrensburg, Va., Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mrs. Michiko Toyama, of Osaka, Japan, Claire C. J. Polin, of Philadelphia are students of Mr. Sessions; Elaine Radoff is working with Mr. Blacher. From Wellington, New Zealand, has come Douglas G. Lilburn; from Sarnia, Ont., Canada, William J. Sydeman; from Helsinki, Finland, Eino Rautavaara, to work with Mr. Sessions. Mr. Blacher's foreign students are Tossi Ichiyanago, of Tokyo, and George Sicilianos, of Athens, Greece.

The ifrst concert by Tanglewood's young composers, at which they perform their own works and argue with each other and ther audience their respective merits, will be held Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. The Composers' Forums are open to the public through membership in the Friends' society.

* * *

Sunday Morning Concert

Sunday morning will witness the second concert this summer by chamber music students of the Berkshire Music Center, at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program consists of: Beethoven: String Quartet in B flat major, Opus 18, No. 6, performed by Edward Filmanowicz (Chicago), Pandora Hopkins (Brooklyn, N.Y.), violins; Edward Gerber (Bronx, N.Y.), viola; Alice Ober (Pasadena, Cal.), cello. Beethoven: Trio for Piano, Violin and Cello in C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; performed by Eleanor Siranossian (Watertown), violin; David Spinks (Albany, N.Y.), cello; Jerome Lowenthal (Philadelphia, Pa.), piano. Beethoven: Quintet for Winds and Piano in E flat, Op. 16, performed by Nicholas Apostle (Kenton, O.), oboe; William Kaplan (Madison, Wis.), bassoon; Max Watras (Chicopee), clarinet; Edwin Thayer (Weymouth), French horn; Gilda Frishberg (Flushing, N.Y.), piano. This concert is also open to the public through membership in the Friends' Society.

* * *

Opera Scenes Monday

Two unannounced extra concerts Berkshire Music Center students are being given at Tanglewood during the coming week. Members of the Friends are invited to a program of opera scenes, to be performed under the guidance of Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, on Monday afternoon, July 18, at 4:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Ingolf Dahl's Tanglewood Study Group (Department V), set up for amateurs of music who spend their vacations in an atmosphere of music, rather than in making music their careers, will give an informal program in the Barn at Tanglewood, on Saturday, July 23, at 4 p.m., which is open to the public without admission.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,688

JUL 12 1955

New England Fun . . .

Big Doings in Mass. State Beckoning Local Motorists

Events and big doings are being planned throughout the state during these Summer days. Southbridge motorists looking where to go on days off may find good entertainment right here in Bay State.

The Esplanade Concerts in Boston begin tonight and will continue until Sunday evening.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra plays in the Hatch Memorial Shell on the banks of the Charles River every evening beginning at 8:30. Tomorrow morning, a children's program will be given.

047

There's outdoor square dancing tonight at 8 in Hyannis. The real country socials are conducted in the High School field.

Choo-Choo rides are given for the kiddies in the quaint Edaville Railroad daily through scenic cranberry bogs and mock villages along the road. You'll find this railroad in South Carver on Route 3 to 44 and 58.

At the Horticultural Hall beginning today, there will be an exhibit of rare exotic lilies, the first lily show there in 8 years. The show ends Thursday.

Bach and Mozart Concerts are being held this week at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood. Charles Munch and Leonard Berstein are conducting the Boston Symphony there this year. Concerts this week will be given tomorrow night, Friday night and Saturday night and again on Sunday afternoon.

Now's the time for family picnics at the Old Sturbridge Village. The Village is open every Saturday during July and August until 8 p. m. Demonstrators are on hand daily.

This week at the Merry-Go-Round Theater, the Sturbridge Players are presenting George Bernard Shaw's Candida, first time to be presented here in Worcester County. The play runs through Sunday with curtain time at 8 p. m.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 10 1955

MUSIC THIS WEEK

Concerts and Recitals

Stadium Concerts

Stadium Symphony Orchestra of City College, Convent and Amsterdam Aves., 138th and 139th Sts., 8:30.

Monday. Conductor, Alexander Smallens; soloists, Leontyne Price, soprano; William Warfield, baritone; Earl Wild, pianist. Strike Up the Band; Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra; An American in Paris; Cuban Overture; Excerpts from "Porgy and Bess"; Rhapsody in Blue, Gershwin. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Tuesday. Conductor, Alexander Smallens. Ballet Suite, Gretry-Mottl; L'Apres Midi d'un Faune, Debussy; La Valse, Ravel.

Wednesday. Conductor, Alexander Smallens; soloists, Joanna Mitchell, violinist; Robert Goldsand, pianist. Don Juan, Strauss; Concerto in G minor for Violin and Orchestra, Bruch; Overture to "Prince Igor," Borodin; Concerto No. 2 in C minor for Piano and Orchestra, Rachmaninoff.

Thursday. Conductor, Alexander Smallens; soloists, Erica Morini, violinist. "Water Music" Suite, Handel-Harty; Symphony in C major, K. 551 ("Jupiter"), Mozart; Siegfried Idyll, Wagner; Concerto No. 2 in D minor for Violin and Orchestra, Wieniawski. (In case of rain this program will be played the next clear night.)

Saturday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloists, Eileen Farrell and Laurel Hurley, sopranos; Jan Peerce, tenor. Overture to "I Vespri Siciliani;" Aria, "Ah! Fors e Lui" from "La Traviata," Verdi; Lamento di Federico, from "L' Arlesiana," Cilea; Aria, "E Lucevan le Stelle," from "Tosca," Puccini; Aria, "Pace, Pace Mio Dio" from "La Forza del Destino," Verdi; La Boutique Fantasque, Rossini-Respighi; Aria, "Ritorna Vincitor" from "Aida;" Duet, "O Terra, Addio" from "Aida," Verdi; Overture to "Don Pasquale;" Aria, "Quel Guardo il Cavalieri" from "Don Pasquale," Donizetti; Aria, "Casta Diva," from "Norma," Bellini; Aria, "Vesti la Giubba" from "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; Italian Favorites.

Goldman Band

Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting, Central and Prospect Parks, 8:30.

Today, Central Park. Triumphal March, Cleopatra; Overture, Cleopatra, Mancinelli; Requiem, Verdi; Excerpts, Madama Butterfly, Puccini; Overture, Joan of Arc, Verdi; Inflammatus, from Stabat Mater (James Burke, cornetist), Rossini; Finale, The Pines of Rome, Respighi; Miserere, from Il Trovatore; Quartet, from Rigoletto, Verdi.

Monday, Central Park. Wedding March, from A Midsummernight's Dream; Military Overture; Trauer Marsch; Two Songs Without Words; Overture, Ruy Blas, Mendelssohn; Overture, Leonore III, Beethoven; Introduction and Tarantella (James Burke, cornetist), Goldman; Care Selve, Handel; March, Kentucky, Goldman; A Southern Rhapsody, Hosmer; Community Singing.

Wednesday, Central Park. Introduction to Act III and Bridal Chorus, from Lohengrin; Procession of Knights, from Parsifal; Liebestod, from Tristan and Isolde; Elsa Entering the Cathedral, from Lohengrin, Wagner; Scenes Pittoresques, Massenet; Scherzo, Symphony No. 3, Beethoven; Spinning Song—Reeds Only, Hollander; March for Brasses, Goldman; Excerpts, Carousel, Rodgers.

Thursday, Prospect Park and Friday, Central Park. Marche Lorraine, Ganne; Overture, Catel; Suite, Rameau; Bolero, Ravel; Excerpts, Carmen, Bizet; Andante and Scherzo (James Burke, cornetist), Barat; Excerpts, Faust, Gounod; The Swan, Saint-Saens; Cubana, Ravina; Aragonaise from Le Cid, Massenet; Overture, Orpheus, Offenbach.

Saturday, Prospect Park. Grand March, America, Goldman; Lullaby—For Reeds, Wurm; Spinning Song—For Basses, Hollander; Nocturne—For Brasses; Scherzo—For Brasses, Holst; Irish Fantaisie (James Burke, cornetist), Robers; Overture, Cleopatra, Mancinelli; Festival March; Punchinello; Dance Baroque; March—The Gold Bug; Favorite Melodies; Excerpts, The Fortune Teller, Herbert.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30. [illegible]les Munch. Bach Mass in B minor with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

Wednesday, 8:30. Trios in A minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke"), Beethoven. Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violinist; Bernard Greenhouse, cellist; Menahem Pressler, pianist).

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Overture to "Don Giovanni"; Symphony in C major, "Linz," K. 425; Arias, "Al Desio" K. 577; Zeffiretti ("Idomeneo"); "Non Temer" ("Idomeneo") (soloist, Jennie Tourel, soprano); Piano Concerto in G major K. 453 (soloist, Leonard Bernstein), Mozart.

Saturday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10, Vivaldi; Concerto for Cello (soloist, Samuel Mayes), Boccherini; Gloria, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students (soloist, Saramae Endich, soprano; Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano; Hugh Ross, conductor), Vivaldi.

Sunday, July 17, 2:30. Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Suite from "Dardanus," Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Ravel; Pavane, Faure; Serenade, Milhaud; Symphony No. 4, Honegger.

Other Events

Costanza Forte, soprano; and Yvette Rudin, violinist; Brooklyn Museum, today, 2.

Accompanists, Martha Leyser and Esther Ostroff. Works by Brahms, Puccini, Rapoport, Beethoven, Respighi, Cimara, Treharne, Charles, Tyson, Sarasate.

Open Sings, Brooklyn College, Gershwin Theater, Bedford Ave. and Ave. H, Brooklyn, Monday, 8:30.

"Salute to New York City's Fire Fighters," Battery Park, Tuesday, 12 noon.

American Music Concert, Harlem Meer, Central Park, 110th St. and Fifth Ave., Tuesday, 8:30.

City Symphony Orchestra, The Mall, Central Park, Saturday, 8:30.

Conductor, Franz Bibo; soloist, Charles Treger, violinist. Works by Tchaikovsky.

Symphony of the Air, Dogwood Hollow Open Air Theater, Stony Brook, L. I., N. Y., Saturday, 8:30.

D'Artega conducting; soloists, William Horne, tenor; Margot Monte, soprano. Program includes Songs and Music of Vienna by Strauss, Lehar, Kreisler, Kalman.

Salmaggi Open-Air Opera, Triboro Stadium, Randall's Island, Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci," Saturday, 8:45.

Children's Opera Co. of New York, Carl Fischer Concert Hall, today, 3.

Operatic excerpts and "The Children's Crusade," Pierne.

Amato Opera Theater, Puccini's "La Boheme," today, Tuesday, 8:15; Verdi's "La Traviata," Friday and Saturday, 8:30.

Opera Workshop, Lillie Deverreaux Blake, P. S. No. 6, 45 E. 81st St., Puccini's "Tosca," Wednesday, 8; Puccini's "La Boheme," Thursday, 8.

Recorded Music, New York Public Library series, Bryant Park, Monday to Friday, 12 to 2 p. m.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 248,071

JUL 17 1955

Berkshire Festival Programs

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear next week, when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles river in Boston moves over to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed, which will continue until the conclusion of the festival on Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides, so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the 12 Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of 9,197.

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra.

The concerts this week include a program of Beethoven violin sonatas in the Theater-Concert Hall given Wednesday night by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin; the first Shed concert Friday night with Charles Munch conducting a program consisting of Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist; the second Shed concert on Saturday night when Pierre Monteux presents Respighi's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven's Symphony No. 2; Sessions' suite from "The Black Masquers," and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

On Sunday, July 22, Mr. Munch will conduct the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies of Beethoven in the Music Shed at 2:30 p. m.

The second week of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes an evening of Beethoven trios by the Beaux Arts Trio, Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Grenhouse, cello; and Menahem Pressler, piano; on Wednesday, July 13, and three concerts by a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony members on Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon. On Friday evening, Leonard Bernstein, who heads the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting department, will conduct the all-Mozart program.

Charles Munch will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. All concerts will be in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. New Haveners who wish to motor up and stay over the weekend, are advised to write the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., for a list of hotel, motel or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires.

The second annual Festival of Early Music will be presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Town Hall at Stockbridge, Mass., beginning Aug. 13, with a series of four Saturday evening concerts extending through Sept. 3 and a Sunday evening concert on Sept. 4. Music, not performed anywhere for centuries, will be heard in the Stockbridge Town Hall, chosen because of its good acoustics and ample parking facilities. The New York Pro Musica Antiqua is a non-profit organization established in 1953 and last heard hereabouts at the roof-tree raising ceremony at the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy at Stratford, last month.

[205]

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 526,215

JUL 18 1955

NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 18,

Music: Munch Conducts

Boston Symphony Heard in French and Italian Works at Tanglewood

By JOHN BRIGGS
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 17—The concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra that Charles Munch conducted at Tanglewood this afternoon demonstrated anew the conductor's affinity for French music and his great skill in bringing it to life.

It was a varied French program, ranging from an orchestral suite from Rameau's eighteenth century opera "Dardanus" to Honegger's Fourth Symphony, subtitled "Deliciae Basilienses."

Also heard were Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's "Pavane" and the brash, breezy "Serenade" that Darius Milhaud composed in 1920-21. It is sometimes called his third symphony for small orchestra.

•

Mr. Munch and the Bostonians proved themselves to be fluent in the wide variety of musical styles heard on this afternoon's program. A particular delight was their performance of the Milhaud score. Written at a time when its composer was never happier than when writing in two or three keys simultaneously, the "Serenade" employs polytonality, odd, engaging rhythmic complexities and unusually colorful percussion section.

Among the bucolic joys of hearing music in this outdoor setting should be mentioned the performance of sparrows and robins, in vigorous competition with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, throughout "Le Tombeau de Couperin." It would be hard to imagine a pleasanter tribute to the playing of the Boston woodwinds.

•

An Italian program last night offered the Boccherini 'Cello Concerto in B flat, with Samuel Mayes as soloist, and the Vivaldi "Gloria" for chorus and orchestra.

Mr. Mayes' fluent playing, accurate intonation and fine resonant tone made the 'cello concerto one of the evening's highlights. The admirable performance of the solo 'cellist was matched by sympathetic collaboration on the part of Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The "Gloria," conducted by Hugh Ross, displayed the sonorous, well-balanced tone of the Berkshire Festival Chorus. The solos were admirably sung by Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto.

Two Vivaldi concerti grossi, in D minor, op. 3, No. 11, and in B minor, for four violins and string orchestra, were ably performed under Mr. Munch's direction to round out the pleasant evening of Italian music.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 13 1955

Berkshire Festival Starts 2nd Week

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July 13—The second week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin tonight with a concert by the Beaux Arts Trio in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 p. m. Last Wednesday evening a record opening crowd attended the concert by the Kroll String Quartet, which inaugurated this Summer's Festival, devoted in large part to the music of Beethoven.

At tonight's concert the Beaux Arts Trio (Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano) will play three piano trios by Beethoven—the Trio in C Minor, Opus 1, No. 3; the "Ghost" Trio in D Major, and the "Archduke" Trio in B Flat.

New Type of Ensemble

The Beaux Arts Trio is an ensemble new to American concert life, although its individual members are musicians with long and distinguished careers as concert artists. Daniel Guilet came to the United States in 1941 after an extensive European career as a soloist and ensemble performer. Since 1951 he has been concertmaster of the NBC Symphony Orchestra, now called the Symphony of the Air. He has just returned from that orchestra's extensive tour of the Far East, concerts having been given in Japan, Korea, Burma, Ceylon, Formosa, Okinawa, Siam, French Indo-China and Hawaii.

Since his Town Hall debut in 1946, Bernard Greenhouse has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of the principal cities in both Europe and America. In addition to his annual tours he is on the faculties of both the Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music.

The young Israeli pianist, Menahem Pressler, first gained international renown when he won the Debussy prize at the age of 17, after flying from Tel Aviv to San Francisco especially for the contest. He has since become a familiar figure on the concert stages of the United States, Europe and Asia.

Boston Symphony Players

On Friday evening the second and final weekend of Chamber Orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin, with Leonard Bernstein as guest conductor in an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel as soloist. Saturday evening Charles Munch will conduct a concert of Italian music with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, and on Sunday afternoon (July 17) the series of six Chamber Orchestra concerts will conclude with a program of French music conducted by Mr. Munch.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert by the Beaux Arts Trio, and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office.

Winsted E. Citizen
Mon. July

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA PLAYS AT TANGLEWOOD.

Winsted, Norfolk, and vicinity people will be interested to know that the main series of Berkshire music festival concerts given by Charles Munch and the Boston symphony orchestra, will open at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday, at 8:30 o'clock.

There will be similar performances Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and each successive Friday, Saturday and Sunday through the weekend of Aug. 14.

Music by Beethoven will be featured at this year's festival concerts. The programs this coming week include:

Friday, overture to "Coriolan;" violin concerto with Isaac Stern, soloist; Symphony No. 7; all by Beethoven.

Saturday (Pierre Monteux, guest conductor) Passacaglia and Fugue, Respighi; Symphony No. 2, Beethoven; Suite from "The Black Masquers," Roger Sessions; "Death and Transfiguration," Strauss.

Sunday, Symphony No. 1, No. 4, and No. 6, all by Beethoven.

UTICA, N. Y.
PRESS
Circ. D. 24,394

JUL 4 1955

PAGE NINETEEN

Calling All Music Lovers!

Berkshire Festival Opens Wednesday at Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch.

For the 16th summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concertos within the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-August 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat music shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

In 1954 — Charles Munch's fourth summer with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood — the Berkshire Festival, which has annually attracted crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada, totaled an attendance of 135,775 to total paid admission of $330,033.

Chamber music concerts inaugurated last summer averaged 1,358 persons; chamber orchestra programs drew an average of 2,275, both series attracting considerably more persons than the capacity of the 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall. An average crowd of 9,197, more than one-third again the capacity of the Music Shed, came to the final programs.

The Festival concerts for 1955, as planned by Charles Munch, will feature the music of Beethoven including all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, former conductor of the orchestra), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and cello sonatas.

Syracuse Herald-Am.
Sunday July 17

This marks the final weekend of chamber music concerts in "Tanglewood" summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in near Lenox, Mass. This afternoon's all-French concert will be directed by Charles Munch, conductor of the Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center. The program comprises a Suite from the opera, "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's Orchestral Suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; a "Pavane" by Gabriel Faure; Darius Milhaud's Suite for Small Orchestra(also known as his Third Symphony) and the Fourth Symphony by Arthur Honneger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honneger works will be performed for the first time in Tanglewood.

Last night's concert featured Italian works, including those by Vivaldi, famed 18th century composer; the Berkshire Festival Chorus singing, with soloists. Commencing next weekend, the nights of July 22-23 and the afternoon of July 24, the 104 piece Boston Symphony will assemble to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000 seat Music Shed. On Friday night, Conductor Munch will direct an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern, violin soloist.

Berkshire Festival Starts Third Week

The third week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival begins tonight with a recital by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30. Three sonatas for Violin and Piano by Beethoven will be performed, those in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2; F Major, Opus 24 (the "Spring" Sonata); and C. Minor, Opus 30, No. 2. This will be the third in the series of six Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts devoted to Beethoven this season; future programs will be given by the New Music Quartet (July 27), Rudolf Serkin (August 3) and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz (August 10).

On Friday evening in the Music Shed the first of this season's 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan" and the Seventh Symphony, in addition to the Violin Concerto with Mr. Stern. Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducting music by Bach, Beethoven and Richard Strauss, and also the Suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Sessions, who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will return, again to conduct an all-Beethoven concert of three symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth.

Boston Herald
7/20/55

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 17, 1955

Bernstein Conducts at Tanglewood

Also Is Soloist in Mozart Program

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 16.—An all-Mozart program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Friday night, brought forward Leonard Bernstein in at least two of his musical manifestations, and nobly, too. He conducted the entire program and appeared as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G Major, K. 453. For good measure he also played the piano obbligato in the Scena and Rondo "Non Temer, Amato Bene," which was beautifully sung by Jennie Tourel.

The night, for all the charms elsewhere observable, was definitely his and, perhaps, it is not too soon to say that this prodigiously gifted young man, at long last, has come into his own. This was a dedicated Bernstein, a musician inspired, yet self-effacing, who worked exclusively in the cause of art—no corny emoting, no harlequinade on the podium or at the piano.

A Devoted Interpreter

The music of Mozart, it goes without saying, gained infinitely from its treatment by so devoted an interpreter. Whether in the Overture to "Don Giovanni," or the "Linz" Symphony, Mr. Bernstein obtained all the effects he was after, thanks to the jewel-mechanism response of the Boston Symphony, a chamber orchestra—and a perfect one—for this Theater-Concert Hall event.

The bright particular ornament of the evening was the performance by Mr. Bernstein, as conductor-soloist, and the orchestra of the Andante in the Piano Concerto. The limpid beauty of this section, with its tender warmth, was most affectingly rendered. Nor did the interpreters slight one detail of the lively interchange between piano and orchestra in the delicious theme - and - variations finale. The ensemble work in the concerto could scarcely have been improved upon, and at its conclusion the listener could truthfully say that he heard chamber music of the first order.

Miss Tourel's Performance

From Jennie Tourel, soprano (formerly mezzo-soprano), one normally expects singing of superior style and finish. No less so this time, for Miss Tourel delivered these pieces convincingly. Besides the Scena and Rondo aforementioned, she sang the aria, "Zeffiretti Lusinghieri," from "Idomeneo," and Rondo for Soprano and Orchestra, "Al Desio di Chi t'Adora." None of these, by the way, is a sinecure, and though one was made the more aware of the taxing demands in certain arduous passages by her careful approach to them, she negotiated all successfully.

An overflow audience of 3,129—the greater part of it settled in surrounding lawns—enjoyed the proceeding hugely, calling out Miss Tourel and Mr. Berstein for numerous bows. And these principals, in turn, generously called upon the orchestra to share the plaudits with them.

Springfield Union
7/20/55

STERN AND ZAKIN GIVE BEETHOVEN RECITAL TONIGHT

Former Also to Be Soloist With Boston Symphony At Lenox Friday

The third week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival begins tonight with a recital by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30 p. m. Three sonatas for Violin and Piano by Beethoven will be performed, those in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2; F. Major, Opus 24 (the "Spring" Sonata); and C Minor, Opus 30, No. 2.

Third in Series

This will be the third in the series of six Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts devoted to Beethoven this season; future programs will be given by the New Music Quartet, July 27, Rudolf Serkin, August 3 and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz, August 10.

Mr. Stern is donating his services for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. In addition to tonight's appearance in the Chamber Music series, Mr. Stern will be soloist with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in two Festival concerts in the Music Shed: in Beethoven's Violin Concerto Friday evening of this week under the direction of Charles Munch, and in Brahms' Double Concerto for Violin and Cello, with Gregor Piatigorsky, on Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux conducting.

Friday Program

On Friday evening, July 22, in the Music Shed the first of this season's 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program comprised of the Overture to "Coriolan" and the Seventh Symphony, in addition to the Violin Concerto with Mr. Stern. Saturday evening July 23 at 8.30 Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducting music by Bach, Beethoven and Richard Strauss and also the Suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Sessions, who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will return, again to conduct an all-Beethoven concert of three symphonies—The First, Fourth and Sixth.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as all succeeding ones during the Berkshire Festival, which ends Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

At Tanglewood:

Unusual Programs

Final Chamber Concerts Given

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 18.—TWO UNUSUAL PROGRAMS, each centered on the nationalism of the composers, made a provocative weekend of the final chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Saturday night and yesterday afternoon. This Friday the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be playing in the famous music shed.

Charles Munch offered a shrewdly chosen list of French works yesterday, creating in performance a kind of intimacy most suitable to the hall. As almost a prelude to Honegger's Fourth Symphony, he played Rameau's suite from the opera "Dardanus," Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's "Pavane" Opus 50, and Milhaud's Serenade.

Under Munch's direction, these inspired playing that was often sheer magic and revealed the conductor as a master of the subtle art of phrasing.

With him the Ravel has always been a specialty, but he lavished no more care on it than on the other performances. Only the nature of the work made this interpretation the more treasurable. Milhaud's capsule symphony caught the fancy for its inherent gaiety, rhythmic life, and outspoken almost ribald jubilation in the final section.

For this listener the high point came with the Honegger, a chamber work of subtle power, with which Munch showed particular affinity. In all its charm of expression, the music reveals that element of growth in Honegger which has made him quite different from the man of the 'twenties so closely allied to Milhaud.

The work is fascinating for its orchestration, which is by no means an end in itself as it might have been, and creates a state of feeling which Munch conveyed perfectly. Whether or not that is the kind of release experienced when on vacation, [illegible] suited the whole environment of Tanglewood yesterday.

Record Crowd

Saturday's program highlighter Vivaldi. His Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 3, No. 11 and in B Minor, Opus 3, No. 10, were relatively familiar. The Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra was less so, but nevertheless a gem of its kind. Boccherini's Cello Concerto, Opus 34, completed the list. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, was soloist.

Giving Vivaldi so much prominence makes a departure in programming here. That the audience heartily approved was indicated by a record attendance of 4,000. They were delighted with it all, especially with Mayes for his discerning and artistic performance. His was cello playing of primary distinction.

Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducted the "Gloria." He did an excellent job not only with his singers in the festival chorus but also the performance as a whole. Sara Mae Endich sang the soprano solo with considerable accomplishment and quality of voice. Sadie McCollum found the contralto solo somewhat beyond her.

This Italian program proved a drawing card which the French program did not. There were only 2,500 people at yesterday's concert. From an artistic point of view, the French program offered as much, if not more, and certainly was more forward looking.

New York Herald Tribune Monday, July 18, 1955

Counterpoint by Sparrows

2,500 Hear Munch Present Tanglewood French Series

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 17.—From top to bottom this afternoon's orchestral program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood was French, and all under the guidance of Charles Munch. A charming program it proved to be, on the whole. There was the Suite from the opera "Dardanus," by Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," of Ravel; the Pavane, Op. 50, of Fauré; Milhaud's "Serenade" and Honegger's Fourth Symphony.

There were some 2,500 listeners to this Gallic bouquet, quite a few of them inhaling its variegate fragrances from shady vantage points. Those who were in the hall itself, incidentally, were much less comfortable, what with the heat and poor ventilation.

From the simple charms of Rameau to the more complicated ones of Honegger, the music unreeled happily and, one might add, with meticulous care. A battery of sparrows chirped gayly all through the Ravel "Couperin," thus adding a counterpoint unexpected yet entirely the country sur-

aying of that music,

—a fragrant and ted offering to an her-at-arms—just d up the conductalents in the rennch scores.

Perhaps some other works on the program had more substance, but surely not more grace or fragile beauty than the Ravel "Tombeau de Couperin." Its performance was wholly and deliciously palatable.

The Fauré work made a particular appeal to the senses and, here and there, to the emotions. And the early piece of Milhaud, which was composed in the '20s, is somewhat removed from that composer's later work in several respects—style, harmony, general demeanor. It had a certain freshness, however, though some of it does sound (if one may be permitted the term) old-hat.

Honegger's Symphony went extremely well, and it may be that Mr. Munch was thinking of the composer's programmatic idea—"to spend a summer in Switzerland, surrounded by affectionate friends. . . . This expectation instills in the composer an urge to create."

Boston Symphony Program

The Vivaldi works were the Concerto in D minor, Op. 3, No. 11; the Concerto Grosso B minor, for four violins and string orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10, and the "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. In the last work the two mentioned soloists were Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto. The Festival Chorus participated. Hugh Ross, as conductor, gave the work a well organized reading. Attendance on Saturday night totaled 4,064.

On Saturday evening the Theater-Concert Hall housed another program by the Boston Symphony. This was all Vivaldi, excepting Boccherini's Concerto for Cello in B-Flat Major, Op. 34. The soloist was Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, who was in excellent fettle.

NEW YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 18, 1955 14

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Vivaldi by Bostonians at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 18—Saturday night's concert by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony personnel here on the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival, was a deceiving event. The combination of blistering weather plus Vivaldi-Boccherini music brought out approximately 5,000 people all concentrated around the area surrounding the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall.

Thus when milling through the strolling crowds before the concert and during intermission, the impression was that, being able to see nothing but music lovers, the program was one housed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

The Shed concerts, however, only begin next Friday night, continuing for the following four week-ends, three programs each week.

Wisest last Saturday were the majority who brought blankets and sat outside rather than lose weight rapidly through shedding gallons of perspiration.

Mayes Excellent

Considering the steaming, muggy weather, Samuel Mayes, first cellist, performed the Boccherini Concerto in B Flat Major, Op. 34, in stellar fashion, creating an extraordinary mood of contemplation in the adagio; and, by contrast, brightness in the concluding scherzo-like rondo.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster, didn't fare so well in his part of the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B Minor for Four Violins and String Orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10. He slid around among many notes instead of playing them accurately. The second-chair fiddler of the solo quartet put him quite into the pale by comparison.

Burgin also had the advantage over Mayes of performing in his shirtsleeves, as did the rest of the ensemble, while Mayes in summer dinner coat together with conductor, Charles Munch, looked handsome but undoubtedly dripped inside.

Mayes throughout was efficient and controlled with the help of the pocket handkerchief which came to his rescue in the face of too much water. Grandson of a Cherokee Indian, his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers, all of which should combine to make him take things in his stride which he did. The audience was most enthusiastic.

Ross Leads 'Gloria'

Vivaldi's "Gloria," assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and two soloists selected from the student body, made up the after intermission schedule. Hugh Ross conducted the beautiful, glowing work which was sung with skill and enthusiasm by the ensemble and, of course, played brilliantly by the Bostonians with the exception of the solo oboist who lost his place in one section.

The coming week-end at Tanglewood finds Munch on the podium for the Friday night and Sunday afternoon events; and Pierre Monteux conducting the Saturday concert. The programs will feature the Beethoven Symphonies 1, 2, 4, 6 and 7, plus the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. For further information write the Berkshire Festival at Lenox or telephone Lenox 600.

Anne Bancroft and Ricardo Montalban romance in "A Life in the Balance," drama opening Friday at the RKO Palace.

Music Tonight . . .

Lewisohn Stadium: "La Traviata" in concert form, Thomas Schermann conducting. Cast includes Camilla Williams, soprano; Richard Tucker, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone. 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by the Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park 8:30.

At Tanglewood:

Unusual Programs

Final Chamber Concerts Given

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 18.—TWO UNUSUAL PROGRAMS, each centered on the nationalism of the composers, made a provocative weekend of the final chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Saturday night and yesterday afternoon. This Friday the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be playing in the famous music shed.

Charles Munch offered a shrewdly chosen list of French works yesterday, creating in performance a kind of intimacy most suitable to the hall. As almost a prelude to Honegger's Fourth Symphony, he played Rameau's suite from the opera. "Dardanus," Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's "Pavane" Opus 50, and Milhaud's Serenade.

Under Munch's direction, these inspired playing that was often sheer magic and revealed the conductor as a master of the subtle art of phrasing.

With him the Ravel has always been a specialty, but he lavished no more care on it than on the other performances. Only the nature of the work made this interpretation the more treasurable. Milhaud's capsule symphony caught the fancy for its inherent gaiety, rhythmic life, and outspoken almost ribald jubilation in the final section.

For this listener the high point came with the Honegger, a chamber work of subtle power, with which Munch showed particular affinity. In all its charm of expression, the music reveals that element of growth in Honegger which has made him quite different from the man of the 'twenties so closely allied to Milhaud.

The work is fascinating for its orchestration, which is by no means an end in itself as it might have been, and creates a state of feeling which Munch conveyed perfectly. Whether or not that is the kind of release experienced when on vacation, [illegible] suited the whole environment of Tanglewood yesterday.

Record Crowd

Saturday's program highlighter Vivaldi. His Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 3, No. 11 and in B Minor, Opus 3, No. 10, were relatively familiar. The Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra was less so, but nevertheless a gem of its kind. Boccherini's Cello Concerto, Opus 34, completed the list. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, was soloist.

Giving Vivaldi so much prominence makes a departure in programming here. That the audience heartily approved was indicated by a record attendance of 4,000. They were delighted with it all, especially with Mayes for his discerning and artistic performance. His was cello playing of primary distinction.

Hugh Ross, head of the

Not even the two panels o experts who asembled here fo two afternoons of studious scholarly flap on jazz were abl to give a definitive answer o that one.

'HOT' STANDS UP.

Cool, or progressive, or bo music, came into vogue six o somewhat beyond her.

This Italian program proved a drawing card which the

New York Herald Tribune Monday, July 18, 1955

Counterpoint by Sparrows

2,500 Hear Munch Present Tanglewood French Series

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 17.—From top to bottom this afternoon's orchestral program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood was French, and all under the guidance of Charles Munch. A charming program it proved to be, on the whole. There was the Suite from the opera "Dardanus," by Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," of Ravel; the Pavane, Op. 50, of Fauré; Milhaud's "Serenade" and Honegger's Fourth Symphony.

There were some 2,500 listeners to this Gallic bouquet, quite a few of them inhaling its variegate fragrances from shady vantage points. Those who were in the hall itself, incidentally, were much less comfortable, what with the heat and poor ventilation.

From the simple charms of Rameau to the more complicated ones of Honegger, the music unreeled happily and, one might add, with meticulous care. A battery of sparrows chirped gayly all through the Ravel "Couperin," thus adding a counterpoint unexpected yet entirely welcome in the country surroundings.

And the playing of that music, by the way—a fragrant and delicately tinted offering to an earlier brother-at-arms—just about summed up the conductor's especial talents in the rendering of French scores.

Perhaps some other works on the program had more substance, but surely not more grace or fragile beauty than the Ravel "Tombeau de Couperin." Its performance was wholly and deliciously palatable.

The Fauré work made a particular appeal to the senses and, here and there, to the emotions. And the early piece of Milhaud, which was composed in the '20s, is somewhat removed from that composer's later work in several respects—style, harmony, general demeanor. It had a certain freshness, however, though some of it does sound (if one may be permitted the term) old-hat.

Honegger's Symphony went extremely well, and it may be that Mr. Munch was thinking of the composer's programmatic idea——"to spend a summer in Switzerland, surrounded by affectionate friends. . . . This expectation instills in the composer an urge to create."

Boston Symphony Program

The Vivaldi works were the Concerto in D minor, Op. 3, No. 11; the Concerto Grosso B minor, for four violins and string orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10, and the "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. In the last work the two mentioned soloists were Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto. The Festival Chorus participated. Hugh Ross, as conductor, gave the work a well organized reading. Attendance on Saturday night totaled 4,084.

On Saturday evening the Theater-Concert Hall housed another program by the Boston Symphony. This was all Vivaldi, excepting Boccherini's Concerto for Cello in B-Flat Major, Op. 34. The soloist was Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, who was in excellent fettle.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Vivaldi by Bostonians at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 18—Saturday night's concert by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony personnel here on the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival, was a deceiving event. The combination of blistering weather plus Vivaldi-Boccherini music brought out approximately 5,000 people all concentrated around the area surrounding the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall.

Thus when milling through the strolling crowds before the concert and during intermission, the impression was that, being able to see nothing but music lovers, the program was one housed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

The Shed concerts, however, only begin next Friday night, continuing for the following four week-ends, three programs each week.

Wisest last Saturday were the majority who brought blankets and sat outside rather than lose weight rapidly through shedding gallons of perspiration.

Mayes Excellent

Considering the steaming, muggy weather, Samuel Mayes, first cellist, performed the Boccherini Concerto in B Flat Major, Op. 34, in stellar fashion, creating an extraordinary mood of contemplation in the adagio; and, by contrast, brightness in the concluding scherzo-like rondo.

Anne Bancroft and Ricardo Montalban romance in "A Life in the Balance," drama opening Friday at the RKO Palace.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster, didn't fare so well in his part of the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B Minor for Four Violins and String Orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10. He slid around among many notes instead of playing them accurately. The second-chair fiddler of the solo quartet put him quite into the pale by comparison.

Burgin also had the advantage over Mayes of performing in his shirtsleeves, as did the rest of the ensemble, while Mayes in summer dinner coat together with conductor, Charles Munch, looked handsome but undoubtedly dripped inside.

Mayes throughout was efficient and controlled with the help of the pocket handkerchief which came to his rescue in the face of too much water. Grandson of a Cherokee Indian, his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers, all of which should combine to make him take things in his stride which he did. The audience was most enthusiastic.

Ross Leads 'Gloria'

Vivaldi's "Gloria," assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and two soloists selected from the student body, made up the after intermission schedule. Hugh Ross conducted the beautiful, glowing work which was sung with skill and enthusiasm by the ensemble and, of course, played brilliantly by the Bostonians with the exception of the solo oboist who lost his place in one section.

The coming week-end at Tanglewood finds Munch on the podium for the Friday night and Sunday afternoon events; and Pierre Monteux conducting the Saturday concert. The programs will feature the Beethoven Symphonies 1, 2, 4, 6 and 7, plus the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. For further information write the Berkshire Festival at Lenox or telephone Lenox 600.

Music Tonight . . .

Lewisohn Stadium: "La Traviata" in concert form, Thomas Scherman conducting. Cast includes Camilla Williams, soprano; Richard Tucker, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone. 8:30.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by the Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park 8:30.

[207]

New York Herald Tribune Monday, July 18, 1955

Eagle 7/18

Music

Cellist Samuel Mayes Thrills Crowd at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE LAST TWO concerts of the second weekend at Tanglewood consisted of a French program yesterday afternoon and one entirely of Italian music the preceding evening. Charles Munch closed his program yesterday with two compositions not previously in the repertory of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and which proved, in their apposite ways, valuable additions. The "Serenade" of Darius Milhaud and a symphony of Arthur Honegger are especially suited to the size ensemble used in these concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. The Milhaud has an energetic rhythmic idiom so characteristic of that part of his music which derives its inspiration from the folk-music and dances of Central America. Milhaud became familiar with these while on the staff of French diplomat Paul Claudel at the time he was accredited to various Central American countries. There is a central quieter section between two similar vigorous ones which divides the intentionally vulgar texture of the short composition.

* * *

HONEGGER'S symphony, his fourth, and entitled "Delices Basilienses," is a much more serious and refined effort even though it, too, makes use of indigenous popular songs—in this case, Swiss. It is for a chamber orchestra, abounding in opportunities for solo instruments all around the various desks, and Munch expressed its great potentialities most effectively.

The afternoon had started with a suite from Rameau's opera "Daedalus," a pleasing sequence of classical contrasting movements, an ideal type from which to depart to the ethereal suite of Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin." Munch played this with a rare beauty, giving it the distant misty character so much of it requires. He called oboist Ralph Bomberg to the front of the stage at the close to share with him the applause his particular artistry evoked.

* * *

AFTER THE NEXT work, Munch called another orchestra soloist to the front. This time it was Doriot Anthony Dwyer for her lovely and outstanding performance in the Faure "Pavane." There was an especially soothing quality to the Faure and the first three more quiet movements of the Ravel, ideally appropriate, we thought, to the extremely hot weather which prevailed Sunday afternoon. There could not have been a worse afternoon for a fiddler to put a violin under his chin and the lack of apparent necessity here to exert themselves carried over to the audience.

Samuel Mayes

In the preceding evening Samuel Mayes played the Boccherini cello concerto between two concerti grossi of Vivaldi and the "Gloria" of the same composer for chorus, soloists and orchestra. Mayes covered himself with glory. He produced a virile tone of intensely vibrant warmth, dove into the intricacies and technical obstacles of the concerto with confident, even reckless, abandon and emerged in every detail and instance clear, clean and with excellent intonation. He gave the first movement dramatic expression, the slow central movement tenderness and spacious eloquence and his tone in the restrained passages was as beautiful as in the totally released power of his most forceful moments. Even in the final movement which we find the least interesting of the concerto he was still the master of his instrument and all its pontentialities. The ovation he received was tremendous and entirely deserved.

* * *

MUNCH PLAYED both numbers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 concerti grossi of Vivaldi. Both are for strings alone and it was our surmise that Munch, the onetime violinist, was enjoying these himself as much as Munch, the conductor. The opening concentrated D minor phrase which is hammered, or rather, sawed home on a wonderfully long pedal point must have given every string player within earshot great satisfaction as it might well have done to every music lover. The Boston string section just reveled in it. In the B minor concerto, there were four violin soloists, Richard Burgin, Alfred Krips, George Zazofsky and Clarence Knudsen. Vivaldi passes the baton from one to the other in a stimulating relay. The Boston strings responded with enthusiasm and it was reflected in the buoyant spirit of the evening.

* * *

AFTER intermission Hugh Ross took the podium to conduct the Mass in which the Festival chorus took part and in which Saramae Endich was soprano soloist and Sadie McCollum, contralto. Ross' chorus was not a large group but the voices were excellent and powerful. They gave him a great variety of effects, such as in the awesome opening "Gloria" and then, later, in the "Propeter Magnam Gloriam." The fugue here was stated with conviction and maintained with lucid independence. Miss Endich sang the "Domine Deus" pleasingly. The contralto assignments required a vocalist of more distinction.

Tanglewood Tales

Eagle 7/18

Sahl's Composition At Forum July 24

The second composers' forum, Sunday evening, July 24, will have a novelty, "Music for Two Horns," composed in a single week since the author, Michael Sahl, of New York, arrived at the Berkshire Music Center July 3. Sahl, a student here in 1954, shared one of the composition awards made at the end of last summer. Aged 20, Boston-born, he has composed since he was eight years old. He was graduated from Amherst College this spring, Phi Beta Kappa. The college honored him with a performance at commencement exercises of his "Symphony No. 1 in E." He has been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst, and a residence fellowship by Harvard, where he will commence graduate studies in the fall in the school of arts and sciences.

Eagle 7/18

Sammy Vincent Arranges Buses To Tanglewood

Music lovers without cars will still be able to take in the 12 main concerts at Tanglewood this season because Sammy Vincent couldn't bear to think of anybody missing "that solid beat out there."

Upon learning from the Berkshire Hills Conference that the Berkshire Street Railway Co. had discontinued its Tanglewood runs this year, the music store owner contacted the company and arranged to have one bus make the trip for each concert. Regular fares will be charged for the run and the 35 seats will be on a first-come, first-served basis. Mr. Vincent has agreed to pay the amount under a certain minimum established by the company. Patrons will be able to recognize the Tanglewood bus by a banner proclaming the "Sammy Vincent Special."

The bus will leave Park Square one hour before concert time for the evening and afternoon concerts. It will return immediately following the performance.

Tanglewood Tales

Festival Visitors

Boston Symphony Orchestra trustee Edward A. Taft of Boston, is spending a week in the Berkshires, visiting Tanglewood. Other Festival guests over the weekend are Richard Waddell, advertising manager of RCA-Victor, planning the southern tour of the Boston Symphony and its recording program; and Miss Friede Rothe, of New York, personal representative of mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel, soloist on Leonard Bernstein's all-Mozart program last night.

* * *

Camping at Bowl

Eight Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood this summer are disdaining the relative comforts of Wheatleigh, the male students dormitory, for the more rugged life, and are camping on the edge of Stockbridge Bowl. Since three are tympanists, two are French horns, and the other three opera singers, they are well equipped to give a nocturnal concert of their own. In one tent are Albert E. Payson, of Springfield, Ill. and Mervin W. Britton, tympanists; in another, tenor Leon E. Heiple, of Wilmington, Ill. and Henry Levy, of Kingston, N.Y., both singers. Other tenters are Lloyd S. McCausland, tympanist of Milford, Mass., a repeater from last summer; Lewus C. Rubinstein, of Albany, N.Y., French horn; Richard E. Krause, Delmar, N.Y., opera singer. Kaid Friedel, of Morristown, N.J., will be joined by his wife later. Friedel is the other horn student.

* * *

To Scout for Talent

When he has completed his free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, Pops director Arthur Fiedler is expected to visit Tanglewood in early August, to scout for talent for his three-year-old touring Pops orchestra. When the popular maestro came to guest for Tanglewood on Parade in 1954 he took back with him Constance Weldon of Miami, talented tuba player from the student orchestra; David Allan, of Medford, Mass., French horn player in the student symphony; and John Grande, of Long Island City, N.Y., student clarinetist. Grande and Allan have returned to Tanglewood for second summers, Grande again with the student symphony, Allan managing the canteen at Wheatleigh.

Eagle 7/18

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Music Center forum. Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.

8:30—Jean Leon Destine, "Voudun, a Religious Dance Ritual." Jacob's Pillow, east of Lee.

8:45—"The Old Maid," starring Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

Festival Ahead In Attendance For 1955 Events

Eagle 7/18

TANGLEWOOD — Attendance at the chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall continued to shatter all previous records over the weekend. A total of 18,180 persons attended the six chamber orchestra concerts over the first two weekends of the Berkshire Festival, compared to 16,650 for six concerts during the same period a year ago.

Saturday evening's crowd was the largest of the season when 4,064 turned out for the concert. Yesterday afternoon a crowd of 2,510 attended and on Friday there were 3,129 on hand. The Wednesday evening chamber music concert drew 1,250.

Student events during the week attracted 2,800 persons to Tanglewood.

Beethoven Chamber Music Lovers Will Hear It Every Wednesday at Tanglewood

By George E. Membrino

For the sixteenth summer in succession the Boston Symphony Orchestra has returned [redacted] summer home at Tan[redacted] Lenox, for six glorious weeks of the best in music under the stars. With its conductor, Charles Munch, recently returned from a visit to France, this week marked the opening of the 1955 Tanglewood season.

Replacing the performances of chamber music, which in former years was donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, the Kroll String Quartet, sponsored by the Berkshire Festival with proceeds going to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, was heard last Wednesday night. A large audience gathered in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

A program of all-Beethoven String quartets was heard. Performed were the String Quartets in C minor, F. minor, and C sharp minor. The delightful writing of Beethoven in the quartet style has never been equalled since his time. This year will be a blessing to Beethoven chamber music lovers, for the season calls for Beethoven every Wednesday night throughout the entire festival.

The second program of the festival series was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber group. This group is formed of a limited number of Boston Symphony Orchestra players especially chosen to fulfill the role of playing this type of music in its best fashion, a point fully achieved this past week-end.

Soloist for the Bach Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings, was flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer. Her faultless technical facility, which was evident throughout, was most certainly worthy of the ovation accorded her at the conclusion of the suite. In fact, so overwhelming was the audience's applause that Conductor Munch asked her to repeat the final number of the suite, the Badinerie.

It was almost two years to the day that this same performer with the same group and at the same place, rendering the same composition, displayed flute playing at its best. It was at that time that Mr. Munch broke with tradition in having her repeat the last phase as was repeated last Friday night. When one has as little chance to hear such a brilliant performance under such favorable conditions, it is a tribute to all who had a hand in it, including the orchestra and composer.

Tanglewood Turn to sixth page

Tanglewood

(Continued from first page)

Following the Bach Suite in preclassic style the opposite extreme, musically, was then offered—"Orpheus" Ballet in Three Scenes by Igor Stravinsky. This ultra-modern conception of music composition is a talking point whenever mentioned. In flavor it seems to be poly-everything. Rhythms, themes, and harmonies take on such an abundant air that in analysis we actually at times must separate all of the musical parts into double meanings. Probably the infrequency of music in as modern a flavor is the reason for the great debate. With more intensified and frequent hearings, however, the listener finds it more acceptable. The orchestra, in this case, was musically prepared to meet all the desires and challenges of this contemporary composer.

The orchestra ended the evening in true classic style by performing Mozart's Symphony in D Major, "Prague," No. 38 (K 504). One of the last by this brilliant composer of the late eighteenth century, it was more than well received. Mr. Munch, however, seemed to take the first movement, adagio (slow) and the final movement, presto (fast), to extremes. This, however, did not appear to detract from the overall enjoyment of the work.

At the student orchestra performance last Thursday night it was inspiring to hear as part of the program Prokofiev's Peter and the Wolf. It is a descriptive composition intended to familiarize one with the various tone colors of the instruments. For example, the bird is played by the flute; duck, the oboe; cat, the clarinet; wolf, the horns; hunters, the tympanies; grandfather, the bassoon; and Peter, the strings. A narrator tells the story while the orchestra plays the descriptive music.

With so many of the summer camps in the area sending youngsters to the student orchestra series, no better selection could have been made for the opening student concert. We all too frequently take for granted the enjoyment of serious music without much consideration given to the channels of such. A work such as the above-mentioned does more for the enhancement of young listeners than a great deal less programatic music could do in numerous concerts. Bravo to the program chairman of the student orchestra for acknowledging this fact and doing something constructive to remedy it.

The Thursday night student concerts admission is gained by membership in the Society of the Friends, a helping organization for the Berkshire Music Center students. If any one feels that what Tanglewood offers is above their listening musical level, attending these Thursday night concerts would certainly prove a help. The enthusiasm of the students alone without consideration of the fine musical content portrayed, is certainly worthy of support.

It is more than stimulating to see the number of area residents attending the various festival offerings. Let's hope that for the remainder of the season more of our residents, especially the younger set, get the opportunity to attend at least one concert. Without doubt attendance at other concerts would follow once one is exposed to the aesthetic offerings so close at hand.

[illegible] Schmidt and John Foulkes, Morris Nelson and Dr. Ray Gilmore, Peter Schweitzer and Archie Sharkey, Charles Silvernial and Ben Sullivan, Dr. Edward Cerutti and William Merrick.

Martin Straus and Owen Klein, C. C. Loomis and Thomas Clark, W. S. Ginn and R. T. Jones, 3rd, R. C. Carroll and Livingston Carroll, Frank Noyes and Williamson Pell, William Tracy and Edward Sargent, E. A. M. Cobden and E. A. M. Cobden, Jr., John Mullen and E. K. Gillette, J. S. Reynolds and S. Harrison Rollinson.

At the Stockbridge father-son golf tournament held Sunday, Joseph Morrill, Jr., and his son, Joseph, 3rd, won the event by posting a low gross 71. Low net honors went to Peter Schweitzer and son, Peter, Jr., of Monterey, who won low net honors with a 63. They had a 70 gross. Other scores of golfers from the Wyantenuck Club who participated in the father-son event were: James D. and Paul Hickey, 82-15, 67; Warren Dolby and Steve Dolby, 75-6—69; Dr. Arthur C. Smith and A. C. Smith, 83-14—69; William F. Flaherty and William, Jr., 83-14—69; W. F. Shields and R. F. Shields, 95-21—74. Robert Kinne and Thomas Kinne of Housatonic, members of the Stockbridge club, had a 77-7—70.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

JUL 15 1955

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box [illegible], Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-[illegible]

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 40,726

JUL 14 1955

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—This year's session of the Organ Institute at Andover is scheduled for August 1 through the 20. The usual series of concerts and student classes will be held.

In the few years of it's existance the Organ Institute has rapidly taken a place among the world's leaders in the advancement of knowledge and culture through music. The original purpose of the institute to found a school of organ which would influence both the student and followers or organ music has been realized far beyond first expressed hopes.

In these years the school has attracted students from many parts of the world, and a faculty membership representative of the finest artists of our time. The results have been so great that the Organ Institute is now recognized throughout the entire world, and this year is expected to reach a new high in attendance as well as accomplishment.

Probably the main factor in gaining this prestige has been the many brilliant concerts given by the long list of artists. Their ability to thrill audiences as well as take an active part in the many classes has created a new interest in this school of music.

Recalling many of the great organ recitals of the past is quite easy. Each program has contributed its part in making organ music a part of everyone's interest.

In past seasons people have heard magnificient recitals played by such organists as Fritz Heitmann, Arthur Poister, Arthur Howes, director and founder of the Organ Institute; E. Power Biggs, Ernest White, Catherine Crozier and others.

This season's schedule will present Arthur Howes, Aug. 5; Catherine Crozier, Aug. 6-12; and Finn Videro, Aug. 13-19-20. Finn Videro is new to the Organ Institute and will be heard in this part of the country for the first time.

Opening this evening at the Arundel Theatre in Kennebunkport, is Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe". This favorite score will be given also tomorrow evening and Saturday matinee and evening. A splendid cast of talented and experienced artists will be heard in this full scale production. Wesley Boynton is artistic director and Morse Haithwaite is musical director.

Next week, Monday through July 20, the world famous Royal Danish ballet will appear. This group is a fine and talented organization. The repetoire is basically standard and is cleverly mixed with works from folklore.

The Berkshire festival is now underway and each week will bring more of the world's most famous artists to the scene of which is quickly becoming the greatest of all summer music festivals.

The famous Newport music festival should enjoy its greatest season. The programs in this series are such that the imagination of all music lovers is easily captured. The emphasis in this festival seems to be on vocal music.

Next month will find the composer conference in Vermont in session. This original and important effort on the part of composers, teachers and writers has brought a new field of activity to New England. It is now expected that the conference will again contribute widely to music not only here but in other parts of the world.

The Pro Musica programs in western Massachusetts are creating a new insight and familiarity in chamber music. This superb series is bringing to listeners a chance to hear much of the finest in this school of writing. Possibly there is no other center where chamber music can be found whose pattern covers the writings of several centuries.

"Larry plays tennis from January to January," said Mr. Bell.

"I find you can play tennis comfortably whenever the thermometer is thirty-five or above," said Mr. Fertig.

"Larry used to be captain of the N.Y.U. team," Mr. Bell said, and disappeared into the locker room.

Mr. Fertig informed us that this is about the only building in New York that is free of shade and has a roof strong enough to stand the weight of the courts. "To get the slate and cinders up here," he said, "Joe Molfetto, who built the courts, had the cinders and slate carried in the freight elevator, in bags, to the tenth floor, which is as far as the elevator goes. Then he tore down a wall and had a chute built to hoist them the rest of the way. I had sent the data on some other possible sites down to my stepson, who is an associate professor of meteorology at Florida State University, in Tallahassee, to find out how much sun we could expect. We consulted civil engineers about stress and strain. We had to get municipal approval to put all this weight on the roof. The financial and legal sides of it were as complicated as the Squibb-Mathieson-Olin merger. I had to consult real-estate lawyers. We had one of the best roof men in the country go over the place for weeks."

A man in a gabardine suit stopped by. "Why aren't you [illegible]y writing about consumer credits?" he asked.

Mr. Fertig laughed good-naturedly.

Berkeley Bell walked out in shorts and a white sweater. "Come on, Larry, let's bat some balls around," he said.

"Right," said Mr. Fertig.

Preference

A WESTPORT lady reports that as she deposited her daughter at a children's party, she heard the hostess ask the guests what they would like to drink—Coca-Cola, hot chocolate, milk? "Milk on the rocks," said a small, sophisticated voice.

One Contra Bassoon

A COUPLE of weeks ago, we told you about a jazz violinist from Denmark. Now, to prove that we don't play favorites, either musically or geographically, we'd like to tell you about a classical violinist from Korea. His name is John S. Kim, and he's not only a violinist but an organist, a composer, and the founder and present conductor of the R.O.K. Naval Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, which boasts seventy musicians and a sixty-voice chorus. A short, bespectacled man of forty-three, Mr. Kim speaks excellent English and has a winning and almost ineradicable smile. "This is my third trip to your country in three years," he told us. "Just before my first trip, the American Korean Foundation had given me ten thousand dollars with which to buy instruments for my orchestra. Also to buy some second-hand costumes from the Metropolitan. I still need a contra bassoon, three French horns, three or four bass violins, a concert-grand piano, and costumes for 'Aïda.' A ship of the South Korean Navy is at San Diego now, waiting to carry my purchases home."

How does a symphony orchestra come to be connected with the South Korean Navy? Because of the Communists. No sooner had they entered Whitney Darrow, Jr.

"I loved the way you said 'I do.'"

Seoul in 1950 than they started rounding up members of the Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra, which Mr. Kim had founded five years earlier. "The Communists had the name of every man in my orchestra," Mr. Kim said. "I went underground at once, taking most of the orchestra's scores with me. Some of the other members were not so lucky. When, after three months, the Communists left Seoul, they kidnapped forty of my men, forty amateur musicians, and about a hundred singers, some of them women. They took nearly all our instruments, including even our timpani and double basses. Music is very important to Communist politics. Sometimes on the radio we hear from North Korea a symphony orchestra—they probably call it the People's Orchestra—and we wonder if what we are hearing are our own instruments, played by our old friends." At first, Mr. Kim had it in mind to arm himself and the remaining members of the Philharmonic and light out after the Communists. "I met an admiral one day and explained my plans to him," Mr. Kim said. "The admiral said I was crazy. 'No use for people like you to fight with guns, you must fight with music,' he said, and we have been doing this ever since, as a part of the admiral's Navy."

The R.O.K. Naval Symphony Orchestra is giving a festival of music in Korea this summer. "We will play about forty concerts in Seoul," Mr. Kim said. "Many of them will consist of music by Brahms, Dvořák, Saint-Saëns, and Tchaikovsky. We will play about fifty concerts in other cities throughout the country and give fourteen performances of 'Aïda.'" Western music is highly regarded by Koreans. It first reached the country about seventy years ago, in the form of hymns and folk songs, introduced by Christian missionaries. Mr. Kim feels that there are striking similarities of mood and content between Korean and Western folk songs. "My father, a trader and for thirty-five years an elder of the Presbyterian Church, used to sing Korean folk songs to us children," he said. "Very emotional they are, very like Spanish and Irish folk songs. My older sisters went to missionary school, and the first songs taught me to sing were 'My Old tucky Home' and 'Swanee Rive took up the violin and the organ
I was eight. For two years, I stu musical theory in Tokyo. When Japanese ruled Korea, it was har form any large musical group, be they were afraid to let intellectuals and exchange ideas. Someday I ho will be able to get an American ductor to take my place in Seoul year or so. Then I will come here study and compose. I am interest fitting Korean folk melodies into W ern structures. I have been offered lowship at the Boston University School, but what can one do? T is twelve hours a day of work, work in Seoul. I would like, too, to duct again at Tanglewood. I condu a Brahms overture there in 1953.
English was not then very good was extremely nervous at rehea but the performance was a suc
Afterward, Charles Munch and L ard Bernstein came backstage embraced me. I felt very good. knows? Perhaps someda
Mr. Kim shrugged, and smi smile of undiminished splen

"Will somebody please adjust that damn blind?"

Ami de Paris

A YOUNG American we know got a job
typist in Paris not long ag failed to acquire a work p in the form of a carte de tr
Presently, when her visitor' mit lapsed, she was called t
Prefecture of Police. Sinc friend was employed by American who had no car travail either, she didn't to say anything about her ployment. At the Prefectur was taken in hand by a mot inquisitor.

"You've got to tell us
you are making a living h
the policewoman said. "O wise we won't renew your mit to stay."

"I can't tell you," said friend.

"You can tell me," said inquisitor. "I will keep it in confidence."

Our friend stalled aroun a while, and then got a spiration. "Madame," whispered, "j'ai un ami."

"Alors," said the policew an, "why didn't you say th the first place? Ça, that's own business. We can e

Second Thoughts in Music

Early Tanglewood Events Establish High Standards

Bach's B-Minor Mass First Choral Presentation of Season; Bach-Mozart Series Starts; Thor Johnson Conducts Chamber Orchestra

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 16 — The concerts of the past week at Tanglewood have been among the most rewarding that the Berkshire Music Festival has offered in several years. Charles Munch and the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra appear to be in top form and the formidable weather which plagued us for the week did not diminish the spirit of the players.

Last Sunday we mentioned the fine concert of Beethoven string quartets played by the Kroll String Quartet. People are still talking about it, for it was as fine a recital as one could ask for. The works of Beethoven are being featured this season. We shall hear the nine symphonies, two piano concertos, the violin concerto and works for strings. Rudolf Serkin will be heard in a sonata recital and so will Isaac Stern. Gregor Piatagorsky will play the cello sonatas.

Star Soloists

The so-called Bach-Mozart chamber orchestra concerts opened last Friday with Charles Munch conducting. It was a splendid concert, opening with the Sinfonia from the "Easter" oratorio. The group offered a thrilling performance of this vital work, with trumpeter Voisin playing magnificently.

The particular star of the concert was Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, whose playing during the performance of Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, for flute and strings earned her six recalls and an encore. This unassuming young woman is surely one of the greatest flutists of the day. Her wonderul tone, sensitivity and musicianship combine to permit a superlative performance whenever she plays.

Turning from Bach, Mr. Munch offered a gripping performance of Stravinsky's balet "Orpheus". It is the old story of Orpheus and Eurydice. The work is fairly recent, written in 1947 and first danced by the Ballet Theater Group the following year. Even without the action this is a powerful piece of music, alternating between passages of simple beauty to those barbaric episodes in which this composer delights.

The concluding work on this program was Mozart's Symphony in D major. Mr. Munch and his players reveled in its grace and humor, providing a finely knit, eminently satisfying performance.

Johnson Conducts

There was added interest to the program Saturday night for Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former student of Koussevitzky, returned to conduct the chamber orchestra in a fine program. He opened with the stately Concerto Grosso for string orchestra in B minor, Op. 6 No. 12 by Handel. These 12 concertos explore the possibilities of a string orchestra but they are not a different spirit, a spontenity and personal warmth. Mr. Johnson knows what he wants and usually gets it from his players. Time will give him a greater flexibility.

Turning from Handel, Mr. Johnson offered a charming performance of Haydn's Sinfonie Concertante for violin, cello, oboe and bassoon. With such outstanding virtuosos as the first desk men of the Boston Symphony, Mr. Johnson had only to indicate his desires and they were met. It was a performance to cherish and one which should be recorded.

It is quite a distance from Haydn to Hindemith, but somehow his "Concerto on Old Folk Melodies" for viola and small orchestra" fitted into the program. The sensitive, handsomely played viola part by Joseph DiPasquale made up in great measure for some of the unlovely music we heard. Hindemith can write beautiful music and there were beautiful episodes for viola and harp wherein the folk tunes were coherent; what Hindemith did with some of the other folk tunes was to make them practicaly unrecognizable, downright ugly. Mr. Johnson conducted vigorously and the reading was vital and animated, but it was the artistry of DiPasquale that made it listenable.

The first choral presentation of the season came Sunday afternoon when Mr. Munch, assisted by the Radcliffe Chorale and Harvard Glee Club and soloists, gave a glorious performance of Bach's mass in B minor. The performance also marked the first appearance this season of Adele Addison, soprano, of Springfield. She will be heard later in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" and ninth symphony. Other members of the quartet were Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. This admirable quartet was worthy of the music. No more need be said.

In spite of the heat, and it must have been terrific in the rear of the stage where the chorus was seated, the young men and women sang with a precision and vitality that lifted the music to the heights, where it belongs. They had sung the Mass in Boston last winter. Mr. Munch conducted easily, relaxed and evidently enjoying every note.

This then, is an account of the concerts during the first week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. Priceless treasures lie ahead and it looks as though the Festival this year will be one of the finest in its history.

Berkshire Music School

There are 405 students in the Berkshire Music School operated and staffed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. We attended the first performance by the Student Orchestra of Dept. 1, which had been trained by pianist Seymour Lipkin, who appeared in Springfield last season. Of course, these young instrumentalists are all advanced players, but the way they played after having been together only four days was a tribute to Mr. Lipkin and to their own desire to make the most of the opportunities afforded them.

Three student conductors led one number each, the Copland "Outdoor Overture", "L'Apres-midi d'un Faune" and "Peter and the Wolf." Mr. Lipken led them through the second symphony of Schumann. This orchestra will give a weekly concert and we look forward to hearing each one, noting the improvement and particularly the work of the student conductors.

Famed Conductors

These two celebrated conductors, Pierre Monteux (left) and Charles Munch, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra this week in the season's first two concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, is to conduct an all-Beethoven program Friday night, while Monteux will appear as guest conductor Saturday night, first of his three appearances at Lenox this season.

New York Journal-American
Saturday, July 16, 1955

All-Mozart Program:

Bernstein Fine At Tanglewood

Conducted and Played; Jennie Tourel Sang

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 16.—Leonard Bernstein created something of a sensation conducting an all-Mozart program in the theatre-concert hall last night.

Absent for a year, he has returned a finer conductor and a more sincere musician. Since he appeared as both conductor and pianist, it was a Bernstein evening—with one marked difference: the listener was less conscious of Bernstein and more conscious of the music.

His exceptional talent is crystallizing. Though he has always been more restrained in Mozart than in other composers, he conducted with deeper purpose last night. This was noticeable at once in the overture to "Don Giovanni," asserted itself clearly in the "Linz" symphony, and carried over into the piano concerto K. 453.

The less familiar "Linz" symphony made grateful listening. It is a lovely work, too often passed over for the better-known works. Bernstein played it with considerable feeling, perhaps somewhat beyond its classic limits, but still in good taste. He conveyed the joyousness of the finale, if not all its buoyancy.

As soloist in the concerto, he again revealed his accomplishments as a pianist. Though a feat to conduct and play so successfully, it was not the performance of a showman but rather that of an artist communicating his understanding of music.

While indulging himself a bit romantically in the andante, he played the presto with just the right touch of exuberance.

Bernstein [illegible] to share the spotlight [illegible] Jennie Tourel who teamed up with him as she has done on other occasions to sing three numbers: an aria from the opera "Idomeneo," "Al Desio, Di Chi T' Adora" K. 577, and "Non Temer, Amato Bene" K. 505, with Bernstein playing the piano obbligato. While the florid vocalism eluded her, she sang with all her customary artistry, sometimes quite beguilingly.

An audience of 2,100 [illegible] more than the usual [illegible] of enthusiasm. It found [illegible] Tourel much to its liking, but showered applause on Bernstein, especially after the concerto.

Full Boston Symphony In Music Shed This Week

Charles Munch to Conduct All-Beethoven Program Friday Night With Isaac Stern Soloist; Pierre Monteux to Conduct Saturday Night Concert

Lenox, July 16—The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symohony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Stern and Zakin

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theater-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers", by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10.00 a. m. (July 23), for which the nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete programs are:

Wed. July 20-8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music:
Violin Sonatas, No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 .... Beethoven
No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring")
No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2
Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin
Fri. July 22-8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Overture to "Coriolan" .... Beethoven
Violin Concerto, Soloist: Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 7, in A-major
Charles Munch, conductor.
Sat. July 23-8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor
.... Respighi:
Symphony No. 2, in D major . Beethoven:
Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions:
"Death and Transfiguration" .. Strauss:
Pierre Monteux, conductor
Sun. July 24-2.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Symphony No. 1, in C major .. Beethoven:
Symphony No. 4, in B-flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
Charles Munch, conductor

Bach-Mozart Concerts

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart's chamber concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall are:

Sat. July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian Music. Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Converto for Celo, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, Mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's summer school.

Sun. July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger; Symphony No. 4.

Tanglewood Soloists

Isaac Stern, among the foremost American concert violinists, will make two appearances this week at Tanglewood. He is shown here with Alexander Zakin, pianist, with whom he will perform three Beethoven violin sonatas Wednesday night. Stern will also be heard as soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto Friday night, in the first concert of the season in the Music Shed.

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 16 — Twelve Monday evening breadcasts of highlights from summer's Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are being given by the National Broadcasting Co., to maintain a continuity of its winter breadcasts from Symphony Hall of music director Charles Munch's Saturday night concerts. Commencing this week, through Sept. 26, or until the winter series of broadcasts resume live with the start of the orchestra's 75th season in Boston, NBC stations nation-wide will present a 45-minute concert over the air, from 8.15-9 p. m. EDT.

The broadcasts are produced by Avner Rakov and George Voutsas. Ben Grauer is commentator, and C. Harold Campbell is the engineer in charge of "taping" the portions of the Berkshire Festival concerts used. The schedule, worked out by BSO manager T. D. Perry, Jr., with the assistance of Martin Bookspan, commenced with Charles Munch conducting the Bach Suite No. 2 for flute and strings, which Festival patrons heard at Tanglewood Friday night, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer as soloist; and the Mozart "Prague" Symphony, heard on the same program.

Monday radio audiences may rehear the Handel Concerto Grosso No. 12 and the Haydn Symphonie Concertante, which Thor Johnson conducted at Tanglewood last Saturday evening. Of the 12 broadcasts, Mr. Munch will be heard in nine programs; Pierre Monteux (Aug. 29); Leonard Bernstein (Sept. 5) and Thor Johnson (July 18) in one each.

* * *

Alexander Hilsberg, conductor of the New Orleans Philharmonic, will be in Tanglewood Monday, to hold auditions for violinists and cellists for his noted orchestra. String players from the Berkshires are invited to compete. The auditions will be held at 4.30 p. m. in the administration office of the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

The ranks of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society singers in Tanglewood's Sunday performance of the Bach Mass in B minor were swelled by some well-known campus personalities. Mary Smith, secretary to Boston Symphony manager T. D. Perry, Jr., sang in the chorus, as did Miss Iva D. Hiatt, of Smith College, who is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department this summer.

Another alumna of Tanglewood performing with the ensemble was Miss Lorna Cook de Varon, Mr. Ross's assistant of the past two summers, who leads choral singing at the New England Conservatory of Music. Florence Dunn, of Williamstown, assistant to Ingolf Dahl in the Tanglewood Study Group department, was also noticed; as well as Harry Kraut, a Tanglewood guide for two summers and former manager of the Harvard Glee Club; and Peter Newman, of New York, who was employed in the registrar's office of the Berkshire Music Center in 1954.

Other Tanglewood week end guests were Lucien Wulsin, president, and James Mixter, public relations officer, of the Baldwin Piano Co., from Cincinnati; and John Ortiz, from the New York office of the firm.

* * *

When Charles Munch gave the first Tanglewood performance of the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10 on his program of Italian music with the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players on this evening at Tanglewood, the following members of the orchestra were soloists, all doubling this summer as members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center: Richard Burgin, Alfred Krips, George Zazofsky and Clarence Knudson.

Burgin is associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and its concertmaster, also conductor of the Portland, Me., Symphony Orchestra. Krips is assistant concertmaster, and appeared as a soloist with the orchestra last spring in the Mozart Concerto in G major, K. 216; Zazofsky, assistant concertmaster of the Boston Pops Orchestra, was a soloist with the Pops last month, playing the first movement of the Beethoven Concerto. Knudson leads the BSO second violin section, and is a frequent chamber music player.

* * *

Thor Johnson, the distinguished alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center's conducting classes — he was a pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940 and 1941 — has a busy schedule ahead this summer, before resuming on Oct. 1 his post as conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Before coming to Tanglewood for the concert he led Saturday, he had made a tour of the Far East with Toscanini's former orchestra, the Symphony of the Air; and conducted at the festival of Moravian music in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Tomorrow, Mr. Johnson will be back in North Carolina, opening the summer concerts at the Transylvania Music Camp in Brevard. Next Saturday, he will conduct at Twenty-three young composers are in residence at Tanglewood this summer, studying with the noted modern composers Roger Sessions, Professor of Music at Prineton University, and Boris Blacher, Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. Five of them are distaff students of the Berkshire Music Center, and six are from foreign lands.

The first concert by Tanglewood's young composers, at which they perform their own works and argue with each other and their audience their respective merits, will be held tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall. Always one of Tanglewood's most stimulating events, the Composers' Forums are open to the public through membership in the Friends' society.

* * *

Tomorrow morning will witness the second concert this summer by chamber music students of the Berkshire Music Center, at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. Max Watras of Chicopee will play the clarinet in the Beethoven Quintet for winds and piano in E flat, Op. 16. This concert is also open to the public through membership in the Friends' Society.

Two unannounced extra concerts by Berkshire Music Center students are being given Tanglewood during the coming week. Members of the Friends are invited to a program of opera scenes, to be performed under the guidance of Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, on Monday afternoon at 4.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Ingolf Dahl's Tanglewood Study Group (Dept V), set up for amateurs of music who spend their vacations in an atmosphere of music, rather than in making music their careers, will give an informal program in the Barn at Tanglewood, next Saturday, at 4 p. m., which is open to the public without admission.

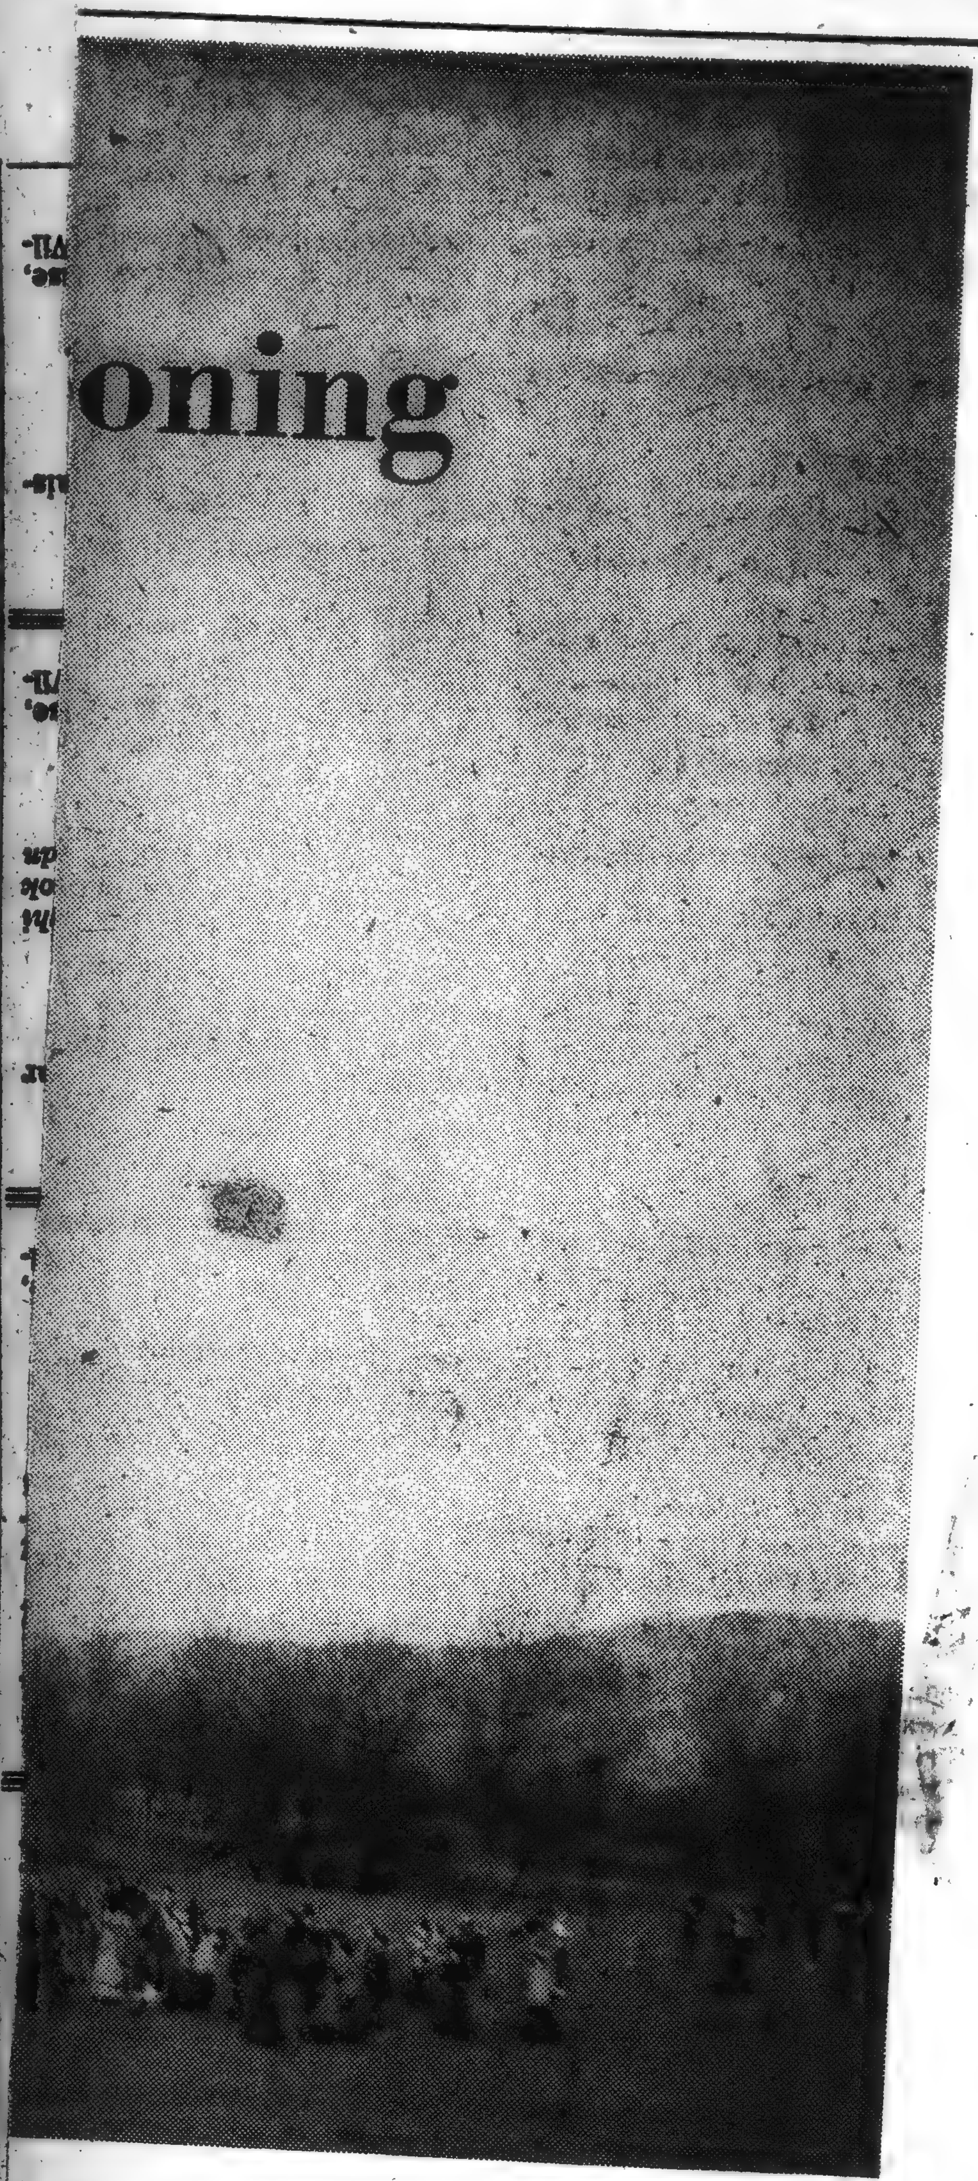
ISAAC STERN LISTED ON 'TELEPHONE HOUR'

Another American artist will be added to the international roster of virtuoso musicians appearing regularly on The Telephone Hour when the brilliant violinist Isaac Stern, makes his first appearance on the program tomorrow. (NBC Radio, 9 p. m. WBZA.

For this broadcast he has chosen two numbers well liked by violinists. He will offer first the opening movement of the "Concerto in E Minor" by Felix Mendelssohn. His other number will be Fritz Kreisler's "Scillienne and Regaudon."

Doneld Voorhees will conduct the Bell Symphonic Orchestra in Edvard Grieg's "Erotik" and an orchestral arrangement of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C-sharp Minor." The concert will originate in Carnegie Hall, New York.

oning



BUBBLE of hydrogen gas lifts a basket full of aero-50 years ago at Aero Park, Pittsfield. Once aloft, these r fliers were at the mercy of every air current. However, of several hundred miles were not unusual occurrences.

Manan

HIGH FLIERS of years ago, Mrs. Blanche Stowell and Oscar R. Hutchinson study photo of balloon ascension. Mrs. Stowell was the first Pittsfield woman to fly in a balloon.

GAS PLAYED big part in life of late Dr. Sidney S. Stowell. As dentist, used for extractions. As balloonist it carried him aloft into the sky.

SKY PILOT for the Pittsfield Aero Club was William Van Sleet. Ascended in all kinds of weather without accident or injury, piloting "Heart of the Berkshires" balloon belonging to the Pittsfield club.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 16 1955

29

Symphony Chorus Will Sing At Tanglewood On Aug. 14

The Springfield Orchestra Association's board of directors last night announced that a tentative invitation for the Symphony Chorus to appear at Tanglewood was confirmed yesterday by officials of the Berkshire Festival.

At the annual chorus banquet in May, Tanglewood choral director Hugh Ross of New York said he hoped the Springfield group would be able to join the Festival Chorus in presenting Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in August. Recent communications set the local group's appearance date as Aug. 14.

The association's late music director, Dr. Alexander Leslie, guided the Symphony chorus to its first Tanglewood appearance last year. This year, he began preparing the group in January for its Dr. Glickman memorial performance of the Ninth on April 19, but his directorship was ended by his sudden death Feb. 23. Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and guest conductor of the Springfield Symphony after Dr. Leslie's death, recommended that the chorus be invited to Tanglewood this year.

The chorus will rehearse until the August performance under the direction of either Hugh Ross or one of his assistants. At the concert, it will join the Festival Chorus and Boston Symphony under the baton of Charles Munch.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 11 1955

PROF. VICKERS WILL SING AT TANGLEWOOD

SC Director of Music Invited By Hugh Ross

Prof. Gilbert T. Vickers, director of music at Springfield College, has been invited by Hugh Ross, director of choral music at Tanglewood, to participate in two concerts to be given by the Boston Symphony on Aug. 14. Leonard Festival Chorus this summer.

Prof. Vickers will sing in the performances of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Aug. 5 and the "Ninth Symphony" (the choral symphony on Aug. 14. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the "Missa Solemnis" and Charles Munch will direct the "Ninth Symphony."

A scholarship student of conducting and choral techniques at Tanglewood last summer, Prof. Vickers is conducting the Summer School Chorus and Workshop at Springfield College this summer. Experienced singers from the Greater Springfield area are invited to sing with the SC group.

[213]

REDUCTION

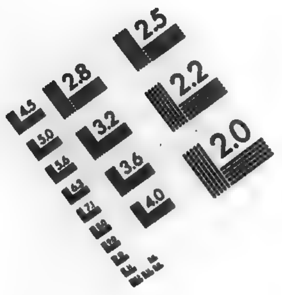
RATIO

17x

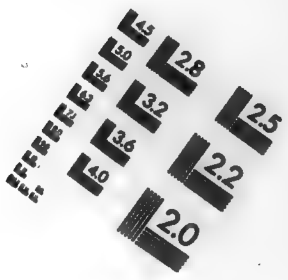
2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

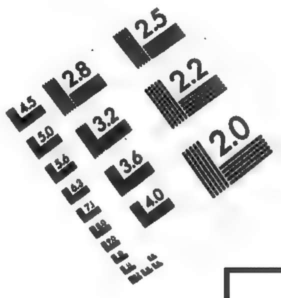


2.5
2.8
2.2
4.5
5.0
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

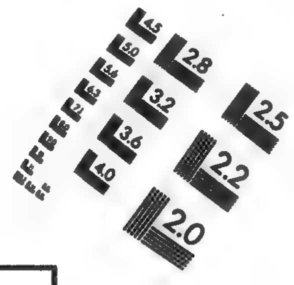


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

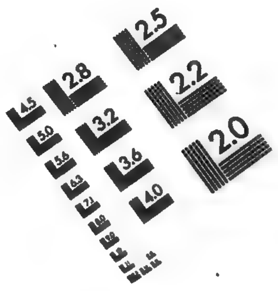


4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0

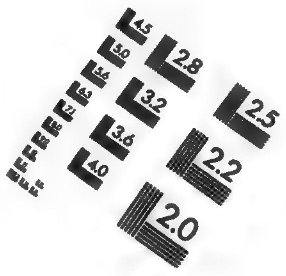
200 mm

150 mm

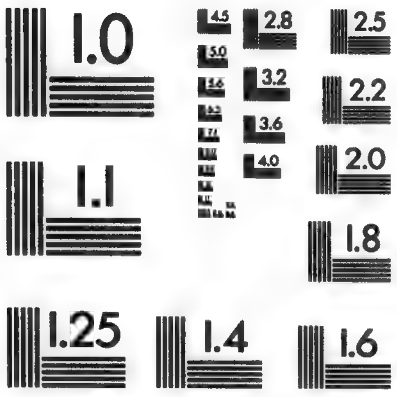
100 mm



2.5
2.8
4.5
5.0
3.2
2.2
3.6
4.0
2.0



4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0



1.0
4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

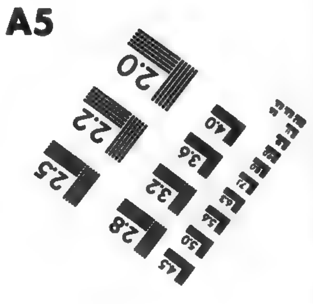
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

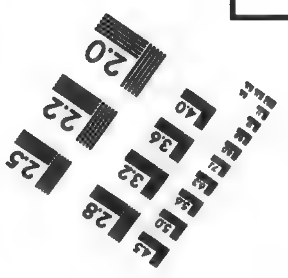


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

4.0
3.6
3.2
2.0
5.0
4.5
2.2
2.8
2.5

A4

A3

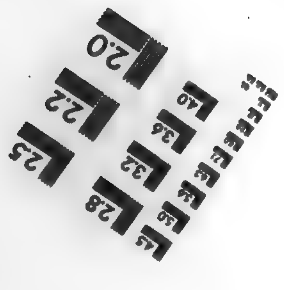


2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

4.0
3.6
3.2
2.0
5.0
4.5
2.2
2.8
2.5

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119



2.0
2.2
4.0
3.6
2.5
3.2
2.8
5.0
4.5

4.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

4.0
3.6
3.2
2.0
5.0
4.5
2.2
2.8
2.5

3.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

EAGLE
July 16 '55

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

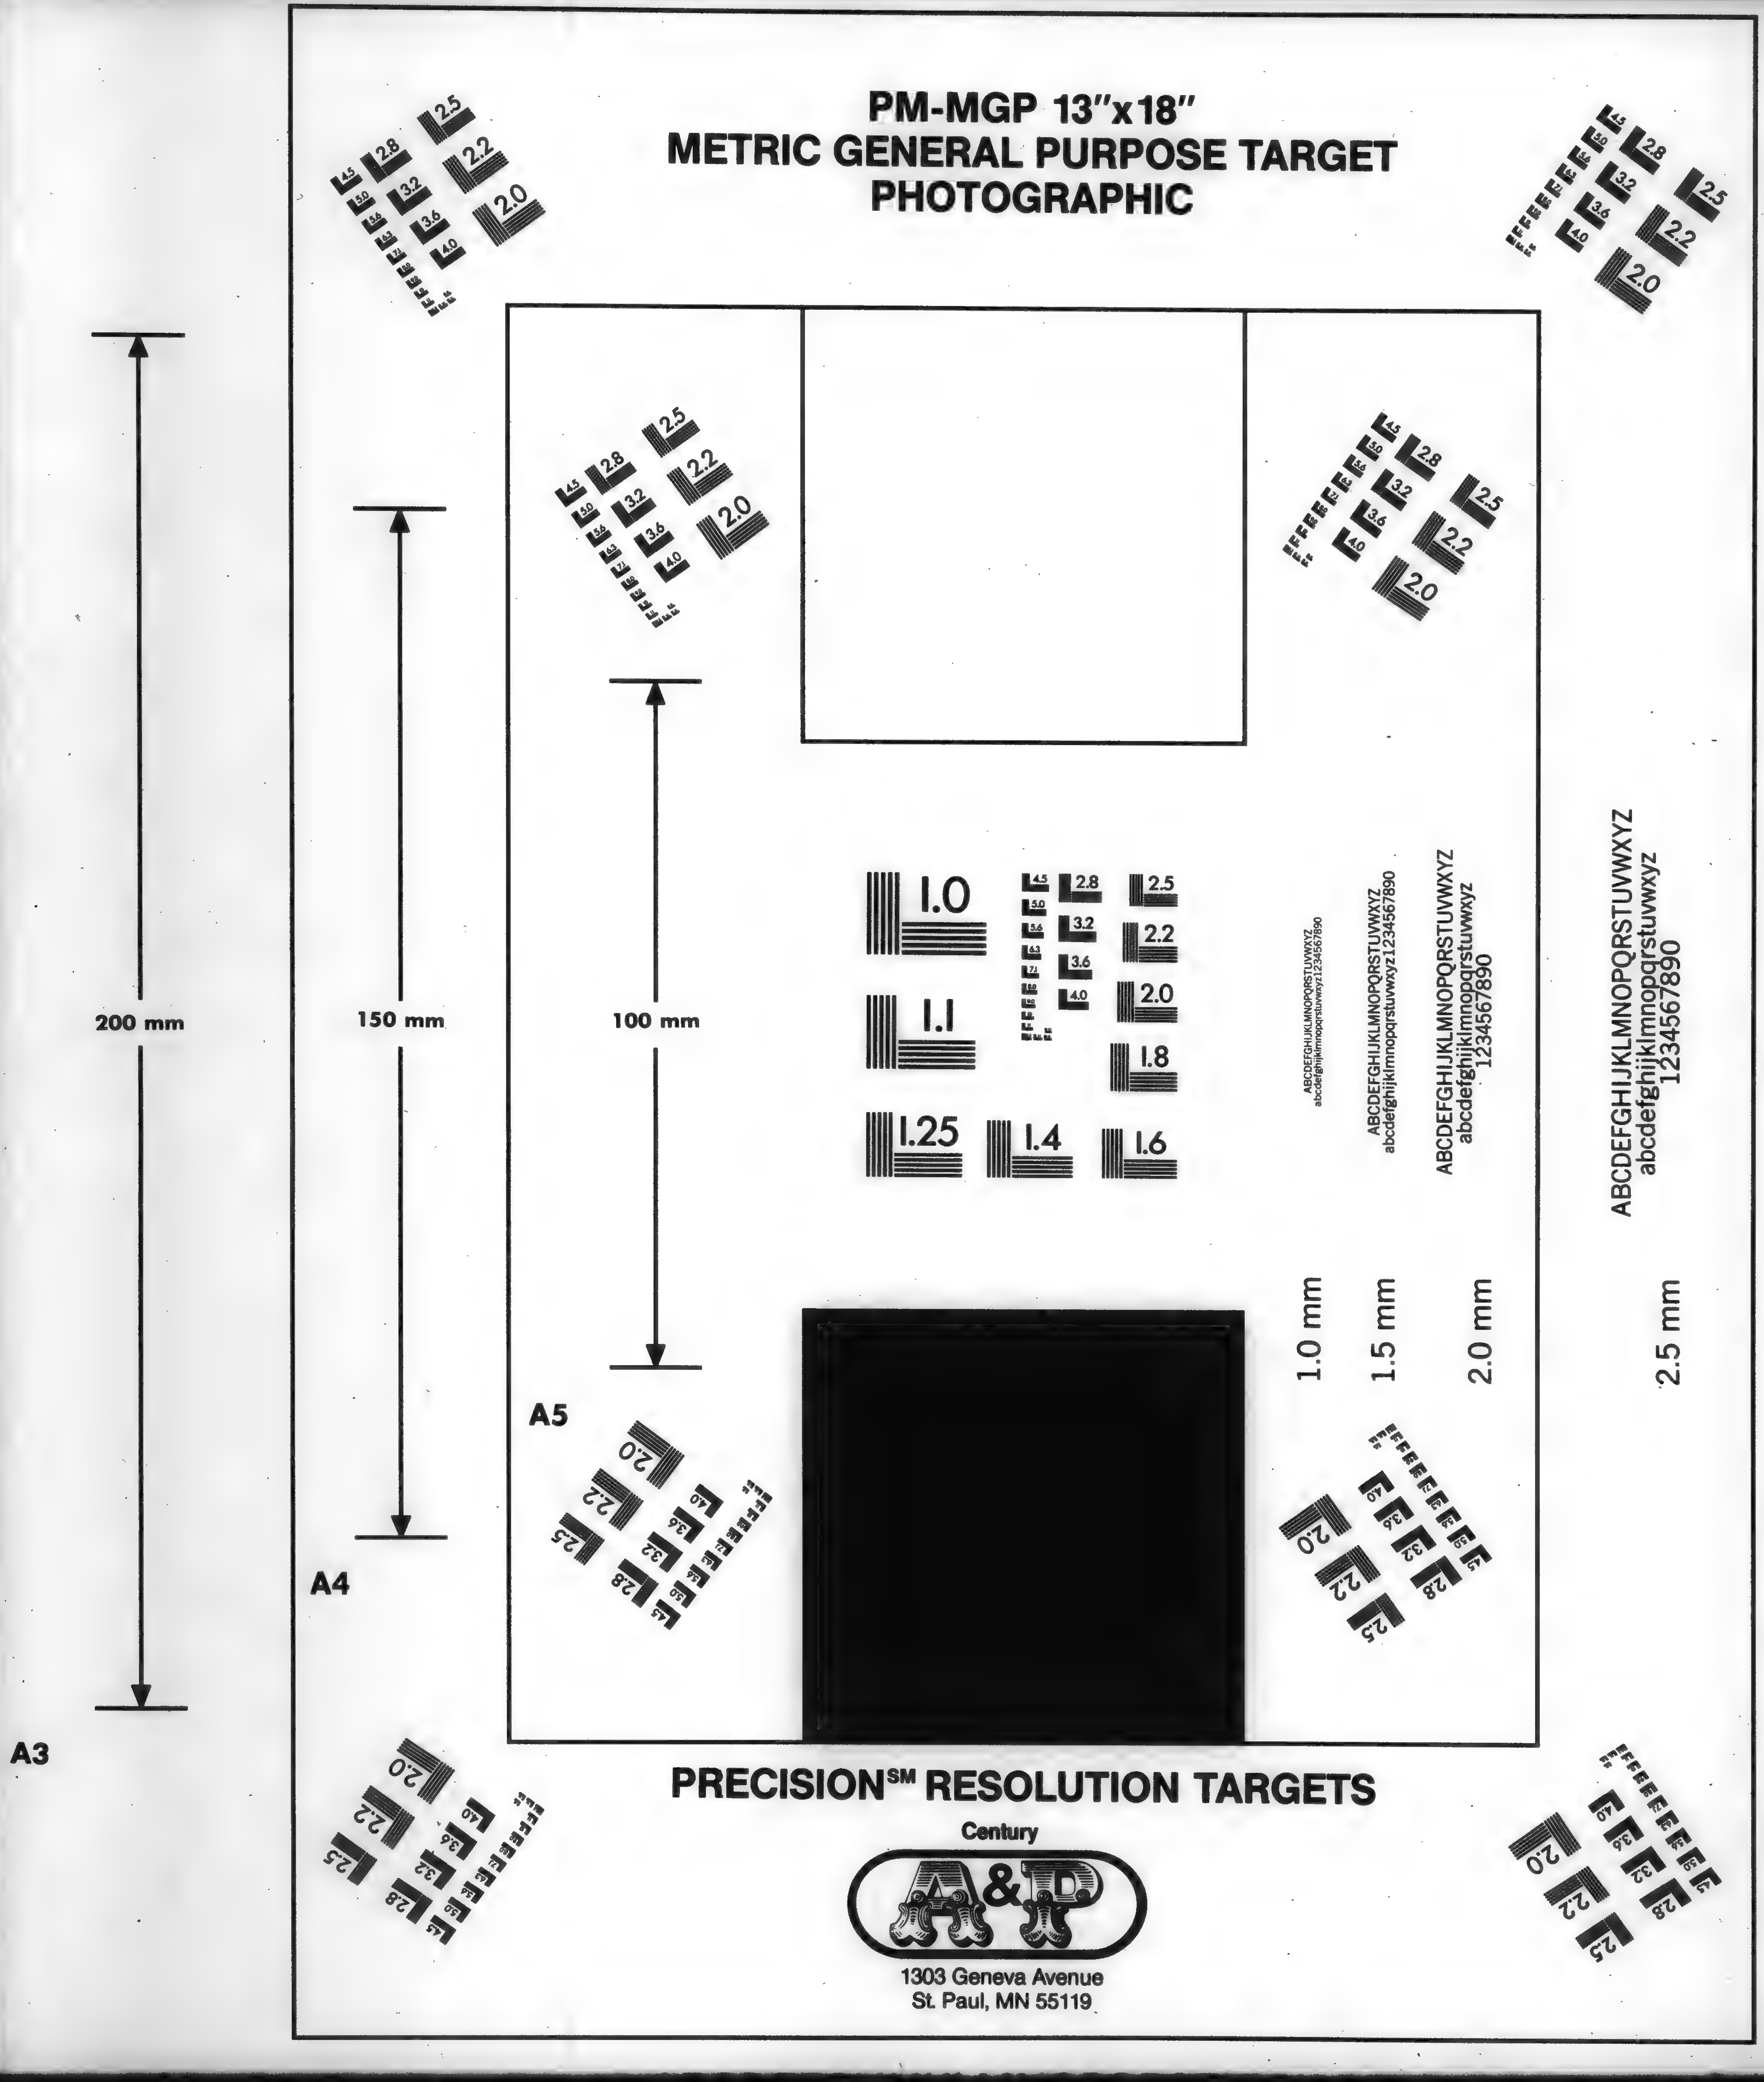
NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; MUSIC INN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
July 17 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch. French Music Suite from "Dardanus" Rameau Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande" Faure Pavane Faure Symphony No. 4 Honegger 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, José Echaniz, piano. Quartet in B flat major Schubert Piano Quintet Turina Quartet in B flat major Brahms Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Max Roach, Clifford Brown Quintet. Contuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00; final performance of "Gigi."	July 18 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson in "The Old Maid."	July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 22 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Isaac Stern. Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 23 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor Bach-Respighi Symphony No. 2 in D major Beethoven Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions "Death and Transfiguration" Strauss Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 24 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Department 1. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major Symphony No 4 in B flat Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artists, David Glazer, clarinet; Sylvia Deutscher, bassoon; John Barrows, French horn; Isadore Janowski, double bass. Septet Beethoven Octet Schubert Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Thelonius Monk Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 25 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan.	July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets. G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show." Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 29 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Music String Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; Merce Cunningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish dancer, East Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Suite, "Water Music" Handel Symphony No. 4 in D minor Schumann "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Barber (With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price) Symphony No. 4 in E minor Brahms Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 3:00 (La Meri), 8:45 (play); Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 30 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Overture to "Egmont" Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") South Mountain 4:00—New Music String Quartet. String Quartet Boccherini String Quartet Jerome Rosen String Quartet, Op. 28 Anton von Webern String Quartet in D major Mozart Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 31 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall, Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Soloists, Isaac Stein and Gregor Piatigorsky. Brahms Academic Festival Overture Concerto for Violin and Cello Symphony No. 1 in C minor 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3. Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Teddy Charles Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 1 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Depts. 2 and 4. Concert of Chorus and Opera. (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Edward My Son"	August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adriano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer, East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Keith Lawrence, French music hall songs. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 5 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Missa Solemnis Beethoven (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 6 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 3:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw "Fidelio," Act 2 Beethoven Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" Wagner Siegfried's Rhine Journey Siegfried's Death Music Immolation Scene South Mountain 4:00—Sonata Recital. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider Sonata in C major, K.296 Mozart Sonata in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2 Schubert Sonata in B flat, K.378 Mozart Rondo in B minor, Op. 70 Schubert Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 7 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Beethoven Symphony No. 8 in F major Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major Symphony No. 5 in C minor Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 8 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet. Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including premiere of Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"The Tender Trap."	August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 12 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky. Variations on a Theme by Haydn Brahms "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra Bloch "La Mer" Debussy "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Ravel Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 13 South Mountain 4:00—New York Woodwind Quintet. George Schick, piano. Sinfonia Bernard Heiden Allegro and Arioso Ingolf Dahl Quartet No. 4 in B flat G. Rossini Quintet in E flat, K.452 Mozart Quintet Hindemith Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Public rehearsal. 3:00—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" Wagner Symphony No. 3 in F major Brahms Three Nocturnes Debussy Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Staruss Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. French chansons and English madrigals. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 14 Tanglewood 10:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 Symphony No. 9 in D minor (With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 15 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dizzy Gillespie and his Quintet. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Shadow and Substance." Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens.	August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 18 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 19 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Order, Paul Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabry, modern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 20 South Mountain 4:00—Leontyne Price, soprano. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider. String Quintet and three percussions and harpsichord. Chaconne for strings Purcell Chansons Madecasses, for voice, flute, violoncello and piano Ravel Lorca Romanzen Killmayer Salve Regina Scarlatti Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. Italian early Baroque music. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Dixieland. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 21 Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Folk Into Jazz Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 22 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens in "Shadow and Substance."	Aust 23 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic" Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 24 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 25 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 26 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance Theater, Aubrey Hitchins, artistic director. World premiere of two new ballets. Ruth St. Denis in a new work, "Freedom." Xenia Zarina in dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Persia. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 27 Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. William Byrd, sacred and secular works. South Mountain 4:00—Budapest String Quartet. Quartet Dorico Respighi Quartet, Op. 7 (L008) Bartok Quartet, Op. 33, No. 2 Haydn Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Swing. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 28 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Rondtable: Rhythm and Blues. Continuing Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet.	August 29 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Thomas Coley, Shepperd Strudwick in "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."	August 30 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic." (Second week). Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Ondine" Century: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 31 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 1 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Afro-Cuban. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 2 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Moscelyne Larkin and Michael Maule in "Carib Peddler" and classic pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in world premiere of new dance group works. The American Mime Theater, Paul J. Curtis, director. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 3 Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. The Virgin in Medieval and Renaissance Music. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Modern Jazz. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A5
A4
A3
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.0 mm
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Berkshire Summer Calendar

Music, From Classic to Jazz, Summer Theaters and the Dance

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, o
Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH M
7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PL
BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 betwe
MER THEATER, on Main Street in Willia

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
July 17 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Conductor: Charles Munch. French Music Suite from "Dardanus" Rameau Suite from "Pelleas et Melisande" Faure Pavane Faure Symphony No. 4 Honegger 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, José Echaniz, piano. Quartet in B flat major Schubert Piano Quintet Turina Quartet in B flat major Brahms Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Max Roach, Clifford Brown Quintet. Contuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00; final performance of "Gigi."	July 18 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson in "The Old Maid."	July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 22 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berk house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; W Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 24 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. Department 1. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major Symphony No 4 in B flat Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artists, David Glazer, clarinet; Sylvia Deutscher, bassoon; John Barrows, French horn; Isadore Janowski, double bass. Septet Beethoven Octet Schubert Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Thelonius Monk Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00	July 25 Tanglewood 8:30—Sedgwick Hall, Lenox. Forum. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan.	July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets. G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show." Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 29 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Mus Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; M ningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish da Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Suite, "Water Music" Symphony No. 4 in D minor "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price) Symphony No. 4 in E minor Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 3:00 (La M (play); Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Wil Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 31 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall, Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Soloists, Isaac Stein and Gregor Piatigorsky. Brahms Academic Festival Overture Concerto for Violin and Cello Symphony No. 1 in C minor 8:30—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3. Composers' Forum. (Friends) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Teddy Charles Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 1 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Depts. 2 and 4. Concert of Chorus and Opera. (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Edward My Son"	August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adriano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer, East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Keith Lawrence, French music hall songs. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 5 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Sym chestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Missa Solemnis (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berks house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Wil Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 7 Tanglewood 10:00—Chamber Music Hall. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Eugene Istomin. Beethoven Symphony No. 8 in F major Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major Symphony No. 5 in C minor Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 8 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Modern Jazz Workshop: Modern Jazz Quartet. Tanglewood 8:30—Theater - Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including premiere of Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"The Tender Trap."	August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends, Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 12 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Co Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky. Variations on a Theme by Haydn "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra "La Mer" "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berksh house, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Willi Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 14 Tanglewood 10:00—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 1 Chamber Music. (Friends) 2:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Beethoven Overture, "Leonore," No. 3 Symphony No. 9 in D minor (With chorus and soloists: Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd, Donald Gramm) Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 15 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dizzy Gillespie and his Quintet. Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—"Shadow and Substance." Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens.	August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 18 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 19 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Orde Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabr ern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8
August 21 Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Folk Into Jazz Continuing: Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00.	August 22 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Shepperd Strudwick and Deirdre Owens in "Shadow and Substance."	Aunst 23 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic" Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 24 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 25 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 26 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance Theater, Aubrey artistic director. World premiere of two new balle St. Denis in a new work, "Freedom." Xenia Z dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Persia. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8
August 28 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Rondtable: Rhythm and Blues. Continuing Malden Bridge Playhouse, 7:00. Music Mountain 4:00—Berkshire Quartet.	August 29 Berkshire Playhouse 8:45—Thomas Coley, Shepperd Strudwick in "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."	August 30 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic." (Second week). Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Ondine" Century: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 31 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 1 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Afro-Cuban. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 2 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Moscelyne Larkin and Michael M "Carib Peddler" and classic pas de deux. Myra K Company in world premiere of new dance group The American Mime Theater, Paul J. Curtis, directo Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:

mer Calendar

ummer Theaters and the Dance

Tuesday	Wednesday
July 19 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Crucible" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Fifth Season" Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 2 Chorus, Small Choir. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 20 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin Beethoven Violin Sonatas No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring") No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn in classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch, modern dancer, in solos. Jean Leon Destiné & Company in dances of Haiti. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
July 26 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—The Wayfarers, folk songs. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Picnic" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn and leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. (New program) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	July 27 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. New Music String Quartet. Beethoven String Quartets. G major, Op. 18, No. 2 E flat major, Op. 127 A minor, Op. 132 Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 2 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera Scenes. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Carlos Montoya, Flamenco guitar; Trianita, Flamenco dancer. Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Tovarich." Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." (Second week) Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 3 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Piano Sonatas F major, Op. 10, No. 2 D major, Op. 10, No. 3 A minor, Op. 106 ("Hammerklavier") Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Mia Slavenska and Adriano Vitale, ballet pas de deux. Birgit Akesson, Swedish dancer, East Coast debut. The Dance Drama Company (Emily Frankel and Mark Ryder). New dance group works by Bolender and Maslov. Josefina Garcia, dances of Latin America. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 9 Tanglewood 8:30—Theater-Concert Hall. Dept. 4 Opera. Including Mennini's "The Rope." (Friends. Special tickets required) Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Late George Apley" Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Here We Come Gathering" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 10 Tanglewood 8:30—Chamber Music. Theater-Concert Hall. Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz. Beethoven The Cello Sonatas F major, Op. 5, No. 1 G minor, Op. 5, No. 2 A major, Op. 69 C major, Op. 102, No. 1 D major, Op. 102, No. 2 Jacob's Pillow 9:00—Alexandra Danilova and partner, classic ballet pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in modern dance group works including "Giselle's Revenge" and "Angels of Puno." Priyagopal in Manipuri dances from India. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 16 Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—To Be Announced. Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Sabrina Fair" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 17 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
Auust 23 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic" Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"The Rainmaker" Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 24 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 30 Malden Bridge Playhouse 8:45—"Picnic." (Second week). Williamstown Summer Theater 8:40—"Ondine" Century: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45.	August 31 Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

EAGLE
July 16 '55

NOTE: For an event listed under "Continuing," follow the week's schedule back to the nearest complete program, which will be under a head printed in This Type.

HOW TO GET THERE: TANGLEWOOD, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); SOUTH MOUNTAIN, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; MUSIC MOUNTAIN, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; BERKSHIRE PLAYHOUSE, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany Road (Route 20); WILLIAMSTOWN SUMMER THEATER, on Main Street in Williamstown; MUSIC INN, southeast of Tanglewood between Routes 7 and 183.

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
July 21 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 22 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Isaac Stern. Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan" Violin Concerto Symphony No. 7 in A major Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 23 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor Bach-Respighi Symphony No. 2 in D major Beethoven Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions "Death and Transfiguration" Strauss Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
July 28 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Playhouse 3:00—La Meri in "La Meri's Little Show." Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Count Basie Orchestra. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Theater, 8:40.	July 29 South Mountain 10:00—Young Audiences Concert. New Music String Quartet. Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn; Merce Cunningham & Company; Mariquita, Spanish dancer, East Coast debut. Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Conductor: Charles Munch. Suite, "Water Music" Handel Symphony No. 4 in D minor Schumann "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Barber (With chorus. Soloist: Leontyne Price) Symphony No. 4 in E minor Brahms Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 3:00 (La Meri), 8:45 (play); Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	July 30 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Rudolf Serkin. Beethoven Overture to "Egmont" Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica") South Mountain 4:00—New Music String Quartet. String Quartet Boccherini String Quartet Jerome Rosen String Quartet, Op. 28 Anton von Webern String Quartet in D major Mozart Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 4 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Keith Lawrence, French music hall songs. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 5 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Koussevitzky Memorial. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Leonard Bernstein. Missa Solemnis Beethoven (With chorus and soloists) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 6 Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, public rehearsal. 3:00—Chamber Music Hall. Dept. 3 Composers' Forum. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Margaret Harshaw "Fidelio," Act 2 Beethoven Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung" Wagner Siegfried's Rhine Journey Siegfried's Death Music Immolation Scene South Mountain 4:00—Sonata Recital. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider Sonata in C major, K.296 Mozart Sonata in A minor, Op. 137, No. 2 Schubert Sonata in B flat, K.378 Mozart Rondo in B minor, Op. 70 Schubert Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 11 Tanglewood Tanglewood on Parade. (Program to be announced) Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 12 Tanglewood 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Charles Munch. Soloist: Gregor Piatigorsky. Variations on a Theme by Haydn Brahms "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra Bloch "La Mer" Debussy "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite 2 Ravel Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 13 South Mountain 4:00—New York Woodwind Quintet. George Schick, piano. Sinfonia Bernard Heiden Allegro and Arioso Ingolf Dahl Quartet No. 4 in B flat G. Rossini Quintet in E flat, K.452 Mozart Quintet Hindemith Berkshire Music Barn 4:00—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Tanglewood 10:00—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Public rehearsal. 3:00—Shed. Dept. 1 Orchestra. (Friends) 8:30—Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor: Pierre Monteux. Overture to "The Flying Dutchman" Wagner Symphony No. 3 in F major Brahms Three Nocturnes Debussy Suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" Staruss Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. French chansons and English madrigals. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 2:40 and 8:40.
August 18 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Ragtime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 19 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Yvonne Patterson, Joan Van Order, Paul Sutherland in works by William Dollar; Iris Mabry, modern dancer; Ivy Kitchell, mime. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 20 South Mountain 4:00—Leontyne Price, soprano. George Schick, piano. Alexander Schneider. String Quintet and three percussions and harpsichord. Chaconne for strings Purcell Chansons Madecasses, for voice, flute, violoncello and piano Ravel Lorca Romanzen Killmayer Salve Regina Scarlatti Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. Italian early Baroque music. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Dixieland. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
August 25 Music Inn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Calypso. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 26 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—The Negro Dance Theater, Aubrey Hitchins, artistic director. World premiere of two new ballets. Ruth St. Denis in a new work, "Freedom." Xenia Zarina in dances of Siam, Bali, Burma and Persia. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	August 27 Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. William Byrd, sacred and secular works. South Mountain 4:00—Budapest String Quartet. Quartet Dorico Respighi Quartet, Op. 7 (1908) Bartok Quartet, Op. 33, No. 2 Haydn Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Swing. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.
September 1 Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Afro-Cuban. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 2 Jacob's Pillow 4:00 and 9:00—Moscelyne Larkin and Michael Maule in "Carib Peddler" and classic pas de deux. Myra Kinch & Company in world premiere of new dance group works. The American Mime Theater, Paul J. Curtis, director. Continuing: Berkshire Playhouse, 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.	September 3 Pro Musica Antiqua 8:30—Stockbridge Town Hall. The Virgin in Medieval and Renaissance Music. Berkshire Music Barn 8:30—Folk and Jazz Roundtable: Modern Jazz. Continuing: Jacob's Pillow, 4:00 and 9:00; Berkshire Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Malden Bridge Playhouse, 2:30 and 8:45; Williamstown Summer Theater, 8:40.

Sunday Post
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 230,930

JUL 17 1955

German Composers At Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who heads the composition department at Tanglewood each summer, is taking his first leave of absence in a dozen years. Two other composers have been invited to take his place. The first is Roger Sessions with whom Mr. Copland produced the famous Copland-Sessions Concerts of the '20s. The other is Boris Blacher, a German whose music is just beginning to be heard in the United States.

During his summer in the Berkshires, Professor Blacher, visiting the United States for the first time, will be honored by a performance of his chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet" under Boris Goldovsky's direction in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Monday evening, Aug. 1.

The composer has some reservations about a theatrical production of this piece, he told me over a second cup of coffee after breakfast last Saturday:

"Originally, "Romeo and Juliet" was a cantata, but soon after its first performance it was staged. Since then it has crossed the line into the operatic repertory. However, it was conceived as a concert piece, and I still think of it that way."

Herr Blacher flew to Tanglewood from his home in Berlin where he is director of the Hochschule fur Musik, an institution more like an American conservatory than a high school. During his topover in New York he had an opportunity to see "The Pajama Game," the Broadway musical hit with which he was delighted.

"We have nothing like American musical comedy in Europe," he stated. "It is a genre unique to the American stage and American music with music, dancing, and story fused into a perfect whole."

Of the young composers whom he is teaching this summer he would say little except that all have considerable talent, though he hastened to add that he had not worked with them long enough to really know their capabilities.

One bit of advice he offers to all his composition students: write extensively in every medium. He emphasizes the craftsmanship aspect of this vocation. The starving composer writing imperishable string quartets in a garret is a romantic and dated picture. Every composer should be able to turn out a score quickly for the mvies or the stage if the occasion demands or he should be able to write a symphony with skill and competence should a commission come along for that type of composition.

Eagle 6/19

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Music Center small choir chorus. Tanglewood theater, Lenox. (For BMC Friends)

8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid," Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season," Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—"The Old Maid." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

Edward A. Taft of Boston is staying at the Lenox Club. Mr. Taft, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, attended the concerts of the Berkshire Festival weekend at Tanglewood.

Silver Bowls Awarded

Silver bowls were presented to last year's winners of the "House Beautiful" awards, Mrs. Maxwell A. Croohe, for the conservative good taste of her traditional cottage, and to Miss Alice McNiff, for her modern cantilever-type house mostly of glass and stone.

At Mr. Horwitt's suggestion, the association voted to present similar bowls to Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, as founder, to George E. Judd, for his cooperation when manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and to the late Serge Koussevitzky, former director and conductor of the BSO. The latter bowl would be presented to Mrs. Koussevitzky.

Eagle 6/19

Soloists at St. Ann's

LENOX — Guest soloists at St. Ann's 10:30 Mass Sunday were Mrs. Natalie Scimonelli, of the opera department at Tanglewood, and Miss Christine Cardello of North Adams, a former Berkshire Music Center student.

The local choir director, Miss Adeline O. Johnson, invited Mrs. Scimonelli to sing. The soprano soloist originally came from Cape Cod and during World War II interrupted her musical career to join the WAVES. Mrs. Scimonelli, while singing on a Navy Hour broadcast from Washington, D.C., met her husband, Frank Scimonelli, a member of the United States Navy Band. The couple have four boys. She is the organist and choir director for the Navy and Marine Chapels at the Receiving Station in Arlington, Va.

Miss Cardello, who last year sang in the Metropolitan Opera at New York City, joined in a trio with Mrs. Scimonelli and Miss Jacuelyn Curette of Elizabeth, N.J.

Koussevitzky Memorial Service Sunday at 11

LENOX — The annual memorial service for the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will be held Sunday morning at 11 at the Church-on-the-Hill, Congregational; with a small choir and 16 instrumentalists from the Berkshire Music Center and the Rev. Dr. Harry Trust officiating.

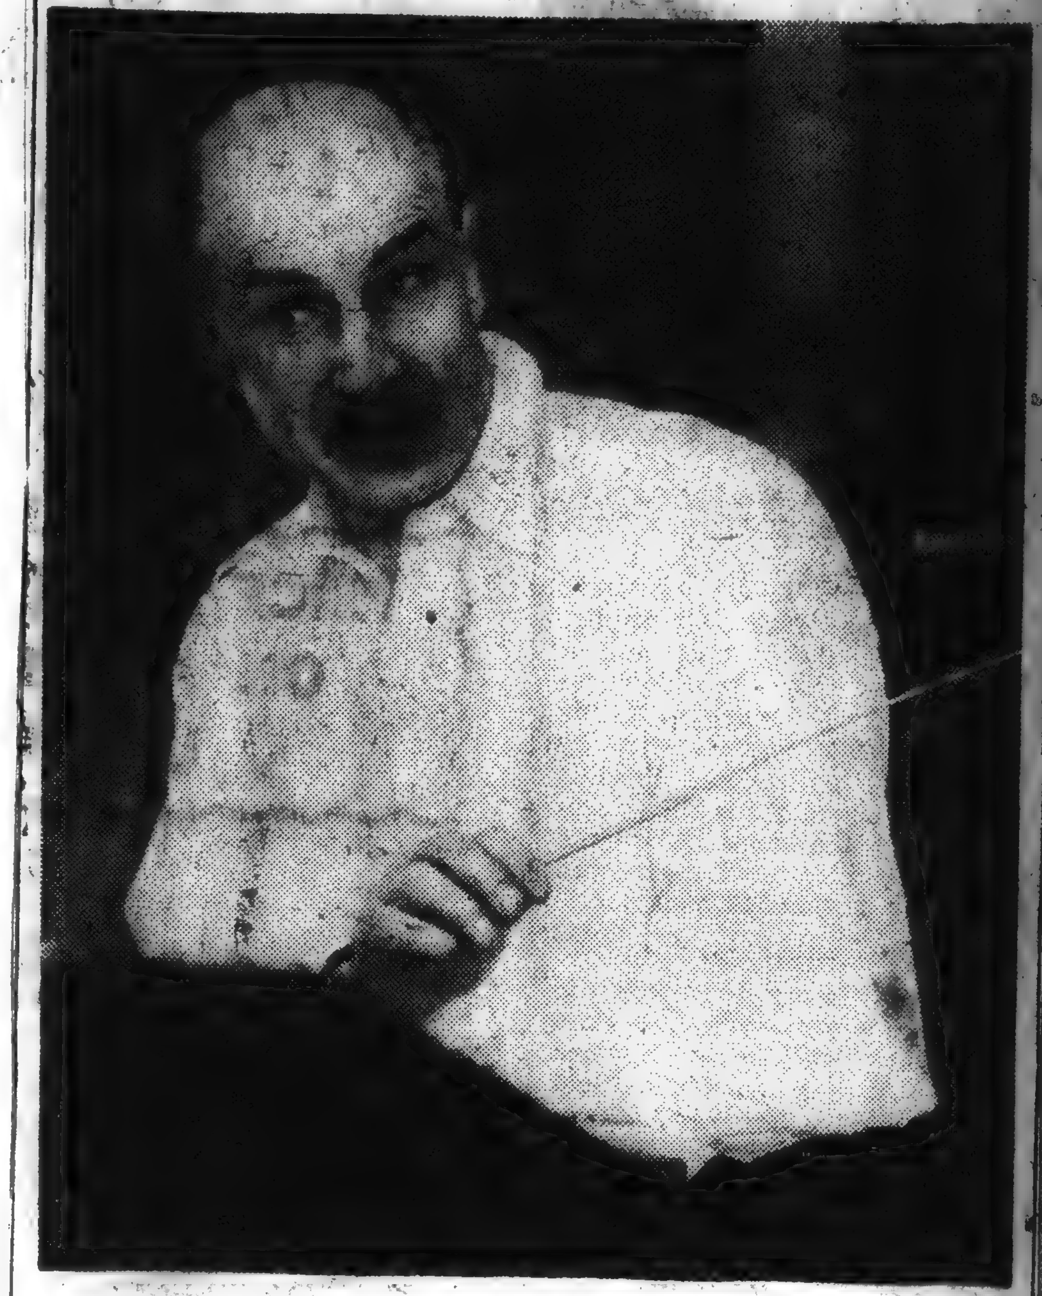
Dr. Koussevitzky, former director and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is buried in the cemetery yard of this old New England Church. Mrs. Koussevitzky, his widow, members of her family and friends will attend the services.

Iva Dee Hiatt will conduct the opening piece, "Easter Contata" by Alan Hovhaness and Hugh Ross, head of the choral department at Tanglewood, will conduct "Song of the Soul" by Edmund Rubbra.

The organ prelude, "Cherabim Song" by Bertniansky and the postlude "Dona Nobis" by Mozart will be played by Miss Harriet Parsons Levinson.

Eagle 6/19

Students of Tanglewood Choir To Give First Concert Tonight



Manos

HUGH ROSS

TANGLEWOOD — The first concert by the Tanglewood choir made up of students from Department II of the Berkshire Music Center will be held tonight at 8:30 in the Theater Concert Hall. The event is open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Center, will conduct the first and last performances on tonight's program.

The program follows:

Warum Ist Das Licht Gegeben, Opus 7, No. 1 — Brahms
Hugh Ross, conductor.

O Admirable Commercium, — Joaquin Des Pres
Elaine Yano, Hilo, Hawaii, conductor.

Revelation Motet — Melchoir Franck
Ted Grame, Brooklyn, N.Y., conductor.

Il S'En Va Tard — Clement Janequin
Il Est Bel Et Bon — Passereau
Suzanna Robinson, New York, N.Y., conductor.

Tanzen und Springen — Hans Lee Hassler
Which Is the Properest Day to Sing? — Thomas Arne
John Atwood, Perry, N.Y., conductor.

Te Deum for mixed chorus and orchestra, K. 141 — Mozart Kalman Novak, Cambridge, conductor.

Song of the Soul, Opus 78, for chorus, strings, harp and timpani. — Edmund Rubbra Iva Dee Hiatt, conductor.

Four Motets (first performance). — Alan Hovhaness
Praise Ye the Lord.
Unto Thee, O God, Do We Give Thanks.
Vahe Aslanian, Salinas, Calif., conductor.
Keep Not Thou Silence, O God.
O God, Why Hast Thou Cast Us Off Forever?
Morton Gold, Roxbury, conductor.

Easter Cantata (first Tanglewood performance), for soprano, mixed chorus and orchestra — Alan Hovhaness Marguerite Willauer, soprano.
Hugh Ross, conductor.

Eagle 6/19

In Brief . . .

It's to be hoped that a lot of local motorists will have the good sense to drop in on the Registry of Motor Vehicles mobile driving-skill clinic, which will be parked in front of Newberry's on North Street all day tomorrow. Finding out your weak points as a driver won't hurt your standing with the Registry, and it might well save you from coming a cropper on the highways . . . It should be added, however, that driving skill alone can't make a safe driver out of someone who lacks elementary respect for the rights of others—as was demonstrated by the teen-agers who raced police at 95 miles an hour into Lenox Sunday night. The best high school auto-driving course in the world isn't an adequate answer to that sort of problem. Jail is the real answer . . .

For a 2-in-1 combination of smart promotion and useful public service, Sammy Vincent's announcement that he will underwrite bus runs from Pittsfield to the Tanglewood concerts this year is hard to beat. Another case in point for anyone who might still be wondering how Sammy has come so far so fast on North Street . . . Coincidence or not, it's interesting that the City Council's special meeting on the parking lot bond issue question this evening will also include consideration of a $25,000 appropriation to prepare Crane Avenue for the heavy traffic it's expected to get when the Allendale Shopping Center opens. It goes to show that the new tax assessments created when business is pushed out of the congested central area aren't all gravy for the city by any means . . .

DRESS REHEARSAL
. . .finds celebrated conductor Charles Munch working in close cooperation with members of Boston Symphony.

-Left-
LOVELY
. . .grounds of Tanglewood were subject of this dramatic aerial camera study.

SAMUEL MAYES
. . .first cellist of the Boston Symphony, was soloist in last night's Charles Munch conducted concert.

MAESTROS CONVENE
These music greats are sharing the podium at Tanglewood this summer. Left to right, are: Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; and guest conductors Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein.

MARGARET HARSHAW
. . .soprano of the Metropolitan Opera will sing the Immolation scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" at the shed concert of August 6.

HUGH ROSS
. . .is choral director of the Berkshire Music Festival.

GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
. . .noted cellist, will make three solo appearances during the current season.

TALKING IT OVER

Sibelius Selects Young Finn To Study in Berkshire Center

7/13

By EMMA VAN WORMER

The Koussevitzsky Music Foundation Siholarship for study in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., during the Berkshire Music Center summer session is held by Eino Rautavaara, 26, Finnish composer nominated by the celebrated composer Jean Sibelius.

The world famous musician will observe his 90th birthday on Dec. 8 next, a date to be celebrated by the International Sibelius Festival Committee, with programs of Finnish music urged. Chairman of the committee is Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the noted director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival. The traveling expenses of Rautavaara to and from Finland are defrayed by the [illegible] Foundation of New York. The Berkshire Scholarship offers full living expenses to the recipient.

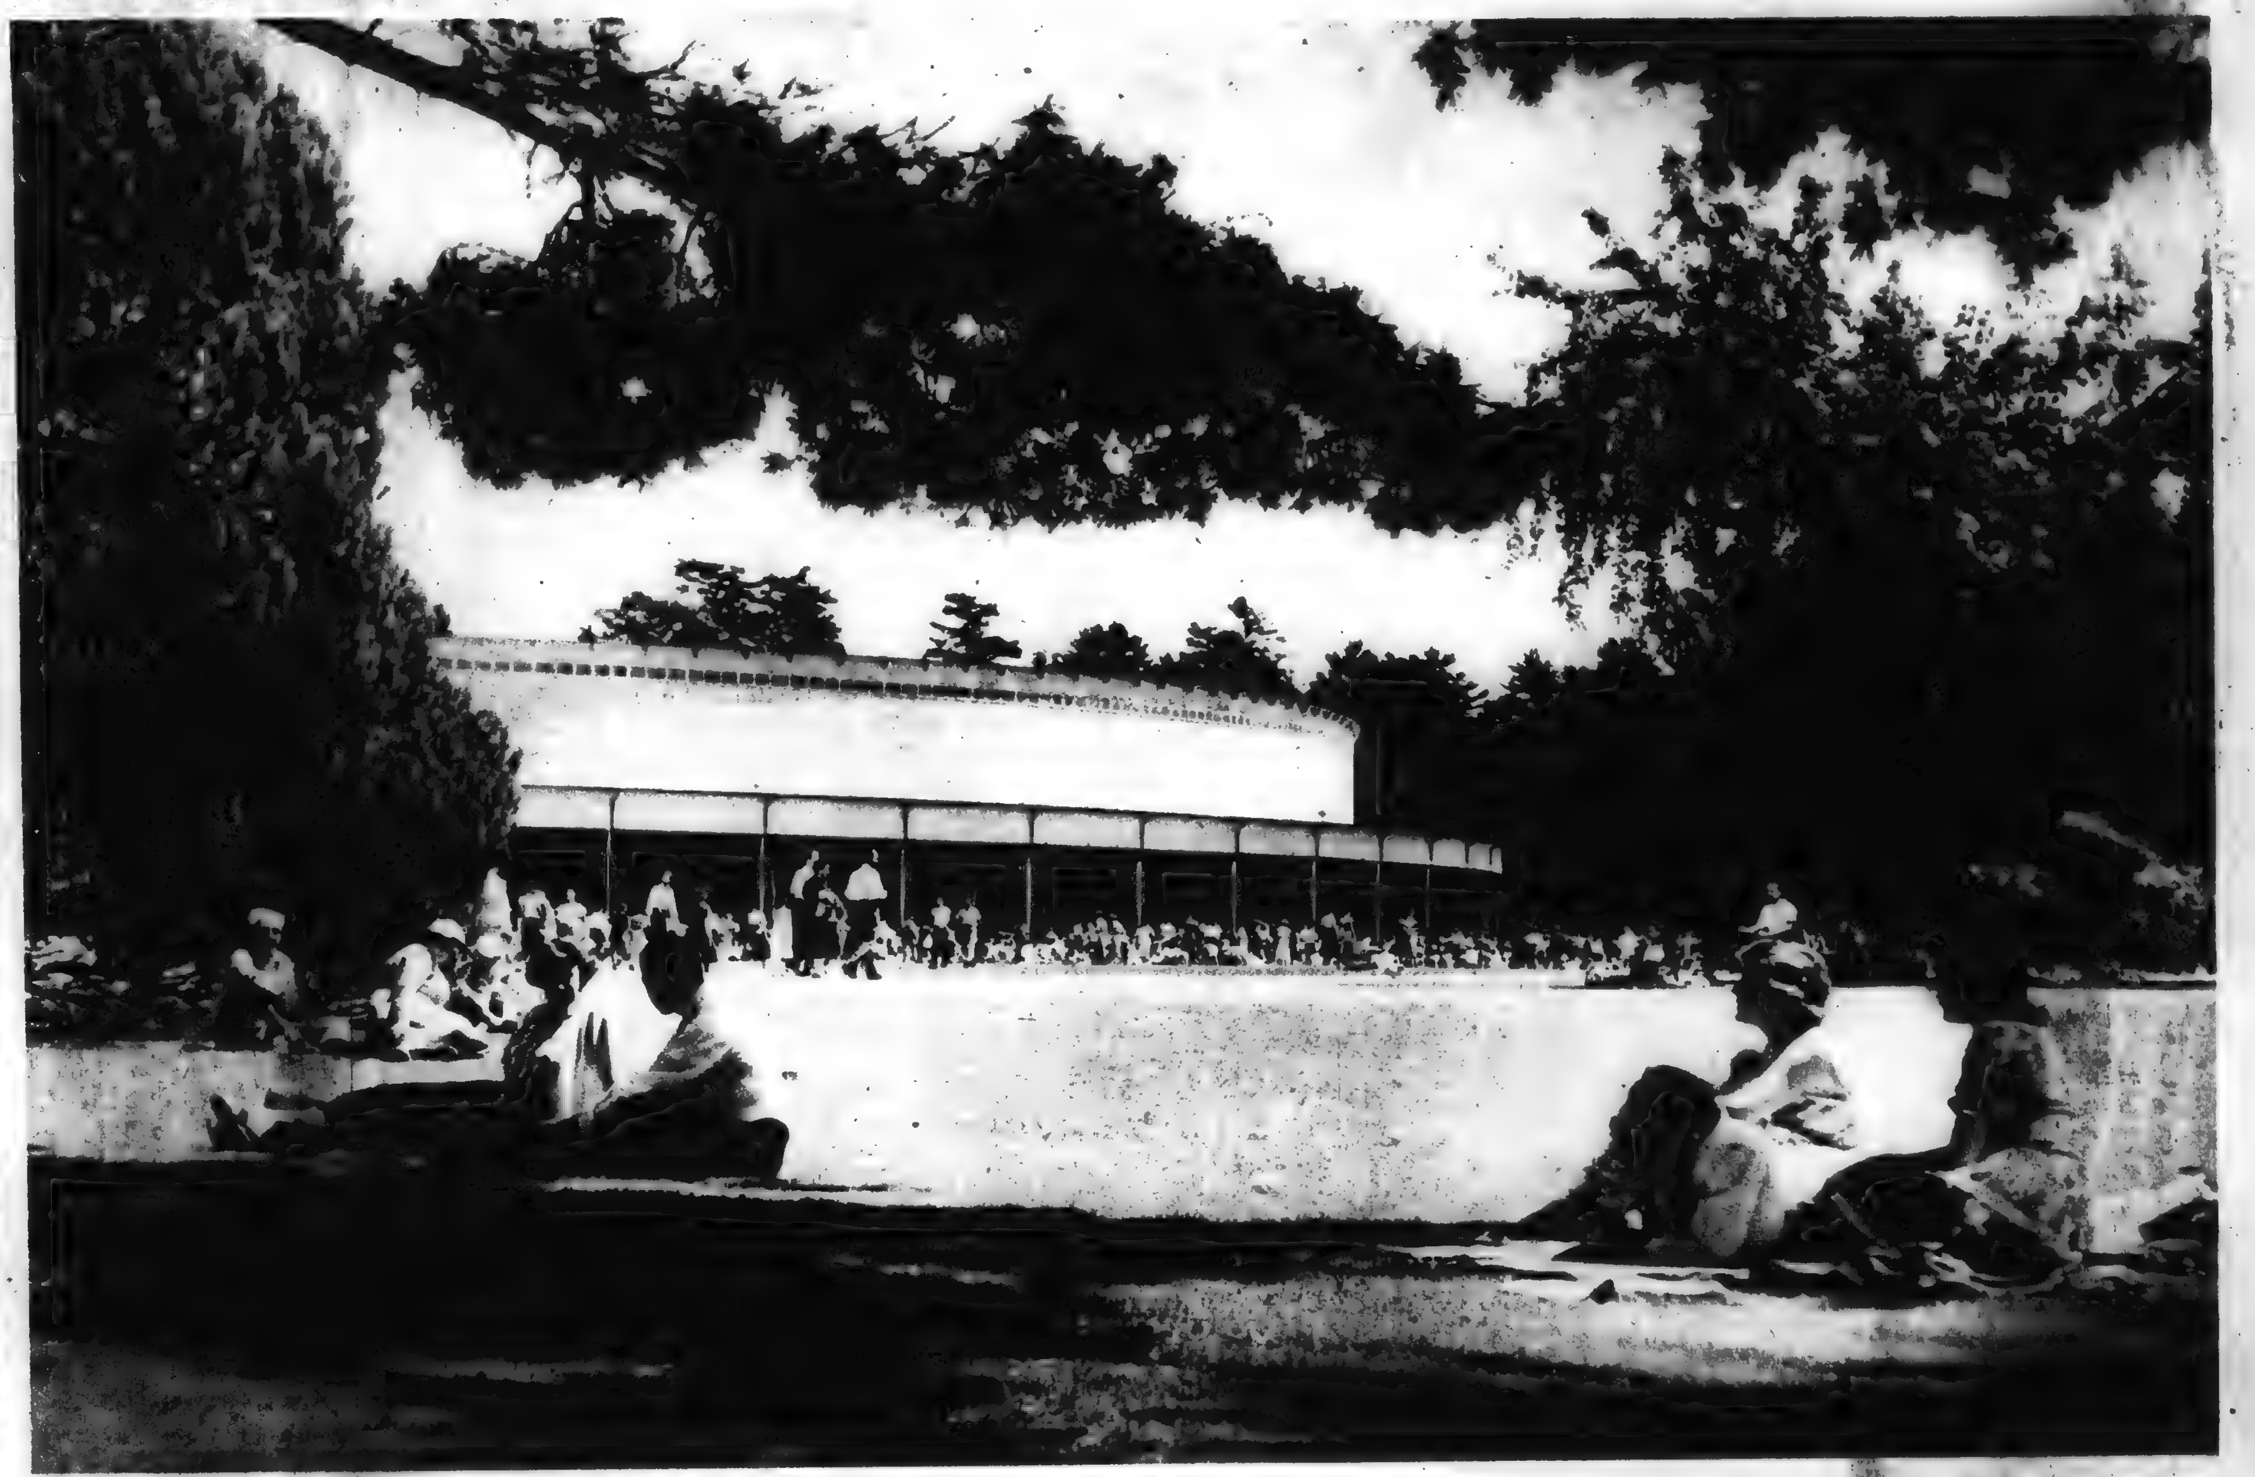
Rautavaara is studying composition with Dr. [illegible] Sessions of Princeton, N. J. and with the German composer Boris Blacher. Following the "Tanglewood" stay, arrangements are with the Julliard School of Music in New York City for Rautavaara to continue studies in America. His teacher, Dr. Sessions is widely known here, having visited frequently in the home of his brother-in-law and sister Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shipman Andrews in Taunton. A few seasons ago, Dr. Sessions was at the piano for one of his compositions, Prof. Louis Krasner of Syracuse University playing the violin.

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Thousands of music lovers from scattered sections of the nation are currently enjoying the music of the masters, as interpreted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the beautiful setting of Tanglewood in the Berkshires. Three celebrated conductors, Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux, and Leonard Bernstein are sharing the podium at Tanglewood this season, and a galaxy of soloists are lending their specific talents to make the current Festival series a star-spangled adventure into the world of melody. Tanglewood personalities and scenes are presented in this roto feature.

TANGLEWOOD

. . . pines shade entrance to Festival grounds. Nathaniel Hawthorne penned poetic tribute to the lovely trees.



RELAXING

. . . on spacious Tanglewood lawns is a pleasant way in which to enjoy symphony concerts.

DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER

. . . was soloist at the opening chamber orchestra concert.

-Left-

LEONTYNE PRICE

. . . one of the stars of "Tanglewood On Parade," will be soloist on July 29 when Charles Munch will conduct the premiere of Samuel Barber's "The Prayers of Kierkegaard."

THOR JOHNSON

. . . noted young American conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was guest conductor of the Boston Symphony's Chamber Orchestra at an early season concert. Series closes August 14.

Waterbury Republican Sun. July 17

Bernstein Scores Triumph At Concert In Tanglewood

By GEORGE MORGAN

It was a young man's evening at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood Friday. Those music lovers unacquainted with Leonard Bernstein's powers as an executant and as an interpreter were delighted and amazed to see and hear this talented composer of scores like "On The Town" and "Wonderful Town" not for concert hall purposes, conduct and perform Mozart. That the entire program was made up of choice compositions of that young genius of a century and a half ago added to the thrill and exhilaration of the evening.

After the opening Don Giovanni Overture, the only piece in which there was the tiniest roughness in the superb Boston Orchestra String tone, came an impeccable rendition of a great symphony, the one in C major called "Linz," magnificent vocalization by Mme. Jennie Tourel of three little known arias of extensive proportions and as climax the G major piano concerto with Mr Bernstein as soloist and conductor.

This unique piece with its delightful instrument action (woodwinds' strings and piano carry on with constant and amazing ingenuity), the superb Italianate melodies of the slow movement and the wonderful variations on a theme of disarming simplicity of the finale received a performance completely in the spirit of its creator.

The orchestra seemed as pleased as the audience in a young man's triumph in bringing to life this wealth of beauty and collaborated with the utmost spontaneity. The intensity and length of the applause indicated that the entire audience appreciated the extraordinary quality of this festival evening.

Counterpoint by Sparrows

NYHT 7/18

2,500 Hear Munch Present Tanglewood French Series

By Robert Bagar

LENOX, Mass., July 17.—From top to bottom this afternoon's orchestral program in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood was French, and all under the guidance of Charles Munch. A charming program it proved to be, on the whole. There was the Suite from the opera "Dardanus," by Rameau; "Le Tombeau de Couperin," of Ravel; the Pavane, Op. 50, of Fauré; Milhaud's "Serenade" and Honegger's Fourth Symphony.

There were some 2,500 listeners to this Gallic bouquet, quite a few of them inhaling its variegate fragrances from shady vantage points. Those who were in the hall itself, incidentally, were much less comfortable, what with the heat and poor ventilation.

Counterpoint by Sparrows

From the simple charms of Rameau to the more complicated ones of Honegger, the music unreeled happily and, one might add, with meticulous care. A battery of sparrows chirped gayly all through the Ravel "Couperin," thus adding a counterpoint unexpected yet entirely welcome in the country surroundings.

And the playing of that music, by the way—a fragrant and delicately tinted offering to an earlier brother-at-arms—just about summed up the conductor's especial talents in the rendering of French scores.

Perhaps some other works on the program had more substance, but surely not more grace or fragile beauty than the Ravel "Tombeau de Couperin." Its performance was wholly and deliciously palatable.

The Fauré work made a particular appeal to the senses and, here and there, to the emotions. And the early piece of Milhaud, which was composed in the '20s, is somewhat removed from that composer's later work in several respects—style, harmony, general demeanor. It had a certain freshness, however, though some of it does sound (if one may be permitted the term) old-hat.

Honegger's Symphony went extremely well, and it may be that Mr. Munch was thinking of the composer's programmatic idea——"to spend a summer in Switzerland, surrounded by affectionate friends. . . . This expectation instills in the composer an urge to create."

Boston Symphony Program

On Saturday evening the Theater-Concert Hall housed another program by the Boston Symphony. This was all Vivaldi, excepting Boccherini's Concerto for Cello in B-Flat Major, Op. 34. The soloist was Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, who was in excellent fettle.

The Vivaldi works were the Concerto in D minor, Op. 3, No. 11; the Concerto Grosso B minor, for four violins and string orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10, and the "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. In the last work the two mentioned soloists were Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto. The Festival Chorus participated. Hugh Ross, as conductor, gave the work a well organized reading. Attendance on Saturday night totaled 4,064.

TANGLEWOOD MUSIC FITTING FOR WEATHER

Union 7/18

2510 Enjoy Chamber Concert Devoted to Works Of French Composers

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 17—"Music for hot weather" might well be the title of the program of music Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra provided 2510 people who came to hear a chamber-music concert.

The program was devoted to the music of French composers and contained several works which Mr. Munch has made particularly his own. The opening work was a suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau. Cool, contemplative and vivacious by turn, the four movements provided lovely melodies. The orchestra tone today was as fine as at any time during these concerts.

Mr. Munch seems to have a particular fondness for the orchestral suite "Le Tombeau de Couperin," by Ravel who caught exactly the precise and ordered classicism of the 18th Century as well as its delicately scented sweetness. Written first as a piano suite, Ravel later made an orchestral suite, omitting a fugue and a toccata. This is music of an other day when enjoyment was leisurely, even contemplative. It is also music which everyone may enjoy and there was no doubt that the audience enjoyed the splendid performance today.

Still in contemplative mood, Mr. Munch offered a very beautiful, sensitive reading of the "Pavane" by Faure. This music is in the mood of an elegy. From the opening theme for flute, handsomely played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, to the finale, this music abounds in pure melody and gentle thoughts.

The first portion of the program concluded with a brilliant performance of Darius Milhaud's "Serenade," also known as "Symphony No. 3." It is comprised of three movements, with a gentle, wandering movement between to direct, pungent outer movements. Mr. Munch gave it all the orchestra had to give, particularly in the finale which abounds in the acid-sweet tonal texture so characteristic of the composer.

The final portion of the program was devoted to Honegger's "Symphony No. 4" which the composer intimates may be his last. Mr. Munch made this symphony known in the United States in 1948 while conducting a concert of the New York Philharmonic. Honegger has his devotees and his enemies, but there is little in this symphony to stir up a controversy. The writing is transparent and, above all, linear. It has moments of pure chamber music, but the finale makes full use of percussion. The audience seemed to enjoy the work, but the players were certainly well heated at its close.

The six chamber-orchestra concerts have drawn an audience of 18,180. Last season the same number of concerts drew a total of 16,650. The two chamber music concerts given thus far have had a total audience of 2550, against 2700 for two concerts in 1954. Undoubtedly weather conditions had much to do with the size of the audiences.

One of the highlights of the entire festival comes tomorrow night when the chamber music concert is given by Issac Stern, violinist, and his accompanist. They will be heard in three Beethoven sonatas for violin and piano.

Springfield Union 7/20/55

Folk Music Fe Many to Leno

By WILLARD M. CLARK

To many people Lenox means Tanglewood, and the Berkshire Music Festival. It is true that this is the largest musical activity here, but there are many others as well. For example, the other night we attended the first of 10 concerts to be given under the auspices of the Berkshire Folk-Music Festival held in the charming Sedgwick Hall of Lenox Library.

STUDENT ORCHESTRA

Back to Tanglewood again. We heard the second concert by the Student Orchestra of Department 1 of the Berkshire Music School and found it even more satisfying than the initial concert, given when the group had been together only four days.

This orchestra serves two purposes. It is a training orchestra and affords opportunity for the young student conductors to work with orchestra. At this concert, the student conductors were Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady N. Y., and George Mester of Mexico City. They are students under Leonard Bernstein.

We are told the numbers they conduct are chosen for them. Mr. Schermerhorn conducted Brahms' "Tragic Overture," Mr. Mester did the last two movements of the fifth symphony by Shostakovitch. Surely this is a good-sized order for conductors and orchestra.

Orchestra Is Good

This student orchestra is good. There are some outstanding players in it, particularly among the brass and winds. They have begun to achieve unity and responsiveness that augurs well for the concerts to come. Both conductors carried off their assignments well, Mr. Mester achieving excellent results in the finale of the Shostakovitch symphony.

While the orchestra played well for both conductors, it really got under way when Charles Munch put it through Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony and "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," by Dukas. Mr. Munch apparently has a way with young people with the result that there was no sense of tension but a spirit of oneness between players and conductor. What opportunities young musicians have these days! The students are a serious lot here. We have talked to many of them. They live music day and night and they love it.

Private contractors capture elephants in southeastern East Pakistan by means of a keddah, a circular stockade 20 yards in diameter, with reinforced walls of heavy logs 12 to 15 feet high. Beaters drive the wild elephants into the corral.

IE NEW YORK TIMES, MONDAY, JULY 18, 1

Music: Munch Conducts

Boston Symphony Heard in French and Italian Works at Tanglewood

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 17—The concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra that Charles Munch conducted at Tanglewood this afternoon demonstrated anew the conductor's affinity for French music and his great skill in bringing it to life.

It was a varied French program, ranging from an orchestral suite from Rameau's eighteenth century opera "Dardanus" to Honegger's Fourth Symphony, subtitled "Delicate Basilienses."

Also heard were Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Fauré's "Pavane" and the brash, breezy "Serenade" that Darius Milhaud composed in 1920-21. It is sometimes called his third symphony for small orchestra.

●

Mr. Munch and the Bostonians proved themselves to be fluent in the wide variety of musical styles heard on this afternoon's program. A particular delight was their performance of the Milhaud score. Written at a time when its composer was never happier than when writing in two or three keys simultaneously, the "Serenade" employs polytonality, odd, engaging rhythmic complexities and unusually colorful percussion section.

Among the bucolic joys of hearing music in this outdoor setting should be mentioned the performance of sparrows and robins, in vigorous competition with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, throughout "Le Tombeau de Couperin." It would be hard to imagine a pleasanter tribute to the playing of the Boston woodwinds.

●

An Italian program last night offered the Boccherini 'Cello Concerto in B flat, with Samuel Mayes as soloist, and the Vivaldi "Gloria" for chorus and orchestra.

Mr. Mayes' fluent playing, accurate intonation and fine resonant tone made the 'cello concerto one of the evening's highilghts. The admirable performance of the solo 'cellist was matched by sympathetic collaboration on the part of Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The "Gloria," conducted by Hugh Ross, displayed the sonorous, well-balanced tone of the Berkshire Festival Chorus. The solos were admirably sung by Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto.

Two Vivaldi concerti grossi, in D minor, op. 3, No. 11, and in B minor, for four violins and string orchestra, were ably performed under Mr. Munch's direction to round out the pleasant evening of Italian music.

[217]

Programs At Tanglewood Please Large Audiences

An unusually fine and not often performed program was the pleasure of 4,064 music lovers who ignored the steamy weather to attend the next to the last concert in the theater concert hall series at Tanglewood.

Almost exclusively devoted to the works of Antonio Vivaldi, an eighteenth century composer and one who in his time was more celebrated than his German contemporary Bach, and until 1911 [illegible] virtually unrecognized indeed had many of his works attributed to Johann Sebastian Bach or his son. Friedmann, it was an evening of rare and satisfying music.

The first concerto grosso scored for strings and organ continuo from the fugal and strongly melodic introduction of the violins carried into the violas and cellos to the crisp allegro was a solid work to be digested many times over. Again this prodigious composer gave us a second concerto for four violins with string orchestra to embellish and create a background for what one might consider an overstatement of violins, but which proved to be completely engrossing in the rhythmic and melodic virtuosity of these instruments. Bach, at one time scored this for four harpsichords, an interesting treatment to consider and listen to.

For many the highlight of the evening might have been the playing of Boccherini's cello concerto in B-flat opus No. 34, by Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony. Although Mr. Mayes is an exceptional cellist with a warm and rhapsodically tender tone, a master of the bow incomparable among many, the music never quite fulfills its promises, many moments of real beauty and sprightly rhythm only to be lost in too much diversification.

The evening closed with another Vivaldi work, brilliant and contemplative, a choral setting of the Gloria, spasmodically conducted by Hugh Ross and ably sung by the Berkshire Chorus, with the assistance of Sarah Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto.

Sunday afternoon a small but enthusiatic audience of 2150 enjoyed a varied program expertly played by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony and conducted by Charles Munch, most especially The Tombeau de Couperin" first composed for piano by Ravel in memory of his friends killed in the First World War. Here Mr. Munch easily and expertly evoked the delicacy and grace of the eighteenth century Ravel wrote into his memorial suite. Much of the applause was extended to Ralph Gomberg, excellent oboist of the Symphony.

The first number might be called a tribute to a musical theorist and composer who was determined to become recognized in the operatic field, and finally succeded at the age of 50, in 1733, the Dardanus suite being one of many operas and ballets he composed from then on.

Faure's Pavane, unlike the stately "Earl of Salisbury," by Gibbons, was most interesting for its flowing movement and underlying steady pulse.

A lovely Serenade of Milhaud, in three movements, two bright and quick and one rather tranquil, brought into play in the final movement the many small percussion instruments making it delightful to hear.

The second half of the program comprised the "Fourth Symphony of Honegger. Unlike many of his works it is pleasantly lucid and reminiscent, dissonances are surprisingly harmonic and acceptable, and the composer's ingeniuous instrumentation helps one to accept his latest symphony as one to be heard again and again.

A feature of the Shed series starting next Friday evening will be music by Beethoven, including his nine symphonies, Fidelio in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis." — M. deB. B.

Chamber Concert Opens '55 Festival At Tanglewood

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed theater-concert hall at Tangle wood, Lenox, at 8:30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week festival most of the prin cipal work of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis." and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated last season, the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts have a low admis sion charge of $2 and $3 and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season [illegible] attended the six concerts, an average of 1,358 per concert or well over the 1,200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007.00.

At tonight's concert the Kroll String Quartet (William Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, cello) will play one quartet from each of Beethoven's three big Periods: the Quartet No. 4 in C Minor (Early), the "Serioso" Quartet in F Minor Opus 95 (Middle) and the great C Sharp Minor, Opus 131 (Late).

As the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York, the Kroll String Quartet has given nearly 50 town hall recitals since it was founded by William Kroll in 1945, in addition to its annual tours. The group also appeared at last season's series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, on August 4, playing quartets by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been head of the violin and chamber music departments at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes School of Music in New York since 1943.

Gazette —

Northampton

Chamber Program 'Satisfying If Not Always Brilliant'

For some reason chamber music does not appeal to all music lovers, amateur or otherwise, and therefore much enjoyment is lost by missing the too few concerts of such music available hereabouts.

The fifth program in the Theatre-Concert Hall Series at Tanglewood was a most enjoyable one of three Beethoven trios played competently by the Beaux Arts Trio. A comparatively new trio, it consists of Menahem Pressler, a young and promising pianist from Israeli, who, it is hoped, will learn to sublimate his distracting mannerisms, made more noticeable by the almost too calm facade of the other two players, the technically able violinist, Daniel Guilet, concertmaster of the NBC Symphony, and Bernard Greenhouse, a well-known concert cellist and faculty members of the Juilliard School in New York.

On the whole, the performance was satisfying if not always brilliant. At times the tonal coloring and smooth phrasing reached an artistic perfection, but too often the interpretation was academic and contrived. The trios were well chosen for the development of the trio form as carried forward by Beethoven and completed by Brahms, the absolute master of the piano trio.

The first trio, Mozartian in flavor and appeal, Op. 1, No. 3, calls for a pianist of delicate but sure technique, especially in the andante, its theme introduced by the piano and most of its variations embellished and carried through in the piano part. One is well aware that Mr. Pressler is devoted to the playing of chamber music by the frequent and almost tortuous contractions of his facial endowments. Perhaps if he listened more with his ears and less with his eyes the results would be more gratifying musically and more pleasing visually both to his listeners and his fellow performers.

The aplty named Ghost trio was the second offering, so-called because of the haunting and eerily breathless quality of the largo movement. Here again one felt the need of more color and tonal variations, though the musical performance was of excellent quality and finesse.

Beethoven's maturity in trio form reached its fullest with the final "Archduke" trio; from the beautiful first movement, part of its theme to be heard later in the violin and piano sonata of Cesar Franck, through the richly melodious and harmonic andante cantabile to the spirited allegro and the insistent presto a beautiful blending finally of these three instruments, piano, violin and cello.

Friday night will see the return of Leonard Bernstein, conducting the chamber orchestra in an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, famous mezzo-soprano singing three arias, two from the opera "Idomeneo." — M. deB. B.

10—Mon. July 18 1955 ★

Final Concerts To Be Given In Lenox Tonight And Sunday

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire Festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers, respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi—his Concerti Grossi Numbers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (Harmonic Inspiration), and the "Gloria" Mass in D Major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire Festival Chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire Music Center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D Minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Mr. Mayes joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo cellist at the start of the 1948-1949 season, Serge Koussevitzky's last season as conductor. Previously he had been solo cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra for a decade, having joined that orchestra at the age of 19. He is the grandson of a Cherokee Indian and his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers. He has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of our principal cities. Last season he introduced the new Cello Concerto by Kabalevsky to American audiences.

Sunday's all-French concert, which will also be conducted by Mr. Munch, will be comprised of a suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's orchestral suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; the Pavane by Gabriel Faure; Milhaud's "Serenade" for Small Orchestra (also known as the Symphony No. 3); and the Symphony No. 4 by Artur Honegger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honegger compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood.

Commencing next weekend (July 22 and 23 evenings, July 24 afternoon), the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will assemble at Tanglewood to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, which Mr. Munch will open on Friday evening (July 22) with an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Remaining seats for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be given in the Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

Thor Johnson Handles Baton At Tanglewood

Saturday night at Tanglewood was one seemingly dedicated to the letter H. A hot humid night, harmoniously made up of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith. Thor Johnson, youthful conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was guest interpreter of the evening and showed himself to be more than able as alternate to the celebrated Boston Symphony orchestra director, Charles Munch.

We could not stay to hear the final word, Haydn's "Symphony in B Flat Major, No. 8, but feel sure that Mr. Johnson and members of the famed orchestra gave all they could summon in spite of the warmth of the evening.

The large first Saturday night audience of this season, totaling 3,000, many of whom were enthroned outside on the spacious green lawns, were very enthusiastic over Mr. Johnson's approach and treatment of the works in the first half of the program.

Handel's Concerto Grosso for string orchestra, in B Minor, Op. 6, No. 12, opened the program. This last of the concerti grossi of Handel has a brightness, buoyancy and grace which Mr. Johnson outlined in an expansive freshness of manner which was aided and abetted by the concertino and string orchestra. Haydn's Symbolic Concertante for Violin, Cello, Oboe and Bassoon, Op. 84, contained some very pleasurable listening mainly in a variety of tonal combinations in the solo instruments.

At the start of the second movement there is a short duet between the violin and bassoon which was intriguing indeed. Der Schwanendreher, Concerto on Old Folk Melodies for Viola and Small Orchestra, by Paul Hindemith was chiefly remarkable, not in itself as much as, for the artistically beautiful viola playing of Joseph De Pasquale, first violist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Here, as in the Haydn work, a duet between the soloist and, in this case, the harpist was very nice, making up partially for a difficult first movement. The third movement was the most robust of the three and slightly less enjoyable than the second. Hindemith has among his compositions others with more audience appeal.

Sunday afternoon's performance of Bach's B Minor Mass with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm and accompanied by an ensemble made up of first desk performers of the Boston Symphony, was an immensely rewarding endeavor.—F. M. R.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE
Circ. D. 3,895
JUN 30 1955

Berkshire Music Festival Set For Opening Concerts

LENOX, June 30 — Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, arrives in New York tomorrow by Air France from his home in Paris.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the Berkshire Festival. This year marks his fifth summer at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berksire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert a week from tomorrow, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m., a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the Boston Symphony's first flutist, as soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 10, his program with the chamber orchestra is the Bach Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society, and soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. The Saturday evening July 9 Festival concert works by Handel, Haydn and [illegible] Boston [illegible] eph de Pasquale [illegible] conducted by [illegible] director [illegible] phony [illegible] conducting [illegible]

The first student concert will be held Thursday July [illegible] 30 p. m. [illegible] Music Shed, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students of Department I under Leonard Bernstein's tutelage, will perform Copland's "Outdoor Overture," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun", Prokofieff's "Peter and the Wolf", and Davorak's Symphony [illegible] with Mr. Bernstein conducting [illegible] student conductors [illegible] selections. The first student chamber music concert will be held in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday, July 10, at 10 a. m. The public may attend these and other student concerts through contributions to the society of Friends of the Berkshire Music center.

MILLBROOK, N. Y.
ROUND TABLE
Circ. W. 673
JUN 30 1955

Charles Munch, music director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 6 August 14 [illegible]

Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival now in its thirteenth session.

[218]

Record (e)
CHELSEA, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 5,432

JUL 18 1955

One-Day Trip Tips

The Massachusetts Department of Commerce has compiled the following list of additional one-day trips that can be enjoyed by both young and old alike:

Music Festival

Boston Symphony Orchestra performs at famous Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22 and 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rts. 9 or 20.

Beach Party and Clambake

Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

Festival of the Arts

Cape Ann Festival of the Arts, opening July 23 and featuring International Dance Festival, at Gloucester High school. Rte. 127.

Costume Ball

A chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcombers Costume Ball, Provincetown Town Hall. Evening of July 22. Rte. 3 to 6.

Chicken Barbecues

Take your pick. Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44, at 3 p.m. and Wareham, Rte. 6 at 5 p.m. Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44, and Walpole, Mass.

Auction Sales

Match your wits with professional Yankee auctioneers every Friday evening at Northampton and every Wednesday evening at Westhampton, Rte. 9.

Army Tours

Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base, Rte. 28, Cape Cod; Anti-aircraft practise every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Rte. 6.

Kiddies Train Ride

Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad, South Carver, Rts. 3 to 44 to 58.

WASHINGTON, D. C.
Post & Times Herald

JUL 10 1955

On Music and Summer

By Paul Hume

SUMMERTIME was once a time for music to drop dead.

Back in the days when orchestras and opera companies were comfortably subsidized, and neither phonograph records nor the radio made the slightest difference to those who made up most of this country's concertgoers, the months from May to October were generally barren of the sounds of Beethoven and Wagner, Verdi and Mozart.

Hume.

There were exceptions, of course. Bayreuth had its international voyagers dating back to 1876, and Salzburg, under the direction of Lilli Lehmann, was becoming the music center it still is.

In this country, too, programs of music sprang up, sometimes dignified with the title of festival, as in the case of the opera festivals at Ravinia Park, north of Chicago, where for 20 years, some of the greatest and most unusual opera heard in this country was given.

The oldest of the current orchestral series is the list of concerts given at New York's Lewisohn Stadium, which began in 1918. Since then most of the country's major symphonies have become involved in the regular production of music in the hottest months of the year.

CERTAIN names have more recently become synonyms for the finest in music to be heard between May and June. The Boston Symphony plays regularly in the Shed at Tanglewood in the Berkshires, with an opening series of programs dedicated to the music of Handel, Haydn, Bach, Mozart and their classical counterparts. These openers are heard in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The big concerts in the Shed began under the Koussevitsky aegis, and followed the desirable pattern of presenting music of considerable novelty. In recent years they have turned into nothing more than imitations of the winter programs, with the most standard works imaginable filling the bills.

A NEW site for music in June, July and August has arisen in strength and high standards in Aspen, Colo. Benefitting from a location of scenic splendor, the Aspen Festival, through ups and downs in artistic direction, has turned its attention to solo, chamber and orchestral music.

From now through Sept. 4, its programs, given on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, are dotted with Hindemith, Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Milhaud, Kodaly and Dello Joio, with Haydn and Mozart, with Mirouze and Ibert, Reger, Webern, Monteverdi and Britten, and a toss of Bartok. Its resident artists form both solo and orchestral programs.

Both Aspen and Tanglewood have full summer school sessions as the backbone of their operation.

THIS is also a feature of two new festivals this year. At Stratford, in Ontario, Canada, the first music festival will endeavor to follow in the footsteps of last summer's successful drama session. Under the distinguished leadership of Boyd Neel, an orchestra will be the pivotal attraction that will include such renowned figures as singers Elisabeth Schwartzkopf and Aksel Schiotz, violinist Alexander Schneider, and pianist Glenn Gould. Gould, a very young man, was highly admired in a Washington recital this year.

Wisely, Stratford's orchestral programs will use chiefly the music of 18th and 20th centuries. Vivaldi, Bach and Elizabethan music will find place together with Britten, Strauss, and Schoenberg.

If you are interested in combining your vacation travels with your favorite avocation or recreation, music awaits you in many corners of the country from Cincinnati's operatic Zoo to Hollywood's resounding Bowl.

News
FAIRFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,850

JUL 14 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL TRIP

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be the next Sunday trip planned for YWCA members and their friends. On July 24 the group will leave by chartered bus from the YMCA at 9:00 a.m., and will attend the festival concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the afternoon. Charles Munch will conduct the Beethoven program.

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 17 1955

Major Concerts At Tanglewood Open This Week

The main series of Berkshire Music Festival concerts, given by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open at the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday, at 8:30 o'clock.

There will be similar performances Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and each successive Friday, Saturday and Sunday through the weekend of August 14.

Music by Beethoven will be featured at this year's Festival concerts. The programs this week include Friday — Overture: to "Coriolan;" Violin Concerto with Isaac Stren, soloist; Symphony No. 7; all by Beethoven.

Saturday — (Pierre Monteux, guest conductor) Passacaglia and Fugue, Respighi; Symphony No. 2, Beethoven; Suite from "The Black Masquers," Roger Sessions; "Death and Transfiguration," Strauss.

Sunday — Symphony No. 1. No. 4, and No. 6, all by Beethoven.

Springfield Union

JULY 21, 1955

1853 HEAR DUET OF PIANO-VIOLIN AT TANGLEWOOD

Beethoven Sonatas Played In Third of Chamber Music Series

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 20—The third concert in the chamber music series was given tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall by Issac Stern, violinist, and Alexander Zakin, pianist. It may well go down in Berkshire festival annals as one of the great concerts in its history.

Both musicians were in top form and they were playing music for which they had a real affection; namely, three sonatas for violin and piano by Beethoven. An audience of 1853 turned out to hear this recital amid ideal weather conditions.

Vivid Imagination

Beethoven wrote 10 sonatas for violin and piano, the first eight within a period of four years. These sonatas do not represent the creative best of the composer. It is known that most of them were written as a result of commissions, rather than for satisfaction of personal inclinations. There is, however, within these sonatas the vivid imagination, careful craftsmanship and the ever present inventiveness which are marks of the composer.

Messers Stern and Zakin opened the program with a delightful performance of the "Sonata in A Major, OP. 12, No. 2," a work of great charm placed between two sonatas written in the grand manner. The A Major Sonata is simple, tuneful and youthful. The two artists tossed off the opening, lilting, waltz-like movement with relish and they brought to the andante movement a spirit something less than grave, yet wonderfully contrasted to the outer movements. The final rondo was captivating in its gentleness.

The second sonata was the familiar "Sonata in F Major, No. 5, OP. 24" which bears the title "Der Frehling" of "Spring." It has long been one of our favorite sonatas for violin and piano, but we have seldom heard it played with such humor and sparkle. This was music written to enchant, rather than to impress, the listener and that was the result of the Issac Stern, Alexander Zakin performance.

Unity of Thought

For the final sonata they turned to the treasurable "Sonata in C Minor, OP. 30, No. 2." If the "Krentzer" sonata is the most brilliant of the Beethoven Sonatas, certainly the C Minor is not far behind. The performance was also on the grand scale. There was the tortuous conflict and stark drama of the two outer movements and tender sentiment, almost idyllic, in the inner movements.

It takes a long artistic association for two musicians to achieve the unity of thought and expression achieved by Stern and Zakin. If sometimes during the evening Mr. Zakin's playing seemed to lack color and be on the heavy side, we are inclined to blame the instrument more than the piano, for we have heard Mr. Zakin, the poet, on numerous occasions.

There was real audience satisfaction in this recital and well there should be for when two fine artists get together to play the music they love, the result can only be a delight to the ear.

There are 6000 camera clubs in the United States.

GREENVILLE, N.Y.
LOCAL

JULY 6, 1955

Charles Munch, Music Director for the past [illegible] years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts con[illegible] Symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 8 - August 14.

Mr. Munch is also Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth season.

[illegible]ASS.
[illegible]ING)

Vacation Boom Seen in Bay State

If the Fourth of July week-end is any criterion, Massachusetts should experience one of its most successful years as a Summer vacationland.

Commissioner Richard Preston of the Department of Commerce said yesterday that reports from the various state resort areas show record-breaking travel over the holiday week-end.

Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and Plymouth were hosts to the largest groups of tourists, with accommodations running to 90 per cent of capacity.

Cape Cod experienced "the second largest Fourth of July crowd in its history," according to Norman Cook, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Jazz Festival at Lenox, the Stockbridge and Williamstown Summer theatres and the formal opening of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood brought out capacity audiences there, John Downing, executive secretary of the Berkshire Hills Conference, Inc., reported.

Advance reservations at Cape Ann and Gloucester hotels and inns is unusually heavy for July and August, L. J. Hart, executive secretary of the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce said.

Similar optimistic reports were received from other beach areas and resorts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 11 1955

Berkshire Festival:

Bach Mass Thrilling

Munch's Humility Stands Out During Tanglewood Offering

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., JULY 11.—One of the greatest pieces of music, Bach's B Minor Mass, received reverent treatment from Charles Munch, 35 members of the Boston Symphony, and 85 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society yesterday afternoon, one of the most humid days in Berkshire Festival history.

A crowd of 3,585 people attended 1,200 inside the theatre-concert hall and the remainder on the lawn and benches outside. They grew ecstatic about the performance.

High in Humility

As the work unfolded, the performance worked into its eloquence, attaining indescribable beauty in the three choruses at the heart of the "Credo." Here in the "Et Incarnatus Est," the "Crucifixul and "Et Resurrexit" everybody rose to Bach's singular inspiration: the devout humility of the first two sections, then the wonderful spirit of jubilation of the last.

The contrasts of Munch's pacing the slower parts deliberatively and the allegros rapidly might be open to question, had there not emerged a consistent pattern of interpretation both understandable and convincing.

Contributing to the general atmosphere was the fact that orchestra and chorus were small-sized, but far beyond this, Munch's own humility was the dominant factor.

A group of good voices made the solos palatable, if not especially distinguished. They were sung by Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The young singers of the chorus sang in exultation when called upon by their dynamic conductor. The soprano quality was notably fine. The instrumental solos were excellently played.

Thor Johnson made his official Tanglewood debut conducting the Saturday night concert, attended by 2,800 people. In a program opening with Handel's Concerto Grosso, opus 6, No. 12, Featuring Haydn's "Sinfonie Concertante" for violin, cello, oboe and bassoon and his Symphony No. 98, and including as a contrast Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher," he gave a nicely-fashioned, well-disciplined performance. He senses the class style without quite conveying its essence, winning respect in doing so.

Joseph De Pasquale, first viola of the orchestra, gave an excellent account of the solo part of the Hindemith. It was a tribute to his musicianship and grasp of material.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 82,692

JUL 9 1955

Beaux Arts Trio to Play Beethoven at Tanglewood

JENNIE TOUREL
Festival Soloist

A program by the Beaux Arts Trio and three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony will be presented in the second week of the Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

The Beaux Arts Trio, composed of Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano, will offer a program of Beethoven trios at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday.

The first of the three concerts by the chamber orchestra at 8:30 p. m. Friday will mark the return to the Tanglewood podium of American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein after a year's leave of absence.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two of them from "Idomeneo." Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct concerts next Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

The chamber orchestra will perform 18th-Century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini next Saturday. Highlights of the program will be the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist, and Vivaldi's "Gloria," which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival Chorus.

The July 17 concert, all French orchestral music, will consist of selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhaud and Honegger.

News (e)
FRAMINGHAM, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 10,441

JUL 18 1955

Many Bay State Events Listed

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

Music Festival: Boston Symphony Orchestra performs at famous Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rts. 9 or 20.

Beach Party and Clambake: Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake, Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

Festival of the Arts: Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High school. Rte. 127.

Costume Ball: Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcombers' Costume Ball, Provincetown Town hall. Evening, July 22. Rte. 3 to 6.

Chicken Barbecues: Take your pick—Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44, at 3 p. m., and Wareham, Rte. 6, at 5 p.m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44, and Walpole.

Auction Sales: Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers, evenings, every Friday, at Northampton; every Wednesday at Westhampton. Rte. 9.

Army Tours: Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base. Rte. 28, Cape Cod. Anti-aircraft practice every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Rte. 6.

Kiddies' Train Ride: Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad, South Carver, Rtes. 3 to 44 to 58.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 25,388 - S. 25,685

JUL 8 1955

Concert Slated At Berkshire Festival

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock, the first of six Chamber Orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

This season, the six concerts in this series, will be given in the first two weekends of the festival with programs on Friday, and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon.

* * * *

AT TONIGHT'S concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will conduct two works by Bach, the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio and the Suite in B minor for flute and strings, along with Stravinsky's music for the ballet "Orpheus" and Mozart's Symphony No. 38 in D major. Soloist in the the Bach suite will be Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music center.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
Circ. D. 130,559 - S. 248,071

JUL 6 1955

Berkshire Festival Opening Tonight

The opening concert of the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be given tonight in the famed Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. at 8:30, when the Kroll String Quartet will play three quartets by Beethoven. During the course of the six-week Festival most of the principal works of Beethoven will be performed, including all nine symphonies, three concertos, Act II of the opera "Fidelio" in concert form, the "Missa Solemnis," and the five cello sonatas.

Inaugurated alst season, the Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts have a low admission charge of $2 and $3 and are designed to augment the three performances which in former years were donated annually by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Last season 8,150 attended the six concerts, an average of 1,358 per concert, or well over the 1,200 seating capacity, and the total receipts were $14,007.00. From this sum the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center benefitted by a total of $7,850.00.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 17 1955

HANDEL AND HAYDN ON BSO'S PROGRAM

The Berkshire Festival Concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thor Johnson will offer Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12 and Haydn's "Symphonie Concertante" tomorrow (8.15-1 EDT)

Isaac Stern, violinist, will be guest soloist on the Telephone Hour tomorrow. His selections include the first movement of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor and Kreisler's "Sicilienne and Rigaudon". . .

On the same evening, the Cities Service Band of America, conducted by Paul Lavalle, will offer Basile's "Big Time March" and selections from Rodgers' "Oklahoma!"

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 190,545 - S. 163,283

JUL 3 1955

Tanglewood Opening Due Wednesday

Special to The Blade

LENOX, Mass., July 2—Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

* * *

THE SATURDAY evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with the orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will be directed by Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. On Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood; evenings at 8:30; Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

* * *

AS IN 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the 6-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts. Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles.

Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22-Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, erected in 1938, and open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood; at night, under the stars, or in Sunday sunshine.

The festival concerts for 1955 will feature the music of Beethoven, including all nine symponies; "Fidelio" (Act III) in concert performance; the violin concerto; two piano concerti; three overtures, the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevetsky), and on the Wednesday evening series, a representative range of Beethoven's string quartets, trios and violin, piano and 'cello sonatas.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 17 1955

Full Boston Symphony In Music Shed This Week

Charles Munch to Conduct All-Beethoven Program Friday Night With Isaac Stern Soloist; Pierre Monteux to Conduct Saturday Night Concert

Lenox, July 16—The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symohony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Stern and Zakin

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theater-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood première of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers", by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10.00 a. m. (July 23), for which the nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete programs are:

Wed. July 20-8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music:
Violin Sonatas, No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2 .... Beethoven
No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring")
No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2
Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin

Fri. July 22-8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Overture to "Coriolan" .... Beethoven
Violin Concerto, Soloist: Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 7, in A major
Charles Munch, conductor.

Sat. July 23-8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor .... Respighi:
Symphony No. 2, in D major . Beethoven:
Suite from "The Black Maskers" Sessions:
"Death and Transfiguration" .. Strauss:
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Sun. July 24-2.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Symphony No. 1, in C major .. Beethoven:
Symphony No. 4, in B-flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
Charles Munch, conductor

Bach-Mozart Concerts

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall are:

Sat. July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian Music. Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Conyerto for Celo, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, Mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's summer school.

Sun. July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane: Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger; Symphony No. 4.

ALL MANGANESE IMPORTED

Los Angeles—The United States consumes more than 1,500,000 tons of manganese ore, of which 1,300,000 tons must be imported.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 17 1955

Famed Conductors

These two celebrated conductors, Pierre Monteux (left) and Charles Munch, will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra this week in the season's first two concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, is to conduct an all-Beethoven program Friday night, while Monteux will appear as guest conductor Saturday night, first of his three appearances at Lenox this season.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS
Circ. D. 7,126

JUL 3 1955

Tanglewood Festival Opening

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass. — Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its music director Charles Munch.

[illegible] summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to Aug. 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales."

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening with an all-Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist.

Former Student to Conduct

The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Hayln and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

On Sunday afternoon, July 10, Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in [illegible] Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

These concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

Total of 24 Concerts

As in 1954, an all-time record attendance year at the Berkshire Festival, when it became necessary to accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers with more concerts within the six-week framework of the Festival, the 1955 Berkshire Festival again consists of 24 concerts.

Six Wednesday evenings are devoted to the chamber music of Beethoven, with performances by noted ensembles and soloists.

Following the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival's final four weekends, July 22 to Aug. 14, when 12 weekend concerts are held in the 6,000-seat music shed, open on three sides so the thousands extra who attend may hear the orchestra on the spacious lawns of Tanglewood, at night under the stars or in Sunday sunshine.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 103,999

JUL 17 1955

Here Is The Kaleidoscope

ON MONDAY at the Craft Center on Highland street the second in a series of three Summer sessions will begin. The six-week program will offer one three-hour class a week with the trained professional staff of the center. Instruction will be offered in wood-working, metalcraft, pottery, jewelry, enameling, and weaving. Private lessons in weaving will also be offered. With such a variety available, it would be difficult to choose one particular craft to follow, and a class in any offers the opportunity to acquire a new interest and a new skill. The coming session will run until Aug. 26, and the final class program in the Summer series will begin Aug. 29. Students may attend a morning, afternoon or evening class.

On Friday the first of four weekend concert series in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Three concerts will be given each weekend, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon. It is an unforgettable musical experience to hear the orchestra play in the huge open Music Shed in the beautiful pastoral setting of Tanglewood at Lenox, and this year's concert theme, "A Season of Beethoven," will lhave a special attraction for many listeners.

Tonight at 7 the Little Symphony will end its Summer concert series in Institute Park. Pleasant weather has favored the four previous Sunday evening concerts, and we hope the weatherman will keep up the good record for tonight's concluding program.

Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 76,589

JUL 15 1955

'YW' MEMBERS TO VISIT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

The Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be the destination of the next in the series of Sunday trips for YWCA members, which has been scheduled for July 24.

Members will leave by chartered bus at 9:00 a.m. from the YWCA building. The concert on Sunday afternoon will be a Beethoven program performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

Reservations for the trip may be made now at the YWCA information desk, 263 Golden Hill street, and are open to family members and friends of YWCA members also.

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 61,159

JUL 17 1955

YWCA SCHEDULES TRIP TO BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

YWCA members and friends will attend the Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., next Sunday afternoon, when Charles Munch will conduct the Beethoven concert. The group will leave by bus from the YWCA at 9 a.m.

This is the third in a series of Sunday tours to nearby places and programs planned during the summer by the Bridgeport YWCA for its members and their families and friends.

Reservations for the July 24 trip as well as for the tour to the Mystic seaport Aug. 7 are now open at the YWCA information desk, 263 Golden Hill street.

Free Press
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Democrat
Circ. 7,100

JUL 16 1955

The School Committee is one of the biggest attractions for prospective politicians. There is no salary involved, but there are plenty of candidates . . . William J. Hession, referee in bankruptcy for United States District Court, will hold hearings Wednesday and Thursday at the Federal Building . . . The new store of Bailey-Wagner on Riverale Road, West Springfield will be previewed Saturday night by city and town officials, other merchants and suppliers. The store will officially open Monday, July 18 . . . A feud may have been started between Rep. Thomas T. Gray and the Election Commission. Gray called it "disgraceful" that he was refused a free copy of the Election Commission's list by streets of residents over 20. He said he has received one free in past years but this week he was refused a set on grounds he isn't a candidate . . . Package Machinery in East Longmeadow has laid off some of its workers . . . The Springfield Symphony chorus will appear at Tanglewood on August 14 . . . Springfield officially is moving to cut school-construction costs through revision of structural regulations now forcing these costs well beyond the level in other cities . . . The Division of Employment Security in this city is seeking to recruit fifty persons 14 and over for seasonal work on the tobacco farms of the areas . . . Thomas J. Donnelly of 36 Martel Road, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the School Committee from Ward 8, filed his nomination papers in the Election Commission . . . Springfield's six million dollar hospital, in full operation, has no facilities to administer first aid to accident victims . . . Initial claims for unemployment compensation filed at the Employment Security office here during the past two weeks show a drop from the claims filed during a similar period last year. . . Councilmen from five different wards are seeking playground improvements for their districts in letters received by the Park Commission . . . Search for ways to block a proposed fare increase for the Street Railway Company is under way in earnest in the city . . . At the rate of new parking lots being constructed in the downtown area, they will outnumber the buildings within a few years.

[221]

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

JUL 19 1955

BERKSHIRE FETE UNDERWAY

SUMMER SCHOOL RECESS—Ralph Berkowitz, pianist and dean of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, sits with Elanor Siranossian and Barbara Dinger, both of Watertown; Charles R. Connors of Roxbury and Edwin Thayer of Weymouth. Some 32 Greater Bostonians are students at the center, run in conjunction with the famed Berkshire Music Festival, and Connors and Thayer are members of the school orchestra.

REHEARSAL—Director of the Music Center is Charles Munch, for six years the leader of the Boston Symphony. ~~Now in its~~ 13th season, the Berkshire Festival continues through Aug. 13. His school has 405 students from 38 states and 18 foreign countries.

Music

Hovhaness Cantata Thrills Audience At First Tanglewood Choir Concert

By A. D. HORNE

ALAN HOVHANESS' "Easter Cantata" closed last night's first concert of the Tanglewood student choir on a note of high excitement. The composer, a student at the Berkshire Music Center in 1941, was present to hear the first performance of any of his work on a Tanglewood program, and to share with conductor Hugh Ross, soprano Marguerite Willauer, the chorus and orchestra a prolonged, enthusiastic ovation.

The cantata, composed for Easter, 1953, proved the high spot in the program that included a survey of choral music from Des Pres to Mozart and Brahms, and contained the first performance of Hovhaness' "Four Motets" under student conductors Vahe Aslanian and Morton Gold.

* * *

THE WORKS of Hovhaness and the "Song of the Soul" by English contemporary Edmund Rubbra followed the intermission, and were introduced by Mr. Ross with remarks about the stature of both composers and their limited recognition by American audiences. Mr. Rubbra's psalm, with accompaniment by a string orchestra, harp and tympani, will most probably remain unrecognized despite the conducting of Miss Iva Dee Hiatt last night. The Hovhaness motets were disappointingly traditional, or even reactionary, on first hearing.

But the cantata was a brilliant success. Its instrumental portions are richly oriental, full of wailing oboes, bells and harp. Its solo sections, as sung by Miss Willauer, were nothing short of thrilling. And its choral sections were direct and effective.

* * *

IT IS a short work, too absorbing to time, and Mr. Ross, an eloquent figure with a variety of conductorial gestures that included a good baseball swing, brought it to a brilliant finish. As he had predicted in his remarks, the Hovhaness work made a hit with the audience, which no more than half filled the Theater-Concert Hall.

Mr. Ross opened the program with Brahms' "Warum Ist das Licht Gegeben," and introduced a group of early works led by student conductors Elaine Yano, Ted Grame, Suzanna Robinson and John Atwood. Kalman Novak, who on Sunday night conducted a group of three poems set for small chorus by student composer Emma Lou Diemer, last night led the full chorus and accompanying strings and organ in the Mozart "Te Deum." Heinz Perez was concertmaster.

Movie Timetable

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 16 1955

Final Concerts To Be Given In Lenox Tonight And Sunday

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire Festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi—his Concerti Grossi Numbers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (Harmonic Inspiration), and the "Gloria" Mass in D Major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire Festival Chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire Music Center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D Minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Mr. Mayes joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo cellist at the start of the 1948-1949 season, Serge Koussevitzky's last season as conductor. Previously he had been solo cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra for a decade, having joined that orchestra at the age of 19. He is the grandson of a Cherokee Indian and his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers. He has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of our principal cities. Last season he introduced the new Cello Concerto by Kabalevsky to American audiences.

Sunday's all-French concert, which will also be conducted by Mr. Munch, will be comprised of a suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's orchestral suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; the Pavane by Gabriel Faure; Milhaud's "Serenade" for Small Orchestra (also known as the Symphony No. 3); and the Symphony No. 4 by Artur Honegger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honegger compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood.

Commencing next weekend (July 22 and 23 evenings, July 24 afternoon), the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will assemble at Tanglewood to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, which Mr. Munch will open on Friday evening (July 22) with an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Remaining seats for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted—Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be given in the Shed, which will also seat lawn audience.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 16 1955

One Day Trip Tips

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

MUSIC FESTIVAL — Boston Symphony Orchestra performs at famous Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Route 9 or 20.

BEACH PARTY AND CLAMBAKE — Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Route 127.

FESTIVL OF THE ARTS — Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Route 127.

COSTUME BALL — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcombers Costume Ball, Provincetown Town Hall. Evening, July 22. Route 3 to 6.

CHICKEN BARBECUES — Take your pick—Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Route 44 at 3 p. m. and Wareham, Route 6 at 5 p. m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Route 44, and Walpole.

AUCTION SALES — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Friday at Northampton; every Wednesday at Westhampton. Route 9.

ARMY TOURS—Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base. Route 28, Cape Cod; Anti-aircraft practice every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Route 6.

KIDDIES TRAIN RIDE — Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad. South Carver, Routes 3 to 44 to 58.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 15 1955

Siber and Abate To Exhibit Art At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 14—Paintings of the weather, by Berkshire artist Helmut C. Siber of Mill River, will be on exhibition during the coming week, from Saturday, July 16 until July 23, in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Commencing this week end, and continuing through the close of the festival on Aug. 14, the Tanglewood formal gardens will also display five large pieces of outdoor sculpture by Peter Abate of Brookline, whose Carrara marble work, "The Pearl," attracted much favorable comment at Tanglewood last summer.

These exhibitions, as well as succeeding weekly shows of paintings, sculpture and photographs, have been arranged through the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Eagle Wed July 20

Manos

AREA STUDENTS attending the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer chat on the campus with Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at left. Seated on the bench with him are Jayn Frances Rosenfeld of Pittsfield and Max Anthony Watras of Chicopee, clarinetist of the student orchestra, and kneeling, Robert Paige Ceeley of Williamstown, who is studying composition with Roger Sessions.

Tanglewood Tales

Schermerhorn Conducts Tomorrow

Tomorrow's symphony concert by the student orchestra in the Tanglewood Music Shed will give the audience of Friends a first opportunity to see Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, N.Y., conduct since it was announced last week he had been awarded the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship raised by Berkshire residents for a student of conducting. He will lead the orchestra in two movements of Prokofieff's violin concerto, with Paul Gurevich, of the Bronx, N.Y., as soloist.

A high light of the program will be "A Survivor From Warsaw," a work for orchestra, narrator and chorus, composed by the late Arnold Schoenberg, commissioned in 1947 by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and dedicated to the memory of Natalie Koussevitzky, first wife of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Prepared under the direction of Leonard Bernstein, it will be conducted by Arthur Winograd, a student of the Berkshire Music Center last summer, who will be making his first appearance of the season on the Shed podium. A former cellist with the Juilliard String Quartet, from 1946 until this year, he traveled with the ensemble in 1951 through Italy, [illegible], France, Switzerland and West Germany. He is 35, a native of New York City, and started to study music at the age of 14.

Stern, Zakin To Be Heard At Festival Recital Tonight

TANGLEWOOD—The third week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival begins tonight with a recital by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30. Three sonatas for violin and piano by Beethoven will be performed, those in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2; F Major, Opus 24 (the "Spring" Sonata); and C Minor, Opus 30, No. 2. This will be the third in the series of six Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts devoted to Beethoven this season. Future programs will be given by the New Music Quartet (July 27), Rudolf Serkin (Aug. 3) and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz (Aug. 10).

Donating Services

Mr. Stern, who is donating his services for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, returned last fall from his second round-the-world tour in 16 months. Since last November he has played in more than 50 American cities while on his 13th coast-to-coast tour. In April he played with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra the American premiere of Leonard Bernstein's new "Serenade" for solo violin, strings, harp and percussion. He has just returned from his fourth series of appearances in Israel, having also appeared as soloist with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra on its European tour in May.

In addition to tonight's appearance in the Chamber Music series, Mr. Stern will be soloist with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in two Festival concerts in the Music Shed: in Beethoven's Violin Concerto Friday evening, under the direction of Charles Munch, and in Brahms' Double Concerto for Violin and Cello, with Gregor Piatigorsky, on Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux conducting.

Shed Concert Friday

On Friday evening in the Music Shed the first of this season's 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program comprised of the Overture to "Coriolan" and the Seventh Symphony, in addition to the violin concerto with Mr. Stern. Saturday evening at 8:30, Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducting music by Bach, Beethoven and Richard Strauss, and also the Suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Sessions, who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. Sunday afternoon Mr. Munch will return, again to conduct an all-Beethoven concert of three symphonies—the first, fourth and sixth.

Remaining seats for tonight's concert, as well as all succeeding ones during the Berkshire Festival, which ends Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326
JUL 18 1955

2,510 Hear Final Tanglewood Small Orchestra Concert

An audience of 2,510 at Tanglewood, Lenox, yesterday afternoon heard the sixth and last concert this season of the small orchestra of Boston Symphony orchestra musicians. Charles Munch directed the program of music by French composers.

The opening work was a suite from Rameau's opera, "Dardanus." This was followed by Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," an orchestral suite. Then came Faure's "Pavane" and Darius Milhaud's "Serenade," also known as his Symphony No. 3.

The final portion of the program was devoted to Honegger's Symphony No. 4.

A total of 9,703 persons attended the small orchestra concerts at Tanglewood during the week-end. Saturday night's concert, attended by 4,064, featured the music of Antonio Vivaldi. Works performed included the "Concerto Grosso in D Minor," "Concerto Grosso in B Minor" and the "Gloria" for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. In addition, Samuel Mayes, first cellist, played Boccherini's "Concerto for Violin-cello in B-Flat Major."

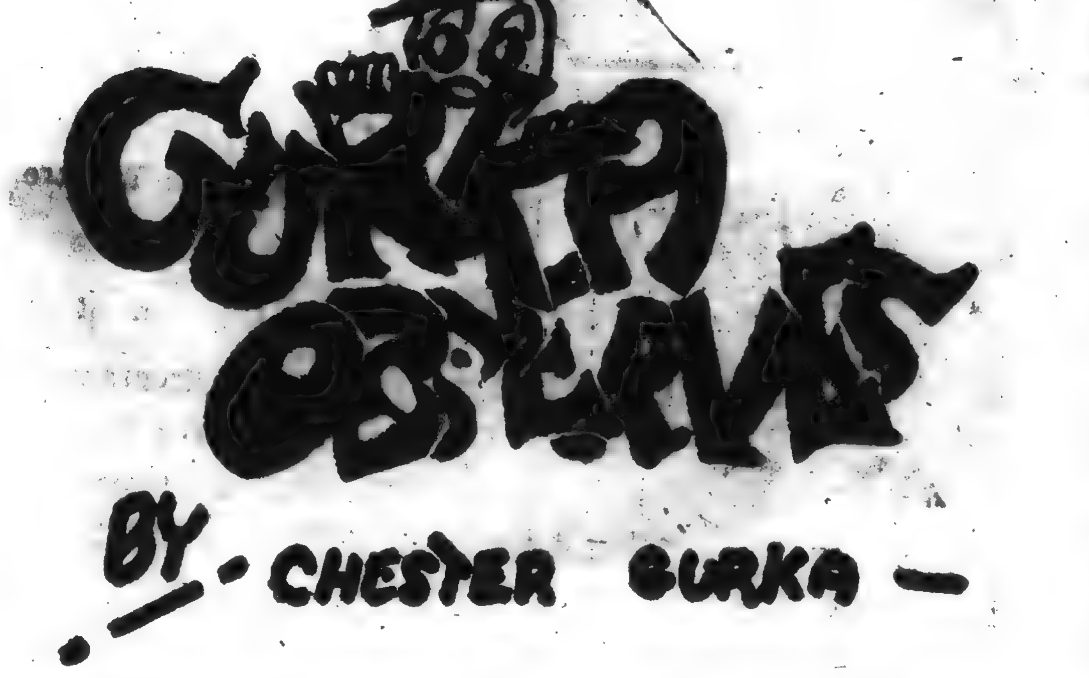
Mr. Munch directed the Vivaldi concerti and Hugh Rooss, "Gloria."

An audience of 3,129 was present Friday night for a Mozart concert directed by Leonard Bernstein.

A chamber music concert will take place Wednesday night and the first of 12 major symphony concerts Friday night.

News (e)
AMESBURY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 2,515

JUL 16 1955



The Automobile Club of America today came to the defense of the much maligned woman driver.

"They may not be more experienced drivers than men," said W. H. Heineke, executive vice president of the Club, "but they tend to be the safer ones."

The Club suggested that husbands let their wives share in the driving on long-distance vacation trips, because "over the long journeys women are likely to stay more alert."

Mr. Heineke cited a Pennsylvania Turnpike accident survey which disclosed that women drivers don't fall asleep at the wheel as often as men.

The study also revealed that older drivers — those 46 and older— have few falling asleep accidents; those in the 16 to 25 age bracket were responsible for 35.5 percent of such mishaps.

The Club offered the following recommendations for long-trip highway vacationists: stop for a rest and coffee every 100 miles; change drivers after every stop; don't pass on hills or curves; keep a space about 150 feet between you and the car ahead; avoid alcohol if you're driving; never drive when drowsy; and, of course, keep within the speed limits.

the United States his adopted land many years ago. He was appointed musical director of Columbia Broadcasting System because of his outstanding work in various radio concert series. His guest appearances include performances with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Montreal Symphony, Toronto Symphony and others.

The program:

Sarabande & Saltarello from Suite in Ancient Style, by Antonini.

Concerto in F, No. 14, piano and strings (Bach), Grace Castagnetta, piano.

Summer & Winter, from The Seasons (Vivaldi), Totenberg, violin.

Hymn & Fuguing Tune (Cowell).

Concerto No. 2 for violin and strings (Hovhaness), Totenberg.

Rhapsodia Sinfonica (Turina), Miss Castagnetta.

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

Music Festival — Boston Symphony Orchestra performs at famous Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Route 9 or 20.

Beach Party and Clambake — Old fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Route 127.

Festival of the Arts — Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Route 127.

Costume Ball — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcombers Costume Ball, Provincetown Town Hall, Evening, July 22. Route 3 to 6.

Chicken Barbecues — Take your pick — Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Route 44 at 3 p.m., and Wareham, Route 6 at 5 p.m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Route 44 and Walpole, Mass.

Auction Sales — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Friday at Northampton; every Wednesday at Westhampton. Route 9.

Army Tours — Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base, Route 28, Cape Cod; Anti-aircraft practice every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Route 6.

Kiddies Train Ride — Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad, South Carver. Routes 3 to 44 to 58.

Berkshire Eagle; Wed July 20

Tanglewood on Parade Group Maps Plans for Benefit Aug. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center, its summer music school at Tanglewood, will be held this year on Thursday, Aug. 11.

At a meeting at Tanglewood yesterday, the following committee officers were named: Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Lenox chairman; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Lenox and St. Paul, Minn., vice-chairman; Miss Margo Miller, Pittsfield, secretary.

Committee Head

Heading the committee for the sale of boxes is Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Stockbridge, chairman, and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., Hingham, vice-chairman. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn is in charge of door prizes.

Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of a one-act opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m. on Aug. 11, preceding the evening's full program. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, will announce his program and cast soon.

Student Concerts

At 6 p.m. all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, opera, choral and Study Group, — will give simultaneous demonstrations. During dinner a choir concert will be given on the steps of the Berkshire Music Center's administration building.

The program for the evening concert at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and noted guest artists will be announced shortly. At the close of the concert, door prizes will be drawn. Dancing on the lawn will end the festivities.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 16 1955

Bernstein Polished In Mozart Offering

By EVANS CLINCHY

Lenox, Mass. — Leonard Bernstein conducted an all-Mozart program here last night at Tanglewood, and he conducted it elegantly.

He also played the piano, the G Major Piano Concerto, K. 453. The piece was conducted by Mr. Bernstein from the piano, and he also accompanied Jennie Tourek, a fine soprano, in one of her three Mozart arias.

* * *

AS A PIANIST, Mr. Bernstein has a fine, light Mozartean touch. In the concerto he tended to drag and romanticize the slow movement a bit, but otherwise his playing had all the sting and wit that one could ask for.

I suspect, however, that he is a better Mozart conductor than player. His program last night contained the "Don Giovanni" Overture and the "Linz" Symphony beside the piano concerto. He brought to each of these a suavity mixed with just the right touch of intense feeling that was most charming to both the ear and heart.

Here there was no tendency to dramatize himself as a conductor in the manner in which he appeared to dramatize Bernstein the pianist. It is no mean feat to conduct from the piano, and perhaps he became a little bit lost doing both jobs at once. Certainly the members of the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra tended to lose their normal cool perfection.

Otherwise, they played exquisitively throughout the entire evening.

* * *

MISS TOUREL, who certainly is a soprano of the highest caliber, sang her three arias with great security and with appealing roundness of tone.

The arias included one from "Idomeneo," a rondo entitled "Al desio, di chi t'adorata," and a scene and rondo "Non, temer, amato bene." This last had the piano obligato by Mr. Bernstein, and all used orchestral accompaniment.

On the whole and with Mr. Bernstein's forgivable dramatics aside, it was a most pleasant evening of Mozart. All of the music was lovely, much of it unusual. And it was well- performed.

A large crowd for the Theater Concert Hall was in attendance, and even though the night was cloudy, the weather was not too warm, and the music could be heard quite clearly both inside and outside the hall.

Tanglewood Tales

Stern to Be Heard Twice This Week

Violinist Isaac Stern, who makes the first of three Tanglewood appearances on Berkshire Festival programs this summer tonight, in a program of Beethoven sonatas with Alexander Zakin, is staying at Elm Court, Lenox, with his wife and mother, and Mr. Zakin. Between his concert tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall and his Friday performance of the Beethoven violin concerto with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will rehearse with cellist Leonard Rose and pianist Eugene Istomin for several concerts he will give later this month in Chicago. Mr. Istomin is a Festival soloist in Beethoven's concerto No. 4 on Sunday Aug. 7.

* * *

Gregor Piatrigorsky Arriving July 28

Gregor Piatigorsky is expected at Elm Court, Thursday, July 28, to commence the classes he will hold in chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center during its final two weeks. The eminent cellist appears three times on Festival programs this summer, playing the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello with Isaac Stern on Sunday afternoon, July 31; giving a sonata program with Ralph Berkowitz Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, and performing Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" Friday, Aug. 12.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 16 1955

4th Small Orchestra Concert At Tanglewood Draws 3,129

An audience of 3,129 at Tanglewood, Lenox, last evening heard the fourth of the six concerts by small orchestra of Boston symphony musicians in the theater-concert hall.

Bernstein Conducts

Leonard Bernstein, head of the department of orchestra conducting at the Berkshire Music center, led the orchestra in a program devoted entirely to the works of Mozart.

This evening, in the second of this week-end's series of small concerts, Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in the works of two Italian composers, Vivaldi and Boccerini, while tomorrow afternoon he will lead the musicians through an all-French program. Sunday's music will close the series of preliminary concerts.

Next week the 1955 Berkshire Music festival goes into its major phase as the full 104-member Boston Symphony orchestra under Mr. Munch's direction begins a schedule of 12 concerts in the huge Tanglewood music shed. These will be given on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.30 and Sunday afternoons at 2.30 for four successive weeks. The Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the theater-concert hall will continue through the rest of the festival season.

On last evening's Mozart program were the overture to "Don Giovanni," the C major symphony (K.425), and the piano concerto in G major in which Mr. Bernstein served as soloist, conducting the orchestra at the same time from the keyboard. The program also included three Mozart arias by Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano.

Representing Boccerini on this evening's program is the concerto for 'cello with Samuel Mayes of the Boston orchestra as soloist, while the Vivaldi works are two concerti grossi and the Gloria in which the Music center chorus directed by Hugh Ross will take part.

Tomorrow afternoon's program consists of Rameau's "Darndanus" suite, Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's Pavane, Milhaud's Serenade, and Honegger's Fourth symphony.

Eagle Wed. July 20

Tanglewood Tales

Students To Perform Works of Teachers

Music by two members of the Berkshire Music Center will be given on student programs later this summer. Guest composer Boris Blacher's Divertimento for Flute, Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, Opus 38, will be performed by students of Department I, at the Sunday morning Chamber Music concert of Aug. 7. Ingolf Dahl, associate professor of music of the University of Southern California, who heads Tanglewood's Study Group (Department V), will conduct the student symphony orchestra at its final concert, Saturday afternoon Aug. 13, in his own composition, "The Tower of St. Barbara," which was commissioned by the Louisville (Ky.) Philharmonic Orchestra, and performed there and by the National Orchestral Assn. under Leon Barzin in New York City.

* * *

Blacher's First Night Spent in Orchestra Pit

Boris Blacher, director of Berlin's Hochschule fur Musik, who is guest composer at Tanglewood, had one night in New York before coming to Tanglewood to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The distinguished composer revealed in an interview this week that he had spent his first evening in the U.S. in the orchestra pit of the St. James Theater on Broadway, watching from that vantage a performance of the musical comedy hit, "The Pajama Game." Professor Blacher had a relative in the pit orchestra, and volunteered "to play the celeste, or something . . . but they all seemed quite busy, so I had nothing to do."

* * *

Malcolm Bernstein To Sing Dual Roles

Beethoven's "Fidelio," Act II of which will be given in concert form by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Saturday evening, Aug. 6, will utilize three students of the orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, as soloists, assisting Metropolitan Opera soprano Margaret Harshaw, tenor David Lloyd and baritone Mac Morgan. The dual roles of Pizzaro and Don Fernando have gone to Malcolm Bernstein, of Baltimore, baritone in his second year with the Tanglewood opera department. In 1954 student opera productions he was the grandfather in Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" and Geronte in Gounod's "Le Medicin Malgre Lui," and sang the bass solo in Bach's Magnificat, which Hugh Ross conducted. The roles of Marzelline and Jaquino are to be sung by Christine Cardillo of North Adams, a sister of Pasquale Cardillo, clarinetist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra; and Arthur Schoep, of New York, of the staff of the Tanglewood opera department. Miss Cardillo was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera auditions of the air, studied at Tanglewood in 1953, and has just returned to the campus after two years of vocal study in Milan, on a Fulbright scolarship. Mr. Schoep will make his Berkshire Festival debut a week earlier in a solo role in Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," on Mr. Munch's concert of July 29.

* * *

Springfield Chorus To Sing at Shed Aug. 14

Seventy members of the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, have been invited by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony to appear with the orchestra, the Festival Chorus of the students of the Berkshire Music Center, and soloists Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm in the Festival concert performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with which the Berkshire Festival will close at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14. The Spirngfield chorus, which took part in the Berlioz "Requiem" in a Festival concert last year, is being trained by Hugh Ross, head of the Tanglewood choral department, and his assistant, John Krueger, of Youngstown, Ohio.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 19 1955

Isaac Stern, violinist, will be heard in a program of three Beethoven sonatas with Alexander Zakin Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall in Tanglewood, Lenox.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 16 1955

Berkshire Festival Schedules 12 Concerts

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, July 16—The Berkshire Festival concerts move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its Spring and early Summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston, moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed, which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of music director.
Charles Munch, the symphony's

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the 12 Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of 9197.

A feature of the Shed series in1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Miss Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, late Music Director of the orchestra).

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theater-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

Suite Is Feature

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers," by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this Summer.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8.30 p. m.; the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 23), for which the nominal charge is made of $1.00 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall are: Sat. July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian Music. Vilvaldi: Concerto Grosso in D, Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, Mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's Summer music school. Sun. July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dadanus"; Ravel "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane: Milhaud: Serenade Honegger, Symphony No. 4.

3 Beethoven Quartets

The fourth week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with a program of three Beethoven quartets by the New Music String Quartet (Wednesday July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall). In the Music Shed, Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening (July 29) in a program of Handel, Schumann, Samuel Barber and Brahms, with Leontyne Price, soprano, as soloist; and Saturday evening (July 30) Mr. Munch directs an all-Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, pianist, as soloist. The Sunday afternon (July 31) Music Shed concert is an an all-Brahms program by the Boston Symphony with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor, and Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists.

During the coming week a number of concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in the midst of its 13th session at Tanglewood. Friends of the music school who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a. m., July 17, and 24, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forums by Department III students (8:30 p. m., July 17 and 24, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8.30 p. m., July 18 and 25, Sedgewick Hall, Lenox): a choral concert by the small choir of Department II students (8:30 p. m., July 19, Theater-Concert Hall); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 p. m., July 21 Music Shed).

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friend's Society, will be mailed on request. For the convenience of Festival patrons, the Berkshire Hill Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass will supply a list of hotel, motel, or guest house accommodations in the Berkshires and through the co-operation of local chambers of commerce and similar organizations, will endeavor to secure reservations

---

TYPICAL SCENE AT TANGLEWOOD CONCERT

LENOX—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra enters its second week of the season Sunday. The six-week festival of 24 concerts ends August 14. Audiences during the 1954 season averaged 2275 persons in the Theater Concert Hall and 9197 persons at performances in the huge music shed. The Boston Symphony has participated in 16 of the 18 Summer programs.

Press (e)
BRISTOL, Conn.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 12,101

JUL 16 1955

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

As time goes, an eighteenth anniversary is not particularly unusual; yet when the Berkshire Music Center started its first season at Tanglewood in 1937 even its enthusiasts were not prepared for the huge success it has met from its inauguration.

The summertime program at Lenox is one of the bright cultural features of American life and has been so from the start. The beautiful setting in the Berkshires adds immeasurably to the entertaining aspects of the festival.

When the idea of holding the festival was first broached, some of the enthusiasts expressed the hope that sometime Tanglewood would become famous as a sort of American Salzburg. It has done better than that. It has become a focal point of world music for this season of the year.

The sponsors and the people of Western Massachusetts, who have taken immense community pride in the festival, have heard the plaudits of musical greats and the audience, made up of those from all walks of life with the common binding quality being appreciation of good music.

The eminent conductor, Dr. Charles Munsch, who spoke at the conclusion of opening exercises, possibly expressed a most accurate feeling of those interested in Tanglewood when he said, "I hope with all my heart that our festival here in the beautiful Berkshire Hills, under this guidance, will be a blessing that will unite all those who make music and those who listen to it—in a noble and fervent communion.

Those who have attended the festival in the past will attest to the fact that, so far, Dr. Munch's hopes have been more than fulfilled.

PATERSON, N. J.
CALL
Circ. D. 30,501

JUN 27 1955

Janiec To Conduct Premiere Of Opera At Berkshire Fest

PASSAIC—Henry Janiec, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Ave., a native of this city, will conduct the premiere performances of the new opera, "The Rope," by Louis Meninni at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., Aug. 8 and 9.

The Festival of Tanglewood, as it is popularly called, is a six-week series of concerts and operatic performances sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In addition to his operatic duties, Janiec will be an assistant conductor of the Tanglewood Symphony for the second year, assisting Leonard Bernstein, famous young composer-conductor in the Thursday evening orchestral series. In a similar post last year, Janiec conducted with such men as Jean Morel, Richard Burgin, Thomas Schippers, Arthur Fiedler and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony.

Janiec is regular conductor of the Spartanburg Symphony Orchestra and professor of piano and conducting at Cinverse College, Spartanburg, S. C. He is also a string supervisor in the city schools and serves as musical director for the Spartanburg Little Theater. He has also served as guest conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, the South Carolina Opera Workshop and various opera companies and orchestras in the South.

He graduated from Passaic schools and received musical training from George Keller, of Paterson. He recieved his bachelor and mastor of music education degrees from Oberlin College. His brother is Edward Janiec, director of the Chopin Singing Society.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 39,951

JUL 12 1955

Finnish Composer Coming To U.S.

Lenox, Mass., July 12—(UP)—Eino Rautavarra, 26, a Finnish composer, will study at the Berkshire Music Center this summer under the sponsorship of his famed countryman, Jan Sibelius.

Rautavarra is one of 33 students from foreign nations who entered the school's 13th session at Tanglewood.

Rautavarra has composed several works, including a "Requiem In Our Time" which won him the Thor Johnson Prize, an award donated by the conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra.

Rautavarra will study at Tanglewood under Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher, a contemporary German composer.

PASSAIC, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS
Circ. D. 57,740

JUN 23 1955

Henry Janiec to Conduct Premiere of New Opera

To Serve as Assistant Conductor Of Tanglewood Symphony for Second Year

Henry Janiec, native of Passaic, will conduct the premiere performances of the new opera, "The Rope", by Louis Meninni at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., August 8-9.

Henry Janiec

To Assist With Symphony

The new work was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Foundation and will be directed by Boris Goldovsky, director of the Boston Opera Company and intermission commentator for the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts.

The Berkshire Festival, or Tanglewood as it is popularly called, is a six-week series of concerts and operatic performances sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and directed by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland.

In addition to his operatic duties, Mr. Janiec will be an assistant conductor of the Tanglewood Symphony for the second year. He will assist Leonard Bernstein, famous young composer-conductor, in the Thursday evening orchestral series. Last year in this post, Janiec conducted with such men as Jean Morel, Richard Burgin, Thomas Schippers, Arthur Fiedler, and Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony.

Professor At Converse College

Mr. Janiec is regular conductor of the Spartanburg Symphony Orchestra and professor of piano and conducting at Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C.

He is also a string supervisor in the City Schools, and serves as musical director for the Spartanburg Little Theater where he has conducted the first national community production of such shows as "Carousel", "Allegro", and "Kiss Me, Kate".

He has also served as guest conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, the South Carolina Opera Workshop, and various opera companies and orchestras in the South. Last season he directed the sound track of the movie short-subject "Escape".

Mr. Janiec received his bachelor and master of music education degrees from Oberlin College after graduation from Passai High School and local musical training with George Keller, of Paterson. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Avenue, Passaic, and the brother of Edward Janiec, director of the Chopin Singing Society.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 1 5 1959

Concert Center Of The Berkshires

anglewood at Lenox, Mass., once a fabulous residential estate, an the locale in which Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote "Tanglewoo Tales", is once again a center for music lovers as the 18th annua Berkshire Festival gets under way. With its summer music schoo a number of varied concerts each week, and the coming serie of 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this year' Festival may well break last year's attendance of 135,775.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 1 5 1959

Tanglewood Student Conductor Grant Goes To Schenectady Man

The annual Berkshire county scholarship to a conductor student of the Berkshire Music center, the Boston Symphony orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox, has been awarded to Kenneth D. Schermerhorn, 25, of Schenectady, it was announced today.

To Express Gratitude

The scholarship was instituted last year by Tanglewood's neighboring residents of Berkshire county to express their gratitude for concerts of symphony music performed by students of the Berkshire Music center who train under the American composer-conductor, Leonard Bernstein.

The scholarship was organized as a memorial to the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who instituted student symphony concerts at Tanglewood in 1940. The programs are led by talented young conductors, training for leadership of the world's symphonic orchestras. Graduates from the Tanglewood podium have included such distinguished conductors as Mr. Bernstein, Thor Johnson (Cincinnati), Walter Hendl (Dallas), Lukas Foss (Los Angeles), Eleazar de Carvalho (Rio de Janeiro), Robert Whitney (Louisville), Richard Bales (National Gallery, Washington, D. C.), Thomas Schippers (New York city and Metropolitan opera companies), Robert Zeller (Sadler's Wells ballet), Herman Herz (Duluth).

The scholarship committee, headed by Mrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, in 1954 raised $5,000 from more than 135 donors toward a $15,000 goal to establish an annual scholarship to attract student conductors to Tanglewood. Its present value is $500, which covers the student's tuition and living expenses at the Berkshire Music center.

Make Debut

Kenneth Schermerhorn, to whom the conducting scholarship has been awarded for the present season, made his debut on the music shed podium at Tanglewood last night, opening a student concert program with Brahms' "Tragic Overture." He is one of several student conductors who share portions of the summer symphony evenings, working under Bernstein, who recommended that Schermerhorn receive the scholarship.

In 1950, following three years of music study at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, and private work with Roger Voisin, first trumpet, and Gaston DuFresne, bass player of the Boston symphony, Schermerhorn attended the Berkshire Music center as a trumpet player in the student orchestra and came under Leonard Bernstein's jurisdiction. The following season he spent with the Kansas City, Mo., Symphony, conducted by Hans Schweiger.

During two years in the army, ending a few weeks ago, Schermerhorn first played in a Seventh army symphony orchestra, then was made conductor of a 70-piece soldier orchestra that gave 80 concerts in eight foreign countries. He met Bernstein in Italy in April and Bernstein urged him to return to Tanglewood this summer after ending his service.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,295

JUL 12 195

Fine Job Offered On Bach's Mass

Those interested in the choral tradition in America, in musical standards and achievements among American college students as illustrated by undergraduates from two institutions of learning on the river Charles or in the continuing substantial contributions to civilization in these United States made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in its Berkshire Festival, or in all three, will be glad to hear of the climactic concert, Sunday afternoon, of the festival's first week.

Johann Sebastian Bach's great Mass in D minor received a performance of authority, brilliant and deeply reverent, forceful and tenderly intimate as the sections of this work of mystic grandeur and beauty demand. The Boston Symphony, reduced in size for the occasion, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass, were the performers whom Charles Munch, the conductor, directed in this great re-creation.

Description of the excellent work of the choristers must be limited to the inspiring heights of the Credo; the tenderly simple Et Incarnatus Est, the intensely yearning sadness of the Crucifixus with its Et Sepultus Est, one of the supreme moments in music, and the brilliant outburst of Easter gladness, not at all diminished by the trumpets soaring to high D's, of the Resurrexit. Trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, their security and enthusiasm were a joy to hear and to behold; a contributing factor to their achievement was the fact that this was their fifth concert performance of the Mass this season. Mention must be made of the need in occasional passages for more fullness in the tenor section, greater depth in the bass, that the addition of the voices of older men would have prov

The contributions of all the so ists were on the high plane s by the conductor, the orchestra and the chorus but notice must be taken of the final solo section, Agnus Dei, reserved by Bach for the alto; Miss Kopleff filled its sweeping phrases with the atmosphere of peace and reconciliation. The obligato passages of the concert master, the flute, horn and oboi d'Amore soloists were distinguished and Power Biggs' organ continuous were most discreet, those of Daniel Pinkham on the harpsichord full of vigor and brightness.

The soloists joined the chorus in the Dona Nobis Pacem, in breadth and austerity more a song of praise than of prayer, to bring to a close a memorable afternoon of music.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 1 8 1955

All-French Program Heard at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch, as a modernist, swears unswerving allegiance to French contemporaries. Representative of his interests are Milhaud and Honegger, who concluded the All-French program in the Theater-Concert Hall Sunday afternoon.

* * *

SINCE THIS is a Beethoven season at Tanglewood we should be happy, I suppose, with the four contemporary works Munch is conducting. But the shade of Koussevitsky still hovers over these concerts and reminds us of his sponsorship of young and aspiring talents. What better forum can they have than this world-renowned festival?

As for Honegger, he has already become a respectable modernist. He has easily outlived the sensationalism of "Pacific 231," that symphonic depiction of a steam engine; he has even escaped his designation as one of the "French Six," except in the musical textbooks.

His orchestral syntax, of course, still challenges the average listener because of a texture that is polyphonically involved and structurally difficult to comprehend. He will never supplant Beethoven in popularity, although he has a strong minority of adherents.

However, there is nothing particularly forbidding about the Fourth Symphony, which Munch and the Bostonians performed yesterday afternoon. Compared to his dissonant Symphonie Liturgique, this essay is extremely palatable, even if overlaid with gentle melancholy—or nostalgia, if you will, since it is subtitled "Baslerian Delights."

* * *

MR. MUNCH was unassailably in his element with this music and the chamber orchestra explored its niceties with unaccustomed refinement and exemplary rapport. This same praise could be leveled at the entire performance yesterday afternoon.

Rameau's Suite from the opera, "Dardanus," was the quintessence of 18th Century elegance and exhibited the orchestra's capacity for beautifully balanced playing. This same could be said for Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," which is an old favorite of Munch's. It had a scintillant wit and delightful confluence, homage alike to Couperin and to Ravel.

Coming after the Hellenic purity of Faure's "Pavane" (Op. 50), Milhaud's "Serenade" (also known as Symphony No. 3 for Small Orchestra) signified a descent to more earthy pleasures. There is a carnival atmosphere to this music, most evident in the blatant finale that utilizes a battery of percussion instruments.

Like Villa-Lobos, Milhaud is an inexhaustible source of music. His output encompasses almost every style of writing and he has experimented in practically every medium. His Serenade may not be one of his most significant efforts, but this did not prevent the Bostonians from giving it a handsome performance.

---

remiere re Fest

Walter Janiec,
the premiere
Louis Meninni at
Aug. 8 and 9.
called, is a
of concerts and sponsored Orches-

operatic dube an assistant
Tanglewood
second year,
Bernstein, fa-composer-conductor evening orchessimilar post last conducted with Richar
Charles Munch
Boston Symp
Symphon
Opera Wo
South.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 14,200

JUL 14 1955

Second Week of Berkshire Festival Concerts

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes three concerts by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Saturday evenings (July 15 and 16) and Sunday afternoon (July 17).

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, Mezzo-Soprano, singing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," with Mr. Bernstein doubling as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G major.

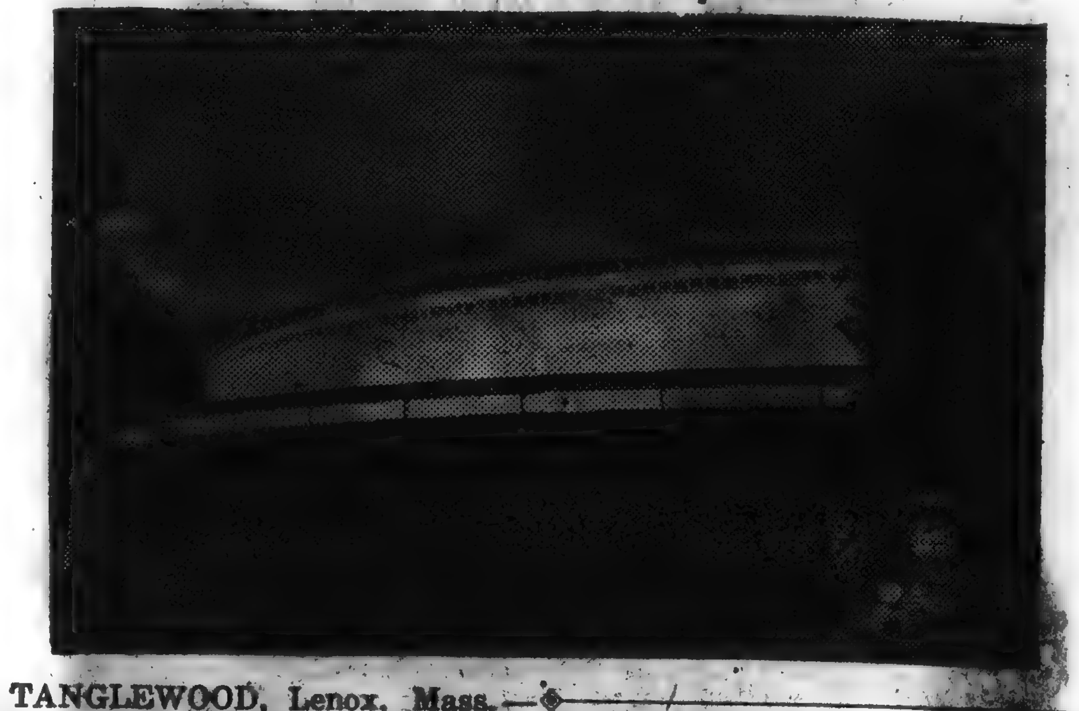
Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini.

The third week of Berkshire Festival concerts will commence with Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin in three Beethoven violin sonatas (Wed. July 20 in the Theatre-Concert Hall). The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday, July 22 when Charles Munch will give an all-Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern as soloist in the violin concerto. Pierre Monteux will conduct an orchestra program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss on Sat. evening July 23, and Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon concert July 24, will comprise Beethoven's first, fourth, and sixth symphonies.

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 14,200

JUL 14 1955

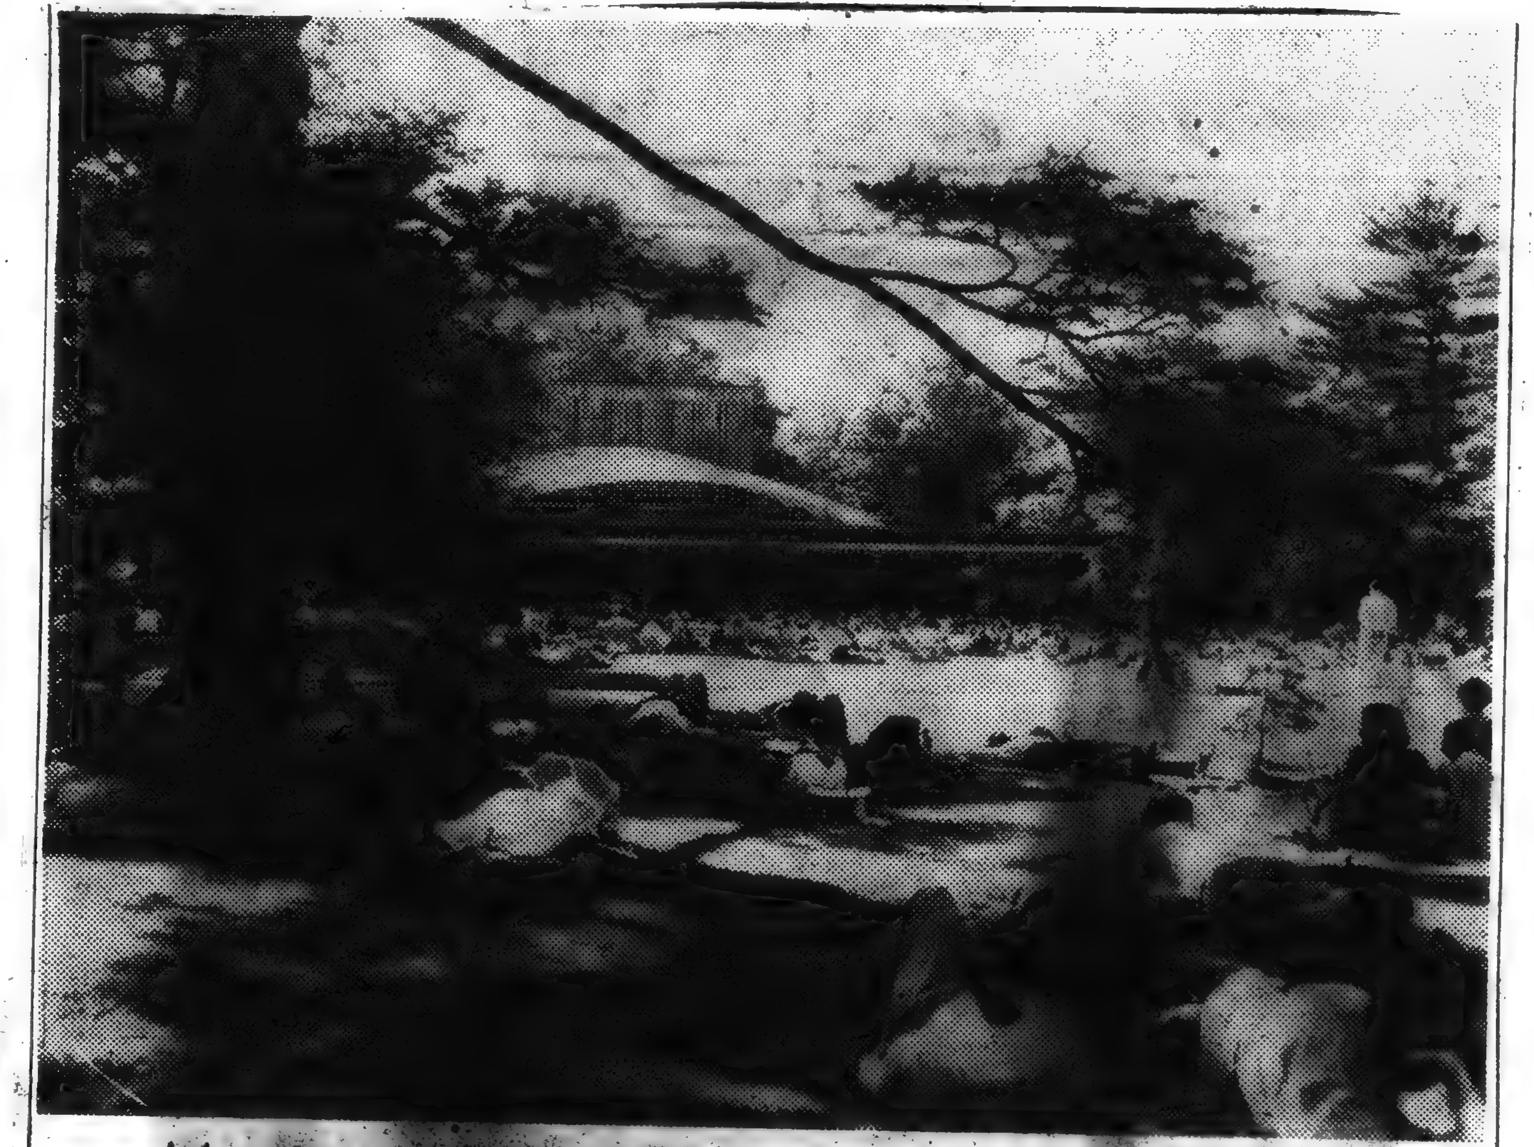
Tanglewood Opens



TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 16th season of 24 concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,775 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9,197 persons with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 16 1955



Music Does Things to U.S. Posture

UNDER THE PINES at Tanglewood music shed in Lenox, Mass., music lovers assume every position from prone to supine as they listen to Boston Symphony. Shed holds 6,000 persons. Lawn sprawlers often bring attendance to 10,000.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

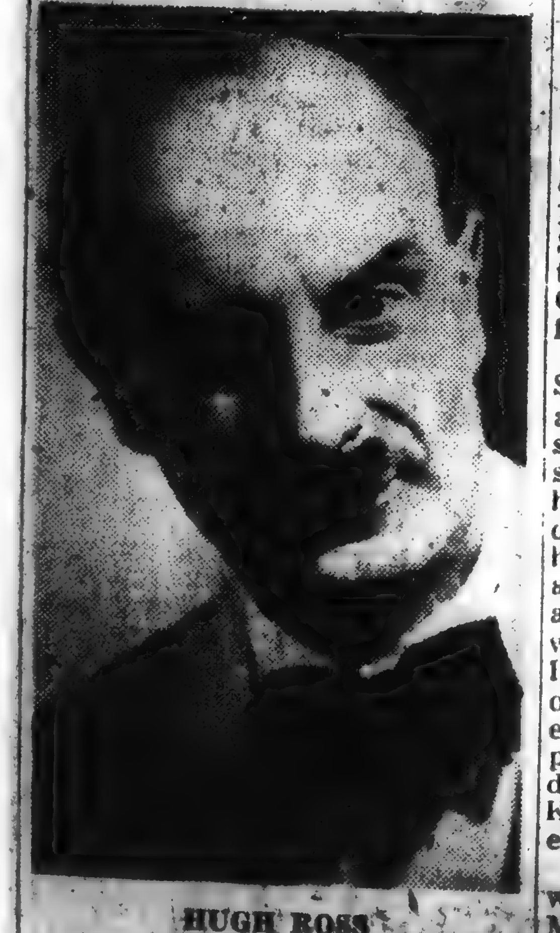
JUL 16 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC OVER WEEK END AT TANGLEWOOD

Tomorrow's Concert Concludes First Series; Shed Events Begin Friday

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire Festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight at 8.30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2.30. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi—his Concerti Grossi Numbers 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (Harmonic Inspiration), and the "Gloria" Mass in D Major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire Festival Chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire Music Center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccherini's Cello Concerto in B Flat, with the Boston Symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D Minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.



HUGH ROSS

Mr. Mayes joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as solo cellist at the start of the 1948-1949 season, Serge Koussevitzky's last season as conductor. Previously he had been solo cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra for a decade, having joined that orchestra at the age of 19. He is the grandson of a Cherokee Indian and his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers. He has performed in recital, with orchestra and in chamber music ensembles in most of our principal cities. Last season he introduced the new Cello Concerto by Kabalevsky to American audiences.

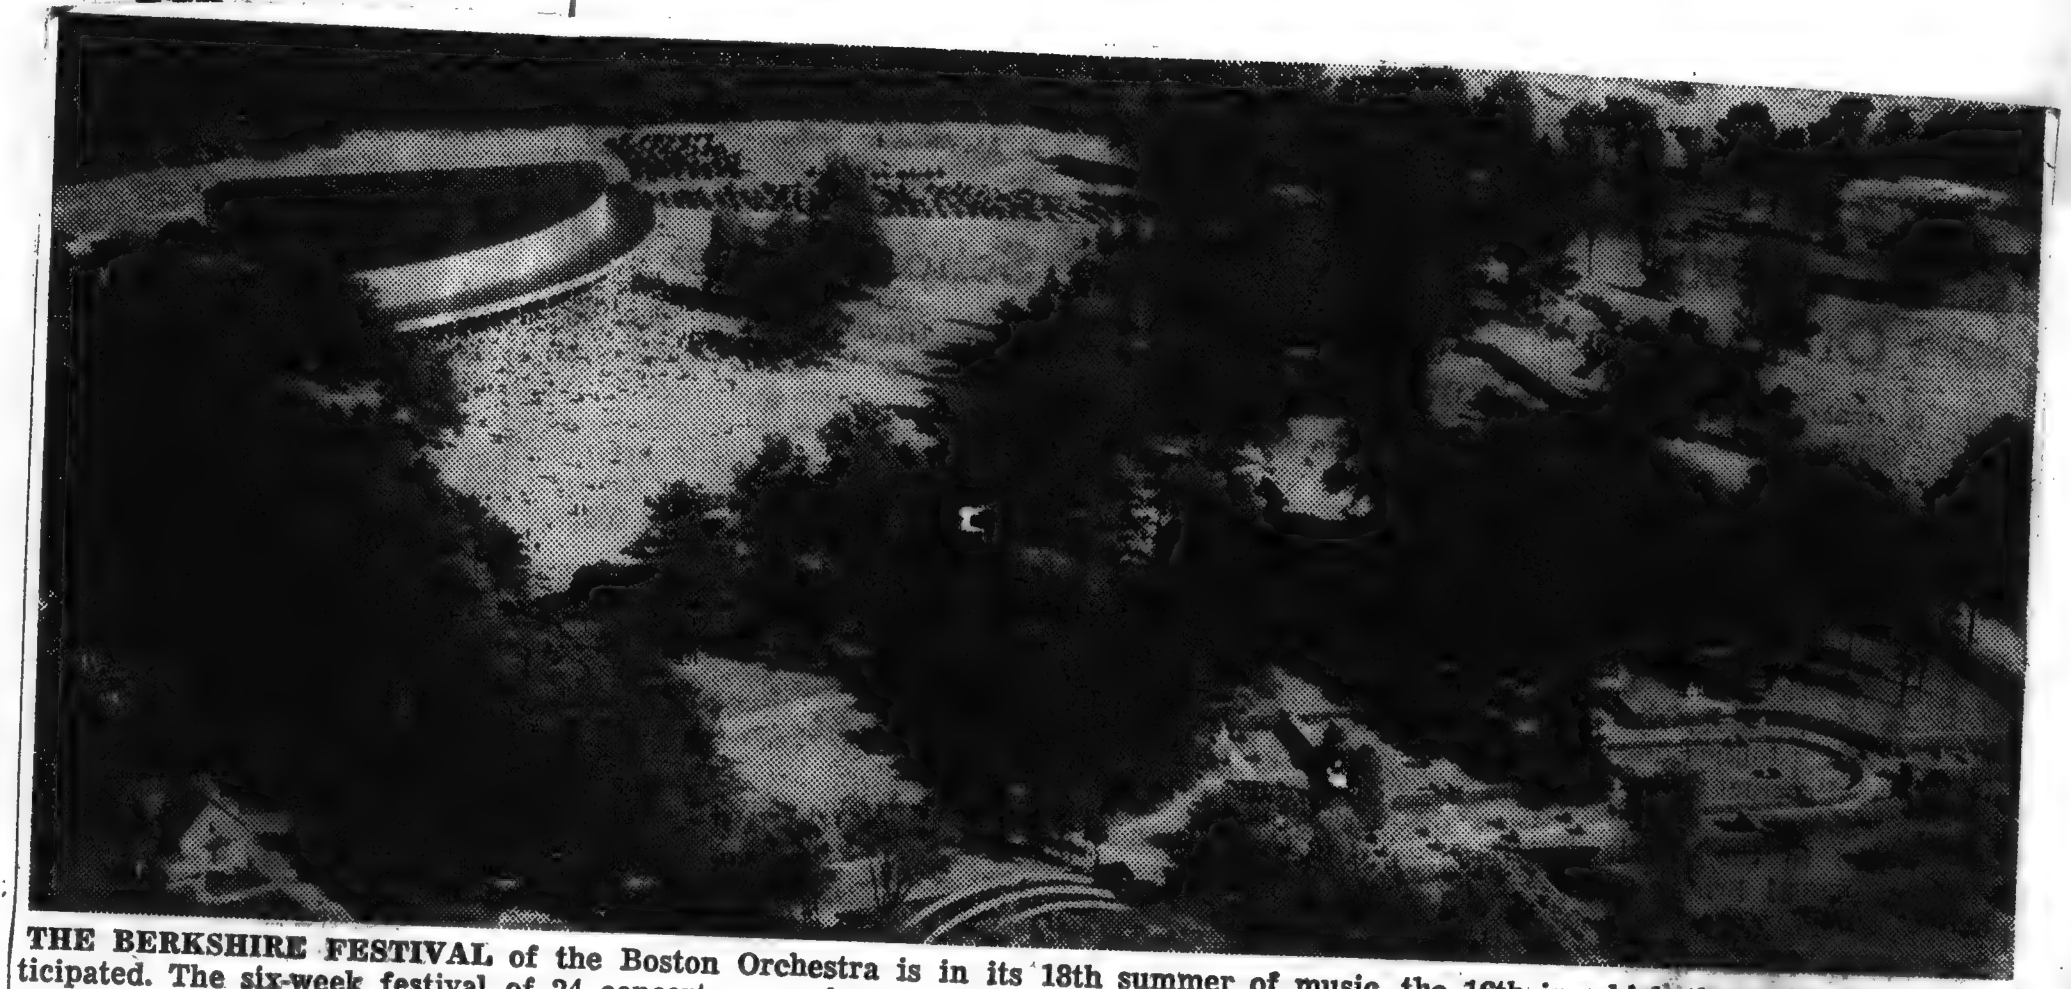
Tomorrow's all-French concert, which will also be conducted by Mr. Munch, will be comprised of a suite from the opera "Dardanus" by Rameau; Ravel's orchestral suite, "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" the pavane by Gabriel Faure; Milhaud's "Serenade" for small orchestra (also known as the Symphony No. 3); and the Symphony No. 4 by Artur Honegger. The Faure, Milhaud and Honegger compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood.

Commencing next week end (22d and 23d evenings, 24th afternoon), the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will assemble at Tanglewood to inaugurate the season's concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed, which Mr. Munch will open on Friday evening with an all-Beethoven program with Isaac Stern as violin soloist.

Remaining seats for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood boxoffice, and telephone reservations are accepted, Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be given in the Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 16 1955



THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Orchestra is in its 18th summer of music, the 16th in which the orchestra has participated. The six-week festival of 24 concerts runs from July 6-August 14.

Tanglewood Programs Hit High Gear Next Week

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, moves over to the hills to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the music shed, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year twelve concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat music shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broke, the twelve Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of [illegible].

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra).

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wed. (July 20) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss on Sat. (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers", by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 23), for which the nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The complete programs are:

Wed. July 20, Beethoven: Violin Sonatas - No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2; No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring"); No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2; Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin.

Fri. July 22, Beethoven: Overture to "Coriolan", Violin Concerto, Soloist: Isaac Stern, Symphony No. 7 in A major; Charles Munch, Conductor.

Sat. July 23, Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration"; Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sun. July 24, Beethoven: Symphony No. 1, in C major; Symphony No. 4, in B-flat; Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale") Charles Munch, Conductor.

This weekend's final "Bach-Mozart" chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall are: Sat. July 16: Charles Munch conducting a program of Italian Music. Vivaldi: Concerto Grosso in D. Op. 3, No. 11; Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor, Op. 3, No. 10; Boccherini, Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes as soloist; and Vivaldi, Gloria, with the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students, soloists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Rith McCollum, Mezzo-soprano, conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Boston Symphony's summer music school Sun. July 17: Charles Munch conducting a program of French Music: Rameau: Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure: Pavane; Milhaud: Serenade; Honegger; Symphony No. 4.

During the coming week a number of concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in the midst of its 13th session at Tanglewood. Friends of the music school who make a voluntary contribution to its support are invited to the following performances: Sunday morning chamber music by Department I students (10 a.m., July 17, and 24, Chamber Music Hall); Sunday evening composers' forums by Department III students (8:30 p.m., July 17 and 24, Chamber Music Hall); forums by staff members, Berkshire Music Center, moderated by Ralph Berkowitz, Dean (8:30 p.m., July 18 and 25, Sedgewick Hall, Lenox); a choral concert by the small choir of Department II students (8:30 p.m., July 19, Theatre-Concert Hall); symphony concert by the student orchestra of Department I (8:30 p.m., July 21, Music Shed.)

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, 600.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 15 1955

Conductors Talk Things Over

Three of the best-known symphony conductors in the world talk things over during an informal conference at the Berkshire Music Festival. Left to right, they are Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux, and Leonard Bernstein, guest conductors at Tanglewood. Mr. Bernstein conducts the all-Mozart program in the chamber music series this evening, with Soprano Jennie Tourel as soloist. Tomorrow evening, and Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will conduct concerts of Italian and French music, respectively.

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 48,629

JUL 15 1955

Let's Take a Ride

Tanglewood and Berkshire Hills

By STUART O. HALE

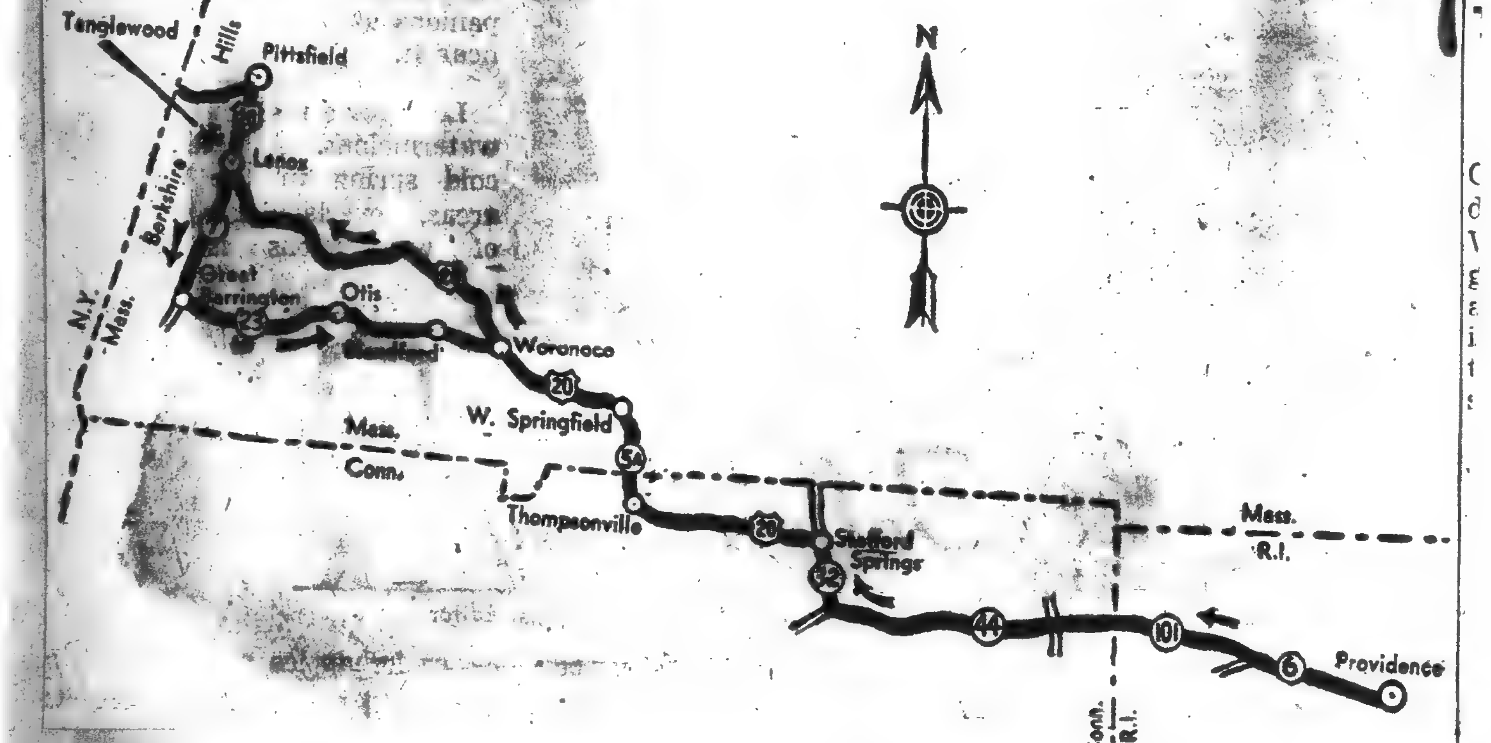
At the back of the formal garden a violinist worked over and over on a tricky cadenza; alone on the concert stage in the cavernous shed a youth made rippling music on a xylophone; under a towering elm a bass viol thrummed.

And all around were the green, moist, enchanted Berkshire hills.

This was Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony and for six weeks home also for some 405 students of music, working in an atmosphere which isn't duplicated anywhere in the country.

Many Rhode Islanders know Tanglewood and travel every summer the 150 miles which separate Providence from picturesque Lenox, Mass. Several young Rhode Islanders are among the summer students.

Some Concert-Goers Pay $2 admission to the grounds, bring a picnic lunch and sit on the grass outside the shed.



Memorable Adventure

It's easy to get there and a memorable adventure to stay even for a day. Don't pass it by only because you have no interest in serious music. The region can appeal to every taste. And you might find that lack of interest in music of the "long hair" variety evaporating.

Tanglewood pulls a tremendous audience during its six-week session. Last year total attendance reached 135,000.

The best route from Providence, about 300 miles roundtrip, is out Hartford Avenue and over Route 6 to the intersection with Route 101. Take 101, then Route 44, turning right on the cut-off for the Wilbur Cross Parkway. Shortly before reaching the parkway turn right on Route 32 and drive to Stafford Springs. Then Route 20 into Thompsonville.

Drive past the Bigelow-Sanford plant and cross the steel bridge over the Connecticut River. Take Route 5A north to its intersection with U.S. 20 west of Springfield. U.S. 20 will take you into the heart of the Berkshires and directly into Lenox. It's a beautiful road, curving through the foothills of the Berkshires and climbing a small mountain pass called Jacob's Ladder. The air gets cooler and the trees grow taller as you roll along.

Time-Softened Mountains

There's a well-groomed look about the Berkshires; the old mountains softened by time support forests untouched by hurricane or fire which seem to carpet the hills and valleys. The distant hills have the appearance of being neatly sheared with giant clippers.

Don't go with your pockets empty. You'll need money for meals, lodging and tickets to the musical fare offered at Tanglewood. To be safe you should write ahead for room reservations — the Berkshire Hills Conference in Pittsfield will help you—and count on paying about $8 for a double room in a guest house or $10 to $12 in a motel.

There are housekeeping cabins in the Pittsfield area, just seven miles north of Lenox, and numerous inns and hotels where more expensive American plan accommodations can be obtained. Campsites are available in nearby Pittsfield State Forest at $1 a day, but reservations should be made in advance.

Four Days of Concerts

At Tanglewood you have a choice of four days during which public concerts are presented. On Wednesday evenings small instrumental groups or soloists are featured in the theater. The full symphony concerts take place on Friday and Saturday nights, starting next week, and Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

It will cost you $1 to attend the rehearsals Saturday morning and your concert ticket will take from $2.50 to $6.50, depending on seating location in the shed, which can hold 6,000 persons. Many concert-goers pay only $2.00 for admission to the grounds, bring a picnic lunch and blanket and sit on the grass outside the shed.

The chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings cost $2 and $3 according to location.

Tanglewood is a special jewel, but it would be unfair to say this great open-air music center is more than one facet of the Berkshire region. The area has been a major summer resort for years and has developed a many-sided cultural life as well. There's a famed summer theater in Stockbridge, close by, an outstanding art and natural history museum in Pittsfield, a modern dance colony at Jacob's Pillow, more music at South Mountain, between Lenox and Pittsfield, where the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Temple of Music is located.

There are lakes, Pontoosuc and Onota, at the outskirts of Pittsfield, and Mahkeenac, which forms a southern background for Tanglewood. Opposite the entrance to Tanglewood a dirt road leads to the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary, operated by the Massachusetts Audubon Society. Its eight miles of forest trails, a small natural history museum and a restaurant should interest the naturalist in the family.

View Toward Hudson

No mileage was included for trips over the back roads around Lenox and Pittsfield in this tour, but don't hesitate to strike out over any road that looks interesting. They are all good. Before you leave, drive on west out of Pittsfield over Route 20 to the top of the pass at the Massachusetts-New York line. Here the Berkshires roll away and recede toward the Hudson River and Albany.

On the way back to Providence pick a new route if you have time. Put a road map on the seat beside you and drive over some of the back roads down through the hills toward the coast. My homeward route was down Route 7 to Great Barrington, then left on Route 23 to Otis, Blandford and Woronoco. Here the road adjoins U.S. 20 and I retraced the way back to Rhode Island.

Boston Herald
7/22/55

First Shed Concert At Lenox Tonight

The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, from the intimate Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony. This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four week-ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Pierre Monteux, returning to Tanglewood for his fourth consecutive summer, will be the conductor for the concert tomorrow night, leading Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in [illegible] Minor (in the orchestration [illegible] Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, Professor of Music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program, this one made up of three symphonies, the First, Fourth and Sixth.

TALK
TO JIMMY
STEWART
Call DE 8-6500

Benefit Concert At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held here Thursday night, Aug. 11. One of its features will be an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein and by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, composed of Boston Symphony musicians, under Arthur Fiedler's conductorship. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance of a suite from his music for the film "On the Waterfront," and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." He will also be piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" in the "Pops" portion of the program.

The schedule begins with a fanfare and address of welcome at 5:15 p. m. and simultaneous demontsartions by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6. Between 7:15 and 8:15 there will be a lawn party and picnic supper, and also singing by a student chorus on the steps of Tanglewood's Administration Building. Drawing for door prizes and dancing on the lawn will follow the evening concert. An opera performance will be given at 4 p. m. in Tanglewood's formal gardens for purchasers of box and reserevd seats for the concert. Seats may be reserved by telephoning the Tanglewood box office (Lenox 600).

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the committee for this benefit, with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, of Lenox, as vice-chairman, and Miss Marge Miller, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The committee for the sale of boxes is headed by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith as chairman and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry jr. as vice-chairman.

Tribune
7/22

Sp. Union 7/22/55

Boston Symphony To Present First Concert Tonight

Lenox, July 21—The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Friday night from the intimate theater-concert hall to the great music shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony.

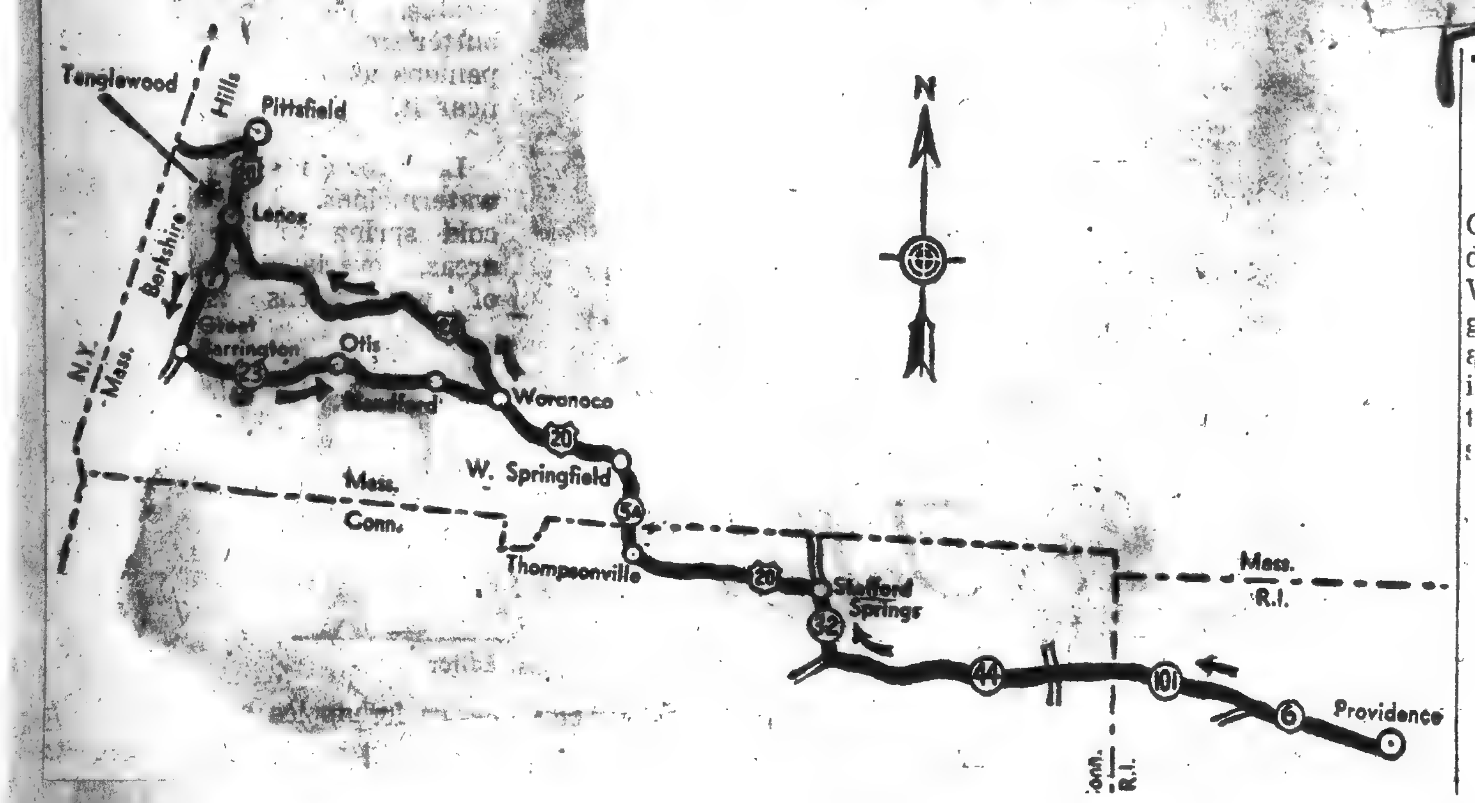
This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four week ends of the festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Mr. Stern will make his second of three appearances at this season's festival. Last week, with Alexander Zakin, pianist, he played three of Beethoven's Sonatas for violin and piano, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's summer music school's Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. On Sunday afternoon, July 31, Mr. Stern will play Brahms Double Concerto for Violin and Cello with Gregor Piatigorsky, Pierre Monteux conducting.

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 48,629

JUL 15 1959

Some Concert-Goers Pay $2 admission to the grounds, bring a picnic lunch and sit on the grass outside the shed.



since the urge is not quite so strong, you look twice at the price. Still you buy.

On a third marketing trip you notice that apples are marked down. Your appetitie by now is pretty well satisfied. But this is a bargain. And you still like apples. Again you buy.

This time you get your fill. You won't eat another apple for a while, you are sure of that. By this time apples are such a drug on the market that they are being dumped. [illegible] working in an atmosphere which isn't duplicated anywhere in the country.

Many Rhode Islanders know Tanglewood and travel every summer the 150 miles which separate Providence from picturesque Lenox, Mass. Several young Rhode Islanders are among the summer students.

Memorable Adventure

It's easy to get there and a memorable adventure to stay even for a day. Don't pass it by only because you have no interest in serious music. The region can appeal to every taste. And you might find that lack of interest in music of the "long hair" variety evaporating.

Tanglewood pulls a tremendous audience during its six-week session. Last year total attendance reached 135,000.

The best route from Providence, about 300 miles roundtrip, is out Hartford Avenue and over Route 6 to the intersection with Route 101. Take 101, then Route 44, turning right on the cut-off for the Wilbur Cross Parkway. Shortly before reaching the parkway turn right on Route 32 and drive to Stafford Springs. Then Route 20 into Thompsonville.

Drive past the Bigelow-Sanford plant and cross the steel bridge over the Connecticut River. Take Route 5A north to its intersection with U.S. 20 west of Springfield. U.S. 20 will take you into the heart of the Berkshires and directly into Lenox. It's a beautiful road, curving through the foothills of the Berkshires and climbing a small mountain pass called Jacob's Ladder. The air gets cooler and the trees grow taller as you roll along.

Time-Softened Mountains

There's a well-groomed look about the Berkshires; the old mountains softened by time support forests untouched by hurricane or fire which seem to carpet the hills and valleys. The distant hills have the appearance of being neatly sheared with giant clippers.

Don't go with your pockets empty. You'll need money for meals, lodging and tickets to the musical fare offered at Tanglewood. To be safe you should write ahead for room reservations — the Berkshire Hills Conference in Pittsfield will help you—and count on paying about $8 for a double room in a guest house or $10 to $12 in a motel.

There are housekeeping cabins in the Pittsfield area, just seven miles north of Lenox, and numerous inns and hotels where more expensive American plan accommodations can be obtained. Campsites are available in nearby Pittsfield State Forest at $1 a day, but reservations should be made in advance.

Four Days of Concerts

At Tanglewood you have a choice of four days during which public concerts are presented. On Wednesday evenings small instrumental groups or soloists are featured in the theater. The full symphony concerts take place on Friday and Saturday nights, starting next week, and Sunday afternoons at 2:30.

It will cost you $1 to attend the rehearsals Saturday morning and your concert ticket will take from $2.50 to $6.50, depending on seating location in the shed, which can hold 6,000 persons. Many concert-goers pay only $2.00 for admission to the grounds, bring a picnic lunch and blanket and sit on the grass outside the shed.

kshire Hills

The chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings cost $2 and $3 according to location.

Tanglewood is a special jewel, but it would be unfair to say this great open-air music center is more than one facet of the Berkshire region. The area has been a major summer resort for years and has developed a many-sided cultural life as well. There's a famed summer theater in Stockbridge, close by, an outstanding art and natural history museum in Pittsfield, a modern dance colony at Jacob's Pillow, more music at South Mountain, between Lenox and Pittsfield, where the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Temple of Music is located.

There are lakes, Pontoosuc and Onota, at the outskirts of Pittsfield, and Mahkeenac, which forms a southern background for Tanglewood. Opposite the entrance to Tanglewood a dirt road leads to the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary, operated by the Massachusetts Audubon Society. Its eight miles of forest trails, a small natural history museum and a restaurant should interest the naturalist in the family.

View Toward Hudson

No mileage was included for trips over the back roads around Lenox and Pittsfield in this tour, but don't hesitate to strike out over any road that looks interesting. They are all good. Before you leave, drive on west out of Pittsfield over Route 20 to the top of the pass at the Massachusetts-New York line. Here the Berkshires roll away and recede toward the Hudson River and Albany.

On the way back to Providence pick a new route if you have time. Put a road map on the seat beside you and drive over some of the back roads down through the hills toward the coast. My homeward route was down Route 7 to Great Barrington, then left on Route 23 to Otis, Blandford and Woronoco. Here the road adjoins U.S. 20 and I retraced the way back to Rhode Island.

Boston Herald
7/22/55

First Shed Concert At Lenox Tonight

The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, from the intimate Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when th[illegible] this season's concert[illegible] the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony. This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four week-ends of the Festival, on Fridays and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Pierre Monteux, returning to Tanglewood for his fourth consecutive summer, will be the conductor for the concert tomorrow night, leading Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, Professor of Music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program, this one made up of three symphonies, the First, Fourth and Sixth.

TALK
TO JIMMY
STEWART
Call DE 8-6500

Benefit Concert At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held here Thursday night, Aug. 11. One of its features will be an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein and by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, composed of Boston Symphony musicians, under Arthur Fiedler's conductorship. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance of a suite from his music for the film "On the Waterfront," and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." He will also be piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" in the "Pops" portion of the program.

The schedule begins with a fanfare and address of welcome at 5:45 p. m. and simultaneous demontsartions by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6. Between 7:15 and 8:15 there will be a lawn party and picnic supper, and also singing by a student chorus on the steps of Tanglewood's Administration Building. Drawing for door prizes and dancing on the lawn will follow the evening concert. An opera performance will be given at 4 p. m. in Tanglewood's formal gardens for purchasers of box and reserevd seats for the concert. Seats may be reserved by telephoning the Tanglewood box office (Lenox 600).

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the committee for this benefit, with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, of Lenox, as vice-chairman, and Miss Margo Miller, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The committee for the sale of boxes is headed by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith as chairman and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry jr., as vice-chairman.

Tribune
7/22

Sp. Union 7/22/55

Boston Symphony To Present First Concert Tonight

Lenox, July 21—The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Friday night from the intimate theater-concert hall to the great music shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8.30.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony.

This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four week ends of the festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Mr. Stern will make his second of three appearances at this season's festival. Last week, with Alexander Zakin, pianist, he played three of Beethoven's Sonatas for violin and piano, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's summer music school's Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. On Sunday afternoon, July 31, Mr. Stern will play Brahms' Double Concerto for Violin and Cello with Gregor Piatigorsky, Pierre Monteux conducting.

Berkshire Festival Continues

CHARLES MUNCH SHOWN LEADING THE ORCHESTRA

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24, Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program, the Fourth and [illegible]

Jewish Advocate
7/21/55

Times 7/22

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT WILL BE HELD AUG. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of the season's concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will be given tonight, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program. Issac Stern will be soloist in the Violin Concerto.

Newsweek, July 25, 1955

denominator of "summer music" is June, July, and August, when the American audience exhibits a fortitude it rarely shows [illegible]. Seats are almost never comfortable, and the weather is often too hot, chilly, or wet. If airplanes don't drown out the music, fire sirens will. Amplification distorts the sound; no amplification renders it inaudible. An early dinner to insure prompt arrival usually leads to hunger pangs during the coda of the Tchaikovsky Fifth, a favorite finale. Enjoy a late dinner and Rossini's "William Tell Overture," a favorite curtain raiser, is missed, often mercifully.

Citadels of culture relatively far removed from metropolitan centers, like the Berkshire area with Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow, and South Mountain, pose problems of overnight accommodations. Beds are often bad, and bathrooms worse. Car owners find the traffic terrible. Non-car owners frequently can't get there at all. Mosquitoes, still found in some rural areas, are said to be avoiding city stadiums. Doubtless the noise.

Discomforts or not, summer music [illegible] is a growing concern, and the current season shows every sign of being the most active to date. Evidence accumulated last week:

▶ In Denver, Colo., The Denver

---

6 NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

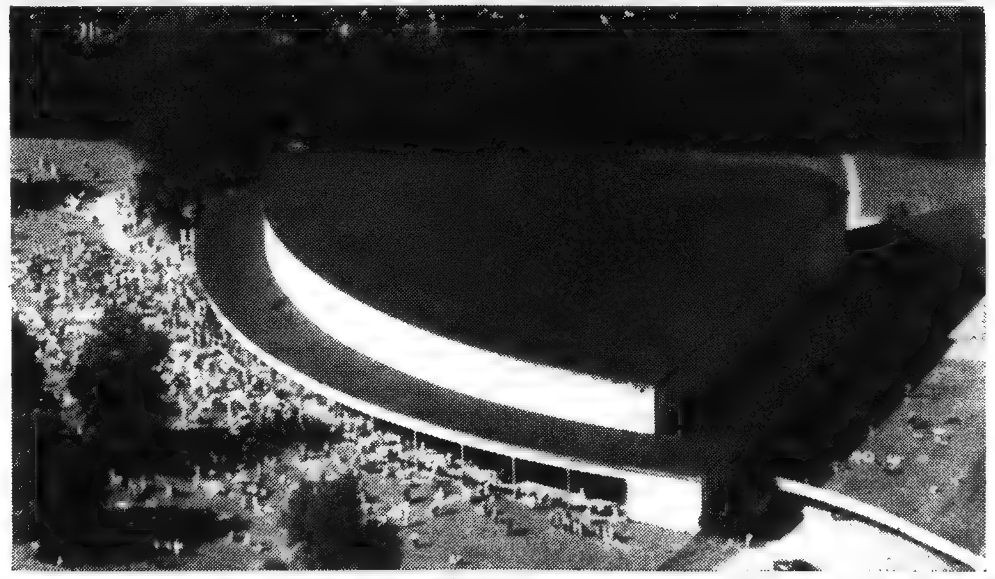
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

JULY 10 THRU AUGUST 14 INCL.

TO THE

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., 1955



BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH

MUSICAL DIRECTOR

TRAINS FROM NEW YORK & STAMFORD

The New Haven's Parking Problem

Railroad Hires Ex-Enemy To Make Friends for It

By Don Ross

Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New Haven Railroad, has appointed a special representative to meet with irritated commutesr and try to work out a mutually acceptable solution to the station parking problem. A railroad official said the New Haven's previously announced intention to charge fees for parking at station lots has not been changed.

The railroad representative is Herbert Askwith, a New Haven Railroad commuter who for years headed commutor groups fighting the New Haven's attempts to increase its commutation fares. Mr. Askwith, who lives at 3 Concord Ave., Larchmont, N. Y., and has a public relations office at 2 E. 45th St., New York, has been employed by Mr. McGinnis as a consultant for some months and has given talks before civic groups exulaining New Haven policies.

Norwalk Fees Postponed

Some Fairfield County, Connecticut, commuters have been vexed since the New Haven announced on June 23 that it would charge fees at its station parking lots. The fees —$5.50 a month, or 35 cents a day—were to have been put into effect at Norwalk, Conn., a week ago, but the railroad has indefinitely postponed them. Mr. McGinnis feels that the railroad made a public relations blunder in not preparing the way sufficiently for announcement of the fees.

muters Association will hold a mass meting at the New Canaan Town Hall at 11 a. m. tomorrow to decide what policy it will pursue in dealing with Mr. Askwith. The railroad representative had requested a meeting with the organization.

Commuters Invited

Thomas G. Early, chairman of the Fairfield County Commuters Association, yesterday invited to the New Canaan meeting all commuters and officials of towns that would be affected by the station parking charges. The railroad, in its original announcement, said parking fees would eventually be charged at all its stations in Connecticut.

Mr. Askwith was not available for comment.

Mr. Askwith has been at various times chairman of the Westchester County Commuters Group of Larchmont and the Westchester Commuters Committee. Individually and as a representative he has appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the New York State Public Service Commission to oppose rate increases for a number of railroads.

Opposed Freight Rise

In 1951 Mr. Askwith appeared before the I. C. C. to oppose the railroads' petition for the seventh freight increase they had obtained since the end of World War II. A reported who attended the I. C. C. hearing described Mr. Askwith as "a one-man crusade" against railroads and remarked that "the railroads would no doubt like to hve him run over by the 5:27."

In 1948, Mr. Askwith, who is said to have made a hobby of studying railroad balance sheets, told the I. C. C. that it should stop being "Santa Claus and wet nurse" to the railroad industry. Asked whom he represented, he told the commission: "I represent everybody." It was brought out by the commission that Mr. Askwith at that time owned stocks and bonds in thirteen railroads. He said, however, that "as an investor in railroad securities myself, I am not at all thrilled by the prospect that my dividends may be greater if the railroads force another boost in living costs on the American people."

Mr. Askwith promoted the "garden of a million tulip bulbs" for the New York World Fair and he has been publicity director for Lewis & Conger.

Starts $20,000,000 Program

Yesterday in Branford, Conn., near New Haven, Mr. McGinnis drove a gold-plated spike into a tie on the main line of the New Haven to inaugurate a five-year $20,000,000 program in which welded rails will eventually replace the old jointed rails on the main line from New York to Boston.

Mr. McGinnis said "this is the first major program of welded rail on any railroad in the East." The seamless rails, comprising strips of 1,560 feet long made by welding standard 39-foot rail lengths, were brought to Branford on a train of forty flat cars.

The eastbound track from New Haven to Kingston, R. I., a distance of eighty-one miles, will be the first to have welded rails. Mr. McGinnis said 28 per cent of the cost of rail maintenance was due to repairs of the rail joints. These will be eliminated under the program, as will the familiar clickety-clack of train wheels passing over the joints.

P. S. C. Probing New Haven Road

An immediate investigation of the New Haven Railroad has been ordered by the New York State Public Service Commission, it was disclosed yesterday by Norman Cousins, editor of "The Saturday Review." On Monday Mr. Cousins, a New Haven commuter, asked for a prompt investigation of alleged train delays, equipment breakdowns and passenger overcrowding.

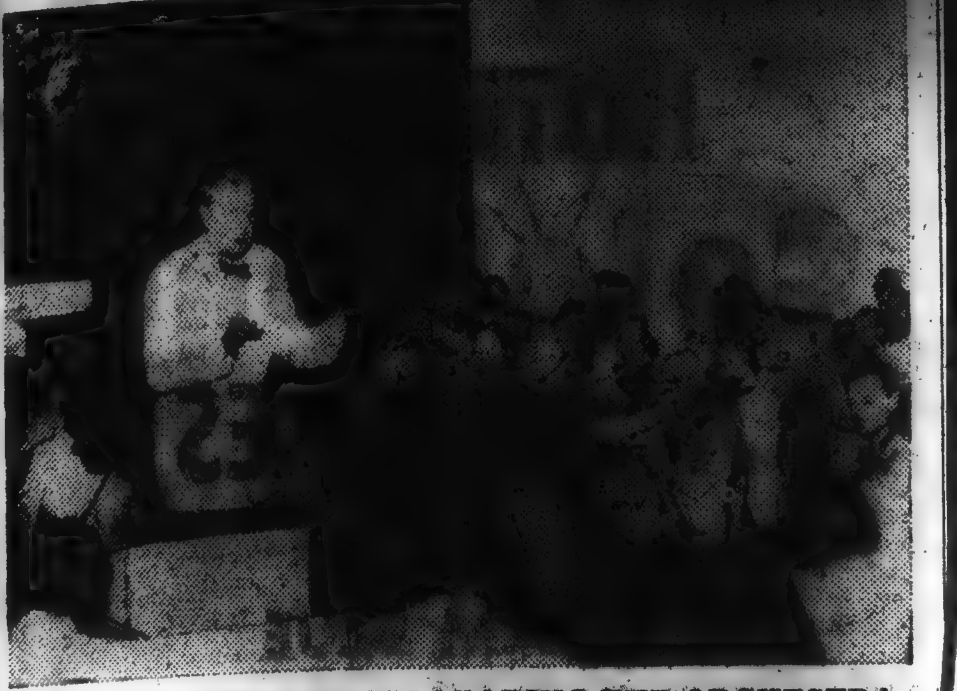
Mr. Cousins said he had received a letter yesterday from William Allen, executive secretary of the commission, saying: "This matter will be handled by our railroad section and will be the subject of an immediate investigation."

New Haven Faces Dining Car Strike

Dining car employees on the New Haven Railroad have voted to strike, Dudley Washington, general chairman of Local 370, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Union, A. F. L., announced yesterday. He said that the strike, if approved by the parent union, might begin any time after Aug. 2.

The union said all operations of the railroad, including commuter service, were faced with a complete shutdown in the event of a strike, because all the other rail unions had promised to support the dining car employees. The issue in the threeatened strike, the union said, involves hiring policies. The union is demanding that the railroad stop hiring waitresses while waiters, some with fifteen years seniority, are without work.

Berkshire Festival Continues



CHARLES MUNCH SHOWN LEADING THE ORCHESTRA

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24, Munch conducting [illegible] Beethoven [illegible] Fourth [illegible]

Jewish Advocate
7/21/55

Times 7/22

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT WILL BE HELD AUG. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The [illegible] of the season's concerts [illegible] at Tanglewood will be given tonight, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program. Issac Stern will be soloist in the Violin Concerto.

Newsweek July 25, 1955

THE ARTS

denominator of "summer music" is June, July, and August, when the American audience exhibits a fortitude it rarely shows in [illegible]. Seats are almost never comfortable, and the weather is often too hot, chilly, or wet. If airplanes don't drown out the music, fire sirens will. Amplification distorts the sound; no amplification renders it inaudible. An early dinner to insure prompt arrival usually leads to hunger pangs during the coda of the Tchaikovsky Fifth, a favorite finale. Enjoy a late dinner and Rossini's "William Tell Overture," a favorite curtain raiser, is missed, often mercifully.

Citadels of culture relatively far removed from metropolitan centers, like the Berkshire area with Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow, and South Mountain, pose problems of overnight accommodations. Beds are often bad, and bathrooms [illegible]. Car owners find the traffic terrible. Non-drivers frequently [illegible] there at all. Mosquitoes, [illegible] in some rural areas, are said to be avoiding city stadiums. [illegible] the music.

Discomforts or not, summer music [illegible] a growing concern, and the current season shows every sign of being the most active to date. Evidence accumulated last week:

---

6 NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

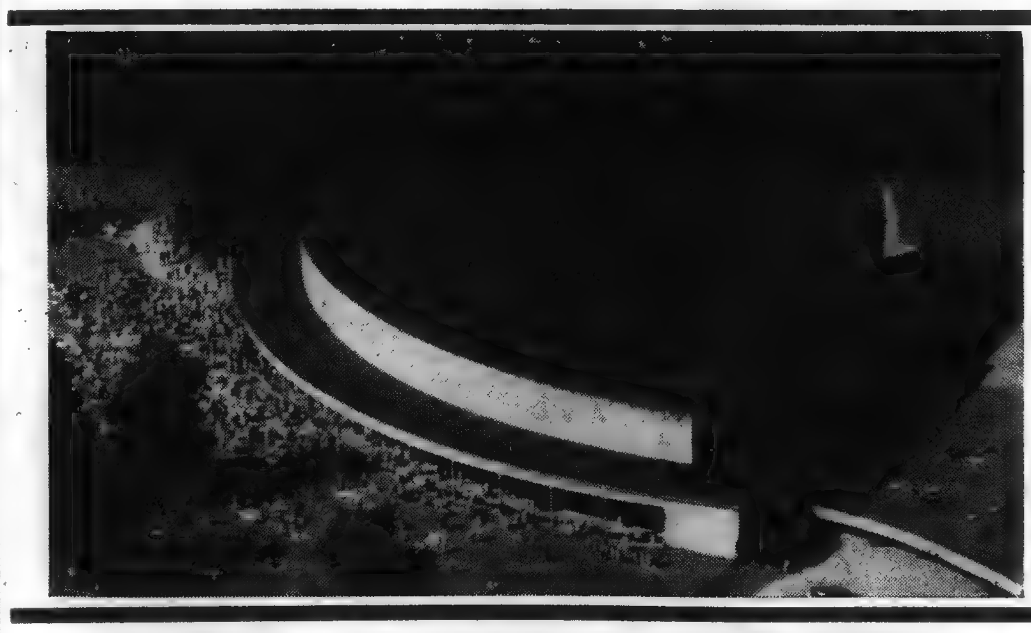
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

JULY 10 THRU AUGUST 14 INCL.

TO THE

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., 1955



BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH

MUSICAL DIRECTOR

TRAINS FROM NEW YORK & STAMFORD

TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1955

The New Haven's Parking Probl

Railroad Hires Ex-Enemy To Make Friends for It

By Don Ross

Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New Haven Railroad, has appointed a special representative to meet with irritated commutesr and try to work out a mutually acceptable solution to the station parking problem. A railroad official said the New Haven's previously announced intention to charge fees for parking at station lots has not been changed.

The railroad representative is Herbert Askwith, a New Haven Railroad commuter who for years headed commutor groups fighting the New Haven's attempts to increase its commutation fares. Mr. Askwith, who lives at 8 Concord Ave., Larchmont, N. Y., and has a public relations office at 2 E. 45th St., New York, has been employed by Mr. McGinnis as a consultant for some months and has given talks before civic groups explaining New Haven policies.

Norwalk Fees Postponed

Some Fairfield County, Connecticut, commuters have been vexed since the New Haven announced on June 23 that it would charge fees at its station parking lots. The fees —$5.50 a month, or 35 cents a day—were to have been put into effect at Norwalk, Conn., a week ago, but the railroad has indefinitely postponed them. Mr. McGinnis feels that the railroad made a public relations blunder in not preparing the way sufficiently for announcement of the fees. muters Association will hold a mass meting at the New Canaan Town Hall at 11 a. m. tomorrow to decide what policy it will pursue in dealing with Mr. Askwith. The railroad representative had requested a meeting with the organization.

Commuters Invited

Thomas G. Early, chairman of the Fairfield County Commuters Association, yesterday invited to the New Canaan meeting all commuters and officials of towns that would be affected by the station parking charges. The railroad, in its original announcement, said parking fees would eventually be charged at all its stations in Connecticut.

Mr. Askwith was not available for comment.

Mr. Askwith has been at various times chairman of the Westchester County Commuters Group of Larchmont and the Westchester Commuters Committee. Individually and as a representative he has appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the New York State Public Service Commission to oppose rate increases for a number of railroads.

Opposed Freight Rise

In 1951 Mr. Askwith appeared before the I. C. C. to oppose the railroads' petition for the seventh freight increase they had obtained since the end of World War II. A reported who attended the I. C. C. hearing described Mr. Askwith as "a one-man crusade" against railroads and remarked that "the railroads would no doubt like to hve him run over by the 5:27."

In 1948, Mr. Askwith, who is said to have made a hobby of studying railroad balance sheets, told the I. C. C. that it should stop being "Santa Claus and wet nurse" to the railroad industry. Asked whom he represented, he told the commission: "I represent everybody." It was brought out by the commission that Mr. Askwith at that time owned stocks and bonds in thirteen railroads. He said, however, that "as an investor in railroad securities myself, I am not at all thrilled by the prospect that my dividends may be greater if the railroads force another boost in living costs on the American people."

Mr. Askwith promoted the "garden of a million tulip bulbs" for the New York World Fair and he has been publicity director for Lewis & Conger.

Starts $20,000,000 Program

Yesterday in Branford, Conn., near New Haven, Mr. McGinnis drove a gold-plated spike into a tie on the main line of the New Haven to inaugurate a five-year $20,000,000 program in which welded rails will eventually replace the old jointed rails on the main line from New York to Boston.

Mr. McGinnis said "this is the first major program of welded rail on any railroad in the East." The seamless rails comprising strips of 1,560 feet long made by welding standard 39-foot rail lengths, were brought to Branford on a train of forty flat cars.

The eastbound track from New Haven to Kingston, R. I., a distance of eighty-one miles, will be the first to have welded rails. Mr. McGinnis said 28 per cent of the cost of rail maintenance was due to repairs of the rail joints. These will be eliminated under the program, as will the familiar clickety-clack of train wheels passing over the joints.

P. S. C. Probing New Haven Roa

An immediate investigation of the New Haven Railroad has been ordered by the New York State Public Service Commission, it was disclosed yesterday by Norman Cousins, editor of "The Saturday Review." On Monday Mr. Cousins, a New Haven commuter, asked for a prompt investigation of alleged train delays, equipment breakdowns and passenger overcrowding.

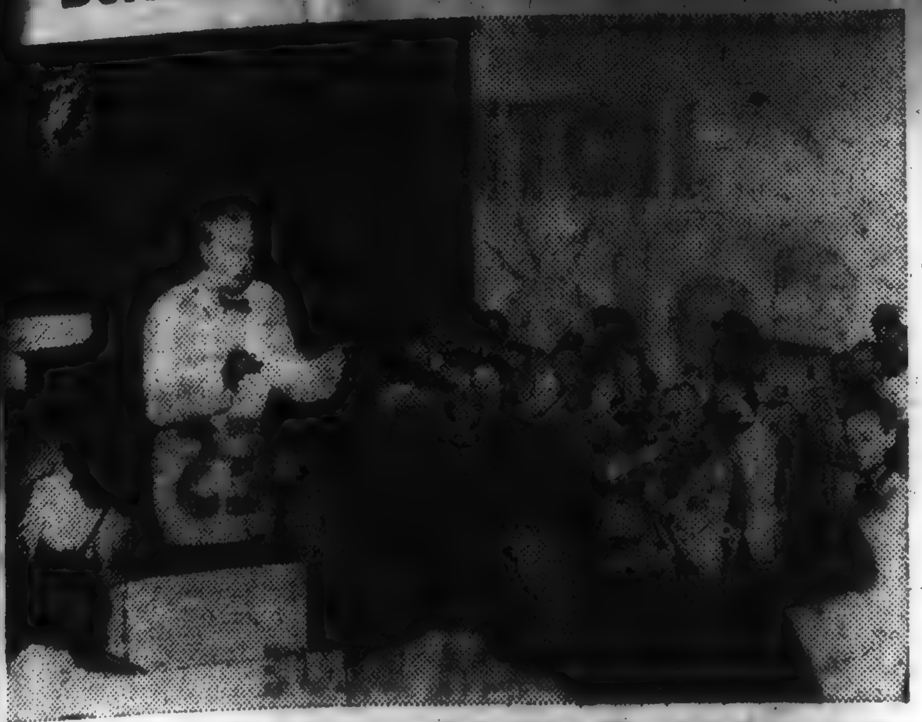
Mr. Cousins said he had received a letter yesterday from William Allen, executive secretary of the commission, saying: "This matter will be handled by our railroad section and will be the subject of an immediate investigation."

New Haven Faces Dining Car Strike

Dining car employees on the New Haven Railroad have voted to strike, Dudley Washington, general chairman of Local 370, Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union, A. F. L., announced yesterday. He said that the strike, if approved by the parent union, might begin any time after Aug. 2.

The union said all operations of the railroad, including commuter service, were faced with a complete shutdown in the event of a strike, because all the other rail unions had promised to support the dining car employees. The issue in the threatened strike, the union said, involves hiring policies. The union is demanding that the railroad stop hiring waitresses while waiters, some with fifteen years seniority, are without work.

Berkshire Festival Continues



CHARLES MUNCH SHOWN LEADING THE ORCHESTRA

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor,

---

Times 7/22

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT WILL BE HELD AUG. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of this season's concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will be given tonight with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program. Issac Stern will be soloist in the Violin denominator of "summer music" is June, July, and August, when the American audience exhibits a fortitude it rarely shows [illegible]. Seats are almost never comfortable, and the weather is often too hot, chilly, or wet. If airplanes don't drown out the music, fire sirens will. Amplification distorts the sound; no amplification renders it inaudible. An early dinner to insure prompt arrival usually leads to hunger pangs during the coda of the Tchaikovsky Fifth, a favorite finale. Enjoy a late dinner and Rossini's "William Tell Overture," a favorite curtain raiser, is missed, often mercifully.

---

Newsweek, July 25, 1955

THE ARTS

Citadels of culture relatively far removed from metropolitan centers, like the Berkshire area with Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow, and South Mountain, pose problems of overnight accommodations. Beds are often bad, and bathrooms [illegible]. Car owners find the traffic terrible. Non-car owners frequently can't get there at all. Mosquitoes, [illegible] in some rural areas, are said to [illegible] avoiding city stadiums. [illegible] the noise.

Discomforts or not, summer music [illegible] a growing concern, and the current season shows every sign of being the most active to date. Evidence accumulated last week:

TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1955

The New Haven's Parking Problem

Railroad Hires Ex-Enemy To Make Friends for It

By Don Ross

Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New Haven Railroad, has appointed a special representative to meet with irritated commuters and try to work out a mutually acceptable solution to the station parking problem. A railroad official said the New Haven's previously announced intention to charge fees for parking at station lots has not been changed.

The railroad representative is Herbert Askwith, a New Haven Railroad commuter who for years headed commuter groups fighting the New Haven's attempts to increase its commutation fares. Mr. Askwith, who lives at 3 Concord Ave., Larchmont, N. Y., and has a public relations office at 2 E. 45th St., New York, has been employed by Mr. McGinnis as a consultant for some months and has given talks before civic groups explaining New Haven policies.

Norwalk Fees Postponed

Some Fairfield County, Connecticut, commuters have been vexed since the New Haven announced on June 23 that it would charge fees at its station parking lots. The fees—$5.50 a month, or 35 cents a day—were to have been put into effect at Norwalk, Conn., a week ago, but the railroad has indefinitely postponed them. Mr. McGinnis feels that the railroad made a public relations blunder in not preparing the way sufficiently for announcement of the fees. muters Association will hold a mass meting at the New Canaan Town Hall at 11 a. m. tomorrow to decide what policy it will pursue in dealing with Mr. Askwith. The railroad representative had requested a meeting with the organization.

Commuters Invited

Thomas G. Early, chairman of the Fairfield County Commuters Association, yesterday invited to the New Canaan meeting all commuters and officials of towns that would be affected by the station parking charges. The railroad, in its original announcement, said parking fees would eventually be charged at all its stations in Connecticut.

Mr. Askwith was not available for comment.

Mr. Askwith has been at various times chairman of the Westchester County Commuters Group of Larchmont and the Westchester Commuters Committee. Individually and as a representative he has appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the New York State Public Service Commission to oppose rate increases for a number of railroads.

Opposed Freight Rise

In 1951 Mr. Askwith appeared before the I. C. C. to oppose the railroads' petition for the seventh freight increase they had obtained since the end of World War II. A reported who attended the I. C. C. hearing described Mr. Askwith as "a one-man crusade" against railroads and remarked that "the railroads would no doubt like to hve him run over by the 5:27."

In 1948, Mr. Askwith, who is said to have made a hobby of studying railroad balance sheets, told the I. C. C. that it should stop being "Santa Claus and wet nurse" to the railroad industry. Asked whom he represented, he told the commission: "I represent everybody." It was brought out by the commission that Mr. Askwith at that time owned stocks and bonds in thirteen railroads. He said, however, that "as an investor in railroad securities myself, I am not at all thrilled by the prospect that my dividends may be greater if the railroads force another boost in living costs on the American people."

Mr. Askwith promoted the "garden of a million tulip bulbs" for the New York World Fair and he has been publicity director for Lewis & Conger.

Starts $20,000,000 Program

Yesterday in Branford, Conn., near New Haven, Mr. McGinnis drove a gold-plated spike into a tie on the main line of the New Haven to inaugurate a five-year $20,000,000 program in which welded rails will eventually replace the old jointed rails on the main line from New York to Boston.

Mr. McGinnis said "this is the first major program of welded rail on any railroad in the East." The seamless rails, comprising strips of 1,560 feet long made by welding standard 39-foot rail lengths, were brought to Branford on a train of forty flat cars.

The eastbound track from New Haven to Kingston, R. I., a distance of eighty-one miles, will be the first to have welded rails. Mr. McGinnis said 28 per cent of the cost of rail maintenance was due to repairs of the rail joints. These will be eliminated under the program, as will the familiar clickety-clack of train wheels passing over the joints.

P. S. C. Probing New Haven Road

An immediate investigation of the New Haven Railroad has been ordered by the New York State Public Service Commission, it was disclosed yesterday by Norman Cousins, editor of "The Saturday Review." On Monday Mr. Cousins, a New Haven commuter, asked for a prompt investigation of alleged train delays, equipment breakdowns and passenger overcrowding.

Mr. Cousins said he had received a letter yesterday from William Allen, executive secretary of the commission, saying: "This matter will be handled by our railroad section and will be the subject of an immediate investigation."

New Haven Faces Dining Car Strike

Dining car employees on the New Haven Railroad have voted to strike, Dudley Washington, general chairman of Local 370, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Union, A. F. L., announced yesterday. He said that the strike, if approved by the parent union, might begin any time after Aug. 2.

The union said all operations of the railroad, including commuter service, were faced with a complete shutdown in the event of a strike, because all the other rail unions had promised to support the dining car employees. The issue in the threatened strike, the union said, involves hiring policies. The union is demanding that the railroad stop hiring waitresses while waiters, some with fifteen years seniority, are without work.

Music Lovers Special

LOW ROUND TRIP FARE

ONLY $6.75

including all transportation, general admission and all taxes from New York

SCHEDULE

daylight saving time

going

Lv.	New York (GCT)	8:20 AM
Lv.	New York (125th Street)	8:30 AM
Lv.	Stamford	9:07 AM
Due	Stockbridge	12:15 PM

returning

Lv.	Pittsfield	7:25 PM
Due	Stamford	10:43 PM
Due	New York (125th Street)	11:20 PM
Due	New York (GCT)	11:30 PM

Buses will transport you to Tanglewood from the Stockbridge Station and to Pittsfield after the concert in plenty of time to have dinner before boarding the train for New York.

Make a Delightful Day of It

TAKE A PICNIC LUNCH

Couples and whole families find picnicking on the broad lawns surrounding the music shed a lot of fun. It has become a tradition with many who attend the Berkshire Festival. You can buy milk, coffee and ice cream on the grounds. Or, if you do not choose to bring your lunch, light snacks may be purchased.

TICKETS ON SALE

GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL TICKET OFFICE

17 JOHN STREET NEW YORK

Ticket Office — Stamford, Conn.

Plan your "Music Sundays" Now
Purchase Your Tickets in Advance
Only a Limited Number Available

PROGRAM

CONCERTS IN THEATRE-CONCERT HALL

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 10

BACH
Mass in B minor
with Harvard Glee Club,
Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 17

French Music
RAMEAU Suite from "Dardanus"
FAURE' Suite from "Pelléas et Mélisande"
FAURE' Pavane
MILHAUD Serenade
HONEGGER Symphony No. 4
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 11

CONCERTS IN THE MUSIC SHED

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 24

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 1, in C major
Symphony No. 4, in B-flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 18

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 31

BRAHMS
Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Soloists: ISSAC STERN and GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 25

SUNDAY AFTERNON, AUGUST 7

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 8, in F major,
Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major
Symphony No. 5, in C minor
Soloist: EUGENE ISTOMIN
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing August 1

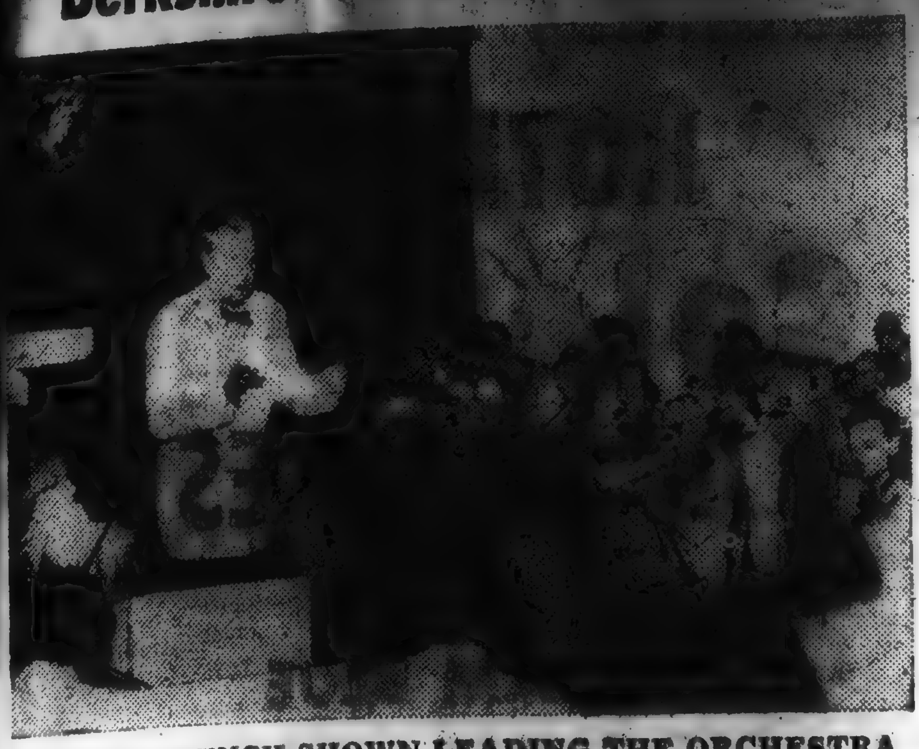
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 14

BEETHOVEN
Overture, "Leonore", No. 3
Symphony No. 9, in D minor
(with Chorus and Soloists)
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing August 8

(Programs Subject to Change)

Berkshire Festival Continues



CHARLES MUNCH SHOWN LEADING THE ORCHESTRA

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Prise, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24, [illegible] Munch [illegible] Beethoven [illegible] Fourth [illegible]

Jewish Advocate
7/21/55

Times 7/22

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT WILL BE HELD AUG. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will take place Thursday, Aug. 11. The day's activities, beginning at 4 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The evening's concert, beginning at 8:15 in the Music Shed, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, in the first performance of Mr. Bernstein's suite from the film score for "On the Waterfront."

Mr. Bernstein also will be soloist with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnole" will complete the program.

The first of the season's concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood will be given tonight, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program. Issac Stern will be soloist in the Violin Concerto.

Newsweek July 25, 1955

THE ARTS

denominator of "summer music" is June, July, and August, when the American audience exhibits a fortitude it rarely shows [illegible]. Seats are almost never comfortable, and the weather is often too [illegible], chilly, or wet. If airplanes don't drown out the music, fire sirens will. Amplification distorts the sound; no amplification renders it inaudible. An early dinner to insure prompt arrival usually leads to hunger pangs during the coda of the Tchaikovsky Fifth, a favorite finale. Enjoy a late dinner and Rossini's "William Tell Overture," a favorite curtain raiser, is missed, often mercifully. Citadels of culture relatively far removed from metropolitan centers, like the Berkshire area with Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow, and South Mountain, pose problems of overnight accommodations. Beds are often bad, and bathrooms [illegible]. Car owners find the traffic terrible. Non-car-owners frequently can't get there at all. Mosquitoes, [illegible] in some rural areas, are said to [illegible] avoiding city stadiums. [illegible]

Discomforts or not, summer music [illegible] a growing concern, and the current season shows every sign of being the most active to date. Evidence accumulated last week:

TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1955

The New Haven's Parking Probl

Railroad Hires Ex-Enemy To Make Friends for It

By Don Ross

Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New Haven Railroad, has appointed a special representative to meet with irritated commuters and try to work out a mutually acceptable solution to the station parking problem. A railroad official said the New Haven's previously announced intention to charge fees for parking at station lots has not been changed.

The railroad representative is Herbert Askwith, a New Haven Railroad commuter who for years headed commuter groups fighting the New Haven's attempts to increase its commutation fares. Mr. Askwith, who lives at 3 Concord Ave., Larchmont, N. Y., and has a public relations office at 2 E. 45th St., New York, has been employed by Mr. McGinnis as a consultant for some months and has given talks before civic groups exulaining New Haven policies.

Norwalk Fees Postponed

Some Fairfield County, Connecticut, commuters have been vexed since the New Haven announced on June 23 that it would charge fees at its station parking lots. The fees —$5.50 a month, or 35 cents a day—were to have been put into effect at Norwalk, Conn., a week ago, but the railroad has indefinitely postponed them. Mr. McGinnis feels that the railroad made a public relations blunder in not preparing the way sufficiently for announcement of the fees. muters Association will hold a mass meting at the New Canaan Town Hall at 11 a. m. tomorrow to decide what policy it will pursue in dealing with Mr. Askwith. The railroad representative had requested a meeting with the organization.

Commuters Invited

Thomas G. Early, chairman of the Fairfield County Commuters Association, yesterday invited to the New Canaan meeting all commuters and officials of towns that would be affected by the station parking charges. The railroad, in its original announcement, said parking fees would eventually be charged at all its stations in Connecticut.

Mr. Askwith was not available for comment.

Mr. Askwith has been at various times chairman of the Westchester County Commuters Group of Larchmont and the Westchester Commuters Committee. Individually and as a representative he has appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the New York State Public Service Commission to oppose rate increases for a number of railroads.

Opposed Freight Rise

In 1951 Mr. Askwith appeared before the I. C. C. to oppose the railroads' petition for the seventh freight increase they had obtained since the end of World War II. A reported who attended the I. C. C. hearing described Mr. Askwith as "a one-man crusade" against railroads and remarked that "the railroads would no doubt like to hve him run over by the 5:27."

In 1948, Mr. Askwith, who is said to have made a hobby of studying railroad balance sheets, told the I. C. C. that it should stop being "Santa Claus and wet nurse" to the railroad industry. Asked whom he represented, he told the commission: "I represent everybody." It was brought out by the commission that Mr. Askwith at that time owned stocks and bonds in thirteen railroads. He said, however, that "as an investor in railroad securities myself, I am not at all thrilled by the prospect that my dividends may be greater if the railroads force another boost in living costs on the American people."

Mr. Askwith promoted the "garden of a million tulip bulbs" for the New York World Fair and he has been publicity director for Lewis & Conger.

Starts $20,000,000 Program

Yesterday in Branford, Conn., near New Haven, Mr. McGinnis drove a gold-plated spike into a tie on the main line of the New Haven to inaugurate a five-year $20,000,000 program in which welded rails will eventually replace the old jointed rails on the main line from New York to Boston.

Mr. McGinnis said "this is the first major program of welded rail on any railroad in the East." The seamless rails, comprising strips of 1,560 feet long made by welding standard 39-foot rail lengths, were brought to Branford on a train of forty flat cars.

The eastbound track from New Haven to Kingston, R. I., a distance of eighty-one miles, will be the first to have welded rails. Mr. McGinnis said 28 per cent of the cost of rail maintenance was due to repairs of the rail joints. These will be eliminated under the program, as will the familiar clickety-clack of train wheels passing over the joints.

P. S. C. Probing New Haven Road

An immediate investigation of the New Haven Railroad has been ordered by the New York State Public Service Commission, it was disclosed yesterday by Norman Cousins, editor of "The Saturday Review." On Monday Mr. Cousins, a New Haven commuter, asked for a prompt investigation of alleged train delays, equipment breakdowns and passenger overcrowding.

Mr. Cousins said he had received a letter yesterday from William Allen, executive secretary of the commission, saying: "This matter will be handled by our railroad section and will be the subject of an immediate investigation."

New Haven Faces Dining Car Strike

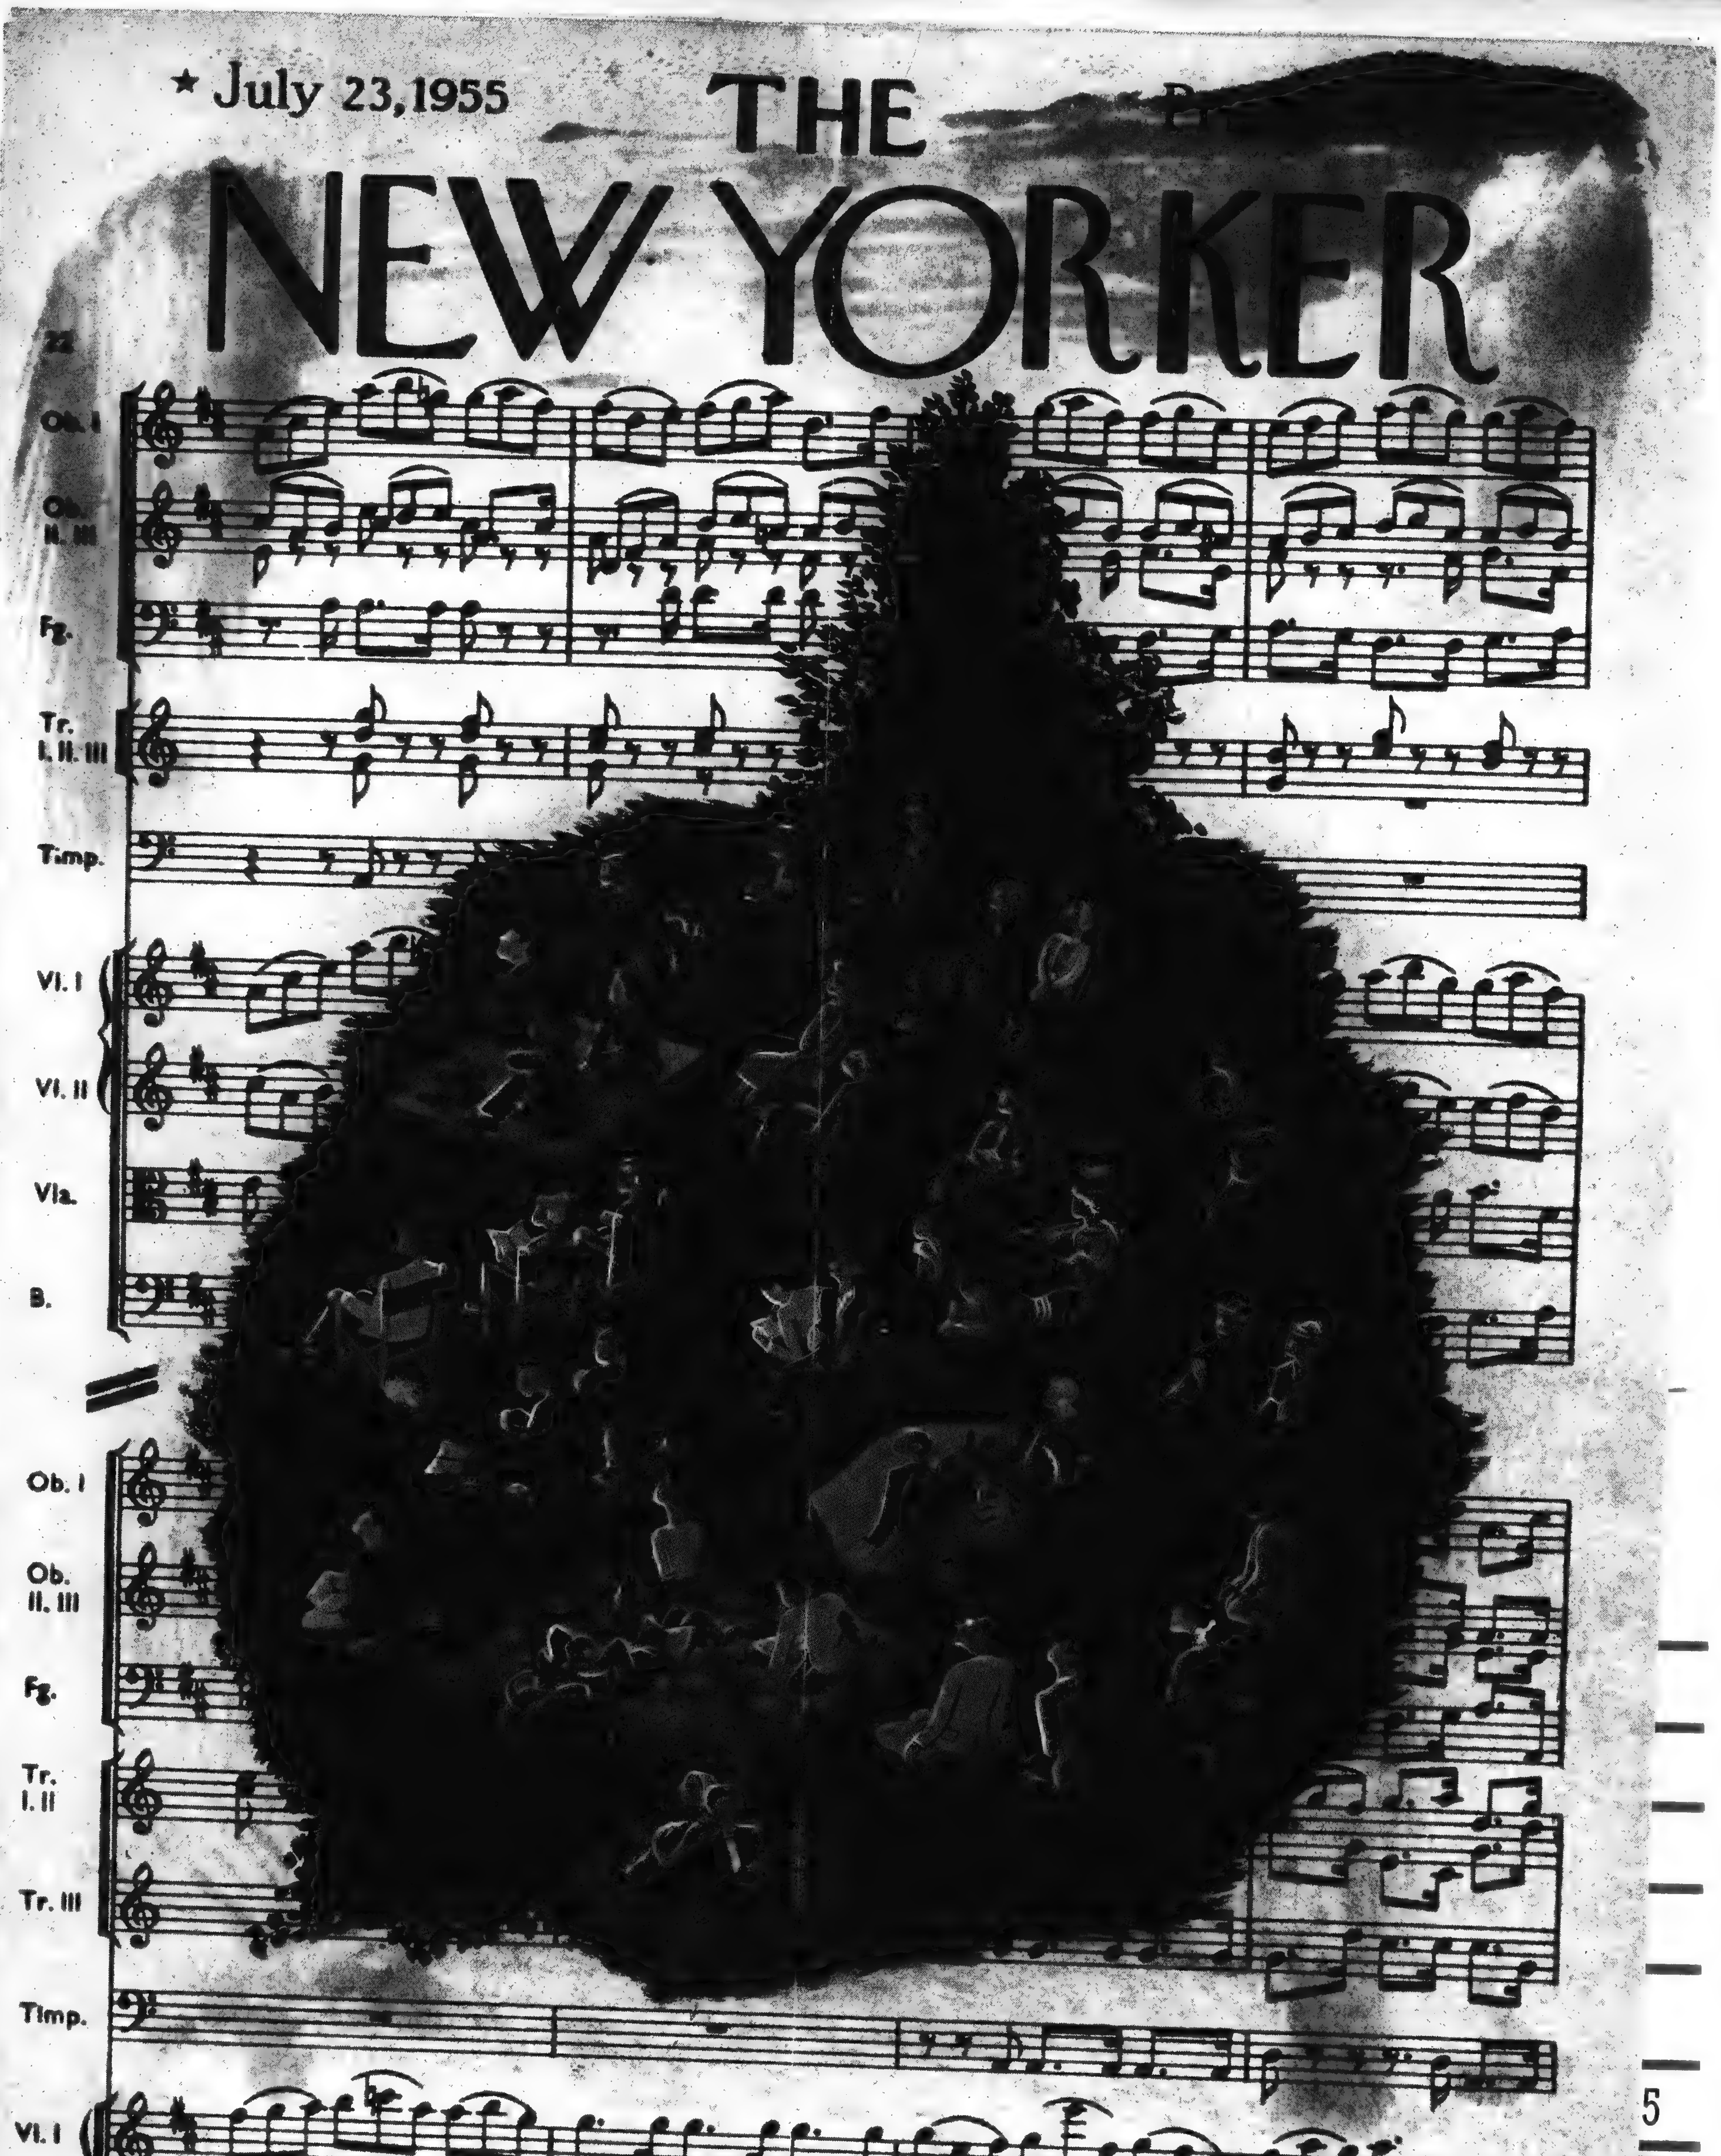
Dining car employees on the New Haven Railroad have voted to strike, Dudley Washington, general chairman of Local 370, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Union, A. F. L., announced yesterday. He said that the strike, if approved by the parent union, might begin any time after Aug. 2.

The union said all operations of the railroad, including commuter service, were faced with a complete shutdown in the event of a strike, because all the other rail unions had promised to support the dining car employees. The issue in the threatened strike, the union said, involves hiring policies. The union is demanding that the railroad stop hiring waitresses while waiters, some with fifteen years seniority, are without work.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

B. F. BOSTON B. P. 6-55—7M



Eagle
7/21

Public Events

Tonight

6:30—Dalton Old Home Week. Pine Grove and Community Park.

8:00—Choosing of kings and queens for Mardi gras at band concert sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians' Union Local 109. Park Square.

8:30—Student orchestra concert. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.

8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid," starring Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 [illegible] Jacob's Pillow dance [illegible] featuring Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn, Myra Kinch and Jean Leon Destine & Co. East of Lee.

New Yorker 7/23

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 22, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern, violin. . . . [illegible] at 8:30: Pierre Monteux [illegible] the Boston Symphony [illegible] 24, at 2:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program [illegible] 27, at 8:30: [illegible] in a series of six programs of [illegible] music, this one played by the New Music String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, July 29, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony, with Leontyne Price, soprano, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 31, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern, violin, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH
MUSICAL DIRECTOR
TRAINS FROM NEW YORK & STAMFORD
NH

The partners of Bellows & Company
chose these
2 great whiskies...

Each the Be

125 YEA
OF GREAT WHI
1830-19

Best of Blends
Bellows
PARTNERS CHO

Contains more aged whiskies than any oth nationally sold spiri
blend at its price.

Only the bes

BELL

BELLOWS & COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MARYLAND · PARTN
4 YEARS OR MORE OLD · 60% GRAIN NEUTRAL SPIRITS · 86.8

Eagle
7/21

Public Events

Tonight

6:30—Dalton Old Home Week. Pine Grove and Community Park.

8:00—Choosing of kings and queens for Mardi gras at band concert sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians' Union Local [illegible] Park Square.

8:30—Student orchestra concert. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.

8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid," starring Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 [illegible] Pillow dance [illegible] featuring Mary [illegible] Moylan and Erik B[illegible] Myra Kinch and Jean-Leon Destine & Co. East of Lee.

New Yorker 7/23

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVA[illegible] Charles M[illegible] 8:30: phony in[illegible] Isaac S[illegible] at 8:3[illegible] ton S[illegible] 24, [illegible] Bost[illegible] progra[illegible] 27, at 8[illegible] grams o[illegible] of six programs [illegible] music, this one pla[illegible] String Quartet. ... Friday, [illegible] at 8:30: [illegible] conducting the Boston Symphony, with Leontyne Price, soprano, [illegible] ... Saturday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in a [illegible] Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. ... Sunday, July [illegible] Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern, violin, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

6 NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

JULY 10 THRU AUGUST 14 INCL.

TO THE

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., 1955

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH

MUSICAL DIRECTOR

TRAINS FROM NEW YORK & STAMFORD

[231]

The partners of Bellows & Company
chose these
2 great whiskies...
Each the B
125 YEA
OF GREAT WH
1830-19

Eagle
7/21

Public Events

Tonight

6:30—Dalton Old Home Week. Pine Grove and Community Park.

8:00—Choosing of kings and queens for Mardi gras at band concert sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians' Union Local [illegible] Park Square.

8:30—Student orchestra concert. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.

8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"The Crucible," Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid," starring Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season," Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomo[illegible]

4:00 [illegible] willow dance [illegible] Mary [illegible] Moylan and Erik [illegible] Myra [illegible] and Jean-Leon Destine & Co. East of Lee.

Music Lovers Special

LOW ROUND TRIP FARE

ONLY $6.75

including all transportation, general admission and all taxes from New York

SCHEDULE

daylight saving time

going

Lv.	New York (GCT)	8:20 AM
Lv.	New York (125th Street)	8:30 AM
Lv.	Stamford	9:07 AM
Due	Stockbridge	12:15 PM

returning

Lv.	Pittsfield	7:25 PM
Due	Stamford	10:43 PM
Due	New York (125th Street)	11:20 PM
Due	New York (GCT)	11:30 PM

Buses will transport you to Tanglewood from the Stockbridge Station and to Pittsfield after the concert in plenty of time to have dinner before boarding the train for New York.

Make a Delightful Day of It

TAKE A PICNIC LUNCH

Couples and whole families find picnicking on the broad lawns surrounding the music shed a lot of fun. It has become a tradition with many who attend the Berkshire Festival. You can buy milk, coffee and ice cream on the grounds. Or, if you do not choose to bring your lunch, light snacks may be purchased.

TICKETS ON SALE

GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL TICKET OFFICE
17 John Street New York
Ticket Office — Stamford, Conn.

Plan your "Music Sundays" Now
Purchase Your Tickets in Advance
Only a Limited Number Available

PROGRAM

CONCERTS IN THEATRE-CONCERT HALL

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 10

BACH
Mass in B minor
with Harvard Glee Club,
Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 17

French Music
RAMEAU Suite from "Dardanus"
FAURE' Suite from "Pelléas et Mélisande"
FAURE' Pavane
MILHAUD Serenade
HONEGGER Symphony No. 4
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 11

CONCERTS IN THE MUSIC SHED

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 24

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 1, in C major
Symphony No. 4, in B-flat
Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale")
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 18

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 31

BRAHMS
Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Soloists: ISSAC STERN and GREGOR PIATIGORSKY
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

Tickets on Sale Commencing July 25

SUNDAY AFTERNORN, AUGUST 7

BEETHOVEN
Symphony No. 8, in F major,
Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major
Symphony No. 5, in C minor
Soloist: EUGENE ISTOMIN
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing August 1

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 14

BEETHOVEN
Overture, "Leonore", No. 3
Symphony No. 9, in D minor
(with Chorus and Soloists)
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

Tickets on Sale Commencing August 8

(Programs Subject to Change)

[231]

The partners of Bellows & Company
chose these
2 great whiskies . . .

Each the B

125 YEA
OF GREAT WHI
1830-19

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
SUNDAY EXCURSIONS

NEW HAVEN RAILROAD

B. F. BOSTON B. P. 6-55—7M

N

Berkshi
Char phon
Isaac
at 8:
ton S 24,
Bost
progr
27, a gram

one ur du
B pi Mo in an violin, glewoo
Aug. 1

Eagle
7/21

Public Events

Tonight

6:30—Dalton Old Home Week. Pine Grove and Community Park.

8:00—Choosing of kings and queens for Mardi gras at band concert sponsored by Park Dept. and Musicians' Union Local [illegible] Park Square.

8:30—Student orchestra concert. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.

8:30—Dave Brubeck Quartet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid," starring Francesca Bruning and Eleanor Wilson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season," Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 [illegible] Pillow dance [illegible], featuring Mary [illegible] Moylan and Erik [illegible], Myra Kinch and Jean-Leon Destine & Co. East of Lee.

[231]

Berkshire Eagle 7/21/55

Music

Stern, Zaiken Catch Beethoven Spirit

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

ISAAC STERN AND ALEXANDER ZAIKEN

THE THIRD chamber music concert in the Wednesday evening series of Beethoven programs at Tanglewood was played by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zaiken in the Theater-Concert Hall last night. Three sonatas for violin and piano included the early A major, opus 12, No. 2, the so-called "Spring" sonata, opus 24, and, to close, the tempestuous C minor, opus 30, No. 2.

These are all fairly straightforward Beethoven. The F major has a character into which it is easily possible to read significance and the C minor is in one of his wonderfully furious moods. Both artists last night caught the spirit of the music very deeply. Zaiken played with substantial power and more than adequate facility but rarely matched the sensitive quality Stern consisently maintained.

* * *

IN FACT, Stern's stature as an artist and musician clearly made itself more visible last night than ever. He has now reached a point, certainly in such a program as he attempted last night, where he makes music rather than merely plays the violin. There is a distinction. He is no longer afraid to let the piano emerge where it is appropriate and let his violin really be in support. In the slow adagio of the F major, he played with a poetry and a disregard for violinistic effects alone that was a high achievement.

* * *

THERE WAS still a further notch to rise to, however, before the ultimate composure and musical conviction is to be reached. An occasional sense of hurrying, not necessarily in the tempi, but in anticipation of something ahead which must be overcome injected the only grain short of complete satisfaction upon which it was possible to quibble.

Beethoven followed a pattern in these sonatas which had been accepted before he arrived on the scene of letting one instrument state the theme with the second one accompanying, and then alternating the procedure. There is little suspicion or evidence yet of the contrapuntal and reflective writing which was to come later.

* * *

THE LAST TWO sonatas have tricky scherzi which were dashed off with a nonchalance and elan that was at once disarming and unbelievable. Only once or twice did Stern indulge himself in the the luxury of using his brilliant staccato bowing. He might well have omitted it without diminishing the effectiveness of his playing and without robbing the sauce of an ingredient which added nothing [illegible] its piquancy.

In response to the applause which the largest audience of the season for this particular series accorded them, they added the presto con sentimento from the D minor Brahms sonata for violin and piano, about as exquisite a morsel, as they played it, as has ever been served from that stage.

---

405 Students Are Enrolled At Center

TANGLEWOOD—Berkshire Music Center officials announced today that 38 states and 18 foreign countries are represented in the enrollment of 405 music students at the Center, an increase of 30 over last year. This is the 13th season the summer school has been in operation here. The school will operate through the end of the Berkshire Festival concerts on Aug. 14.

1,500 Inquiries

The student body was chosen from more than 650 applications, which resulted from about 1,500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Forty per cent of the student body comprises students returning to Tanglewood.

Aaron Copland, the American composer and assistant to Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Music Center, is abroad this summer enjoying his first leave of absence since the school was founded in 1940 by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony. His duties as assistant director are being assumed by Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concertmaster of the BSO. Ralph Berkowitz is dean and Gail W. Rector, executive secretary.

48 from Bay State

One hundred ten students are registered from New York state, including 73 from New York City's five boroughs. Massachusetts has sent 48 to study in the western hills of the commonwealth, including 31 from Greater Boston. Most highly represented of other states are: Pennsylvania (28), Illinois (20), New Jersey (18), Ohio (17), Michigan (15), Connecticut (10). From the Far West are a total of 14 from California, Washington, Oregon, Wyoming. The South has its highest enrollment in a number of years, including 20 students from Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and Mississippi.

Canada has nine students, ranging from Sarnia, Ontario to Quebec City, Quebec. Apart from the Canadians, there are 20 foreign students.

Art

Abate Sculpture at Museum

By CHARLES E. MOREY

PETER ABATE, Prix de Rome winner and director of sculpture at the Boston Museum School of Fine Arts, is showing 20-odd sculptures at the Berkshire Museum through July [illegible]

Most of this material is well worth looking at; if it stops short of greatness, too much dependence on other styles may be blamed. For example, "Unity" and "Despair" lose some of their integrity and meaning because the artist was trying to work like the German, Wilhelm Lehmbruck, who died in 1919. There is a certain stiffness and cautiousness here as of an American trying to speak correct idiomatic German. Ivan Mestrovic, Yugoslav-born sculptor of Syracuse, N.Y., with whom Mr. Abate has been closely associated in the past, has left his stylistic mark on the younger artist. The stones show influence from William Zorach and Jose de Creeft, who are New Yorkers, though Zorach was born in Lithuania, de Creeft in Spain.

* * *

symbolism was well carried out in design. But unfortunately the image of two hands supporting a limp body in space loses most of its dramatic possibility because the whole is patently suspended at the figure's navel by ordinary picture wire, twisted at the end. It is small details which distinguish greatness from mediocrity.

* * *

PAUL DECKER, young Canaan, Conn., artist who has recently shown work at Tyringham and Tanglewood, is represented at the Museum by six paintings.

This show proves again what a great sense of design Mr. Decker has, and what control he has over the watercolor medium. Departing hardly at all from natural appearances, "Boy on the Beach" manages a concentrated darkling mood rarely achieved this side of abstraction. "Hilltop Barn" has perfect clarity of form without sacrificing dash and brilliance of color. For its purpose it is one of the finest designs I have ever seen.

This show is low in quantity, high in quality, and worth a good, long look.

The Lakeville Journal

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD JULY 15

By A. C. S.

Leonard Bernstein appeared in the dual role of conductor and performer at the Friday evening concert which was devoted to works by Mozart. As a conductor, he was obviously at home in this music, most especially in the "Linz" Symphony in C major where he showed a real depth of understanding. From the standpoint of conducting technique, Mr. Bernstein has fortunately decided to abandon his old "ballet" approach (which many concert-goers have found distracting) in favor of that of his famous teacher. Throughout the audience there were comments on how many Koussevitzky mannerisms were employed.

As a performer he was in a position that was both ideal and exacting. He played and conducted the Piano Concerto in G major, K. 453. In such an instance, the interpretation of performer and conductor is unified. On the other hand, it is a difficult task and one which Mr. Bernstein accomplished handsomely. It was all the more remarkable since solo piano playing is not his primary occupation.

Jennie Tourel appeared earlier in the program to sing an aria from Idomeneo and two rondos, the latter with a piano obbligato played by the conductor. Miss Tourel displayed her enviable vocal ability in faultless pitch, an ease in singing difficult passages, excellent diction, and a delightful presentation.

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 16

By A. H.

A crowd fanning out far across the Tanglewood lawns and filling the Theater-Concert Hall to capacity presented a program of early Italian music which blended well with the dreamy peace of a hot summer evening.

Vivaldi's beautiful Concerto Grosso in D minor, Opus 3, No. 2, opened the program, the sparkling first movement was given a brilliant execution by Boston's famous strings and the following Largo seemed to this reviewer one of the peak experiences of the entire concert. Gentle, simple and magic as a quiet tale told in the twilight, this movement had an effortess beauty of mood coupled with a flawless unity and purity of tone which can only be achieved by fine musicians playing great music. The Concerto ended with the bright, triumphant Allegro.

In the next selection, another Vivaldi Concerto Grosso, this time in B minor for four violins and string orchestra, the exquisite bowing and lyrical beauty of tone achieved by Richard Burgin, Alfred Krips, George Zazofsky and Clarence Knudson would be impossible to surpass.

Samuel Mayes, aecomplished 'cellist, was the solo performer in the Boccherini Concerto for violoncello in B Flat minor, Op. 34, which followed. Mr. Mayes, conquering the oppressive heat and dangerous humidity which constantly threatened the tuning of his instrument, displayed magnificent musicianship in a composition designed to display 'cello virtuosity. Repeated ovations for both the soloist and Conductor Munch ended the first half of the program.

The last part of the evening was devoted to Vivaldi's magnificent Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. Here the Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross blended its rich and beautifully melded voice with the shimmering music of the strings and the clear exaltation of the soloists. Both Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto, sang with extraordinary beauty of tone and a soaring quality which seem to stitch the rich tapestry of choral and orchestral music with gleaming, golden sound.

TANGLEWOOD JULY 17

By A. C. S.

Those who braved the heat on Sunday afternoon were given a treat at Tanglewood where Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by French composers. There could be no doubt in the mind of anyone present that Mr. Munch is the greatest conductor of French music. In a concert that ranged from the eighteenth century to the twentieth, each nuance was given a delicate handling, the tonal palette utilized by an artist of the first rank.

The high point came early in the afternoon with Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, a work that seems to contain the very essence of all that is Gallic. It seems also to be a vehicle which demonstrates to the fullest Charles Munch's affinity for music from his native land.

The brash and brassy Serenade by Darius Milhaud was given a spirited performance. Written in 1920-21, it splashes playfully in polytonality, incorporates rhythms which the composer undoubtedly picked up in his journey to South America, and uses a variety of percussive effects.

The major work offered was the Fourth Symphony of Honegger. Subtitled "Delicias Basilienses," it includes some unusual sonorous effects (such as hitting the strings of the double-bass with the wood of the bow), and a few passages which sound, strangely enough, as though they came from Alban Berg's opera Wozzeck.

Also included on the program was a suite from Dardanus by Rameau and the Pavane, Op. 50 by Faure.

Sunday afternoon was one of those occasions. At Music Mountain the record-breaking heat inflicted itself on performers, audience and instruments. One violin string snapped in exasperation but the Quartet gave a fine, exhilarating performance, that made this observer feel the audience was well rewarded.

High point of the concert was the Quintet for Piano and Strings by Turina. Jose Echaniz, guest artist, who played the piano with the Berkshire Quartet, achieved color and dramatic quality without resorting to histrionics or artificial effects. His performance was marked with exceptionally fine feeling and musical intelligence. The Turina Quintet is a good vehicle for the pianist, it is a stirring and powerful music with strong themes marked by intricate melodic effects. The last movement has wonderful balance and verve for all the instruments in a brilliant and emotional finale.

Schubert's Quartet in B Flat Major, Opus 168, is a happy composition. The Menuetto is utterly charming, the Presto is in a rollicking mood, and the deep-throated solemnity of the slow second movement has delightful glimpses of cheerfulness.

The closing number, Brahms' Quartet in B Flat Major, Opus 67 is Brahms in a gentle mood. Performed with sensitivity and integrity, it has a moving quality that is particularly beautiful. The audience was able to forget the discomfort of the afternoon's heat and showed their happy appreciation of the fine concert.

COMING CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role.

Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Conductor Munch will present on Friday evening, July 22, Beethoven's overture to "Coriolanus," Violin Concerto, 7th Symphony; Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24: Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale") Symphonies.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, July 22, 1955—11

Boatwright To Sing At First Church

MacHenry Boatwright, baritone, will be soloist at the First Congregational Church Sunday. He has sung in the premiere of "The Trojan" by Berlioz, with the New England Opera Theater and also on the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air. He is now with the opera department at Tanglewood. Sunday he will sing "Grant Us Peace" by Herbert Fromm and "The Twenty-Third Psalm" by Malotte.

Board Approves Bus Services To Tanglewood

LENOX—A bus service to Tanglewood for the main series of concerts will operate from the Curtis Hotel corner starting this evening, following approval last night by the local Board of Selectmen.

Buses for the Friday and Saturday night concerts will pick up passengers from 7 to 7:45 p.m. The buses for the Sunday afternoon concerts will leave from 1 to 1:45 p.m.

The buses will pick up their passengers at Tanglewood after the concerts and return them to the Curtis Hotel corner. Stanley Brothers of the Curtis Hotel garage are the operators and have added two new 40 passenger busses for this year's service.

[233]

Press Ridgefield Conn.
July 21, 1955

arry della Flora, Thomas Lawence, Alexandra Bosca, Arthur Duel, Tony Hearstick, Robinson Grove, and Justin McDonough.

The production is being staged by Windsor Lewis, who directed "Detective Story" earlier this season at Westport; and the settings and lighting are by Marvin Reiss.

Oakdale

"Wonderful Town," the musical story of two Ohio girls caught in the life in Greenwich Village, opens a week's engagement at the Oakdale Musical Theatre on Tuesday, with a cast headed by Patricia Kilkes, Kenneth Smith, Lois O'Brien, Jerry Austin, Jerry Kirkwood, Robert Bernard, Zachary Charles and Isabella Hopes.

"Wonderful Town" will be directed by Oakdale's resident director, Elliot Silverstein. Samuel Matlovsky will conduct the orchestra. Gene Bayliss will stage the dances and musical numbers.

Oakdale's curtain is at 8:30 p.m. from Tuesday through Friday. On Saturday, the show starts at 9:30 p. m., after a 5 p. m. Sunset Matinee. Sunday's curtain goes up at 8 p. m. "Wonderful Town" will be at the Oakdale Musical Theatre through Sunday, July 31.

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed, on July 29 and 30, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday July 31 for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Leontyne Price has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first apearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

July 14, 1955 The New Milford Times Sect. 3 Pg. 3

Bach's Mass Tanglewood Presentation

The last time we heard the Bach B Minor Mass was in 1950 at Tanglewood, with Serge Koussevitsky conducting the Boston Symphony Chamber Music Orchestra and the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. It was a memorable experience.

Sunday we heard the same musical organizations at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, who has been conductor of the Boston Symphony since Koussevitsky's death, and it, too, was a memorable experience.

Our heritage of great music is so rich and varied that one hesitates to pick out an ultimate, but surely this magnificent Mass, when performed as nobly as it was on Sunday, is the apex in musical experience. Munch conducted with passion and profundity, with sensitivity and deep awareness of the spiritual values in this great composition.

As in 1950, Adele Addison was, in our opinion, the most thrilling of the soloists, who were all fine artists. A slight remarkably beautiful colored woman, Miss Addison possesses a rich vibrant soprano voice, sings Bach with understanding and power. She is heard only in the duet, "Domine Deus," with the tenor and a flute solo, and in the "Christe eleison", in duet with the alto, which seems to us the only flaw in Bach's masterpiece. There is no soprano solo.

The contralto, Florence Kopleff, sang her solos the "Qui sedes" and "Agnus Dei," with tenderness and distinction.

There are two bass solos in the Mass, of which our favorite is the "Cum sancto spiritu," that Donald Gramm sang very pleasingly with a fine interpretation, though his voice is not as big as some bassos.

The tenor solo, accompanied by violinist Richard Burgin, was handled with sound musicianship and fine tonal quality by John McCollum.

But it is in the choral parts of the Mass that the power and the triumphant, soaring qualities of the composition are most deeply felt, from the opening chorus, "Kyrie eleison," to the final "Dona nobis pacem." The young singers of the two college choral societies threw themselves into the music, yet were so perfectly trained that their exuberance never obscured even the subtlest passages.

The huge audience, only about a third of which was seated in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the rest spreading out over the lawns, was so carried away by the joyous and triumphant "et resurrexit" that Bravos rang out and applause, which is properly not given until the conclusion of each section.

Next weekend's program at Tanglewood includes the Boston Symphony chamber music orchestra, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, in an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, soprano, and Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist on Friday at 8:30 p.m. Saturday's concert will be a Vivaldi program with Charles Munch conducting the chamber music orchestra, and on Sunday, at 2:30 p.m. he will conduct a program of French music. All three concerts are in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

4—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, July 22, 1955

Miss Cardillo Will Sing at Museum Benefit

Student of Opera At Tanglewood Won Metropolitan Auditions

Miss Christina C. Cardillo, of North Adams, soprano in the Tanglewood opera department, will sing Tuesday night on the Berkshire Museum's "Celebrity Night" program. She will be accompanied by Paul Ulanowsky, opera coach at the Berkshire Music Center, who for 14 years was accompanist for Lotte Lehmann. He also will play a solo.

Bachrach
Miss Christina Cardillo

Miss Cardillo, who will sing the title role in Mozart's opera, "Zaide," the last week of the Berkshire Festival, is the winner of the Metropolitan Opera Company's Auditions of the Air for 1954-55. The prize entitled her to attend the K. T. Long School. She has sung in a series of concerts with CBS-TV and will return to New York after the Tanglewood season to be in a TV show for NBC.

Soloist With BSO

Three times soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Miss Cardillo studied on scholarship in Milan, Italy, for two years. She is a sister of Pasquale Cardillo, Boston Symphony Orchestra clarinetist.

Mr. Ulanowsky, who since 1951 has been repertoire coach at Boston University, later in the summer will conduct master classes in accompaniment at the new music school of the Shakespearean Festival, Stratford, Ontario. He also will accompany the soprano, Elizabeth Schwartzkopf, in her classes at the school.

Tickets for Celebrity Night, when talented artists spending part or all of the summer in the Berkshires will give their talents for the museum's benefit, are available at the Museum office.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Opening of Berkshire Festival with Boston Symphony Orchestra; Charles Munch conducting Beethoven program, with Isaac Stern, violin soloist. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.
8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.
8:45—"The Old Maid." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
8:45—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
9:00—Dalton Old Home Week, featuring square dance at Pine Grove.
9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn, Myra Kinch and Jean Leon Destine & Co. East of Lee.
9:00—City observatory open. Springside Park.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.- 4:00 p.m.—Sidewalk art sale. Berkshire Museum.
10:00 a.m.—Open rehearsal of Boston Symphony Orchestra for benefit of BSO pension fund. Tanglewood music shed, Lenox.
2:30 p.m.—"The Old Maid." Berkshire Playhouse Stockbridge.
2:30 p.m.—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.
2:30 p.m.—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.
3:00 p.m.—Berkshire Folk Music Festival, featuring Haiti and Tahiti. Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival. East of Lee.
4:00 p.m.—Richard Dyer-Bennet. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.
4:00 p.m.—Dalton Old Home Week, featuring balloon ascension. Pine Grove.

Tanglewood Tales

Chamber Music Concert Sunday

The third concert of chamber music by members of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center will be held Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall.

The program follows:

Quartet No. 1 in G minor for piano and strings, K. 478 — Mozart
Michael Mega, Bondsville, violin.
Reuben Bennett, Chelsea, viola.
Mary Ann McClelland, Kittanning, Pa., violoncello.
Jerome Lowenthal, Philadelphia, Pa., piano.

String Quartet, Opus 10 — Debussy
Paul Gurevich, Bronx, N.Y., violin.
Jean Angers, Quebec, Canada, violin.
Jean Comstock, Cambridge, viola.
Philip Fink, York, Pa., violoncello.

Trio for piano, violin, and violoncello in C minor, Opus 101 — Brahms
Stanley Dembrowski, Export, Pa., violin.
Alice Ober, Pasadena, Calif., violoncello.
Herbert Horn, Redlands, Calif., piano.

* * *

Study Group Concert Saturday Afternoon

The Tanglewood Study Group will give its only public demonstration Saturday afternoon at 4 until Tanglewood on Parade on Aug. 11. Saturday's informal concert will be held in the Tanglewood Barn.

The program follows:

Cantata, Hilf Dienem Volk — Lubeck
Bass solo: Gabriel de Los Rios, Santiago, Chile (Opera Dept.).
Intradas for Instruments — Hassler
Cantiones Duarem Vocem — Di Lasso
O Musica! — Peuerl
Cantata, Alles was ihr tut — Buxtehude
Conducted by Ingolf Dahl, Karl Kohn, Florence A. Dunn.

Festival Visitors

Recent guests at Berkshire Festival concerts have included the playwright, S. N. Behrman (author of the musical comedy hit "Fanny"), whose wife is a sister of the violinist Jascha Heifetz; Ethel Linder Reiner, producer of the N. Richard Nash comedy hit of the past Broadway season, "The Rainmaker"; Richard Horner, company manager of the Broadway musical hit, "Damn Yankees," and his wife, Patricja Peardon, who is featured in the New York hit melodrama, "The Desperate Hours"; Mike Wallace, of Columbia Broadcasting System, narrator for last season's popular "On A Sunday Afternoon" program, and last season's star of the farce comedy "Reclining Figure" which is shortly to be done at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Mr. Wallace is a brother-in-law of Boston Symphony Orchestra assistant concertmaster Alfred Krips.

Mahanna Book On Tanglewood Published Today

"Music Under the Moon, a History of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival," written by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle, was published today in a first edition of 5,000 copies. Distribution is being handled by the Pittsfield News Co. and the book is on sale at book stores, newsstands, gift shops and Tanglewood Music Store.

A history of the early days of the Festival, drawn from official minutes of the meetings from 1934 to 1945, the 125-page book contains 30,000 words of text and 48 pages of illustrations. Many of the 100 photographs are being published for the first time. An epilogue in the book covers high lights of the Festival from 1945 to the present.

"Music Under the Moon" stems from a series of articles written last summer by Mr. Mahanna for the Berkshire Week, the Eagle's summer supplement. The book was printed by the Eagle Printing & Binding Co. and the engravings done by the Eagle Engraving Co.

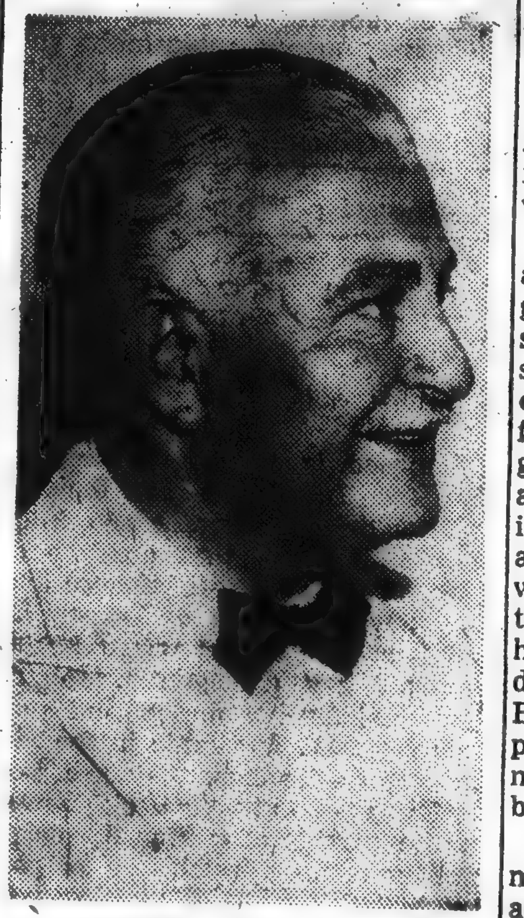
Manos

CONDUCTOR TOMORROW at the Tanglewood Music Shed will be Pierre Monteux, who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss.

Benefit Aug. 11

Fiedler, Boston Pops, Bernstein Headline Tanglewood Parade

TANGLEWOOD — Announcement was made here this morning that Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in part of the program for Tanglewood on Parade to be held in the Music Shed on Thursday, Aug. 11. This annual event is a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the BSO's summer school of music, now in its 13th season.



Arthur Fiedler

The day's activities will start at 6 and continue until 11 p.m. It will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn party, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Pops orchestra, which made its first appearance at Tanglewood last season under the direction of Mr. Fiedler, will perform a typical Pops program. Mr. Fiedler is now in San Francisco conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. He will fly to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Florida on Aug. 7 and then will fly to the Berkshires for the Aug. 11 engagement. After that he will fly back to Miami for a second concert on Aug. 14, returning immediately to Boston to conclude the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to Aug. 20.

Concert at 8:15

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p.m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan. Also who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955). It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Soloist With Pops

Mr. Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston Pops in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats, at $5, and front sections (reserved) of the great Music Shed, at $4 and $3, is a performance of opera at 4 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend the demonstrations, at 6 p.m., by the Berkshire Music Center's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the Tanglewood on Parade committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox is vice-chairman, and Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale is chairman of the committee for sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., as vice-chairman. Mrs. Sanborn also heads the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket-holders after the concert.

The Program

The program is as follows:

PM
4:00 Opera (Students of Department IV). Formal Gardens (for box-holders and reserved seat patrons only).
5:45 Fanfare; welcome address on lawns outside Music Shed.
6:00 Simultaneous demonstrations by each department, Berkshire Music Center:
Music Shed—Short symphonic works, Orchestra (Dept. I).
Theater-Concert Hall—One-Act Operas (Dept. IV students).
Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music program (Dept. I).
7:15 Lawn party, picnic supper—Concert by Chorus (Dept. II students), steps of Administration Building.
8:15 Gala Concert—Music Shed.
Boston Symphony Orchestra,
Leonard Bernstein, Conductor.
Suite from On the Waterfront, Bernstein (first performance)
A Lincoln Portrait — Copland
Narrator: to be announced.
Boston Pops Orchestra,
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor.
Caprice Espagnole, — Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for piano and orchestra — Gershwin
Soloist, Leonard Bernstein.
Suite from the ballet, Graduation Ball — Strauss-Dorati
10:30 Drawing for door prizes.
11:15 Waltzing on the lawn.

Music

Student Violinist Impresses In Concerto by Prokofieff

By ALEX D. HORNE

FIRST SOLOIST of the season with the orchestra of Tanglewood's Department I was Paul Gurevich, heard in two movements of Serge Prokofieff's second, or G minor, violin concerto in the Shed last night.

A resident of the Bronx, N.Y., and student at Queens College, the 21-year-old violinist was especially impressive in the slower, melodic portions of the concerto. The Prokofieff work is rich, romantic and at times remarkably beautiful; its moments of lush sentiment are balanced by sections of driving rhythms, less successfully presented last night.

* * *

THE THIRD MOVEMENT, a brilliant building-up of complex rhythms, was omitted, and the order of the first two movements reversed. The conductor, Koussevitzky scholarship winner Kenneth Schermerhorn, seemed well in control.

Mr. Gurevich, a violinist for nine years, played this same concerto three years ago in the first of two recitals he has given in New York's Town Hall. In March, 1952, he was a winner on the Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scouts" program, playing "Banjo and Fiddle," a piece by Tanglewood's William Kroll.

Arnold Schoenberg's "A Survivor from Warsaw" was conducted by Arthur Winograd, until recently cellist of the Juilliard String Quartet and last summer a student at the Berkshire Music Center. Douglas Miller was narrator, and a men's chorus broke into song in the chaotic finale of what seemed a dull piece of commissioned melodrama.

* * *

BERLIOZ' "Roman Carnival" overture opened the program, and marked the first appearance of Henry Janiec, in his second summer as a conducting student at Tanglewood. Mr. Janiec is conductor of the Spartanburg (S.C.) Symphony and a member of the music faculty at Converse College in that city, and will be on the podium at Tanglewood for the world premiere of Mennini's opera, "The Rope," Aug. 8 and 9.

Hiroshi Hatoyama, concertmaster last night, was for three years the concertmaster of Tokyo's Konoye Symphony Orchestra, and has been a student in this country for more than four years.

Leonard Bernstein, head of the Music Center's orchestral department, conducted Dvorak's second symphony to close the program, which was attended by 2,800.

The Berkshire Evening Eagle
Published [illegible] holidays by the EAGLE PUBLISHING COMPANY
[illegible] Street, [illegible], Massachusetts

Letters

Is Tanglewood a 'Pain in the Ne[illegible]

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Once again the Berkshires are entrapped in the so-called Tanglewood season. At this time and for the next three successive weekends the Berkshires will be enjoying false prosperity when every guest house, inn, hotel, resort and restaurant is overflowing with mobs of people clamoring for accommodations and service.

The question arises whether Tanglewood helps or hinders the progress of Berkshire County as a vacation center. To those of us who try to carry on a year-round business catering to a vacation trade it is a definite detriment. Through Tanglewood's publicity department its name has become synonymous with that of Berkshire County. However, the Tanglewood season is getting shorter and shorter and is now down to four major concert series which are played on weekends.

This is good business for Tanglewood in that they take the cream of the vacation period, that is, the last two weeks in July and the first two weeks in August, and from that cream select weekends when they know they will be assured of large crowds.

No operator can exist on a four-weekend business. However, it is true that many places of business are grateful to Tanglewood for this overflow that comes to the county because of the concerts.

* * *

On the other side of the picture this overflow due to Tanglewood is a detriment in that the AAA and certain travel agencies are shunting vacationists away from [illegible] Berkshires during Tanglewood season because of the theoretical crowds and traffic [illegible] warn all [illegible] accommodations are [illegible] get during Tanglewood season [illegible] as a result we who are promoting weekly vacation business must spend our dollars in advertising and promotion to overcome the adverse effects of Tanglewood publicity.

Again, there is many a tourist who packs up with the intention of spending a vacation in the Berkshires, but when he hits a Tanglewood weekend and finds that accommodations are unavailable, he just motors on and stays in some other area for a week or two instead of spending that time in the Berkshires.

When Tanglewood takes down its tent there will be the usual slump and all the business people will wring their hands and cry about the poor business in the area. Each year the slump is getting worse and the season is getting shorter. However, other areas such as Cape Cod, the Poconos, the Adirondacks, the Catskills and the White Mountains are increasing their yearly vacation business without the help of any such major attraction as Tanglewood.

* * *

At present Tanglewood is definitely a pain in the neck to operators of sports lodges such as mine. I am fortunate in that my business is most successful and has become established as a year-round operation, enjoying more business after Tanglewood leaves the area. But it is a continuous battle to overcome the adverse publicity of Tanglewood and keep vacation business coming to the Berkshires.

Tanglewood could be a wonderful institution for operations such [illegible] stead of weekend stays? Why can't the management of Tanglewood arrange to have the Boston Pops play during the week once or twice and have other orchestras play in between or arrange some other musical events of major interest, even going into the jazz [illegible] music-lovers of all types to spend a week in the Berkshires and not [illegible] one or two days? Is Tanglewood so shaky that it is afraid to schedule additional concerts but instead must make certain of having a sure thing at the expense of those who are trying to make a year-round living within the county?

At present the seat of all activity is Lenox area extending north and south 10 miles. But what about the northern and southern parts of the county which suffer as a result? At one time the Berkshires were famous as a vacation center without benefit of Tanglewood. All of that could be brought back to a greater degree than before if Tanglewood would cooperate with the county as a whole to develop business for the businessmen of the Berkshires.

* * *

Our hats are off to operators like the Berkshire Playhouse, the Williamstown Theater, Jacob's Pillow and others who have the guts to operate for a long season without benefit of mass patronage. This type of operator adds to the coffers of the county and encourages a longer vacation season.

Probably I have no right to blow off steam this way and if the inn- [illegible] resort operators in [illegible] think I am [illegible] humbly bow my [illegible] Tanglewood in sol- [illegible] However, if [illegible] within the area [illegible] do that the Berk- [illegible] a year-round [illegible] I will raise the [illegible] that many rally [illegible] carry on a fight for a [illegible]

[illegible]ANK J. PRINZ,
General Mgr., Oak n' Spruce.
East Lee.

Loew's State and Orpheum.

Music Review

TANGLEWOOD, July 9—Thor Johnson conducted members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here tonight in the second program in the Berkshire Festival. The theatre-concert hall was packed and an even larger crowd heard the concert seated on the grass. The total audience was about 3000.

Mr. Johnson, the very capable conductor, has come a long way in the musical world since his student days here as a pupil of Dr. Koussevitzky. He is permanent conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra and has just returned from the history-making Japanese tour of the Symphony of the Air (the former NBC Symphony) during which he led more than half of the concerts.

As a conductor, Thor Johnson is in the German tradition. He is happily painstaking in the quality of tone he draws from the orchestra; he is concerned with the formal patterns of his scores; and he is not ashamed of sentiment when the music calls for it. He does not, however, scientillate or give off sparks on the podium, and he is not a "personality" conductor. But his music is good and interesting.

The three H's, Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, gave Bach and Mozart a night off, programwise. Handel's Concerto Grosso in B Minor opened the concert. The slow movement was particularly beautiful, warm and full-textured, but the final allegro wanted a trifle more bounce.

Haydn's Symphonie Concertante, op. 84, one of the jolliest pieces ever penned by the composer, came next. Here the orchestra displayed its remarkable verve when the music gives it a chance. Not even the few slips in intonation, caused undoubtedly by the muggy, humid weather which can play havoc with string pitch, marred the exhilarating mood of the music.

Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" featured Joseph De Pasquale as the viola soloist. Not one of the most rewarding works of Hindemith, it does provide a spectacular part for the viola and from time to time a hummable tune for the listener. Mr. De Pasquale was roundly applauded for his playing.

The concert came to a delightful close with Haydn's beloved Symphony No. 98 in B-flat Major.

T. K.

Marilyn Monroe in "Seven Year Itch" at the Astor.

STARTS JULY 21

Tanglewood Festival

Music Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 8 — Charles Munch and members of the Boston Symphony orchestra opened the 18th season of the Berkshire Festival tonight before an audience of 2000. Presented in the theatre-concert hall rather than in the larger shed, tonight's chamber music concert, like that scheduled for next week end, is popularly known as a Bach-Mozart affair, although other composers often muscle in, as did Stravinsky tonight.

Stravinsky's "Orpheus" ballet music is not, it is true, particularly muscular; indeed it is a study in pianissimos, with recurrent decrescendos from inaudibility. However, it afforded a half-hour's repose in a program which was appropriately jubilant and festive.

The program opened with Bach's short but brilliant sinfonia from the "Easter" oratorio in which two trumpets are arrogantly dominant. Roger Voisin and Armando Chitalla performed with characteristic eclat.

Bach's Suite No. 2 for flute and strings provided Doriot Anthony Dwyer an opportunity to prove what a superb flutist she is. An encore on a Boston Symphony program is as rare as a July snowstorm but it is becoming standard practice to have the flutist give a reprise of the presto badinerie in this suite. Tonight she was recalled repeatedly even after the second sprint through the score.

The program closed with a sparkling reading of Mozart's "Prague" symphony.

The playing tonight was unusually good. In the past opening performances in the Tanglewood season have exhibited an orchestra tired after a long winter season and a taxing Pops season.

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 10—For the final concert in the first week end of the Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch chose the Bach Mass in B Minor. As it turned out a more unfortunate choice could hardly be imagined, for the weather was so hot and the theatre-concert hall was so uncomfortable that a Strauss waltz would have been taxing on both performer and listener.

The assisting forces, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, were the same ones that gave an excellent reading of the score last winter in the regular Boston season.

Normally we would expect a performance equal to the first if not superior. However, such was far from the case.

This afternoon's concert exhibited one of those instances in which an accident toward the beginning sets the tone for the remaining portion of the performance.

After a beautiful, heartfelt reading of the opening, Kyrie Eleison, promising a glorious afternoon of music, Mr. Munch misjudged his tempo for the following Gloria. He took it so fast that neither singer nor musician could keep up with him and the music simply fell apart.

There is a speed limit for any chorus, no matter how virtuoso a group; with pitch, consonants and vowels posing all sorts of problems, a chorus must have some consideration. If the performance is a steeplechase, one may expect a melee at every hazardous passage.

In succeeding choruses the singers never quite recovered their poise, and the concert was sometimes extremely trying.

However, the soloists did as well as could be expected under the circumstances, even bringing some moments of distinction to the various arias.

The attendance for the first week has set a record for the Berkshire Festival with 10,000 people clocked through the gate.

• SECOND ANNUAL
NEWPORT
JAZZ FESTIVAL
Friday
Saturday
Sunday
July [illegible]
Louis Armstrong — Dave Brubeck
Count Basie & his orchestra
Duke Ellington — Erroll Garner
Woody Herman & his orchestra
Bobby Hackett — Gerry Mulligan
Dinah Washington and over 100 other jazz musicians.
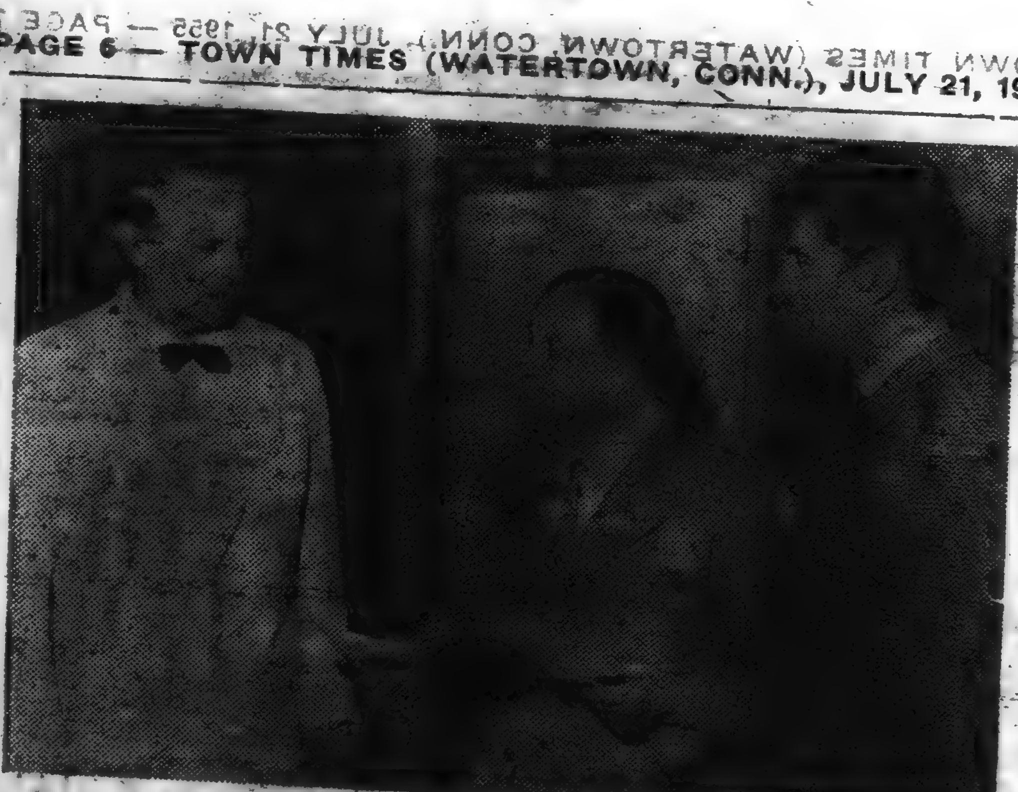
ALL SEATS RESERVED
$5, $4, $3 per concert
• Tickets [illegible]
Service [illegible]
NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL
Newport, Rhode Island



Three celebrated conductors share the podium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at i ts 1955 Berkshire Festival Concerts, Tanglewood.

Left to right, Charles Munch, Symphony Director, opens the Music Shed concerts on July 22 with an all-Beethoven program; Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Festival concerts, July 23, July 31, and Aug. 13; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Aug. 5 concert. Mr. Bernstein heads the Berkshire music center's department of orchestra and conducting.

·MUSIC

German Composers At Tanglewood

By TUCKER KEISER

Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who heads the composition department at Tanglewood each summer, is taking his first leave of absence in a dozen years. Two other composers have been invited to take his place. The first is Roger Sessions with whom Mr. Copland produced the famous Copland-Sessions Concerts of the '20s. The other is Boris Blacher, a German whose music is just beginning to be heard in the United States.

During his summer in the Berkshires, Professor Blacher, visiting the United States for the first time, will be honored by a performance of his chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet" under Boris Goldovsky's direction in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Monday evening, Aug. 1.

The composer has some reservations about a theatrical production of this piece, he told me over a second cup of coffee after breakfast last Saturday.

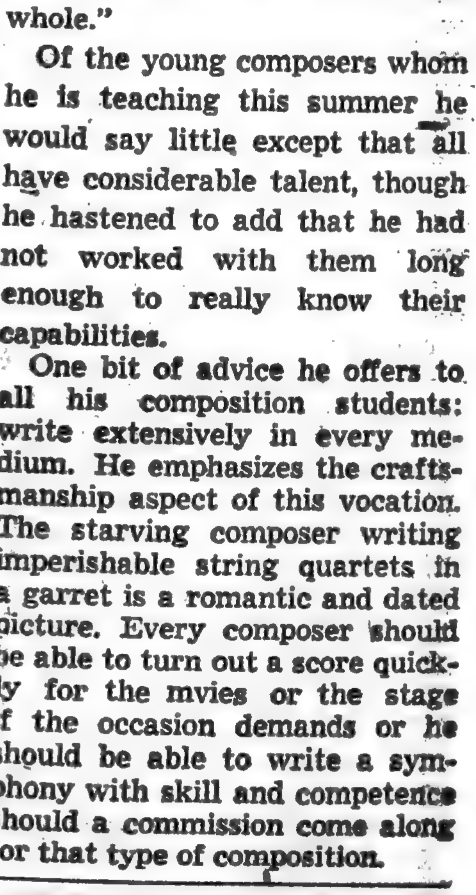
"Originally, "Romeo and Juliet" was a cantata, but soon after its first performance it was staged. Since then it has crossed the line into the operatic repertory. However, it was conceived as a concert piece, and I still think of it that way."

Herr Blacher flew to Tanglewood from his home in Berlin where he is director of the Hochschule fur Musik, an institution more like an American conservatory than a high school. During his topover in New York he had an opportunity to see "The Pajama Game," the Broadway musical hit with which he was delighted.

"We have nothing like American musical comedy in Europe," he stated. "It is a genre unique to the American stage and American music with music, dancing, and story fused into a perfect whole."

Of the young composers whom he is teaching this summer he would say little except that all have considerable talent, though he hastened to add that he had not worked with them long enough to really know their capabilities.

One bit of advice he offers to all his composition students: write extensively in every medium. He emphasizes the craftsmanship aspect of this vocation. The starving composer writing imperishable string quartets in a garret is a romantic and dated picture. Every composer should be able to turn out a score quickly for the mvies or the stage if the occasion demands or he should be able to write a symphony with skill and competence should a commission come along for that type of composition.



Gloria Vanderbilt in "Picnic" at the Marblehead Summer

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1955

'Celebrity Night' Tuesday At Berkshire Museum

Musicians, Actors, Dancers, Artist to Perform in Benefit Program

Pittsfield, July 22—A famous artist, dancers, musicians and actors will be featured Tuesday evening on the program of "Celebrity Night" at the Berkshire Museum, when they will donate their talents for the museum's benefit.

Dr. Baxter to Emcee

The program, with James Phinney Baxter, president of Williams College as master of ceremonies, will start at 8.30 with madrigals by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, nine musicians spending the summer at Fernbrook, the former Metz estate in Lenox. Mexican dances by Josefina Garcia and Alonso Rivera of Jacob's Pillow will follow.

Readings will be given by four leading members of the Williamstown summer theater cast, Carola Goya and Matteo. Christina Cardillo of North Adams, Tanglewood soprano who will sing the title role in Mozart's opera, "Zaide," later in the summer, will sing at "Celebrity Night." A piano solo will be played by her accompanist, Paul Ulanowsky, accompanist for Christina Cardillo, and for 14 years, accompanist for Lotte Lehmann, and member of various music faculties.

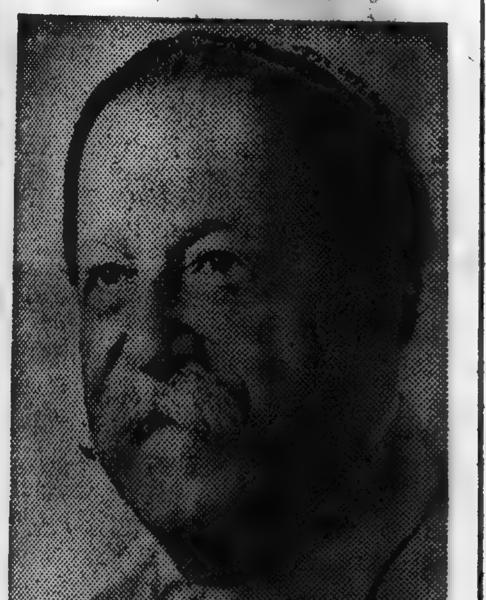
Norman Rockwell, a resident of Stockbridge, will also be featured on the program, and the evening will include and original scene by Broadway producer and actor, who is appearing this season at the Stockbridge Playhouse in "Edward, My Son"; the North Adams Kiltie Band; and John Culpo, Pittsfield accordionist.

Refreshments will be served in the Ellen Crane room following the program. Tickets are available at the museum office.

7/21/55

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Guest Conductor



Pierre Monteux is guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at three Berkshire Festival concerts during the summer of 1955; in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

On Saturday, July 23 at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux conducts an orchestral program of works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Richard Strauss.

On Sunday, July 31 at 2:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux leads an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists.

On Saturday, August 13 at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux conducts a program of Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Richard Strauss.

Munch Directs as Symphony Opens Music Shed Concerts

7633 at Tanglewood Hear Masterful Rendition of Beethoven's Seventh; Stern Soloist

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 22—When the great shed opens and the 104 players of the Boston Symphony Orchesra are on the platform waiting for Charles Munch to come on stage, then the Berkshire Music Festival really comes into its own. True, there has been beautiful music made here for two weeks, but the glory of Tanglewood is the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The audience numbered 7633.

Boxes Well Filled

Tonight the boxes were well-filled, many of them held handsomely gowned women and white-coated men and there was an air of friendliness all about. Many in the audience, like ourselves, have had the same seats for years and they know their seat mates quite well, though seeing them only once a year. On the grounds were the usual number of devotees in various stages of dress or undress. The problem of scantily dressed men and women is assuming serious proportions here, but just what can be done to solve the problem beyond appealing to decency has not yet been found.

The festival this year is built about the music of Beethoven. All his symphonies will be heard during the next four weeks. It seemed right that the first symphony to be heard should be the mighty Seventh, or "Symhpny in A Major." The very immensity of this work, its direct, forceful journey to its conclusion gives us almost a tone picture of Beethoven himself.

Springfield Un 7/23

Munch Directs

Continued From Page 1

Isaac Stern was the soloist in the Violin Concerto in D Major, Beethoven's only violin concerto. We have not heard a more finely detailed performance of this work. The utter purity of the tones Mr. Stern draws from his instrument caused them to soar throughout the huge shed and far beyond onto the grounds. It was a performance of great nobility, rich in color and imagination. Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided a finely integrated accompaniment. The memory of this performance will be cherished by all who heard it.

The program opened with a vivid, restless performance of the overture to "Coriolan." This dark-hued work with its fiery affirmations, its sense of agitation and its heroic spirit was given a magnificent performance.

Mr. Munch gave an eloquent reading of the Seventh Symphony; one which matched the might of the music in the opening movement; one which revealed the whimsicality of the "Presto," really a Scherzo, and he brought to the finale all the boisterous, happy qualities it possesses. The orchestra was in superb form, playing as one has learned to expect it to play.

Monteux to Conduct

Tomorrow the veteran conductor Pierre Monteux will make his first appearance at this festival. That he will be warmly greeted is a foregone conclusion, for his friends are legion. He will open the program with Respighi's arrangement of the Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor.

Then will come Beethoven's Second Symphony in D Major. Following intermission, Roger Sessions' orchestral suite from "The Black Maskers" will be heard. The concert will close with the Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration."

Sunday afternoon at 2.30, Mr. Munch will conduct three Beethoven Symphonies, "Symphony No. 1 in C Major," "Symphony No. 4 in B-Flat Major" and "Symphony No. 6 in F Major," the "Pastorale."

Public Events

Tonight Eagle 7/23

8:30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

8:40—"The Crucible." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"The Old Maid." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring dancers of Royal Danish Ballet, East of Lee.

9:00—Dalton Old Home Week, featuring dance with music by Ray McKinley. Community House.

~~9:00—Sixth annual Berkshire Farm square dance. Farm lawn, Canaan, N.Y.~~

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m. — Student chamber music concert. Tanglewood chamber music hall. (BMC Friends)

~~2.00 p.m.—Dedication of Pittsfield ground observer tower. Benedict Road.~~

2:00 p.m.—Dalton Old Home Week featuring Old Timers' Parade, Wahconah Country Club to Pine Grove Park.

2:30 p.m. — Berkshire Festival concert, Charles Munch conducting Beethoven program. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

~~4:00 p.m.—Berkshire Quartet.~~ Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.

4:00 p.m.—Chamber music concert. Cummington School of the Arts.

~~7:00 p.m.—"The Fifth Season." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.~~

8:30 p.m. — Composers forum. Tanglewood chamber music hall, (BMC Friends) Lenox.

~~8:30 p.m.—Ted Shawn in "The American Dance," lecture-recital. Jacob's Pillow, East of Lee.~~

8:30 p.m. — Thelonius Monk Quartet. Modern Jazz Workshop, Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

Behind the Scenes

Youthful Opera Aspirants Add Color at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 22—Much of the glamor and excitement that is Tanglewood is to be found in the Opera Department, headed by the gifted and dynamic Boris Goldovsky. Hopeful aspirants from many parts of the country and from some foreign countries come to the Berkshire Music School to learn the fundamentals of acting and the more difficult art of combining action and singing.

Springfield Represented

Springfield is represented in the Opera Department by Barbara Dale, soprano, a student of Ruth B. Ekberg. Another former pupil of Mrs. Ekberg studying here is Stephen Harbachick, a baritone who was very active in music while a student at Classical High School during the regime of Hazel Clark Steiger. A graduate of Yale and Juilliard, Mr. Harbachick has just completed his military service and now has resumed his music. He is scheduled for an important role in the world premiere of "The Rope." His colleagues regard his voice and flair for the stage with great respect.

Mr. Goldovsky auditions all candidates for the Opera Department. They are then divided into two groups, the active group, which participates in the important works like "The Rope" and an associate group which undergoes primarily the same teaching as the active group but under the junior teachers, with Mr. Goldovsky or Sara Caldwell hearing them weekly. Miss Dale is a member of the associate group. The division is based on vocal ability and previous experience.

Mr. Goldovsky feels that he has an exceptional group of gifted students. During their first performance of scenes from opera it seemed to us that the voices were far superior to those heard last season. Incidentally, there are seven tenors studying this season.

"Bread-Butter" Roles

During their course of study students get an opportunity to learn what Mr. Goldovsky calls the "bread and butter" roles, that is the Puccini, Gounod, Rossini, Verdi and Mozart repertoire, to name a few. Thus during the first presentation of scenes from opera we heard scenes from "The Marriage of Figaro," "Barber of Seville," "Faust," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Carmen," and "Madame Butterfly." The students wore casual clothes and there were only a few props, but they had been so well trained in pantomime and in action that there was considerable effect of real opera. This was particularly noted in the case of Lynn Detwiler, a tenor from Altoona, Pa., now studying in Boston. He took the role of the older Faust in the Prologue of the opera. Tall and slender, Detwiler has a real flair for the stage and a voice entirely adequate to meet the demands of such music. We heard a lovely warm and flexible voice when Susana Naidich from Argentina sang a duet from "The Barber of Seville." McHenry Boatwright, the Negro baritone, who was heard here last season and who is well known in the Boston area, again revealed his solid musicianship as Mephistopheles in the "Faust" scene.

What seems to us most remarkable in the Goldovsky training is the emphasis on the correlation of action and singing. There are no prompters and the students know their roles so well that they seldom glanced at Mr. Goldovsky who was at the piano. They also know what the rest of the cast is singing and doing. In other words, they have a complete picture of any opera they are in, not just their own little part.

In a scene from "Cavalleria Rusticana," a young Negro tenor, Harold S. Johnson, from Chicago, revealed a useful voice and acting ability. There will be more opera scenes before the close of the season which will give us opportunity to hear others of these talented young singers who are gaining so much from their studies here.

Pierre Monteux Conducts Tonight At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 22—Saturday at 8:30 p. m., in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Pierre Monteux will make his first of three appearances during the 1955 Berkshire Festival conducting the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and the Symphonic Poem, "Death and Transfiguration," by the late Richard Strauss. In addition, this concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton University and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion: He conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Sunday at 2:30 p. m. Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's Festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert Sunday assembles three symphonies — the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

Globe 7/24

"Tanglewood on Parade" Benefit Aug. 11

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, will aid the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program.

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront". Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox, (Mass.) 600.

Stock Averages
[illegible] & Co. (1 PM)
30 Industrials 464.15 +3.08
20 Railroads 160.16 +1.92
15 Utilities 66.43 + .33
Sales 1,450,000

Last Chance for Pittsfield Days Bargains Tomorrow

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, July 22, 1955.

Second Section

The Weather

Temperature 8:00 AM 70
Temperature 12 noon 85
High 24 hours 5 PM 90
Low 24 hours 5 AM 64
Range year ago 78, 54
Precipitation 24 hours 0

Sun rises at 5:34
Sun sets at 8:25
New moon Aug. 17
Full moon Aug. 3
Lamps lighted 8:55

MR. MUNCH REHEARSES: "All[illegible]"

"From the Heart, Please!"

"Pianissimo"

"Bravissimo!"

Photos by [illegible]

[illegible]d Concerts Begin Tonight With All-Beethoven Pro[illegible]

[illegible]GLEWOOD—The [illegible] Festival moves [illegible] at Tanglewood [illegible] Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed when [illegible] first of this season's concerts [illegible] the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at [illegible] Munch [illegible] of the [illegible] will [illegible] Beethoven program [illegible] the Overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern [illegible] as soloist and the [illegible] This season as last, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full orchestra, with the audience that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four weekends of the Festival, on Friday, Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. The advance sale of Shed concerts indicates that [illegible] attendance mark set last [illegible] will be shattered this year.

Pierre Monteux, returning to the Tanglewood podium for his fourth consecutive summer, will be the conductor for the concert tomorrow night, leading Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program, this one made up of three symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth.

NY Herald Tribune 7/24

Full Boston Symphony Plays Beethoven at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 23.—The Berkshire Music Festival, frying uncomfortably in a heat wave of its own, entered the major phase of its activity last night as the full, 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch's direction, gave its first concert of the season in Tanglewood's ample and impressive Music Shed. An all-Beethoven program was the substance of the event, the composer's "Coriolan" Overture and Seventh Symphony framing a performance of the Violin Concerto in D featuring Isaac Stern as soloist. As such, it was an evening of rousing artistic bombardment with all concerned sparing no means to make Beethoven the true hero of the occasion.

And in Mr. Munch's eyes, Beethoven is a hero—nothing less. He sees him, if I judge correctly, as a composite of all those virlie virtues which popular biography and unloosed imagination have long since read into the composer's personality. Thus, he offered the "Coriolan" Overture not as a preface to Collin's darma but as the drama itself, as a study, in short, of struggle, pride and turmoil. In pursuance of these traits, each one markedly Beethovenesque, the conductor was driven to some wayward peculiarities, notably an undue accentuation of the cello figure that accompanies the second theme and short-tempered brusqueness of accent.

Similar eccentricities dotted the orchestra's rendition of the Seventh Symphony, though in the matter of sonority brilliance the performance could scarcely be bettered. In the work, Mr. Munch again paraded his image of Beethoven the firebrand, Beethoven the gruff, irascible and unloved builder of musical thunderbolts; and his interpretation, therefore, was harsh, unflaggingly vigorous and nerv-out to the point of hysteria. The Seventh Symphony Mr. Munch does all in a rage: the fury of his beat and the pace of his tempo make for an extreme orchestral violence that, while adding to the work's thrust, clearly robs it of anything even remotely connected with human sentiment and tenderness of expression. Perhaps the conductor does not feel that these are implied by the music. At any rate, he directs the work so as to deny their existence.

For his part, Mr. Stern began grandly, but slipped downhill as the evening progressed. In the first movement of the Concerto his tone, especially on the E-string, was of a loveliness unsurpassed, and his involvement with the score complete. Every note of it moved him, moved his audience as well, and every phrase had shape and heart. Indeed, so soulful was his over-all concept that one could even forgive the presence of Joachim's hideous, gypsy-style cadenza.

But the second movement was another matter, for Mr. Stern dragged the tempos beyond their natural endurance and in consequence snapped the long lyric thread that Beethoven clearly desired. On each new tune he idled languorously, with the result that the section into a series of isolated episodes rather than a continuous whole. And in the Finale, in addition to several finger mishaps, the fun and frolic of the piece was replaced by a heavy-handed caution that did the concerto no service. Nonetheless, an audience of 7,700 applauded Mr. Stern and the orchestra wildly.

Guy A. Huguelet, Headed Bus Line

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 23 (AP).—Guy A. Huguelet, sixty-four, chairman of the board of Southeastern Greyhound Lines, died at a hospital today. He was admitted to the hospital June 28 and had undergone surgery.

A native of Charleston, S. C., Mr. Huguelet was one of the organizers of Southeastern Greyhound in October, 1926. He became president early in the firm's existence and board chairman last September.

[239]

Herald Tribune
7/24/55

Isaac Stern does double duty as soloist this week. Tomorrow night he will play the Tchaikovsky Concerto at Lewisohn Stadium and a week from today he will be heard in Tanglewood, with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Modern Opera at Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Three of the four works which the Berkshire Music Center's opera department is producing this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are by modern composers. "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, the Center's guest composer in residence, will be heard Monday night, Aug. 1, in a double bill with Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane"; a short choral program under student conductors will separate the two operas. Louis Mennini's "The Rope" will have its first public performances Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, in a program completed by Mozart's "Zaide."

According to notes from Tanglewood, "Romeo and Juliet" was first performed in the 1950 Salzburg Festival, and had its American premiere at the University of Illinois in 1953. This presumably refers to stage performances, since the work was given here in concert form in a League of Composers' program in the former Times Hall on April 10, 1949, with Reginald Stewart conducting.

It was noted at that time that this opera was composed for radio performance in 1943, with a text condensed from Schlegel's translation of Shakespeare; the league gave it in an adaption, made partly by the composer, of the original English text. At Tanglewood, all four operas will be sung in English in production by Boris Goldovsky.

The title roles of "Romeo and Juliet" are assigned to a tenor and soprano; the other characters are Capulet (bass) and Lady Capulet (contralto), with a chorus and instrumental ensemble. "L'Abandon d'Ariane" was composed twenty-seven years ago.

Bloch's 75th Birthday

Today is the seventy-fifth birthday of Ernest Bloch, whose standing as one of the foremost composers of our day is too well known to need elaboration here. There should be some recognition of this anniversary in next season's programs throughout the country, although little in this regard has yet been announced. The Portland Symphony, which is the orchestra nearest to his home in Agate Beach, Ore., will play his viola suite in its 1955-'56 schedule under its new conductor, Theodore Bloomfield. In the record field, however, the occasion has been celebrated by the London release of the Griller Quartet's performances of the four Bloch quartets.

• • •

Empire State Festival

In the opening concerts of the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 3 and 5, the Symphony of the Air will play Beethoven's third "Leonore" Overture and Eighth Symphony and the First Symphony of Brahms under Eduard van Beinum's direction. Morton Gould will conduct Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, when the program includes his Tap Dance Concerto, with Danny Daniels as the dancer, and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Earl Wild as soloist.

Under Alfred Wallenstein, music by Handel and Wagner will preface Brahms' Fourth Symphony Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 10 and 12, and Prokofiev's "Classical" Symphony, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony and Benjamin Britten's "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" will be heard Aug. 14.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a Mozart program Aug 17 and 19, and Leroy Anderson will direct a program of his own music Sunday, Aug 21, with Eugene List as piano soloist.

• • •

Opera, Now and Later

Puccini's "Turandot," which is new to this series, will have two performances during the last week of the Cincinnati Summer Opera's thirty-fourth season, Wednesday and Friday nights, with a Virginian soprano, Jane Stuart Smith, in the title role. Regina Resnik will sing Carmen in the season's final evening Saturday. On her return to the Metropolitan next season, she will make her first appearances here as a mezzo-soprano in roles including Ortrud in "Lohengrin," Marina in "Boris Godunoff" and others.

~~Sunday Globe~~

Berkshire Programs

7/24

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of Summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed on Friday and Saturday (July 30), evenings. Pierre Monteux takes the stand with thhe orchestra next Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this Summer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra. The complete programs:

Wednesday at 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall (Chamber Music)—Beethoven, string quartets: G major, Opus 18, No. 2; E flat major, Opus 127; A minor, Opus 132. (The New Music String Quartet).

Friday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Handel, Suite "Water Music"; Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloists: Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Tanglewood choir); Brahms, Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

Saturday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Beethoven: Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor" (soloist, Rudolf Serkin); Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Brahms: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky); Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Today's Music Shed concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

As the music season at Tanglewood reaches its mid-point, the students of the Berkshire Music Center begin their last three weeks of study on the spacious festival grounds. Above, a group of string players head for their class which, in all probability, will be held beneath the shade of a Tanglewood tree.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood, Theater-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Strauss.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "The Crucible."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Old Maid."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "The Fifth Season."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow, Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn; Myra Kinch; Jean Leon Destine and company.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

Eagle 7/23

Room Requests Indicate It's Hotter Elsewhere

Eagle 7/23

A combination of sizzling temperatures in the city and the start of the regular Berkshire Symphonic Festival has filled Berkshire County hotels, motels, inns and rooming houses to near capacity, according to the Berkshire Hills Conference office.

John F. Downing, director of the conference, reported his office has been deluged with requests for information and accommodations. He said most of the calls came from the larger cities which have been simmering under temperatures well into the high 90's.

Mr. Downing said there are still accommodations available in various parts of the county.

Indications are that next week will be the largest week from a tourist trade standpoint in several years. Mr. Downing made this observation from a survey of innkeepers and mail received at the office.

Boston Herald 7/24/55

Fourth Week of Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the stand with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 31, for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Penion Fund.

[240]

Last Chance for Pittsfield Days Bargains Tomorrow

The Berkshire Evening Eagle

Stock Averages
Dow-Jones—Goodbody & Co. (1 PM)

30 Industrials	464.15	+3.08
20 Railroads	160.16	+1.92
15 Utilities	66.43	+ .33

Sales 1,450,000

The Weather

Temperature 8:00 AM	79	Sun rises at	5:34
Temperature 12 noon	85	Sun sets at	8:32
High 24 hours 5 PM	90	New moon	Aug. 17
Low 24 hours 5 AM	64	Full moon	Aug. 3
Range year ago	78, 54	Lamps lighted	8:58
Precipitation 24 hours	0

Second Section

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, July 22, 1955.

MR. MUNCH REHEARSES: "Allez!"

"From the Heart, Please!"

"Pianissimo"

"Bravissimo!"

Photos by Manos

Shed Concerts Begin Tonight With All-Beethoven Program

TANGLEWOOD—The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood tonight from the Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30.

Charles Munch, music director of the BSO, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist and the Seventh Symphony.

This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four weekends of the Festival, on Friday, Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. The advance sale of Shed concerts indicates that the all-time attendance mark set last season will be shattered this year.

Pierre Monteux, returning to the Tanglewood podium for his fourth consecutive summer, will be the conductor for the concert tomorrow night, leading Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program, this one made up of three symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth.

NY Herald Tribune 7/24

Full Boston Symphony Plays Beethoven at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 23.—The Berkshire Music Festival, frying uncomfortably in a heat wave of its own, entered the major phase of its activity last night as the full, 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch's direction, gave its first concert of the season in Tanglewood's ample and impressive Music Shed. An all-Beethoven program was the substance of the event, the composer's "Coriolan" Overture and Seventh Symphony framing a performance of the Violin Concerto in D featuring Isaac Stern as soloist. As such, it was an evening of rousing artistic bombardment with all concerned sparing no means to make Beethoven the true hero of the occasion.

And in Mr. Munch's eyes, Beethoven is a hero—nothing less. He sees him, if I judge correctly, as a composite of all those virlie virtues which popular biography and unloosed imagination have long since read into the composer's personality. Thus, he offered the "Coriolan" Overture not as a preface to Collin's darma but as the drama itself, as a study, in short, of struggle, pride and turmoil. In pursuance of these traits, each one markedly Beethovenesque, the conductor was driven to some wayward peculiarities, notably an undue accentuation of the cello figure that accompanies the second theme and short-tempered brusqueness of accent.

Similar eccentricities dotted the orchestra's rendition of the Seventh Symphony, though in the matter of sonority brilliance the performance could scarcely be bettered. In the work, Mr. Munch again paraded his image of Beethoven the firebrand, Beethoven the gruff, irascible and unloved builder of musical thunderbolts; and his interpretation, therefore, was harsh, unflaggingly vigorous and nervout to the point of hysteria. The Seventh Symphony Mr. Munch does all in a rage: the fury of his beat and the pace of his tempo make for an extreme orchestral violence that, while adding to the work's thrust, clearly robs it of anything even remotely connected with human sentiment and tenderness of expression. Perhaps the conductor does not feel that these are implied by the music. At any rate, he directs the work so as to deny their existence.

For his part, Mr. Stern began grandly, but slipped downhill as the evening progressed. In the first movement of the Concerto his tone, especially on the E-string, was of a loveliness unsurpassed, and his involvement with the score complete. Every note of it moved him, moved his audience as well, and every phrase had shape and heart. Indeed, so soulful was his overall concept that one could even forgive the presence of Joachim's hideous, gypsy-style cadenza.

But the second movement was another matter, for Mr. Stern dragged the tempos beyond their natural endurance and in consequence snapped the long lyric thread that Beethoven clearly desired. On each new tune he idled languorously, with the result that the section into a series of isolated episodes rather than a continuous whole. And in the Finale, in addition to several finger mishaps, the fun and frolic of the piece was replaced by a heavy-handed caution that did the concerto no service. Nonetheless, an audience of 7,700 applauded Mr. Stern and the orchestra wildly.

Guy A. Huguelet, Headed Bus Line

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 23 (AP).—Guy A. Huguelet, sixty-four, chairman of the board of Southeastern Greyhound Lines, died at a hospital today. He was admitted to the hospital June 28 and had undergone surgery.

A native of Charleston, S. C., Mr. Huguelet was one of the organizers of Southeastern Greyhound in October, 1926. He became president early in the firm's existence and board chairman last September.

[239]

Herald Tribune 7/24/55

Isaac Stern does double duty as soloist this week. Tomorrow night he will play the Tchaikovsky Concerto at Lewisohn Stadium and a week from today he will be heard in Tanglewood, with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Modern Opera at Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

[illegible] of the four works which the Berkshire Music Center's [illegible] department is producing this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are by modern composers. "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, the Center's guest composer in residence, will be heard Monday night, Aug. 1, in a double bill with Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane"; a short choral program under student conductors will separate the two operas. Louis Mennini's "The Rope" will have its first public performances Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, in a program completed by Mozart's "Zaide."

According to notes from Tanglewood, "Romeo and Juliet" was first performed in the 1950 Salzburg Festival, and had its American premiere at the University of Illinois in 1953. This presumably refers to stage performances, since the work was given here in concert form in a League of Composers' program in the former Times Hall on April 10, 1949, with Reginald Stewart conducting.

It was noted at that time that this opera was composed for radio performance in 1943, with a text condensed from Schlegel's translation of Shakespeare; the league gave it in an adaption, made partly by the composer, of the original English text. At Tanglewood, all four operas will be sung in English in production by Boris Goldovsky.

The title roles of "Romeo and Juliet" [illegible] assigned to a tenor [illegible] soprano; the other characters are Capulet (bass) and Lady Capulet (contralto), with a chorus and instrumental ensemble. "L'Abandon d'Ariane" was composed twenty-seven years ago.

Bloch's 75th Birthday

Today is the seventy-fifth birthday of Ernest Bloch, whose standing as one of the foremost composers of our day is too well known to need elaboration here. There should be some recognition of this anniversary in next season's programs throughout the country, although little in this regard has yet been announced. The Portland Symphony, which is the orchestra nearest to his home in Agate Beach, Ore., will play his viola suite in its 1955-'56 schedule under its new conductor, Theodore Bloomfield. In the record field, however, the occasion has been celebrated by the London release of the Griller Quartet's performances of the four Bloch quartets.

• • •

Empire State Festival

In the opening concerts of the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 3 and 5, the Symphony of the Air will play Beethoven's third "Leonore" Overture and Eighth Symphony and the First Symphony of Brahms under Eduard van Beinum's direction. Morton Gould will conduct Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, when the program includes his Tap Dance Concerto, with Danny Daniels as the dancer, and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Earl Wild as soloist.

Under Alfred Wallenstein, music by Handel and Wagner will preface Brahms' Fourth Symphony Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 10 and 12, and Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony and Benjamin Britten's "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" will be heard Aug. 14.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a Mozart program Aug 17 and 19, and Leroy Anderson will direct a program of his own music Sunday, Aug 21, with Eugene List as piano soloist.

• • •

Opera, Now and Later

Puccini's "Turandot," which is new to this series, will have two performances during the last week of the Cincinnati Summer Opera's thirty-fourth season, Wednesday and Friday nights, with a Virginian soprano, Jane Stuart Smith, in the [illegible] role. Regina Resnik will sing Carmen [illegible] the season's final evening Saturday. [illegible] return to the Metropolitan next season, she will make her first appearances here as a mezzo-soprano in roles including Ortrud in "Lohengrin," Marina in "Boris Godunoff" and others.

As the music season at Tanglewood reaches its mid-point, the students of the Berkshire Music Center begin their last three weeks of study on the spacious festival grounds. Above, a group of string players head for their class which, in all probability, will be held beneath the shade of a Tanglewood tree.

Sunday Globe

Berkshire Programs

7/24

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of Summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed on Friday and Saturday (July 30), evenings. Pierre Monteux takes the stand with thhe orchestra next Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this Summer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra. The complete programs:

Wednesday at 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall (Chamber Music)—Beethoven, string quartets: G major, Opus 18, No. 2; E flat major, Opus 127; A minor, Opus 132. (The New Music String Quartet).

Friday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Handel, Suite "Water Music"; Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloists: Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Tanglewood choir); Brahms, Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

Saturday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Beethoven: Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor" (soloist, Rudolf Serkin); Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Brahms: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky); Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Today's Music Shed concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

Boston Herald 7/24/55

Fourth Week of Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the stand with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 31, for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Penion Fund.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood, Theater-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Strauss.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "The Crucible."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Old Maid."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "The Fifth Season."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow, Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn; Myra Kinch; Jean Leon Destine and company.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle.

Berkshire Week

Eagle 7/23

Room Requests Indicate It's Hotter Elsewhere

Eagle 7/23

A combination of sizzling temperatures in the city and the start of the regular Berkshire Symphonic Festival has filled Berkshire County hotels, motels, inns and rooming houses to near capacity, according to the Berkshire Hills Conference office.

John F. Downing, director of the conference, reported his office has been deluged with requests for information and accommodations. He said most of the calls came from the larger cities which have been simmering under temperatures well into the high 90's.

Mr. Downing said there are still accommodations available in various parts of the county.

Indications are that next week will be the largest week from a tourist trade standpoint in several years. Mr. Downing made this observation from a survey of innkeepers and mail received at the office.

Herald Tribune
7/24/55

Isaac Stern does double duty as soloist this week. Tomorrow night he will play the Tchaikovsky Concerto at Lewisohn Stadium and a week from today he will be heard in Tanglewood, with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Modern Opera at Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Three of the four works which the Berkshire Music Center's opera department is producing this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are by modern composers. "Romeo and Juliet," by Boris Blacher, the Center's guest composer in residence, will be heard Monday night, Aug. 1, in a double bill with Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane"; a short choral program under student conductors will separate the two operas. Louis Mennini's "The Rope" will have its first public performances Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, in a program completed by Mozart's "Zaide."

According to notes from Tanglewood, "Romeo and Juliet" was first performed in the 1950 Salzburg Festival, and had its American premiere at the University of Illinois in 1953. This presumably refers to stage performances, since the work was given here in concert form in a League of Composers' program in the former Times Hall on April 10, 1949, with Reginald Stewart conducting.

It was noted at that time that this opera was composed for radio performance in 1943, with a text condensed from Schlegel's translation of Shakespeare; the league gave it in an adaption, made partly by the composer, of the original English text. At Tanglewood, all four operas will be sung in English in production by Boris Goldovsky.

The title roles of "Romeo and Juliet" are assigned to a tenor and soprano; the other characters are Capulet (bass) and Lady Capulet (contralto), with a chorus and instrumental ensemble. "L'Abandon d'Ariane" was composed twenty-seven years ago.

Bloch's 75th Birthday

Today is the seventy-fifth birthday of Ernest Bloch, whose standing as one of the foremost composers of our day is too well known to need elaboration here. There should be some recognition of this anniversary in next season's programs throughout the country, although little in this regard has yet been announced. The Portland Symphony, which is the orchestra nearest to his home in Agate Beach, Ore., will play his viola suite in its 1955-'56 schedule under its new conductor, Theodore Bloomfield. In the record field, however, the occasion has been celebrated by the London release of the Griller Quartet's performances of the four Bloch quartets.

* * *

Empire State Festival

In the opening concerts of the Empire State Festival at Ellenville, N. Y., Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 3 and 5, the Symphony of the Air will play Beethoven's third "Leonore" Overture and Eighth Symphony and the First Symphony of Brahms under Eduard van Beinum's direction. Morton Gould will conduct Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, when the program includes his Tap Dance Concerto, with Danny Daniels as the dancer, and Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with Earl Wild as soloist.

Under Alfred Wallenstein, music by Handel and Wagner will preface Brahms' Fourth Symphony Wednesday and Friday nights, Aug. 10 and 12, and Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony and Benjamin Britten's "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" will be heard Aug. 14.

Erich Leinsdorf will conduct a Mozart program Aug 17 and 19, and Leroy Anderson will direct a program of his own music Sunday, Aug 21, with Eugene List as piano soloist.

* * *

Opera, Now and Later

Puccini's "Turandot," which is new to this series, will have two performances during the last week of the Cincinnati Summer Opera's thirty-fourth season, Wednesday and Friday nights, with a Virginian soprano, Jane Stuart Smith, in the title role. Regina Resnik will sing Carmen on the season's final evening Saturday. On her return to the Metropolitan next season, she will make her first appearances here as a mezzo-soprano in roles including Ortrud in "Lohengrin," Marina in "Boris Godunoff" and others,

As the music season at Tanglewood reaches its mid-point, the students of the Berkshire Music Center begin their last three weeks of study on the spacious festival grounds. Above, a group of string players head for their class which, in all probability, will be held beneath the shade of a Tanglewood tree.

~~Sunday Globe~~

Berkshire Programs

7/24

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of Summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed on Friday and Saturday (July 30), evenings. Pierre Monteux takes the stand with thhe orchestra next Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this Summer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the orchestra. The complete programs:

Wednesday at 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall (Chamber Music)—Beethoven, string quartets: G major, Opus 18, No. 2; E flat major, Opus 127; A minor, Opus 132. (The New Music String Quartet).

Friday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Handel, Suite "Water Music"; Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Barber, "Prayers of Kierkegaard" (soloists: Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Tanglewood choir); Brahms, Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

Saturday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Beethoven; Overture to "Egmont"; Piano Concerto No. 5 "Emperor" (soloist, Rudolf Serkin); Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday at 8:30 p. m., Music Shed (Boston Symphony Orchestra)—Brahms: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and Cello (soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky); Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Today's Music Shed concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra presents Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

~~Boston Herald~~ 7/24/55

Fourth Week of Festival

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on Wednesday in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the stand with the orchestra Sunday afternoon, July 31, for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Penion Fund.

What's Going On?

TONIGHT:

8:30—Tanglewood, Theater-Concert Hall. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Strauss.

8:40—Williamstown Summer Theater. Final performance, "The Crucible."

8:45—Berkshire Playhouse. Final performance, "The Old Maid."

8:45—Malden Bridge Playhouse. "The Fifth Season."

9:00—Jacob's Pillow. Mary Ellen Moylan and Erik Bruhn; Myra Kinch; Jean Leon Destine and company.

For complete schedule of outstanding cultural events in Berkshire for the next seven weeks, see the Berkshire Summer Calendar in the second section of today's Eagle,

Berkshire Week

Eagle 7/23

Room Requests Indicate It's Hotter Elsewhere

A combination of sizzling temperatures in the city and the start of the regular Berkshire Symphonic Festival has filled Berkshire County hotels, motels, inns and rooming houses to near capacity, according to the Berkshire Hills Conference office.

John F. Downing, director of the conference, reported his office has been deluged with requests for information and accommodations. He said most of the calls came from the larger cities which have been simmering under temperatures well into the high 90's.

Mr. Downing said there are still accommodations available in various parts of the county.

Indications are that next week will be the largest week from a tourist trade standpoint in several years. Mr. Downing made this observation from a survey of innkeepers and mail received at the office.

Eagle 7/23

Eagle 7/23

7,633 Attend Opening Concert In Music Shed at Tanglewood

Monteux To Conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra Tonight at 8:30—Munch on Podium Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—The first of 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed last night drew a crowd of 7,633 persons, who filled the huge pavilion to overflowing. Dr. Munch gave permission to the musicians in the 104-piece orchestra to remove their coats during the evening's performance because of the humid weather.

Tonight at 8:30 Pierre Monteux will make his first appearance of the 1955 season when he will conduct the full BSO in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor in the orchestration by Respighi, Beethoven's Second Symphony and the Symphonic Poem, "Death and Transfiguration" by Richard Strauss.

80 on April 4

In addition, tonight's concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton University and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion. He conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Since then Mr. Monteux has conducted several performances of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Belgium, conducted his old orchestra, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam, made records in Paris, and conducted a week of concerts at New York's Lewisohn Stadium with the New York Philharmonic Symphony. This is the fourth consecutive summer that Mr. Monteux is a guest conductor at Tanglewood; he will also be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at home and on tour next season, the orchestra's 75th.

Tomorrow's Program

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's Festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert tomorrow afternoon assembles three symphonies — the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

Remaining tickets for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones during the Berkshire Festival, which ends Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood boxoffice. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

The fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, will be held in the Theater Concert Hall on July 27.

Albert the Alligator Dies

7/21

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Boston Symphony Opens Music Shed Series Friday

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year twelve concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine.

A feature of the Shed Series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the Orchestra).

There will be two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 23), for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friend's Society, will be mailed on request.

NY Times 7/25/55

Music: Monteux Conducts

Leads Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in Demanding, Diversified Program

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 24—Pierre Monteux is a remarkable octogenarian. His powers of concentration seem to become stronger as he gets older. Conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood last night, he led a diversified, demanding program with the kind of tension and control given only to the finest maestros.

With a responsive ensemble like the Boston Symphony at his disposal, his performances had unremitting excitement, and it was not excitement for its own sake, but something that grew out of the logic of the music. Each piece he undertook was done in the style right for it, and on each Mr. Monteux managed to flash some special illumination.

•

The find of the evening was "The Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions, American composer who is on the Berkshire Music Center faculty this summer. This piece, which was written more than thirty years ago, is one of the most solid in the American repertory. It has power, atmosphere and more than a touch of profundity. It is not so difficult to absorb as some of Mr. Sessions' more recent works, and it ought to be on American symphonic programs more often.

The only drawback is that it requires enormous virtuosity from the instrumentalists and the kind of reliable musicianship from the conductor that Mr. Monteux could bring to it. The Boston Symphony rose to the occasion, playing with tremendous drive and with relish for the interesting colors and sonorities the composer imagined. As for Mr. Monteux, his conducting was masterly. The composer and the performers were recalled repeatedly.

Mr. Monteux began with a spacious and resounding performance of the Bach-Respighi Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor. Then came an enamoring reading of Beethoven's Second Symphony. And finally there was a broad-gauged interpretation of Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration," one of the most memorable versions of this work that this reviewer has ever encountered.

This afternoon Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, continuing with the Beethoven cycle, offered three of the master's symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth. Possibly this was too much of a good thing on one program for some listeners. For those who can take their Beethoven neat and in unlimited quantities, the three symphonies played in this order provide contrast. And the Fourth, often undervalued when compared with the mighty ones, had a chance to stand out.

•

Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the three symphonies balanced, vigorous readings in which were that blend of earthiness and sublimity that make Beethoven what he is.

With almost 9,000 in the audience this afternoon, the three concerts in the Big Shed this week-end have played to about 25,000 persons. Three more week-ends and a lot of great music are to come.

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

Can, Roberta, Oklahoma!, Silk Stockings, The Student Prince, New Moon and others.

CROMPOUND MUSIC ASSOCIATION
Lakeland High School
Route 6, Peekskill, N. Y.

FRIDAY, 8:45 P. M. The New Music Quartet.
Quartet in G minor ....Boccherini
Quartet in F (K. 590) ....Mozart
Quartet in G, Op. 18, No. 2..Beethoven

MAVERICK SUNDAY CONCERTS
Woodstock, N. Y.

CHAMBER MUSIC, 4 P. M. Phillip Fatt, clarinet; Harry Zaratzian, violist; Cynthia Eddy, 'cellist; Ilse Sass, pianist.
Sonata in F minor..............Nardini
Trio in B flat, Op. 11.......Beethoven
Sonata for Viola and Piano..Honegger
Trio in A minor ....Brahms

CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION
Chautauqua, N. Y.

TODAY, 3 P. M., Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra, Conductor, Walter Hendl; Patricia Berlin, mezzo-soprano.

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. Madama Butterfly.

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Der Rosenkavalier.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hendl; Earl Wild, pianist. All-Gershwin program.

THURSDAY, 8:30 P. M. Mary Judd, soprano; Brent Williams, tenor.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors and Humperdinck's Hansel and Gretel.

SATURDAY, 11 A. M. Student Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Edward Murphy.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hendl; Louise Polk, pianist.

MUSIC MOUNTAIN
Falls Village, Conn.

TODAY, 4 P. M. Berkshire Quartet and four guest artists.
Septet ....Beethoven
Octet ....Schubert

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Beethoven program: Symphonies Nos. 1, 4 and 6.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. The New Music String Quartet.
Program of Beethoven string quartets: G, Op. 18, No. 2; E flat, Op. 127; A minor, Op. 132.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Tanglewood Choir of Students trained by Hugh Ross.
Water Music Suite ....Handel
Symphony No. 4..............Schumann
Prayers of Kierkegaard ....Barber
Symphony No. 4................Brahms

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

Howard S. Babbit

George Piatigorsky, soloist at the Berkshire Festival.

Beethoven program: Egmont Overture; Piano Concerto No. 5; Symphony No. 3.

SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist.
Brahms program: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and 'Cello; Symphony No. 1.

FOLK AND JAZZ CONCERT

NY Times 7/24

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 24, 1955. 9

SYMPHONY OFFERS TO PLAY IN SOVIET

Boston Orchestar Is 'Eager' to Aid in Eisenhower Plea to Lift Iron Curtain

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—The Boston Symphony Orchestra offered today to tour in the Soviet Union as a step toward implementing President Eisenhower's request in Geneva yesterday for lifting of the Iron Curtain.

The orchestra is planning a European trip in September, 1956. It also would be willing to play in the satellite countries.

After consulting with other officials of the Boston Symphony who are here at Tanglewood, Henry B. Cabot, president of the orchestra's trustees, issued this statement:

"We welcome the President's suggestions to help remove the Iron Curtain by a cultural and intellectual exchange with the Soviet Union. The Boston Symphony Orchestra is ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow."

As far as the records show, no American orchestra has ever visited Russia, either in Czarist days or since the Communists took over power. A few individual American musicians have appeared there, but virtually none since the "cold war" started.

Mr. Cabot disclosed that in the early years of World War II, when Serge Koussevitzky, Russian-born conductor, was head of the Boston Symphony, an invitation was sent to Moscow through the State Department to Eugen Mravinsky, Leningrad conductor, to be a guest leader in Boston.

Though Mr. Mravinsky cabled that he would be delighted to come, neither the Boston Symphony nor the United States received an official reply, and he did not come.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony since the late Mr. Koussevitzky's retirement in 1949, expressed enthuiasm about the plan to take the Boston Symphony to the Soviet Union.

Since foreign tours by modern symphony orchestras comprising more than a hundred men take a lot of arranging, the Boston officials feel that it would not be a moment too soon to start negotiations.

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony, will be touring in Europe this September. But it has a full schedule and could not be rerouted to Soviet cities without canceling engagements in other European capitals.

By a coincidence, an official of the International Exchange Program, which has been arranging the sending of American cultural units to foreign lands, arrived at Tanglewood today. Robert C. Schnitzer, executive secretary of the program sponsored by the American National Theatre and Academy, was here to confer with Thomas D. Perry Jr., the orchestra's manager, about next year's European trip.

Mr. Cabot said that should the Boston Symphony make the Soviet trip and should the Russians respond by sending an orchestra or ballet to the United States, the Boston Symphony would be glad to sponsor the performances in Boston.

Drunken Drivers Increased

SASKATOON, Sask. (Canadian Press)—Seventy-one Saskatchewan drivers lost their licenses during May for driving after drinking. The total is sixteen above the figure for the same month of last year.

[241]

Eagle 7/23

7,633 Attend Opening Concert In Music Shed at Tanglewood

Monteux To Conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra Tonight at 8:30— Munch on Podium Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD—The first of 12 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed last night drew a crowd of 7,633 persons, who filled the huge pavilion to overflowing. Dr. Munch gave permission to the musicians in the 104-piece orchestra to remove their coats during the evening's performance because of the humid weather.

Tonight at 8:30 Pierre Monteux will make his first appearance of the 1955 season when he will conduct the full BSO in Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor in the orchestration by Respighi, Beethoven's Second Symphony and the Symphonic Poem, "Death and Transfiguration" by Richard Strauss.

80 on April 4

In addition, tonight's concert will include the Tanglewood premiere of "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, the distinguished American composer who is professor of music at Princeton University and who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Mr. Monteux celebrated his 80th birthday last April 4 in characteristic fashion. He conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Since then Mr. Monteux has conducted several performances of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" in Belgium, conducted his old orchestra, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam, made records in Paris, and conducted a week of concerts at New York's Lewisohn Stadium with the New York Philharmonic Symphony. This is the fourth consecutive summer that Mr. Monteux is a guest conductor at Tanglewood; he will also be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at home and on tour next season, the orchestra's 75th.

Tomorrow's Program

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 Charles Munch resumes the podium to conduct the second all-Beethoven program in this summer's Festival which is devoted largely to that composer's music. The concert tomorrow afternoon assembles three symphonies — the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale").

Remaining tickets for these two concerts, as well as all succeeding ones during the Berkshire Festival, which ends Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood boxoffice. Telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

The fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, will be held in the Theater Concert Hall on July 27.

Albert the Alligator Dies

PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

Can, Roberta, Oklahoma!, Silk Stockings, The Student Prince, New Moon and others.

CROMPOUND MUSIC ASSOCIATION

Lakeland High School
Route 6, Peekskill, N. Y.

FRIDAY, 8:45 P. M. The New Music Quartet.
Quartet in G minor ......Boccherini
Quartet in F (K. 590) ....Mozart
Quartet in G, Op. 18, No. 2..Beethoven

MAVERICK SUNDAY CONCERTS

Woodstock, N. Y.

CHAMBER MUSIC, 4 P. M. Phillip Fatt, clarinet; Harry Zaratsian, violist; Cynthia Eddy, 'cellist; Ilse Sass, pianist.
Sonata in F minor............Nardini
Trio in B flat, Op. 11......Beethoven
Sonata for Viola and Piano..Honegger
Trio in A minor ....Brahms

CHAUTAUQUA INSTITUTION

Chautauqua, N. Y.

TODAY, 3 P. M., Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra, Conductor, Walter Hendl; Patricia Berlin, mezzo-soprano.

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. Madama Butterfly.

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Der Rosenkavalier.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hendl; Earl Wild, pianist, All-Gershwin program.

THURSDAY, 8:30 P. M. Mary Judd, soprano; Brent Williams, tenor.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors and Humperdinck's Hansel and Gretel.

SATURDAY, 11 A. M. Student Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Edward Murphy.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hendl; Eloise Polk, pianist.

MUSIC MOUNTAIN

Falls Village, Conn.

TODAY, 4 P. M. Berkshire Quartet and four guest artists.
Septet ....Beethoven
Octet ....Schubert

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.
Beethoven program: Symphonies Nos. 1, 4 and 6.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. The New Music String Quartet.
Program of Beethoven string quartets: G, Op. 18, No. 2; E flat, Op. 127; A minor, Op. 132.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano; Arthur Schoep, tenor; Tanglewood Choir of Students trained by Hugh Ross.
Water Music Suite ....Handel
Symphony No. 4............Schumann
Prayers of Kierkegaard ....Barber
Symphony No. 4................Brahms

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Rudolf Serkin, pianist.

Howard S. Babbit

George Piatigorsky, soloist at the Berkshire Festival.

Beethoven program: Egmont Overture; Piano Concerto No. 5; Symphony No. 3.

SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch; Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, 'cellist.
Brahms program: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin and 'Cello; Symphony No. 1.

FOLK AND JAZZ CONCERT

NY Times 7/24

7/21

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Boston Symphony Opens Music Shed Series Friday

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year twelve concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine.

A feature of the Shed Series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the Orchestra).

There will be two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a.m. (July 23), for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood boxoffice for all Festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. 600. Programs and a calendar of the more than 25 events at the Berkshire Music Center, with information on how to join the Friend's Society, will be mailed on request.

NY Times 7/25/55

Music: Monteux Conducts

Leads Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in Demanding, Diversified Program

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 24—Pierre Monteux is a remarkable octogenarian. His powers of concentration seem to become stronger as he gets older. Conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood last night, he led a diversified, demanding program with the kind of tension and control given only to the finest maestros.

With a responsive ensemble like the Boston Symphony at his disposal, his performances had unremitting excitement, and it was not excitement for its own sake, but something that grew out of the logic of the music. Each piece he undertook was done in the style right for it, and on each Mr. Monteux managed to flash some special illumination.

●

The find of the evening was "The Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions, American composer who is on the Berkshire Music Center faculty this summer. This piece, which was written more than thirty years ago, is one of the most solid in the American repertory. It has power, atmosphere and more than a touch of profundity. It is not so difficult to absorb as some of Mr. Sessions' more recent works, and it ought to be on American symphonic programs more often.

The only drawback is that it requires enormous virtuosity from the instrumentalists and the kind of reliable musicianship from the conductor that Mr. Monteux could bring to it. The Boston Symphony rose to the occasion, playing with tremendous drive and with relish for the interesting colors and sonorities the composer imagined. As for Mr. Monteux, his conducting was masterly. The composer and the performers were recalled repeatedly.

Mr. Monteux began with a spacious and resounding performance of the Bach-Respighi Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor. Then came an enamoring reading of Beethoven's Second Symphony. And finally there was a broad-gauged interpretation of Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration," one of the most memorable versions of this work that this reviewer has ever encountered.

This afternoon Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, continuing with the Beethoven cycle, offered three of the master's symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth. Possibly this was too much of a good thing on one program for some listeners. For those who can take their Beethoven neat and in unlimited quantities, the three symphonies played in this order provide contrast. And the Fourth, often undervalued when compared with the mighty ones, had a chance to stand out.

●

Mr. Munch and the orchestra gave the three symphonies balanced, vigorous readings in which were that blend of earthiness and sublimity that make Beethoven what he is.

With almost 9,000 in the audience this afternoon, the three concerts in the Big Shed this week-end have played to about 25,000 persons. Three more week-ends and a lot of great music are to come.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 24, 1955.

SYMPHONY OFFERS TO PLAY IN SOVIET

Boston Orchestar Is 'Eager' to Aid in Eisenhower Plea to Lift Iron Curtain

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—The Boston Symphony Orchestra offered today to tour in the Soviet Union as a step toward implementing President Eisenhower's request in Geneva yesterday for lifting of the Iron Curtain.

The orchestra is planning a European trip in September, 1956. It also would be willing to play in the satellite countries.

After consulting with other officials of the Boston Symphony who are here at Tanglewood, Henry B. Cabot, president of the orchestra's trustees, issued this statement:

"We welcome the President's suggestions to help remove the Iron Curtain by a cultural and intellectual exchange with the Soviet Union. The Boston Symphony Orchestra is ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow."

As far as the records show, no American orchestra has ever visited Russia, either in Czarist days or since the Communists took over power. A few individual American musicians have appeared there, but virtually none since the "cold war" started.

Mr. Cabot disclosed that in the early years of World War II, when Serge Koussevitzky, Russian-born conductor, was head of the Boston Symphony, an invitation was sent to Moscow through the State Department to Eugen Mravinsky, Leningrad conductor, to be a guest leader in Boston.

Though Mr. Mravinsky cabled that he would be delighted to come, neither the Boston Symphony nor the United States received an official reply, and he did not come.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony since the late Mr. Koussevitzky's retirement in 1949, expressed enthuiasm about the plan to take the Boston Symphony to the Soviet Union.

Since foreign tours by modern symphony orchestras comprising more than a hundred men take a lot of arranging, the Boston officials feel that it would not be a moment too soon to start negotiations.

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony, will be touring in Europe this September. But it has a full schedule and could not be rerouted to Soviet cities without canceling engagements in other European capitals.

By a coincidence, an official of the International Exchange Program, which has been arranging the sending of American cultural units to foreign lands, arrived at Tanglewood today. Robert C. Schnitzer, executive secretary of the program sponsored by the American National Theatre and Academy, was here to confer with Thomas D. Perry Jr., the orchestra's manager, about next year's European trip.

Mr. Cabot said that should the Boston Symphony make the Soviet trip and should the Russians respond by sending an orchestra or ballet to the United States, the Boston Symphony would be glad to sponsor the performances in Boston.

Drunken Drivers Increased

SASKATOON, Sask. (Canadian Press)—Seventy-one Saskatchewan drivers lost their licenses during May for driving after drinking. The total is sixteen above the figure for the same month of last year.

[241]

New York Times
7/24

Music: Beethoven Heals

Violin Concerto Eases Heat at Tanglewood

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

Isaac Stern

LENOX, Mass., July 22—Night had fallen and the green earth was giving back some coolness when Isaac Stern and the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch were playing the slow movement of Beethoven's Violin Concerto at Tanglewood Friday night.

The combination could be called blessed—and symbolic. For the seraphic song of this music is healing enough to drive away the memories of an overheated day's discomforts. And that short-range objective surely was being achieved. But there was more; there was a spirit of affirmation abroad that would cling to one for many days to come.

•

That is the secret of Beethoven, and that secret is what makes him a sure source of strength to fall back on year after year. This summer the Berkshire Festival is placing its heaviest reliance on Beethoven. Friday's concert in the Music Shed, the first of the season in this auditorium open to the grass, trees and skies, signalized the arrival of the full Boston Symphony and the opening of the symphonic phase of the Beethoven cycle.

Persons who know their Beethoven thoroughly might cry out against another Beethoven cycle. Tanglewood has programs with some different things in store for them. By and large, however, Tanglewood is catering to the huge public whose affection for the titan is undiminished.

•

Mr. Stern's performance of the concerto seemed to be another step in his effort to reach to the heart of the great work and at the same time to do so in a fully personal way. It was an interpretation that tended to broader pacing than is usual, but this conception was made to stand up as valid under the curve and logic of the phrasing.

There may have been an impurity of tone here and there, and such things would be forgivable on the score of weather alone. But Mr. Stern was after bigger game than sensuous tone. He was after a moving, human conception. There were felicities of tone and phrase, all servants of an independent and musical mind.

Mr. Munch and his orchestra played their part of the concerto in the same spirit. There was breadth of approach and refinement of phrasing. It was a handsomely fused performance.

The all-Beethoven evening began with the "Coriolanus" Overture and ended with the electrical, Dionysiac Seventh Symphony. Mr. Munch and his orchestra caught its drive and propulsive power. This is music with an inner heat that places soaring temperatures in a more tolerable perspective. Or does no one believe that such perspectives are possible in the time of heat waves?

Tanglewood Vocalist Sings Tomorrow At Church Service

DALTON — A student from Tanglewood will sing tomorrow at the First Congregational Church. Miss Mary McKenzie of New York, a mezzo soprano, is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music in New York and was the recent winner of the vocalist award by the Federated Music Clubs of New York and area. She also is the winner of the Naumburg prize which entitles her to give a recital in Town Hall, New York. As a third honor she will receive a European tour as an award from Radio Station WHOM in New York.

Eagle 7/23

Roundup

A record-high goal of $350,000 was announced for this fall's Pittsfield United Fund drive by UCS President Hamilton M. Redman, who said the $8,000 increase over last year would provide urgently needed salary adjustments in social agencies that have been unable to find staff members at their present low pay scales . . . At Tanglewood, where the curtain went up this weekend on the first of 12 scheduled Boston Symphony concerts in the big Music Shed, it was announced that attendance during the preliminary two weeks

Eagle 7/23

WELL-BALANCED PROGRAM GIVEN AT TANGLEWOOD

Munch Conducts 3 Beethoven Symphonies Before Audience of 8700

By WILLARD M. CLARK

[illegible] 7/25

Tanglewood, July 24—This has been an afternoon of pleasant listening. The first Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the great shed drew an audience of 8700 people who found the broad grounds of Tanglewood as inviting as the seats in the shed. It seems to us that in programming three Beethoven symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth, that Charles Munch strove for a program that was well balanced and entertaining, rather than to show the so-called three styles of Beethoven.

Appealing Moments

What he did was to choose three listenable symphonies, each individual in conception; each a contrast to the other. There is little need at this time to dwell on the structural content of these symphonies or their inner meanings. They are old stories to the habituees of Tanglewood.

Opening with the "Symphony No. 1 in C Major," Munch fully realized its Haydnesque influence as well as the inventiveness and daring of the composer. There were many appealing moments in his reading of this fresh and vital work, particularly the charm of the minuet and the unexpected finale with its few adagio passages and its exciting allegro.

Of the nine symphonies of Beethoven, it seems to us that the fourth symphony in B-flat major is the most perfect in form and content of them all. As personal as any he wrote, this is music of the utmost purity, always fluent and adroit. It was evident that Munch finds great delight in this work, for he read it with great care as to detail and the orchestral response was very fine. Particularly affecting was the adagio which moved its dreaming course, quietly and without any great sonorities, in spite of this one finds in it joy, lamentation and ecstasy.

We have seldom noted a more rapt audience. Practically everyone was on time and there was a sense of satisfaction in the air. After intermission, came the sixth symphony in F major, known as the "Pastorale." In this overwrought world the "Pastorale" seems strangely out of place. The sylvan scenes which Beethoven evokes seem unreal, but it is good to hear a work so wholesome, unpretentious and warm. One can enjoy the bits of boisterous humor which contrast so effectively those moments of meditation and serenity. Munch provided a quiet, delightful reading of the symphony and the audience was enchanted. The applause at the close of the concert was a tribute to the music and the music-makers.

Premiere of Contata

The second week of the shed concerts begins Friday night when Charles Munch will open the program with a suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the Harty arrangement. Schumann's "Symphony No. 4 and Brams' Symphony No. 4 will be played. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Cantata" the prayers of Kierkegaard, with Leontyne Price as soprano soloist.

Due to indisposition, Gregor Piatagorsky, cellist will be unable to appear with Isaac Stern, violinist, in the Brahms concerto for violin and cello. In place of that work, Stern will appear as soloist in the Brahms "Concerto for Violin in D Major."

Herald Tribune
7/25

Boston Orchestra Closes Week End at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 24.—Proceeding on the debatable theory that rural breezes and surroundings naturally whet the appetite for an all-Beethoven diet, the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon concluded its first week end of concerts in Tanglewood's mammoth Music Shed with a concert devoted exclusively to Beethoven, its second in three days.

Three symphonies, the First, Fourth and Sixth, all under the direction of Charles Munch, were the occasion's filling fare and the trio's progress went unmarred by incident in any form.

As an event given over to the less dramatic, less clamorous of Beethoven's symphonies, Mr. Munch was well advised to temper his usual intensity with a dab of relaxation. The result, though far from perfect, was at any rate commendable, each work emerging loose-limbed and effortless.

Uneven Concert

The Fourth Symphony, in particular, shone with a bright inner radiance that everywhere served to illuminate its sweet calm and generous poise. The fact is that Mr. Munch has a way with slow movements, fast ones having a tendency to carry him into extremities of pace and emphasis. But given a movement limpid and serene, the conductor seemingly melts into a state of controlled revery that results in an orchestral response expansive yet gentle.

So it was also with the slower sections of the First and Sixth Symphonies, both of which turned rather lumpy in their Allegros. Indeed, the Sixth, as a whole, was little brushed with color or poetry, and its rather leaden, unresilient reading proved absolute death to the pastoral fancy of the work. Again, however, isolated passages of repose broke through that quite swept out of mind the irregularities which had preceded them. It was, in all, an uneven concert, by turns richly rewarding and deeply disturbing. But this is a condition to most of Mr. Munch's Beethoven performances. In time one comes to accept it.

On Saturday night Pierre Monteux returned to the Tanglewood podium for the first time this season in a varied program designed to satisfy sensibilities of all kinds. Opening with the Respighi arrangement of Bach's Passacaglia and Double Fugue in C minor, the conductor then continued with Beethoven's Second Symphony, Roger Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers" and Richard Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." It was an evening of solid, surging music making, distinguished by no especial refinements, but rollicking all the same.

Orchestral Dragon

Respighi's transcription of the Passacaglia and Fugue, as is generally known, has nothing whatsoever to do with Bach. It is a turgid, inflated and bombastic show piece devised to reveal Respighi's glowing orchestral showmanship at the expense of Bach's immense and ingenious contrapuntal craft. At best, the work is a heavily lugubrious one, since its constant attentiveness to the bass—necessitated by the repetitions of the theme—turns it into a kind of sluggish orchestral dragon beating its tail in three-quarter time. And Mr. Monteux did not hesitate to make it roar and whinny in precisely the manner suggested by the arranger's demands.

As a Frenchman, it is the conductor's birthright to regard Beethoven's Second for what it is—a sunny, happy-go-lucky symphony bathed in the warmth of the composer's early maturity. Germans, on the other hand, frequently take the work to represent an augury of Beethoven's impending misfortunes and they read it for signs of gloom and despair. Not so Monteux; to him it is a dance project, full of life and lilt and playfulness. Its tunes he makes crisp and crackling, its rhythms bouncy and full of air. Saturday night Beethoven's Second gave up its frown for a smile.

Sessions, Early Work

"The Black Maskers" of Mr. Sessions, who is currently teaching composition at Tanglewood, is an early work and in all probability his most popular one. Conceived as incidental music for a grisly, metaphysical play by Leonid Andreyeff, the score, as befits the text, is sardonic, macabre and bleak as an untended grave. Also it is a virtuoso vehicle, crammed with wild, ferocious sounds that whistle with high velocity and keep an orchestra almost frantic in search of cues and assorted conductor's aids. The Boston Symphony, however, having played the "Maskers" some seven times this year, dispatched the work in short order and easily made of it the eery display piece it was clearly meant to be.

The evening came to an end—before an audience of 8,543—with a tumultuous reading of Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." And while Mr. Monteux was at his firmest in exploring the hidden urgencies of the slow, quiet sections, he still managed to make the tone poem's forte passages bellow like the clap of doom.

---

f chamber music at the Theater-Concert Hall again broke all records this year, with a total turnout of 18,180, against 16,650 a year ago . . . At Onota Lake, the newly organized Pittsfield Boating Club which fought unsuccesfully against

Eagle; 7/23/55

Tanglewood Tales

BSO President At Weekend Concerts

Weekend guests at the opening of the Music Shed concerts at Tanglewood include Henry B. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Cabot, of Boston; Edward A. Taft, trustee of the Boston Symphony, of Boston; cellist Leonard Rose; pianist Eugene Istomin; Judge John M. Harlan of the Supreme Court; Michael T. Kelleher, trustee of the Boston Symphony, and Mrs. Kelleher, of Boston; pianist Vera Franceschi, a soloist with Pierre Monteux on last summer's Berkshire Festival concerts; Robert Schnitzer, of the American National Theater and Academy, and Mrs. Schnitzer, of New York; Kenneth Holland, president of the American division of exchange students of the Institute of International Education, Fulbright Committee; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Judd, of Cannonsville, N.Y.

Sessions Moderator For Forum Tomorrow

Composer Roger Sessions will be the moderator for the composers' forum to be held under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center at the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow night at 8:30.

The program follows:

Music for 2 Horns,
Michael Sahl, New York, N.Y.
Ralph Pottle, Hammond, Ala., French Horn.
David Allen, Medford, French horn.
4 Songs for Soprano,
Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg, Mo.
On poems by Dorothy Diemer Hendry.
October Wind (in New York).
Realization.
Should Our Breathing Cease Tomorrow.
To a Gypsy.
Mary Jane Paul, Urbana, Ill., soprano.
Four Pieces for Piano,
Elaine Radoff, Bronx, N.Y.
Susan Pearlman, New York, N.Y., piano.
Four Songs (text: e. e. cummings),
Robert Dennis, University City, Mo.
a wind has blown . . .
i have found . . .
my uncle daniel . . .
the sky was . . .
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Intermission.
Excerpts from an opera: A Family Sunday,
Leonard Sarason, Rego Park, Long Island, N.Y.
Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind., soprano.
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Lee Goebel, San Diego, Calif., mezzo.
Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio, tenor.
Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif., baritone.
Dave Beckwitt, Bound Brook, N.J., baritone.
Leonard Sarason, piano.
Libretto by James Yaffe.
Sonata for Violin and Piano,
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan
Allegro; allegro molto.
Adagio.
Allegro ma non troppo.
Stanley Dombrowski, Export, Pa., violin.
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan, piano.

* * *

Opera Scenes Tuesday Night

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall Tuesday evening at 8:30.

The program follows:

The Magic Flute — Mozart
Act III, Scene I.
Pamina — Saramae Endich, New York
Three Spirits, Virginia Babikian, Houston Tex.; Gwendolyn Belle, St. Louis, Mo.; Mary MacKenzie, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Don Giovanni — Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Don Giovanni, Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Zerlina — Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Cosi Fan Tutte — Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Fiordiligi — Claire Watson, Rochester, N.Y.
Drabella — Regina Sarfaty, New York, N.Y.
The Barber of Seville — Rossini
Scenes from Act II.
Bartolo — Malcolm Bernstein, Baltimore, Md.
Count Almaviva, Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio
Rosina, Susana Naidich, Buenos Aires, Argentina
Figaro — Stephen Harbachick, Springfield
Basilio — McHenry Boatwright, Boston
Hansel and Gretel — Humperdinck
Scene from Act I.
Gretel, Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio
Hansel — Regina Sarfaty, New York
Carmen — Bizet
Quintet from Act II.
Frasquita, Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind.
Dancairo — Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Remendado — Thomas Cole, Detroit, Mich.
Carmen, Mary MacKenzie, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Mercedes, Lee Goebel, San Diego City, Calif.
Intermission.
Le Boheme — Puccini
Act I.
Rodolfo — Howell Zulick, Springfield, Pa.
Marcello — Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Collins — Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Schaunard — Robert Kerns, Utica, Mich.
Benoit — Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif.
Mimi — Virginia Babikian, Houston, Tex.
Act IV.
Rodolfo — Lynn Detwiler, Altoona, Pa.
Marcello — Oscar McLullough, Salsbury, N.C.
Schaunard — Stephen Harbachick, New York
Colline — Robert Kirkham, Memphis, Tenn.
Musetta — Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Mimi — Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio

~~Bos. Post~~ 7/24

At Tanglewood

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will be Serge Koussevitzky Memorial concert to be presented at Tanglewood Friday evening, Aug. 5. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the performance.

B.E. Eagle
7/25

Tourist Influx Brings Appeal For Rooms

The Chamber of Commerce today urged area residents who have tourist accommodations to register with the Chamber's information booth on South Street.

James H. Lucas, executive director of the Chamber, said the organization ran completely out of listed housing facilities early Saturday evening.

The Chamber's information booth on South Street placed 378 tourists Friday and Saturday in addition to 100 advance reservations, according to Mr. Lucas.

John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said his office also had a near record number of calls Friday in addition to heavy advance reservations.

Mr. Lucas estimated that more than 3,000 visitors were placed in hotels, inns, motels and tourists homes in the Pittsfield area over the weekend. He said he anticipates the same heavy demand for the next three Tanglewood weekends.

Mr. Lucas asked persons who have tourist facilities and are not registered with the Chamber to call the information booth and give details of what they have available. He said there is a small registration fee.

Bernstein to Lead Symphony of Air

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Symphony of the Air in a subscription series of six concerts in Carnegie Hall during the 1955-'56 season, it was announced yesterday by the former NBC Symphony. The dates are Wednesday, Nov. 9; Tuesday, Dec. 13; Fridays, Jan. 6 and Feb. 3, and Wednesdays, March 7 and April 18.

These will be next season's only conducting engagements for Mr. Bernstein, who becomes the orchestra's first conductor for a full season since its separation from the National Broadcasting Company last year. He directed the Symphony of the Air in three programs last season.

The conductor, who is teaching and directing concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will devote much of his time in the next twelve months to composition, including an original Broadway production, a work to commemorate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's seventy-fifth anniversary and, with Lillian Hellman, an operetta based on Voltaire's "Candide."

H-T/ 7/26

Music

First Shed Concert Scores Resounding Hit

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Charles Munch

THE FIRST concert of the Tanglewood season in the Music Shed was played last night by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The first two weeks of the schedule had been played in the theater-concert hall by an orchestra of chamber dimensions. A program entirely devoted to Beethoven included the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist and, to begin, the "Cariolan" overture, and, to close, the seventh symphony.

Munch was in an expansive mood and asked the orchestra to release all stops. They responded with a vigor and power that carried the huge audience to peaks of enthusiasm even though a few of the decibels at times were slightly in excess of what was required.

* * *

STERN'S Beethoven was a vastly changed and improved one from the performance he gave of the same work a few years ago. This was a free and natural, but deeply considered, rendition, the work of a life-time of study, of polishing and refining, until, in its way, it was an example and memory long to retain. He had simplified many of the details which often are made intricate; he made many of the statements of the themes plain and clear which are often given a more obscure content, and, above all, he gave shape to the concerto as a whole rather than focusing on any one episode or phrase.

* * *

STERN'S TONE was warm and tense. It was not ever passionate, but it was beautifully adjusted to the matter at hand. Munch, soon after the opening of the concerto, gave him excellent and subdued support and Stern felt free to indulge in the pathos of certain sections by using a wonderfully soft tone which carried through for some of the most effective playing of the evening. His bow was incredibly in control. In the G major theme of the slow movement he inflected this great, inspired moment of Beethoven with a sustained line and restrained fervor that was the mark of a master.

The Joachim cadenza in the first movement had dramatic eloquence, not to speak of technical prowness. It was a highly individual expression on the loftiest artistic plane.

* * *

THE AUDIENCE would not leave at the conclusion of the symphony but recalled Munch time after time. He always motioned to the orchestra to rise and share with him the frenzied applause tendered him. The performance had been on the boisterous side. True, the rhythmic patterns of all four movements of this symphony excite that kind of a reaction when played by so superb an orchestra as is the Boston, but there was a tendency last night to rely on the spirit of the moment, which can certainly give a lift to any performance, rather than on pre-arranged and prepared plans.

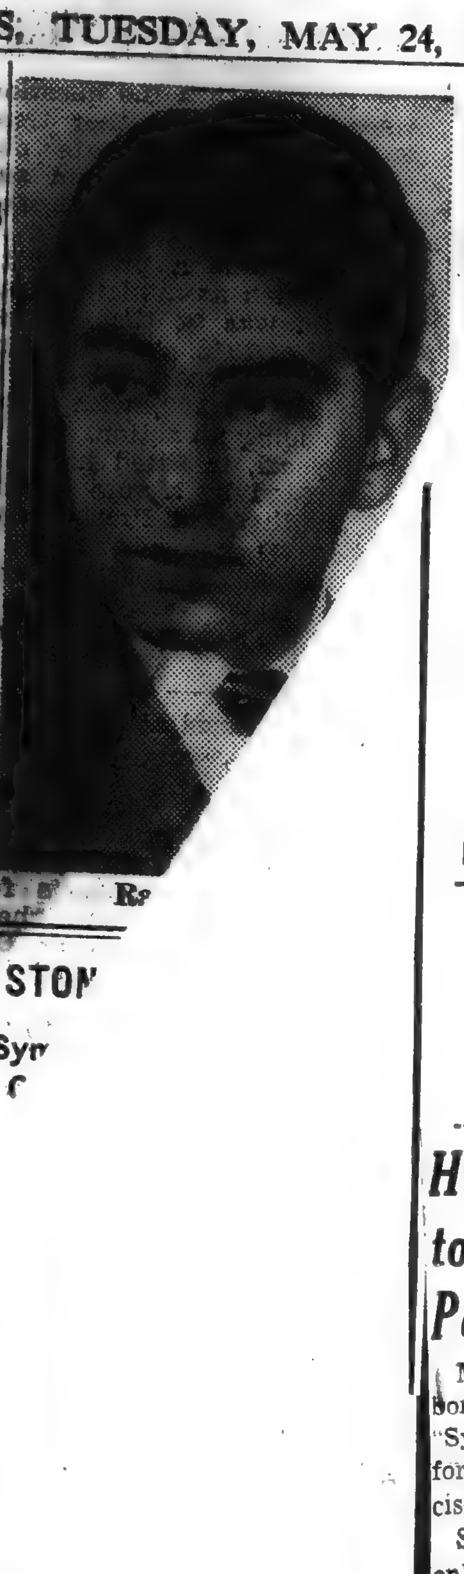
* * *

THE BEST sonority of the evening was reached in the second movement of the symphony. The lower voices had a rich resonance at the outset and as the other voices were added, the accumulation of tone grew in solidity as it was more firmly knit in texture in the succeeding variations. The scherzo as a virtuoso performance, the segments interlocking with easy perfection and clean contrasts. The winds got out of hand in the finale and covered the strings more than necessary, but Munch whipped them on, calling for more and more.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1955.

TEXAN, 22, TAKES B.M.I. MUSIC PRIZE

Ramiro Cortes Wins $2,000 Student Composers Award for Chamber Group Work



Ra

Ramiro Cortes, 22-year-old composer of Dallas, Tex., was named winner yesterday of the $2,000 first prize in the annual Student Composers Radio Awards sponsored by Broadcast Music, Inc.

Mr. Cortes, who received the $1,000 Gershwin Prize earlier this year, won the B.M.I. competition for his "Night Music," a work for chamber orchestra. He is studying at the University of Southern California.

Roland Trogan, 22 years old, of Saginaw, Mich., received $1,500 for his opera "The Hat Man." He is a student at the University of Michigan.

Jack S. Gottlieb of New Rochelle, N.Y., a student at Brandeis University, won a prize of $1,000 for a string quartet.

Awards of $750 each went to Arno Safran, 23, of New York, a student at the Hartt College of Music, for his "Music for Orchestra," and to David M. Epstein of Woodmere, N.J., a student at Princeton University, for his Trio for Violin, Piano and 'Cello.

Edwin A. Freeman, 27, of Clemson, S.C., a student at Louisiana State University, won $500 for his orchestral work, "Fantasy on a Ground."

Awards of $250 each were made to Donald Jenni, 17, of Milwaukee; David Ward-Steinman, 19, of Alexandria, La.; Genevieve Chinn, 20, of Malba, Queens and John Harbison, 17, of Princeton, N.J.

Judges for the contest were William Schuman, Earl V. Moore, Henry Cowell, Claude Champagne, Norman Dello Joio, Camarata, Goddard Lieberson, Vincent Perichetti, Oliver Daniel, Gustave Reese, Walter Hinrichson, Ulysses Kay, Peggy Glanville-Hicks, Colin McPhee and Robert Kurka.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Eve.)
Circ. D. 151,303

MAY 23 1955

Hub-Born Composer to Hear Symphony Performed at Smith

Michael D. Sahl, 20, Boston-born composer, will hear his "Symphony Number 1 in E", performed at commencement exercises at Smith College, June 5.

Sahl, a composer of music since only 8 years old, is a senior at Amherst College where he is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He has just been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst and a residence fellowship by Harvard for study at the graduate school of Arts and Sciences. Last Summer he won an award for composition at the Berkshire Music Center and won a scholarship at the advanced class at Tanglewood.

Now a resident of New York city, Sahl is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sahl. He is the grandson for Mr. and Mrs. Eli F. Zallinger of Dorchester and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sahl of Somerville.

[243]

Tanglewood Tales

BSO President At Weekend Concerts

Weekend guests at the opening of the Music Shed concerts at Tanglewood include Henry B. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Cabot, of Boston; Edward A. Taft, trustee of the Boston Symphony, of Boston; cellist Leonard Rose; pianist Eugene Istomin; Judge John M. Harlan of the Supreme Court; Michael T. Kelleher, trustee of the Boston Symphony, and Mrs. Kelleher, of Boston; pianist Vera Franceschi, a soloist with Pierre Monteux on last summer's Berkshire Festival concerts; Robert Schnitzer, of the American National Theater and Academy, and Mrs. Schnitzer, of New York; Kenneth Holland, president of the American division of exchange students of the Institute of International Education, Fulbright Committee; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Judd, of Cannonsville, N.Y.

Sessions Moderator For Forum Tomorrow

Composer Roger Sessions will be the moderator for the composers' forum to be held under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center at the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow night at 8:30.

The program follows:

Music for 2 Horns,
Michael Sahl, New York, N.Y.
Ralph Pottle, Hammond, Ala., French Horn.
David Allen, Medford, French horn.
4 Songs for Soprano,
Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg, Mo.
On poems by Dorothy Diemer Hendry.
October Wind (in New York).
Realization.
Should Our Breathing Cease Tomorrow.
To a Gypsy.
Mary Jane Paul, Urbana, Ill., soprano.
Four Pieces for Piano,
Elaine Radoff, Bronx, N.Y.
Susan Pearlman, New York, N.Y., piano.
Four Songs (text: e. e. cummings),
Robert Dennis, University City, Mo.
a wind has blown . . .
i have found . . .
my uncle daniel . . .
the sky was . . .
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Intermission.
Excerpts from an opera: A Family Sunday,
Leonard Sarason, Rego Park, Long Island, N.Y.
Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind., soprano.
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Lee Goebel, San Diego, Calif., mezzo.
Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio, tenor.
Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif., baritone.
Dave Beckwitt, Bound Brook, N.J., baritone.
Leonard Sarason, piano.
Libretto by James Yaffe.
Sonata for Violin and Piano,
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan
Allegro; allegro molto.
Adagio.
Allegro ma non troppo.
Staney Dombrowski, Export, Pa., violin.
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan, piano.

* * *

Opera Scenes Tuesday Night

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall Tuesday evening at 8:30.

The program follows:

The Magic Flute — Mozart
Act III, Scene I.
Pamina — Saramae Endich, New York
Three Spirits, Virginia Babikian, Houston Tex.; Gwendolyn Belle, St. Louis, Mo.; Mary MacKenzie, Cronton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Don Giovanni — Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Don Giovanni, Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Zerlina — Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Cosi Fan Tutte — Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Fiordiligi — Claire Watson, Rochester, N.Y.
Drabella — Regina Sarfaty, New York, N.Y.
The Barber of Seville — Rossini
Scenes from Act II.
Bartolo — Malcolm Bernstein, Baltimore, Md.
Count Almaviva, Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio
Rosina, Susana Naidich, Buenos Aires, Argentina
Figaro — Stephen Harbachick, Springfield
Basilio — McHenry Boatwright, Boston
Hansel and Gretel — Humperdinck
Scene from Act I.
Gretel, Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio
Hansel — Regina Sarfaty, New York
Carmen — Bizet
Quintet from Act II.
Frasquita, Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind.
Dancairo — Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Remendado — Thomas Cole, Detroit, Mich.
Carmen, Mary MacKenzie, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Mercedes, Lee Goebel, San Diego City, Calif.
Intermission.
Le Boheme — Puccini
Act I.
Rodolfo — Howell Zulick, Springfield, Pa.
Marcello — Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Collins — Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Schaunard — Robert Kerns, Utica, Mich.
Benoit — Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif.
Mimi — Virginia Babikian, Houston, Tex.
Act IV.
Rodolfo — Lynn Detwiler, Altoona, Pa.
Marcello — Oscar McLullough, Saisbury, N.C.
Schaunard — Stephen Harbachick, New York
Colline — Robert Kirkham, Memphis, Tenn
Musetta — Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Mimi — Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio

Eagle; 7/23/55

Music

First Shed Concert Scores Resounding Hit

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the Tanglewood season in the Music Shed was played last night by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The first two weeks of the schedule had been played in the theater-concert hall by an orchestra of chamber dimensions. A program entirely devoted to Beethoven included the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist and, to begin, the "Cariolan" overture, and, to close, the seventh symphony.

Munch was in an expansive mood and asked the orchestra to release all stops. They responded with a vigor and power that carried the huge audience to peaks of enthusiasm even though a few of the decibels at times were slightly in excess of what was required.

* * *

STERN'S Beethoven was a vastly changed and improved one from the performance he gave of the same work a few years ago. This was a free and natural, but deeply considered, rendition, the work of a life-time of study, of polishing and refining, until, in its way, it was an example and memory long to retain. He had simplified many of the details which often are made intricate; he made many of the statements of the themes plain and clear which are often given a more obscure content, and, above all, he gave shape to the concerto as a whole rather than focusing on any one episode or phrase.

* * *

STERN'S TONE was warm and tense. It was not ever passionate, but it was beautifully adjusted to the matter at hand. Munch, soon after the opening of the concerto, gave him excellent and subdued support and Stern felt free to indulge in the pathos of certain sections by using a wonderfully soft tone which carried through for some of the most effective playing of the evening. His bow was incredibly in control. In the G major theme of the slow movement he inflected this great, inspired moment of Beethoven with a sustained line and restrained fervor that was the mark of a master.

Charles Munch

The Joachim cadenza in the first movement had dramatic eloquence, not to speak of technical prowness. It was a highly individual expression on the loftiest artistic plane.

* * *

THE AUDIENCE would not leave at the conclusion of the symphony but recalled Munch time after time. He always motioned to the orchestra to rise and share with him the frenzied applause tendered him. The performance had been on the boisterous side. True, the rhythmic patterns of all four movements of this symphony excite that kind of a reaction when played by so superb an orchestra as is the Boston, but there was a tendency last night to rely on the spirit of the moment, which can certainly give a lift to any performance, rather than on pre-arranged and prepared plans.

* * *

THE BEST sonority of the evening was reached in the second movement of the symphony. The lower voices had a rich resonance at the outset and as the other voices were added, the accumulation of tone grew in solidity as it was more firmly knit in texture in the succeeding variations. The scherzo as a virtuoso performance, the segments interlocking with easy perfection and clean contrasts. The winds got out of hand in the finale and covered the strings more than necessary, but Munch whipped them on, calling for more and more.

~~Bos. Post~~ 7/24

At Tanglewood

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will be Serge Koussevitzky Memorial concert to be presented at Tanglewood Friday evening, Aug. 5. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the performance.

B.E. Eagle
7/25

Tourist Influx Brings Appeal For Rooms

The Chamber of Commerce today urged area residents who have tourist accommodations to register with the Chamber's information booth on South Street.

James H. Lucas, executive director of the Chamber, said the organization ran completely out of listed housing facilities early Saturday evening.

The Chamber's information booth on South Street placed 378 tourists Friday and Saturday in addition to 100 advance reservations, according to Mr. Lucas.

John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said his office also had a near record number of calls Friday in addition to heavy advance reservations.

Mr. Lucas estimated that more than 3,000 visitors were placed in hotels, inns, motels and tourists homes in the Pittsfield area over the weekend. He said he anticipates the same heavy demand for the next three Tanglewood weekends.

Mr. Lucas asked persons who have tourist facilities and are not registered with the Chamber to call the information booth and give details of what they have available. He said there is a small registration fee.

Bernstein to Lead Symphony of Air

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Symphony of the Air in a subscription series of six concerts in Carnegie Hall during the 1955-'56 season, it was announced yesterday by the former NBC Symphony. The dates are Wednesday, Nov. 9; Tuesday, Dec. 13; Fridays, Jan. 6 and Feb. 3, and Wednesdays, March 7 and April 18.

These will be next season's only conducting engagements for Mr. Bernstein, who becomes the orchestra's first conductor for a full season since its separation from the National Broadcasting Company last year. He directed the Symphony of the Air in three programs last season.

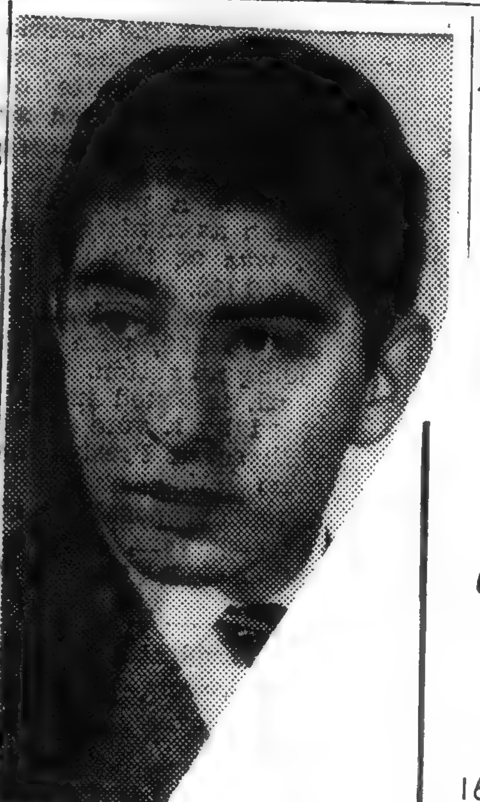
The conductor, who is teaching and directing concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will devote much of his time in the next twelve months to composition, including an original Broadway production, a work to commemorate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's seventy-fifth anniversary and, with Lillian Hellman, an operetta based on Voltaire's "Candide."

H-T / 7/26

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1955.

TEXAN, 22, TAKES B.M.I. MUSIC PRIZE

Ramiro Cortes Wins $2,000 Student Composers Award for Chamber Group Work



Ra

Ramiro Cortes, 22-year-old composer of Dallas, Tex., was named winner yesterday of the $2,000 first prize in the annual Student Composers Radio Awards sponsored by Broadcast Music, Inc.

Mr. Cortes, who received the $1,000 Gershwin Prize earlier this year, won the B. M. I. competition for his "Night Music," a work for chamber orchestra. He is studying at the University of Southern California.

Roland Trogan, 22 years old, of Saginaw, Mich., received $1,500 for his opera "The Hat Man." He is a student at the University of Michigan.

Jack S. Gottlieb of New Rochelle, N. Y., a student at Brandeis University, won a prize of $1,000 for a string quartet.

Awards of $750 each went to Arno Safran, 23, of New York, a student at the Hartt College of Music, for his "Music for Orchestra," and to David M. Epstein of Woodmere, N. J., a student at Princeton University, for his Trio for Violin, Piano and 'Cello.

Edwin A. Freeman, 27, of Clemson, S. C., a student at Louisiana State University, won $500 for his orchestral work, "Fantasy on a Ground."

Awards of $250 each were made to Donald Jenni, 17, of Milwaukee; David Ward-Steinman, 19, of Alexandria, La.; Genevieve Chinn, 20, of Malba, Queens and John Harbison, 17, of Princeton, N. J.

Judges for the contest were William Schuman, Earl V. Moore, Henry Cowell, Claude Champagne, Norman Dello Joio, Camarata, Goddard Lieberson, Vincent Perichetti, Oliver Daniel, Gusta ve Reese, Walter Hinrichson, Ulysses Kay, Peggy Glanville-Hicks, Colin McPhee and Robert Kurka.

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Eve.)
Circ. D. 151,303

MAY 23 1955

Hub-Born Composer to Hear Symphony Performed at Smith

Michael D. Sahl, 20, Boston-born composer, will hear his Symphony Number 1 in E", performed at commencement exercises at Smith College, June 5.

Sahl, a composer of music since only 8 years old, is a senior at Amherst College where he is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He has just been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst and a residence fellowship by Harvard for study at the graduate school of Arts and Sciences. Last Summer he won an award for composition at the Berkshire Music Center and won a scholarship at the advanced class at Tanglewood.

Now a resident of New York city, Sahl is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sahl. He is the grandson for Mr. and Mrs. Eli F. Zallinger of Dorchester and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sahl of Somerville.

THE BETHLEHEM GLOBE-TIMES—WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1955

Women's News

Broadway Opera Singer To Appear In Musicale

Two former students at the Hungarian Academy of Music in Budapest will combine their talents in presenting the Bethlehem Friends of Music annual spring musicale tomorrow night.

They are Miss Catherine Akos of Toronto, Can., mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. Louis Martin of Bethlehem, who will play piano accompaniment. Although both are natives of Budapest and studied at the same school, they met for the first time two weeks ago.

Tomorrow night's recital will be one of the first public appearances Miss Akos has made since she sang one of the six principal roles in Gian - Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Saint of Bleecker Street."

"The Saint" concluded a four-month run on Broadway last month. This week Menotti was awarded a Pulitzer prize for his score and libretto.

Menotti selected Miss Akos for the cast of his opera after he heard her sing last summer in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. She voices great admiration for the Italian - born composer - director, describing him "as like no other director I've ever worked with."

Miss Adkos will sing her original role when the complete opera is to be televised Sunday, May 15, she said today. She also plans to tour in "The Saint" in July in this country and in Europe when Menotti will take the original cast there next fall for bookings in several counties.

This summer she will return to Tanglewood to appear as a soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony to be directed by Charles Munsch.

The Hungarian - born soprano made her debut with the Budapest Opera Co. After several years she was invited to join the Bucharest Opera. In 1948 she went to Paris to perform on the French national radio network.

Two years ago Miss Akos, her furrier husband and their young son moved to Toronto. Since then she has appeared in the Royal Conservatory Opera Festival and sings frequently over the Canadian Broadcasting Co.

Although she misses her family, Miss Adkos said she is pursuing her career with the enthusiastic approval of her husband. But the separation has not been an extended one, because she manages to get home for brief visits at least every six weeks.

Miss Akos arrived in Bethlehem Monday evening and is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin, 27 E. Church St. Since then she and Mrs. Martin have been rehearsing for the recital they will present at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow at the YWCA.

The program:

"O del mio dolce," Gluck; "Se tu m'ami," Pergolesi; "Frauenliebe and Leben," Schumann; "Stimme der Mutter" and "Immer Wieder," Felix Wolfes; "El Pano moruno," "Seguidilla" and "Jota," Manuel de Falla; Hungarian folk songs by Bela Bartok and Zoltan Kodaly; arias from Mozart's "Figaro," Bizet's "Carmen" and Verdi's "Don Carlos."

MISS CATHERINE AKOS, mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. Louis Martin, pianist, rehearse for the program they will present tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. at the YWCA. The recital is the annual spring musicale of the Bethlehem Friends of Music. Miss Akos, who sang in Menotti's Broadway opera, "The Saint of Bleecker Street," is shown here with Mrs. Martin in the latter's home at 27 E. Church St. (Globe-Times Photo)

---

* * *

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood," Lenox, will move into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music in mid week with the music of Beethoven. This chamber music program of three quartets, performed by the New Music Quartet, will be presented July 27 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Next weekend, in the great Music Shed, two of the three weekend concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony. These will be Friday and Saturday nights, July 29-30. On Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux will make the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

The Friday night program will comprise orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performance last winter by the Boston Symphony. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 in the Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's music school, has the principal solo role. Miss Price in private life is Mrs. William Warfield, wife of the noted American baritone. Other solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo - soprano. The Tanglewood Choir, to assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, this group comprising 60 voices from the choral department and the associate division of the opera department.

LEONTYNE PRICE

The third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival under Director Munch, is set for next Saturday night. Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist, will come from his Vermont home for his first appearance in the Music Shed, playing the "Emperor" Concerto with orchestra. Other numbers: The Overture to "Egmont" and the Third ("Eroica") Symphony. The Sunday program, July 31, to be conducted by Director Monteux, is all-Brahms with Isaac Stern, violinist and Gregor Piatigorsky playing the Concerto for Violin and Cello. The program also will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor.

Announced as a "bonus" for Festival patrons the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra starts at 10 o'clock on July 30. A nominal charge benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Last night, Pierre Monteux led the Orchestra in an orchestral program which included the Roger Sessions' Second Symphony in D Major. This afternoon's concert, Charles Munch conducting, will comprise the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale") symphonies of Beethoven.

Syracuse
H-American
7/24 Sunday

... world peace.

Winsted Citizen 7/22

FIRST CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD BY BOSTON GROUP

The 1955 Berkshire festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight, from the intimate theatre-concert hall to the great music shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston symphony orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the "Seventh Symphony." This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the shed by the full Boston symphony orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four weekends of the festival, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 129,925, for an average of 9,197 or one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000) the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawn under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. The advance sale for this season's shed concerts indicates that the all-time attendance mark set last season will be shattered this year.

Mr. Stern tonight will make his second of three appearances at this season's festival.

ANNUAL BENEFIT FOR BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire music center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston symphony orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6,000 seat music shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood on Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now until July 30, conducting the art commission pop concerts in San Francisco's civic auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami beach pops concerts in Florida Aug. 7, will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert, Aug. 14, returning immediately to Boston to conduct the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.

---

was when you met me on the street yesterday, did you?"

"No, who were you?"

TV

Each summer we at The Citizen office receive a number of calls from folks asking for information as to the various events going on at Tanglewood up in Stockbridge, Mass., and we are pleased to be able to furnish what we can about them. We have a rather complete schedule of the concerts to be given through the end of August, this having been prepared by the Berkshire Eagle in Pittsfield, and we'll be pleased to pass any information along to folks who wish to call.

Eagle; 7/23/55

Tanglewood Tales

BSO President At Weekend Concerts

Weekend guests at the opening of the Music Shed concerts at Tanglewood include Henry B. Cabot, president of the Board of Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Cabot, of Boston; Edward A. Taft, trustee of the Boston Symphony, of Boston; cellist Leonard Rose; pianist Eugene Istomin; Judge John M. Harlan of the Supreme Court; Michael T. Kelleher, trustee of the Boston Symphony, and Mrs. Kelleher, of Boston; pianist Vera Franceschi, a soloist with Pierre Monteux on last summer's Berkshire Festival concerts; Robert Schnitzer, of the American National Theater and Academy, and Mrs. Schnitzer, of New York; Kenneth Holland, president of the American division of exchange students of the Institute of International Education, Fulbright Committee; and George E. Judd, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Judd, of Cannonsville, N.Y.

Sessions Moderator For Forum Tomorrow

Composer Roger Sessions will be the moderator for the composers' forum to be held under the supervision of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center at the Chamber Music Hall tomorrow night at 8:30.

The program follows:

Music for 2 Horns,
Michael Sahl, New York, N.Y.
Ralph Pottle, Hammond, Ala., French Horn.
David Allen, Medford, French horn.
4 Songs for Soprano,
Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg, Mo.
On poems by Dorothy Diemer Hendry.
October Wind (in New York).
Realization.
Should Our Breathing Cease Tomorrow.
To a Gypsy.
Mary Jane Paul, Urbana, Ill., soprano.
Four Pieces for Piano,
Elaine Radoff, Bronx, N.Y.
Susan Pearlman, New York, N.Y., piano.
Four Songs (text: e. e. cummings),
Robert Dennis, University City, Mo.
a wind has blown . . .
i have found . . .
my uncle daniel . . .
the sky was . . .
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Intermission.
Excerpts from an opera: A Family Sunday,
Leonard Sarason, Rego Park, Long Island, N.Y.
Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind., soprano.
Adele Milhendler, Lynn, soprano.
Lee Goebel, San Diego, Calif., mezzo.
Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio, tenor.
Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif., baritone.
Dave Beckwitt, Bound Brook, N.J., baritone.
Leonard Sarason, piano.
Libretto by James Yaffe.
Sonata for Violin and Piano,
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan
Allegro; allegro molto.
Adagio.
Allegro ma non troppo.
Staney Dombrowski, Export, Pa., violin.
Tossi Ichiyanagi, Tokyo, Japan, piano.

* * *

Opera Scenes Tuesday Night

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall Tuesday evening at 8:30.

The program follows:

The Magic Flute Mozart
Act III, Scene I.
Pamina Saramae Endich, New York
Three Spirits, Virginia Babikian, Houston Tex.; Gwendolyn Belle, St. Louis, Mo.; Mary MacKenzie, Oronton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Don Giovanni Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Don Giovanni,
Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Zerlina Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Cosi Fan Tutte Mozart
Act I, Duet.
Fiordiligi Claire Watson, Rochester, N.Y.
Drabella Regina Sarfaty, New York, N.Y.
The Barber of Seville Rossini
Scenes from Act II.
Bartolo Malcolm Bernstein, Baltimore, Md.
Count Almaviva,
Jefferson Morris, Lima, Ohio
Rosina,
Susana Naidich, Buenos Aires, Argentina
Figaro Stephen Harbachick, Springfield
Basilio McHenry Boatwright, Boston
Hansel and Gretel Humperdinck
Scene from Act I.
Gretel,
Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio
Hansel Regina Sarfaty, New York
Carmen. Bizet
Quintet from Act II.
Frasquita,
Rosemary Eves, Indianapolis, Ind.
Dancairo Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Remendado Thomas Cole, Detroit, Mich.
Carmen,
Mary MacKenzie, Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.
Mercedes, Lee Goebel, San Diego City, Calif.
Intermission.
La Boheme Puccini
Act I.
Rodolfo Howell Zulick, Springfield, Pa.
Marcello Peyton Higgison, Mobile, Ala.
Collins Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill.
Schaunard Robert Kerns, Utica, Mich.
Benoit Douglas Miller, Oakland, Calif.
Mimi Virginia Babikian, Houston, Tex.
Act IV.
Rodolfo Lynn Detwiler, Altoona, Pa.
Marcello Oscar McLullough, Salsbury, N.C.
Schaunard Stephen Harbachick, New York
Colline Robert Kirkham, Memphis, Tenn.
Musetta Susan Winchester, Chicago, Ill.
Mimi Darlene Miller, North Olmsted, Ohio

~~Bos. Post~~ 7/24

At Tanglewood

Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" will be Serge Koussevitzky Memorial concert to be presented at Tanglewood Friday evening, Aug. 5. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the performance.

B.E. Eagle
7/25

Tourist Influx Brings Appeal For Rooms

The Chamber of Commerce today urged area residents who have tourist accommodations to register with the Chamber's information booth on South Street.

James H. Lucas, executive director of the Chamber, said the organization ran completely out of listed housing facilities early Saturday evening.

The Chamber's information booth on South Street placed 378 tourists Friday and Saturday in addition to 100 advance reservations, according to Mr. Lucas.

John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, said his office also had a near record number of calls Friday in addition to heavy advance reservations.

Mr. Lucas estimated that more than 3,000 visitors were placed in hotels, inns, motels and tourists homes in the Pittsfield area over the weekend. He said he anticipates the same heavy demand for the next three Tanglewood weekends.

Mr. Lucas asked persons who have tourist facilities and are not registered with the Chamber to call the information booth and give details of what they have available. He said there is a small registration fee.

Bernstein to Lead Symphony of Air

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Symphony of the Air in a subscription series of six concerts in Carnegie Hall during the 1955-'56 season, it was announced yesterday by the former NBC Symphony. The dates are Wednesday, Nov. 9; Tuesday, Dec. 13; Fridays, Jan. 6 and Feb. 3, and Wednesdays, March 7 and April 18.

These will be next season's only conducting engagements for Mr. Bernstein, who becomes the orchestra's first conductor for a full season since its separation from the National Broadcasting Company last year. He directed the Symphony of the Air in three programs last season.

The conductor, who is teaching and directing concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer, will devote much of his time in the next twelve months to composition, including an original Broadway production, a work to commemorate the Boston Symphony Orchestra's seventy-fifth anniversary and, with Lillian Hellman, an operetta based on Voltaire's "Candide."

H-T/ 7/26

Music

First Shed Concert Scores Resounding Hit

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the Tanglewood season in the Music Shed was played last night by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The first two weeks of the schedule had been played in the theater-concert hall by an orchestra of chamber dimensions. A program entirely devoted to Beethoven included the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist and, to begin, the "Cariolan" overture, and, to close, the seventh symphony.

Munch was in an expansive mood and asked the orchestra to release all stops. They responded with a vigor and power that carried the huge audience to peaks of enthusiasm even though a few of the decibels at times were slightly in excess of what was required.

* * *

STERN'S Beethoven was a vastly changed and improved one from the performance he gave of the same work a few years ago. This was a free and natural, but deeply considered, rendition, the work of a life-time of study, of polishing and refining, until, in its way, it was an example and memory long to retain. He had simplified many of the details which often are made intricate; he made many of the statements of the themes plain and clear which are often given a more obscure content, and, above all, he gave shape to the concerto as a whole rather than focusing on any one episode or phrase.

* * *

Charles Munch

STERN'S TONE was warm and tense. It was not ever passionate, but it was beautifully adjusted to the matter at hand. Munch, soon after the opening of the concerto, gave him excellent and subdued support and Stern felt free to indulge in the pathos of certain sections by using a wonderfully soft tone which carried through for some of the most effective playing of the evening. His bow was incredibly in control. In the G major theme of the slow movement he inflected this great, inspired moment of Beethoven with a sustained line and restrained fervor that was the mark of a master.

The Joachim cadenza in the first movement had dramatic eloquence, not to speak of technical prowness. It was a highly individual expression on the loftiest artistic plane.

* * *

THE AUDIENCE would not leave at the conclusion of the symphony but recalled Munch time after time. He always motioned to the orchestra to rise and share with him the frenzied applause tendered him. The performance had been on the boisterous side. True, the rhythmic patterns of all four movements of this symphony excite that kind of a reaction when played by so superb an orchestra as is the Boston, but there was a tendency last night to rely on the spirit of the moment, which can certainly give a lift to any performance, rather than on pre-arranged and prepared plans.

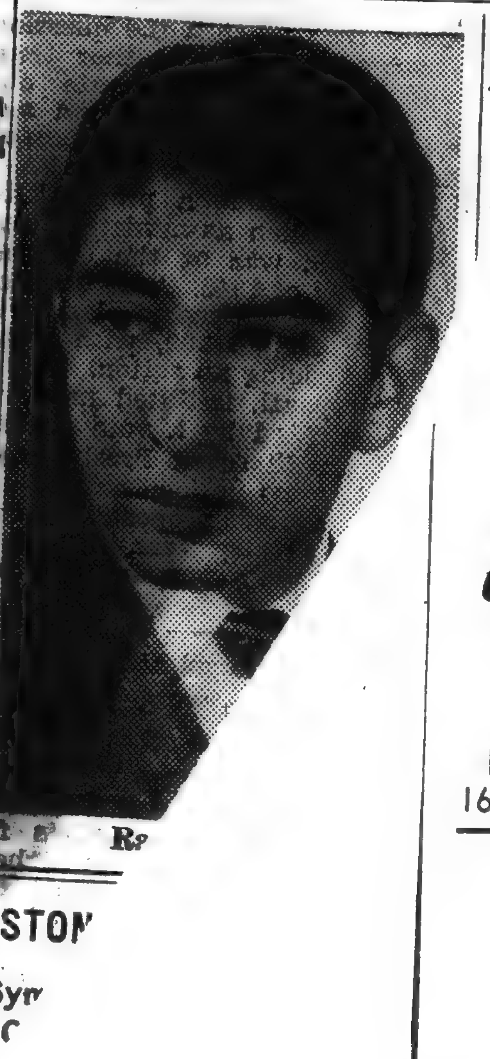
* * *

THE BEST sonority of the evening was reached in the second movement of the symphony. The lower voices had a rich resonance at the outset and as the other voices were added, the accumulation of tone grew in solidity as it was more firmly knit in texture in the succeeding variations. The scherzo as a virtuoso performance, the segments interlocking with easy perfection and clean contrasts. The winds got out of hand in the finale and covered the strings more than necessary, but Munch whipped them on, calling for more and more.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1955.

TEXAN, 22, TAKES B.M.I. MUSIC PRIZE

Ramiro Cortes Wins $2,000 Student Composers Award for Chamber Group Work



Ra

Ramiro Cortes, 22-year-old composer of Dallas, Tex., was named winner yesterday of the $2,000 first prize in the annual Student Composers Radio Awards sponsored by Broadcast Music, Inc.

Mr. Cortes, who received the $1,000 Gershwin Prize earlier this year, won the B. M. I. competition for his "Night Music," a work for chamber orchestra. He is studying at the University of Southern California.

Roland Trogan, 22 years old, of Saginaw, Mich., received $1,500 for his opera "The Hat Man." He is a student at the University of Michigan.

Jack S. Gottlieb of New Rochelle, N. Y., a student at Brandeis University, won a prize of $1,000 for a string quartet.

Awards of $750 each went to Arno Safran, 23, of New York, a student at the Hartt College of Music, for his "Music for Orchestra," and to David M. Epstein of Woodmere, N. J., a student at Princeton University, for his Trio for Violin, Piano and 'Cello.

Edwin A. Freeman, 27, of Clemson, S. C., a student at Louisiana State University, won $500 for his orchestral work, "Fantasy on a Ground."

Awards of $250 each were made to Donald Jenni, 17, of Milwaukee; David Ward-Steinman, 19, of Alexandria, La.; Genevieve Chinn, 20, of Malba, Queens and John Harbison, 17, of Princeton, N. J.

Judges for the contest were William Schuman, Earl V. Moore, Henry Cowell, Claude Champagne, Norman Dello Joio, Camarata, Goddard Lieberson, Vincent Perichetti, Oliver Daniel, Gusta ve Reese, Walter Hinrichson, Ulysses Kay, Peggy Glanville-Hicks, Colin McPhee and Robert Kurka.

PR

STON

Syr

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street - New York

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (Eve.)
Circ. D. 151,303

MAY 23 1955

Hub-Born Composer to Hear Symphony Performed at Smith

Michael D. Sahl, 20, Boston-born composer, will hear his "Symphony Number 1 in E", performed at commencement exercises at Smith College, June 5.

Sahl, a composer of music since only 8 years old, is a senior at Amherst College where he is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He has just been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst and a residence fellowship by Harvard for study at the graduate school of Arts and Sciences. Last Summer he won an award for composition at the Berkshire Music Center and won a scholarship at the advanced class at Tanglewood.

Now a resident of New York city, Sahl is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sahl. He is the grandson for Mr. and Mrs. Eli F. Zallinger of Dorchester and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sahl of Somerville.

THE BETHLEHEM GLOBE-TIMES—WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1955

Women's News

Broadway Opera Singer To Appear In Musicale

Two former students at the Hungarian Academy of Music in Budapest will combine their talents in presenting the Bethlehem Friends of Music annual spring musicale tomorrow night.

They are Miss Catherine Akos of Toronto, Can., mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. Louis Martin of Bethlehem, who will play piano accompaniment. Although both are natives of Budapest and studied at the same school, they met for the first time two weeks ago.

Tomorrow night's recital will be one of the first public appearances Miss Akos has made since she sang one of the six principal roles in Gian - Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Saint of Bleecker Street."

"The Saint" concluded a four-month run on Broadway last month. This week Menotti was awarded a Pulitzer prize for his score and libretto.

Menotti selected Miss Akos for the cast of his opera after he heard her sing last summer in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. She voices great admiration for the Italian - born composer - director, describing him "as like no other director I've ever worked with."

Miss Adkos will sing her original role when the complete opera is to be televised Sunday, May 15, she said today. She also plans to tour in "The Saint" in July in this country and in Europe when Menotti will take the original cast there next fall for bookings in several counties.

This summer she will return to Tanglewood to appear as a soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony to be directed by Charles Munsch.

The Hungarian - born soprano made her debut with the Budapest Opera Co. After several years she was invited to join the Bucharest Opera. In 1948 she went to Paris to perform on the French national radio network.

Two years ago Miss Akos, her furrier husband and their young son moved to Toronto. Since then she has appeared in the Royal Conservatory Opera Festival and sings frequently over the Canadian Broadcasting Co.

Although she misses her family, Miss Adkos said she is pursuing her career with the enthusiastic approval of her husband. But the separation has not been an extended one, because she manages to get home for brief visits at least every six weeks.

Miss Akos arrived in Bethlehem Monday evening and is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin, 27 E. Church St. Since then she and Mrs. Martin have been rehearsing for the recital they will present at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow at the YWCA.

The program:

"O del mio dolce," Gluck; "Se tu m'ami," Pergolesi; "Frauenliebe und Leben," Schumann; "Stimme der Mutter" and "Immer Wieder," Felix Wolfes; "El Pano maruno, "Seguidilla" and "Jota," Manuel de Falla; Hungarian folk songs by Bela Bartok and Zoltan Kodaly; arias from Mozart's "Figaro," Bizet's "Carmen" and Verdi's "Don Carlos."

MISS CATHERINE AKOS, mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. Louis Martin, pianist, rehearse for the program they will present tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. at the YWCA. The recital is the annual spring musicale of the Bethlehem Friends of Music. Miss Akos, who sang in Menotti's Broadway opera, "The Saint of Bleecker Street," is shown here with Mrs. Martin in the latter's home at 27 E. Church St. (Globe-Times Photo)

---

* * *

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in "Tanglewood," Lenox will move into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music in mid week, with the music of Beethoven. This chamber music program of three quartets, performed by the New Music Quartet, will be presented July 27 in the Theater-Concert Hall. Next weekend, in the great Music Shed, two of the three weekend concerts will be conducted by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony. These will be Friday and Saturday nights, July 29-30. On Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux will make the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

The Friday night program will comprise orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performance last winter by the Boston Symphony. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 in the Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's music school, has the principal solo role. Miss Price in private life is Mrs. William Warfield, wife of the noted American baritone. Other solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo - soprano. The Tanglewood Choir, to assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, this group comprising 60 voices from the choral department and the associate division of the opera department.

LEONTYNE PRICE

The third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival under Director Munch, is set for next Saturday night. Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist, will come from his Vermont home for his first appearance in the Music Shed, playing the "Emperor" Concerto with orchestra. Other numbers: The Overture to "Egmont" and the Third ("Eroica") Symphony. The Sunday program, July 31, to be conducted by Director Monteux, is all-Brahms with Isaac Stern, violinist and Gregor Piatigorsky playing the Concerto for Violin and Cello. The program also will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor.

Announced as a "bonus" for Festival patrons the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra starts at 10 o'clock on July 30. A nominal charge benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Last night, Pierre Monteux led the Orchestra in an orchestral program which included the Roger Sessions Second Symphony in D Major. This afternoon's concert, Charles Munch conducting, will comprise the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale") symphonies of Beethoven.

Syracuse
H-American
7/24 Sunday

---

world peace.

Winsted Citizen 7/22

FIRST CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD BY BOSTON GROUP

The 1955 Berkshire festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight, from the intimate theatre-concert hall to the great music shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston symphony orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the "Seventh Symphony." This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the shed by the full Boston symphony orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four weekends of the festival, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 129,925, for an average of 9,197 or one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000) the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawn under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. The advance sale for this season's shed concerts indicates that the all-time attendance mark set last season will be shattered this year.

Mr. Stern tonight will make his second of three appearances at this season's festival.

ANNUAL BENEFIT FOR BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire music center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954 afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston symphony orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6,000 seat music shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood on Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now until July 30, conducting the art commission pop concerts in San Francisco's civic auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami beach pops concerts in Florida Aug. 7, will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert Aug. 14, returning immediately to Boston to conduct the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.

---

was when you met me on the street yesterday, did you?"

"No, who were you?"

TV

Each summer we at The Citizen office receive a number of calls from folks asking for information as to the various events going on at Tanglewood up in Stockbridge, Mass., and we are pleased to be able to furnish what we can about them. We have a rather complete schedule of the concerts to be given through the end of August, this having been prepared by the Berkshire Eagle in Pittsfield, and we'll be pleased to pass any information along to folks who wish to call.

Social News in Brief

Mr. and [illegible] of Stockbridge and Washington, D.C., entertained at cocktails yesterday afternoon following the Berkshire Festival concert, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard G. Spader. Mr. Perry is manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mr. Spader is assistant executive director of the Berkshire Music Center.

John Francese of New York spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Francese of 227 Dawes Ave.

Monroe B. England Jr., who has been stationed at Camp Pendleton, San Clemente, Calif., as a Marine Corps lieutenant, has been discharged after two years' service and is with his father, Monroe B. England of 7 Fairmont Cir.

Bernard E. Stelzenmuller of Philadelphia, a former resident, spent the weekend at the Castle, Lenox.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey F. Sloan and children, Virginia, Barbara and Robert of Pittsburgh, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Esbig Jr. of 15 Harold St.

Miss Lorraine Murphy of New York and Lake George, N.Y., spent the weekend with Mrs. H. Stanley Hillyer of South Mountain.

Henry B. Cabot, president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees, and Mrs. Cabot, entertained last evening at supper at the Lenox Club trustees of the Berkshire Festival and the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra board who attended the weekend concerts. Mr. and Mrs. Cabot, who stayed at the club for the opening weekend of the major festival, returned today to their farm in Walpole, N.H.

Mrs. Robert Crane of 418 Pomeroy Ave. and Mrs. Elmer E. Dawson Jr. of 89 Crofut St. returned Friday from West Falmouth, Cape Cod, where they spent several days with Mrs. Frederic A. Pease of 25 Kenilworth St., who is there for the month of July.

R. Dudley Head Jr. of Westport, Conn., spent the weekend with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Head of 70 Broad St. Their son, Sanford, of Athens, Ga., is with them for a two-week vacation.

Aubrey Tasardi, Italian ambassador to the United Nations, and Signora Tasardi, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Livermore at Lakeside, Lenox. They were entertained at a cocktail party in their honor yesterday, following the Berkshire Festival concert, by Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson at Lakeside Stables.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Brownell and son, Anthony, moved last week from Wayland to New York, where Mr. Brownell has been appointed secretary of the American Kennel Club. Mrs. Brownell is the former Anne Weston, daughter of Mrs. Philip Weston.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd of Cannonsville, N. Y., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Edman of 584 South St.

Miss Anna M. Mahony of Stockbridge Road, Lee, entertained at a small cocktail party Saturday. Out-of-town guests included former Boston Fire Commissioner M. T. Kelleher, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Kelleher; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shorter of Franklin, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Crandall Cloyes of White Plains, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Euston of 284 Pomero Ave. have returned from Old Black Point, Niantic, Conn., where they spent the weekend with Mrs. Hale Holden.

Programs Revised

Piatigorsky's Sore Shoulder Cancels Festival Appearances

Eagle 7/25

TANGLEWOOD — Three programs of the Berkshire Festival on July 31, Wednesday Aug. 10 and Friday, Aug. 12 have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced today because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of solo engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

The noted musician regretfully wired Mr. Munch yesterday that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Violin Concerto

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello, Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's Berkshire Festival concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the BSO in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Mr. Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, Aug. 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced Brahms variations on a theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique," of Hector Berlioz, an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954, which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer.

The revised program for Aug. 12, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, will announce shortly a substitute program.

Used Awnings
13 foot. (Like new) complete with fixtures, $60. Bargain Center, 83 Seymour St.—Adv.

26,729 Attend Four Concerts At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—The major concerts in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra over the weekend attracted 24,876 music lovers. On Wednesday night 1,853 turned out for the chamber music program in the Theater Concert Hall, making a total of 26,729 for the four Festival concerts.

The public rehearsals of the orchestra Saturday morning drew [illegible] persons, 350 of whom were children. The seven student events during the week were attended by 5,400 people.

Yesterday afternoon's Shed attendance was 8,700; Saturday night, 8,543, and Friday evening, 7,633.

BERNSTEIN TO DO SERIES

He Will Lead Six Concerts by Symphony of the Air

Leonard Bernstein will lead the Symphony of the Air in six subscription concerts at Carnegie Hall during the coming season.

The series opens Nov. 8, with other concerts scheduled for Dec. 13, Jan. 6, Feb. 3, March 7 and April 18.

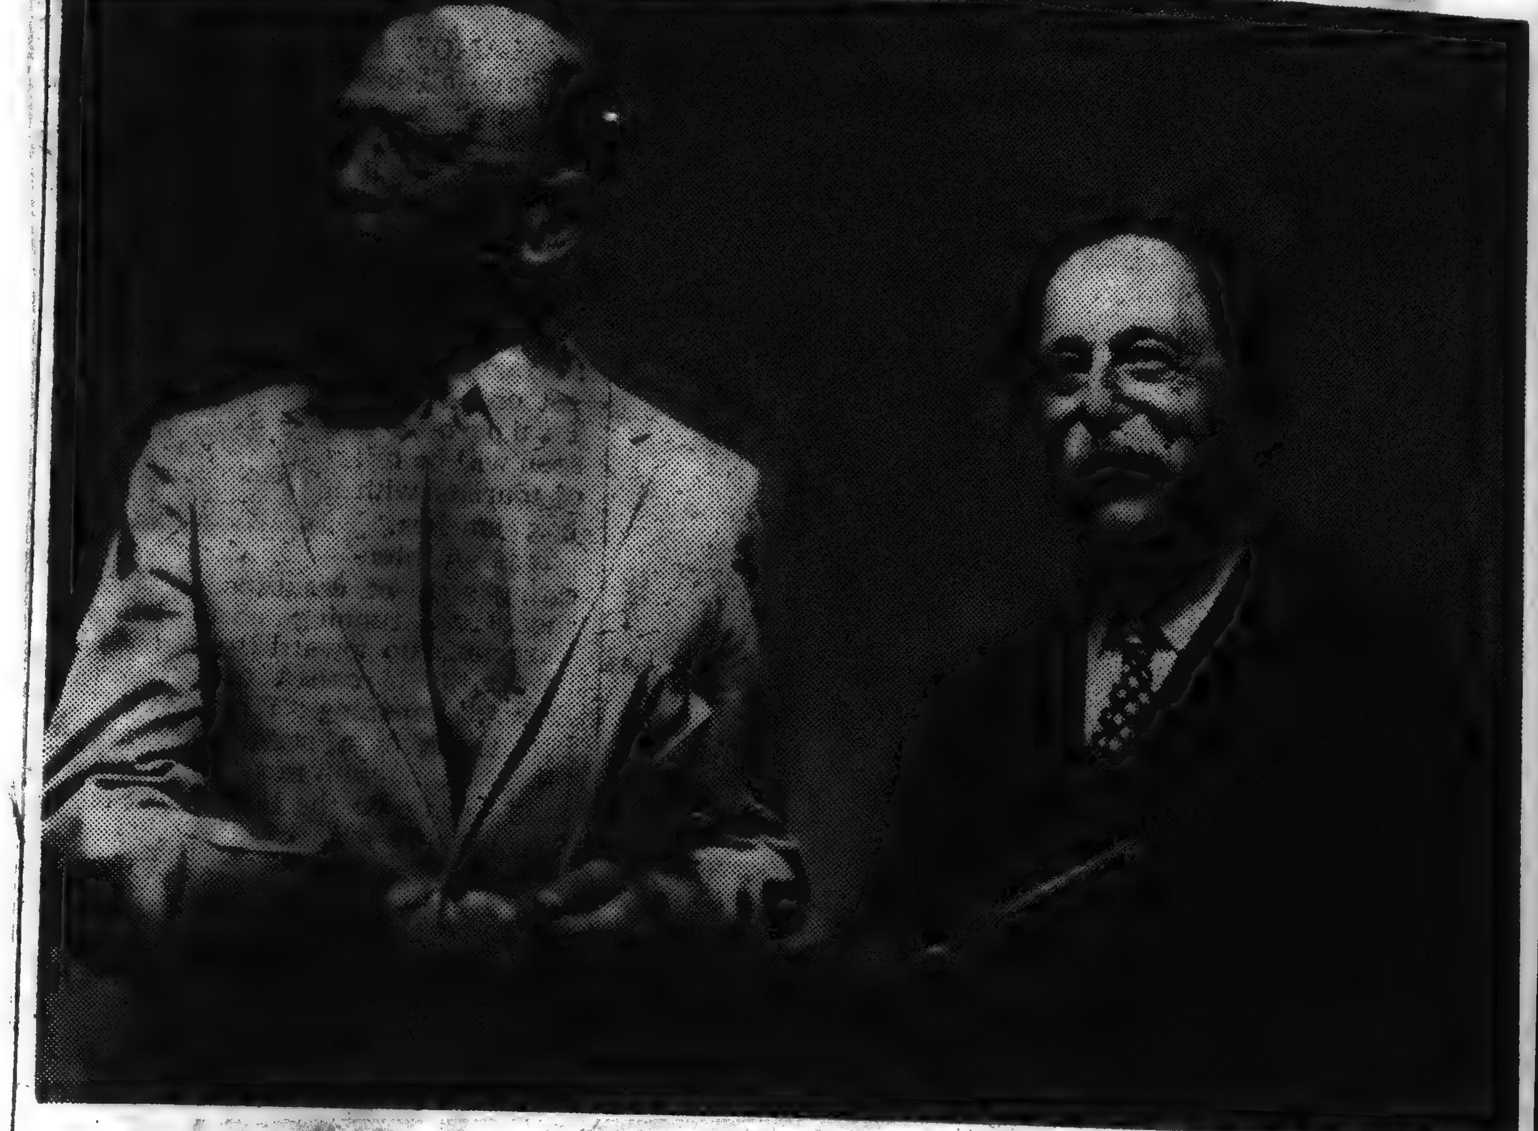
Mr. Bernstein thus becomes the first full-season conductor of the Symphony of the Air since it ended its connection with the National Broadcasting Company in April, 1954. Since that time, the orchestra has had a number of guest conductors, including Mr. Bernstein.

It is expected that Mr. Bernstein's series with the Symphony of the Air will be his only conducting appearances in New York next season. The composer-conductor is at work on a composition that was commissioned for the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is also preparing a musical based on Voltaire's "Candide."

NY Times

Music

Tanglewood Reaches Half-Way Mark



COMPOSER AND CONDUCTOR, Roger Sessions and Pierre Monteux, beam with delight after an ovation given them at Saturday night's concert in Music Shed when Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux on the podium, performed Mr. Session's composition, "The Black Maskers." Manos

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

YESTERDAY afternoon's concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood marked the completion of the first half of the current Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three Beethoven symphonies to the cordial satisfaction of a very large audience.

In the early years of the Festival, the sixth symphony, the "Pastoral," was the most often repeated work in the literature and it acquired a special connotation as being sort of a Tanglewood theme song by reason of its references to nature and bucolic pleasures. It requires no special hall to enjoy it, yet the bordering rows of trees visible to either side of the Shed make it seem particularly appropriate in this setting.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN fourth, in B flat, has been heard less often at Tanglewood. Its long introduction leads into an allegro of ingratiating mood, remarkably mild when one remembers the temper of the composer's preceding Eroica. Mr. Munch needed a bar or two to establish the tempo he wanted in the slow movement, but thereafter he let his orchestra sing for him with graceful long sustained lines. The contrast in tempo in the scherzo when he arrived at the trio was another happy detail of an afternoon of pleasant and reminiscent music.

The first symphony, C major, requires no mental concentration for the listener. It is just music without problems, and, when played by so virtuoso an orchestra, seems as devoid of obstacles for the performers as it is for the audience. The short little introduction to the finale was a veritable gem as Munch played it.

* * *

THE PRECEDING evening Pierre Monteux returned to lead the orchestra in a wonderfully constructed program, the first, half Bach and Beethoven and, after intermission, Richard Strauss and Roger Sessions. Sessions is on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center this season and Monteux called him to the stage from his seat in the audience to acknowledge the genuine demonstration his suite from "The Black Masters" earned.

It was a happy juxtaposition to place it before Strauss' "Tod und Verklarung" as there was much in common and much to compare in the two men. Although the two works were written a third of a century apart, each composer was in his 26th year when he wrote the respective piece played Saturday night.

* * *

IT WAS IN THE matter of orchestration that there was the greatest similarity. Both used a very large orchestra and each with consummate skill. There were other analogies, too. Each was writing on a literary framework on a subject, remotely but not unreasonably related, concerning the emotions and inward struggles of a young man. Ritter's poem came after the music and he undoubtedly had spoken to and influenced Strauss. Sessions wrote his music on a play of Andreyeff.

Strauss, after contrapuntal labyrinths and rhythmic involvements, comes in the clear with a melody of the utmost and appealing simplicity. Monteaux, using a minimum of gestures and vehemence, had a palette of tremendous scope and, in the coda, reached peaks of grandeur and excitement.

* * *

SESSIONS' HARMONY needs to be listened to in large perspective; the shorter view would reveal much discordance, or, as he himself indicates in the first movement: "stridente-sarcastico." His orchestral color, however, is fresh and bold, and his rhythmic devices animated and vital. His ability to write in a more sensitive vein was best illustrated by the lovely and effective second section of the "Dirge" where the strings are given a delightful harmonic texture in an individual and exquisite timbre.

* * *

HE GAVE THE principle viola a solo in the instrument's highest register and wrote another solo for the alto flute, in each case deliberately choosing a vehicle to express his wishes for specific and valid reasons. Monteux brought Joseph de Pasquale and Phillip Kaplan to the front of the platform at the end of the performance to receive their proper recognition, respectively, for the excellent accomplishments of their tasks.

The Bach that Monteux used to open his concert was the C minor Passacaglia and Fugue as orchestrated by Ottorino Respighi. He followed this with the second Beethoven symphony, in D major; both admirable foils to the fantasies and imaginative music which came after intermission.

Festival Concerts Open in Shed

Guests of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge and New York, seated at extreme right, are Mrs. Henry B. Cabot, center, wife of the president of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's board of trustees, and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey, wife of the noted violinist; standing, left to right, Mr. Francescatti, Mr. Cabot and Mrs. Thomas L. Chadbourne of New York. Miss Smith was first and only president of Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc.

With Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky, the conductor's widow, right, are her sister, Duchess Anna de Leuchtenberg, and Leah Luboshutz, violinist, front row, and her brother Pierre Luboshutz, Mrs. Lucien Wulsin Jr. of Cincinnati and Genia Nemenoff, at rear. Mr. Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff are famous duo-pianists. Miss Luboshutz is mother of Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department.

In the box of Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., and Lenox, center, are, left to right, Mrs. C. D. Jackson of Lenox, Mr. Sanborn, C. D. Jackson and Mrs. Grant Van Sant of Hollywood, Calif. Mr. Jackson, a former White House adviser, is vice president of Time, Life Fortune Inc., and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mrs. Van Sant, who is visiting the Sanborns, is Mr. Sanborn's sister.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Music Center forum. Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.

8:45—Opening of "Reclining Figure," with Paul Lipson, John W. Austin, Martha Orrick, William Swan. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

Letters

Savings Outmoded?

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Contrary to classical economics, during the past 10 years as costs and taxes have increased the well-being of our country has improved.

Telephones, in spite of higher cost, are in more demand than ever. Cars at more than double their prewar price are selling at the highest rate in history. $11,000 houses are being bought in greater volume than ever was the case at the $5,000 level. It must be that the means for converting high costs into high demand have been made reliable and efficient.

Now we can understand the trying to improve business by reducing prices (prices are the substance of demand) is like thinking that an automobile engine is working better when the car is coasting down hill. Increased wages increase demand. That permeates the entire economy and creates more job opportunities (it's demand, not cost-cutting methods that make more jobs). Life savings are as outmoded as sideburns on a Red Sox player. It's the money you spend, not save, that makes demand which alone is the support of jobs and profits.

KARL HAARTZ.

Andover.

Poser

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

In the role of moderator, so often thrust upon you, you are too often asked to decide the impossible.

I await, with scant hope for certain solution, your answer to a poser which a troubled Berkshire County businessman asked through these columns ["Letter," July 21].

The question, which I have somewhat abridged, you will recall is: "For 12 months my hotel business is good. However, for one of these months, due to unusual tourist activity in the Berkshires, my business becomes very good; too good; so good I can't handle it. What do I do now?"

WILLIAM W. MOORE.

Lenox.

—o—

BERKSHIRES in the news. Cue magazine, strictly a New York publication, carries a lengthy article on the Berkshires in a recent issue. Plays up the oceans of culture awaiting thirsting visitors, and much detail about the resorts hereabouts, a longer list than we had imagined.

—o—

Claremont NH Eagle

Friday, July 22, 1955 DAILY EAGL

BERKSHIRE festival audience. Typical scene at Tanglewood as thousands listen to music by Boston Symphony orchestra and chamber groups.

Post (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 285,839

JUL 25 1955

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 24—Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program this afternoon in the Music Shed before an audience of 9000. Three symphonies made up the list, the first, the fourth, and the sixth.

Though Mr. Munch holds highly individualistic notions about Beethoven in general, the universality of the music is such that [illegible] a valid musical [illegible] matter how unusual the emphasis or personal the approach.

Sympathetic [illegible] of music from the classical era has been one of the conductor's most impressive abilities, so it is not surprising that the First Symphony emerged a well-mannered, gracefully proportioned experience. The Andante with its flowing Cantabile was particularly touching; the conductor drew from the orchestra polished phrases sung in rich, fluent tone.

The Fourth Symphony was no less interesting if less aristocratic in articulation. Mr. Munch, pressing for orchestral effect in the 3rd and 4th movements (a conductor's prerogative), brought to these sections a thrust somewhat overbearing at times, but rompishly diverting nonetheless.

In the "Pastorale" we had a series of brilliantly colored pictures rather than a sequence of connected events. Each picture bore little relationship to what went before or what came after despite Beethoven's allusions and recapitulations. Yet this interpretation possessed the virtue of a novel approach to a familiar score.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 20 1955

Festival to Feature Piano-Violin Recital

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, July 20 — The third week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival begins tonight with a recital by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30 p. m. Three sonatas for Violin and Piano by Beethoven will be performed, those in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2; F Major, Opus 24 (the "Spring" Sonta); and C Minor, Opus 30, No. 2. This will be the third in the series of six Wednesday evening Chamber Music concerts devoted to Beethoven this season; future programs will be given by the New Music Quartet (July 27), Rudolf Serkin (Aug.) and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz (Aug. 10).

In addition to tonight's appearance in the Chamber Music series, Mr. Stern will be soloist with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in two Festival concerts in the Music Shed: in Beethoven's Violin Concerto this Friday evening under the direction of Charles Munch, and in Brahms' Double Concert for Violin and Cello, with Gregor Piatigorsky, on Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux conducting.

On Friday evening, in the Music Shed, the first of this season's 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given. Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program comprised of the Overture to "Coriolan" and the Seventh Symphony, in addition to the Violin Concert with Mr. Stern. Saturday evening at 8.30, Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducting music by Bach, Beethoven and Richard Strauss, and also the Suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Session, who is teaching composition at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer. Sunday afternoon (July 24) Mr. Munch will return, again to conduct an all-Beethoven concert of three symphonies—the First, Fourth and Sixth.

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 17 1955

Boston Symphony To Start Series Of Rural Concerts

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood move into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the music shed.

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine.

A feautre of the shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Music Director Charles Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra).

Meanwhile, the third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts in the theater-concert hall will comprise an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, Wednesday; two all-Bethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening with Stern as solist, the second next Sunday afternoon; and a program of Bach, Beethoven Sessions and Richard Strauss, this coming Saturday evening, conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924. and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 13 1955

Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux is guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at three Berkshire Festival concerts during the summer in thet Music Shed at Tanglewood.

On July [illegible] Mr. Monteux conducts an orchestral program of works by Bach-Respighi, Beethoven, Sessions, Richard Strauss.

On July 31 at 2:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux leads an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists.

On August 13 at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Monteux conducts a program of Wagner, Brahms, Debussy and Richard Strauss.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 21 1955

Art at Tanglewood

Among weekly displays of art in the exhibition hall at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Festival are scheduled: July 23-30, small sculpture by Peter Abate of Brookline, photographs of musicians by Clemens Kalischer of S[illegible]; July 30-Aug. 6, paint[illegible] and prints by T[illegible] of Lenox; Aug. 6-14, sculpt[illegible] drawings by Franc Epping of Lenox.

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 16 1955

FINAL PROGRAMS IN BERKSHIRE CHAMBER SERIES

The two final programs in this season's Berkshire festival series of chamber orchestra concerts by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m. For these two programs Charles Munch has chosen works by Italian and French composers respectively.

Tonight's all-Italian concert will feature three works by the famed "Red Priest" of 18th century composition, Antonio Vivaldi, his Concerti Grossi Nos. 10 and 11 from the Opus 3 set called "L'Estro Armonico" (harmonica inspiration), and the "Gloria" mass in D major (which Hugh Ross will conduct). The Berkshire festival chorus will assist in the performance of the "Gloria," along with Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano, both students at the Berkshire music center. In addition to the Vivaldi works, the concert will also include Boccerini's cello concerto in B flat, with the Boston symphony's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist. All but the D minor Vivaldi Concerto Grosso (No. 11) will be given their first Tanglewood performances.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 22 1955

'Tanglewood on Parade'

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, will participate with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, in this year's "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday, Aug. 11, for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Their evening concert will be part of activities beginning with an opera performed by students at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and ending with waltzing on the green at 11:15 at night.

Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Symphony's portion of the program, including the first performance of a suite from his music for the film "On the Waterfront" and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." He will be piano soloist with the Pops in Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. The Pops will also play Rimsky-Korsakov's Caprice Espagnole and Antal Dorati's arrangement of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball."

Between 6 o'clock and 7:15, various departments of the Berkshire Music Center will demonstrate their work. At 7:15 there will be a lawn party, with a choral concert by students.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786

JUL 14 1955

Bach's Mass Tanglewood Presentation

The last time we heard the Bach B Minor Mass was in 1950 at Tanglewood, with Serge Koussevitsky conducting the Boston Symphony Chamber Music Orchestra and the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. It was a memorable experience.

Sunday we heard the same musical organizations at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch, who has been conductor of the Boston Symphony since Koussevitsky's death, and it, too, was a memorable experience.

Our heritage of great music is so rich and varied that one hesitates to pick out an ultimate, but surely this magnificent Mass, when performed as nobly as it was on Sunday, is the apex in musical experience. Munch conducted with passion and profundity, with sensitivity and deep awareness of the spiritual values in this great composition.

As in 1950, Adele Addison was, in our opinion, the most thrilling of the soloists, who were all fine artists. A slight remarkably beautiful colored ,woman, Miss Addison possesses a rich vibrant soprano voice, sings Bach with understanding and power. She is heard only in the duet, "Domine Deus," with the tenor and a flute solo, and in the "Christe eleison", in duet with the alto, which seems to us the only flaw in Bach's masterpiece. There is no soprano solo.

The contralto, Florence Kopleff, sang her solos the "Qui sedes" and "Agnus Dei," with tenderness and distinction.

There are two bass solos in the Mass, of which our favorite is the "Cum sancto spiritu," that Donald Gramm sang very pleasingly with a fine interpretation, though his voice is not as big as some bassos.

The tenor solo, accompanied by violinist Richard Burgin, was handled with sound musicianship and fine tonal quality by John McCollum.

But it is in the choral parts of the Mass that the power and the triumphant, soaring qualities of the composition are most deeply felt, from the opening chorus, "Kyrie eleison," to the final "Dona nobis pacem." The young singers of the two college choral societies threw themselves into the music, yet were so perfectly trained that their exuberance never obscured even the subtlest passages.

The huge audience, only about a third of which was seated in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the rest spreading out over the lawns, was so carried away by the joyous and triumphant "et resurrexit" that Bravos ,rang out and applause, which is properly not given until the conclusion of each section.

Next weekend's program at Tanglewood includes the Boston Symphony chamber music orchestra, with Leonard Bernstein conducting, in an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Tourel, soprano, and Mr. Bernstein as piano soloist on Friday at 8:30 p.m. Saturday's concert will be a Vivaldi program with Charles Munch conducting the chamber music orchestra, and on Sunday, at 2:30 p.m. he will conduct a program of French music. All three concerts are in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 50,234

JUL 17 1955

Symphony Opens Friday In Berkshires

Special to The Standard-Times

BOSTON, July 16 — The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, move into high gear next week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra moves over to the hills of Western Masssachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed.

The concerts, starting July 22, will continue until the conclusion of the festival on Aug. 14. Twelve concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the 12 concerts attracted 129,925 persons.

A feature of the 1955 series will be music by Beethoven. Charles Munch, symphony music director, has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies as well as many of his other works.

During the coming week a number of concerts will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center, now in the midst of its 13th session at Tanglewood.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. July 23.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 369,241

JUL 24 1955

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Benefit Aug. 11

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, will aid the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program.

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8:15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront". Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox, (Mass.) 600.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 21 1955

Boston Symphony To Open Music Shed Series Friday

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into high gear when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra).

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts (July 20-24) comprises an evening of Beethoven violin sonatas by Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin, on Wednesday evening (July 20) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening (July 22) with Mr. Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon (July 24); and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening (July 23), conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in the four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Masters," by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

The complete programs are:

Wed., July 20— 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall—Chamber Music: Beethoven: Violin Sonatas — No. 2 in A major, Op. 12, No. 2; No. 5 in F major, Op. 24 ("Spring"); No. 7 in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2. Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin.

Friday, July 22 — 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture to "Coriolan"; Violin Concerto, soloist, Isaac Stern; Symphony No. 7, in A major. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sat., July 23 — 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Respighi: Passacaglio and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven, Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions, Suite from "The Black Masters"; Strauss, "Death and Transfiguration." Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sun., July 24 — 2:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven, Symphony No. 1, in C major; Symphony No. 4, in B-flat; Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale"). Charles Munch, conductor.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,679

JUL 22 1955

Boston Symphony To Open Lenox Concerts

Isaac Stern Is Soloist At Tanglewood Friday

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will move into high gear this weekend when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moves over to the hills of western Massachusetts to inaugurate on Friday night the annual series of week-end concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Isaac Stern

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the twelve Shed concerts attracted are audience of 129 925 persons, for an average attendance of 9,197.

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (ActII) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late music director of the orchestra.

This Friday night's concert will be devoted to music of Beethoven, with Isaac Stern appearing as soloist in the Violin Concerto, and Mr Munch conducting. A program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss will be given Saturday evening, conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919 to 1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951. On Sunday the orchestra, under Mr Munch, will present three Beethoven symphonies.

Next week's Berkshire Festival concerts will include three Beethoven piano sonatas, played by Rudolph Serkin in the theatre-concert hall on Wednesday evening. Mr Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Shed on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 29 and 30, and Mr Munch on Saturday afternoon, August 7.

The detailed programs of coming Festival concerts will be found in the weekly calendar in this issue.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 21 1955

Music Shed Series Features Boston, Starting Friday

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. moves into high gear tomorrow. The entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston, inaugurates the annual series of weekend concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival Aug. 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

A feature of the Shed series will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

* * *

THE WEEKEND will bring two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first Friday evening with Isaac Stern as violin soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon; and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, conducted Saturday evening, by Pierre Monteux.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m., for which the nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

* * *

FRIDAY'S program is Beethoven's Overture to "Coriolan;" Violin Concerto, and Symphony No. 7 in A major.

Saturday's program: Respighi's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 in D major, Sessions' Suite from "The Black Maskers," Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

Sunday's program: Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C major, Symphony No. 4 in B-flat, Symphony No. 6 ("Pastorale").

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

JUL 21 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC SET FOR THIS WEEK-END

Leonard Bernstein and Charles Munch Will Be Conductors

This week-end's Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox will be by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Friday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

The Friday evening program marks the return to the Tanglewood podium, after a year's leave of absence, of noted young American composer-conductor-pianist Leonard Bernstein, who also heads Department I (orchestra and conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Bernstein has chosen an all-Mozart program, with Jennie Hourel, mezzo-soprano, who teamed with Mr. Bernstein for a memorable festival concert two summers ago, as soloist. The program is designed as a preview of the widespread observance of Mozart's bicentennial which will commence generally with the fall music season. Miss Tourel will sing three arias, two from "Idomeneo," and Mr. Bernstein will double as soloist in the Piano Concerto in G. major.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct both the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts. The July 16 program is 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini, highlights of which are the Boccherini Concerto for Cello, with Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony, as soloist; and Vivaldi's Gloria, which will be conducted by Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, assisted by the Festival chorus of Mr. Ross's students and among the soloists Saramas Endich and Sadie Ruth McCollum, both of New York city, Miss Endich is a Tanglewood opera department student this summer, Miss McCollum is a chorus leader student. Mr. Munch's Sunday afternoon program, all French orchestral music, comprises selections from Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Milhoud and Honneger.

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 20 1955

NMSQ Will Play At Tanglewood

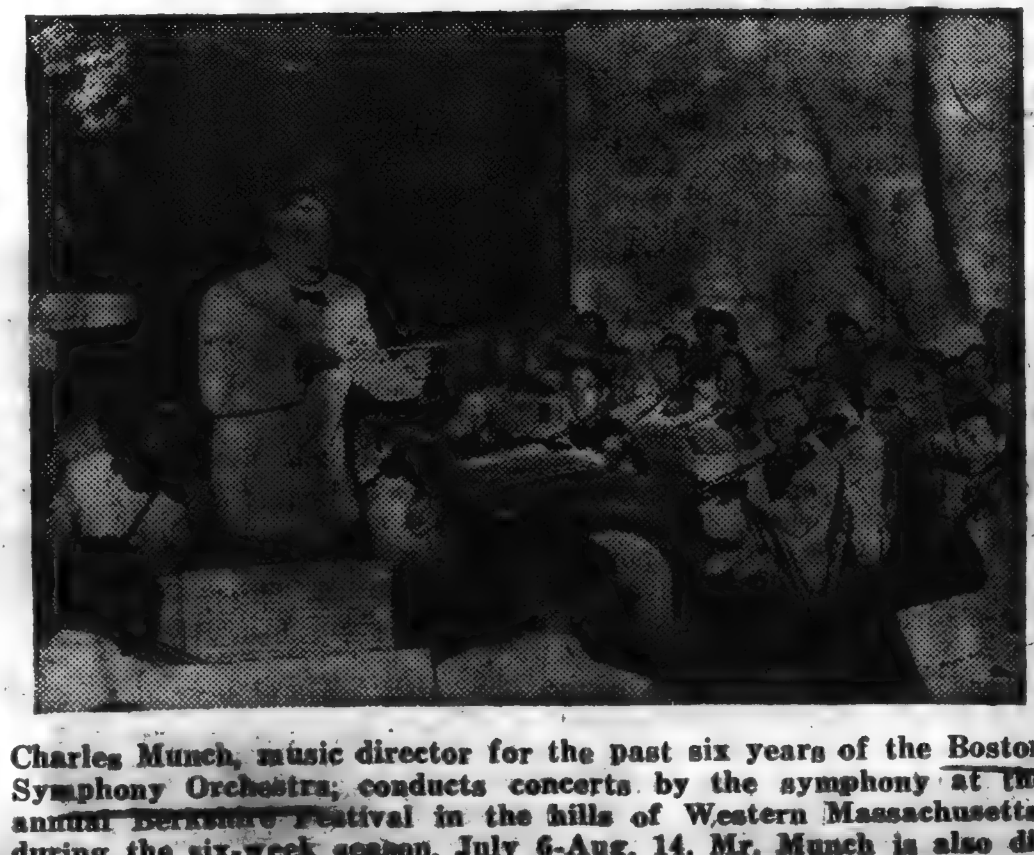
The New Music String Quartet will play at Tanglewood next Wednesday, July 27. Walter Trampler of Drum Hill Road is viola with the NMSQ. Other members are Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins, and David Soyer, cello.

The Quartet will play three works by Beethoven, the string quartet in G major, Opus 18, No. 2; E flat major, Opus 127, and A minor, Opus 132, in the Theatre Concert at Tanglewood starting at 8:30.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675

JUL 21 1955

Munch At Berkshire Festival



Charles Munch, music director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 6-Aug. 14. Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth season.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

JUL 25 1955

LEONTYNE PRICE will be soloist with the Boston Symphony next Friday evening at Tanglewood.

[248]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 20,000

JUL 21 1955

Berkshire Festival Continues

CHARLES MUNCH SHOWN LEADING THE ORCHESTRA

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in [illegible] the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24: Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,416

JUL 21 1955

Munch, Monteux Take Podium For Tanglewood Event

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard", which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 20 1955

Festival Concerts In Third Week

The third week of concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Festival begins tonight with a recital by Isaac Stern, violin, and Alexander Zakin, piano, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at 8:30. Three sonatas for Violin and Piano by Beethoven will be performed, those in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2; F Major Opus 24 (the "Spring" Sonata); and C Minor, Opus 30, No. 2. This will be the third in the series of six Wednesday evening Chamber Music programs devoted to Beethoven this season; future programs will be given by the New Music Quartet (July 27), Rudolf Serkin (August 3) and Gregor Piatigorsky and Ralph Berkowitz (August 10).

Mr. Stern, who is donating his services for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, returned last fall from his second round-the-world tour in 16 months. Since last November he has played in more than 50 American cities while on his thirteenth coast-to-coast tour. In April he played with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra the American premiere of Leonard Bernstein's new "Serenade" for Solo Violin, Strips, Harp and Percussion. He has just returned from his fourth series of appearances in Israel, having also appeared as soloist with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra on its European tour in May. In addition to tonight's appearance in the Chamber Music series, Mr. Stern will be soloist with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in two Festival concerts in the Music Shed: in Beethoven's Violin Concerto this Friday evening (July 22) under the direction of Charles Munch, and in Brahms' Double Concerto for Violin and Cello, with Gregor Piatigorsky, on Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 19 1955

Programs At Tanglewood Please Large Audiences

An unusually fine and not often performed program was the pleasure of 4,064 music lovers who ignored the steamy weather to attend the next to the last concert in the theater concert hall series at Tanglewood.

Almost exclusively devoted to the works of Antonio Vivaldi, an eighteenth century composer and priest, who in his time was more celebrated than his German contemporary Bach, and until 1911 remained virtually unrecognized; indeed had many of his works attributed to Johann Sebastian Bach or his son, Friedmann, it was an evening of rare and satisfying music.

The first concerto grosso scored for strings and organ continuo from the fugal and strongly melodic introduction of the violins carried into the violas and cellos to the crisp allegro was a solid work to be digested many times over. Again this prodigious composer gave us a second concerto for four violins with string orchestra to embellish and create a background for what one might consider an overstatement of violins, but which proved to be completely engrossing in the rhythmic and melodic virtuosity of these instruments. Bach, at one time scored this for four harpsichords, an interesting treatment to consider and listen to.

For many the highlight of the evening might have been the playing of Boccherini's cello concerto in B-flat opus No. 34, by Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony. Although Mr. Mayes is an exceptional cellist with a warm and rhapsodically tender tone, a master of the bow incomparable among many, the music never quite fulfills its promises; many moments of real beauty and sprightly rhythm only to be lost in too much diversification.

The evening closed with another Vivaldi work, brilliant and contemplative, a choral setting of the Gloria, spasmodically conducted by Hugh Ross and ably sung by the Berkshire Chorus, with the assistance of Sarah Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto.

Sunday afternoon a small but enthusiastic audience of 2150 enjoyed a varied program expertly played by the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony and conducted by Charles Munch, most especially The Tombeau de Couperin" first composed for piano by Ravel in memory of his friends killed in the First World War. Here Mr. Munch easily and expertly evoked the delicacy and grace of the eighteenth century Ravel wrote into his memorial suite. Much of the applause was extended to Ralph Gomberg, excellent oboeist of the Symphony.

The first number might be called a tribute to a musical theorist and composer who was determined to become recognized in the operatic field, and finally succeded at the age of 50, in 1733, the Dardanus suite being one of many operas and ballets he composed from then on.

Faure's Pavane, unlike the stately "Earl of Salisbury," by Gibbons, was most interesting for its flowing movement and underlying steady pulse.

A lovely Serenade of Milhaud, in three movements, two bright and quick, and one rather tranquil, brought into play in the final movement the many small percussion instruments making it delightful to hear.

The second half of the program comprised the Fourth Symphony of Honegger. Unlike many of his works it is pleasantly lucid and reminiscent, dissonances are surprisingly harmonic and acceptable, and the composer's ingeniuous instrumentation helps one to accept his latest symphony as one to be heard again and again.

A feature of the Shed series starting next Friday evening will be music by Beethoven, including his nine symphonies, Fidelio in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis."
— M. deB. B.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Cir. 1,634

JUL 20 1955

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed, on July 29 and 30, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday July 31 for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Leontyne Price has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

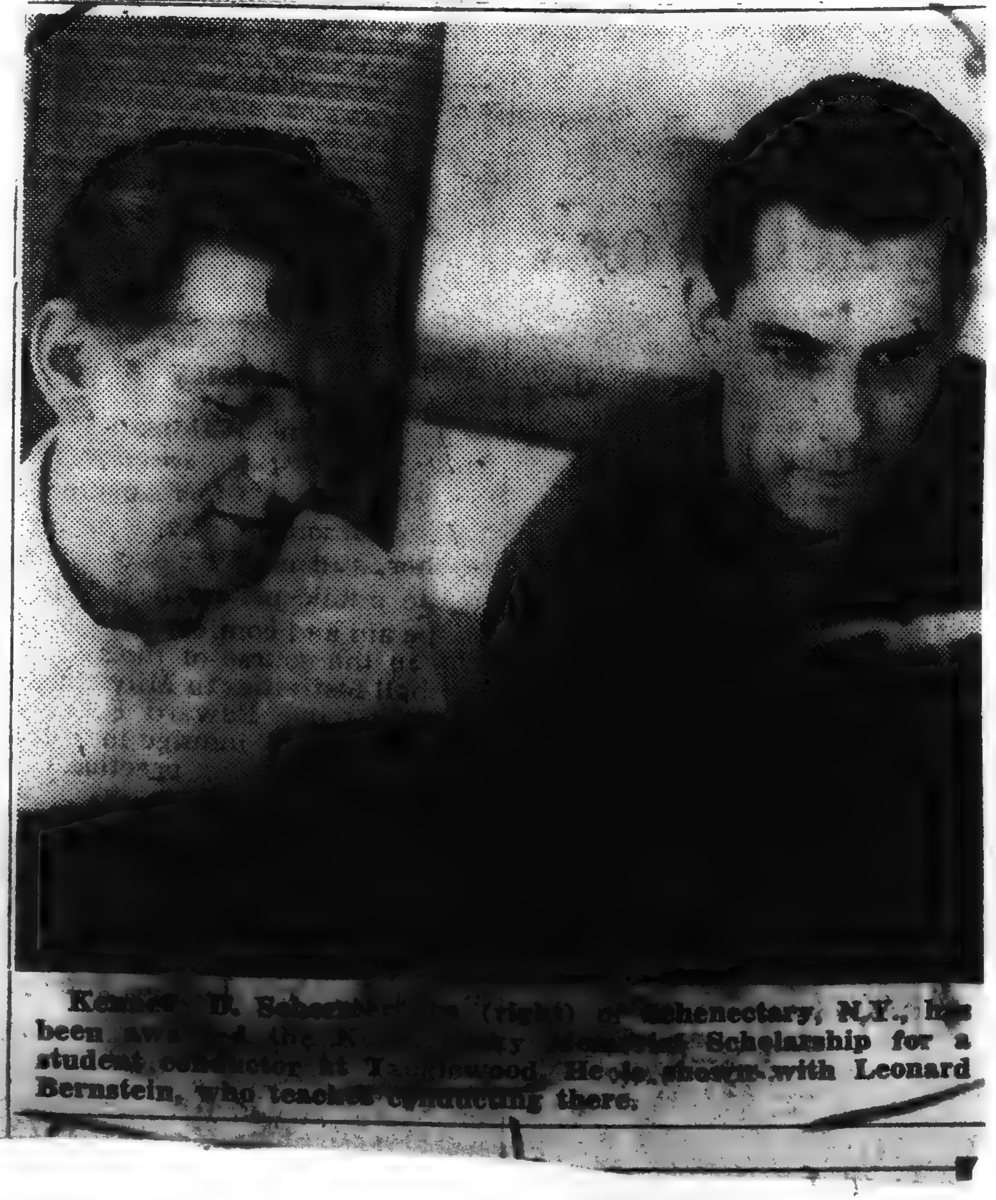
Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first apearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 22 1955



Kenneth D. Schermerhorn (right) of Schenectady, N.Y., has been awarded the [illegible] Memorial Scholarship for a student conductor at Tanglewood. He is shown with Leonard Bernstein, who teaches conducting there.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 74,966

JUL 20 1955

First Flutist at Tanglewood

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, practices a solo number on the grass at Tanglewood prior to a concert. She is the first woman to hold a first desk assignment with the Boston Symphony.

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 18—Every once in a while there comes along a musical personality who so delights one that a personal meeting seems desirable. So it was in the case of Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Ever since we heard her play two seasons ago, we have wondered what kind of a person she was and what her interests might be when she was not playing.

The other day we had the opportunity to meet her and found her utterly charming and unassuming. She is petite, dark haired and dimples appear when she smiles, which is often. She was dressed for rehearsal in a pink and white checked gown, with her hair piled high on her head. She met us with a smile and a hearty handshake.

Retains Small Cottage

She has lived during her three seasons at Tanglewood in the same small cottage on Stockbridge Bowl. When his busy private practice and his teaching at Harvard permits, her husband, Dr. Thomas Dwyer, psychiatrist in residence at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital, comes up to the Berkshires to join her. The Dwyers were married in Vermont, where her family originated and where she spent much time in her youth.

At the moment, she is excited at the prospect of a trip to Italy and is busily engaged in studying Italian, via records. Then there is sailing, which the Dwyers enjoy, and they often sail about in craft owned by George Humphrey, violist, and Carl Zeise, cellist of the orchestra, who keep boats here. Hiking and climbing are also among the hobbies of this energetic couple.

Mrs. Dwyer will fly to Sweden first to appear with the Swedish Radiojaenst Orchestra, playing Mozart's "Flute Concerto in D-Major, K. 314" under Sixten Eckberg, in Gotenberg on Aug. 29. Then will come what might be called a delayed honeymoon, when Dr. and Mrs. Dwyer will spend three weeks abroad, a lot of it in Italy. She is emphatic that this trip will include no music festivals. She will be back in Boston for the opening of the Boston Symphony's 75th anniversary season in early October.

At Tanglewood, in between rehearsals with Charles Munch and guest conductors Leonard Bernstein, Pierre Monteux and Thor Johnson for the 18 Berkshire Festival concerts in which she will play, Mrs. Dwyer is a member of the chamber music faculty of the Berkshire Music Festival. Her students this summer number seven, six from the student symphony orchestra and one from the chamber music department. In addition to her Monday-through-Friday afternoon classes with them, she gives private lessons. She doesn't have much time to herself.

Mrs. Dwyer came to the Boston Symphony, the first woman to hold a first desk assignment, an extremely well equipped flutist. Her lessons had begun at eight years with her mother as her teacher. Her first professional engagement after graduation from Eastman School of Music, was as second flute of the National Symphony in Washington, D. C., under the late Hans Kindler. For two years she played with the orchestra, commuting to Philadelphia to study with the Philadelphia Orchestra's famous first flutist, William Kincaid. She was solo flutist at the Bach Festival at Carmel, Cal., and for six years second flutist of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. She played for three summers at Hollywood Bowl, being engaged by Bruno Walter.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 25 1955

Concerts at Tanglewood

Beethoven Programs Acclaimed

By Jules Wolffers

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Will it be Russia next for the Boston Symphony Orchestra? That was the question causing much discussion this past weekend at Tanglewood, summer home of the orchestra.

As matters now stand there is every reason to believe that management and conductor are in favor of the trip if the various problems standing in the way can be worked out. It is no secret that the orchestra has received some encouragement from the parties directly concerned. In reply to a direct query, one member of the orchestra's publicity staff stated that the prospects look bright.

If the tour materializes it is certain that this country will be well represented by an orchestra and conductor taking second place to none. And if any further proof of this fact is needed it was supplied in ample measure this weekend when two all-Beethoven programs found Charles Munch at his inspired and inspiring best.

* * *

Indeed the audience tendered the conductor a tremendous ovation. All items in the Friday night program—the "Coriolan" Overture, the Violin Concerto and the Seventh Symphony—received rounds of applause as did the work of Isaac Stern, soloist in the concerto. But the evening was a triumph most particularly for the earnest, self-effacing conductor.

The same quality of interpretation and performance was shown Sunday afternoon when Mr. Munch conducted the First, Fourth and Sixth Symphonies with the utmost understanding, delicacy, and grace. Again the orchestra was with the conductor all the way and again the audience was deeply moved by the quality of the readings.

One reason why Mr. Munch is now being hailed as a Beethoven interpreter par excellence lies in the warmly personal way he approaches the music. He reinterprets each work with an ardor and enthusiasm that causes the music, the players and the hearers to catch fire with him. The routine and the academic are nowhere in evidence. Instead we find a fervency of expression that seeks its inspiration directly from the notes themselves instead of following the so-called "tradition."

With Pierre Monteux conducting, the Saturday night program had its high spots also. These were the Orchestral Suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Sessions and the Tone Poem "Tod und Verklärung" by Richard Strauss. Mr. Sessions was present and received hearty and prolonged applause for his colorful and descriptive music.

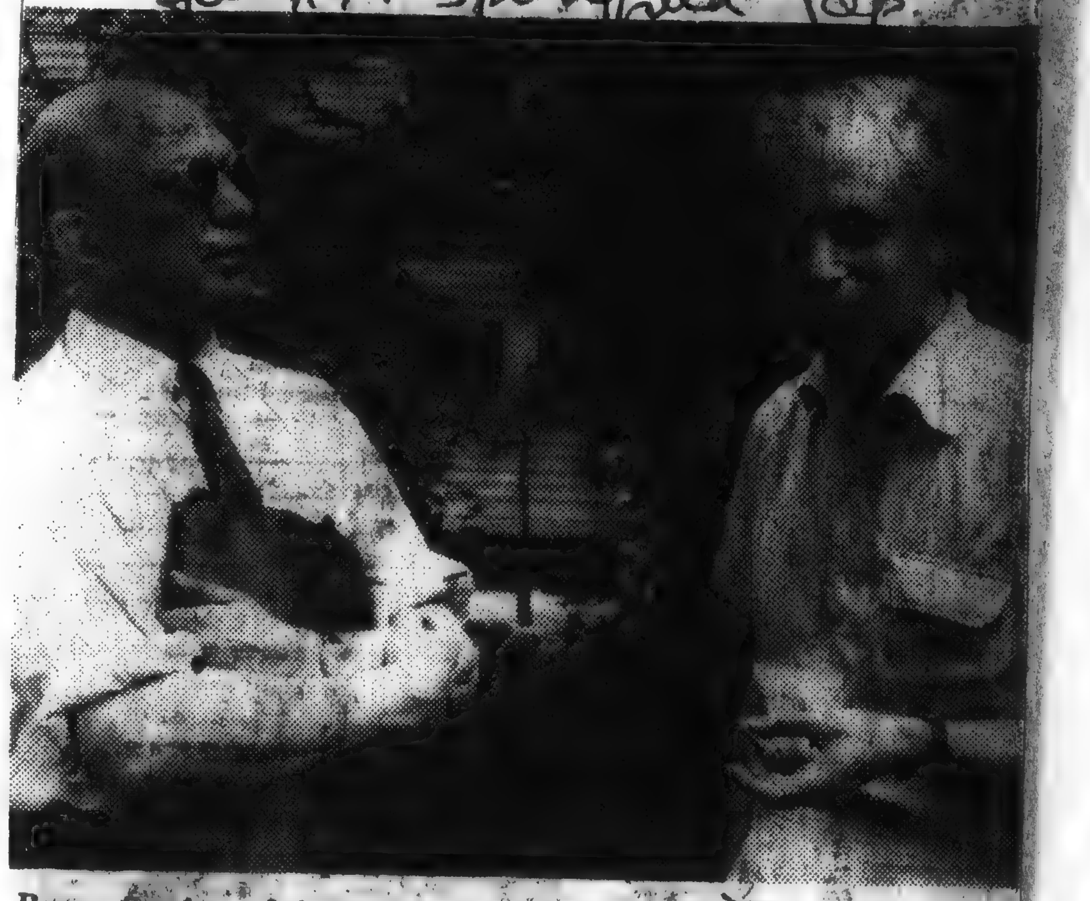
The first half of the program had its dubious moments. Respighi's orchestration of the Bach Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor is overblown and grandiose. One can take but little pleasure in this arrangement even when it is played with a discretion and finesse lacking on this occasion.

* * *

As for the Beethoven Second Symphony, it was with some amazement that one heard the orchestra almost fall apart in the Larghetto movement, which the conductor felt impelled to speed up almost to an allegro tempo. The other movements fared but little better. But the conductor's many fine previous appearances with the orchestra, the esteem in which he is held, perhaps, above all, his venerable years make even such a departure from his usual high standards flow right over his imperturbable back. The audience responded to all the works with almost equal enthusiasm.

Noted Modern Composers

July 17 - Springfield Rep.



Roger Sessions, left, professor of music at Princeton University, and Boris Blacher, right, director of the Hichschule fur Musik in Berlin, are in charge of the Berkshire Music Center's composition department at Tanglewood this summer. Students of the noted modern composers give their first forum tonight at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the concert open to the public through membership in the Friends' Society.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 22 1955

First Shed Concert At Lenox Tonight

The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, from the intimate Theater-Concert Hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony. This season, as last, there will be 12 [illegible] in the Shed by the [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra, [illegible] the difference that all [illegible] now concentrated in the [illegible] four week-ends of the [illegible] on Friday and Saturday [illegible]ngs and Sunday afte[illegible]

Pierre Monteu[illegible] to Tanglewood for h[illegible] consecutive summe[illegible] the conduc[illegible] tomorrow [illegible] Bach's Passacaglia [illegible] in C Minor (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, Professor of Music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday afternoon, July 24, Mr. Munch will conduct another all-Beethoven program, this one made up of three symphonics, the First, Fourth and Sixth.

[250]

NY Journal American
7/25/55

At Tanglewood:

Beethoven Weekend

Munch Catches Human Qualities

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., JULY 25.—Three symphonies took Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra well into their Beethoven cycle at yesterday's concert in the music shed. With the Second Symphony also on Pierre Monteux's program on Saturday night, the weekend was predominantly Beethoven, just as it will be two weeks hence.

Some people still may say that a lineup including the First, Fourth and Sixth symphonies represents the "minor" Beethoven. Others may contend that the heart of the composer shines brightly through these works.

Munch showed the human quality in them. More than anything else, he caught the essence of vivacity in the First and Fourth, expressing a joyousness through the performances quite infectious.

The juxtaposition of the First and Fourth revealed Beethoven's growth interestingly, especially in the slow introduction to both first movements. Munch consciously or unconsciously emphasized the blossoming out of feeling to be found in the Fourth. The lovely Song of the Adagio strengthened the impression. When cheerfulness broke in thereafter, the gaiety was outspoken.

In Tune With Sun

Tanglewood always enters into performances of the "pastoral" symphony here. The serenity that nature brings is inescapable in both. Yesterday the identity was even graphic.

After the prayerful measure of thankfulness near the close of the final movement, the sun came from behind a cloud and illumined Tanglewood just as Munch and the orchestra made the music sound more radiant. It was a touch of insight characteristic of Munch and marking his ever growing understanding.

Not all was serene with the musicians' playing at the beginning of the concert, but then weather conditions continued warm and humid. A crowd of 8,700 people attended, about 200 more than the night before.

Monteux made the first of his three appearances on Saturday night. The program ranged from the Bach[illegible] his Passacaglia and [illegible] in C Minor through [illegible] dense orchestral suite from The Black [illegible] and Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration." [illegible] he performed [illegible] New York. Sessions is "composer-in-residence" at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 42,980

JUL 17 1955

Bernstein Scores Triumph At Concert In Tanglewood

By GEORGE MORGAN

It was a young man's evening at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood Friday. Those music lovers unacquainted with Leonard Bernstein's powers as an executant and as an interpreter were delighted and amazed to see and hear this talented composer of scores like "On The Town" and "Wonderful Town" not for concert hall purposes, conduct and perform Mozart. That the entire program was made up of choice compositions of that young genius of a century and a half ago added to the thrill and exhilaration of the evening.

After the opening Don Giovanni Overture, the only piece in which there was the tiniest roughness in the superb Boston Orchestra String tone, came an impeccable rendition of a great symphony, the one in C major called "Linz," magnificent vocalization by Mme. Jennie Tourel of three little known arias of extensive proportions and as climax the G major piano concerto with Mr Bernstein as soloist and conductor.

This unique piece with its delightful instrument action (woodwinds' strings and piano carry on with constant and amazing ingenuity), the superb Italianate melodies of the slow movement and the wonderful variations on a theme of disarming simplicity of the finale received a performance completely in the spirit of its creator.

The orchestra seemed as pleased as the audience in a young man's triumph in bringing to life this wealth of beauty and collaborated with the utmost spontaneity. The intensity and length of the applause indicated that the entire audience appreciated the extraordinary quality of this festival evening.

String Quartet To Play Tonight At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 26 — Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This Wednesday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall the fourth concert in this season's Chamber Music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet.

The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2; the Quartet in E flat, Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132. The New Music String Quartet is the Quartet-in-Residence of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello.

Sp Union 7/27

Piatigorsky Not Able to Appear, Revise Programs

Lenox, July [illegible] — Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on Sunday, July 31, Wednesday, Aug. 10, and Friday, Aug. 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced today because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at this Sunday afternoon's concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Music Shed, Mr. Stern will per-will form Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, Aug. 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven Cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, has substituted Beethoven Chamber Music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,995

JUL 21 1955

Conductor-Pianist Talents of Bernstein Highlight Second Week of Music Festival

By George E. Membrino

The second week of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood was highlighted [illegible] talents of pianist-conductor Leonard Bernstein. This noted personality more than captivated his audience through his superb display of expert musicianship last Friday evening.

The overture to "Don Giovanni," (K. 527) opened the program. Making its Tanglewood premiere, it was well received. The overture opens solemnly and ends gaily. The many scales and lighthearted melodic simplicity—a synonymous with Mozart—filled us with awe. A more than fitting start was gained to an evening of all-Mozart.

Following the Overture, Symphony n C Major (K. 425) was performed. In the "Linz," Mr. Bernstein showed a credible feeling for the slight tempo changes within the movements. This, to a high degree, added to the formal rigidity of this classic style.

Soprano soloist for the evening was Miss Jennie Tourel. She was formerly heard at Tanglewood during the 1953 season when she scored highly in Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," and the Second Symphony of Mahler. Biss Hourel offered the aria "Zeffiretti Lusinghiere," from the opera "Idomeneo," (K. [illegible]) and the rondo for soprano and orchestra, "Al desie, di chi t'adora," (K. 577). The heartiest applause was given for the latter.

The display of the conductor-pianist role by Great Barrington's summer resident, Mr. Bernstein, followed intermission. Mozart's Piano Concerto in G Major, (K. 453) was so well performed a recording of such would certainly be ajudicated as separate conductor and pianist. Although Mr. Bernstein has performed this delightful musical role many times, it never-the-less, takes on a fresh air at every hearing. The final movement, "Allegretto; Presto," was flawless in dextral velocity and also superb in orchestral unity.

Saturday night and Sunday afternoon were devoted entirely to the musical product of two great musical nations, Italy and France. Charles Munch, conductor of both concerts, displayed a more thorough knowledge and feeling for the French. Boccherini's Concerto for Violoncello in B flat major (Ou. 34) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's principal cellist, Samuel Mayes, as soloist, provided entertainment most worthy of mention. This relative of the late Will Rogers proved to be more than capable of being recognized as one of the leading cello players in major orchestras today.

The remaining part of the Italian Night Program consisted of music by Vivaldi. In addition to two of his concerti Gossi (the D minor and B minor, his Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra was performed with Hugh Ross conducting. A recent revival of the "Gloria" has been one of the outstanding contributions of modern time to the revival and appreciation of Vivaldi.

Sunday afternoon's concert of all-French music seemed to be written to order for Conductor Munch. He was, without doubt, the best he has been in the role of conductor of this season's concerts. Mr. Munch's freedom and ease were apparent in all of the afternoon's undertakings.

In chronological order music of Rameas, Faure, Ravel, Milhaud, and Honegger were heard. It remained for music in the most modern of veins to score the highest for the entire concert. Honneger's "Symphony No. 4" proved to be all that can be desired in a contemporary composition of such large scope. Following a more or less late-classic outline, the work displays modern sounds mingled with traditional analysis. Mr. Munch fulfill the heavy role of conductor in the truest sense.

This week's performance by the student orchestra marked a high degree of improvement for the group. Conductors were Kenneth Schermerhorn, George Mester and Charles Munch. Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" by Dukas were both led by Mr. Munch. The latter, well known by many, proved to be most amusing and enjoyable to all. This programatic continuing in part of the student concerts seems to be growing in audience appeal. Our hope is that it continues. A high note should be given for the young conductor, George Mester, a young man of 20 from Mexico City who has displayed real talent and poise as a conductor these last two weeks.

This week marks the start of the main shed series. The complete 105 members of the Boston Orchestra will combine starting Friday to honor the music of Beethoven. Symphonies 1, 2, 4, 6, and 7 are programmed for the week, as well as the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. Mr. Pierre Monteux will appear Saturday evening as guest conductor. Formerly conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (1919-1924) he remains as a most colorful figure in music today. The attendance of at least one concert this week-end is sure to prove most satisfying.

Berkshire Festival Concerts Enter Their Fourth Week

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet tomorrow, July 27, in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31).

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard"

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of that German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as solbist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

The Echo, New Salem 7/26/55

Paintings of Weather Shown at Tanglewood

Paintings of the weather by Helmut C. Siber, a Berkshire County resident, are on exhibit this week in the exhibition hall at the main gate at Tanglewood in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Siber's paintings are recent watercolors painted in the Green Mountains in Vermont along with others done in the last three years in the Smoky Mountains and in the Sierra Nevada.

A native of Bremen, Germany, the artist in his youth was apprenticed as a lithographer and later went to sea as sailor, radio operator and quartermaster aboard cargo ships. He attempted his first cloud paintings when he encountered the monsoon. After he came to the United States he continued his cloud studies along the Atlantic Coast and in California.

AUXILIARY TO MEET

m at

KEEP COOL WITH

Beethoven's Great Music Features First Shed Concert With Munch As Director

The power and beauty of Beethoven's great music reasserted itself (as if such a reassertion were necessary) at the first festival concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last night.

A capacity crowd (more than 7,500 persons) jammed the Shed and littered the lawns to hear Charles Munch whip his charges through a dynamic reading of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, the symphony in A major, a colorful performance of the Coriolan Overture, and, with Isaac Stern, violinist, as soloist, through lush and lovely playing of the Violin Concerto in Major, Op. 61.

It would be difficult to choose a high spot, for, as is true of most Tanglewood performances, the entire evening was musically gratifying. Outstanding, however, were the Rondo of the violin concerto and the third and fourth movements of the symphony.

The overture which opened the program is a surging powerful work. Aside from the Lenore and Egmont overtures, Beethoven did little in this particular genre, but the Coriolan alone would illustrate the composer's mastery of the form. Last night its performance proved a fine beginning to a fine concert.

Isaac Stern was soloist for the violin concerto which followed. The lyric first movement received loving treatment from Mr. Stern. His phrasing was melting and the tones which sang through the shed were pure and melting. Never did Mr. Stern resort to tricks or to prima donna tactics. He let the music speak for itself. Mr. Stern's mastery of the violin was given full opportunity for display, however. The cadenzas, frighteningly difficult, seemed child's play in the hands (or bow) of Mr. Stern. The audience broke into spontaneous applause at the conclusion of the first movement. The larghetto was smoothly played and transition from the singing phrases of that movement to the joyous strains of the rondo was breathtaking. The orchestral accompaniment was properly both a subordinate and an equal.

The concerto does not call for sweeping brilliance—it requires musicianship and good taste, two qualities amply afforded by both soloist and orchestra last night.

Except for a somewhat stolid first movement, and for a lengthily retarded second movement, the seventh symphony received first rate treatment. It is a magnificent work and like all masterpieces possesses the ability to fascinate with familiarity. Rhythm is the key to this immense work, and at least the presto and allegro were literally a good clip but in the process of gradual crescendo through the design of melody and countermelody the tempo slowed drastically.

Tonight at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony under the direction of Pierre Monteux will present a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Strauss.

In the program notes, Charles Munch is quoted, defending his choice of Beethoven as the principal composer of the Festival season: "The principal reason why we musicians must always listen to this music and why we must make it heard is that it is above all human. Every one can find in it what he needs and what he is searching for. . It is elevating and ennobling. And I hope with all my heart that our Festival will be a blessing that may unite us all—those who make music and those who listen to it—in a noble and fervent communion."

Last night's concert proved a worthy beginning to this Tanglewood season's tribute to one of the greatest musical geniuses of all time.—B. D.

Thousands Hear Beethoven's Works At Tanglewood

Three Beethoven symphonies graced Sunday's program at Tanglewood on a very comfortable, sunshiny afternoon. The thousands enjoying themselves on the lawn may have been a bit warm in the sun, but not uncomfortable and certainly filled to the brim with the symphonic efforts of the composer of the day.

The emphasis this year is very much on Beethoven and all his symphonies are scheduled to be heard some time during the current season. The 1st, 4th and 6th symphonies were given the inestimable Boston Symphony treatment yesterday. Charles Munch at his charming best conducted with enthusiasm and fervor.

When Mr Munch came on to conduct the First Symphony, in C Major, he fairly exuded vitality and well-being. So did the symphony. It is a very clean work, precise without being mincing, a work that the true musician loves to play. One that challenges his ability and delights his musician's mind. Mr. Munch communicated his nice feeling about this symphony to those in the audience and it made one feel almost bouncy, too, when the music forced him to raise up onto his toes.

The Fourth, in B flat Major is not as well known as either the first or the sixth but fitted in very nicely to the first half of the program. It seems rather simple with its charming melodies and sparkling gaiety, but it happens to be about the last symphony in which Beethoven made use of syncopation. Whether or not he felt that off-beat rhythms were too taxing for the instrumentalist of his day is a matter for conjecture. The fact remains that you will not find him using it to any extent in the remainder of his symphonic works.

His Sixth in F Major, the Pastoral, could have been made to order for the day. There was a comment in the program notes to the effect that this symphony had a monotony about it that was not in the least monotonous.

One felt throughout that there was a wonderfully drousy feeling it is possible to feel on a warm sunshiny afternoon. There is a monotony about such an afternoon, with all of the sounds of nature to tempt the ear but it is not monotonous to the true lover of the out-of-doors. Beethoven sensed this and being Beethoven was able to capture the spell intrinsically in music as he experienced it. If you have ever heard the marvelous beginnings of thunder which roll from deep inside the double basses in the third movement, and thrilled through the excitement of the storm you will know how well he did capture it. And then the wonderful theme that is smoothly introduced without pause as the fourth movement is entered upon. The markings in the score say "gladsome and thankful feelings after the storm." The satisfaction to be derived from this inspired writing would be impossible to determine.

At an informal gathering, following the concert, it was our privilege to be introduced and to speak to a number of well known people we would not ordinarily expect to meet. The first of these was the Boston Symphony director himself, Mr. Munch. Others met for the first time were Carlos Chavez, the Mexican composer, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, Rockwell Kent, cover artist for the Saturday Evening Post, and many other less famous individuals connected in one way or another with Tanglewood. A trip to the Berkshire Festival is always most rewarding.—F.M.R.

In ancient Rome the stork wa sacred to Venus, goddess of lov

Monteux Directs Roger Sessions' Orchestral Suite

Music of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Strauss received exceptionally fine treatment at the conducting hands of Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Festival Concert at Tanglewood Saturday evening.

Mr. Monteux is a musician of the highest order, and his crisp and precise direction was wonderful to watch (and this reviewer does not make it a practice of watching conductors, most of whom are simply distracting) and, one imagines, a joy to follow. He treated all the music—the greatness of the Renaissance composer, the genius of the German, the freshness of the American and the lushness of the late Romantic, with loving and tender care.

The musical fare offered to the Saturday audience was varied enough to please any enthusiast.

The program opened with a magnificent reading of the Bach "Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor," orchestrated by Respighi. The power and the beauty of this work was almost overpowering although the interpretation might have been somewhat romantic for the purist. But for most, including this reviewer, it was the highspot of the evening.

The Beethoven second symphony was almost serene by contrast, although the musical masterpiece certainly did not suffer by juxtaposition. It was played with tonal beauty, with subtle shadings. The second movement is one of the loveliest ever written, with its unbroken flow of melody, and the third movement, the scherzo, was rippling and bubbling.

The Roger Sessions' "Orchestral Suite from 'The Black Maskers'" was certainly a fine example of craftsmanship, with the first and third movements especially effective. The work abounds in cacaphonies, in wild coloring, and in extensive use of woodwinds. Its primary effect depends upon instrumentation, however, and it is fortunate that as great a group as the Boston Symphony was performing the work. In the hands of a lesser organization and a lesser conductor, it might have been unsuccessful. But Mr. Monteux accorded the same tasteful and masterly treatment to this work as he did to the Bach and the Beethoven, and the results were pleasant and interesting.

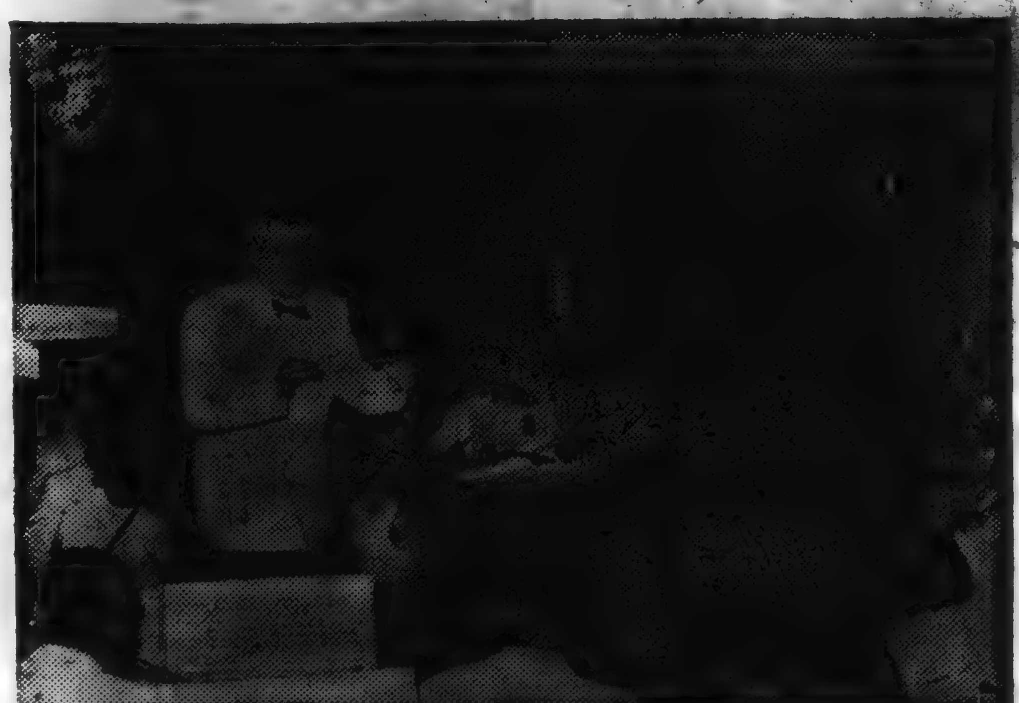
The Strauss "Death and Transfiguration" tone poem is a moving work, and the performance was rich in color and lush in feeling the sound. Strauss attached deep philosophical concepts to the music, or rather attached the music to the concepts. In spite of agreement or disagreement with the tenets, the music remains appealing and the work dramatic and poetic. Certainly, Saturday, its performance proved a fitting climax to a musically sound and often exciting evening.

The Wednesday chamber music concert in the theatre-concert hall will feature the three Beethoven string quartets played by the New Music String Quartet. —B.D.

G. M. Employes

SPRIN[illegible]ELD FREE PRESS—SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1955

Munch At Berkshire Festival



Charles Munch, music director for the past six years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducts concerts by the symphony at the annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts, during the six-week season, July 6-Aug. 14. Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, now in its thirteenth session.

Berkshire Eagle
7/26

Tanglewood Tales

Bernstein Conducts Thursday Night

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the student symphony orchestra of Tanglewood in Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" at the Thursday evening concert in the Music Shed. Kenneth Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, will be on the podium for Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis"; James Yannatos, of New York, will conduct the first movement of Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Jerome Lowenthal, of Philadelphia, as soloist; and Stefan Bauer-Mengelberg, of New York, will direct the symphony in the Prelude and Love-Death from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde."

* * *

Friends' Contributions Short of $40,000 Goal

Mrs. Lucy Putnam, chairman of the Society of Friends, through membership in which the public may attend student concerts at Tanglewood, their contribution going to the support of the Berkshire Music Center, announced that contributions so far this season have reached a total of $26,000, towards a summer goal of $40,000. Gifts from Friends are considerably ahead of 1954, when the Boston Symphony's summer music school benefited by $23,545 at the end of the season.

Berkshire Eagle
7/26

Public Events

Tonight

7:30—Mardi gras parade, North Street.
8:30—"Celebrity Night," Berkshire Museum.
8:30—Opera scenes. Tanglewood theater, Lenox. (BMC Friends)
8:30—The Wayfarers, in international folk songs. Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.
8:30—Three Centuries of folk music by Trio D'Amore. Berkshire Folk Music Workshop, Sedgwick Hall, Lenox.
8:40—"Picnic." Williamstown

New Music Quartet at Tanglewood

Fourth Concert In Chamber Series Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall the fourth concert in this season's Chamber Music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2; the Quartet in E flat, Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132.

The New Music String Quartet is in the Quartet-in-Residence of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. Mr. Earle, a native of Chicago, joined his first string quartet at the age of 15 and chamber music has remained his absorbing interest ever since. He is a native of New York and a gradute of the Juilliard School of Music and Columbia University. The violist, Walter Trampler, is a former member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the famed Strub Quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. Mr. Soyer, the cellist, was born in Philadelphia and had given several New York recitals. He has also made several solo appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Tanglewood Tales

Short Comic Opera Added to Program

There will be a dividend for opera fans on the program of short operas and choral music announced by the Berkshire Music Center for Monday evening, Aug. 1. In addition to Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," and Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane," and choral selections by students of Rugh Ross's chorus department, Boris Goldovsky has announced the opera department will give "Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bouslav Martinu, who was Tanglewood's guest composer in 1946. It will be staged by Sarah Caldwell, stage director of the opera department, and Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment. This program, as well as the succeeding ones on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, requires reserved seat tickets, and patrons should apply to the Friends' office at Tanglewood for reservations .

7/14

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Put us back with the old fogies. We heard Hindemith's "Der Schwanendreher" Saturday at Tanglewood for the first time. The program notes said that the composer does not know the meaning of the title, except that "dreher" indicates one who turns a crank. For us the whole work might have been written by turning a crank. We have enjoyed music by Hindemith — but not this one.

The composition is based on European folk tunes (to believe the program notes), but we have seldom heard anything more harsh or lugubrious. Joseph de Pasquale played the solo viola very acceptably. No other violas and no violins are used in the composition. Noisy and prolonged applause indicated that many in the audience did not share our lack of enthusiasm.

The other numbers on the Saturday program were standard 18th Century fare: Handel's Concerto Grosso in B minor; Haydn's Sinfonie Concertante, Op. [illegible], in which a small orchestra supports a quartet of violin, cello, oboe and bassoon; and Haydn's B flat major symphony, No. [illegible]. Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinatti orchestra, was on the podium. The Andante movement of the Sinfonie concertant was rewarding listening, as was the final Haydn Symphony, but we missed the sparkle and grace which we have come to expect from the small orchestra and didn't know whether to blame Mr. Johnson or the weather, which has effectively removed most of the gaiety from life in the last two weeks.

This was the third concert of the season at Tanglewood, the honor of opening the season having fallen to the Kroll quartet, in which William Kroll of Woodstock is 1st violinist. We were unable to hear the first and second concert, and the highly praised Bach B Minor Mass on Sunday.

At the Theatres:

Woodstock Playhouse, July 12-17, "The Fifth Season."

Malden Bridge Playhouse, July 12-17, "Gigi."

Berkshire Playhouse, July 11-16, "Sabrina Fair."

Music:

Tanglewood: Fri. Eve., July 15, all Mozart program, Overture to "Don Giovanni," Symphony in C major (K.425), Arias from "Idomenea" and "Al Desio" and Piano Concerto in G major, with Leonard Bernstein as conductor and pianist and Jennie Tourel, soloist. Sat. Eve., July 16, Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in D, Boccherini Concerto for Cello, Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B minor and Vivaldi Gloria. Sunday Aft., July 17, all French program, Rameau Suite from "Dardanus," Ravel, "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure Pavane, Milhaud Serenade and Honegger Symphony No .4.

Woodstock: Maverick Concert, Sun., July 17, at 4:00 p.m.

Jacob's Pillow, dancing, second week of Royal Danish Ballet, including largely dances by Bournonville, excerpts from "Les Sylphides" and a pas de deux, "The Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep." Wed., Fri. and Sat., July 13, 15, 16, evenings at 9. Thurs., Fri. and Sat., July 14 ,15 and 16, afternoons at 4.

Boston Herald
7/27/55

Fourth Week Starts At Berkshire Festival

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and the fourth week starts tonight at 8:30 P. M. in the Theater-Concert Hall with a concert in the chamber music series given by the New Music String Quartet, who will play three string quartets by Beethoven. Due to the illness of Gregor Piatigorsky, the program for Sunday, July 31, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been revised, and in place of Brahms' Concerto for Violin and Cello, with Mr. Piatigorsky and Isaac Stern as soloists, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Op. 77.

Revisions have also been made for the concert in the Shed on Friday night, Aug. 12, when Mr. Piatigorsky was to have been the soloist in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo." For the Bloch selectino and the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Charles Munch will substitute Berlioz's "Symphonia Fantastique."

Times 7/27

PIATIGORSKY UNABLE TO APPEAR AT LENOX

Three programs of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., have been revised because Gregor Piatigorsky, the scheduled soloist, is unable to appear.

The programs, revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are those of Sunday, Wednesday, Aug. 10, and Friday, Aug. 12.

Mr. Piatigorsky wired Mr. Munch yesterday from his home in California that because of a shoulder ailment he would be unable to participate in this year's Berkshire Festival.

At Sunday afternoon's concert, Isaac Stern will instead be the soloist, playing the Brahms Concerto. The scheduled sonata recital by Mr. Piatigorsky on Aug. 10 will be replaced by an all-Beethoven chamber music program. The Friday concert, which was to have offered Mr. Piatigorsky as soloist in Bloch's "Schelomo," will replace that work with Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. [illegible]2,039

JUL 1 1955

Berkshire Music Center To Start 13th Season

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 13th season Sunday with a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony and director of the center, will address students and guests at opening exercises at 3:30 p.m. at the Theatre-Concert hall and William Cox will preside. Members of the faculty will be introduced by Richard Burgin, acting assistant director, and Dean Ralph Berkowitz.

Greene County Examiner Recorder
7/21

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Last winter in the "Atlantic" Leonard Bernstein engaged in a long argument with himself as to whether he should continue to write music for the popular stage and should abandon conducting, playing and composing concert music.

The answer seemed plain Friday at Tanglewood when Bernstein leaped backward into the 18th century to conduct and play in an all-Mozart concert. The audience was delighted, but obviously nobody had a better time than Mr. Bernstein, who seemed to be where he belonged.

After the Don Giovanni overture, the small orchestra played the Linz symphony in C major, K 445, reputedly composed in three days when Mozart was twenty-seven. Lacking the depth of his few later symphonies, it shows Mozart as an innovator who dared, among other things, to open a symphony with a discord.

Mr. Bernstein and the orchestra played the symphony as well as we could wish, but saved their greatest enthusiasm for the G Major piano concerto in which Bernstein was pianist-conductor. We understand that Bruno Walter is the only other conductor who undertakes the double task with this concerto. Mr. Bernstein moved from one capacity to the other as easily as most of us change gears in a car, executing both his duties almost to perfection, with the help of the beautifully trained Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The performance was much more than a tour-de-force; it was a magnificent rendition of a gem of sound. A group of woodwinds alternates with the piano as another participant in the concerto, which is Mozart at the top of his form.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo soprano, who has often appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sang three Mozart arias in a rich, beautiful voice, but (other reviewers to the contrary notwithstanding) we found her voice not sufficiently flexible for the coloratura portions.

* * *

The Tanglewood Sunday music was very different from that of Friday. Charles Munch conducted, with his usual skill, an all-French program. Beginning with the graceful 18th century "Dardanus" suite of Rameau, he continued with Ravel's delightful and glittering "Le Tombeau de Couperin," in which the modernist writes a 20th Century version of 18th century music. This was followed by Faure's "Pavane", a courtly, elegiac dance, which unfortunately had to compete with a jet plane overhead.

The last two works were Darius Milhaud's "Serenade", composed about 1920, and Arthur Honegger's 4th Symphony, written in 1946. The Milhaud work, also known as his third symphony, is unlike any serenade written before the twentieth century, in spirit and sound; and the Honegger composition does not at first hearing seem to represent the pleasures of a vacation in Switzerland, which the composer said he was describing.

Last week we wrote unfavorably of Hindemith's "Schwanendreher", which seemed to both of us almost to have reached the point where music becomes meaningless noise. As often happens with modern music, this column needs a third member to cast the deciding vote on the Milhaud and Honegger. One of us did not like it much; the other was thoroughly pleased by the vividness, color and vitality of the music and the apparently limitless possibilities for development which the new styles of composition offer.

Some of the modern music seems formless, but this, although very different from older works, had very definite forms. The dispute as to the merits of modern music is one which only our children or grandchildren will be able to settle, and for the present we shall leave it to them.

The string section of the Boston orchestra is famous. In the music played currently by the small orchestra, the woodwinds may be heard more clearly than in a larger group. This year, their work seems close to perfection.

COMING EVENTS

At the Theatres:

Woodstock Playhouse: This week, "The Rainmaker". July 26 to 31, "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

Berkshire Playhouse: This week, "The Old Maid". July 25 to 30, "Reclining Figure."

Malden Bridge Playhouse: This week, "The Fifth Season", July 26 to Aug. 7, "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

Tanglewood:

First concerts with full orchestra in the music shed.

Friday Evening, July 22 — All Beethoven, Overture to "Coriolan"; Violin Concerto; Symphony No. 7 in A major. Soloist, Isaac Stern. Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday evening, July 23 — Bach-Respighi Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beehoven Symphony No. 2; Sessions Suite from the "Balck Maskers"; Strauss "Death and Transfiguration", Pierre Monteux conducting.

Sunday afternoon, July 24 — All Beethoven, Symphonies No. 1, 4 and 6. Charles Munch conducting.

Maverick Sunday afternoon concert at Woodstock.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 509,171 - S. 1,117,392

JUL 11 1955

National Broadcasting Company radio will carry the Berkshire Festival concerts from Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass., today and on following Mondays. Ben Grauer will narrate the programs, which will run from 8:15 to 9 P. M.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,675

JUL 21 1955

Music Shed Is Popular

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is in its 18th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 16th in which the orchestra has participated. The six-week festival of 24 concerts runs from July 6-Aug. 14. In 1954, Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 135,775 music lovers. Its chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate Theater Concert-Hall averaged an attendance of 2275 persons. An average of 9197 persons attended performances in the huge Music Shed (capacity 6000).

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 8 1955

Munch to Conduct Chamber Orchestra at Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

CHARLES MUNCH
Will Conduct Tonight

THE PROGRAM, which will mark Munch's first appearance on the Tanglewood podium this summer, will include two works by Bach — the Sinfonia from the "Easter" Oratorio (first performance at Tanglewood) and the Suite in B Minor for Flute and Strings. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center, will be the soloist in the Bach Suite. The program will also include the Stravinsky music for the Ballet "Orpheus" (new to Tanglewood) and Mozart's Symphony number 38 in D major, the so-called "Prague" Symphony.

* * *

THE SIX CONCERTS of the chamber orchestra series will be given this year in the first two weekends of the festival with programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow evening's program will be conducted by Thor Johnson and will include music by Handel, Haydn and Hindemith with Joseph de Pasquale as viola soloist in the Hindemith "Der Schwanendreher."

Sunday Conductor Munch will present the Bach "Mass in B minor" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society assisting. Vocal soloists for the Sunday program, which opens at 2:30 o'clock, will include Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

REMAINING SEATS for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 14, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office. Telephone reservations are also accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which will also seat the lawn audience.

BA[illegible] LA.

JUN 24 19[illegible]

SLC Graduate Returning After Year in Vienna

HAMMOND, June 23 — Ralph Pottle Jr., a Southeastern Louisiana College graduate, is returning to the United States this week following a year's study in Vienna on Fulbright grant.

Pottle, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Pottle of Hammond, will go to Tanglewood, Mass., where he will serve as a member of the Berkshire Music Festival. A noted French horn player, young Pottle has been on the staff for eight summers. He is also a member of the National Symphony orchestra in Washington, D.C.

Before he reports at Tanglewood, the Southeastern graduate will visit his sister Mrs. Fern Pottle Atkinson in New Jersey.

Dr. Pottle is head of Southeastern's music school.

Eagle
7/6/55

'Music Under the Moon'

John Mahanna's New Book Covers History of Festival

Announcement was made today by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. of the publication of a new book, "Music Under the Moon," written by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

John G. W. Mahanna

The first edition of 5,000 copies is now at the printer's and is expected to be off the presses in time for distribution the weekend of July 15, the second week of the Festival's six-week season.

"Music Under the Moon" is described by the author as an early history of the Festival, drawn from official minutes of the meetings of the corporation from 1934 to 1945 when the $100,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood was presented as a gift to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

48 Pages of Illustrations

In addition to 30,000 words of text, the 125-page book contains 48 pages of illustrations. Many of the nearly 100 photographs are being published for the first time. These include photos taken in the early days of the Festival in a horse show ring at the Hanna Farm, later in a tent at Holmwood, Mrs. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's estate, and at Tanglewood before the Shed was built in 1938.

An epilogue in "Music Under the Moon" covers high lights from 1945 to the present. Included are the establishment of the Berkshire Music Center, the retirement and death of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, the engagement of Charles Munch as conductor of the orchestra and successor to Dr. Koussevitzky as musical director ending with the tribute paid by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last year to Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, president of the Festival and the board of trustees of the organization for their part in founding the outdoor concerts and their ultimate success.

Covered Festival News

"Music Under the Moon" stems from a series of articles written last summer by Mr. Mahanna and published by The Eagle in its weekly supplement, The Weekender (now the Berkshire Week). Mr. Mahanna, who started his newspaper career in 1933 as correspondent for his home town of Lenox, site of the Festival, has been associated with the news coverage of the Festival concert center since its inception. He served on the county and city staffs of The Eagle prior to being appointed county editor in September, 1947. The only break in his newspaper service was from 1942 to 1945 when he was in the Navy, part of that time being in combat duty with the Pacific Fleet which he reported in special dispatches to The Eagle.

The Eagle Printing & Binding Co. of this city is printing "Music Under the Moon," and the engravings are by the Eagle Engraving Co. Copies will be distributed to county book stores, and the Tanglewood Music Store by the Pittsfield News Co. as well as to book stores in Boston, Cape Cod, New York and the Albany area.

HARRISBURG, PA.
EVENING NEWS
Circ. D. 82,909

JUL 1 1955

★ ★ ★

MUSIC LOVERS will want to begin making reservations for this season's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

Tanglewood, as you know, is the summer gathering place for the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Muench, in a distinguished series of music events lasting from July 8 through Aug. 18. JIM SAWYER

The 12 major concerts take place in the vast open air musicshed which holds 8,000 persons, while another 4,000 can be accommodated on the lawn and in the bleachers which surround the area.

The location for summer concentration on the world's best music is the grounds which New England writer Nathaniel Hawthorne made famous in his "Tanglewood Tales," hence the name of the series.

You'll be interested to know that guest baton-wielders this summer will include Thor Johnson, Pierre Monteux and Leonard Bernstein, while soloists of distinction invited to take part in the dozen Music Shed orchestral concerts are Isaac Stern, who appeared in Harrisburg last season; Leontine Price, Rudolph Serkin, Eugene Istomin and Jennie Tourel, just to name a few.

My cousin, Jim Sawyer, from Lemoyne, usually manages to get away to Tanglewood for a few days and I know there are many others from Harrisburg and surrounding communities who make the trip to New England each year for the Festival.

SAVANNAH, GA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 49,971 - S. 57,518

JUL 10 1955

Berkshire Festival

Savannahians are interested in announcement of the Berkshire Festival Concerts this summer, as annually a few local musicians attend, this year Savannah to be again represented.

Following is the announcement: Symphony, choral and chamber music comes again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Sympony Orchestra, led by its music director, Charles Munch. For the sixteenth summer since the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated, concerts will be given for six weeks, July 6 to August 14, on the estate where a century ago Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest and told his "Tanglewood Tales".

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commences on Wednesday evening (July 6) with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening (July 8), Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program mof Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyere, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orcrestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Sympony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon (July 10), Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, Soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

The above concerts and those of the following week, July 13-15-16-17, will all be given in the intimate 1,200-seat Theatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 11 1955

Tanglewood Offers Chamber Works

Tanglewood again has become the musical Mecca. The huge crowd Saturday, using the rear of the Theatre Concert Hall stage and overflowing far out on the lawn, found old friends meeting again. Musical director of the Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch, welcomed Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and greeted Charles Judd, recently retired as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returning to hear the series he regulated so long.

True to tradition, the festival devotes the early concerts to chamber orchestra work, with the personnel drawn from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Thor Johnson, former student at the Berkshire Music Center and since 1947 conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was guest conductor. Mr. Johnson, emphasizing the traditions required and firmly maintaining the attitude of a perfectionist working with the perfect medium, produced delightful music.

Three works classics and a rarely heard modern work, with soloists from the orchestra dominating in three of the four compositions, kept the listener's interest throughout.

Opening with the Handel concerto grosso for string orchestra in B minor, Opus 6, No. 12, the concertino of two violins and cello, plus the continuo harpsichord, proved the refreshing resources of this baroque style.

Haydn's Symphonie Concertante in B flat major, Opus 84, utilizes a unique quartet. Concertmaster Richard Burgin and cellist Samuel Mayes were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Raymond Allard, bassoon, in a superb rendition of this display piece. Alternately his quartet and the orchestral body, Haydn explored broad resources, particularly in the double reeds. The concerto grosso style of the work echoed the Handel with formal modifications, but the emergence of particular characteristics of the instruments marked the more advanced period of the conception.

For the dominating work of the evening Mr. Johnson presented "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith's concerto on old folk melodies for viola and orchestra. Joseph de Pasquale, a magnificent violinst, well deserved the ovation that he received. Omitting the violins and violas in the orchestration, Hindemith made the solo position unusually prominent and, hence, very requiring. For Pasquale this allowed the rare opportunity to display the full artistry of his instrument.

With the soloists sharing the spotlight until the final gay Haydn symphony, the B flat major, No. 98, Mr. Johnson received a more personal accolade as the evening ended.—C. F. S.

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 16 1955

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Sun, Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. In[illegible] from Berkshire [illegible] Mass. Fri, July 15 [illegible] "Al Desio", [illegible] concerto in [illegible] and soloist. [illegible] Sat, July 16— [illegible] Boccherini Concerto [illegible] Samuel Mayes, soloist; Vivaldi: "Gloria" [illegible] Hugh Ross, [illegible] Suite "Dard[illegible]; Ravel, "Le Tomb[illegible] Couperin" [illegible] Pavane; [illegible] Serenade: Honeger's 4th Symphony. Charles [illegible] cond. . . . Wed, July 20—Isaac Stern, Alexander Zakin, Beethoven violin sonatas. . . . Fri, July 22—Boston Symphony Orch. Beethoven, Coriolan Overture; violin concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist. Beethoven's 7th Symphony. Charles Munch cond.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 7 1955

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 18th season of 24 concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,778 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9,197 persons with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 7 1955

1955 Berkshire Festival Launched At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music has come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Grámm, bass.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 12 1955

Beethoven, Mozart Programs Scheduled at Tanglewood

Public events in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week will open tomorrow evening with a Beethoven trio program by the Beaux Arts Trio.

* * *

FRIDAY EVENING Leonard Bernstein, American composer-conductor-pianist, will direct an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist.

Charles Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Saturday program features the 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini and the Sunday program will be given over entirely to French orchestral music.

All programs this week will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall with evening programs starting at 8:30 and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

* * *

THE PROGRAM for tomorrow will include the Beethoven trios, C minor, opus 1, number 3; D major, opus 70, number 1 (Ghost); and the B flat, opus 97 (Archduke). Members of the Beaux Arts Trio are Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra all-Mozart program for Friday will include the Overture to "Don Giovanni," the Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425); the arias "Al Desio," Zeffiretti" and "Non Temer", by Miss Tourel; and the piano concerto in G major (K. 453) with Bernstein as soloist.

THE ITALIAN MUSIC program Saturday night will include the Vivaldi concertos grosso in D, opus 3, number 11, and in B minor, opus 3, number 10; and the Boccherini concerto for cello with Samuel Mayes as soloist. Hugh Ross will conduct the Vivaldi "Gloria" with the Festival Chorus made up of Berkshire Music Center students. Soloists for the "Gloria" will be Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano.

The French music program Sunday will include Rameau, Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure, "Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; and the Honegger Symphony number 4.

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 16 1955

MUSIC FESTIVALS

You don't have to be a world traveler to enjoy the various European and American music festivals being held this summer—the concerts are as close as your own radio.

For the third consecutive season CBS is bringing its listeners the fine "World Music Festivals" series (Sundays, 2:30 p.m.). This Sunday, July 17th, the Stockholm Festival in Sweden will be broadcast to be followed by, among others, the Sibelius Festival in Helsinki, Finland; the Aspen Summer Festival in Colorado; the Salzburg Festival in Austria. On Mondays (8:15 p.m.) NBC is presenting the concerts of the world-renowned Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Saturday, July 16th, the first of four special programs originating from the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Drama and Music at Stratford, Ontario, will come to us via WOR (10 p.m.). Violinists Isaac Stern and Alexander Schneider will be featured with the Hart House Orchestra conducted by Boyd Neel.

—Fran Guidos

TIME
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUL 18 1955

RADIO

Monitor (Sat. 8 a.m. to Sun. midnight, NBC). A marathon, catchall weekend show of music, drama, comedy, etc., etc.

Invitation to Learning (Sun. 11:30 a.m., CBS). Dr. Lyman Bryson conducting a discussion of Percy [illegible] Shelley's [illegible] [illegible] 30 p.m., CBS). [illegible] conducting the Stockholm Royal Opera Orchestra in the third act of Wagner's Die Walküre.

Berkshire Festival (Mon. 8:15 p.m., NBC). The Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Mass.

The Telephone Hour (Mon. 9 p.m., NBC). Guest: Violinist Isaac Stern.

THE WASHINGTON POST and TIMES HERALD
14 Tuesday, July 26, 1955 ***

One On the Aisle

Type-Casting Not for Abbott

By Richard L. Coe

FROM THE FRISKY FARCES, daring dramas and perky musicals he's directed, produced and co-authored from "Broadway," "Love 'em and Leave 'em," and "Coquette" to "The Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees," one had a preconception of [illegible] Abbott.

Type casting would surely make him a brash Broadwayite, given to colorful language, earthy observations and black shirts. Type casting, as usual, couldn't be further from the truth.

Mr. Abbott is [illegible]

Tanglewood's D. C. Students

Study groups from all over the country are an annual feature of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass. Here, with Conductor Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, are, left to right, Washington's Karin Peterson, Judith Weinberg and Nancy Gardener, settled in the Berkshires through mid-August.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 52,692

JUL 11 1955

Tanglewood Offers Chamber Works

Tanglewood again has become the musical Mecca. The huge crowd Saturday, using the rear of the Theatre Concert Hall stage and overflowing far out on the lawn, found old friends meeting again. Musical director of the Berkshire Festival, Charles Munch, welcomed Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and greeted Charles Judd, recently retired as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returning to hear the series he regulated so long.

True to tradition, the festival devotes the early concerts to chamber orchestra work, with the personnel drawn from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Thor Johnson, former student at the Berkshire Music Center and since 1947 conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, was guest conductor. Mr. Johnson, emphasizing the traditions required and firmly maintaining the attitude of a perfectionist working with the perfect medium, produced delightful music.

Three works classics and a rarely heard modern work, with soloists from the orchestra dominating in three of the four compositions, kept the listener's interest throughout.

Opening with the Handel concerto grosso for string orchestra in B minor, Opus 6, No. 12, the concertino of two violins and cello, plus the continuo harpsichord, proved the refreshing resources of this baroque style.

Haydn's Symphonie Concertante in B flat major, Opus 84, utilizes a unique quartet. Concertmaster Richard Burgin and cellist Samuel Mayes were joined by Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Raymond Allard, bassoon, in a superb rendition of this display piece. Alternately his quartet and the orchestral body, Haydn explored broad resources, particularly in the double reeds. The concerto grosso style of the work echoed the Handel with formal modifications, but the emergence of particular characteristics of the instruments marked the more advanced period of the conception.

For the dominating work of the evening Mr. Johnson presented "Der Schwanendreher," Hindemith's concerto on old folk melodies for viola and orchestra. Joseph de Pasquale, a magnificent violinst, well deserved the ovation that he received. Omitting the violins and violas in the orchestration, Hindemith made the solo position unusually prominent and, hence, very requiring. For Pasquale this allowed the rare opportunity to display the full artistry of his instrument.

With the soloists sharing the spotlight until the final gay Haydn symphony, the B flat major, No. 98, Mr. Johnson received a more personal accolade as the evening ended.—C. F. S.

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — [illegible] Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 66[illegible] Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. [illegible] Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. In[illegible] Berkshire [illegible] Fri, [illegible] 15 [illegible] "Gl[illegible] Rose, [illegible] Suite "Dardanus"; Ravel, "Le T[illegible] Couperin" [illegible] Pavane; Mi[illegible] Serenade; Honegger's [illegible] Symphony. Ch[illegible] cond. . . . Wed, July 20—Isaac [illegible] Alexander Zakin, Beethoven violin sonatas. [illegible] . Fri, July 22—Boston Symphony Orch. Beethoven, Coriolan Overture; violin concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist. Beethoven's 7th Symphony. Charles Munch cond.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617

JUL 7 1955

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the 18th season of 24 concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in which the orchestra has participated, runs for six weeks, July 6-August 14. Record-breaking attendance of 135,775 was recorded in 1954. The huge Music Shed (capacity 6,000) attracted an average of 9,197 persons with crowds overflowing on the spacious lawns.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS-REPUBLICAN
Circ. W. 3,617
JUL 7 1955

1955 Berkshire Festival Launched At Tanglewood

Symphony, choral and chamber music has come again to the Berkshire Hills in Western Massachusetts with the opening this week at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., of the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by its Music Director, Charles Munch.

The 1955 Berkshire Festival of 24 concerts commenced on Wednesday evening with an all Beethoven program by the Kroll String Quartet. On Friday evening, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in a program of Bach, Stravinsky and Mozart, with the Orchestra's first flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, as soloist. The Saturday evening chamber orchestra concert of Handel, Haydn and Hindemith, with Boston Symphony Orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, as soloist, will have at its helm Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who was a student of conducting in 1940 and 1941 at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival concerts. On Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch will lead the chamber orchestra in Bach's Mass in B minor, with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039

JUL 1 2 1955

Beethoven, Mozart Programs Scheduled at Tanglewood

Public events in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week will open tomorrow evening with a Beethoven trio program by the Beaux Arts Trio.

* * *

FRIDAY EVENING Leonard Bernstein, American composer-conductor-pianist, will direct an all-Mozart program with Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, as soloist.

Charles Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. The Saturday program features the 18th century Italian music of Vivaldi and Boccherini and the Sunday program will be given over entirely to French orchestral music.

All programs this week will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall with evening programs starting at 8:30 and afternoon programs at 2:30 o'clock.

* * *

THE PROGRAM for tomorrow will include the Beethoven trios, C minor, opus 1, number 3; D major, opus 70, number 1 (Ghost); and the B flat, opus 97 (Archduke). Members of the Beaux Arts Trio are Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello, and Menahem Pressler, piano.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra all-Mozart program for Friday will include the Overture to "Don Giovanni," the Symphony in C major, "Linz" (K. 425); the arias "Al Desio," "Zeffiretti" and "Non Temer", by Miss Tourel; and the piano concerto in G major (K. 453) with Bernstein as soloist.

THE ITALIAN MUSIC program Saturday night will include the Vivaldi concertos grosso in D, opus 3, number 11, and in B minor, opus 3, number 10; and the Boccherini concerto for cello with Samuel Mayes as soloist. Hugh Ross will conduct the Vivaldi "Gloria" with the Festival Chorus made up of Berkshire Music Center students. Soloists for the "Gloria" will be Saramae Endich, soprano, and Sadie Ruth McCollum, mezzo-soprano.

The French music program Sunday will include Rameau, Suite from "Dardanus"; Ravel, "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Faure, "Pavane"; Milhaud, "Serenade"; and the Honegger Symphony number 4.

TIME
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUL 1 8 1955

RADIO

Monitor (Sat. 8 a.m. to Sun. midnight, NBC). A marathon, catchall weekend show of music, drama, comedy, etc., etc.

Invitation to Learning (Sun. 11:30 a.m., CBS). Dr. Lyman Bryson conducting a discussion of Percy [illegible] Shelley's [illegible] p.m., [illegible] the [illegible] in the third [illegible]

Berkshire [illegible] 8:15 p.m., NBC). The [illegible] at Tanglewood, Mass.

The Telephone Hour (Mon. 9 p.m., NBC). Guest: Violinist Isaac Stern.

MUSIC FESTIVALS

You don't have to be a world traveler to enjoy the various European and American music festivals being held this summer—the concerts are as close as your own radio.

For the third consecutive season CBS is bringing its listeners the fine "World Music Festivals" series (Sundays, 2:30 p.m.). This Sunday, July 17th, the Stockholm Festival in Sweden will be broadcast to be followed by, among others, the Sibelius Festival in Helsinki, Finland; the Aspen Summer Festival in Colorado; the Salzburg Festival in Austria. On Mondays (8:15 p.m.) NBC is presenting the concerts of the world-renowned Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Saturday, July 16th, the first of four special programs originating from the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Drama and Music at Stratford, Ontario, will come to us via WOR (10 p.m.). Violinists Isaac Stern and Alexander Schneider will be featured with the Hart House Orchestra conducted by Boyd Neel.

[illegible] GUIDOS

THE WASHINGTON POST and TIMES HERALD
14 Tuesday, July 26, 1955

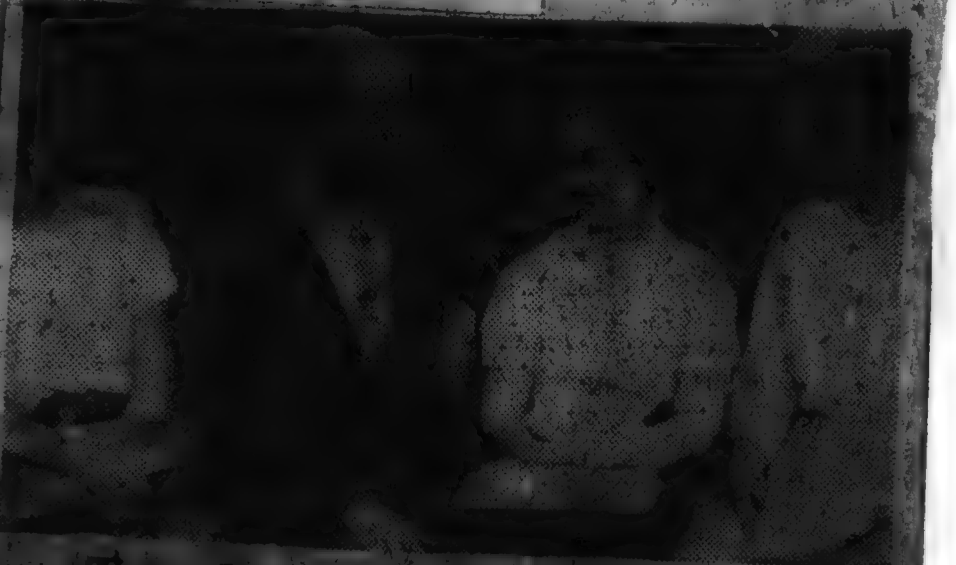
One On the Aisle

Type-Casting Not for Abbott

By Richard L. Coe

FROM THE FRISKY FARCES, daring dramas and perky musicals he's directed, produced and co-authored from "Broadway," "Love 'em and Leave 'em," and "Coquette" to "The Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees," one had a preconception of George Abbott.

Type casting would surely make him a brash Broadwayite, given to colorful language, earthy observations and [illegible] shirts. Type casting, as usual, couldn't be further from the truth.



Tanglewood's D. C. Students

Study groups from all over the country are an annual feature of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass. Here, with Conductor Thor Johnson, of the Cincinnati Symphony, are, left to right, Washington's Karin Peterson, Judith Weinberg and Nancy Gardener, settled in the Berkshires through mid-August.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,252 - S. 982,681

JUL 18 1955

At Tanglewood:

Unusual Programs

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass., July 18.—TWO UNUSUAL PROGRAMS, each centered on the nationalism of the composers, made a provocative weekend of the final chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Saturday night and yesterday afternoon. This Friday the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be playing in the famous music shed.

Charles Munch offered a shrewdly chosen list of French works yesterday, creating in performance a kind of intimacy most suitable to the hall. As almost a prelude to Honegger's Fourth Symphony, he played Rameau's suite from the opera. "Dardanus," Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," Faure's "Pavane" Opus 50, and Milhaud's Serenade.

Under Munch's direction, these inspired playing that was often sheer magic and revealed the conductor as a master of the subtle art of phrasing.

With him the Ravel has always been a specialty, but he lavished no more care on it than on the other performances. Only the nature of the work made this interpretation the more treasurable. Milhaud's capsule symphony caught the fancy for its inherent gaiety, rhythmic life, and outspoken almost ribald jubilation in the final section.

For this listener the high point came with the Honegger, a chamber work of subtle power, with which Munch showed particular affinity. In all its charm of expression, the music reveals that element of growth in Honegger which has made him quite different from the man of the 'twenties so closely allied to Milhaud.

The work is fascinating for its orchestration, which is by no means an end in itself as it might have been, and creates a state of feeling which Munch conveyed perfectly. Whether or not that is the kind of release experienced when on vacation, the mood suited the whole environment of Tanglewood yesterday.

Record Crowd

Saturday's program highlighter Vivaldi. His Concerto Grosso in D Minor, Opus 3, No. 11 and in B Minor, Opus 3, No. 10, were relatively familiar. The Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra was less so, but nevertheless a gem of its kind. Boccherini's Cello Concerto, Opus 34, completed the list. Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the orchestra, was soloist.

Final Chamber Concerts Given

Giving Vivaldi so much prominence makes a departure in programming here. That the audience heartily approved was indicated by a record attendance of 4,000. They were delighted with it all, especially with Mayes for his discerning and artistic performance. His was cello playing of primary distinction.

Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, conducted the "Gloria." He did an excellent job not only with his singers in the festival chorus but also the performance as a whole. Sara Mae Endich sang the soprano solo with considerable accomplishment and quality of voice. Sadie McCollum found the contralto solo somewhat beyond her.

This Italian program proved a drawing card which the French program did not. There were only 2,500 people at yesterday's concert. From an artistic point of view, the French program offered as much, if not more, and certainly was more forward looking.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
Circ. D. 190,893 - S. 197,563

JUL 10 1955

Berkshire Fete Presents First Week's Concerts

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass.—The first week of the annual Berkshire Festival concerts will be concluded Sunday afternoon with a performance of Bach's B Minor Mass.

Charles Munch will conduct the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and will have as his soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

Previous events of the week programmed music of Beethoven, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Hindemith, Stravinsky and Mozart.

KANSAS CITY MO. STAR

JUL 9 1955

GALA MUSIC EVENT ON

BOSTON SYMPHONY OPENS ANNUAL TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL.

First Night of 6-Week Schedule at Lenox, Mass., Features Work of Bach, Mozart and Stravinsky.

BY JOSEPH KAYE.

Lenox, Mass., July 9.—The prelude to America's greatest music festival was heard last night when members of the Boston symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch gave the opening concert of the Tanglewood series. The Tanglewood festival, now celebrated internationally, starts at this time every year and continues for six weeks, during which the Boston symphony and eminent artists perform.

The first two weeks this summer are devoted to small orchestral concerts and chamber music recitals. Beginning July 22, the full Boston symphony begins a month's week-end concerts in the Great Shed, a wooden structure open on three sides which acts as a perfect soundboard for the instruments.

Source of Pride.

The Missouri-Kansas area is contributing to this fine music event. As part of the festival, the Boston symphony maintains the Berkshire music center, a school for advanced and especially gifted music students. This year eight students from Missouri and Kansas are at the school. They were chosen from the finest young musicians in the land.

The students are: Gwendolyn Louise Belle, St. Louis; Connie Lou Converse, Hays, Kas.; Robert Arthur Dennis, University City, Mo.; Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg, Mo.; Anne M. Nelson, Lawrence, Kas.; David Allan Sallade, Overland, Mo.; Janice Darlene Seward, University City and Patricia Ruth Ashley, Canton, Mo.

Tonight's concert began with a joyous greeting to Munch from the overflow audience. On the parking lots were cars with license plates from the forty-eight states.

Bach Is Featured.

The "Sinfonia" of Bach, from the "Easter Oratorio," the Bach suite No. 2, Stravinsky's "Orpheus" ballet music and the Mozart Prague symphoney comprised the program. The purity of tone in Bach, the lovely lyricism and beautiful form of Mozart, the singing of Stravinsky, were all presented with complete artistry by Munch and his men.

Tanglewood is a beautiful estate of 210 acres in the Berkshire hills, facing Lake Makheenac, which always seems blended with a fairylike mist. It was on this estate that Nathaniel Hawthorne planned his Tanglewood Tales (hence its name), prepared the material for "The House of Seven Gables," and wrote "The Wonder Book." The cottage in which he lived burned down, but a replica was erected by the National Federation of Women's Music Clubs, and is used as a studio.

Lenox was once the summering place of millionaires—Andrew Carnegie and George Westinghouse were among them.

Carnegie's magnificent mansion, Shadowbrook, is now a Jesuit novitiate, and many of the other great houses are private schools. The town just faded out. Then came the festival, first started by the composer and conductor, Henry Hadley, and developed by Serge Koussevitzky. In the eighteen seasons that followed the town began to live again. Crowds came, its prestige rose high and prosperity flowed in from the visitors.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 389,011 - S. 258,545

JUL 18 1955

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Vivaldi by Bostonians at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 18—Saturday night's concert by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony personnel here on the Tanglewood Estate, home of the Berkshire Festival, was a deceiving event. The combination of blistering weather plus Vivaldi-Boccherini music brought out approximately 5,000 people, all concentrated around the area surrounding the 1,200-seat Theater-Concert Hall.

Thus, when milling through the strolling crowds before the concert and during intermission, the impression was that, being able to see nothing but music lovers, the program was one housed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

The Shed concerts, however, only begin next Friday night, continuing for the following four week-ends, three programs each week.

Wisest last Saturday were the majority who brought blankets and sat outside rather than lose weight rapidly through shedding gallons of perspiration.

Mayes Excellent

Considering the steaming, muggy weather, Samuel Mayes, first cellist, performed the Boccherini Concerto in B Flat Major, Op. 34, in stellar fashion, creating an extraordinary mood of contemplation in the adagio; and, by contrast, brightness in the concluding scherzo-like rondo.

Anne Bancroft and Ricardo Montalban romance in "A Life in the Balance," drama opening Friday at the RKO Palace.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster, didn't fare so well in his part of the Vivaldi Concerto Grosso in B Minor for Four Violins and String Orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10. He slid around among many notes instead of playing them accurately. The second-chair fiddler of the solo quartet put him quite into the pale by comparison.

Burgin also had the advantage over Mayes of performing in his shirtsleeves, as did the rest of the ensemble, while Mayes in summer dinner coat together with conductor, Charles Munch, looked handsome but undoubtedly dripped inside.

Mayes throughout was efficient and controlled with the help of the pocket handkerchief which came to his rescue in the face of too much water. Grandson of a Cherokee Indian, his father was a first cousin to Will Rogers, all of which should combine to make him take things in his stride which he did. The audience was most enthusiastic.

Ross Leads 'Gloria'

Vivaldi's "Gloria," assisted by the Berkshire Festival Chorus and two soloists selected from the student body, made up the after intermission schedule. Hugh Ross conducted the beautiful, glowing work which was sung with skill and enthusiasm by the ensemble and, of course, played brilliantly by the Bostonians with the exception of the solo oboist who lost his place in one section.

The coming week-end at Tanglewood finds Munch on the podium for the Friday night and Sunday afternoon events; and Pierre Monteux conducting the Saturday concert. The programs will feature the Beethoven Symphonies 1, 2, 4, 6 and 7, plus the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. For further information write the Berkshire Festival at Lenox or telephone Lenox 600.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 23 1955

Tanglewood Offers Art Exhibits Too

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture, prints and photographs again is a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at the main gate at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

July 23-30 will be devoted to small sculpture by Peter Abate, Brookline, Mass., and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

JUL 22 1955

Benefit Concert At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held here Thursday night, Aug. 11. One of its features will be an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Leonard Bernstein and by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, composed of Boston Symphony musicians, under Arthur Fiedler's conductorship. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance of a suite from his music for the film "On the Waterfront," and Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." He will also be piano soloist in Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" in the "Pops" portion of the program.

The schedule begins with a fanfare and address of welcome at 5:45 p. m. and simultaneous demonstrations by departments of the Berkshire Music Center at 6. Between 7:15 and 8:15 there will be a lawn party and picnic supper, and also singing by a student chorus on the steps of Tanglewood's Administration Building. Drawing for door prizes and dancing on the lawn will follow the evening concert. An opera performance will be given at 4 p. m. in Tanglewood's formal gardens for purchasers of box and reserved seats for the concert. Seats may be reserved by telephoning the Tanglewood box office (Lenox 600).

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the committee for this benefit, with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, of Lenox, as vice-chairman and Miss Margo Miller, of Pittsfield, as secretary. The committee for the sale of boxes is headed by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith as chairman and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry jr., as vice-chairman.

New York Post 7/24/55

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

7,000 Plus Hear Bostonians at Lenox

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 23—The stalwart Boston Symphony, under the aegis of its firebrand conductor, Charles Munch, defied the hottest, muggiest weather within memory for these parts, and played one of its most exciting concerts here Friday night.

Though the event opened the third week of the Berkshire Festival, it was the first program given in the 6,000-seat music shed. More than 7,000 people turned out to hear an all-Beethoven program with violinist Isaac Stern, as soloist in the D Major Concerto.

Wearing everything from formal summer evening dress to slacks, and sitting on anything from a chair to grass, the crowds were shouting their continued approval as the program closed with a magnificent performance of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.

One extraordinary aspect of the concert was the high standard of sound splendor maintained throughout, without any trace of tension. Last season Munch was frequently dynamic, but there was a nervousness which prevented many performances from having the effect of this "Seventh" and Concerto.

Friday's concert found our maestro communicating an inspired ardor to his ensemble, which in turn produced mellowness, high sensitivity and variety of mood. All with an ingratiating relaxation.

During the "Seventh," Munch almost danced on the podium at times, but never with excess of motion. [illegible] quite in command. He employs a kind of whiplash technique which is inclined to produce over-accents at times, but on this occasion it was minus sting. His directions were imperious, as if he were continuously summoning us all to an experience of great significance, as he well was, artistically speaking. And, also surprising for him, the slow movements of concerto and symphony were as impressive in their contemplation as the more vigorous movements were dynamic.

Stern's performance of the concerto was amazingly controlled, considering the weather. A high point was his finished and virtuoso performance of the cadenza in the long, initial movement followed by a beautiful mood of introspection as he rejoined the orchestra for the lyric theme. Munch and Stern obviously were in sympathy regarding their conception of the work, and the result was remarkable sympathy of mood and merging of color.

The Bostonians continue their music over the week-end and for the following two weeks. Though Tanglewood, the home of the concerts, is a four-hour trip from New York by train or car, the rare enjoyment of listening to great music in these unique surroundings is to receive a lot for little effort.

Tribune (e)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 34,905

JUL 22 1955

To Attend Berkshire Music Festival

Members of the Y.W.C.A. have a musical treat in store for them when they attend the Berkshire Music Festival on Sunday afternoon, August 14. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Beethoven Concert featuring the Leonore Overture and Symphony No. 9 in D minor with Chorus and Soloists. The group will leave the Y.W.C.A. at 6:30 a. m. There will be time before the concert to stroll around the beautiful grounds at Tanglewood. Trippers will return to the "Y" at 11:30 p. m. Registrations are now open for this trip and reservations may be made at the Y desk. Y.W.C.A. sponsored trips are open to all adult Y members, and Y membership is open to all girls and women of Greater Lawrence.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 122,000

JUL 27 1955

Berkshire Revisions

The programs of July 31, Aug. 10 and Aug. 12 at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, because a shoulder ailment has incapacitated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Instead of the concerto for violin and cello Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern next Sunday afternoon on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin.

On Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on the evening of Aug. 12, in which Piatigorsky was to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for cello and orchestra, the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz has been substituted.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven cello sonatas with Piatigorsky on the festival's chamber music series the evening of Aug. 10, has scheduled instead Beethoven chamber music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

LANCASTER, PA.
Intelligencer-Journal
Circ. D. 31,519

JUL 2 1955

My Day—

Koussevitsky Scholarship At Tanglewood In Need Of Funds

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Roosevelt

HYDE PARK—From many parts of our country people have journeyed year after year to Tanglewood in Berkshire County, Mass., to enjoy the music. And these visitors have been interested in the various teaching activities that go on there during the summer and which the late, great conductor, Mr. Koussevitsky, took such a keen interest in developing.

After his death some of the people in the county formed a committee to raise $15,000 in his memory to provide a yearly scholarship for one student. So far only $7,000 of that sum has been raised. And since the opening at Tanglewood takes place this year on July 4, and Mr. Koussevitsky's birthday comes later in the month, I have been wondering if the many who enjoy year after year the fruits of his labors would not like to make sure that between the date of the opening and the time of his birthday the rest of this fund was contributed. This achievement then could be announced at the memorial concert that is usually given on his birthday.

Mr. Koussevitsky would have liked to feel that any young person could come and have the opportunity to study there every summer. I think he understood very well that everyone was not gifted with genius, but in order to have genius discovered and rewarded there must be a vast number of people musically educated. Perhaps they would never be great artists but they would contribute to the musical appreciation of our audiences, and that is the only possible way that you can support great artists.

The countries that have had the greatest musicians, the greatest actors, the greatest writers are the countries that have appreciation of the arts among the people as a whole. It is a sign that a nation is growing up, is coming to maturity when it is really concerned to support the arts.

ART PATRONS — In the Middle Ages every artist had to have one individual patron who was willing to support him and let him do his work. That was a sign that civilization was still in a more or less primitive state. But the greatness of France, for instance, has been the fact that appreciation of art was present in the people as a whole. You have but to go into an art gallery in France to see that the public is there—even the people from the farm areas.

I remember seeing a woman with a market basket on her arm sitting before one of the masterpieces in the Louvre. It was her way of giving her soul a chance for a moment of peace and contemplation before the work of the day went on.

One of the things that troubles me about the future of the living drama in our country is the fact that it is so expensive that the vast majority of the people can see a play only on very rare occasions. Many people throughout our nation who live in rural areas have never seen live actors perform on the stage.

For a really healthy development of all the arts you need an educated audience as well as performers.

(Copyright, 1955, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 8,056

JUL 23 1955

To Attend Berkshire Music Festival

Members of the Y.W.C.A. have a musical treat in store for them when they attend the Berkshire Music Festival on Sunday afternoon, August 14. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Beethoven Concert featuring the Leonore Overture and Symphony No. 9 in D minor with Chorus and Soloists. The group will leave the Y.W.C.A. at 6:30 a. m. There will be time before the concert to stroll around the beautiful grounds at Tanglewood. Trippers will return to the "Y" at 11:30 p. m. Registrations are now open for this trip and reservations may be made at the Y desk. Y.W.C.A. sponsored trips are open to all adult Y members, and Y membership is open to all girls and women of Greater Lawrence.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 40,726

JUL 21 1955

MUSIC

ALFRED W. BURKE

LOWELL—Tomorrow evening, in the Music shed, the first of this season's 12 concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony will be given. Charles Munch will conduct an all-Beethoven program comprised of the "Overture to Coriolan" and the Seventh Symphony, in addition to the "Violin Concerto" with the celebrated violinist, Isaac Stern, as soloist.

Saturday evening at 8.30 o'clock, Pierre Monteux will make his first Tanglewood appearance of the season, conducting music by Bach, Beethoven and Richard Strauss, and also the suite from "The Black Maskers" by Roger Sessions, who is teaching composition at the Berkshire music center this summer. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Munch will return to conduct an all-Beethoven concert of three symponies, the First, Fourth and Sixth.

Among the several highlights of this season's festival has been the selection of Eino Rautevaara, 26, of Helsinki, Finish composer, as student of composition. This was made possible by the Koussevitsky music foundation which this season has offered a scholarship in honor of the 90th birthday of the world renown composer, Jan Sibelius. The young composer was nominated for the honor of Mr. Sibelius.

Stockbridge Series

A series of four Saturday evening concerts will be presented at this year's Pro Musica Antiqua series which will be held in the town hall at Stockbridge The concerts are scheduled for Aug. 13, 20, 27, and Sept. 3.

Music of the Middle Ages, Renaissance and Early Bourque periods will be presented. Music from the French, English, Spanish, Italian and German schools will be programmed. Again this year, as at the first festival presented by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua in the Berkshires last August, numerous works of early music never before presented in this country—indeed, not performed anywhere for centuries—will be heard.

A greater number of student applicants are expected when this year's session of the Organ Institute opens at Andover Aug. 1. The growing interest on the part of young students and artists in organ music, and a faculty of world wide repute has combined to create this greater emphasis and desire.

As in past years, the student will attend classes, covering the various phases of organ and also with added emphasis on choral and church music. The study of the instrument in regards to recital and concert work will delve deeper into this field.

Those attending in past years have created an influence on those in their respective communities. The work of these past students has in a sense revolutionized the place of the organ in America.

As previously expressed, the Organ Institute has done much in making this country one of the

---

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 26,119

JUL 23 1955

Grace C. Lee, Society Editor

FOR some, vacation 1955 is just a pleasant memory and for others it is still in the future tense. Stay-at-homers have a variety of things to do this week.

At this very moment many folks are on their way to the Farmington Valley Kennel Club All-Breed Dog Show at the Farmington Valley Polo Club. Wives are reminding husbands they must be back in time for the summer informal dance at the Shuttle Meadow Club this evening.

Tomorrow there will be a cruise on the Connecticut River sponsored by the YWCA. About 60 young people are expected to go.

Summer fun under the stars is the vogue this hot weather. On Wednesday night, there will be the season's second band concert in the Darius Miller Memorial Music Shell. Square dancing will be enjoyed on the terrace of the YWCA Thursday night. The "Aquashow" train heads for Flushing Meadows Park on Long Island late next Friday afternoon. It will be a rain-or-shine affair. This weekend marks the beginning of the Boston Symphony concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Pierre Monteux conducts tonight. Next Friday night, Leontyne Price of "Porgy and Bess" fame and the wife of William Warfield, will be guest soloist.

"The Tempest" opens Tuesday night at the American Shakespeare Theater in Stratford. Lawrence Langner, president of the modern version of London's Old Globe Theater, is hopeful that the second production will not be as coolly received as was "Julius Caesar."

Jacob Lateiner, young American pianist, will give the second concert of the Connecticut Valley Music Festival in Deep River Tuesday night.

With such a lot to do, right outside our own back yards, [illegible] little wonder picnics and cookouts are in the minority.

[257]

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 2 3 1955

CHAMBER MUSIC, SHED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Varied Musical Fare Awaiting Festival Patrons at Lenox

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, enters into the 4th of its 6 weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the 4th of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, in the theater-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts 2 of the week end's 3 concerts in the Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

LEONTYNE PRICE

All-Beethoven Program

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8.30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2.30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 for which a nominal charge is made for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete programs are:

Wed., 8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music:
Beethoven: String Quartets—G major, Opus 18, No. 2
E flat major, Opus 127
A minor, Opus 132
The New Music String Quartet (Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; David Soyer, cello).

Fri., 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Handel: Suite "Water Music"
Schumann: Symphony No. 4, in D minor
Barber: "Prayers of Kierkegaard"
Soloists: Leontyne Price, Soprano; Regina Sarfaty, Mezzo-Soprano; Arthur Schoep, Tenor.
Tanglewood Choir of Students from Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera, associates) trained by Hugh Ross
Brahms: Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Charles Munch, Conductor

Sat., 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—Boston Symphony Orchestra
(All-Beethoven)
Beethoven: Overture to "Egmont"
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Charles Munch, Conductor

Sun., July 31, 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
(All-Brahms)
Brahms: Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky
Symphony No. 1, in C minor.
Pierre Monteux, Conductor

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: This evening, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach Resphighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers"; Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale") Symphonies.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 2 5 1955

Tanglewood 'Parade' Set for Aug. 11

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954 afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, now in its 13th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival.

The gala day's activities, from 6 to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, dancing on the lawn.

* * *

THE BOSTON "POPS" Orchestra with Arthur Fielder, its conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's, 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, at 8:15 will conduct Boston Symphony in the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, now on leave of absence.

* * *

MR. BERNSTEIN, noted equally as composed, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program also will include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats at $5 and front sections (reserved) of the great Music Shed at $4 and $3, is a performance of opera at 4 p. m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend the demonstrations, at 6 p. m., by the Berkshire Music Center's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

Hyde Park Tribune
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 9100
JUL 2 1 1955

One Day Trip Tips

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

MUSIC FESTIVAL—~~Boston Sym~~phony Orchestra performs at ~~famous~~ Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rte. 9 or 20.

BEACH PARTY AND CLAMBAKE — Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS—Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Rte. 127.

COSTUME BALL — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcomber's Costume Ball, Provincetown Hall. Evening, July 22. Rte 3 to 6.

CHICKEN BARBECUES — Take your pick—Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44 at 3 p.m., and Wareham, Rte. 6 at 5 p.m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44, and Walpole, Mass.

AUCTION SALES — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Friday at Northampton. Rte. 9.

ARMY TOURS — Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 26 1955

Bernstein to Conduct Symphony of the Air

By a Staff Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

New York

Leonard Bernstein, whose musical activities range from composing the scores for Broadway shows to conducting concerts of serious music, has been appointed conductor of the Symphony of the Air for the 1955-56 season.

The appointment, announced July 25, was made by the Symphony's board of nine trustees who are elected by the whole membership of the former NBC Orchestra.

According to a Symphony of the Air spokesman, Mr. Bernstein's contract calls for six Carnegie Hall concerts. The dates are Nov. 9, Dec. 13, Jan. 6, Feb. 3, March 7, and April 18.

It was noted that this is a "composing year" for Mr. Bernstein. He has undertaken to write a Broadway musical comedy, a work commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and an operetta based on "Candide." Under the circumstances, his appearances with the Symphony of the Air will probably be his only activities as a conductor next season.

Mr. Bernstein, who is now at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in Massachusetts, is due to meet with the Symphony of the Air board at an early date to choose programs and soloists for the 1955-56 season.

Barre Gazette 7/21/55

ONE DAY TRIP TIPS

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

Music Festival — Boston Symphony Orchestra ~~performs at famous Tanglewood Music~~ Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rte. 9 or 20.

Beach Party and Clambake — Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake, Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

Festival of the Arts — Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens on July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Rte. 127.

Costume Ball — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcombers Costume Ball, Provincetown Town Hall. Evening, July 22. Rte. 3 to 6.

Chicken Barbecues — Take your pick — Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44 at 3 P.M., and Wareham, Rte. 6 at 5 P.M.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44 and Walpole, Mass.

Auction Sales — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Fridays at Northampton; every Wdnesday at Westampton; every Wednesday at West-

Army Tours — Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base. Rte. 28, Cape Cod; Antiaircraft practice every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Route 6.

Kiddies Train Ride — Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad. South Carver, Rtes. 3 to 44 to 58.

Herald Tribune 7/28

List 1-Act Operas At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 27.—Bohuslav Martinu's "Comedy on the Bridge" has been added to the bill of one-act operas which the Berkshire Music Center will stage at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m. Monday night, Aug. 1. Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet," Darius Milhaud's "Ariane Abandoned" and a short choral program complete the evening's schedule. The Martinu work was staged by the Center in 1951, the two other operas are new to Tanglewood.

Admission to Monday's performance, and to the opera double bill of Louis Mennini's "the Rope" and Mozart's "Zaide" set for Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 8 and 9, is limited to subscribing members of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Ticket information may be obtained from the Friends' office at Tanglewood (Lenox 600).

Roxbury Citizen
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 19,000 Free

JUL 2 1 1955

One Day Trip Tips

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

MUSIC FESTIVAL—~~Boston Symphony Orchestra~~ performs at famous Tanglewood Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rte. 9 or 20.

BEACH PARTY AND CLAMBAKE — Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS—Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Rte. 127.

COSTUME BALL — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcomber's Costume Ball, Provincetown Hall. Evening, July 22. Rte 3 to 6.

CHICKEN BARBECUES — Take your pick—Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44 at 3 p.m., and Wareham, Rte. 6 at 5 p.m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44, and Walpole, Mass.

AUCTION SALES — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Friday at Northampton. Rte. 9.

ARMY TOURS — Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air Force Base. Rte. 28, Cape Cod; Antiaircraft practice every Wednesday, Wellfleet, Rte. 6.

KIDDIES TRAIN RIDE — Daily through scenic cranberry bogs over quaint Edaville Railroad. South Carver, Rtes. 3 to 44 to 58.

Mattapan Tribune
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 8,500

JUL 2 1 1955

One Day Trip Tips

The following list of some of the many current Bay State events has been compiled for you by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce as a public service.

MUSIC FESTIVAL—Boston Symphony Orchestra performs at ~~famous Tanglewood~~ Music Festival. Evenings, July 22, 23. Afternoon, July 24. Lenox, Rte. 9 or 20.

BEACH PARTY AND CLAMBAKE — Old-fashioned New England beach party and evening clambake. Magnolia Beach, Magnolia, Rte. 127.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS—Cape Ann Festival of the Arts opens July 23, features International Dance Festival. Gloucester High School. Rte. 127.

COSTUME BALL — Chance for all to show creative ability at Beachcomber's Costume Ball, Provincetown Hall. Evening, July 22. Rte 3 to 6.

CHICKEN BARBECUES — Take your pick—Saturday, July 25, West Carver, Rte. 44 at 3 p.m., and Wareham, Rte. 6 at 5 p.m.; Sunday, July 24, noon, at both Raynham, Rte. 44, and Walpole, Mass.

AUCTION SALES — Match wits with professional Yankee auctioneers evenings every Friday at Northampton. Rte. 9.

ARMY TOURS — Special public tours every Thursday at Otis Air

Knickerbocker News, Albany N.Y.

STUDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD—Three Capital District students are studying music this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. Left to right, Lewis Rubenstein, 36 Brookline Ave.; Bruce Edwin Paine, Canajoharie, and Richard E. Krause, 15 Hawthorne Ave., Delmar, and Roger Sessions, seated, well known American composer who teaches composition at Tanglewood. Rubenstein, who studies French horn, and Paine, who studies trombone, play in the students' orchestra. Krause is enrolled in the opera department.

Sunday News
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 12,391

JUL 24 1955

All-Beethoven Concert Marks Festival Plans

Special Sunday News Report

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into its six weeks of summer symphonic music Wednesday with a program of three Beethoven quartets by the New Music String Quartet in the theatre-concert hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge music shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra next Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Players of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the music shed as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and George Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello

---

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 19 1955

AREA RESIDENTS AT TANGLEWOOD, SOME HAVE BOXES

The Berkshire symphonic festival at Tanglewood is well under way this season and as usual is attracting large crowds. People from Winsted and the surrounding area in numbers attend the concerts or the events in the music barn at one time or another during the summer.

In addition to those who attend only occasionally, there are many from here who hold season passes. There are even two or three who have boxes, including Mrs. P. A. Kelemen of Norfolk.

The events of Tanglewood have now become known the world over, and each year brings thousands more to this spot, which is a sort of summer music Mecca. Winsted is fortunate to be within easy driving distance of Tanglewood, and it is heartening to know many local persons are taking advantage of the offerings there.

Three One-Act Opera At Tanglewood Monda

Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Monday, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others.

The operas are "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts in English by Boris Blacher, Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, now on his first visit to the United States as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center; "Ariana Abandoned," a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, in an English version by Ludwig Zirner; and "Comedy On the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, with English text by Walter Schmolka. Boris Goldovsky has directed all three productions.

B. Herald
7/28

Cellist Cancels Tanglewood Dates

Because of a shoulder ailment cellist Gregor Piatigorsky has canceled engagements at three concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

He was to have appeared Sunday afternoon and Aug. 10 and 12, but yesterday wired Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, he would be unable to leave his California home.

Mr. Munch announced today the three programs have been revised. Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at the Symphony's all-Brahms program Sunday afternoon, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin D, Op. 77.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1955

Test Your Horse Sense

ANSWERS
Test Is On Editorial Page

1. Oil of vitriol (Sulphuric acid)
2. Accounting
3. Skeet (Shooting)
4. Pattern
5. Lettuce (Vinegar)
6. The salesman and the waiter would probably be extroverts. The other three are usually introverts since they work with inanimate objects.

STRING QUARTET PERFORMS WELL AT TANGLEWOOD

Music Provides View of Periods of Beethoven's Creative Work

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 27—The first concert in the Wednesday night chamber music series brought us the Knoll String Quartet in an all Beethoven program. Tonight three more quartets by Beethoven were played by the new music string quarter. They played the "Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2"; the "Quartet in E Flat, Op. 127" and the "Quartet in A Minor, Op. 132."

From Aspen, Colorado

The new music quartet includes Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. It is the quarter-in-resident of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado.

The three quartets played tonight provide a brief view of the various periods of Beethoven's creative work in this medium. We find in the Opus 18 quartet, music which is pliant, forceful in rhythmic accent, and in the final movement, music of "unbuttened" gaiety.

More than a decade passed before the "Opus 127 Quartet No. 12 in E Flat Major" was unveiled. The quartet reveals immediately that it was a far better equipped Bethoven who had written it. Indeed it may be numbered among the five immortal creations in this medium, written one after the other. Following the six bar introduction of broad chords, like an organ, the quartet moves for the most part delicately and lightly until its zephyr-like close.

The final work, "Quartet No. 15 in A Minor," was given a program clue by Beethoven who wrote above the slow movement, "song of thanksgiving to the deity by a convalescent, in the lydian mode." The theme of the finale appears among sketches for the "Ninth Symphony."

On Youngish Side

The members of the new music quartet appear to be on the youngish side. They play fine instruments and bring to their interpretations considerable vitality and finesse. Thus the 1175 people in the audience heard bright, highly rhythmic reading of the "Opus 18, No. 2 Quartet." At first hearing one wished for greater dynamic contrasts, but after the opening movement there was plenty.

The "Opus 127 Quartet" is of sterner stuff. From its opening meancing chords to its dramatic finale, this quartet abounds in provocative situations, surprises and relentless onward surge. The Adagio, one of the longest Beethoven wrote, was provided a superb delineation rich in contrast and tonal beauty.

The final "Quartet Opus 132" was the more demanding in its requirements than the first two. It received a notable performance, scholarly in conception and magnificent in presentation. These four young musicians have been together long enough to have acquired that necessary unit of thought and expression and their artistic ideals are high.

The second series of shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday night when Mr. Munch will conduct music by Handel, the "Water Music," Schumann's Fourth Symphony and Brahms' Fourth Symphony and the first performance at Tanglewood of Samuel Barber's setting of the "Prayers of Kierkegaard" for mixed chorus, soprano solo and orchestra. Leontyne Price will be the soloist.

The Saturday night program will be devoted to Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont,"; the concerto for piano No. 5 in E-Flat Maj with Rudolf Serkin as pianist, the "Eroica."

Sunday afternoon there will in Brahms program conducted pierre Monteux. It will open w the Academic Overture. Iss Stern will play the violin conce and the program will conclu with "Symphony No. 1 in Minor." The illness of Mr. Piat gorky necessitated cancelling t Brahms' "Concerto for Violin ar Cello."

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 23 1955

Tanglewood 'Parade' Set for Aug. 11

Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, August 11.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954 afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer school of music, now in its 13th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival.

The gala day's activities, from 6 to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, dancing on the lawn.

* * *

THE BOSTON "POPS" Orchestra with Arthur Fielder, its conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's, 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, at 8:15 will conduct Boston Symphony in the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, now on leave of absence.

* * *

MR. BERNSTEIN, noted equally as composed, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program also will include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats at $5 and front sections (reserved) of the great Music Shed at $4 and $3, is a performance of opera at 4 p. m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend the demonstrations, at 6 p. m., by the Berkshire Music Center's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

[259]

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFI

ONE-ACT OPERAS TO BE GIVEN AT MUSIC CENTER

Two of Three On Monday's Program Having Tanglewood Premieres

Lenox, July 27—Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood on Monday at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (Chorus).

Open to School's Friends

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, Director of the Hochschule for Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U. S. in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the associate division of the Opera Department.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

BLUE CROSS, SHIELD MOVES

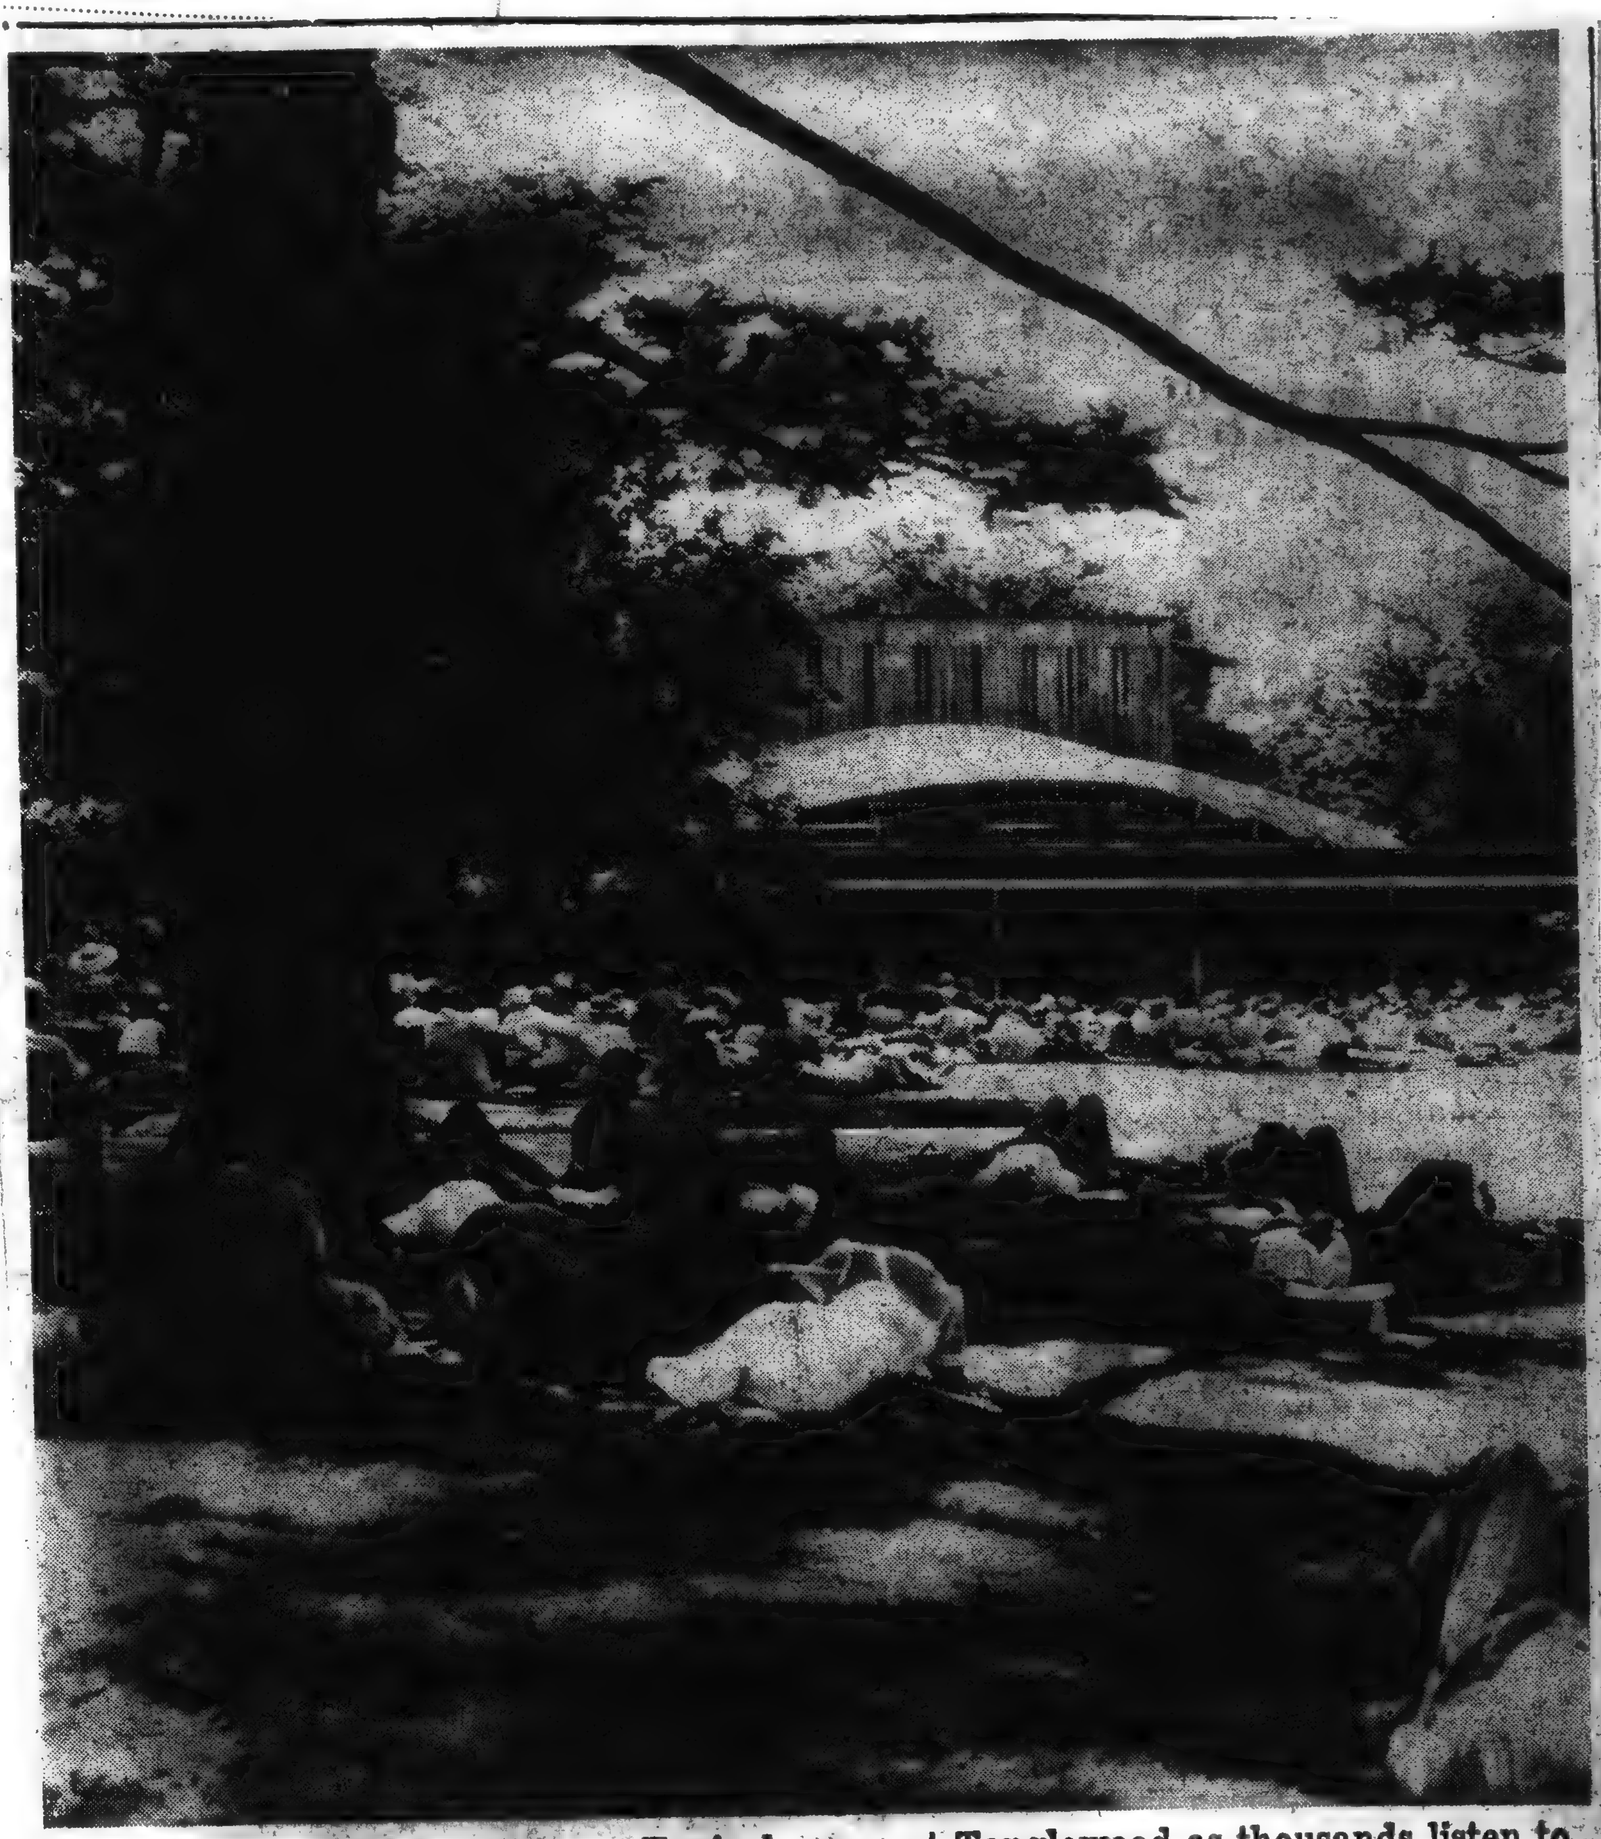
The Springfield office of Blue Cross and Blue Shield has moved to new quarters in the Medical Center Building on Maple St.

A rose-colored pastor, a Russian bird, has been spotted in England—the first in 75 years.

To modernize its wood-products industries, Finland got a $12,000,000 World Bank loan.

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 9,068

JUL 22 1955



BERKSHIRE festival audience. Typical scene at Tanglewood as thousands listen to music by Boston Symphony orchestra and chamber groups.

Albany Knicker, News

Tanglewood To Present 3 Operas

Three contemporary one-act operas will be presented by students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m. Monday.

The performance is open to those who support the Music Center, summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program will include "Romeo and Juliet," "Ariana Abandoned" and "Comedy on the Bridge."

A chamber opera in three parts, "Romeo and Juliet" is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule for Musik in Berlin. He is visiting America for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center.

"Ariana Abandoned," a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, will have its Tanglewood premiere on this program and will be given in the English version of Ludwig Zirner.

"Comedy on the Bridge" is a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu.

The operas are produced under direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department. He is staging the Milhaud work and his stage director, Sarah Caldwell, is directing "Romeo and Juliet" and "Comedy on the Bridge."

On the same program a concert will be given by the choral department of the Music Center. It will include choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,685

JUL 25 1955

Tanglewood Music By Beethoven

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leantyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role.

Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10:00 a. m. (July 30.)

Tanglewood Benefit Set Aug. 11

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual concert and program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be presented Aug. 11. The Music Center is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music which is conducted in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival.

The first half of the concert, starting at 8:15 p. m. will be given by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Leonard Bernstein. The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with its conductor, Arthur Fiedler, will perform a typical "pops" program for the other portion of the concert.

Mr. Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, will conduct the first performance of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront." He also will be piano soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Mr. Fiedler's program will include "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "pops" vein will follow.

8-A THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Albany, N.Y., Mon., July 25, 1955

Monteux Dominates Concert

A venerable man of music, Pierre Monteux, dominated the 11th program at Tanglewood Music Shed Saturday night. The grand old man of 80 was guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From the moment of his entry, with the orchestra rising to welcome him, the tone was established.

At ease among old friends, Monteux, without a mannerism of display, led a solid program that demonstrated the thrill of Tanglewood. The response of the orchestra to this commanding personality approaches affection. Monteux plays the scores to reflect the soul of the music therein and the players strive for the sincerity of expression he demands.

The grandeur of the Bach Passacaglia in C minor, as orchestrated by Ottaring Respighi, far surpasses other orchestrations of this work. Calling for huge resources, from organ to contra-basson, using solo instruments to great advantage, Respighi broadens the musical base to include much more than religious overtones.

A stunning performance such as this almost makes anticlimax sure to follow, but Monteux, following the plan of a Beethoven cycle at Tanglewood this summer, gave a reading of the Second Symphony that was delightful in contrast. Amiable and gay, always straightforward and impelling, the smooth style swept along to emphasize catholic taste precisely expressed.

The orchestral suite arranged by Roger Sessions from his music for Andreyeff's drama "The Black Masters," remains fresh in concept and technique after some 30 years. A tortured soul bespeaks tortuous music, often strident and rhythmically percussive. The ballet-like "dance sarcastico," and the expressive "scene," with solo instruments predominating, particularly display the realistic skill of this modern American style. Called to the podium to accept an ovation, Mr. Sessions expressed gratitude to the conductor, soloists, and orchestra for the forceful reading of his music.

To close, Monteux turned to Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration." This fantasia, an exploration of spiritual realization, became revitalized in a majestic performance.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 86,944

JUL 23 1955

Stern Stars With Boston, Beethoven

LENOX, Mass., July 22—Special) — As an old Courant hand said a generatio nor two before my time, "everybody talks about the weather, but no one does anything about it."

That, as a matter of fact, is how it has been with Shakespeare and Beethoven, too. Down at Stratford, they're trying to straighten out one of these deficiences. And up here at Tanglewood, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra are tackling the other. For the main concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival, which opened in Elie Saarinen's famous shed tonight, will be devoted largely to Beethoven's music during the next four weeks.

Stern Heard

This resumption of homage to the master could not have gotten off to a finer start than it did this evening. Isaac Stern, one of the most moving of contemporary violinists, was here for the occasion, playing of course the wonderful concerto in magnificent fashion. Mr. Stern does not have the most slashing style of playing, but no one plays with more purity of tone, nor more exquisite attention to detailing. As a matter of fact, there were many moments tonight when he played with such delicacy that he almost seemed to be soliloquizing. One can brandish the music and the bow more than Mr. Stern does, but you can't get it out with any more tender and honeyed effect.

Mr. Munch and Mr. Stern collaborated for a most perfectly integrated performance. Mr. Munch's approach to the violin concerto is rather straitly emotional. It does not have the fine-drawn lucidity that would satisfy the classically minded among Beethoven's admirer's, but it is intense and large and ever dramatic, as if it were of a piece with the "Coriolan" overture which preceded it, and it will definitely satisfy those who want their Beethoven on the impressive side.

Customers Satisfied

In any event, it seemed to satisfy most of the 7,600 customers who were present tonight, most of them in the shed, a sprinkling of them encamped on the lawn. Mr. Stern received, after the first movement of the concerto, a din of applause which was louder and more sustained than many another guest artist earns at the close of a work, and when he had finished, the hullaballoo rocked the shed.

The orchestra played in its shirtsleeves. When the Boston Symphony men are permitted to discard their jackets, then you know it's really hot. But it was no "shirtsleeve performance." Weather or no, they played handsomely across the evening. Mr. Munch, who retained his coat, went at them with unabated fury and they answered him with a magnificence of tone, a show of virtuosity and a precision of effect that characterize the Boston performance at its best. Only in the outset of the "Coriolan" was there a little pulling and hauling, before conductor and players got off on the same foot.

But the Seventh Symphony, which concluded this evening's all-Beethoven concert was a masterpiece of brilliance, Mr. Munch pressed the orchestra along at a breathless clip in all the brisk movements, and the performance rang with brio and verve. The Symphony is familiar to every one under the tag "Apotheosis of the Dance," but here was a vigor and bounce requiring some stronger term than dance. It was again a sample of the drama that Mr. Munch finds for Beethoven. It was a kind of testimony to conductor and orchestra one doesn't habitually find here, that hardly anyone left the shed or grounds before the playing of the symphony was over. Usually, the audience tide has turned and is starting to run out half way through the final number. Not so tonight. Mr. Munch and the boys and gals of the Boston had them riveted to their seats, those hard iron seats we have in the shed. It was a terrific start for the month long salute to Beethoven.

—T.H.P.

Albany Knickerbocker News

Tanglewood String Orchestra Presents Vivaldi, Boccherini

Italian classics featured the seventh program in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood Saturday. Opening with two Vivaldi concerti grossi, 11 and 10 of Opus 3, Musical Director Charles Munch found his string orchestra firmly responsive to the vigor he imparted.

The sudden echo effects, the superb balance and the flexible control in the trasitional sections revealed the artistry of the Boston Symphony string section. Beautiful phrasing in the tender large movements created an ethereal lovliness. In the second concerto, four solo violins dominated. Concertmaster Richard Burgin and his cohorts made this an exciting contribution.

The featured soloist was his brilliant young first cellist, Samuel Mayes. His interpretation of the Boccherini concerto, Op. 34, was most interesting. A work that depends almost entirely on the solo performer for full realization, the Boccherini, despite its thin scoring and modest musicality, held everyone in rapt attention. An excellent performance resulted from the complete freedom of the soloist to explore every nuance with abandon. Munch properly balanced the orchestra and anticipated each liberty. In spite of the heat and humidity, Mayes gave assurance to the technical displays, particularly in the two complicated cadenzas.

Returning to Vivaldi for the final half of the program, Hugh Ross led the festival chorus of 75 mixed voices in the Gloria for solo voices, chorus and orchestra. Taken from the ritual mass, this balanced musical unit begins and ends in high brilliance with contemplative and lively music alternating.

Sara Mae Endich, soprano, and Sadie McCollum, contralto, were attractive young soloists with Miss Endich particularly appealing.

The chorus, exuberant and well trained, supported Ross in the furious opening through the contrasts of the calm harmonic style and fugal imitations in later sections.

For a chamber concert this program offered great variety in the resources required in its presentation. Next week the concerts move to the large shed with the full forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in action.—C. F. S.

Albany Knickerbocker News

Munch to Offer Premiere Of Barber Work Friday

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the orchestra in two of three Berkshire Festival concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood next weekend. Pierre Monteux will take the podium for the third program.

Mr. Munch, will conduct the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" Friday night. Leontyne Price, soprano, has the principal solo role in this work. Supporting roles will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, The Tanglewood Choir, trained by Hugh Ross, will assist.

The program also will include music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms,

Mr. Munch will give his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 festival next Saturday night. Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist, will make his first appearance in the Music Shed as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto. The program also will offer Overture to "Egmont" and Symphony No. 3.

The third Shed concert of the weekend will be Mr. Monteux's all-Brahms program Sunday afternoon. This program will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the concerto for violin and cello.

Festival patrons also will have the opportunity of hearing the Boston Symphony in a public rehearsal at 10 a. m. next Saturday. A nominal admission charge will go into the orchestra's pension fund.

Eagle 7/27

In Brief . . .

Although the formal sessions of the Workshop for World Understanding have apparently been adjourned sine die, it is satisfying to see that the organization's high purpose will be well voiced again in its sponsorship of the forthcoming sixth annual visit of U.N. personnel to Tanglewood . . . If ex-Representative Dwyer makes as articulate a bid for the mayor's job as he made and lost for Congress a year ago, his candidacy could contribute a lot toward making this year's city election campaign as informative as it will obviously be lively . . . For an ego-building all-out endorsement of this area as a vacation spot, it would be hard to beat the current issue of Cue magazine, which extolls our virtues in unqualified terms in an article entitled "The Berkshires Have Everything." Happily, they neglected to include hot weather under "everything" . . .

Representative Casey Turner's bill to permit Lee to by-pass civil service regulations by giving a police appointment to the man he succeeded as selectman is doubtless cricket by the standards of the smaller towns, but it would cause a horrendous howl if it happened in Pittsfield . . . In the light of the half-way job that many communities in the county are doing toward maintaining up-to-date public health programs, it's hardly surprising that so many of them haven't even bothered to reply to the state Health Department's attempt to assess the problem . . .

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 109,680

JUL 23 1955

Munch and Stern Offer Beethoven At Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—The preeminent position of Beethoven in our musical and cultural heritage is being asserted this year at Tanglewood. It was not surprising, therefore, that the opening Shed concert last night should be devoted exclusively to his works.

Despite the saturating effect of mid-Summer humidity, the enthusiasm of the audience could not be dampened by mere climatic conditions. Everything was hailed with jubilant applause and the shirt-sleeved orchestra must have felt duly rewarded for its exertions under less than ideal playing conditions.

The concert's success owed much to Charles Munch, who astutely devised a program appealing alike to the casual concertgoer and to the discriminating Beethovenian. It was an evening of acknowledged masterworks—the Violin Concerto, the Seventh Symphony and the "Coriolanus" Overture—surely something for every taste.

* * *

WE CANNOT REMEMBER Mr. Munch displaying a more energetic podium technique than he did last night. Gone was the lassitude that characterized so many of his appearances during the last two seasons. He exuded a vitality and pure animal spirit that communicated to the orchestra and inspired its playing.

In "Cariolanus," as in some of the other overtures, Beethoven found the artistic consummation that eluded him in his one operatic venture. They exemplify his unique genius for compressing musical materials into a dramatic entity. It was in this spirit that Mr. Munch seemed to approach his task, creating, as it were, a miniature music drama.

* * *

ISAAC STERN was soloist in the violin concerto and brought to it an imposing technique that found no difficulties of execution, except insofar as the humidity kept untuning his strings. What his playing lacked was a unifying interpretative scheme, the noble concept of Francescatti.

There were moments of genuine beauty, notably the ethereal and tender second movement; orchestra and soloist were in exemplary balance and Stern played like an angel. But in the first movement he was too often thin-voiced of tone and made its cadenza a mere showpiece for his astounding technique.

* * *

MUNICH BROUGHT US a stirring finale in the Seventh Symphony This exultant paean to joy received just the expanive and rapturous treatment it deserves. In cumulative power it was an unrivaled performance; at least we have heard nothing like it since Toscanini retired.

Wagner called it the "apotheosi of the dance." Under the ministrations of Munch it not only danced but sang with unquenchable and full-throated rapture.

[261]

Eagle 7/23

Lenox

ROBERT U. JOHNSON Tel. 163

1,000 Visit Information Booth

LENOX—Friday and Saturday, some 1,000 tourists crowded into the Kiwanis Information Center seeking local accommodations and more than half were turned away, according to Mrs. John M. O'Brien, in charge of the booth.

With only 160 rooms registered at the Center, Mrs. O'Brien placed 350, sent another 100 to local inns, and the rest went to Pittsfield, Lee or Stockbridge to find a room for the night.

One New York City school teacher sat at the Center all day Saturday, hoping for a last minute cancellation. When none materialized, Mrs. O'Brien took her home and let her sleep on a folding cot out on her porch.

George L. Hughes, who assists Mrs. O'Brien, opened up the information center Sunday morning at 10:30. A line had already formed, many of whom had spent the night in their cars, according to Mr. Hughes. They planned to drive back home early Monday morning.

Weekday Demand Slight

"We could fill 350 rooms every weekend from now until the end of the Tanglewood season," said Mrs. O'Brien. She admitted, however, that the weekday demand was slight.

Expenses of the Center are underwritten by the Lenox Kiwanis Club, with a $3 registration fee per room and contributions from local inns providing most of the cash necessary. A donation basket, where grateful tourists drop in quarters and dimes, has added another $100.

Expenses of the Center include salaries of Mrs. O'Brien and Mr. Hughes, telephone service and secretarial work. A basket of some 1,200 letters asking for reservations (mostly for Friday and Saturday nights) has gone unanswered. For one, the Center does not accept reservations for less than a week. Cost of answering this correspondence is prohibitive is the other reason, said Mrs. O'Brien.

Estimating that each of the 350 tourists placed locally in Lenox spend on the average of $10 a day, Mrs. O'Brien feels that more than $40,000 of this business is handled by the Center during the Tanglewood season. And of this amount, $25,000 goes directly into the pock et sof local home owners who use the service of the Kiwanis Center, said Mrs. O'Brien.

Tanglewood Tales

Parade Plans

At Tanglewood on Parade, when simultaneous demonstrations are given to the public, from 6-7 p.m. by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, there will be a symphony program by the student orchestra in the Music Shed, opera by the opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music by students of Department I in the Chamber Music Hall, and during the serving of box lunches, a concert by the choral department from the steps of the administration building of the Boston Symphony's summer music school.

* * *

Dahl To Conduct

Ingolf Dahl, who heads the popular Department V (Tanglewood Study Group) at the Berkshire Music Center, and who is associate professor of music at the University of Southern California, where he directs both the Collegium Musicum and the University Orchestra, will conduct one of his own compositions at the final concert of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, on Saturday, Aug. 13 in the Music Shed at 3 p.m. It is a symphonic legend in four parts, entitled "The Tower of St. Barbara," about a saint of mediaeval times, and it was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky., Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant and performed four times last season. Simultaneously, the New York Woodwind Quintet will be performing Mr. Dahl's Woodwind Quintet at the South Mountain Chamber Music Concert, Pittsfield.

* * *

Training Female Chorus

Hugh Ross's assistant in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, Miss Iva D. Hiatt, director of the Smith College Choral Society, is training the female members of the Festival Chorus (composed of members of the Berkshire Music Center's choral, opera and Study Group departments) for participation in the Debussy "Sirenes," one of the three Nocturnes which Pierre Monteux will conduct on his final Berkshire Festival concert, Saturday evening Aug. 13 in the Music Shed. The "Sirenes" has not been given at Tanglewood since the early days of the Festival.

* * *

Berkowitz Program Aug. 10 Announced

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, has substituted a program of Beethoven trios, quintet, cello sonata and songs by six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tenor David Lloyd and his own piano assistance for the scheduled program of five cello sonatas he was to play with Gregor Piatigorsky for the concluding event on the Wednesday evening chamber music series at Tanglewood, on Aug. 10. The six BSO first chair members are Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French horn. The program consists of Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for Clarinet, Cello and Piano; "An die Ferne Geliebte" (to the distant beloved), six songs for tenor and piano; Sonata in A, Opus 6, for Cello and Piano; Trio in G for Flute, Bassoon and Piano; and the Quintet in E flat for Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon, Horn and Piano.

* * *

New Yorker Cover

The colorful cover of the July 23 issue of the New Yorker, depicting couples picnicking on a lawn and relaxing under shade trees, inset into a page of music, although its locale is unidentified, can be assumed to be Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony's musical experts have identified the sheet of music as a page from Bach's "Suite in D major," which was performed by the orchestra in the Berkshire Festival concerts of 1954.

* * *

Fiedler's Sister On Center Staff

Elsa Fiedler, who has joined Emanuel Balaban and Paul Ulanowsky on the staff of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, as a coach in opera repertory, is a sister of Arthur Fiedler, the celebrated conductor of the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, which is returning to the Tanglewood Music Shed for a second appearance, on the gala "Tanglewood on Parade" evening concert Thursday, Aug. 11.

Our Berkshires

Culture Busting Out All Over

By Walter Prichard Eaton

I hope the editor of The Eagle is not too modest to let me publicly thank him in this corner of his own paper for the aid and comfort he has afforded me in these trying times. If it were not for the almost unbelievable extent of the coverage (that's a horrid word) that The Eagle achieves when culture craters erupt in the Berkshires through July and August, like the Valley of Ten-thousand Smokes, I don't know what would become of me. Having a New England conscience, at least where culture is concerned, probably I should feel it my duty to attend as many eruptions as time and income would permit, and what that would do to my health this hot weather I hate to think. What it would do to my disposition simply does not bear thinking of at all.

* * *

FOR THE TRUTH is that I am not musical, and after a short time—say 30 minutes—most symphony concerts bore me. Also, to get to Tanglewood, to get parked, to climb over recumbent torsos on the way to a seat, to crawl away again in a traffic jam after the concert, is too high a price to pay for something I don't really enjoy.

But the truth is I don't like jazz either. It doesn't bore me; it infuriates me and makes me sick at my stomach. Probably that means I am deficient in a sense of rhythm, which may explain why most dance recitals leave me cold. The old Russian ballet was wonderful, Pavlova was wonderful, Isadora Duncan was wonderful—when she wasn't ridiculous. But it's a long, long way to Jacob's Pillow, and my heart's not there.

I used to enjoy picture exhibitions in the far-off days when pictures remotely resembled something, but now that they have become pink parallelograms or other abstract symbols of the painter's ego I find most of them intolerably tiresome. But how the pictures are erupting in the Berkshires! The Barrington Inn ballroom is full of them. Soon the Museum in Pittsfield will be full of them. They blossom in Tyringham, they burgeon in Lenox. And my wretched conscience would drive me to visit them all, pursuing culture till my feet gave out, were it not for the ministrations of The Eagle.

* * *

BY SOME mysterious legerdemain the entire Eagle staff, during July and August, is transformed into critics of all the arts. Not a culture crater erupts from Williamstown to the Connecticut line but somebody from The Eagle is on the spot, delighted to write about it, and to write about it so picturesquely that I can sit quietly at home, read my paper, and savor all these cultural manifestations without the painful necessity of seeing or hearing them for myself.

How I enjoy jazz when Milton Bass writes about it! How charming I find his bop artist, who wears a goatee and a beret as a badge of his trade, like an architectural graduate of the Ecole de Beaux Arts. How exciting I find his saxophonist who "picks up the structure and sniffs his way through, around and over it until he finds something that stirs his imagination and desire." I like to read about this remarkable fellow—and thank goodness I don't have to hear his saxophone sniff.

* * *

UNTIL RECENTLY The Eagle as several disgruntled readers complained, paid too scant attention to sculpture. But that has been attended to. After reading the account last Thursday of the Abate exhibit at the Museum, I am convinced that a trip to Pittsfield is unnecessary. It could not reward me more richly than The Eagle article has done.

Here is an item in stone, called "The Beginning of Life." "This piece, like a Henry Moore, has a hole poked right through its middle, which creates an exciting reciprocation between form and space . . . His [the sculptor's] foetus-shaped void is a good foil for the well cut ecstasy of his merging man and woman . . . Also because of the evenness of the curvature of the big ellipse the whole composition from the front view spins faster the longer it is watched, resulting in speeds the subject can hardly tolerate."

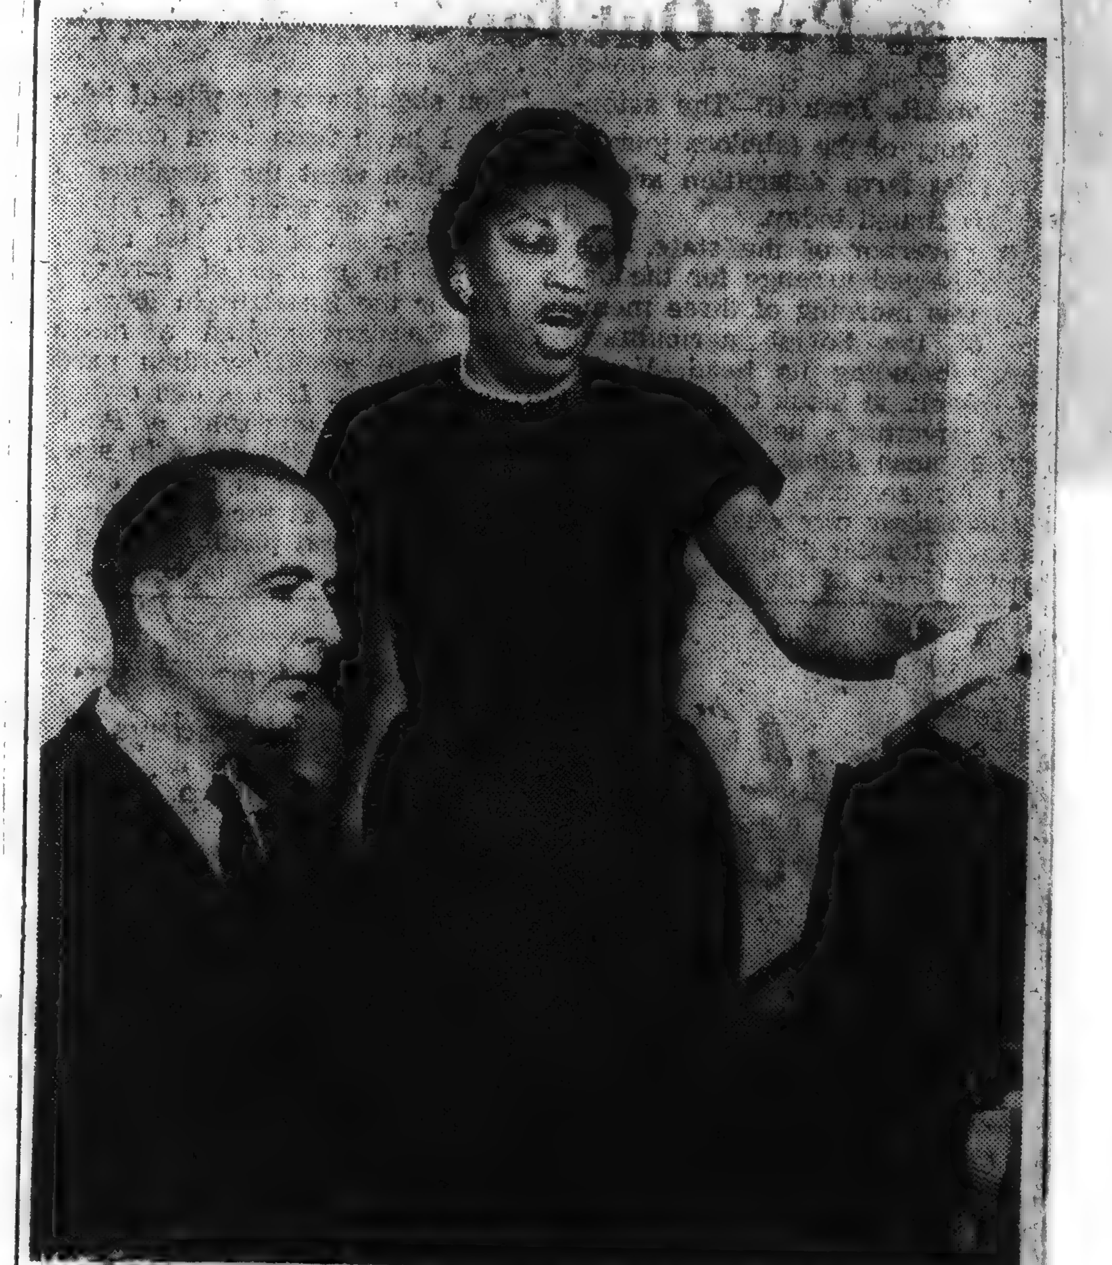
I doubt if I could tolerate it either if it started spinning right in front of me. But it is fascinating to read about. Almost as fascinating is another statue, apparently suspended from the ceiling, "a courageously personal symbolism well carried out in design. But unfortunately the image of two hands supporting a limp body in space loses most of its dramatic possibility because the whole is patently supported at the figure's navel by ordinary picture wire, twisted at the end."

On this point I suspect the critic is being a bit unfair. Probably the Museum didn't have any umbilical cord on the premises.

* * *

IT ALL MAKES fascinating reading as I sit on the terrace with an iced drink beside me and bless The Eagle for bringing me the very breath and being of so much culture with no effort whatever on my part. I read about a saxophone, and listen to a robin. That is the ideal way to enjoy a saxophone. Culture is busting out all around me, and The Eagle digests it all for me. I don't have to see it, or hear it—just know about it.

But when the weather gets cooler, maybe I'll get somebody to play me a little Mozart.



GOING OVER THE SCORE of "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which will have its Tanglewood premiere Friday evening with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed, are the composer, Samuel Barber, left, formerly a guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, with soloist Leontyne Price, a former Tanglewood student, who will sing the work at Tanglewood Friday night.

Celebrity Night Nets $1,600 For Museum

Capacity Audience Enjoys Music, Dances At Special Event

Talent from all parts of Berkshire County assembled last night at the Berkshire Museum to make somewhat more than $1,600 for the museum's benefit on its first "Celebrity Night." Mrs. Alexander Euston headed the arrangements committee.

A capacity audience of 300 saw the program, introduced by James Phinney Baxter, Williams College president, as master of ceremonies. Departing only slightly from the schedule announced, a feature of the evening was the sketching in black and white by Norman Rockwell of Stockbridge of William Miles, Berkshire Playhouse director. Artist and model appeared on the stage as the sketch was started and reappeared at intervals as it progressed. The finished work was exhibited in the Ellen Crane room during the refreshment period following the revue.

Opening with 10 members of the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, who sang madrigals and played ancient instruments from early Elizabethan, French and Spanish periods, the program included songs by Christina A. Cardillo, soprano of North Adams, of the Berkshire Music Center opera department; a Chopin Prelude by her accompanist, Paul Ulanowsky, of the Tanglewood faculty; dances by Josefina Garcia and Alonso Rivera of Jacob's Pillow and Carola Goya and Matteo of Beaupre, Lenox, and scenes by members of the Williamstown summer theater and the Berkshire Playhouse casts.

The evening ended with three Scottish dances by Matteo, followed by the North Adams Kiltie Band in three numbers, after which they led the audience to the Ellen Crane room, where John A. Culpo played the accordion.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—New Music String Quartet in Beethoven concert. Tanglewood theater, Lenox.

8:40 — "Picnic." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"Reclining Figure." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Alicia Alonso, Erik Bruhn and 10 leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

3:00 p.m.—La Meri, ethnic dancer, in her "Little Show." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival.

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 PM

RAIN OR SHINE

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

cc Berkshire Courier 7/28

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Suite from "On the Waterfront" .... Bernstein

(FIRST PERFORMANCE)

"A Lincoln Portrait" .... Copland

(Speaker to be announced)

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor

In a typical Pops program—

Spanish Caprice .... Rimsky-Korsakov

Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra .... Gershwin

Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball" .... Strauss-Dorati

(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ☆ PICNIC SUPPER

WALTZING ON THE LAWN ☆ DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ☆ OPERA SCENES

THE CHORUS ☆ CHAMBER MUSIC

— REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS —

Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14

(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)

Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, [illegible] (Box Seats). Admission [illegible]

Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)

Baldwin Piano

RCA Victor Records

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 26,119

JUL 21 1955

Week's Guide to Straw Hat And Nearby Music Circuit

By JUDITH V. WELD

Round and round goes the sprightly carousel of entertaining programs for summer audiences with most of the nearby theaters featuring fluffy comedies or musicals this week. There is, however, something for almost every taste, so climb aboard!

Terry by Starlight

Keeping things lively at Ivoryton is Terry Moore in "Star Light, Star Bright," a new comedy about a stage-struck young lady with an affinity for fabrication and for causing havoc in the household which mistakenly employs her as a servant. Miss Moore, an attractive, wholesome and unsophisticated young actress, illuminates the stage with a fresh enthusiasm and naturalness, quite capable of endearing her to an audience.

Although choppily written and sketchy on plot, the play, mainly because of Miss Moore and a highly competent cast, is appealing hot weather fare. Contributing to the general amusement are a disarmingly impish little brat of a girl; an urbanely humorous TV comedian; a blustering old sourpuss of a playwright; a hip-swinging, not-so-dumb blonde, and other pleasant people.

Gershwin with Chaps

The cactus is a-bloom, guns are a-poppin' and the air is a-filled with the ever special music of George Gershwin at the Oakdale Musical Theater where "Girl Crazy" is being presented this week. It is the bouncy yarn of what happens in Custerville, Arizona, when a New York playboy meets up with a Western belle, sets up a dude ranch and persuades his Brooklyn-type taxi driver to run for sheriff. The production is most memorable for its music (which would profit from a quieter interpretation by the Wallingford orchestra).

Opening with the melodic "Bidin' My Time" rendered by a cowboy quartet, the show features such favorites as "Embraceable You" (pleasingly sung by Jerome Courtland), "Fascinating Rhythm" and "'Swonderful." Vivid interpretations are given to "I Got Rhythm" and the torchy "Samson and Delilah" by Marilyn Ross, an accomplished performer with a dynamic voice akin to Ethel Merman's; while the dance features are nimbly taken care of by Chita Rivera.

Handling the comedy very neatly are a winning funnyman, Joey Faye and Ferdi Hoffman as the rascally villain of the piece.

The production will play through Sunday night.

Shamrocks and Fantasy

Down at Norwich Playhouse where "they're wearing o' the green" this week for the musical "Finian's Rainbow," a New Britainite can be seen disguised as a leprechaun. He's Charles Welch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luke H. Welch of 40 Sexton St.

In his role as one of Erin's mythical people, he follows Finian, his daughter and a stolen crock of gold from Ireland's fictional Glocca Morra to America's equally mythical Rainbow Valley where, in the course of trying to retrieve the treasure, he becomes an alarmingly fickle mortal who warbles "When I'm Not Near the Girl I Love, I Love the Girl That's Near."

The part of Og gives ample opportunity for characterization to the local man who has performed in more than 300 TV shows since 1948, including Studio One, Suspense, Toast of the Town and the Frank Sinatra Show. Of course, maybe Welch has a special edge on the leprechaun role as he's got a shamrock or two on his own family tree! Another Irishman, Will Mahoney, vaudeville and musical comedy star, is Finian.

Winters at Summer Playhouse

At Clinton this week, Shelley Winters, famous movie actress, is playing in "Wedding Breakfast," a romantic comedy recently on Broadway. In the play, the blonde film star depicts a young woman, whose disappointment in love causes here to be most suspicious of any new entanglement. The situation is satisfactorily resolved however, with the aid of a handsome visitor, here sister and sister's boy friend.

Concert Notes

An investigation of the concert opportunities shows that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its 12 program series at Tanglewood tomorrow night, with concerts also scheduled for Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works by Beethoven will be featured in this year's weekend concert programs. Also in Lenox, but at the other musical extreme, Count Basie and his band will play Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Berkshire Music Barn.

For music under the stars the Connecticut "Pops" will include Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto as one of its selections tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. on the grounds of Fairfield University, while the next concert by the New Haven Pops at the Yale Bowl will be on Aug. 2 when Oscar Levant, pianist, will be featured.

Dog Days

And, incidentally, if you can't get to the shore on Saturday and are wondering how to amuse yourself or the children, the annual all breed dog show and obedience trial sponsored by the Farmington Valley Kennel Club will be going on all day on the grounds of the Polo Club. A total of 552 dogs have been entered and, if it's as hot as this, the panting should be something extraordinary!

CUE
NEW YORK CITY
JUL [illegible]

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Sun, Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations [illegible] Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Fri, July 8—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Sinfonia from "Easter". Oratorio and Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings: Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Mozart "Prague" Symphony [illegible] 504). Sat, July 9—Thor. Johnson cond. Joseph De Pasquale, violist. Handel, Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 12; Haydn, Symphonie Concertante with Oboe, Bassoon, Violin & Cello; Hindemith, "Der Schwanendreher"; Haydn, Symphony in B flat, No. 98. Sun, July 10—Charles Munch cond. Bach, Mass in B minor with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists. Wed, July 13—Chamber Music. Beaux Arts Trio. Beethoven's C minor, Op. 1, No. 3; D major, Op. 70, No. 1 ("Ghost"); B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke"). Charles Munch cond. Fri, July 15—Mozart's overture to "Don Giovanni"; Symphony in C major, "Linz", Arias, "Al Desio", "Zeffretti", "Non temer"; piano concerto in G major. Leonard Bernstein, cond. and soloist. Also Jennie Tourel, soprano.

CUE
NEW YORK CITY
JUL 23 195[illegible]

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Sun, Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. . . . Fri, July 22—Boston Symphony Orch. Beethoven, Coriolan Overture; violin concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist. Beethoven's 7th Symphony. Charles Munch cond. . . . Sat., July 23—Boston Symphony Orch. Bach-Respighi, Passacaglia & Fugue; Beethoven, Symphony [illegible]; Sessions, Suite "Black Maskers"; Strauss, Death and Transfiguration. Pierre Monteux cond. . . . Sun., July 24 — Boston Symphony Orch.: Beethoven: Symphonies Nos. [illegible] Charles Munch cond. . . . Wed., July 27—New Music String Quartet, Beethoven Quartets, Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132. . . . Fri., July 29—Boston Symphony Orch.: Handel Water Music; Schumann Symphony No. 4; Barber "Prayers of Kierkegaard", Chorus and soloist, Leontyne Price; Brahms Symphony No. [illegible]. Charles Munch cond.

YOU

Yo

Passa
Na

Staff Co
PASSA
orchestr hand,
wood,
the road
Henry
Ave., wh
Sparta
Orchestr age of wood fo

[263]

Celebrity Night Nets $1,600 For Museum

Capacity Audience Enjoys Music, Dances At Special Event

Talent from all parts of Berkshire County assembled last night at the Berkshire Museum to make somewhat more than $1,600 for the museum's benefit on its first "Celebrity Night." Mrs. Alexander Euston headed the arrangements committee.

A capacity audience of 300 saw the program, introduced by James Phinney Baxter, Williams College president, as master of ceremonies. Departing only slightly from the schedule announced, a feature of the evening was the sketching in black and white by Norman Rockwell of Stockbridge of William Miles, Berkshire Playhouse director. Artist and model appeared on the stage as the sketch was started and reappeared at intervals as it progressed. The finished work was exhibited in the Ellen Crane room during the refreshment period following the revue.

Opening with 10 members of the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, who sang madrigals and played ancient instruments from early Elizabethan, French and Spanish periods, the program included songs by Christina A. Cardillo, soprano of North Adams, of the Berkshire Music Center opera department; a Chopin Prelude by her accompanist, Paul Ulanowsky, of the Tanglewood faculty; dances by Josefina Garcia and Alonso Rivera of Jacob's Pillow and Carola Goya and Matteo of Beaupre, Lenox, and scenes by members of the Williamstown summer theater and the Berkshire Playhouse casts.

The evening ended with three Scottish dances by Matteo, followed by the North Adams Kiltie Band in three numbers, after which they led the audience to the Ellen Crane room, where John A. Culpo played the accordion.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—New Music String Quartet in Beethoven concert. Tanglewood theater, Lenox.

8:40—"Picnic." Williamstown summer theater.

8:45—"Reclining Figure." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

9:00—Jacob's Pillow dance festival, featuring Alicia Alonso, Erik Bruhn and 10 leading dancers of Royal Danish Ballet. East of Lee.

Tomorrow

3:00 p.m.—La Meri, ethnic dancer, in her "Little Show." Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

4:00 p.m.—Jacob's Pillow dance festival.

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 26,119

JUL 21 1955

Week's Guide to Straw Hat And Nearby Music Circuit

By JUDITH V. WELD

Round and round goes the sprightly carousel of entertaining programs for summer audiences with most of the nearby theaters featuring fluffy comedies or musicals this week. There is, however, something for almost every taste, so climb aboard!

Terry by Starlight

Keeping things lively at Ivoryton is Terry Moore in "Star Light, Star Bright," a new comedy about a stage-struck young lady with an affinity for fabrication and for causing havoc in the household which mistakenly employs her as a servant. Miss Moore, an attractive, wholesome and unsophisticated young actress, illuminuates the stage with a fresh enthusiasm and naturalness, quite capable of endearing her to an audience.

Although choppily written and sketchy on plot, the play, mainly because of Miss Moore and a highly competent cast, is appealing hot weather fare. Contributing to the general amusement are a disarmingly impish little brat of a girl; an urbanely humorous TV comedian; a blustering old sourpuss of a playwright; a hip-swinging, not-so-dumb blonde, and other pleasant people.

Gershwin with Chaps

The cactus is a-bloom, guns are a-poppin' and the air is a-filled with the ever special music of George Gershwin at the Oakdale Musical Theater where "Girl Crazy" is being presented this week. It is the bouncy yarn of what happens in Custerville, Arizona, when a New York playboy meets up with a Western belle, sets up a dude ranch and persuades his Brooklyn-type taxi driver to run for sheriff. The production is most memorable for its music (which would profit from a quieter interpretation by the Wallingford orchestra).

Opening with the melodic "Bidin' My Time" rendered by a cowboy quartet, the show features such favorites as "Embraceable You" (pleasingly sung by Jerome Courtland), "Fascinating Rhythm" and "'Swonderful." Vivid interpretations are given to "I Got Rhythm" and the torchy "Samson and Delilah" by Marilyn Ross, an accomplished performer with a dynamic voice akin to Ethel Merman's; while the dance features are nimbly taken care of by Chita Rivera.

Handling the comedy very neatly are a winning funnyman, Joey Faye and Ferdi Hoffman as the rascally villain of the piece.

The production will play through Sunday night.

Shamrocks and Fantasy

Down at Norwich Playhouse where "they're wearing o' the green" this week for the musical "Finian's Rainbow," a New Britainite can be seen disguised as a leprechaun. He's Charles Welch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luke H. Welch of 40 Sexton St.

In his role as one of Erin's mythical people, he follows Finian, his daughter and a stolen crock of gold from Ireland's fictional Glocca Morra to America's equally mythical Rainbow Valley where, in the course of trying to retrieve the treasure, he becomes an alarmingly fickle mortal who warbles "When I'm Not Near the Girl I Love, I Love the Girl That's Near."

The part of Og gives ample opportunity for characterization to the local man who has performed in more than 300 TV shows since 1948, including Studio One, Suspense, Toast of the Town and the Frank Sinatra Show. Of course, maybe Welch has a special edge on the leprechaun role as he's got a shamrock or two on his own family tree! Another Irishman, Will Mahoney, vaudeville and musical comedy star, is Finian.

Winters at Summer Playhouse

At Clinton this week, Shelley Winters, famous movie actress, is playing in "Wedding Breakfast," a romantic comedy recently on Broadway. In the play, the blonde film star depicts a young woman, whose disappointment in love causes here to be most suspicious of any new entanglement. The situation is satisfactorily resolved however, with the aid of a handsome visitor, here sister and sister's boy friend.

Concert Notes

An investigation of the concert opportunities shows that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its 12 program series at Tanglewood tomorrow night, with concerts also scheduled for Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. Works by Beethoven will be featured in this year's weekend concert programs. Also in Lenox, but at the other musical extreme, Count Basie and his band will play Thursday evening at 8:30 in the Berkshire Music Barn.

For music under the stars the Connecticut "Pops" will include Tschaikowsky's Violin Concerto as one of its selections tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. on the grounds of Fairfield University, while the next concert by the New Haven Pops at the Yale Bowl will be on Aug. 2 when Oscar Levant, pianist, will be featured.

Dog Days

And, incidentally, if you can't get to the shore on Saturday and are wondering how to amuse yourself or the children, the annual all breed dog show and obedience trial sponsored by the Farmington Valley Kennel Clu will be going on all day on t grounds of the Polo Club. A to of 552 dogs have been ente and, if it's as hot as this, th panting should be something extraordinary!

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 P M

RAIN OR SHINE

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

Berkshire Courier 7/28

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 6:15 by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Suite from "On the Waterfront" .... Bernstein
(FIRST PERFORMANCE)

"A Lincoln Portrait" .... Copland
(Speaker to be announced)

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor

in a typical Pops program—

Spanish Caprice .... Rimsky-Korsakov

Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra .... Gershwin

Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball" .... Strauss-Dorati
(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ★ PICNIC SUPPER

WALTZING ON THE LAWN ★ DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ★ OPERA SCENES

THE CHORUS ★ CHAMBER MUSIC

REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS

Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14

(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)

Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3, [illegible]
Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, [illegible] (Box Seats).

Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, [illegible]

Baldwin Piano

[redacted]

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Sun, Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. [illegible] Berkshire Hills Conference, [illegible] Mass. Fri, July 8 —Charles Munch cond. Bach, Sinfonia from "Easter". Oratorio and Suite No. 2 for Flute and Strings: Stravinsky, "Orpheus"; Mozart "Prague" [illegible] 504). [illegible] July 9— [illegible] quale, [illegible] No. [illegible] vanni"; Symphony [illegible] "Linz", [illegible] "Al Desio", "Zeffiretti" [illegible] "Non temer"; piano concerto in G major. Leonard Bernstein, cond. and soloist. [illegible] Sourel, soprano.

[redacted]

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL — Thru Sun, Aug 14 — Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Tel.: 600. Boston Symphony Orch. Chamber Music concerts 8:30 pm, $2 & $3. Chamber Orch. Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30. $4 & $5. Music Shed Fri, Sat 8:30, Sun 2:30, $2.50-$6.50. Tickets from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. General adm to grounds $2 on sale day of concert. July 8-17 concerts in Theatre-Concert Hall. July 22-Aug 14 in Music Shed. Info. on accommodations from Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. . . . Fri, July 22—Boston Symphony Orch. Beethoven, Coriolan Overture; violin concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist. Beethoven's 7th Symphony. Charles Munch cond. . . . Sat., July 23—Boston Symphony Orch. Bach-Respighi, Passacaglia & Fugue; Beethoven, Symphony [illegible] Sessions, Suite "Black Maskers"; [illegible] th and Transfiguration. Pierre Mo[illegible] . . . Sun., July 24 — Boston [illegible] Orch.; Beethoven: Symphonies Nos. [illegible] Charles Munch cond. . . . Wed., July [illegible] Music String Quartet, Beethoven [illegible] Op. 18, No. 2; Op. 127; Op. 132. . . . July 29— Boston Symphony Orch.: Handel, Water Music; Schumann Symphony No. [illegible] "Prayers of Kierkegaard", Chorus and soloist, Leontyne Price; Brahms Symphony No. [illegible] Charles Munch cond.

[263]

NEWARK N. J. NEWS

JUL 17 1955

Newark News Photo

YOUNG CONDUCTOR—Henry Janiec of Passaic reads score of composition he is preparing for Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass.

Young Conductor Goes to Festival

Passaic Man Again Named Assistant

Staff Correspondent.

PASSAIC — A young Passaic orchestra conductor, baton in hand, hopes his trip to Tanglewood, Mass., is another leg on the road to success.

Henry Janiec of 186 Columbia Ave., who became head of the Spartanburg (S.C.) Symphony Orchestra three years ago at the age of 22, has arrived at Tanglewood for his second summer as assistant conductor at the Berkshire Music Center.

He will assist Leonard Bernstein, composer-conductor, and will conduct the premier performances of "The Rope," a new opera, during the Berkshire Music Festival Aug. 8 and 9.

Janiec, who was top man in his graduating class in Oberlin (Ohio) College's music division, was named to direct the Spartanburg orchestra and teach piano and conduct at Converse College there before his 22nd birthday. Since taking charge of the city's amateur orchestra, he has increased its size from 49 to 86, gone into the area school systems and helped create a music program which now provides new musicians for the group.

Aids Productions

As head of the orchestra, Janiec frequently is called upon to assist in production of amateur and school musical productions. He also has been guest conductor on frequent occasions when traveling orchestral units visit Spartanburg.

"One of the biggest thrills I've ever received was when I was asked to be the guest conductor with the Boston Pops Orchestra," he said. 'It was in my first year as a professional conductor. I must admit it was nerve wracking."

Last year, Janiec applied for the post of assistant conductor at Tanglewood for the six-week summer series and he was accepted after an audition. He conducted in the famous Thursday night orchestral series, working with such men as Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony; Jean Morel, Richard Burtin, Thomas Shippers and Arthur Burgin.

As an assistant conductor, he also works with some 400 music students at the Berkshire Music Center, being one of only two or three conductors so assigned.

Will Direct Music at Tanglewood, Mass.

Each summer, thousands of persons attend the festival.

After the festival, Janiec will return to Spartanburg to prepare for the start of the fall semester.

"I don't have much time between the end of the school year, going to Tanglewood and returning to South Carolina," he said. "But music is my life—it's what I'm happiest doing."

Janiec is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec. His brother, Edwin, is director of the Chopin Singing Society, a Polish men's choral group.

Berkshire Courier 7/28

True Beethoven Spirit Prevails at Lenox As Violinist Stern Captivates Audience

By George E. Membrino

The full impact of the Berkshire Music Festival was felt this past week-end as the complete 105-member Boston Symphony Orchestra mounted the stage of the Tanglewood Music Shed at Lenox. Charles Munch shared the podium honors this weekend with Pierre Monteux, who conducted Saturday night's program. Some 25,000 paid admissions were rewarded by hearing four of the most exciting and enjoyable concerts yet presented at this summer "Salzburg of America."

Isaac Stern and Alexander Zakin teamed up on violin and piano, respectively, last week Wednesday evening to present three of the Beethoven Violin Sonatas. Heard were No. 2 in A major, No. 5 in F major, and No. 7 in C minor.

The true spirit of Beethoven prevailed throughout. Violinist Stern's true sense of feeling and exactness proved beyond a doubt his right to be considered one of the world's greatest. This raving about Mr. Stern must of necessity be carried over to Friday night's concert where he acted as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the renditon of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto." The first movement was so exquisitely played that the audience and the orchestra both broke into spontaneous applause at the end of the first movement. The final two movements were equally well executed, as shown in the many calls provided for soloists, conductor and orchestra.

Also heard on the same program were Beethoven's "Overture to Coriolan" and his Symphony No. 7 in A major. The true immensity and proportions of Beethoven were expounded to musical limits in his Seventh Symphony. Mr. Munch conducted as if he were apart from the audience and orchestra. It provided us with as great an experience as ever had been felt in a single symphony. The slow introduction to the first movement acted as a spark for what was to follow. In the second movement the slow theme and its many variations and counter themes were presented with ease and gave much listening pleasure.

The third movement, "Presto," which is in reality a scherzo, had all the nonsensical humor associated with such. The finale, "Allegro," carried the entire force of this magnificent symphony to a close. A more memorable performance of this symphony seems hardly possible.

Sunday afternoon another all-Beethoven program was heard. Symphonies No. 1, 4,, and 6 were performed. With all due credit to the orchestra for the delightful presentation of No. 1 and 4 the highlight of the program was the No. 6 "Pastoral."

Membrino Turn to Twelfth page

Membrino

(Continued from first page)

The "Pastoral" was Beethoven's real attempt at writing program music. Depicting the awakening of serene impressions on arriving in the country, scenes by the brookside, gathering of country folk, thunderstorm, tempest, shepherd's song, and the gladsome thankful feeling after the storm were picturesquely portrayed by Mr. Munch and the orchestra.

The only non-all-Beethoven program was heard Saturday evening when as guest conductor Pierre Monteux appeared. When the 80-year-old conductor mounted the podium the orchestra joined in the hearty applause—a tribute to one of music's outstanding personalities.. With remarkable ease Mr. Monteux conducted music of Bach, Beethoven, Strauss, and Sessions.

It remains a grave task for any conductor to be able to offer such varied music of four historical musical periods with the freshness of approach in each that was heard last Saturday evening. Many comments about Pierre Monteux were overheard, but the most fitting of all was the one spoken by an old Boston Symphony Orchestra supporter who said, "Mr. Monteux has grown younger since he was conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1919 to 1924."

The student orchestra program presented Thursday night affords us a highly interesting program as well as growth and development. Three short weeks ago the orchestra was formed under such capable leadership as Leonard Bernstein and Seymour Lipkin. After having presented three concerts some excellent conclusions can be drawn.

Most important of all is the continual delight of players concerned in the progress made toward better orchestral sound. Their ability to organize and play under many different conductors is astonishing. Truly this student orchestra is worthy of

---

Berkshire Festival Enters Fourth Week

Varied Program Offered by Munch Friday Evening

Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" to Have Tanglewood Premiere. — All-Beethoven Concert Scheduled Saturday.—Pierre Monteux to Conduct Sunday.

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music this week-end.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week-end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
VARIETY

JUL 13 1955

Concert Bits

Humphrey Doulens, Columbia Artists Mgt. v.p., bedded at home in Norwalk, Conn., for last round against hepatitis following discharge from hosp.

The London Philharmonia, which will make its U.S. debut this fall, with Herbert von Karajan conducting, will also appear at Salzburg next January for that city's Mozart Week, and not the London Philharmonic, as erratumed.

Ten leading dancers of the Royal Danish Ballet will make their New York debut at Lewisohn Stadium July 21.

Leon Danielian has been re-signed by Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo for the coming season.

Thor Johnson, Cincy Symph maestro, will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra in the "Berkshire Festival" broadcast next Monday (18) on NBC Radio.

Dr. Moshe Paranov, director of the Julius Hartt Musical Foundation in Hartford, Conn., has been engaged for a second season as musical director and conductor of the Brockton (Mass.) Orchestral Society. Rodney May, newly-elected president of the board of directors, and supervisor of the Brockton Public Schools' Music Dept., will continue as the orch's associate director.

[264]

Lowell Sun. 7/28
Alfred W. Burke, Music Editor

Festival Program

Pierre Monteux will conduct the program Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Festival. The program as revised will be as follows:

Academis Festival Overture—Brahms
Concerto for Violin in D Major Opus 77 .... Brahms
Soloist—Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 1, in C minor Brahms

"The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theatre-Concert hall at 8:30 on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 8 and 9. On the same program will be "Zaide" 'k. 344, an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart; so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

"The Rope" was composed by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music foundation and prepared his work from the beginning of consultation with Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neil's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by the Provincetown Players, April 26, 1917.

Blacher, Milhaud, Martinu Operas Monday In Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall

Eagle 7/28

Choral Works Also Slated at Friends Program

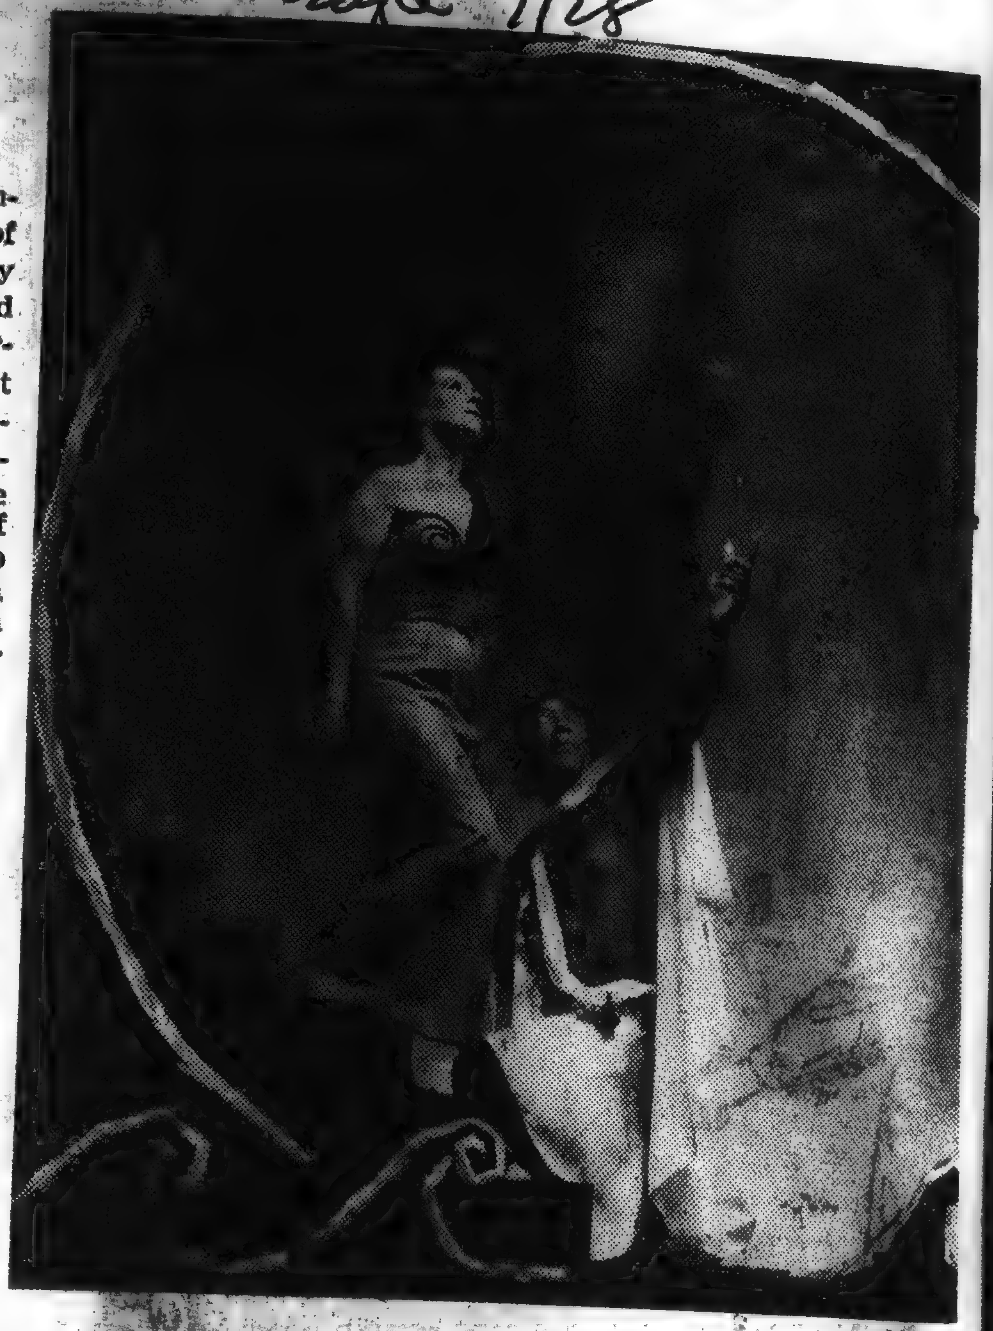
TANGLEWOOD — Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (Chorus).

All Seats Reserved

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hoehschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U.S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U.S. in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Department.



Manos

Claire Watson of Rochester, N.Y., as Ariana, and McHenry Boatwright of Boston as Dionysos, rehearse a scene from Darius Milhaud's one-act opera, "Ariana Abandoned," which will have its Tanglewood premiere Monday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department. Mr. Goldovsky has staged the Milhaud work. His stage director, Sarah Caldwell, has directed "Romeo and Juliet" and "Comedy on the Bridge." Scenery is by David Hays (for "Ariana Abandoned" and "Comedy on the Bridge") by Jack Brown (for "Romeo and Juliet"). Laura Zirner has designed costumes for the Blacher opera, Anna Aubin for the Milhaud, Leo Van Witsen for the Martinu. Make-up for all three operas has been created by Mr. Van Witsen, and lighting is by David Hays. Kalman Novak will conduct an orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center's students in Department I (orchestra) for "Romeo and Juliet," Igor Chichagov will lead a student orchestral ensemble for the Milhaud work, and Mr. Goldovsky will provide a piano accompaniment for Mr. Martinu's opera.

Choral Program

On the same program will be a concert of choral music, prepared by Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's chorus department, with the assistance of Iva D. Hiatt and John Krueger. The choral program is: "The 142nd Psalm" (1941) by Julius Chajes, for mezzo-soprano, tenor and baritone solo, mixed voices and organ; "Two Pilgrim Psalms" (1951) by Ross Lee Finney, Ann Arbor, Mich., Psalm 138: "With al my hart I'le Thee confess, and Psalm 95: "Come, let us to the Lord showt joyfully"; "Three Songs of Spring" (1955) by Domingo Santa Cruz, Chile: "From the mountains comes the snow," "On the arid earth of winter," "Where are the ones that are departed?"; "Lamentation Over Boston" and "Modern Music" by William Billings (1746-1800), and "The Stars," by S. J. Taneyef. Students of Department II (Chorus) and conductors from the choral department will participate.

Opera Program

The opera program follows:

ROMEO AND JULIET by Boris Blacher (1949)

Lady Capulet, mother of Juliet	Gwendolyn Belle
Capulet, father of Juliet	Payton Higgison
Juliet	Naomi Farr
Juliet's Nurse	Regina Sarfaty
Tybalt, Juliet's cousin	Lynn Detwiler
Paris, suitor to Juliet favored by the Capulets	Gabriel de los Rios
Romeo	Harold Johnson
Benvolio, his friend	Robert Kerns

ARIANA ABANDONED (L'Abandon d'Ariane) by Darius Milhaud (1928)

Ariana	Claire Watson
Dionysos	McHenry Boatwright
Phedra	Lee Goebel
Theseus	Peter Roberts

Sailors—Gabriel de los Rios, Richard Krause, John Rhomberg
Baccantes—Harriet Franklin, Ruth McDowell, Dolores Uebele

COMEDY ON THE BRIDGE by Bohuslav Martinu

Brewer	Oscar McCullough
Johnny	Robert Kirkham
School Teacher	Lynn Detwiler
Eva	Gwendolyn Belle
Josephine	Rosemary Evas
Colonel	P. A. Hoover
Guards	Herbert Gibson, Joseph Scott

"The Rope" Aug. 8, 9

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the Opera De miere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name which was produced originally by the Provincetown Players at Provincetown, April 26, 1917.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide", an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

Mr. Goldovsky will stage "The Rope," Miss Caldwell "Zaide." Scenery and lighting for both operas are by David Hays, costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Conducting students of Department I (orchestra) will conduct an orchestra of students.

Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing the operas. As with the opera-chorus concert of Aug. 1, all seats for Aug. 8 and 9 are reserved. Ticket information will be furnished by the office of the Friends' Society, at Tanglewood.

VOL. 18 JULY, 1955 NO. 7

TODDLE HOUSE

THE TODDLE HOUSE Digest

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL OF MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its 17th summer of music at Tanglewood, in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th in which the orchestra has participated, on July 5. The six-week festival, enlarged in scope this season, will last through August 15. Last year Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of music lovers of 117,950, an average of 4,360 in its chamber concerts in the Theatre Concert-Hall, and an average of 10,200 in its huge Music Shed.

Tanglewood was once filled with literary associations as the site of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Little Red House" where he wrote The House of Seven Gables and invented his Tanglewood Tales for the delight of his own and the neighbors' children. Now abounding in music, it is a place of scenic beauty always.

Tanglewood was presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936 for its summer concerts, and the Music Shed was built in 1938. In 1940 the Berkshire Music Center was established with Dr. Koussevitzky as director. Mr. Charles Munch has been director since the 1952 season.

Jourl Sun. 7/28
Alfred W. Burke, Music Edi. 107

Festival Program

Pierre Monteux will conduct the program Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Festival. The program as revised will be as follows:

Academic Festival Overture—Brahms
Concerto for Violin in D Major Opus 77 .... Brahms
Soloist—Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 1, in C minor Brahms

"The Rope," an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theatre-Concert hall at 8:30 on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 8 and 9. On the same program will be "Zaide", k. 344, an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart; so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U. S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

"The Rope" was composed by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music foundation and prepared his work from the beginning of consultation with Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by the Provincetown Players, April 26, 1917.

[illegible] Operas Monday In Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall

Eagle 7/28

Choral Works Also Slated at Friends Program

TANGLEWOOD — Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (Chorus).

All Seats Reserved

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U.S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U.S. in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Department.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka.

The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department. Mr. Goldovsky has staged the Milhaud work. His stage director, Sarah Caldwell, has directed "Romeo and Juliet" and "Comedy on the Bridge." Scenery is by David Hays (for "Ariana Abandoned" and "Comedy on the Bridge") by Jack Brown (for "Romeo and Juliet"). Laura Zirner has designed costumes for the Blacher opera, Anna Aubin for the Milhaud, Leo Van Witsen for the Martinu. Make-up for the three operas has been cr[illegible] Van Witsen, and [illegible] David Hays. Kal[illegible] conduct an orches[illegible] shire Music Cen[illegible] Department I [illegible] "Romeo and Juliet" [illegible] agov will lead a student [illegible] ensemble for the Milhaud w[illegible] and Mr. Goldovsky will provide a piano accompaniment for Mr. Martinu's opera.

Choral Program

On the same program will be a concert of choral music, prepared by Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's chorus department, with the assistance of Iva D. Hiatt and John Krueger. The choral program is: "The 142nd Psalm" (1941) by Julius Chajes, for mezzo-soprano, tenor and baritone solo, mixed voices and organ; "Two Pilgrim Psalms" (1951) by Ross Lee Finney, Ann Arbor, Mich., Psalm 138: "With all my hart I'le Thee confess, and Psalm 95: "Come, let us to the Lord showt joyfully"; "Three Songs of Spring" (1955) by Domingo Santa Cruz, Chile: "From the mountains comes the snow," "On the arid earth of winter," "Where are the ones that are departed?"; "Lamentation Over Boston" and "Modern Music" by William Billings (1746-1800), and "The Stars," by S. J. Taneyef. Students of Department II (Chorus) and conductors from the choral department will participate.

Opera Program

The opera program follows:

ROMEO AND JULIET by Boris Blacher (1949)

Lady Capulet, mother of Juliet	Gwendolyn Belle
Capulet, father of Juliet	Payton Higginson
Juliet	Naomi Farr
Juliet's Nurse	Regina Sarfaty
Tybalt, Juliet's cousin	Lynn Detwiler
Paris, suitor to Juliet favored by the Capulets	Gabriel de los Rios
Romeo	Harold Johnson
Benvolio, his friend	Robert Karns

ARIANA ABANDONED (L'Abandon d'Ariane) by Darius Milhaud ([illegible])

Ariana	Claire Watson
Dionysos	McHenry Boatwright
Phedra	[illegible]
Theseus	Peter [illegible]

Sailors—Gabriel de los Rios, Richard Krause, John Rhom[illegible]
Bacchantes—Harriet [illegible], Ruth McDowell, Dolores Ueb[illegible]

COMEDY ON THE BRIDGE by Bohuslav Martinu

[illegible]

Claire [illegible] of Rochester, N.Y., as Ariana, and McHenry Boatwright [illegible] as Dionysos, rehearse a scene from Darius Milhaud's [illegible] opera, "Ariana Abandoned," which will have its Tanglewood [illegible] Monday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

[illegible]miere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name which was produced originally by the Provincetown Players at Provincetown, April 26, 1917.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide", an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

Mr. Goldovsky will stage "The Rope," Miss Caldwell "Zaide." Scenery and lighting for both operas are by David Hays, costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Conducting students of Department I (orchestra) will conduct an orchestra of students.

Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing the operas. As with the opera-chorus concert of Aug. 1, all seats for Aug. 8 and 9 are reserved. Ticket information will be furnished by the office of the Friends' Society, at Tanglewood.

VOL. 18 JULY, 1955 NO. 7

TODDLE HOUSE

THE TODDLE HOUSE Digest

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL OF MUSIC

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its 17th summer of music at Tanglewood, in the hills of Western Massachusetts, the 15th in which the orchestra has participated, on July 5. The six-week festival, enlarged in scope this season, will last through August 15. Last year Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of music lovers of 117,950, an average of 4,360 in its chamber concerts in the Theatre Concert-Hall, and an average of 10,200 in its huge Music Shed.

Tanglewood was once filled with literary associations as the site of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Little Red House" where he wrote The House of Seven Gables and invented his Tanglewood Tales for the delight of his own and the neighbors' children. Now abounding in music, it is a place of scenic beauty always.

Tanglewood was presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1936 for its summer concerts, and the Music Shed was built in 1938. In 1940 the Berkshire Music Center was established with Dr. Koussevitzky as director. Mr. Charles Munch has been director since the 1952 season.

July 23 THE KANSAS CITY TIME

A TANGLEWOOD RENDEZVOUS OF KANSANS AND MISSOURIANS is held in the shade of the great pines at the Berkshire Music center. Five young women from the two states have a chat with Roger Sessions, well-known American composer, holding a musical score balanced on his knee. The young musicians studying at the summer school of the Boston Symphony orchestra are Janice Darlene Seward, soprano, of Leon, Kas.; Emma Lou Diemer, majoring in composition, of Warrensburg, Mo.; Gwendolyn Louise Belle, vocalist, of St. Louis; Ann M. Nelson, soprano, Lawrence, Kas., and Connie Lou Converse, cellist, of Hays, Kas.

Eight Students From This Area Find Inspiration at Tanglewood

By Joseph Kaye.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass, July—If the music heard at the annual summer festival here makes this event, conducted by the Boston Symphony, internationally famous, the advanced students enrolled at the Berkshire Music center, a 6-week session which is part of the festival, are the instruments through which better music, and more of it, will be offered to the American people.

The Tanglewood festival started recently, and the center with it. The school is maintained by the Boston Symphony with a faculty of outstanding musicians and first-desk men of the orchestra. The students are chosen by audition. Out of some 1,500 applicants, 405 from thirty-eight states and eighteen foreign countries were selected for admittance.

Eight eager, enthusiastic young people from Missouri and Kansas are at the center. One of these was at Tanglewood last summer, the accomlished composer, Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg, Mo. Her unusual blue eyes were brighter than ever, for it is a fine compliment to be accepted for a second term. Miss Diemer is studying with Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher, a noted German composer and director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. A set of three songs for chorus by her is being rehearsed for student performance.

Soprano From Lawrence.

Another girl whose father is an educator is Ann Nelson, charming soprano who is likely to make her way in opera. Her father, Edward L. Nelson, is professor of economic history and of human relations in business at the University of Kansas. Both he and her mother are amateur musicians. Following Tanglewood Miss Nelson will resume study in New York with Metropolitan Opera bass Gerhardt Pechner. She was accepted for Tanglewood at a Carnegie Hall audition at which three distinguished men of the opera department were the judges, Paul Ulanovsky, Emanuel Balaban and Arthur Schoep.

Standing out puckishly in the group was Patricia Ashley, a dark, vivacious young woman who teaches piano and theory at Culver-Stockton college in Canton, Mo. She is also an alto, and is doing advanced vocal work in Tanglewood. She says she has no ambitions beyond making herself a better instructor.

Soprano From Kansas.

Janice Darlene Seward is from Leon, Kas., where her father, Ivan, is a farmer. She is a soprano and began her studies at the University of Wichita. Besides gaining admittance to the Berkshire Music center, she was also accepted last year at the Fontainbleau arts school in France. She was deep in the scores of "Carmen" and "Traviata" and is to sing Micaela and Violetta in student performances.

One of Miss Seward's fellow students at Wichita was Connie Lou Converse, a cellist. Her home is in Hays, Kas., where her father is an electrical engineer. She traveled 180 miles from Hays to Wichita for her lessons at Wichita university, which should indicate her zeal.

One of the leading students at the center is Gwendolyn Louise Belle of St. Louis, daughter of Jewel Belle, a supper club vocalist. Miss Belle is to sing in the Tanglewood performance of Blacher's opera, "Romeo and Juliet," in which she will be the mother. A year ago she was the soloist in New York in Leopold Stokowski's premier performance of Carl Orff's "Carmino Burano," which attracted much attention.

Oboe Player Composes.

Another St. Louis student is Robert Arthur Dennis, a student in composition. His father, Israel Dennis, is head of the Dennis Chemical company in St. Louis. Dennis also plays the oboe, which will prove useful for earnings until his composition ship comes in. The New York choral group known as the Master Singers sang one of his compositions.

Completing the eight is Tom Clymer, who has a kinship to Missouri, having lived for seven years in Columbia, Mo., and studied at the University of Missouri. His father, R. Oscar Clymer, was head of the choral department at the university, and of Stephens college. (Because of health, he recently took a less taxing position as superintendent of music in New Maumee, O. Tom Clymer, studying with the center choral department, is now a music teacher in a public school in Akron, O., and conducts and sings tenor with choral groups.

Berkshire Eagle
7/28

Music

New Music Quartet Plays Beethoven

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH Wednesday evening of chamber music of Beethoven was played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the New Music String Quartet. Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi are the violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. The ensembles of this series have been a succession of eminent groups. No one is scheduled to play more than once and the programs have included music for various combinations.

Last night the artists opened their program with one of the earliest quartets, the G major, Opus 18, No. 2. The men of the quartet individually are so able and well matched that they take in stride certain movements in which ordinary quartets would find the tempo disastrous. The four chairs are exceptionally strong and equally substantial with the result that phrases in the inner and lowest voices, which are often muffled or played with a bit of fear and lack of courage, are here presented in their proper stature and proportion.

* * *

IT WAS GOOD to hear the second violin assert himself when it became his turn to state the second subject. This was real quartet playing and not three men supporting or accompanying a dominating one. There were many points, however, where their considered judgment was debatable, in addition to the extremely fast tempi they chose every time there was half a chance.

They played two of the very last of the Beethoven quartets after the opening early one, which is one of the most appealing of all. The late ones are full of philosophical background and connotations and then, out of overcast skies, there keep appearing the most lovely melodies, the most passionate rhythms and the most gratifying and lucid developments.

* * *

THE FIRST section of the first movement of this Opus 18 is marked to repeat. The New Musickers ignored this indication and went on, thereby throwing the whole movement out of balance. This is not a matter of choice; it is mandatory. We also thought the first violin paid more attention, in his bow-changing, to bar-lines and note-groups than he did to phrases. This opinion was further substantiated in the E flat, Opus 127, where there was not consistent evidence of thorough penetration.

These late Beethovens require endless refining and polishing and long distilling. In the notes and in all their involvements the men of the quartet found no difficulties and they played with vivid tone, but there was more within than they extracted in many cases. In the slow movement, they were at their best and played with a sense of the tremendous pathos and with a poise to express it which left their audience breathless for seconds, which seemed minutes, as they let the last A-flat chord dissolve and dissipate into inaudible imperceptibility.

* * *

IN SPITE OF the weather, which could not have been less favorable for strings, their intonation was true and, if granted the Mach 1 speed, the playing was dazzling and brilliant.

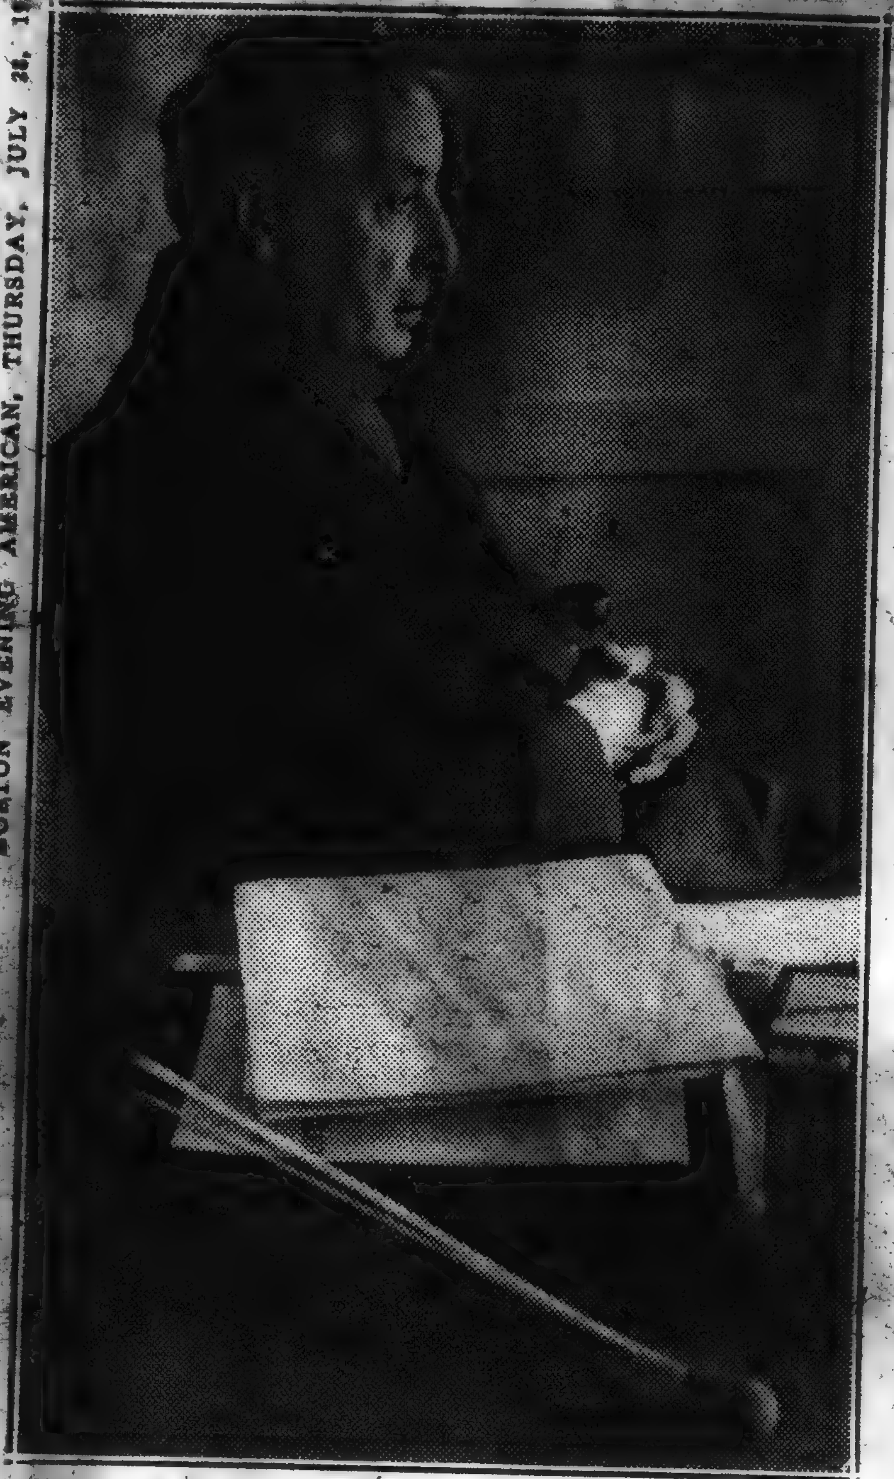
Their final offering was Opus 132. We found this not a valid presentation. The allegro following the short eight-bar slow introduction was played with a celerity and a virtuosity which could not serve in place of musical reasoning. Later, in the section where Beethoven feels his "strength returning" in the "Song of Thanks," the majesty of the moment was missed. A broken string halted this movement for a short moment but the quartet found it impossible to regain their composure. The opportunities for expressiveness which Beethoven provided, one after the other, were passed by as so many bars of più allegro or allegro appassionato without distinction.

* * *

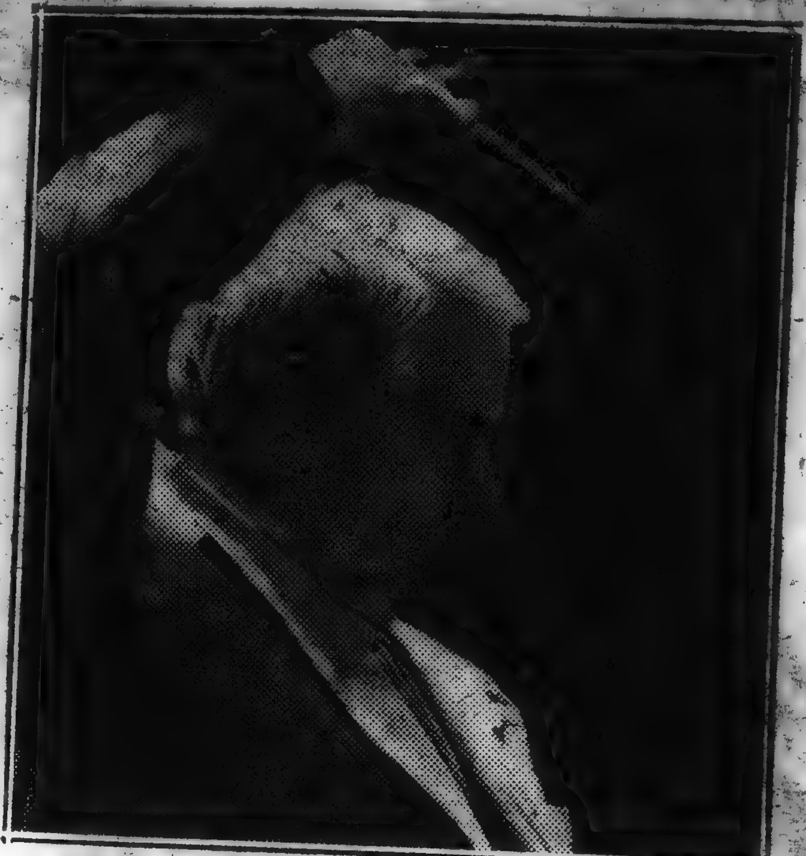
THE "LATE" Beethovens are something quite apart from technical achievement. They give the performers some of the greatest rewards music can afford, but to convey them to an audience in all revealment is a goal not easily attained.

2
4
BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1955

Warm in Tanglewood, Too



He's 'Beat'—Charles Munch meditates as he sits beside the tools of his trade—batons and sheets of musical arrangements—at Tanglewood, Lenox, where he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berkshire Festival summer concerts. A rehearsal session followed . . . and the work and warmth proves wearing . . . as the final picture attests.



MUNCH CONDUCTS, RAISES BATON

REHEARSAL'S ALMOST ENDED

. . . AND THE CONDUCTOR "COLLAPSES"

Grace Notes

7/28

TANGLEWOOD, FRIDAY

By A. H.

Lakeville Journal

The great shed at Tanglewood opened Friday evening for its first full symphonic concert of the season. The crowd had not yet attained its full dimensions and the people outside the shed were not massed in the usual sardine formation. A sense of space, quiet and the grateful cool of the evening which followed a blistering day, offered an ideal setting for Conductor Munch's handsome all-Beethoven program.

After a flawless performance of the Overture to "Coriolan," Op. 62, Isaac Stern joined the orchestra in the beautiful Violin Concerto in D Major, Op. 61. We feel sure that violinist Stern, a top master of his art, could never surpass the musicianship he displayed on Friday. Depth and clarity of tone, profound musical understanding, filegree delicacy matched by rich tonal strength . . . Mr. Stern had everything, and gave everything he had. The audience paid him in the double coin of breathless stillness followed by insistent and thundering applause.

The program closed with the Seventh Symphony (this reviewer's particular favorite among the 'magnificent nine"). Mature, beautiful, deeply satisfying, this Symphony with its stately second movement, as enchanted as a Pavane for dreamers, its brilliant Allegro finale . . . gave the concert an exalted conclusion.

TANGLEWOOD, SATURDAY

By R. S. C.

Pierre Monteux appeared as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony last Saturday in a brilliant and stimulating program. The highlight of the evening was a performance of Roger Session's incidental music to Andreyeff's The Black Maskers, a suite in four movements, which handsomely displayed the orchestra's wind sections. Although this is a complicated score, it is music that appeals directly to the ear, with its colorful orchestration and varied rhythms. Particularly effective was the end of the third section, the Dirge, with the organ solo in parallel fourths. Mention should also be made of the fine playing of the viola and flute soli in the second Scene. Mr. Monteux's reading must have been most gratifying to the composer, who was on hand to acknowledge an ovation.

Earlier Mr. Monteux had conducted Respighi's orchestration of Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor, an arrangement that fights hard to stand in the way of such noble music. Then he led Beethoven's 2nd Symphony in a reading that was occasionally muddy — especially where the conductor has doubled the wind parts in forte passages. But what a glorious conclusion there was in Strauss' Death and Transfiguration! Here the orchestra responded to the master conductor with magnificent precision and gave us a performance of this work, that will remain long in our memory. There seemed to be no technical problems for these players in a score that is full of such hazards. Mr. Monteux's complete command of the piece was apparent, as is his leading of almost any work with an orchestra. Surely no composer could wish any more.

Tanglewood Programs Listed For Two Weeks

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on August 3 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of, the three concerts, on Saturday evening (August 6) and Sunday afternoon (August 7), and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, The Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evenng (August 5).

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1954 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and Study Group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Met-

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

Herald

FRIDAY, ~~JULY~~ 29, 195

Shed Concerts Start Second Week Tonight

Tonight the second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

THE NEW YORK TIMES, FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1955

Music: Keyboard Night

Goldovsky, Luboshutz, Nemenoff Heard in 3 Mozart Concertos at Stadium

A FORECAST of the Mozart bicentennial observations, which will get under way officially in 1956, was offered Wednesday night at Lewisohn Stadium. Three of Mozart's piano concertos and "The Marriage of Figaro" Overture made up the program.

The unusual aspect of the evening was the type of concertos. First, Boris Goldovsky, Genia Nemenoff and Pierre Luboshutz joined the Stadium Symphony for Mozart's Concerto in F for three pianos, a work almost never encountered in the concert hall, what with the effort of juggling three pianos on the stage and the difficulty of obtaining three fine artists to learn the work. Mr. Goldovsky conducted from a piano that faced the orchestra and was raised a little above the other two instruments.

•

Next, Mr. Goldovsky played the familiar Concerto in G (K. 453). For this work, Mr. Luboshutz took the podium. The final work was the Concerto in E flat for Two Pianos, played by Mr. Luboshutz and Miss Nemenoff, under the baton of Mr. Goldovsky.

Another unusual aspect was the size of the audience. It numbered 8,000—a more than respectable turnout for a program of Mozart concertos unalleviated by anything in the way of splash.

With an experienced two-piano team like Luboshutz and Nemenoff at work in two of the three numbers, the interpretations were bound to have consistency. When Mr. Goldovsky took the solo piano in the G major Concerto, the results were a little rougher. He is an expert conductor, but his piano technique is not on a comparable level of accomplishment; nor was his constantly detached style of fingering the most appropriate vehicle for the music.

•

Mr. Luboshutz, who conducted this work, made a decidedly favorable impression on the podium. His tempos were unhurried but never flabby, he had things under control and his ideas about phrasing were always sensitive. If memory serves, he never before has been seen in this city in the role of a conductor.

There were some reservations about the total effect of the program, but one also had to bear in mind the fact that the vast expanses of Lewisohn Stadium are not kind to the delicate adjustments of a composer like Mozart. One would like to hear a repeat of the three concertos under more favorable acoustical conditions.

H. C. S.

Springfield Union 7/29

14 THE SPRINGFIE

Boston Symphony Plays Tonight for Second Week End

Munch to Conduct, Including Tanglewood Premiere Of Score by Barber

Lenox, July 28 — The second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms.

Play Barber's Score

In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, Barber's score was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in the performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky.

The programs Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven and Brahms respectively. Saturday evening Mr. Munch will conduct the Overture to "Egmont" and the "Eroica" Symphony, and Rudolf Serkin will be soloist in the "Emperor" Piano Concerto. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the "Academic Festival" Overture and First Symphony of Brahms, and Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky will be the soloists in the Double Concerto in A Minor for Violin and Cello. A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a. m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, when Pierre Monteux will rehearse his Saturday evening program. A nominal admission of $1 is charged for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Remaining tickets for Friday's concert, as well as all succeeding ones, are on sale at the Tanglewood boxoffice, telephone Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert.

rey, noted singer, will offer a new group of songs not previously done at the Music Barn. They will include Scottish, Irish, English and American folk songs.

The Teddy Charles Modern Jazz Quartet will appear Sunday evening at 8:30. Teddy Charles, born in Chicopee Falls in 1928, played the drums in his own band in Springfield, when he was 16. Starting in 1946, for four years, he played the Vibraphone with Benny Goodman, George Shearing, Artie Shaw and Oscar Petti, and in 1950 organized his own group. Numbers included in the modern program will be some of those composed by J. R. Montrose, tenor sax player for the group.

Center to Present First Opera Under Foundation Plan

Lenox, July 28—On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the world premiere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name which was produced originally by the Provincetown Players at Provincetown, April 26, 1917.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

Mr. Goldovsky will stage "The Rope," Miss Caldwell "Zaide." Scenery and lighting for both operas are by David Hays, costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Conducting students of the Berkshire Music Center's Department I (orchestra) will conduct an orchestra of students.

Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing the operas. As with the opera-chorus concert of Aug. [illegible], all seats for Aug. 8 and 9 are reserved. Ticket information will be furnished by the office of the Friends' Society, at Tanglewood, telephone Lenox 600.

New Hampshire was the ninth state to ratify the Constitution of the United States, which meant its adoption.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 22 1955

SHED CONCERTS START TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Charles Munch to Conduct All-Beethoven Program With Symphony

The 1955 Berkshire Festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight, from the intimate theater-concert hall to the great Music Shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony. This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four week ends of the Festival, on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 Shed concerts attracted a total attendance of [illegible]925, for an average of 9197, or one and one-half times the seating capacity (6000), the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawn under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. The advance sale for this season's shed concerts indicates that the all-time attendance mark set last season will be shattered this year.

Stern Soloist

Mr. Stern tonight will make his second of three appearances at this season's Festival; last week, with Alexander Zakin, pianist, he played three of Beethoven's Sonatas for violin an dpiano, donating his services for the benefit of the orchestra's summer music school's Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. On Sunday afternoon, the 31st, Mr. Stern will play Brahms' "Double Concerto for Violin and Cello" with Gregor Piatigorsky and Pierre Monteux conducting.

Mr. Monteux, returning to the Tanglewood prodium for his 4th consecutive summer, will also be the conductor for the concert tomorrow night, leading Baech's "Passacaglia and Fugene in C Minor" (in the orchestration by Respighi), Beethoven's Second Symphony and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration." Tomorrow night's concert will also include "The Black Maskers" Suite by Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University, who is teaching composition at this summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tanglewood Programs

(Continued from Page Twelve)

ropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center's students Christina Cardillo (North Adams, Mass.), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday evening, July 30 — Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: Overture to "Egmont;" Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") — Rudolf Serkin, soloist; Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). Sunday afternoon, July 31 — Pierre Monteux conducting an all-Brahms concert: Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin in D Major, Opus 77 — Isaac Stern, soloist; Symphony No. 1, in C minor.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 29 1955

Shed Concerts Start Second Week Tonight

Tonight the second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1955 Berkshire Festival will begin in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. at 8:30 p.m. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a Suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 165,872

JUL 28 1955

Plans for Opera Première

"The Rope," a one-act opera by Louis Mennini of the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, will be given its world première ~~by the Berkshire~~ Music Center opera department at ~~Tanglewood, on~~ Monday, Aug. 8. It will be performed again on Tuesday evening, Aug. 9.

The Mennini work was inspired by a Eugene O'Neill one-act play. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, reports that this is the first work to result from a new commissioning plan of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. "The Rope" was begun at Tanglewood, when the composer was in residence in the summer of 1953. It was intended especially for production at Tanglewood. The composer has worked in close collaboration with Mr. Goldovsky and other experts through all stages of composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral and choral scoring and scenic investiture.

As a curtain-raiser to "The Rope," the opera department will produce "Zaide" (K. 344) by Mozart, which the composer wrote at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. So far as is known, this will be the first American performance. This version of the opera, which Mozart left unfinished, has been prepared by Mr. Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1955

Luboshutzes, Goldovsky Appear at Stadium Concert

By Francis D. Perkins

Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky were the principals in the Mozart program heard by an audience of 8,000 Wednesday on the last evening but two of the season at the Lewisohn Stadium. As conductor, Mr. Goldovsky opened the concert with the overture to the "Marriage of Figaro," and dubled in conducting and piano roles in the F-major Concerto (K. 242), with the Luboshutzes as his fellow-soloists. Mr. Luboshutz took over the orchestral direction for the G major Concerto (K. 453), with Mr. Goldovsky as soloist, and the latter returned to the podium when his relatives played the two-piano Concerto in E flat (K. 463).

This was the first performance of a Mozart Piano Festival program which Mr. Goldovsky and the Luboshutzes will take on tour during the coming season as an observance of Mozart's approaching bi-centennial. The evening also marked the Stadium debut of Mr. Goldovsky, who is well-known here as a principal in the Metropolitan Opera's intermission broadcast features, and the local debut as a conductor of Mr. Luboshutz. As head of the New England Opera Company and operatic activities at Tanglewood, Mr. Goldovsky is an experienced conductor, and the performances under his direction were unified and balanced, both in relation to the pianos and the orchestra and, in the three-piano work, to the co-ordination of the piano parts.

Mr. Luboshutz had conducted only once before—in a Cleveland Pop concert last summer—but he had studied conducting with the late Serge Koussevitzky, and showed a flair for the baton last night in a well defined, dynamically sensitive orchestral interpretation of the G-major concerto. Here Mr. Goldovsky's playing was fluent and technically deft, but missed some of the imaginative content of the work, despite persuasive moments. The three soloists' playing in the F-major Concerto had polish and notable unity, although there were a few rather heavy measures, what with amplification. Flexibility and appropriate lightness marked the playing of Mr. Luboshutz and Mme. Nemenoff in the closing concerto, along with dynamic sensitiveness, and Mr. Goldovsky and the orchestra gave them responsive support.

Nyer IN THE COUNTRY July [illegible]

Berkshire Festival—Friday, July [illegible] 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony, with Leontyne Price, soprano, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Rudolf Serkin, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 31, at 2:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms program, with Isaac Stern, violin, and Gregor Piatigorsky, cello. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 3, at 8:30: The fifth in a series of six programs of Beethoven's chamber music, this one made up of sonatas played by Rudolf Serkin, piano. ¶ Friday, Aug. 5, at 8:30: Leonard Bernstein directing the Boston Symphony in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. With Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony in a Beethoven-Wagner program, with Margaret Harshaw, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass, and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. [illegible]: Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in another all-Beethoven program, with Eugene Istomin, piano. . . . ¶ Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8-9, at 8:30: Mozart's opera "Zaide," in an English version, and the first performances of "The Rope," an opera by Louis Mennini, based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play. Presented by students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center and produced by Boris Goldovsky. For information about opera tickets, which are very scarce and must be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 14.)

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

'Tanglewood on Parade' Will Take Place Thursday, Aug. 11

Arthur Fiedler to Direct Boston 'Pops' Orchestra and Leonard Bernstein to Lead Boston Symphony

Lenox, July 23—Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6.00 p. m. to 11.00 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Arthur Fiedler

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood On Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

Mr. Fiedler is now, until July 30, conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert August 14, returning immediately to Boston to conclude the Esplanade series August 15 to 20.

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8.15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront", which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955.) It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Leonard Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue". Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 22 1955

FIRST CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD BY BOSTON GROUP

The 1955 Berkshire festival moves across the spacious lawn at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight, from the intimate theatre-concert hall to the great music shed, when the first of this season's concerts by the full 104-piece Boston symphony orchestra will be given at 8:30. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct an all-Beethoven program consisting of the overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the "Seventh Symphony." This season, as last, there will be 12 concerts in the shed by the full Boston symphony orchestra, with the difference that all 12 are now concentrated in the final four weekends of the festival, Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Last season the 12 shed concerts attracted a total attendance of 129,925, for an average of 9,197 or one and one-half times the seating capacity (6,000) the overflow picnicking on the Tanglewood lawn under the stars or in Sunday sunshine. The advance sale for this season's shed concerts indicates that the all-time attendance mark set last season will be shattered this year.

Mr. Stern tonight will make his second of three appearances at this season's festival.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 25 1955

Monteux Directs Roger Sessions' Orchestral Suite

Music of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Strauss received exceptionally fine treatment at the conducting hands of Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Festival Concert at Tanglewood Saturday evening.

Mr. Monteux is a musician of the highest order, and his crisp and precise direction was wonderful to watch (and this reviewer does not make it a practice of watching conductors, most of whom are simply distracting) and, one imagines, a joy to follow. He treated all the music—the greatness of the Renaissance composer, the genius of the German, the freshness of the American and the lushness of the late Romantic, with loving and tender care.

The musical fare offered to the Saturday audience was varied enough to please any enthusiast.

The program opened with a magnificent reading of the Bach "Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor," orchestrated by Respighi. The power and the beauty of this work was almost overpowering although the interpretation might have been somewhat romantic for the purist. But for most, including this reviewer, it was the highspot of the evening.

The Beethoven second symphony was almost serene by contrast, although the musical masterpiece certainly did not suffer by juxtaposition. It was played with tonal beauty, with subtle shadings. The second movement is one of the loveliest ever written, with its unbroken flow of melody, and the third movement, the scherzo, was rippling and bubbling.

The Roger Sessions' "Orchestral Suite from 'The Black Maskers'" was certainly a fine example of craftsmanship, with the first and third movements especially effective. The work abounds in cacaphonies, in wild coloring, and in extensive use of woodwinds. Its primary effect depends upon instrumentation, however, and it is fortunate that as great a group as the Boston Symphony was performing the work. In the hands of a lesser organization and a lesser conductor, it might have been unsuccessful. But Mr. Monteux accorded the same tasteful and masterly treatment to this work as he did to the Bach and the Beethoven, and the results were pleasant and interesting.

The Strauss "Death and Transfiguration" tone poem is a moving work, and the performance was rich in color and lush in feeling the sound. Strauss attached deep philosophical concepts to the music, or rather attached the music to the concepts. In spite of agreement or disagreement with the tenets, the music remains appealing and the work dramatic and poetic. Certainly, Saturday, its performance proved a fitting climax to a musically sound and often exciting evening.

The Wednesday chamber music concert in the theatre-concert hall will feature the three Beethoven string quartets played by the New Music String Quartet.

—B.D.

IL CORRIERE DEL BERKSHIRE — 29 Luglio 1955

OUR ENGLISH SECTION

OUR POLICY

"The purpose of the Association shall be to help preserve the ideals and traditions of our country, the United States of America, to revere its laws and inspire others to respect and obey them, and in all ways to aid in making this country greater and better"

NEW ENGLAND MEMBER

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER'S OPERA DEPARTMENT TO PRESENT WORLD PREMIERE OF "THE ROPE", ONE-ACT OPERA BY LOUIS MENNINI; AND FIRST U.S. PRODUCTION OF MOZART OPERA "ZAIDE" AT TANGLEWOOD, MONDAY, AUG. 8 AND TUESDAY, AUG. 9

first two measures of music with which the opera begins. All the important sections are based on these two actions. My one basic problem in setting the play was, whether to make the music as strong (dissonant) as the drama insofar as character portrayal, or whether to add warmth to the starkness and gloominess of the play. After much reading of O'Neill, I found a remark of his which made me decide to pursue the latter course. He said, 'even in ugliness there is beauty'."

"The Rope" has five characters, Abraham Bentley; Annie, his daughter; Pat Sweeney, her husband; Mary, their child; and Luke Bentley, Abraham's son by a second marriage. It is in one act and one scene, the setting an old barn situated on top of a high headland of the seacoast.

The Mozart opera, "Zaide", which will precede "The [269]

OUR ENGLISH SECTION

NEW ENGLAND MEMBER FOREIGN LANGUAGE NEWSPAPERS ASSOC.

OUR POLICY

"The purpose of the Association shall be to help preserve the ideals and traditions of our country, the United States of America, to revere its laws and inspire others to respect and obey them, and in all ways to aid in making this country greater and better"

BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER'S OPERA DEPARTMENT TO PRESENT WORLD PREMIERE OF "THE ROPE", ONE-ACT OPERA BY LOUIS MENNINI; AND FIRST U.S. PRODUCTION OF MOZART OPERA "ZAIDE" AT TANGLEWOOD, MONDAY, AUG. 8 AND TUESDAY, AUG. 9

"The Rope", an opera in one act by Louis Mennini, commissioned for production by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will have its world premiere by students of Boris Goldovsky's opera department in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 8 and 9. On the same program will be "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart; so far as can be learned, the Tanglewood performances will be the first in the U.S. Two different casts of students of the opera department will sing.

The performances are open to those who support the summer music school by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats reserved, and reservations may be made through the Friends' office, Tanglewood, telephone Lenox 600.

"The Rope" was composed by Louis Mennini, of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N.Y., who spent the summer of 1953 at Tanglewood on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and prepared his work from the beginning in consultation with Mr. Goldovsky and his staff. The opera is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name, which was originally performed by The Provincetown Players, Provincetown, Mass., April 26, 1917.

"The composer has worked in close consultation with our staff at Tanglewood", says Mr. Goldovsky, "through all stages of operatic composition, beginning with the choice of text and initial arrangement of the libretto and continuing through to the final matters of orchestral scoring, scenic and costume investiture. Mr. Mennini has supervised casting and attended vocal and instrumental rehearsals. By providing an opportunity for a young composer to live with the musical theatre, the Koussevitzky commission is enabling him to steep himself in the problems peculiar to it."

Louis Mennini, of 59 Meadowbrook Road, Rochester, is 34, was born in Erie, Pa., in 1920, attended String Vincent High School there, studied music at Oberlin College, Ohio. After three years' service in the U.S. Army Air Force in England, he enrolled in 1945 in the Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, and studied composition under Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 as both a Bachelor and a Master in Music. Following a season of teaching at the University of Texas, Austin, he returned to Rochester, and has been on the Eastman faculty since 1949. He won the National Institute of Arts and Letters Award in 1949.

Among his compositions are the one-act opera, "The Well", performed in 1950 at the Eastman School of Music and also at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas, and in 1955 at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg ,Virginia; "Arioso for Strings", which has been recorded; "Overture Breve", commissioned by the Springfield, Ohio, Symphony Orchestra; "Andante and Allegro for Orchestra"; "Cantilena for Orchestra"; "Sonatina for Cello and Piano", commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation; and for the 100th anniversary of Christ Episcopal Church, Rochester, "The Proper of the Mass".

Of "The Rope", Mr. Mennini says: "Eugene O'Neill knew of my project before his death in 1953. I never got to meet him, but I have a contract signed by the Pulitzer Prize playwright to adapt his play. I formed the idea of setting 'The Rope' to music after reading it: I have never seen it on the stage. I have used the O'Neill play as is, except for certain changes of words, sections of conversations which seemed unnecessary to the continuity of the drama, a few additions of my own seemed advisable for musical extension, such as the duet of Annie and Pat and also a rearrangement of words for Luke's aria.

"The whole opera is a development and extension of the first two measures of music with which the opera begins. All the important sections are based on these two actions. My one basic problem in setting the play was, whether to make the music as strong (dissonant) as the drama insofar as character portrayal, or whether to add warmth to the starkness and gloominess of the play. After much reading of O'Neill, I found a remark of his which made me decide to pursue the latter course. He said, 'even in ugliness there is beauty'."

"The Rope" has five characters, Abraham Bentley; Annie, his daughter; Pat Sweeney, her husband; Mary, their child; and Luke Bentley, Abraham's son by a second marriage. It is in one act and one scene, the setting an old barn situated on top of a high headland of the seacoast.

The Mozart opera, "Zaide", which will precede "The Rope", was written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version, in English, has been prepared by Sarah Caldwell, who will stage the work.

Boris Goldovsky will stage "The Rope". Scenery and lighting for both operas is by David Hays, costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Miss Aviva Einhorn, Israeli student studying in Paris, will conduct an orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center's Department I (Orchestra) students for "Zaide", and Henry Janiec is in the pit for the performances of "The Rope".

DAVID LLOYD

DAVID LLOYD, tenor, will be a 1955 Berkshire Festival soloist in three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

On Fri. eve., Aug. 5, in the Music Shed, Mr. Lloyd will sing in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis", Leonard Bernstein conducting a memorial for Serge Koussevitzky, with Adele Addison, Eunice Alberts, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students.

On Sat. eve., Aug. 6, in the Music Shed, Mr. Lloyd is a soloist with Margaret Harshaw, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus, in Beethoven's "Fidelio", Act II, Charles Munch conducting.

At the Festival's concluding concert, Sun. aft., Aug. 14, Mr. Lloyd joins Adele Addison, Catherine Akos and Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, under Mr. Munch's direction.

Thursday AUG. 11 • Events from 6 to 11 PM
RAIN OR SHINE
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from "On the Waterfront"....................Bernstein
(FIRST PERFORMANCE)
"A Lincoln Portrait"..............................Copland
(Speaker to be announced)

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a typical Pops program—
Spanish Caprice ....Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra..........Gershwin
Soloist—LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball"..........Strauss-Dorati
(Encores may be expected!)

LAWN PARTY ☆ PICNIC SUPPER
WALTZING ON THE LAWN ☆ DOOR PRIZES
TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Sections $2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—
SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ☆ OPERA SCENES
THE CHORUS ☆ CHAMBER MUSIC
REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS
Fri. and Sat. Eves., Sun. Afts., Aug. 5, 6, 7; Aug. 12, 13, 14
(CHAMBER CONCERT—WED. EVE. AUG. 10)
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve., Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Box Seats). Admission $2.00.
Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

ADELE ADDISON

ADELE ADDISON, soprano, will be a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at three of its Berkshire Festival concerts in the summer of 1955 at Tanglewood:

On Sun. aft., July 10, in Bach's Mass in B minor in the Theatre-Concert Hall;

On Fri. eve., Aug. 5, in Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" in the Music Shed;

On Sun. aft., Aug. 14, in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, in the Music Shed.

MARGARET HARSHAW

MARGARET HARSHAW, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will make her Tanglewood debut at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sat. eve., Aug. 6 (Music Shed, 8:30 p.m.), singing the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung"; and Act II of Beethoven's "Fidelio", with David Lloyd, Mac Morgan and the Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

LUCIANO DELLA MARRA

HANDSOME Luciano Della Marra plays Radames opposite Sophia Loren, Italy's most seductive screen siren, in "AIDA", the first great opera film in color which opens Wed., Aug. 24 at the Berkshire Museum. The spectacular motion picture of Verdi's most popular opera is presented by S. Hurok in conjunction with I.F.E. Releasing Corp.

of the two-week American premiere engagement of the Royal Danish Ballet touring unit at his Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival on the final day of the first series of performances by the seven soloists and three most promising members of the Danish corps de ballet.

F[illegible] audiences at Jacob's Pillow, this first visit of the Da[illegible] provided an opportunity to view Classical ballet in a form completely uncorrupted by modern interpolations. Mona Vangsaae, Inge Sand, Kirsten Ralov, Viveka Segerskog, Kirsten Petersen, Mette Mollerup, Fredbjorn Bjornsson, Frank Schaufass, Stanley Williams, and Flemming Flindt have danced in the tradition established 174 years ago at the Royal Theatre in Copenhagen. The greater part of their first two programs was devoted to the works of the genius of the Royal Danish Ballet, August Bournonville, a contemporary and good friend of Hans Christian Anderson, whose influence on the choreographer was visible in the naive charm of the Pas de Deux from both “Flower Festival in Genzano” and “The Kermesse in Brugos.” Anderson's influence was more obvious in Emilie Walbom's “Dream Pictures,” in which the storyteller was the main character.

The Danish dancers have displayed a superbly-schooled technique which is refreshing in its departure from one of the most restrained balletic effects, the careful front arm placement in the port de bras, and its inclusion of some movements, such as the seemingly effortless spin of the lower right leg during a leap and the joyous arm extension in the port de bras, which characterize the whole spirited style of these performers.

In the program of the week of July 13th, the Danes showed that although their true element lies in the evocation of joy, and unbounded pleasure in artistic activity, they can perform in the grandest Fokine tradition, with lyrical yet coolly withdrawn dancing in “Les Sylphides” divertissements.

A Bournonville Cavalcade of divertissements from his ballets emphasizing foreign characteristics in dance and temperament was delightfully “fresh” in its nineteenth-century choreography, especially in the Spanish “Zapateado,” featuring impeccable Inge Sand and exhilarating Fredbjorn Bjornsson; and in “Les Chinoises” Pas de Trois, with Mette Mollerup, Kirsten Petersen, and Stanley Williams as shyly playful Orientals. “The Tyrols” Pas de Deux, showed Mona Vangsaae as a Swiss miss and Flemming Flindt as her youthful admirer. Mr. Flindt's batterie seemed to be quite as dazzling (especially in its precise entrechats) if not as polished as that of Mr. Bjornsson. In addition to Mr. Flindt, Kirsten Petersen and Mette Mollerup, the two other “babies” of the Royal Danish Ballet, showed a joy and enthusiasm in their skilled dancing which equalled that of the seven soloists.

Also on the program were the Pas de Deux from “The Ker-England Brothers

sabato e'

l'ultimo giorno della

vendita di biancheria durante luglio!

provvedetevi ora

di quanto vi occorre per la camera da letto, per la sala da pranzo, per la cucina e per la stanza da bagno

La Vendita di Biancheria durante Luglio termina Sabato... Affrettavi se volete fare degli ottimi acquisti..... Comprate ora articoli di biancheria in vendita a prezzi ridotti.

tale and danced by Mr. Williams and Miss Sand; and a zestful presentation of the Pas de Sept with Italian Soli, which, without colorful costumes and set, might have served as little more than a brilliant but bare showpiece for the talents of the individual dancers.

Although the Danes have finished their first enthusiastically-received Jacob's Pillow engagement, they will return once more to the Berkshires, with Alicia Alonso and Erik Bruhn from July 26th to 28th, after having danced at the Arundel Opera Theatre in Kennebunkport, Maine and Lewisohn Stadium in New York City.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS REVISED FOR JULY 31, ANGUST 10, AUGUST 12 — GREGOR PIATIGORSKY UNABLE TO FILL DATES WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA AT TANGLEWOOD

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Sunday, July 31, Wednesday, August 10 and Friday, August 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced Wednesday, July 27, because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

The noted musician regretfully wired Mr. Munch, Tuesday that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's (July 31) Berkshire Festival concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival program, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, August 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloch's “Schelomo” for Cello and Orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Mr. Munch will substitute the “Symphonie Fantastique” of Hector Berlioz, which was an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954 which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, conclude with Debussy's “La Mer” and Ravel's “Daphnis and Chloe” Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven Cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, August 10, has substituted the following program: Beethoven Chamber Music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The complete revised programs are as follows:

Sun., July 31 — 2:30 p.m. —Music Shed —
Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Brahms: Academic Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77
Soloist: Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Conductor: Pierre Monteux

Wed., August 10 — 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall —
Chamber Music:

Program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs by 6 principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn) — with David Lloyd, tenor; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for Clarinet, Cello and Piano
Gino Cioffi — Samuel Mayes — Ralph Berkowitz
“An die Ferne Geliebte”—Six songs for Tenor and Piano
David Lloyd — Ralph Berkowitz
Sonata in A, Opus 69, for Cello and Piano
Samuel Mayes — Ralph Berkowitz
Trio in G, for Flute, Bassoon and Piano
Doriot Anthony Dwyer — Sherman Walt — Ralph Berkowitz
Quintet in E Flat for Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon, Horn and Piano
Ralph Gomber — Gino Cioffi — Sherman Walt — James Stagliano — Ralph Berkowitz

Fri., August 12 — 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed —
Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Berlioz: “Symphonie Fantastique”
Debussy: “La Mer”
Ravel: “Daphnis and Chloe”, Suite No. 2
Conductor: Charles Munch

è così, chiedete apposito inventario a
WALTER S. MARSDEN
74 NORTH STREET
Nessun obbligo da parte vostra

CALORIFERI

MAY ENGINEERING CO.
12 Adam Street, Pittsfield, Mass.
Telefono 5059
Specialità in Impianti di Caloriferi
Apparecchi Automatici a Petrolio o a Carbone, Caldaie, Vendita e Riparazioni

LATTERIE

Per essere sicuri, date ai vostri piccoli il miglior nutrimento.
CLEMENT'S DAIRY
LATTE E PANNA GRADE "A" (Pasteurized)
Latte al Cioccolatto (Dairy Rich)
Burro, Formaggio e altri Latticini
Bevande a base di Frutta,
Arancie, Uva, ecc.
588 Tyler St. Pittsfield, Mass.
Telefono 2-2430

LAVORI IN FERRO

FARRELL & GREGORY
SPECIALISTI IN SALDATURE ELETTRICHE e ad ACETILENE
Travi d'acciaio da costruzione
814 East Street, Pittsfield, Mass.
Telefono 6392

BENCIVENGA
FUNERAL HOME
5 Elm St. (cantone di East)
Pittsfield, Mass.
TELEFONO - - 2-1733

GIOIELLERIA
A CREDITO
Comprate Quello che v'occorr dalla
Denno's
JEWELERS
33 Fenn St. Pittsfield

ANTIACIDO ★ RINFRESCANTE ★ DISSETANTE
BRIOSCHI
Speciale: 59c
Samale Pharmacy
37 Fenn Street

SPITALERI BROS. & CO.
Accountants and Auditors
TAX AND MANAGEMENT CONSULTANTS
Anthony E. Spitaleri, C.P.A., B.C.S.
(Mass.) (N. Y.)
100 North St. — Tel. 2-0826
Pittsfield, Mass.

FRED H. PURCHES
Insurance Agency
ASSICURAZIONI E VENDITA DI PROPRIETA'
73 North Street Tel. 2-4882
Central Block, Over Newberry Store

Leggete e Diffondete
“Il Corriere del Berkshire”

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1955

Luboshutzes, Goldovsky Appear at Stadium Concert

By Francis D. Perkins

Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff, duo-pianists, and their nephew, Boris Goldovsky were the principals in the Mozart program heard by an audience [illegible] Wednesday on the last [illegible] certo (K. 453), with Mr. Goldovsky as soloist, and the latter returned to the podium when his relatives played the two-piano Concerto in E flat (K. 453).

This was the first performance of a Mozart Piano Festival program which Mr. Goldovsky and [illegible] the New England Opera Company and operatic activities at Tanglewood, Mr. Goldovsky is an experienced conductor, and the performances under his direction were unified and balanced, both in relation to the pianos and the orchestra and, in the three-piano work, to the co-ordination of the piano parts.

Mr. Luboshutz had conducted only once before—in a Cleveland Pop concert last summer—but [illegible] ments. The three soloists' playing in the F-major Concerto had polish and notable unity, although there were a few rather heavy measures, what with amplification. Flexibility and appropriate lightness marked the playing of Mr. Luboshutz and Mme. Nemenoff in the closing concerto, along with dynamic sensitiveness, and Mr. Goldovsky and the orchestra gave them [illegible] the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the television, probably more people have heard the “Pops” and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

---

Mr. Fiedler is now, until July 30, conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Berkshires for “Tanglewood on Parade,” then flies to Miami for a second concert August 14, returning immediately to Boston to con- [illegible] cert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston “Pops” in George Gershwin's “Rhapsody in Blue”. Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the “Caprice Espagnole” of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet “Graduation Ball” as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular “Pops” vein will follow.

Seats for “Tanglewood On Parade” are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600.

---

thoven string quartets played by the New Music String Quartet.
—B.D.

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 9 1955

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 21 1955

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed, on July 29 and 30, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday July 31 for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Leontyne Price has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first apearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

MUSIC SHED at Tanglewood, open on three sides, seats 6000. Many, however, prefer to sit outside on the spacious lawns

THE BERKSHIRES HAVE EVERYTHING

ROLLING MASSACHUSETTS HILLS OFFER VARIED DIVERSIONS — SPORTS, SCENERY, OR CULTURE

by Emory Lewis

THE history of those knowledgeable knolls, the rolling Berkshires in Western Massachusetts, can be divided roughly into three parts. First came a genteel literary invasion in the last century, sparked by Nathaniel Hawthorne, who wrote "The House of Seven Gables" at Tanglewood. In the early 1900s, the gold-plated fashionables staked claims, and a magnificent chain of castles and chateaux (now inns, schools, and monasteries) dotted the hills. The Berkshires became a way station on the Bar Harbor-Aiken-White Sulphur Springs axis. The third and current phase is music. Tanglewood now ranks with Salzburg as a world music festival, attracts visitors from all over America and Europe.

Literature, wealth, and now music—these are all variables in local history. The constant is, of course, the spectacular beauty of this mountain area. This is the heart of the matter. The gently sloping hills, the rivers, brooks, waterfalls, lakes, the salubrious air at 1500 feet above sea level, the covered bridges, the classic New England towns, the elm-shaded lanes—these constitute the Berkshires' basic allure.

Within recent years, the Berkshires (less than three hours from New York via the Taconic State Parkway) have become a favorite vacation area for New Yorkers. The educated hills are an ideal playground, offering sports, scenery, and culture, too. From Ashley Falls to Williamstown, the city vacationist can swim and fish, play golf and tennis. And the mountains are alive with music, art, dance, and theatre. The New Yorker will be entertained this summer by such diverse figures as Gregor Piatigorsky, Count Basie, Paul Hartman, leading dancers from the Royal Danish Ballet.

SAILING on lovely Pontoosuc Lake in Pittsfield is popular with Berkshire vacationists. The local boating club is open to everyone who knows how to tack

Number-one draw is, of course, the Music Festival at Tanglewood. Through August 14th, the Boston Symphony offers a rich bill of music fare, including a concert performance of the Act III of "Fidelio." Soloists include Isaac Stern, Leontyne Price, Margaret Harshaw, Rudolf Serkin, Eugene Istomin, and the aforementioned Piatigorsky.

The Tanglewood story is by now a familiar one. Not so well-known are some of the Berkshires' other musical events. Thirty miles from Tanglewood, near Falls Village, Conn., is Music Mountain, on a grassy hilltop surrounded by 115 acres of forest. It has the intimate character of the early days of Tanglewood. Here the Berkshire Quartet offers chamber music of a high order, in a long, clapboard shed whose soft wood panelling has the resonance of a fine stringed instrument. At South Mountain, near Pittsfield, there are free Saturday afternoon concerts, July 30th through August 27th. Tickets can be procured upon application. Violinist Alexander Schneider and the Budapest String Quartet are on the agenda here.

Within walking distance of Tanglewood, the concerti become a bit more gutty. Two bright New Yorkers, Stephanie and Philip Lieber, have converted a great wagonbarn into a permanent music hall for jazz. Once the estate of the Countess de Heredia, it is a mile from Tanglewood. The mansion now houses Tanglewood students. But the barns, carriage house, and ice house constitute the Liebers' country inn and new jazz center. The rambling buildings are a copy of a French Provincial farm village.

Thelonius Monk, Dizzy Gillespie, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Count Basie and his band, Richard Dyer-Bennet and Carlos Montoya are among those scheduled to appear in the wagonbarn. Presiding officer at the weekly sessions will be Professor Marshall Sterns, who has taught pioneering jazz classes at New York University and the New School.

At the Stockbridge Town Hall, the Pro Musica Antiqua will present a series of concerts, August 13th to September 4th, of medieval, Renaissance and Danish Ballet is topped in years only by Paris' Opera Ballet. Other performers during the summer season include Danilova, Slavenska, Alonso, Ruth St. Denis (the mother, with Isadora Duncan, of modern dance), and Brigit Akesson, top modern dancer from Sweden. The splendidly-equipped theatre, designed by architect Josef Franz, is in character with the barns and sheds on this 18th-century farm, nine miles east of Lee.

For drama, there are several flourishing summer theatres. Two, at Litchfield and Sharon, are just across the border in Connecticut. The white-frame Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge is one of the most handsome in the East. New this summer is the Williamstown Theatre, operating from the excellent auditorium at Williams College.

At Pittsfield, don't overlook The Little Cinema operated by the Berkshire Museum. The Little Cinema exhibits the ists flock here. But I bought a [illegible] some earthenware ginger-beer bottle, circa 1880, for a quarter.

For boating buffs, the Sailing Club on Pontoosuc Lake in Pittsfield is open to all. There are plenty of spots for fishing, and you can obtain a license at any town clerk's office. At the Berkshire Trout Farm on Route 41 near Sheffield, there is a 14-acre lake and a half mile of stream, stocked with thousands of brook, brown and rainbow trout. There is no season, and no license is necessary. Cost: $4.50 per day. Five trout may be taken, not to exceed five pounds. Tackle and boats are available. For a rugged vacation, Pioneer Trails (P. O. Box 17, in East Otis) offers a package: six days on horseback, tent living, al fresco meals. Most golf clubs (18 in the Berkshires) are open to the public on the payment of greens fees. There are weekly polo matches at the Pittsfield Riding and with special prices for a longer stay. The Old Stage Grill is the place for non-resident diners; American cuisine with continental overtones makes up the menu. Luncheon noon to 2:30 at moderate prices, dinners from 6 to 9, $2.50 to $4.50. On the same order is Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, with its fine antiques and Lion's Den for cocktails and snacks. Modified American rates—$13 to $18 per day. Transient diners will be accommodated when space permits.

Near Pittsfield is the Crane Inn in Dalton, a handsomely decorated hotel where vacationer and hungry traveler will be hospitably received. Bountiful food is served at luncheon, noon to 2, $1.50 to $1.95, while dinners are $2.95 to $5, served 5:30 to 9 and from noon on Sunday. European plan rates are $5 to $14 per day. Even farther north at Williamstown, you should make the

(Continued on page 42)

Nort[illegible] beyond Pittsfield, [illegible] The Springs, where the Grosso family, headed by "Mama" Henrietta, has served top flight continental cuisine for 24 years. One menu from 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. with complete dinners $2.75 to $4.75. Closed Monday.

There's also the quaint Yellow Aster in Lenox, the inexpensive Morgan House in Lee, and should you be in the Pioneer Valley section, don't miss the Yankee Pedlar in Holyoke.

New York
Massachusetts
Connecticut
R.I.
Woodstock
Stockbridge
Berkshire Playhouse
Sharon
Canton
Showshop
Hyde Park
Ellenville
Sacandaga Park
Saratoga
Spa Summer Theatre
Williamstown
Fitchburg
Lake Whalom Playhouse
Worcester
Drama Festival
Somerset
Cohasset
South Shore Music Circus
Boston
Summer Theatre
Brattleboro
Keene
Peterborough
Weston
Putney
Hopkinton
Meadowbrook
Green Mountain Playhouse

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-4290

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 21 1955

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed, on July 29 and 30, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday July 31 for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Leontyne Price has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

Baroque music. Those who dig sounds, pre-Brahms and pre-Basie, will be interested in the sessions devoted to the much-too-neglected 16th-century English composer, William Byrd. The Berkshire Folk Music Festival and Workshop is now underway at Sedgwick Hall in Lenox through August 13th. Along with the weekly hollers and hoedowns, there are courses in the guitar, folk and classical, and the recorder.

Dance vies with music in the Berkshires. Jacob's Pillow is to American dance what Tanglewood is to music. The most important of our summer dance institutions, the Pillow is nearing its quarter-century mark. Prize item this summer will be the American debut of ten leading members of the Royal Danish Ballet. The 200-year-old Royal Danish Ballet is topped in years only by Paris' Opera Ballet. Other performers during the summer season include Danilova, Slavenska, Alonso, Ruth St. Denis (the mother, with Isadora Duncan, of modern dance), and Brigit Akesson, top modern dancer from Sweden. The splendidly-equipped theatre, designed by architect Josef Franz, is in character with the barns and sheds on this 18th-century farm, nine miles east of Lee.

For drama, there are several flourishing summer theatres. Two, at Litchfield and Sharon, are just across the border in Connecticut. The white-frame Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge is one of the most handsome in the East. New this summer is the Williamstown Theatre, operating from the excellent auditorium at Williams College.

At Pittsfield, don't overlook The Little Cinema operated by the Berkshire Museum. The Little Cinema exhibits the best foreign and American films, new and old. There will be an outdoor sculpture show, August 1-10, in the garden of the Lenox Library. Don't bother to bring along any books on your vacation. The Lenox Library, a beautifully proportioned, Federal structure, is one of the best small town libraries I know. Incidentally, you can borrow record albums as well as books.

At Old Chatham, New York, just a short drive from the Berkshires proper, is the Shaker Museum. It's worth the drive. You will discover that the Shakers were making modern furniture long before Paul Widdicomb or Charles Eames. A few of the Shaker items are for sale. Of course, the entire Berkshire area is studded with antique shops. Prices are generally high, now that tourists flock here. But I bought a handsome earthenware ginger-beer bottle, circa 1880, for a quarter.

GOLF is a favorite and ubiquitous sport in the Berkshire hills. Most of the eighteen local golf clubs, with lakeside settings, charge small greens fees

For boating buffs, the Sailing Club on Pontoosuc Lake in Pittsfield is open to all. There are plenty of spots for fishing, and you can obtain a license at any town clerk's office. At the Berkshire Trout Farm on Route 41 near Sheffield, there is a 14-acre lake and a half mile of stream, stocked with thousands of brook, brown and rainbow trout. There is no season, and no license is necessary. Cost: $4.50 per day. Five trout may be taken, not to exceed five pounds. Tackle and boats are available. For a rugged vacation, Pioneer Trails (P. O. Box 17, in East Otis) offers a package: six days on horseback, tent living, al fresco meals. Most golf clubs (18 in the Berkshires) are open to the public on the payment of greens fees. There are weekly polo matches at the Pittsfield Riding and Polo Association grounds.

Best route to the Berkshires is the Taconic State Parkway, the Millbrook turnoff, then Route 44 to Canaan, Connecticut and Route 7 to the Berkshires. Incidentally, July 9th is open house day in Litchfield, Connecticut, on the Berkshire route. You might stop here and, for a small fee (benefit of Junior Republic, the Connecticut Boys' Town), visit the 18th-century houses.

If you are planning a Berkshire vacaiton, write me at CUE. You will receive the helpful vacation literature issued by the Berkshire Hills Conference.

* * *

(Vadna Dibble's roundup of hotels and dining in the Berkshires area follows).

For active folk there's Eastover in Lenox, a magnificent mansion amid thousands of acres of rolling country. Everything in the line of sports is at your disposal, with a fine outdoor pool. American plan only during the busy season, ranging from $64.75 per person a week to $92.75. Jug End Barn at South Egremont is another spot for the young and energetic with swimming pool, tennis and such. Rates $52.50 per person weekly for bunk rooms, up to $80,50. Transients are welcome for meals. Near Jacob's Pillow in South Lee the young, frenetic set likes Oak 'n Spruce. American plan rates start at $56 with a top of $77. The dining room is available for transients, also the snug cocktail lounge.

For the less strenuous-minded, we suggest the fine old Curtis Hotel, now in its 127th year. Comfortable, tasteful rooms with New England furnishings are yours on American plan during the Festival, with European rates for the spring and fall. Daily price is $14 to $42, with special prices for a longer stay. The Old Stage Grill is the place for non-resident diners; American cuisine with continental overtones makes up the menu. Luncheon noon to 2:30 at moderate prices, dinners from 6 to 9, $2.50 to $4.50. On the same order is Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, with its fine antiques and Lion's Den for cocktails and snacks. Modified American rates—$13 to $18 per day. Transient diners will be accommodated when space permits.

Near Pittsfield is the Crane Inn in Dalton, a handsomely decorated hotel where vacationer and hungry traveler will be hospitably received. Bountiful food is served at luncheon, noon to 2, $1.50 to $1.95, while dinners are $2.95 to $5, served 5:30 to 9 and from noon on Sunday. European plan rates are $5 to $14 per day. Even farther north at Williamstown, you should make the

(Continued on page 42)

Nor[illegible] beyond Pittsfie[illegible] where the Grosso[illegible] by "Mama" He[illegible] netta, [illegible] served top flight continental cuisine [illegible] 24 years. One menu from 11:30 [illegible] to 11 p.m. with complete dinners [illegible] to $4.75. Closed [illegible] Monday.

There's also the quaint Yellow Aster in Lenox [illegible] inexpensive [illegible] House in Lee [illegible] should you [illegible]

CUE
NEW YORK CITY

JUL 9 1955

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,758

JUL 2 1 1955

Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the Music Shed, on July 29 and 30, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday July 31 for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," Leontyne Price has the principal solo role. Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first apeasance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p. m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

How Not To Run A Summer Theatre

IT'S A CINCH TO OPEN A BARN THEATRE; THE REAL TRICK IS TO KEEP IT OPEN

Select a community in a sparsely-populated area.

If possible pick a locale that is sparsely-populated and already has a summer theatre.

Your first show should be an English drama with an all-American cast. Better still, hire one British actor.

A worthwhile notion is to produce nothing but musicals—untried musicals.

Always make a pre-curtain speech on opening night and point out that you tried to get Helen Hayes for that show. Add apologetically "I know you'll like the young lady we hired when it became obvious that Miss Hayes couldn't be with us. I hope so, anyway."

Never check with the fire or police chiefs about anything.

Don't bother to invite the mayor, the board of selectmen, or other local wheels to your first show.

Small posters are best.

If you insist on having a press agent, hire that tall, thin fellow who is majoring in English Lit at State U.

A fine promotion stunt is to stencil directions like "52 steps to the Cobweb Theatre" on sidewalks, but don't stoop to asking permission of the shopkeepers.

House your troupe at least five miles from the theatre, and let the actors walk to work. It's good for them.

Hire as director an ex-member of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Old movie stars ask high salaries, but they're worth it.

Encourage feuds among the cast—keeps them on their toes.

Star that young socialite who aspires to be an actress.

A large parking lot is unnecessary. Customers love to walk a half-mile to and from their cars, especially on narrow country roads.

If you have a parking lot, don't hire an attendant. Let the ment of children destined for Broadway, and they're all equally talented.

If you can't squeeze in a production with children in the cast, try "Bell, Book and Candle" or some other play in which an animal is essential to the plot. It's a cinch to find a stagewise Siamese cat.

Order elaborate sets and ignore your scenic designer when he screams that they'll still be wet on opening night. Who cares if the ingenue ends up with an imprint of the wallpaper design on the posterior of her white dress?

Don't have your telephone number on your posters—people will just bother you all day long with questions about prices, reserved seats and curtain-time.

Charge at least thirty-five cents for soft drinks. Remember you have a captive audience.

Accept as gospel all actresses' statements regarding their measurements. So what if only half the costumes fit?

If the actors complain about anything, pay it no mind. Actors are chronic bellyachers.

It's a very good idea to have your leading man's wife and ex-wife in your cast.

So your leading lady is five inches taller than your leading man. Who cares?

Borrow expensive furniture for props from influential localites, and don't give those scratches on that new piano a second thought.

Use apprentices as ticket sellers—they love to gossip about members of the troupe with the customers.

If the local press hasn't arrived a half-hour before curtain, sell their seats.

Don't worry about adverse word-of-mouth reports about

(Continued from page 17)

Williams Inn your headquarters. Excellent accommodations and fine food. Berkshire Inn in Great Barrington is another old-timer, and diners will get good meals in the Colonial Grille at any hour with prices starting at $2.50.

If you are interested in music and the arts, Music Inn at Lenox is a place to visit. It is reminiscent of a French Provincial farm, and informality is the ticket here. American plan only, with rates $63 for dormitory, up to $98. Somewhat lower rates are in order during spring and fall.

Right by Tanglewood is Avaloch Inn with two main [illegible] American plan guests. Prices range from $67.50 [illegible], with an average weekly stay about [illegible]. Transient diners will like the tavern back on the hillside where they may have a fine steak dinner [illegible]. Luncheon a la carte noon to [illegible]

A bit more [illegible] Hills in Lenox, a grand old estate where the young married set likes to gather. Weekly entertainment [illegible] so singers, dancers, poetry [illegible] art classes. Weekly American plan [illegible] are $65 to $100.

In the strict sense [illegible] restaurants are a scarce [illegible] do recommend the following [illegible] ily. Fairfield Inn at Great Barrington [illegible] a truly lovely place, with excellent cosmopolitan food. No luncheon is served but dinner is 6 to 8, Sunday [illegible] prices are fine, too, [illegible] dinners about [illegible]

In Monterey, try [illegible] French restaurant with [illegible] limited menu. Do make [illegible] during Festival weeks! Luncheon [illegible] carte 11:30 to [illegible] complete dinners [illegible] 9 are $2 to $4.50. Sunday all day. [illegible] is the word for [illegible] magnificent old [illegible] gardens. Food of high calibre [illegible] in the formal or terrace dining [illegible] Luncheon 1 to 2:30. Dinner [illegible] 9 $3.50 to $7. Dancing [illegible] race and in the [illegible]

Also in Lenox, do not [illegible] Karl's. Fine continental cuisine [illegible] cellent [illegible] luncheon served noon to 2, dinner [illegible] Sunday, noon to [illegible] Dinners [illegible]

Northward at New Ashford, beyond Pittsfield, is The Springs, where the Grosso family, headed by "Mama" Henrietta, has served top flight continental cuisine for 24 years. One menu from 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. with complete dinners $2.75 to $4.75. Closed Monday.

There's also the quaint Yellow Aster in Lenox, the inexpensive Morgan House in Lee, and should you be in the Pioneer Valley section, don't miss the Yankee Pedlar in Holyoke.

Where Play Means Work

7/28 Schenectady gazette

Tanglewood's Training Thorough

By DOROTHY E. RITZ

With an enrollment of 405 music students the Berkshire Music Center is in the midst of its 13th annual six-week session at the Tanglewood estate in the Berkshires near Lenox, Mass.

* * *

LAST WEEK we decided to visit the school for ourselves to hear and see. We picked Wednesday as a typical day and arrived in time for the 9:30 a.m. class in the Shed. Members of the Department I orchestra were assembling as were members of the conducting class.

Leonard Bernstein was in charge and student conductors waited their turns in front of the huge stage. The student orchestra assembled early to warm up their fingers and instruments in morning sunshine, which felt fine in the cool mountain air. Sweaters were in evidence in the Shed which was much cooler than outside.

For three hours, with a 15 minute break at 11 a.m., the orchestra practiced. Four conductors, three from Bernstein's conducting class, led the group in a varied program including Berlioz, the Dvorak Symphony number 2 in D minor (first movement), Schoenberg's "Survivor from Warsaw" with both orchestra and chorus and the Prokofieff violin concerto number 2 with Paul Gurevich as the solo violinist.

* * *

WE WERE PARTICULARLY interested in hearing the Prokofieff conducted by Schenectady's Kenneth Schermerhorn, who has been awarded the Koussevitzky conducting scholarship at the school.

Other student conductors participating in the morning program were Henry Janicek and Arthur Winograd. The conducting class, which we were told numbers 15 this year, includes three women.

The orchestra, made up of the cream of student musicians selected by a vigorous screening process, includes Bruce Paine of Canajoharie, trombonist.

Most thorough training is offered and no detail is small enough to escape Bernstein's quick ear. Time and again the orchestra was stopped to rework, rework and rework tricky passages in the Dvorak. Although Bernstein conducted for an hour the rehearsal was so intense that the orchestra had only half played through the first movement when intermission arrived.

* * *

WHEN THE STUDENTS conducted the orchestra Bernstein, from the vantage point of a leader's chair, offered advice when necessary.

Winograd had the worst of the morning assignments. The orchestral music of Schoenberg is enough to cope with but in addition there was the men's chorus and a narrator. A 12-tone scale, Bernstein overseeing from his vantage point and Hugh Ross, who had prepared the chorus, inserting his tempos and ideas — Winograd had his troubles. He came through nobly however. The number, which we had never heard before, is stark writing.

AN EXCELLENT CAFETERIA is available for students, faculty and guests. During the lunch period we were introduced to several of the faculty including Roger Sessions, professor of music at Princeton University and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin. Sessions and Blacher are sharing the post of guest composers at the Center this summer.

Center students gathered in groups on the Tanglewood lawns for informal discussion of music and sharing of experiences. Bits of vocal and instrumental music came from every direction and a class in solfege started up as we visited Composer Sessions' lecture as a guest.

CHARLES MUNCH—Conductor at work.

Sessions discussed, very informally, his "Black Maskers" suite, which was presented by the Boston Symphony in a Shed concert Saturday night under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Slightly built and balding, Sessions is now in his 59th year. He is a sincere musician and not given to eccentricities and the lecture was simple and straightforward with no attempt to unduly impress.

He stated first that the composition, written in 1923, was the "oldest work of mine I am on speaking terms with." (He had been composing for 14 years previous to that date.) He also hoped that the class did not expect any musical analysis of the work as "I have no enthusiasm for analyzing my own work."

* * *

WE CONCLUDED the afternoon by a visit to the barn to hear the Tanglewood Study Group afternoon session. Very intense and serious, like amateurs the world over, the group was working on the Hassler "Intraden aus dem Lustgarten," a six-part early composition.

By that time our ears were getting a bit frazzled and we decided that though classes were continuing all over the place we would quit for the day. We returned however for the evening sonata program in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Berkshire Music Center has the distinction of being the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra.

It offers intensive study under expert musicians but does not offer either degrees or diplomas to its students. It was established in 1940.

* * *

THIS YEAR there are 110 students registered from New York state including 73 from New York city alone. Massachusetts has sent 48 to study including 31 from greater Boston. Students from Pennsylvania number 28; Illinois, 20; New Jersey, 18; Ohio, 17; Michigan, 15; and Connecticut, 10. A total of 14 students are enrolled from California, Washington, Oregon and Wyoming. Students from the south, number 20, include Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and Mississippi as their home states.

Canada has nine students and there are 20 foreign students.

A number of foreign students are composers. There are two Japanese composers studying at the school, Mrs. Michiko Toyama of Osaka and Tossi Ichiyanagi of Tokyo. Eino Rautavaara has come to the school from Helsinki, Finland, nominated by no less a person than composer Jean Sibelius. George Sicilianos has come from Athens, Greece, to study composition.

Miss Genia Palasanian, violinist in the student orchestra, comes from Teheran, Iran; and Israel Borouchoff, flutist in the student symphony, comes from Bat-Yam in Israel. Hiroshi Hatoyama, violinist, hails from Tokyo and Joza M. Karas, also a violinist, from Czecho-Slovakia.

* * *

STUDENTS AT THE CENTER this year range in age from 18 to 71 and occupations are many and varied ranging from priest, armed services officers, macaroni manufacturer, salesman, housewives, secretaries and medical doctors to educators.

Rev. Daniel Harris, the priest of St. Bernard's Abbey at St. Bernard, Alabama, is playing second violin in the student symphony. He offers mass at St. Anne's, the Roman Catholic church in Lenox, during the temporary absence of its regular priest.

The Berkshire Music Center has a remarkable record of achievement. Its former students scattered through the world now total 4,987 and over 10 per cent of the membership of all major United States symphony orchestras is composed of former Tanglewoodians.

Tanglewood's opera department has given the American premieres of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and "Albert Herring;" Mozart's "Idomeneo;" Ibert's "Le Roi d'Yvetot;" and Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted." This year the department will premiere a short opera especially composed at Tanglewood, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini from an Eugene O'Neil play; and, as far as is known, the first performance in this country of Mozart's unfinished opera, "Zaide."

Tanglewood is a lovely spot with its gardens and music and its atmosphere of sincere study.

Beethoven 6th Seen As Best Offering In Sunday Concert

[illegible] 7/2[illegible]

Although Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra found it necessary to compete with a number of loud and strident cicadas, as well as a few low-flying airplanes, a large audience apparently enjoyed itself very much last Sunday afternoon, if the three-minute standing ovation given to the conductor and orchestra after the performance of the Beethoven "Pastorale" symphony is any indication.

The first work on the program was the Beethoven Symphony No. 1 in C major. The performance was an enjoyable one, although it seemed to this writer that the first movement could have been presented at a slightly increased tempo. A rather embarrassingly noticeable "flub" in the woodwind section marred the movement slightly. The second movement was somewhat better, but Mr. Munch and the orchestra really hit their stride in performing the last two movements of the work.

Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 in B flat was the second work to be presented. The rendition of this symphony achieved a nice balance of delicacy and vigor, and well-done horn passages in the second movement added to the pleasure of a thoroughly enjoyable performance.

Beethoven's 6th "Pastorale" Symphony was the final presentation of the afternoon, as well as the high point of the day in both performance and pleasure registered by the audience. Written as an expression of the mood experienced by the composer upon contemplating the wooded hills of the Wienerwald, and the beautiful countryside of Lower Austria, the symphony seemed to fit perfectly into the setting of the green Berkshire Hills and small New England Towns.

Week-End Program

Tomorrow evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch will perform the Handel "Water Music Suite," The Schumann Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" with chorus and Leontyne Price as soloist, and the Brahms Symphony No. 4 in E. minor. The performance begins at 8:30 p.m.

Saturday evening, same time and place, the orchestra and Mr. Munch will present an all-Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Egmont", Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor), and Symphony No. 3 (Eroica).

Brahms is the feature of he Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., with Pierre Monteux conducting the orchestra. Scheduled works of Brahms include: Academic Festival Overture, Concerto for Violin in D Major, Opus 77, with Isaac Stern as soloist; and the Symphony No. 1 in C minor.

Herald

Munch, Monteux, to Conduct on Weekend

7/3

The second week-end of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in this summer's Berkshire Festival will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 p. m. and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct tonight's all Beethoven program which will include the Overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 p. m., Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor. This will be Mr. Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood.

Tanglewood Student Soloist At St. Stephen's

7/22 Eagle

Saramae Endich of New York, a Tanglewood student in opera dramatics, will be soloist Sunday at St. Stephen's Church.

Miss Endich is a Columbia artist and has just completed a coast-to-coast tour. She has been guest soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Little Orchestral Society, New York, and the Charleston (S.C.) Symphony Orchestra. This winter she will sing with the San Francisco Orchestra.

Her selections Sunday will be "Come Unto Him," by Handel and "With Verdure Clad," by Haydn.

EASY LISTENING—Overflow audience from concert shed.

Eagle 7/31

Books

Festival Story: A Study in Art Of Leadership

MUSIC UNDER THE MOON.
By John G. W. Mahanna.
Eagle Printing & Binding Co.,
Pittsfield, Mass. 123 pp. $2.50.

Reviewed by GEORGE E. JUDD

JOHN MAHANNA'S book is not primarily about the moon or about music, but as the subtitle indicates it is a history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Inc. The story of the Berkshire Festival itself is, however, told in pictures.

Those interested in the persons and personalities who launched the Berkshire Festival will read this account with interest and profit. Others will find their reward chiefly in the selection of a remarkably representative series of well captioned illustrations.

Ten years ago Mr. M. A. DeWolfe Howe wrote the "Tales of Tanglewood" covering much of the same period now reviewed by Mr. Mahanna. But the two books are complementary. Taken together they give an excellent sense of the setting and of many of the stages through which the development of the festival has passed to its present comprehensive contribution to music in both performance and education.

* * *

MR. MAHANNA most appropriately chooses for his chief figure the president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. His access to its records and the assistance which he must have had bring together in proper sequence the steps which led from a local musical effort whose ambition it was to attract people within a radius of 40 miles to a national or international undertaking which now attracts the musical world from a radius 100 times greater than when first proposed. This has enabled him to perform a real service by recording these events within the easy memory of man.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith brought enthusiasm and energy to this enterprise, but she already had wide experience in matters of organization. I cherish a program of an event which took place in the Metropolitan Opera House in 1917 when Miss Robinson Smith presented at a benefit performance for the suffers of the Halifax disaster the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Karl Muck with the assistance of Mme. Melba, Mr. Kreisler and Mr. Paderewski.

* * *

WHAT A RASH of festivals have sprung up since 1934, many of which have disappeared and many others are now no doubt going through some of the same growing pains which were experienced here.

Mr. Mahanna's book discloses what is not likely to be duplicated elsewhere: Both support and capacity for the experiment with the willingness to ultimately make every decision on an unselfish basis in the interest of the enterprise itself.

From the facts given one cannot escape the conclusion that from time to time the two boards, one in the Berkshires and one in Boston, took turns at being a bit inflexible. But it is equally clear that neither board in the last analysis failed to sense that its chief responsibility was toward the promotion of the best musical art.

* * *

HARRY ASKIN, who was the manager for many years of Sousa's Band, used to say that the best time to promote a concert in a mill town was during a strike. It is certainly equally true that the best time to start a festival is in the time of depression, since we can take the Berkshire experience as a shining example.

Readers will be impressed with the resourcefulness of the originators of this festival, the real meaning of leadership, high standards, coupled with perseverence and local pride. The one omission in the hierarchy of this success is the credit due the music-loving public of Berkshire County and environs. It is doubtful if there would have been another area as ready and as receptive.

For this review the early illustrations and much of the book are reminders of the time "when we were very young" and something of a tug at the heartstrings.

* * *

I CAN EVEN feel the perspiration on my brow when on the porch at Heaton Hall I was waited upon by a committee from the orchestra who presented a very serious complaint, namely, that the hot water system had completely broken down at the Maplewood Hotel in Pittsfield, despite the fact that the orchestra held a contract that there would be provided "desirable hotel accommodations."

Another warm occasion occurred on the evening of the first Festival concert which the Boston Symphony played. The year before the concert had been delayed because of the late arrival of the governor of the commonwealth. This time the beginning of the concert was delayed even longer because of the late arrival of John Q. Public who came in such numbers that their automobiles could not pass through the one and only gate which had been left open for their entrance to Holmwood.

It is just as well that Mr. Mahanna omitted these two recollections as well as the mention of many other occasions when the management found its role of liaison officer not too comfortable. There were many, many other things covered by Mr. Mahanna which are so much more important and bear more directly on the growth and development of the Berkshire Festival and Berkshire Music Center as known today."

Mr. Judd was for 40 years, until his retirement in 1954, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He now lives in [illegible], Mass.

VER

Mass., in a set-her home of the ntrasting musical hall and modern y afternoon. The re Saturday aft-day night. Rich-

t is the artist in ly 30, appearing series reviewing of Scottish, Irish, erican folk songs
oup of songs not in The Barn. The uartet, known for d some of the st-impressionistic is headed by d some formal

musical education in Juilliard, but his most significant training, he says, came from his association with Pianist-Composer Hall Overton. Overton and Charles gave a series of concerts in the Museum of Modern Art, New York City. In the Charles Quartet are Charles Mingus, who is among top stringed bass players in the realm of jazz; Rudy Nichols, drums, and J. R. Montrose, tenor sax, known also as a composer. Hall Overton's newest composition, commissioned by the Boston Symphony, is to be played this year in Tanglewood.

Plans for a benefit [illegible] will be discussed tonight in the Syracuse Conservatory of Music when members of the board of directors of the Syracuse Philharmonic Society meet. Mrs. Henry Travis is president of the society which sponsored a June performance of "La Boheme", in Central High School . . . . Miss Jane H. Todd, vice chairman of the Republican State Committee and president, New York State Federation Women's Republican Clubs is expected to come to the State Fair on Women's Recognition Day when several women who worked with the Women's Committee in earlier years will be honored. Also expected is Miss Angela R. Parisi, Democratic Federation head.

The two Federations of major political women's clubs—Republican and Democratic—are seeing to it that there is recognition for the women who did the "spade work" through the years. Among them: Mrs. Edward S. McGuire of Syracuse, Miss Ursula Hornbrook of Ogdensburg, Mrs. Eliza Keats Young of Milton, and Mrs. Walter Scott McNab of Schenectady, with special honors for Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of Ithaca, for a decade or so director of women's activities. Mrs. Eddy has been acting as counselor this summer to Mrs. Gleason White of Schenectady, new women's activities director at the Fair. Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. McNab are sisters.

Worcester Telegram

Following the Farmers

7/27

So stimulating has been the experience of Soviet agriculturalists in Iowa and Iowa farmers in Russia that the idea of professional and cultural exchange between the two countries is catching on in other fields. When six of the dozen touring Communists attend Sunday services in a little Presbyterian church out in the corn country, almost anything can happen.

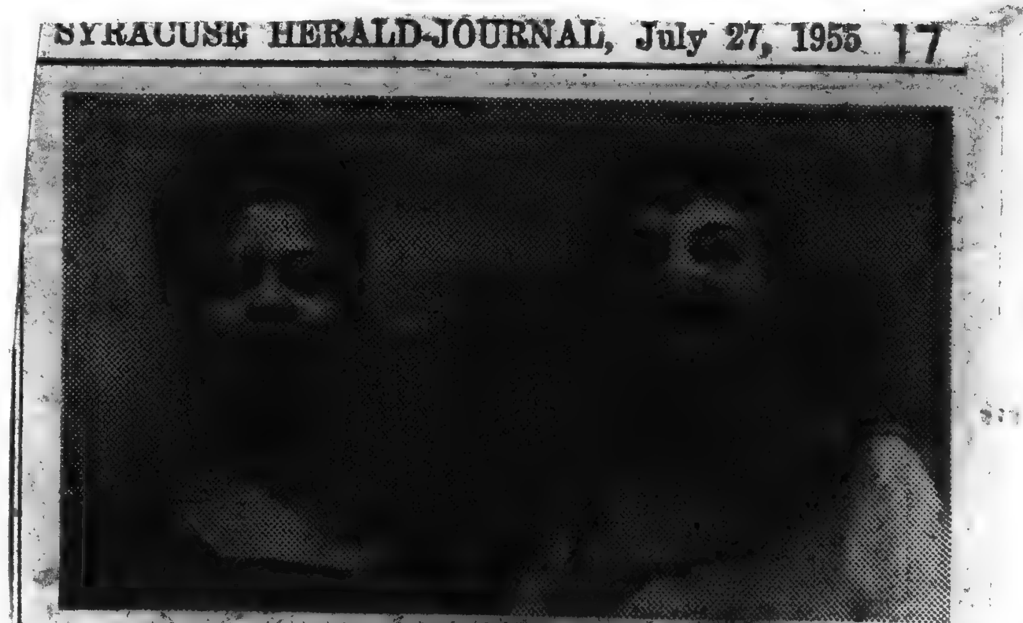
Among the first to jump in with an offer to join the goodwill movement has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At Tanglewood, where it is taking part in the Summer season with customary success, the Boston orchestra reacted promptly. Henry B. Cabot, president of trustees, said the Boston orchestra is "ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow."

Well, it should be said immediately that a few concerts in Moscow by an American orchestra, even the excellent Boston Symphony, will not untangle the German unification knot. Nor will the tour of a Moscow ballet company in this country accomplish disarmament. Yet if the Iron Curtain is to come down, as it must in order to dispel hostile feelings, cultural exchanges will be important.

Certainly there is not the slightest harm in sending all the orchestras and other cultural agencies we can to the Soviet Union. Nor can any harm be done by welcoming Russian performers here. If we can book a few Soviet lecturers for some of our clubs, let them come. The only requirement should be that the exchange be two-way, as in the case of the farmers.

Watertown (Conn) Town Times 7/28

Eugene Istomin, noted pianist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G major, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday afternoon, August 7 at 2:30 p. m. The concert will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.



Gus Manos Photo

NAOMI FARR, right, and Gwendolyn Belle, as Juliet and Lady Capulet, respectively, in the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" in "Tanglewood," Aug. 1.

TALKING IT OVER

Eminent German Composer Is In 'Tanglewood' for Opera

By EMMA VAN WORMER

World premiere opera performances in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., attract attention of the free world of music. Included is "The Rope," a one-act work by Louis Mennini, commissioned by the Center Opera department.

Boris Blacher

The distinguished German composer Boris Blacher, visiting in the United States for the first time, is guest teacher of composition in the Music Center. The "Tanglewood" premiere of his opera, "Romeo and Juliet," is set for next Monday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. On the same program will be short operas by Milhaud and Martinu and choral music. In the cast will be Farr as Juliet, remembered by Syracuse music lovers for her recital during the 1953 biennial convention of the New York State Music Clubs convention in Hotel Syracuse. Miss Farr is a National Auditions winner. Also from New York is Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse. For the Syracuse convention, Mrs. Manfred W. Gerstley of Skaneateles was chairman. Mrs. Gerstley returned from Europe recently.

The role of Romeo will be sung by Harold Johnson of Chicago. Lynn Detwiler of Altoona, Pa., will be Tybalt; Peyton Higgison of Mobile, Ala., is cast as Capulet; Gwendolyn Belle of St. Louis as Lady Capulet and Robert Kearns of Utica, Mich., as Benvolio.

"The Rope," to be sung Aug. 8, is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title. Composer Mennini, member of Eastman School of Music faculty, Rochester, passed the summer of 1953 in "Tanglewood" on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in preparation for his work. A native of Erie, Pa., Mennini studied composition in Eastman under Dr. Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 with degrees of Bachelor and Master of Music.

* * *

PEYTON HIGGISON, below, as Capulet, and Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse, in the opera.

[272]

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Thursday, July 28, 1955 33

TALKING IT OV

Berkshires Offer Choice of Jazz or Bach and Brahms

By EMMA VAN WORMER

From the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mas ting not far from beautiful "Tanglewood," summer Boston Symphony Orchestra, comes word of a contras weekend. It's two of the "Three B's" in one hall scores in the other.

While Concert Violinist Isaac Stern, internationally known is playing Brahms with the Orchestra, under the baton of Guest Maestro Pierre Monteux in the Great Shed in "Tanglewood," or the all-Beethoven symphonic program is led by Director Charles Munch, with Pianist Rudolf Serkin, soloist, British and American folk songs and modern music (described as subtle) will be offered in the Berkshire Barn.

The Beethoven program is Saturday night; the all-Brahms concert is Sunday aft Barn concerts are S ernoon and Sunday ard Dyer-Bennett is The Barn on July 3 in the third of a ser the whole sweep of S English and Americ with a new group previously done in T Teddy Charles Quar having introduced elements of post-i music into jazz, Charles.

The leader had mittee in earlier years will be honored. Also expected is Miss Angela R. Parisi, Democratic Federation head.

The two Federations of major political women's clubs—Republican and Democratic—are seeing to it that there is recognition for the women who did the "spade work" through the years. Among them: Mrs. Edward S. McGuire of Syracuse, Miss Ursula Hornbrook of Ogdensburg, Mrs. Eliza Keats Young of Milton, and Mrs. Walter Scott McNab of Schenectady, with special honors for Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of Ithaca, for a decade or so director of women's activities. Mrs. Eddy has been acting as counselor this summer to Mrs. Gleason White of Schenectady, new women's activities director at the Fair. Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. McNab are sisters.

Union LENOX 7/8

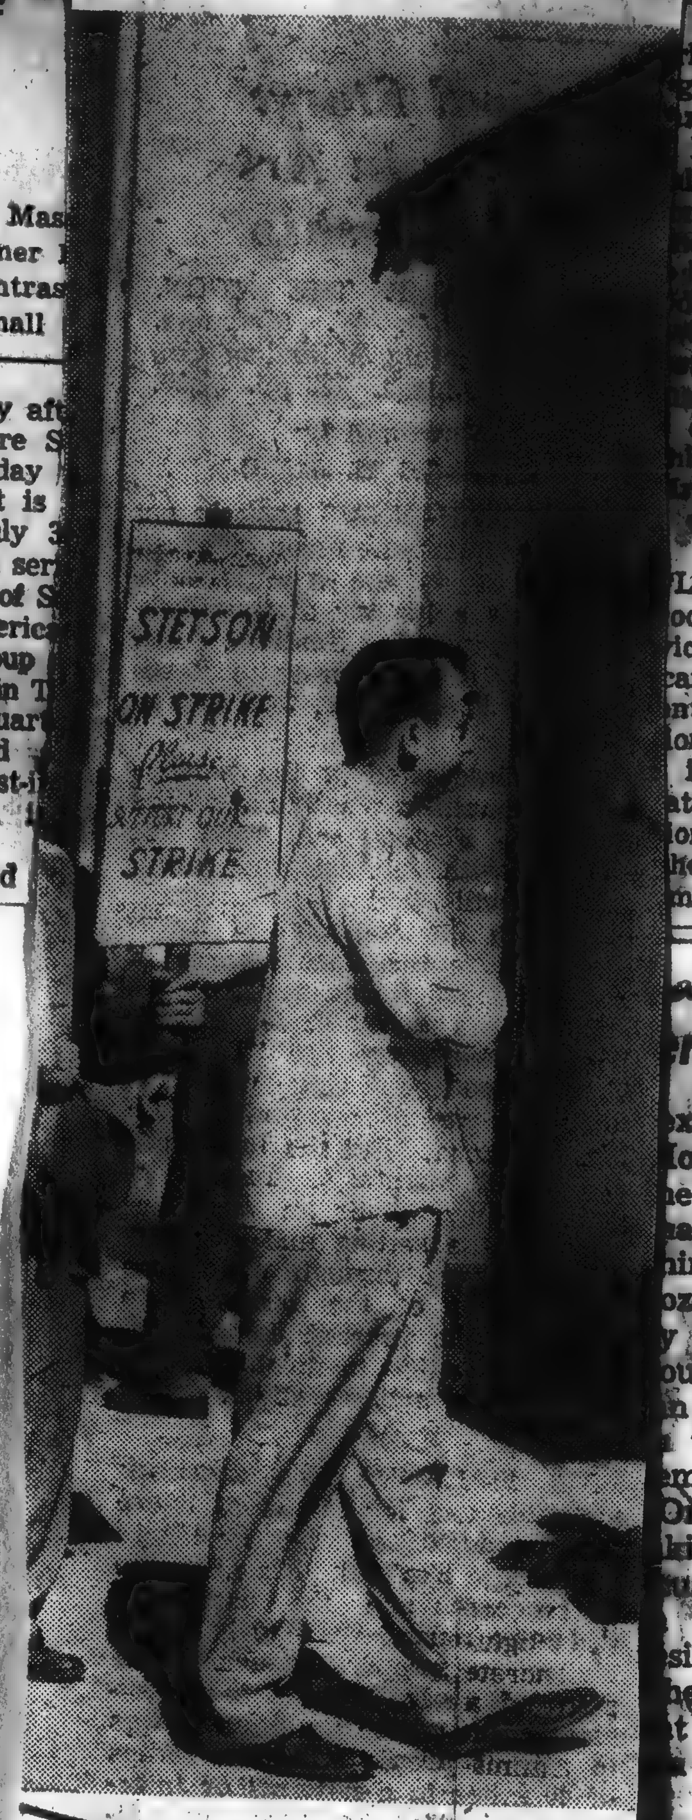
Festival Exhibit Features Bengtz

Lenox, July 29—An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School, will be on displayed during the coming week, from July 30 until Aug. 6 in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as all the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Bengtz's Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," oil; "The Fiddler," oil; "Girl Blowing a Horn," oil; and "Children in the Countryside," oil.

7/22



front of Stetson's Cleaners on Federal seeking a joint election with Brady's C signs are, left to right, Albert F. Lilano, IUE 255 president, and Business Agent experience Iowa and the idea of change being on in dozen tour services out in the happen. with an ment has Orchestra. king part customary reacted sident of hestra is t wishes, to play mediately by an excellent tangle the will the y in this Yet if n, as it feelings, rtant. slightest tras and to the be done ers here. urers for me. The t the expense of the

---

---

Biggest Crowd of the Season Expected at Festival Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — With fair weather predicted over the weekend and hotels, inns, motels and tourist homes filled to capacity, Boston Symphony Orchestra officials are expecting the largest crowd of the season at tonight's concert in the Music Shed, featuring an all-Beethoven program with Rudolf Serkin as piano soloist with the BSO, Charles Munch conducting. The concert will begin at 8.30.

Soloist Tomorrow

Tomorrow Pierre Monteux will make his second appearance of the season, and Isaac Stern, soloist in the Beethoven violin concerto last weekend, will return in Brahms D major concerto. Last night Mr. Montaux and Mr. Stern were seated in the official box of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to listen to the evening's program which attracted 7677 music lovers.

The Berkshire Festival will move into its semi-final week of symphonic music on Wednesday when the fifth of a series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Mr. Serkin will be given in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Mr. Munch conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7), and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (Aug 5).

Mac Morgan To Sing

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers [illegible] Soloists on this occasion [illegible] Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students of the chorus, opera and Study Group departments trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with the Festival Chorus trianed by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Balitmore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

Local Marine Returning to Camp After Convalescence

Marine Pfc. Donald Wagner, son of Mrs. Florence Ladouceur, 55 Elm St., is driving back to Camp Lejeune, N.C., Aug. 7, after spending a 30-day convalescent leave at home.

Pfc. Wagner enlisted in 1953 and served four months in Porta Rico before being assigned to Camp Lejeune in December. He has spent the six months since in the Navy hospital there. He was struck by a car while walking from near-by Jacksonville on Christmas Eve, and landed in the hospital with both legs broken, a concussion and various cuts about the head that required more than 20 stitches.

Pfc. Wagner would like company on the return trip. Any local Marine desiring transportation next Sunday should contact him.

Playgr List E For W

Following schedule for t supervisors' during the da regular schedu day evening.

ARTS
(Visits Are Ma

Monday—Demin
Tuesday—Highla
Wednesday—Osc
Friday—Pontoos

MUSIC
(Visits Are Ma

Monday—Ponto
Tuesday—Allend
Wednesday—Leb
Friday—Lakewood

(Visits Are Ma

Monday—Happ
Wednesday—Co
Tuesday—Spring
Friday—Osceola

SPORTS
(Visits Are Ma

Monday—Highl
Tuesday—Leban
Wednesday—W
Thursday (eve
Friday—Pitt a

SPORT
(Visits Are Ma

Monday and Lakewood.
Tuesday and T Springside.

(Show

Monday—Com
Tuesday—Cran
Wednesday—C
Thursday—De
Friday—Franc

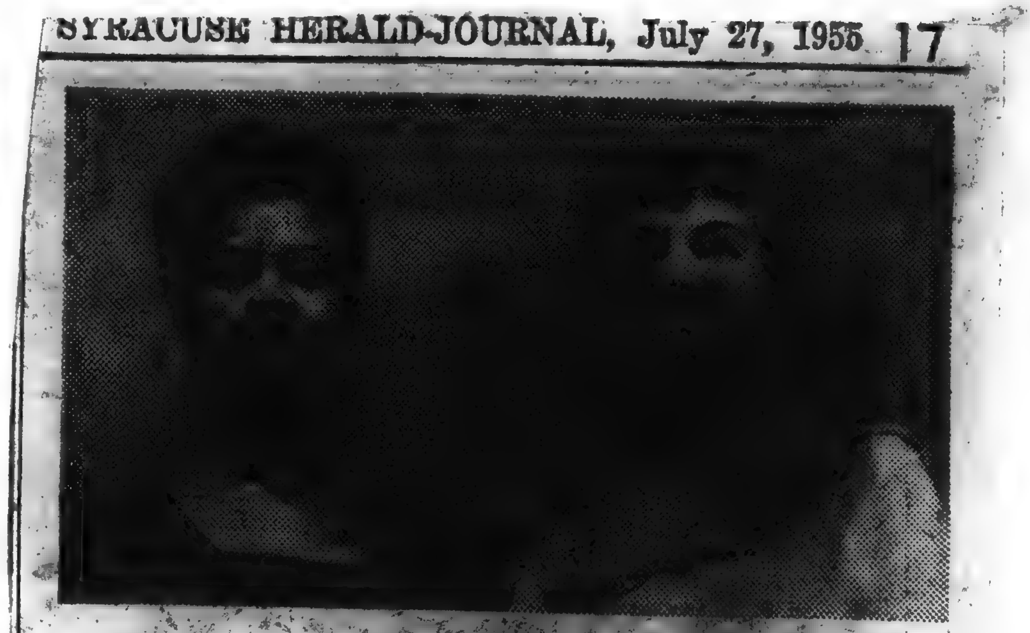
Thursday—10 grounds; Ponto Teen-Age Dance

Richm Seriou In Rou

NEW LEBA W. Shepard, Bond Bread tr a severe cut arm at 9 this truck went out 20 on the we Mountain and ard was taken where his cond fair. Cpl. A. the New Lebar post is investi

---

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, July 27, 1955 17



Gus Manos Photo

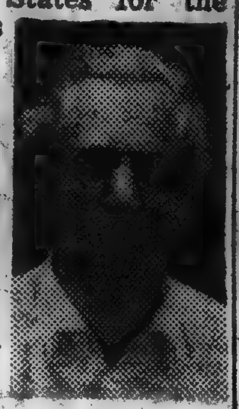
NAOMI FARR, right, and Gwendolyn Belle, as Juliet and Lady Capulet, respectively, in the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" in "Tanglewood," Aug. 1.

TALKING IT OVER

Eminent German Composer Is In 'Tanglewood' for Opera

By EMMA VAN WORMER

World premiere opera performances in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., attract attention of the free world of music. Included is "The Rope," a one-act work by Louis Mennini, commissioned by the Center Opera department.



Boris Blacher

The distinguished German composer Boris Blacher, visiting in the United States for the first time, is guest teacher of composition in the Music Center. The "Tanglewood" premiere of his opera, "Romeo and Juliet," is set for next Monday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. On the same program will be short operas by Milhaud and Martinu and choral music. In the cast will be Farr as Juliet, remembered by Syracuse music lovers for her recital during the 1953 biennial convention of the New York State Music Clubs convention in Hotel Syracuse. Miss Farr is a National Auditions winner. Also from New York is Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse. For the Syracuse convention, Mrs. Manfred W. Gerstley of Skaneateles was chairman. Mrs. Gerstley returned from Europe recently.

The role of Romeo will be sung by Harold Johnson of Chicago. Lynn Detwiler of Altoona, Pa., will be Tybalt; Peyton Higgison of Mobile, Ala., is cast as Capulet; Gwendolyn Belle of St. Louis as Lady Capulet and Robert Kearns of Utica, Mich., as Benvolio.

"The Rope," to be sung Aug. 8, is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title. Composer Mennini, member of Eastman School of Music faculty, Rochester, passed the summer of 1953 in "Tanglewood" on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in preparation for his work. A native of Erie, Pa., Mennini studied composition in Eastman under Dr. Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 with degrees of Bachelor and Master of Music.

• • •

PEYTON HIGGISON, below, as Capulet, and Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse, in the opera.

[272]

TALKING IT OVER

Berkshires Offer Choice of Jazz or Bach and Brahms

By EMMA VAN WORMER

From the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., in a setting not far from beautiful "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, comes word of a contrasting musical weekend. It's two of the "Three B's" in one hall and modern scores in the other.

While Concert Violinist Isaac Stern, internationally known is playing Brahms with the Orchestra, under the baton of Guest Maestro Pierre Monteux in the Great Shed in "Tanglewood," or the all-Beethoven symphonic program is led by Director Charles Munch, with Pianist Rudolf Serkin, soloist, British and American folk songs and modern music (described as subtle) will be offered in the Berkshire Barn.

The Beethoven program is Saturday night; the all-Brahms concert is Sunday afternoon. The Barn concerts are Saturday afternoon and Sunday night. Richard Dyer-Bennett is the artist in The Barn on July 30, appearing in the third of a series reviewing the whole sweep of Scottish, Irish, English and American folk songs with a new group of songs not previously done in The Barn. The Teddy Charles Quartet, known for having introduced some of the elements of post-impressionistic music into jazz, is headed by Charles.

The leader had some formal musical education in Juilliard, but his most significant training, he says, [illegible] from his association with Pianist-Composer Hall Overton. Overton and Charles gave a [illegible] concerts in the Museum of [illegible] Art, New York City. In the Charles Quartet are Charles Mingus, who is among top stringed bass players in the realm of jazz; Rudy Nichols, drums, and J. R. Montrose, tenor sax, known also as a composer. Hall Overton's newest composition, commissioned by the Boston Symphony, is to be played this year in Tanglewood.

Plans for a benefit [illegible] will be discussed tonight in the Syracuse Conservatory of Music when members of the board of directors of the Syracuse Philharmonic Society meet. Mrs. Henry Travis is president of the society which sponsored a June performance of "La Boheme", in Central High School . . . Miss Jane H. Todd, vice chairman of the Republican State Committee and president, New York State Federation Women's Republican Clubs is expected to come to the State Fair on Women's Recognition Day when several women who worked with the Women's Committee in earlier years will be honored. Also expected is Miss Angela R. Parisi, Democratic Federation head.

The two Federations of major political women's clubs—Republican and Democratic—are seeing to it that there is recognition for the women who did the "spade work" through the years. Among them: Mrs. Edward S. McGuire of Syracuse, Miss Ursula Hornbrook of Ogdensburg, Mrs. Eliza Keats Young of Milton, and Mrs. Walter Scott McNab of Schenectady, with special honors for Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of Ithaca, for a decade or so director of women's activities. Mrs. Eddy has been acting as counselor this summer to Mrs. Gleason White of Schenectady, new women's activities director at the Fair. Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. McNab are sisters.

Union LENOX 7/28

Festival Exhibit Features Bengtz

Lenox, July 29—An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School, will be on displayed during the coming week, from July 30 until Aug. 6 in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as all the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Bengtz's Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," oil; "The Fiddler," oil; "Girl Blowing a Horn," oil; and "Children in the Countryside," oil.

---

enabled him to perform a real service by recording these events within the easy memory of man.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith brought enthusiasm and energy to this enterprise, but she already had wide experience in matters of organization. I cherish a program of an event which took place in the Metropolitan Opera House in 1917 when Miss Robinson Smith presented at a benefit performance for the suffers of the Halifax disaster the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Karl Muck with the assistance of Mme. Melba, Mr. Kreisler and Mr. Paderewski.

* * *

WHAT A RASH of festivals have sprung up since 1934, many of which have disappeared and many others are now no doubt going through some of the same growing pains whic here.

Mr. Mahar

what is not l'

elsewhere:

pacity for th willingness every dec

basis in th

prise itself

From th not escap from time

one in th

Boston,

inflexible that nei

alysis fa

responsi

motion

HARI

manage

Sousa's best ti

a mill

It is the be in the can t

as a

Worcester Telegram

Following the Farmers

7/27

So stimulating has been the experience of Soviet agriculturalists in Iowa and Iowa farmers in Russia that the idea of professional and cultural exchange between the two countries is catching on in other fields. When six of the dozen touring Communists attend Sunday services in a little Presbyterian church out in the corn country, almost anything can happen.

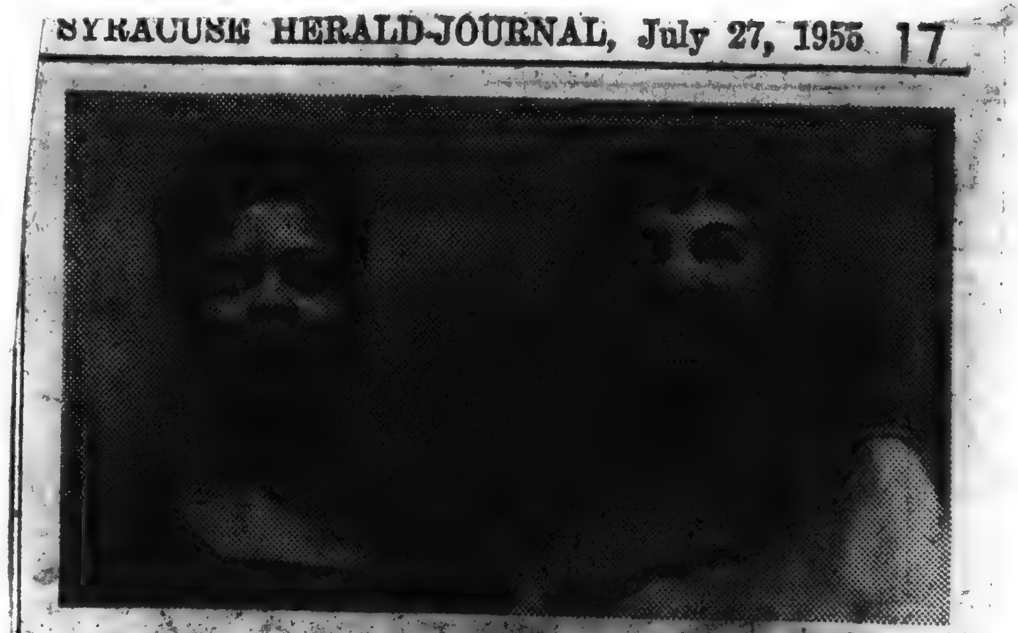
Among the first to jump in with an offer to join the goodwill movement has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At Tanglewood, where it is taking part in the Summer season with customary success, the Boston orchestra reacted promptly. Henry B. Cabot, president of trustees, said the Boston orchestra is "ready and eager, if the President wishes, to be the first American orchestra to play in Moscow."

Well, it should be said immediately that a few concerts in Moscow by an American orchestra, even the excellent Boston Symphony, will not untangle the German unification knot. Nor will the tour of a Moscow ballet company in this country accomplish disarmament. Yet if the Iron Curtain is to come down, as it must in order to dispel hostile feelings, cultural exchanges will be important.

Certainly there is not the slightest harm in sending all the orchestras and other cultural agencies we can to the Soviet Union. Nor can any harm be done by welcoming Russian performers here. If we can book a few Soviet lecturers for some of our clubs, let them come. The only requirement should be that the exchange be two-way, as in the case of the farmers.

Watertown (conn) Times 7/28

Eugene Istomin, noted pianist, will be the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4 in G major, at the Berkshire Festival concert of Sunday afternoon, August 7 at 2:30 p. m. The concert will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.



Gus Manos Photo

NAOMI FARR, right, and Gwendolyn Belle, as Juliet and Lady Capulet, respectively, in the premiere of "Romeo and Juliet" in "Tanglewood," Aug. 1.

TALKING IT OVER

Eminent German Composer Is In 'Tanglewood' for Opera

By EMMA VAN WORMER

World premiere opera performances in the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., attract attention of the free world of music. Included is "The Rope," a one-act work by Louis Mennini, commissioned by the Center Opera department.

Boris Blacher

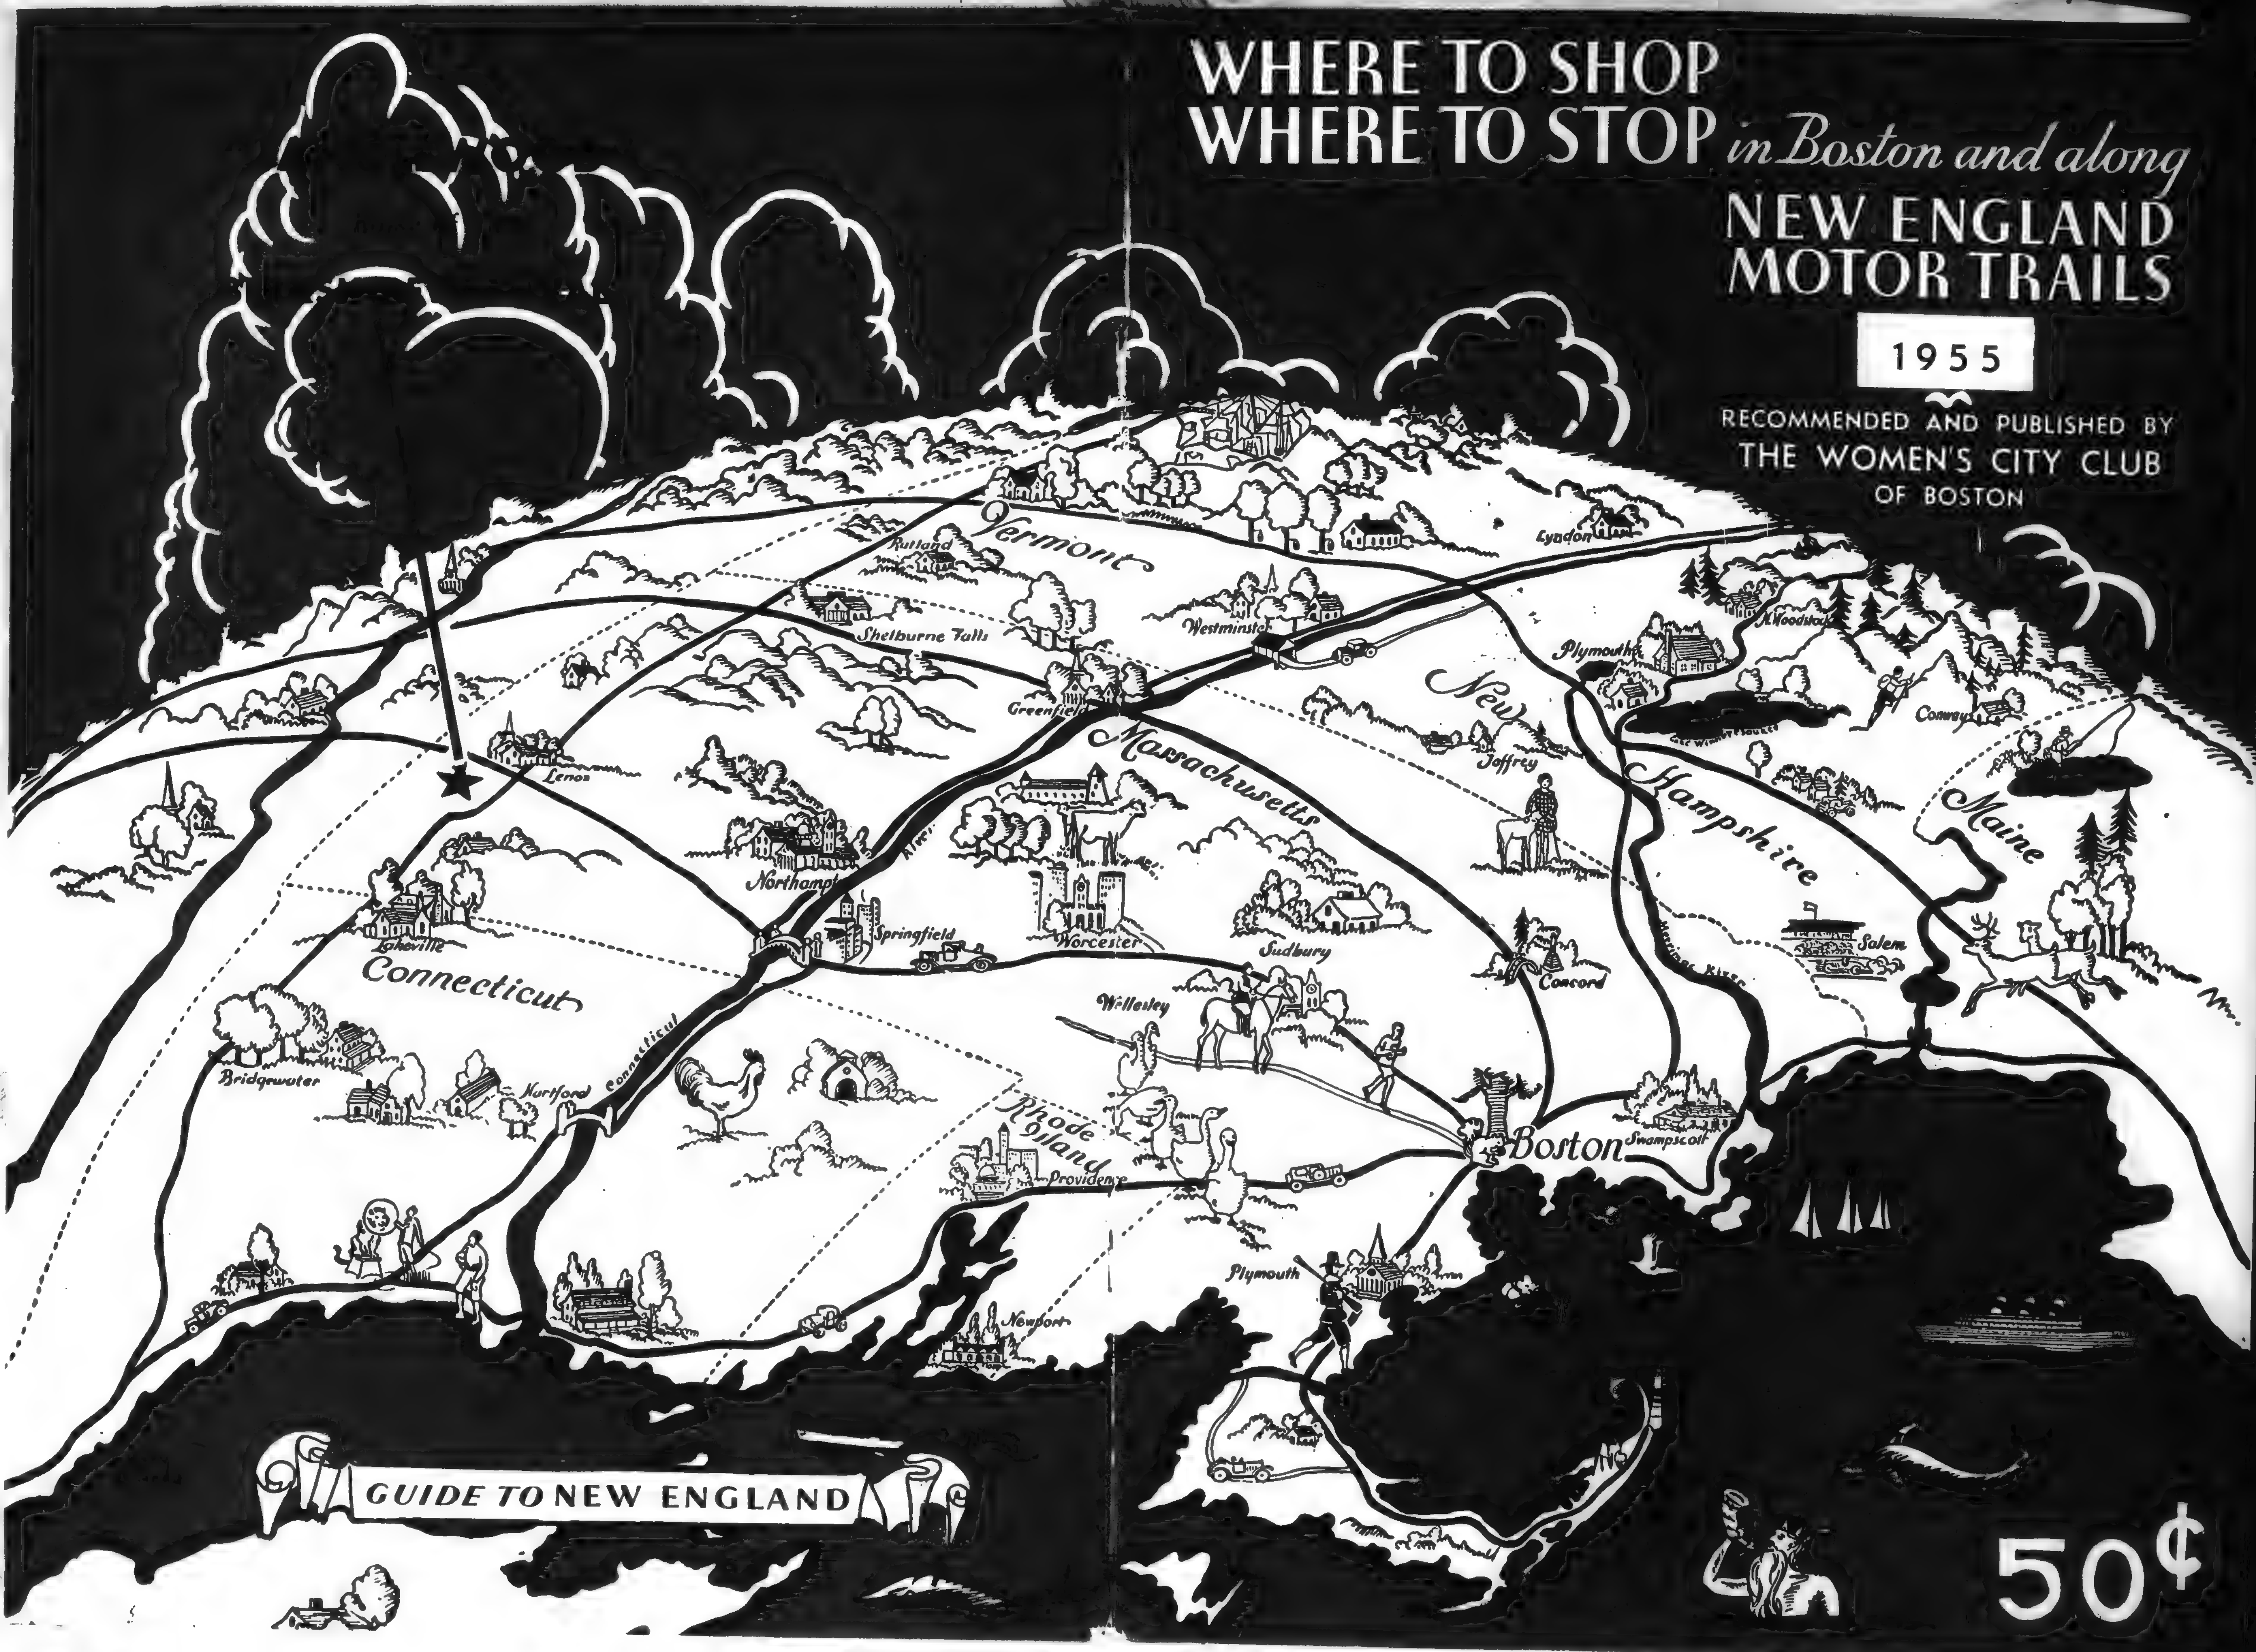
The distinguished German composer Boris Blacher, visiting in the United States for the first time, is guest teacher of composition in the Music Center. The "Tanglewood" premiere of his opera, "Romeo and Juliet," is set for next Monday night in the Theater-Concert Hall, the composer conducting. On the same program will be short operas by Milhaud and Martinu and choral music. In the cast will be Farr as Juliet, remembered by Syracuse music lovers for her recital during the 1953 biennial convention of the New York State Music Clubs convention in Hotel Syracuse. Miss Farr is a National Auditions winner. Also from New York is Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse. For the Syracuse convention, Mrs. Manfred W. Gerstley of Skaneateles was chairman. Mrs. Gerstley returned from Europe recently.

The role of Romeo will be sung by Harold Johnson of Chicago. Lynn Detwiler of Altoona, Pa., will be Tybalt; Peyton Higgison of Mobile, Ala., is cast as Capulet; Gwendolyn Belle of St. Louis as Lady Capulet and Robert Kearns of Utica, Mich., as Benvolio.

"The Rope," to be sung Aug. 8, is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of that title. Composer Mennini, member of Eastman School of Music faculty, Rochester, passed the summer of 1953 in "Tanglewood" on commission by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, in preparation for his work. A native of Erie, Pa., Mennini studied composition in Eastman under Dr. Howard Hanson and Bernard Rogers. He was graduated in 1947 with degrees of Bachelor and Master of Music.

PEYTON HIGGISON, below, as Capulet, and Regina Sarfaty as The Nurse, in the opera.

[272]



WHERE TO SHOP
WHERE TO STOP in Boston and along
NEW ENGLAND MOTOR TRAILS

1955

RECOMMENDED AND PUBLISHED BY THE WOMEN'S CITY CLUB
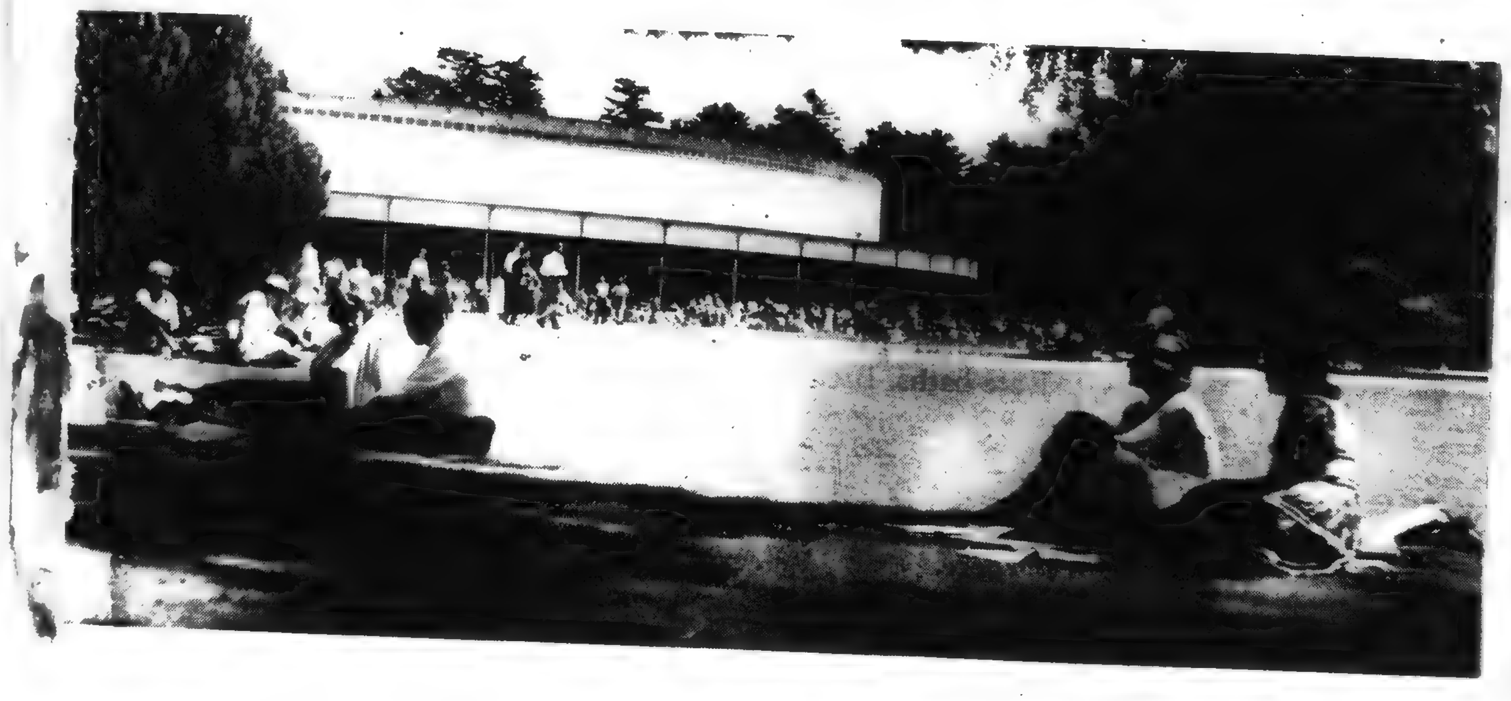
OF BOSTON

50¢



Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Hills

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six weekends from July 6 to August 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre and the last four weekends will consist of twelve concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

GUEST CONDUCTORS

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who recently passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year, and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

SOLOISTS

In addition to the pianists, Rudolph Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to August 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 27 1955

String Quartet Plays Tonight

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight at 8:30 in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall the fourth concert in this season's Chamber Music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18 No. 2; the Quartet in E Flat Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132. The New Music String Quartet is the Quartet-in Residence of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. Mr. Earle, a native of Chicago, joined his first string quartet at the age of 15 and chamber music has remained his absorbing interest ever since. He is a native of New York and a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music and Columbia University. The violist, Walter Trampler, is a former member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the famed Strub Quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. Mr. Soyer, the cellist, was born in Philadelphia and had given several New York recitals. He has also made several solo appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on August 14, may be had at Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

Lakeville Journal
7/28

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 24
By A. C. S.

When an organization such as the Boston Symphony Orchestra decides to pay tribute to Ludwig van Beethoven, it is natural that the composer's symphonies should be chosen for performance. With only twelve shed concerts in which to present them, and at the same time give a variety of programming, the bunching of some of these works is probably inevitable. This is undoubtedly the reason the first, fourth, and sixth symphonies were played today. Despite the merits of performance, and there were many, the overall effect was that of a meal too full of starches. Many listeners were surfeited by the time intermission came and left the grounds without hearing the "Pastoral" Symphony.

The Symphony in B Flat Major, No. 4, which is sometimes thought to be inferior to the others, had a chance to shine on its own this afternoon. The slow movement was especially well done with a feeling of repose pervading the whole. Only in the finale did Mr. Munch seem to lose the sense of the work. The music careened along at an excessive speed leaving nothing for the listener but an awe at the bravura display of the orchestra.

Speed of a different sort had its effect at Tanglewood this afternoon. Unknown to most of the audience, which was estimated at 9,000 persons, a flight of jet planes was scheduled to fly over the area at concert time. Mr. Munch, therefor, delayed his appearance for five minutes so that only nature could cause a disturbance to the progress of the music.

Vermont
New Hampshire
Maine
Massachusetts
Connecticut
Rhode Island
Boston
Rutland
Shelburne Falls
Westminster
Greenfield
Lenox
Northampton
Springfield
Worcester
Sudbury
Wellesley
Concord
Salem
Swampscott
Providence
Newport
Plymouth
Hartford
Bridgewater
Jaffrey

WHERE TO SHOP
WHERE TO STOP in Boston and along
NEW ENGLAND
MOTOR TRAILS
1955

RECOMMENDED AND PUBLISHED BY THE WOMEN'S CITY CLUB
OF BOSTON

GUIDE TO NEW ENGLAND

50¢

Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Hills

THE Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, will present most of the principal works of Beethoven at this summer's Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., through six weekends from July 6 to August 14. The Shed concerts will include the nine symphonies, the "Missa Solemnis", a concert performance of "Fidelio" (Act II), concertos and overtures.

The plan for 1955 lists concerts each Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. The first two weekends will be devoted to the "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre and the last four weekends will consist of twelve concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

GUEST CONDUCTORS

Guest conductors at the Festival will be Pierre Monteux, who recently passed his 80th birthday; Leonard Bernstein, returning to Tanglewood after a sabbatical year, and Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a former conducting student of Sergė Koussevitzky at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct two concerts each week, a third to be under the direction of a guest conductor.

SOLOISTS

In addition to the pianists, Rudolph Serkin and Eugene Istomin, Leonard Bernstein will appear as pianist, conducting from the keyboard. Other soloists will be Isaac Stern, violinist; Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, and the singers, Margaret Harshaw, Jennie Tourel, and Leontyne Price. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, will appear in a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in the "Bach-Mozart" series. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will perform several choral works. Further soloists will be announced later.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school at Tanglewood maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will have its 13th session from July 4 to August 14.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-4200

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 27 1955

String Quartet Plays Tonight

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight at 8:30 in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall the fourth concert in this season's Chamber Music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18 No. 2; the Quartet in E Flat Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132. The New Music String Quartet is the Quartet-in-Residence of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. Mr. Earle, a native of Chicago, joined his first string quartet at the age of 15 and chamber music has remained his absorbing interest ever since. He is a native of New York and a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music and Columbia University. The violist, Walter Trampler, is a former member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the famed Strub Quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. Mr. Soyer, the cellist, was born in Philadelphia and had given several New York recitals. He has also made several solo appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on August 14, may be had at Tanglewood box office and telephone reservations are accepted. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

Lakeville Journal
7/28

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 24

By A. C. S.

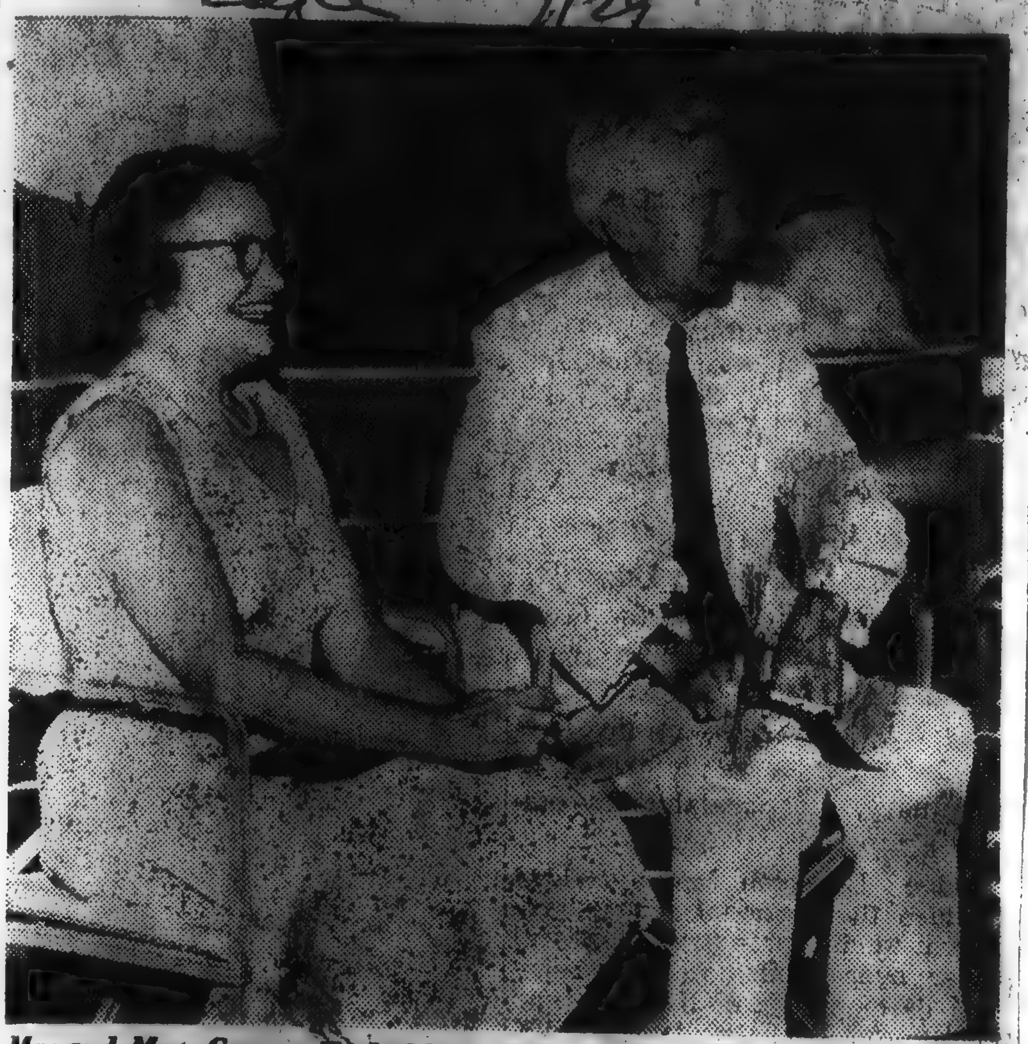
When an organization such as the Boston Symphony Orchestra decides to pay tribute to Ludwig van Beethoven, it is natural that the composer's symphonies should be chosen for performance. With only twelve shed concerts in which to present them, and at the same time give a variety of programming, the bunching of some of these works is probably inevitable. This is undoubtedly the reason the first, fourth, and sixth symphonies were played today. Despite the merits of performance, and there were many, the overall effect was that of a meal too full of starches. Many listeners were surfeited by the time intermission came and left the grounds without hearing the "Pastoral" Symphony.

The Symphony in B Flat Major, No. 4, which is sometimes thought to be inferior to the others, had a chance to shine on its own this afternoon. The slow movement was especially well done with a feeling of repose pervading the whole. Only in the finale did Mr. Munch seem to lose the sense of the work. The music careened along at an excessive speed leaving nothing for the listener but an awe at the bravura display of the orchestra.

Speed of a different sort had its effect at Tanglewood this afternoon. Unknown to most of the audience which was estimated at 9,000 persons, a flight of jet planes was scheduled to fly over the area at concert time. Mr. Munch, therefore, delayed his appearance for five minutes so that only nature could cause a disturbance to the progress of the music.

Judds at Festival Concert

Eagle 7/29



Mr. and Mrs. George E. Judd of Cannonsville, N.Y., in the box section at Tanglewood during concert intermisison Sunday. Mr. Judd retired as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the close of 1954 Tanglewood season. The former Lillian MacDougall, Mrs. Judd was secretary to Mr. Judd and in charge of the Friends of the BSO and of the Berkshire Music Center before her marriage last year.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sentinal (e)
ANSONIA, Conn.
Ind. Republican
Circ. 12,663

JUL 22 1955

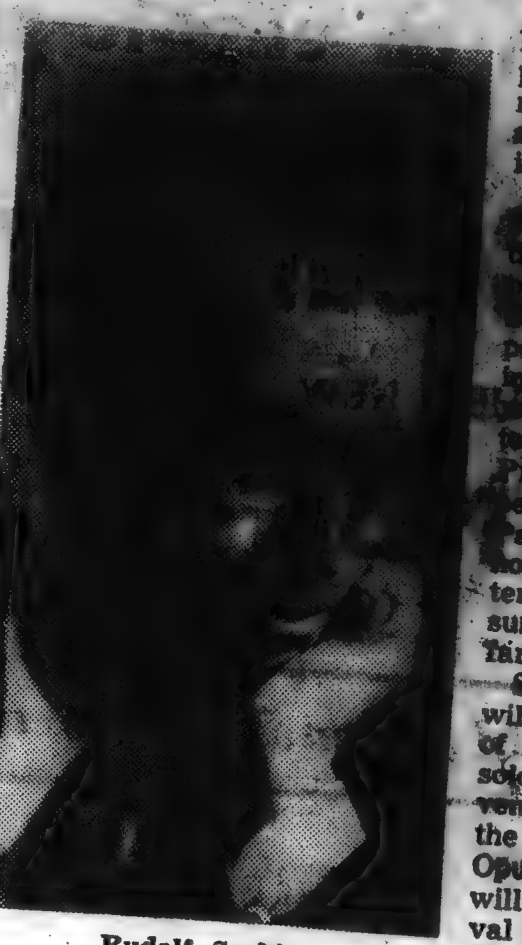
Tanglewood Weekend Concerts in Shed To Star Leontyne Price, Serkin, Stern

Eagle 7/29

TANGLEWOOD — Leontyne Price, Rudolf Serkin and Isaac Stern will be featured soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the second weekend of concerts in the Music Shed. Charles Munch will conduct tonight at 8:30 and will lead an all-Beethoven program tomorrow night, while Sunday at 2:30 Pierre Monteux will conduct a concert devoted to Brahms.

Tonight Mr. Munch will conduct a suite from Handel's "Water Music" in the arrangement by the late Sir Hamilton Harty, the Symphony No. 4 in D minor by Schumann and the Symphony No. 4 in E minor by Brahms. In addition, the concert will feature the Tanglewood premiere of the latest score by Samuel Barber, the solo cantata "Prayers of Kierkegaard." Scored for orchestra, chorus and vocal soloists, and commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, Barber's score was given its world premiere performance by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony last December. The soprano soloist will be Leontyne Price, who also sang in the premiere; other vocal solos in tonight's performance will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano. Miss Sarfaty is a student in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to the opera department's head, Boris Goldovsky.

Miss Price was a student in the opera department four summers ago and won wide acclaim for her performance in Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos." Since then she has gained international renown for her performance as Bess in Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess." She made her New York recital debut last November and last January appeared as Tosca in the NBC-TV production of Puccini's dramatic opera. Her appearance tonight will be her first Tanglewood performance since the 1953 "Tanglewood on Parade" concert when she and her husband, the baritone William Warfield, appeared in a special concert presentation of "Porgy and Bess," Act II, under the direction of Leonard Bernstein.



Rudolf Serkin

First Solo Appearance

Tomorrow night's all-Beethoven program will include the overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E flat major (the "Emperor"), with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E flat, the "Eroica."

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini conducting the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in festival performance with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter. A Berkshire neighbor in the summer, he lives on a Vermont farm.

Sunday afternoon Mr. Monteux will make his second appearance of the season, and Isaac Stern, soloist last weekend in the Beethoven violin concerto, will return in the Brahms D major concerto, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival Overture" and the Symphony No. 1 in C minor. This will be Mr. Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood, and replaces the scheduled performance of Brahms' Double Concerto with Mr. Stern and cellist Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists, cancelled because of the latter's shoulder ailment.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony at 10 tomorrow in the Music Shed, when Mr. Monteux will rehearse his Sunday afternoon program. A nominal admission of $1 is charged to benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Ture Bengtz Show Seen This Week At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at the Lenox School, will be on display during the coming week, from tomorrow until Aug. 6 in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood.

The Bengtz show, as well as the others in the weekly display of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

When he came to the United States in 1927 from his native Finland, Ture Bengtz studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts. His awards have included the Paige Traveling Scholarship for European study; first prize in the New England Competition sponsored by the Stewart Gallery, Boston, in 1946; the Palmer Memorial Prize at the National Academy of Design in New York; as well as an honorable mention from the Society of American Etchers.

Visit to Finland

Examples of his work can be seen at the National Academy, the Art Institute in Chicago, Washington's Library of Congress and at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Library, Wiggings Collection. Mr. Bengtz has recently exhibited at the Berkshire Museum, and the Otis Library and Museum. Since his last showing at Tanglewood a year ago, he visited his family in Finland in the autumn of 1954, did portrait commissions, and had a one-man show at Marieham.

His Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses Resting," "The [illegible]dler," "Girl Blowing a Horn," and "Children in the Countryside."

TODAY'S WOMEN

By DOROTHY ROE

Jazz

If you feel an inferiority complex when people discuss longhair music in hushed voices, try bringing the discussion around to jazz, advises Stephanie Barber, a young woman who has succeeded in converting a culture-conscious husband into rabid jazz enthusiast.

Stephanie is a sultry blonde who worked as a fashion publicist in New York, married her boss, a good-looking city dweller named Phil Barber, and moved him to an old estate in the Berkshires which they converted into an establishment named Music Inn.

Stephanie, born and bred in New York City, took to country life like a kitten to cream, worked furiously at touring a group of ancient farm buildings into a modern inn, then set about the business of running it as a profitable enterprise while husband Phil carried on his business in New York.

Since the inn is situated near Lenox, Mass., home of the famous annual Berkshire Music Festival Stephanie couldn't escape the atmosphere of highbrow music. She personally preferred jazz. Neighbors now remark thoughtfully that one really never should underestimate the power of a woman, for this year Phil and Stephanie are opening their music barn, where deep in the longhair music country, they are offering a program of folk and jazz concerts, with appearances by such well-known downbeat artists as Count Basie, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Dizzy Gillepsie and Coleman Hawkins.

Stephanie has been building up to this point for some time, having started an annual folk and jazz round table at this Inn six years ago, and revelling in the arguments and performances of the jazz musicians who attend it.

Phil, though a little dazed by the changes wrought in his life by his wife, is filled with nothing but admiration for her. Having taught drama at Yale for six years, he likes having a country theater of his own.

He also likes having an innkeeping wife, who can attract the country's top jazz artists to their little establishment. He likes best, perhaps, the fact that she is able to show a profit on her enterprises, and that despite her talent for hard work and busi acumen she continues to look a glamour girl.

The Barber property in Berkshires covers 100 acres includes two lakes. The two ber sons, Willson and Ben, teen-agers, have grown husky healthy on country air, fresh etables—and jazz.

Says Phil: "When you mee city girl who looks like she longs strictly in a Stork C atmosphere, look out. She have you milking cows before know what's happened."

Serkin and Stern Will Be Soloists At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 29—The full Boston Symphony Orchestra will play in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Saturday night at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Saturday night's all-Beethoven program which will include the Overture to "Egmont," the Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major (the "Emperor") with Rudolf Serkin making his Tanglewood debut as soloist, and the Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, the "Eroica."

Sunday afternoon at 2.30 Pierre Monteux will conduct an all-Brahms concert with Isaac Stern as soloist in the Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 77. In addition, the program will include the "Academic Festival" Overture and the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor. This will be Mr. Stern's final appearance of the season at Tanglewood.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-4200

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 130,559

JUL 28 1955

Three One-Act Operas At Tanglewood

Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, will be performed by Students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Monday, Aug. 1, in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others.

The operas are "Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts in English by Boris Blacher, Director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, now on his first visit to the United States as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center; "Ariana Abandoned," a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, in an English version by Ludwig Zirner; and "Comedy On the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, with English text by Walter Schmolka. Boris Goldovsky has directed all three productions.

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

YORK POST, MONDAY, JULY 25, 1955

A 'New Munch' at Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 25—It is a temptation to speak of the "New Munch" here at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Festival. While conducting three Beethoven symphonies yesterday afternoon plus assorted Beethoven Friday night, he has illustrated qualities of greatness hitherto unexpressed for this listener except in past performances of Berlioz.

Beethoven's "First," a symphony I know about as well as "America," communicated so much freshness and buoyancy by The Boston Symphony under his aegis, that the notes were quite lifted out of their paper skins with excitement. Having initiated the mood, Munch continued to conduct as if he were suspended, not quite earthbound. Come to think of it, he conducted as if he might just have landed from a flying saucer.

He also was quite human in the "First," encompassing the work's delicious humor such as the "Surprise" scale passage which begins the final movement. Beethoven winked an eye when he wrote this bit and Munch forecast the joviality before he began a note.

Jaunty, joyous and relaxed, he has added a new serenity to his dynamism which raises him to the stature of conductors we wonder at.

Beethoven's "Fourth," which though more extended in form, still maintains the youthful exuberance of the "First," was played by the Bostonians with the same infectious ardor, rhythmic vitality and extraordinary sense of fluidity. The program closed with the "Pastoral."

A jovial crowd of about 9,000, many dressed in shorts even inside the huge Music Shed, crowded the auditorium and grounds.

Monteux Youthful at 80

Pierre Monteux, the French example of youth at 80, interrupted the week-end's all-Beethoven schedule Saturday night with music which puzzled a lot of the audience, but which produced at its conclusion an ovation for the maestro.

Roger Sessions' suite, "The Black Maskers," is easier to understand and enjoy if the listener knows the programmatic association of the piece, with which many may not have been familiar. This is morbid, grim, fantastic and complex music but fascinating as a musical atmospheric delineation of Andreyeff's play of the same name.

Though Sessions took some bows at the work's conclusion the applause grew in intensity and was sustained for some time as the veteran Monteux returned to acknowledge the enthusiasm. He well deserved the acclaim for what was a highly imaginative and sensitive performance.

He maintained the same remarkable standard in the concluding symphonic poem, "Tod und Verklaerung" by Richard Strauss, receiving again a prolonged and even more militant demonstrations.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-42
Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 12,825

JUL 25 1955

Thousands Hear Beethoven's Works At Tanglewood

Three Beethoven symphonies graced Sunday's program at Tanglewood on a very comfortable, sunshiny afternoon. The thousands enjoying themselves on the lawn may have been a bit warm in the sun, but not uncomfortable and certainly filled to the brim with the symphonic efforts of the composer of the day.

The emphasis this year is very much on Beethoven and all his symphonies are scheduled to be heard some time during the current season. The 1st, 4th and 6th symphonies were given the inestimable Boston Symphony treatment yesterday. Charles Munch at his charming best conducted with enthusiasm and fervor.

When Mr Munch came on to conduct the First Symphony, in C Major, he fairly exuded vitality and well-being. So did the symphony. It is a very clean work, precise without being mincing, a work that the true musician loves to play. One that challenges his ability and delights his musician's mind. Mr. Munch communicated his nice feeling about this symphony to those in the audience and it made one feel almost bouncy, too, when the music forced him to raise up onto his toes.

The Fourth, in B flat Major is not as well known as either the first or the sixth but fitted in very nicely to the first half of the program. It seems rather simple with its charming melodies and sparkling gaiety, but it happens to be about the last symphony in which Beethoven made use of syncopation. Whether or not he felt that off-beat rhythms were too taxing for the instrumentalist of his day is a matter for conjecture. The fact remains tha you will not find him using it to any extent in the remainder of his symphonic works.

His Sixth in F Major, the Pastoral, could have been made to order for the day. There was a comment in the program notes to the effect that this symphony had a monotony about it that was not in the least monotonous.

One felt throughout that there was a wonderfully drowsy feeling it is possible to feel on a warm sunshiny afternoon. There is a monotony about such an afternoon, with all of the sounds of nature to tempt the ear but it is not monotonous to the true lover of the out-of-doors. Beethoven sensed this and being Beethoven was able to capture the spell intrinsically in music as he experienced it. If you have ever heard the marvelous beginnings of thunder which roll from deep inside the double basses in the third movement, and thrilled through the excitement of the storm you will know how well he did capture it. And then the wonderful theme that is smoothly introduced without pause as the fourth movement is entered upon. The markings in the score say "gladsome and thankful feelings after the storm." The satisfaction to be derived from this inspired writing would be impossible to determine.

At an informal gathering, following the concert, it was our privilege to be introduced and to speak to a number of well known people we would not ordinarily expect to meet. The first of these was the Boston Symphony director himself, Mr. Munch. Others met for the first time were Carlos Chavez, the Mexican composer, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, Rockwell Kent, cover artist for the Saturday Evening Post, and many other less famous individuals connected in one way or another with Tanglewood. A trip to the Berkshire Festival is always most rewarding.—F.M.R.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 27 1955

New Music Quartet At Lenox Tonight

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight in the Theatre-Concert Hall the fourth concert in this season's Chamber Music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2; the Quartet in E flat, Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132. The New Music String Quartet is the Quartet-in-Residence of the Internajonal Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Tarmpler, viola; and David Soyer, cello.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

Tanglewood Topics

Lenox, July 23—Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has chosen Regina Sarfaty, a student in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, and Arthur Schoep, assistant stage director to Boris Goldovsky in the opera department, to sing supporting solo roles with Leontyne Price, soprano, in Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which will have its Tanglewood premiere on the Berkshire Festival program of Friday evening, the 29th.

The choral and orchestral work by the noted young American composer, who was a guest teacher of composition at the orchestra's summer music school in 1947, had its world premiere at the hands of the Boston Symphony last winter. Hugh Ross has trained a Tanglewood Choir of 60 voices from his own choral department and comprising also associates from the opera department.

Regina Sarfaty will be remembered by Festival audiences from last year, the young New Yorker's first summer at Tanglewood. She was chosen by Lukas Foss as one of the soloists in the excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" and one of the leads in the concert performance of Stravinsky's "La Pulcinella," which he conducted. She portrayed the role of Mrs. Splinters in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," and was the nurse in Ernst Toch's short opera, "The Princess and the Pea." Twenty years old, Miss Sarfaty was born in Rochester, daughter of a cantor. Aged 19 she entered the Juilliard School of Music in New York, won a scholarship, and last year won the Max Dreyfus Scholarship at Juillard as its outstanding vocal student.

Arthur Schoep, of New York, has sung in Tanglewood opera productions in 1946, 1948, 1952 and 1953. A midwesterner, son of Netherlands immigrants, he studied at the University of South Dakota, Eastman School of Music, and the New England Conservatory. After teaching at several colleges in Texas, he went to Europe on a Fullbright Scholarship and sang recitals, radio concerts and oratorio performances in Holland and Germany. He has sung leading roles with the New Orleans, Fort Worth, Shreveport and Rochester opera companies, and for the past nine years has had leading roles in Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera theaters.

Last season he alternated between singing Figaro in "The Barber of Seville" and acting as associate conductor on tour. Recently he sang Aneas in the first American production of Berlioz' "The Trojans" in Boston, and at the Theatre Royal de la Monnaie in Brussells, under Pierre Monteux, sang Pelleas in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande." Mr. Schoep has also been Boris Goldovsky's assistant stage director at opera workshops in Pittsburgh and Wheeling, W. Va.

Church Singers

Tanglewood opera and chorus students are donating their services to sing in Pittsfield and Dalton churches during the Berkshire Festival season. Soloists at St Stephens Episcopal Church, Pittsfield are: July 17, Mary McKenzie mezzo-soprano winner of this year's Naumberg prize, of Groton-on-Hudson, N. Y.; July 24, Richard E. Krause, tenor, Delmar N. Y.; July 31, Saramae Endich soprano, New York City; Aug. 7 Harold Johnson, tenor, Chicago Aug. 14, Adele Addison, soprano Springfeld.

At First Congregational Church Pittsfield, soloist from Tanglewood are: July 17, Mac Morgan, baritone, Stockbridge; July 24, Mc Henry Boatright, bass, Boston July 31, MacMorgan; Aug. 7, Lee Goebel, soprano, San Diego, Cal. Aug. 14, Harold Johnson, tenor Chicago. Dalton Congregational Dalton, has Miss McKenzie as soloist July 24, Harold Johnson July 31; Jane Paul, Urbana, Ill., on Aug. 7; and Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill., Aug. 14.

Eight Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood this summer are disdaining the relative comforts of Wheatleigh, the male students' dormitory, for the more rugged life, and are camping on the edge of Stockbridge Bowl. Since three are tympanists, two are French horns, and the other three opera singers, they are well equipped to give a nocturnal concert of their own. In one tent are Albert E. Payson, of Springfield, Ill. and Mervin W. Britton, tympanists; in another tenor Leon E. Heiple, of Wilmington, Ill. and Henry Levy, of Kingston, N. Y., both singers. Other tenors are Lloyd S. McCausland, tympanist of Milford, Mass., a repeater from last summer; Lewus G. Rubinstein, of Albany, French horn; Richard E. Krause, Delmar, N. Y., opera singer. Kaid Friedel, of Morristown, N. J. will be joined by his wife later. Friedel is the other horn student.

Fiedler To Visit

When he has completed his free concerts on the Escplanade in Boston, 'Pops'' director Arthur Fiedler is expected to visit Tanglewood in early August, to scout for talent for his three-year-old touring "Pops" orchestra. When the popular maestro came to guest for "Tanglewood on Parade" in 1954 he took back with him Constance Weldon, of Miami, talented tuba player from the student orchestra; David Allan, of Medford, French horn player in the student symphony; and John Grande, of Long Island City, N. Y., student clarinetist. Grande and Allan have returned to Tanglewood for second summers, Grande again with the student symphony, Allan managing the canteen at Wheatleigh.

The second composers' forum, tomorrow evening, will have a novelty, Music for Two Horns, composed in a single week since the author, Michael Sahl, of New York, arrived at the Berkshire Music Center July 3. Sahl, a student here in 1954, shared one of the composition awards made at the end of last summer. Aged 20, Boston-born, he has composed since he was eight years old. He was graduated from Amherst College this spring, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa. The college honored him with a performance at commencement exercises of his Symphony No. 1 in E. He has been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst, and a residence fellowship by Harvard, where he will commence graduate studies in the fall in the school of arts and sciences.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 27 1955

BEETHOVEN QUARTETS AT FESTIVAL TONIGHT

Three weeks still remain in the 1955 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tonight at 8.30 in the theater-concert hall the 4th concert in this season's chamber music series will be given by the New Music String Quartet. The program will be made up of three string quartets by Beethoven—the Quartet in G Major, Opus 18, No. 2; the Quartet in E flat, Opus 127; and the Quartet in A Minor, Opus 132. The New Music String Quartet is the quartet-in-residence of the International Aspen Festival in Colorado. Its members are Broadus Earle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; and David Soyer, cello. Mr. Earle, a native of Chicago, joined his first string quartet at the age of 15 and chamber music has remained his absorbing interest ever since. He is a native of New York and a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music and Columbia University. The violist, Walter Trampler, is a former member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the famed Strub Quartet which made annual concert tours of the European continent. Mr. Soyer, the cellist, was born in Philadelphia and had given several New York recitals. He has also made several solo appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Remaining tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival, which ends on Aug. 14, may be had at the Tanglewood box-office, and telephone reservations are accepted Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be on sale the day of each concert.

[275]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 91,975

JUL 26 1955

NOTED CELLIST WON'T APPEAR AT TANGLEWOOD

Piatigorsky Forced to Cancel, Revised Programs Announced

Three programs of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday the 31st, Wednesday Aug. 10 and Friday Aug. 12, have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, it was announced today because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

GREGORY PIATIGORSKY

The noted musician regretfully wired Mr. Munch yesterday that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform at the Berkshire Festival. Mr. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school operated by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Instead of the concerto for violin and cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at Sunday afternoon's (the 31st) Berkshire Festival concert, on the all-Brahms program, Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Mr. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on Friday evening, Aug. 12, on which Mr. Piatigorsky was announced to solo in Ernest Bloech's "Schelomo" for cello and orchestra, has been revised. For the Bloch selection and also the announced "Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn," Mr. Munch will substitute the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz, which was an outstanding success on the Festival programs of 1954 which observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. The revised program, all French music, will open with the Berlioz, concludes with Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven cello sonatas with Mr. Piatigorsky on the Festival's chamber music series Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, has substituted the following program: Beethoven chamber music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), David Lloyd, tenor; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano.

The complete revised programs are as follows:

Sun., the 31st, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Brahms: Academis Festival Overture
Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77 soloist: Isaac Stern
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Wed., Aug. 10, 8.30 p. m., Theatre, Concert Hall, Chamber Music:
Program of Beethoven trios, quintets, cello sonatas and songs by 6 principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Samuel Mayes, cello; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, French Horn), with David Lloyd, tenor; Ralph Berkowitz, piano.
Trio in B flat, Opus 11, for Clarinet, Cello and Piano; Gino Cioffi, Samuel Mayes, Ralph Berkowitz.
"An die Ferne Geliebte," Six songs for Tenor and Piano; David Lloyd, Ralph Berkowitz Sonata in A, Opus 69, for Cello and Piano; Samuel Mayes, Ralph Berkowitz.
Trio in G, for Flute, Bassoon and Piano; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt, Ralph Berkowitz.
Quintet in E Flat, for Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon, HoOrn and Piano; Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Sherman Walt, James Stagliano, Ralph Berkowitz.

Fri., Aug. 12, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Berlioz: "Symphonie Fantastique"
Debussy: "La Mer"
Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2; Conductor Charles Munch.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 26 1955

Piatigorsky's Ailing Shoulder Forces Tanglewood Changes

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky's ailing shoulder has forced changes in three programs of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Altered Programs

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, said yesterday the cancellation of solo engagements by Mr. Piatigorsky has caused altered programs for next Sunday, for Aug. 10 and for Aug. 12. Mr. Piatigorsky has also cancelled two weeks of cello classes planned for the end of the festival.

Instead of the "Concerto for Violin and Cello" that Mr. Piatigorsky planned to play with violinist Isaac Stern Sunday at an all-Brahms concert conducted by Pierre Monteux, Mr. Stern will perform Brahms' "Concerto for Violin in D Major," Opus 77.

It will be the first performance by Mr. Stern, a frequent festival soloist, of this concerto at Tanglewood.

Aug. 12 Program

Hector Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" will replace Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo for Cello and Orchestra" and the Brahms "Variations on a theme by Haydn" in the Aug. 12 program. Mr. Munch will conduct. Mr. Piatigorsky was to have played the solo in the Bloch piece. The Berlioz piece will open the concert, under the revision, and Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2, will round off a performance of entirely French music.

The substitute program for the Aug. 10 concert in the festival's chamber music series will be announced shortly by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music center. Originally Mr. Piatigorsky was to have played three Beethoven cello sonatas.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

NY State Has Most Pupils At Berkshire Music Center

Total of 110 From the Empire State; Massachusetts Next With 48; Enrollment Shows 18 Foreign Countries Represented

Lenox, July 23—With 38 states and 18 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 405 music students, an increase of 30 over last year, the (thirteenth) session of the Berkshire Music Center is in operation at Tanglewood. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival—the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra—will operate through the end of the festival concerts on August 14. The student body was chosen from more than 650 applications, which resulted from some 1500 inquiries, of which 927 were new this year. Forty percent, of the student body comprises students returning to Tanglewood.

Established in 1940

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the Boston Symphony to provide a campus where young musicians could add add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the Center. While eminent American composer Aaron Copland is abroad this summer enjoying his first leave of absence since the school was founded, his duties as assistant director are being assumed by Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphon's associate conductor and concertmaster. Ralph Berkowitz is dean, and Gail W. Rector is executive secretary.

The distinguished faculty includes such notables as Leonard Bernstein, Mr. Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky, Ingolf Dahl, Seymour Lipkin, and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Gregor Piatigorsky is advisor in chamber music for the latter part of the summer. During 1955 Roger Sessions, Professor of Music at Princeton University, and Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, share the post of guest composer, continuing the tradition of having an outstanding contemporary composer in residence each year, their predecessors having been Ernst Toch, Carlos Chavez, Luigi Dallapiccola, Jacques Ibert, Darius Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Bohuslav Martinu, Paul Hindemith and Olivier Messiaen.

48 From This State

One hundred ten students are registered from New York state, including 73 from New York City's five boroughs. Massachusetts has sent 48 to study in the western hills of the Commonwealth, including 31 from greater Boston. Most highly represented of other states are: Pennsylvania (28), Illinois (20), New Jersey (18), Ohio (17), Michigan (15), Connecticut (10). From the Far West are a total of 14 from California, Washington, Oregon, Wyoming. The South has its highest enrollment in a number of years, including 20 students from Florida, Louisiana, Texas, Georgia and Mississippi.

Canada has nine students, ranging from Sarnia, Ontario to Quebec City, Quebec. Apart from the Canadians, their are 20 foreign students.

A number of the foreign students are composers, best known of them Douglas G. Lilburn of Wellington, N. Z.; Mrs. Michiko Toyama, of Osaka, Japan; William Sydeman, of Sarnia, Ontario, all three studying under American composer Roger Sessions. Mrs. Toyama came from Paris, where she studied composition under Darius Milhaud, formerly of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; she is 41, a war widow with two children. Another Japanese composer, back on the campus for a second summer is Tossi Inchiyanagi, who came from Tokyo to study with Boris Blacher. Eino Rautavaara has come to Tanglewood from Helsinki, Finland, nominated by no less a person in the music world than Jean Sibelius. George Sicilianos, from Athens, Greece, is another Blacher student.

Others from foreign lands are Gabriel de los Rios from Chile (an associate in the opera department); Miss Aviva Einhorn, auditor in the orchestral department, and Ann Fuchs, chamber music, piano, both from France; Miss Genia Palasanian, from Teheran, Iran (violinist in the student orchestra); Israel Borouchoff, of Bat-Yam, Israel (flutist in the student symphony) and Elizabeth Hirsch, of Tel-Aviv, Israel (associate in the opera department); George Mester, of Mexico City (conductor of the student orchestra); Theresa Waeny, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil (Tanglewood Study Group); Rafael Ferer, of Catano, Puerto Rico (coach in the opera associate department); Maria Susana Naidich, Buenos Aires, Argentina (student of opera dramatics); Charles Sweers, Willemstad, Curaco (viola student); Elaine Yano, of Hilo, Hawaii (choral conductor); Norman Chapman, Honolulu (Tanglewood Study Group); Dieter Ernst Van der Bent, of Hilversum, Netherlands (Tanglewood Study Group); Hiroshi Hatoyama, Tokyo (violinist); Joza M. Karas, Czecho-Slovakia (violinist).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,241

JUL 27 1955

Berkshire Revisions

The programs of July 31, Aug. 10 and Aug. 12 at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood have been revised by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, because a shoulder ailment has incapacitated cellist Gregor Piatigorsky.

Instead of the concerto for violin and cello Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern next Sunday afternoon on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin.

On Munch's concert with the Boston Symphony on the evening of Aug. 12, in which Piatigorsky was to solo in Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" for cello and orchestra, the "Symphonie Fantastique" of Hector Berlioz has been substituted.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, who was to play the three Beethoven cello sonatas with Piatigorsky on the festival's chamber music series the evening of Aug. 10, has scheduled instead Beethoven chamber music featuring six principals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,246

JUL 25 1955

Large Crowds At Tanglewood

On Friday night the first of the Berkshire Festival concerts in the big Music Shed was held at Tanglewood with Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: Overture to "Coriolan," the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony.

Pierre Monteux was welcomed back to Tanglewood on Saturday as guest conductor for a program including Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor, the Second Symphony of Beethoven, "Death And Transfiguration," by Strauss, and the "Black Maskers" suite by Roger Sessions.

Mr. Munch returned to the podium Sunday afternoon to present three Beethoven Symphonies, the First, Fourth, and Sixth. There were 8700 persons in the audience on Sunday.

Tanglewood will be On Parade, Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., include demonstraions by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first apperance in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood On Parade."

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8.15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conductt the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront." Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait by Aaron Copland.

Leonard Bernstein will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Krsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats and front sections of the great front sections of the great Music Shed, is a performance of opera at 4:00 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend the demonstrations at 6:00 p. m., by the Berkshire Music Centers symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study group.

The gala program is as follows:

4:00 p.m. — Opera (Students of Department IV) — Formal Gardens (for box-holders and reserved seat patrons only).

5:45 p.m.—Fanfare; welcome address on lawns outside Music Shed.

6:00 p.m. — Simultaneous demonstrations by each department, Berkshire Music Center; Music Shed — Short symphonic works, Orchestra (Dept. I); Theatre-Concert Hall — One-Act operas (Dept. Students); Chamber Music hall — Concert by Chorus (Department I).

7:15 p.m. — Lawn party, picnic supper — Concert by Chorus (Department II students), steps of Administration Building.

8:15 p. m. Gala Concert — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein, Conductor: Suite from "On the Waterfront," Bernstein (Firast performance) "A Lincoln Portrait," Copeland. Narrator: to be announced. Boston "Pops" Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor: Caprice Espagnole, Rimsky-Korsakov; Rhapsody in Blue, for piano and orchestra, Gershwin. Soloist: Leonard Bernstein; Suite from the ballet "Graduation Ball," Strauss-Dorati.

10:30 p.m. — Drawing for Door prizes.

11:15 p.m. — Waltzing on the Lawn.

Mrs. Margaret (Madden) O'Hare, 96, of Westfield, is dead

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200
Citizen (e)
WINSTED, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 3,445

JUL 23 1955

ANNUAL BENEFIT FOR BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Tanglewood will be on parade Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire music center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston symphony orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire festival. The gala day's activities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6,000 seat music shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood on Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles river mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now, until July 30, conducting the art commission pop concerts in San Francisco's civic auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami beach pops concerts in Florida Aug. 7, will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert Aug. 14, returning immediately to Boston to conduct the Esplanade series Aug. 15 to 20.

Munch Opens Beethoven Cycle

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23.—Choosing Beethoven's music for this year's Berkshire Festival because "it expresses everything that a human being can feel," Charles Munch opened the Beethoven cycle last night with the overture to "Coriolanus," the violin concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, and the Seventh Symphony.

Through the emotional content of this program may not have fully complied with this reason, it ranged widely through the happiness, the suffering, and the feeing of exultation common to human being. And Munch approached it all with an intensity, vitality, and ennobling quality altogether human.

The high point of the concert came in the concerto where conductor and soloist achieved a singularly communicative mood.

Stern appeared especially attuned to the inherent beauty of the first movement's second theme and the whole of the slow movement, while Munch contributed an "accompaniment" that was [illegible] music in texture, in sound and subtlety of phrasing. It was a beautifully proportioned interpretation with just the right lilt to the finale.

The drama of "Coriolanus" unfolded convincingly and set the keynote of the human element that Munch stresses. He himself appeared quite human in the performance of the symphony.

Given to contrasts, he found several opportunities to make them, notably slowing down the second movement and then vitalizing the third almost to excess.

He indulged himself in the allegretto as though he were momentarily subject to a strongly personal feeling and again in the finale which he turned into a dramatic orgy as he drove the orchestra into almost a Bacchanalian frency. That swept the audience into a round of cheers quite irrepressible.

That Beethoven will be vitally treated was quite apparent from this concert.

New York Journal-American ★ Sat., July 23, 1955

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200
Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

TANGLEWOOD HAD NOTED GUESTS AT RECENT CONCERTS

Playwrights and Producers In Visit to the Music Festival

Lenox, July 23—Recent guests at Berkshire Festival concerts have included the playwright, S. N. Behrman (author of the musical comedy hit "Fanny" in New York), whose wife is a sister of violinist Jascha Heifetz; Ethel Linder Reiner, producer of the N. Richard Nash comedy hit of the past Broadway season, "The Rainmaker"; Richard Horner, company manager of the Broadway musical hit, "Damn Yankees," and his wife, Patricia Peardon, who is featured in the New York hit melodrama, "The Desperate Hours"; Mike Wallace, of Columbia Broadcasting System, narrator for last season's popular "On a Sunday Afternoon" program, and last season star of the farce comedy "Reclining Figure" which is shortly to be done at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Mr. Wallace is a brother-in-law of Boston Symphony Orchestra assistant concertmaster, Alfred Krips.

* * *

Gregor Piatigorsky is expected at Elm Court, Lenox, on Thursday, July 28, to commence the classes he will hold in chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center during its final two weeks. The eminent cellist appears three times on Festival programs this summer, playing the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello with Isaac Stern on Sunday afternoon, July 31; giving a sonata program with Ralph Berkowitz Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, and performing Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" Friday, Aug. 12.

* * *

Boris Blacher, director of Berlin's Hochschule fur Musik, who is guest composer at Tanglewood, had one night in New York before coming to Tanglewood to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The distinguished composer revealed in an interview this week that he had spent his first evening in the U. S. in the orchestra pit of the St. James Theater on Broadway, watching from that vantage of a performance of the musical comedy hit, "The Pajama Game." Professor Blacher had a relative in the pit orchestra, and volunteered "to play the celeste, or something. . .but they all seemed quite busy, so I had nothing to do." The German composer was delighted by this first sample of the American musical: "We have nothing like it in Europe. It is a genre unique to the American stage and American music with music, dancing, and story fused into a perfect whole."

* * *

Seventy members of the chorus of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra have been invited by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony to appear with the [illegible] the Festival Chorus of the students of the Berkshire Music Center, and soloists Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm in the Festival concert performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with which the Berkshire Festival will close at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14. The Springfield Chorus, which took part in the Berlioz "Requiem" in a Festival concert last year, is being trained by Hugh Ross, head of the Tanglewood choral department, and his assistant, John Krueger, of Youngstown, O.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

Second Thoughts in Music

Beaux Art Trio, Symphony Highlight Festival Week

Mayes' Performance of Boccherini Cello Concerto Is A Personal Triumph

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The second week of Berkshire Music Festival concerts provided two highlights. The first was the recital by the Beaux Arts Trio, during which three Beethoven trios for piano, violin and cello were heard. The second was the concert by the chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Leonard Bernstein, a concert devoted to the music of Mozart.

Audience Is Attentive

There were, of course some other good routine performances by the chamber orchestra under Charles Munch, particularly a concert of French music last Sunday during which Mr. Munch provided interesting interpretations of works by Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Mihaud and Honegger. Another concert was enlivened by the distinguished playing of first cellist Samuel Mayes, whose performance of the Boccherini cello concerto was a personal triumph.

The hot and humid weather has kept the audiences down, we believe, but those who have come have found the effort worthwhile. It is a singularly attentive audience whether listening to chamber music in the concert hall, or whether spread out on the lawn during a chamber orchestra concert.

The Beaux Arts Trio is newly formed but promises to attain a distinguished place in the ranks of chamber music ensembles. The members are Menahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violinist and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist, splendid musicians who form a well-integrated ensemble. The performance of the "Ghost" and "Archduke" Trios were marked by musical understanding, imagination and superb playing. Pressler is a brilliant pianist with strong powers of projection and Guilet is concertmaster of the former NBC orchestra, know known as the "Symphony of the Air." Greenhouse has long been known as an excellent performer. The opening trio was the "Trio in C minor, OP. 1 No. 3." Chamber music recitals are all devoted to the works of Beethoven.

There was more than a bit of the old glamor and excitement of Koussevitzky days when Leonard Bernstein took over for the all-Mozart concert. The players were on the alert and the audience was excited even before the concert began.

Is Fine Conductor

Bernstein is today a fine conductor whose knowledge of what he is conducting is profound. As usual, he conducted without score, providing interesting and sensitive readings of the overture to "Don Giovanni" and "Symphony No. 36 in G Major" known as the "Linz." He conducted and played the piano remarkably well in the "Piano Concerto in G major." One wonders when he has time to practice between conducting, composing and teaching.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, was the soloist in two arias from "Idomeneo" and a seldom heard airia from "The Marriage of Figaro." As usual this fine artist sang with technical fluency. She is complete mistress of the art of song. Whatever she does is distinguished and right. The voice is neither particularly large or beautiful, but her art is incomparable.

The first concert of the week led by Charles Munch was devoted primarily to the music of Vivaldi; music as fresh in texture and vital as the day it was written. Young Samuel Mayes, first cellist with the orchestra provided a handsome performance of the Boccherini cello concerto. His tone is large and rich in color. His success with the audience and with his colleagues was instantaneous. Incidentally this concert took place on the hottest night of the week.

Has Flexibility

Mr. Munch has a fondness for the music of Vivaldi and he provided fine, objective readings of the "Concerto Gresso in D minor, Op. 3 No. 11" and the final concerto Grosso in B minor, for Four Violins and String orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10." The chamber orchestra played with unusual flexibility and responsiveness.

Hugh Ross, heard of the choral department, made his first appearance of the season leading a small chorus through the intricacies of Vivaldi's "Gloria" Mass. Mr. Ross works his magic on a chorus and it sings as it never sang before, sometimes better than it knows how. So it was in the "Gloria." There was a fine blending of parts, faultless intonation and clear enunciation. The two solists were Sara May Endich, soprano and Sadie McCollum, contralto. Both filled their assignments admirably.

Mr. Munch was at his very best last Sunday when he led the chamber orchestra through a program of French music. Most of the music was contemplative, smooth and lovely, as for instance the Suite from the Opera "Dardanus" by Rameau and the ever fascinating "Le Tombeau de Couperin" by Ravel. Then came a "Pavane" by Faure and a "Serenade" by Milhaud. This bright and piquant Serenade was a fine preface to Honegger's Fourth Symphony. Mr. Munch made this symphony known to the United States in 1948 during a concert by the N. Y. Philharmonic.

This afternoon at 2.30, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three Beethoven symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth.

Play at Tanglewood Wednesday Night

The New Music String Quartet performs three Beethoven quartets in the fourth of the Wednesday night Chamber Music concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. These performances will take place in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall next Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. Proceeds are to the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood. Members of the ensemble are Broadus Erle, violin; Matthew Raimondi, violin; David Soyer, cello; Walter Trampler, viola.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

In Premiere Friday

Regina Sarfaty, of New York City, second-year student of Tanglewood's opera department, and Arthur Schoep, also of New York, are shown here with Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Munch has selected Miss Sarfaty and Mr. Schoep to sing solo roles, with Leontyne Price, soprano, in the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" at next Friday night's Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-0068

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,350

JUL 21 1955

Tanglewood In High Gear

The Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moved into high gear this week when the entire 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, having completed its spring and early summer assignments with the Boston "Pops" and the free Esplanade concerts on the Charles River in Boston moved over to the hills of Western Massachusetts to inaugurate the annual series of weekend concerts in the Music Shed which will continue until the conclusion of the Festival on August 14, under the direction of Charles Munch, the symphony's music director.

Again this year 12 concerts will be performed in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, open on three sides so the music may spill out on the spacious lawns where thousands of music-lovers assemble under the stars and tall pines and elms, or picnic in Sunday sunshine. In 1954, when all attendance records were broken, the 12 Shed concerts attracted an audience of 129,925 persons, for an average attendance of 9,197.

* * *

A feature of the Shed series in 1955 will be music by Beethoven. Mr. Munch has scheduled performances of all nine symphonies, "Fidelio" (Act II) in concert form, the violin concerto, two piano concertos, three overtures and the "Missa Solemnis" (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, late Music Director of the Orchestra).

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts contains two all-Beethoven concerts by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the first on Friday evening with Isaac Stern as soloist, the second on Sunday afternoon; and a program of Bach, Beethoven, Sessions and Richard Strauss, on Saturday evening, conducted by Pierre Monteux, who was music director of the Boston Symphony from 1919-1924, and who has been a regular guest on the Tanglewood podium since 1951.

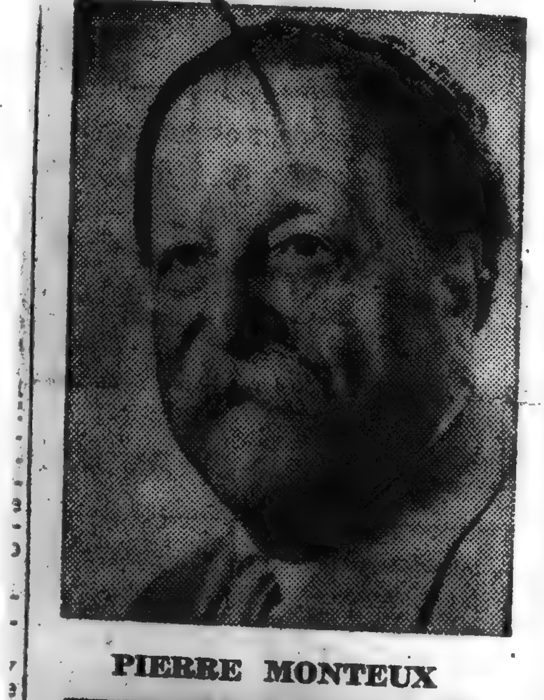
* * *

A feature of Mr. Monteux's concert is the Tanglewood premiere of the suite, in four movements, comprised from seven incidental numbers Roger Sessions composed for the play, "The Black Maskers", by Leonid Andreyev, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. Mr. Sessions, professor of Music at Princeton University, is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the first of four Saturday morning public rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m. (July 23).

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—The Boston Symphony Orchestra which attracted overflow crowds last year at Tanglewood is doing the same thing this week as it opened its 16th season of 24 concerts in the hills of western Massachusetts.



PIERRE MONTEUX

ISAAC STERN

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● Richmond 2-0068

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,014

JUL 21 1955

Three celebrated conductors share the podium of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its 1955 Berkshire Festival Concerts, Tanglewood.

Left to right, Charles Munch, Symphony Director, opens the Music Shed concerts on July 22 with an all-Beethoven program; Pierre Monteux, guest conductor for the Festival concerts, July 23, July 31, and Aug. 13; Leonard Bernstein, guest conductor for the Aug. 5 concert. Mr. Bernstein heads the Berkshire music center's department of orchestra and conducting.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 101,022

JUL 28 1955

COMPOSER AND MEMBERS OF OPERA CAST

Members of the cast of "Romeo and Juliet," one-act opera by Boris Blacher, to be given Monday night by the opera department at Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, are shown with the composer, seated center. They are, from left: Peyton Higgison of Mobile, Ala., Regina Safarty of New York City, Lynn Detwiler of Altoona, Pa., Gwendolyn Belle of St. Louis, Mo., Naomi Farr of New York City, Harold Johnson of Chicago, Ill., and Robert Kerns of Utica, Mich.

3 Operas Planned At Lenox on Monday

Special to The Gazette

LENOX, July 28—Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, will be performed by opera students of the Berkshire Music Center at 8.30 p. m. Monday in the theater-concert hall.

"Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher, a guest composer this year at the center; "Ariana Abandoned" by Darius Milhaud, and "Comedy on the Bridge" by Bohuslav Martinu will be given one evening only. A portion of the program will also feature selections by choral students at the center.

The performance is open to those who support the Summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Of the three operas, only "Comedy on the Bridge" has been presented before at the center. It was performed in 1951.

They are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

The choral portion of the program, featuring works of Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, was prepared by Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's chorus department.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the opera department will present the world premiere of a one-act opera, "The Rope," by Louis Mennini, a member of the faculty of the Eastman School o Music in Rochester, N. Y.

It will be the first opera commissioned at Tanglewood unde the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, inaugurated in 1953.

"The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name, produced originally by The Provincetown Players April 26, 1917 in Provincetown.

On the same program will be the first American production of "Zaide," an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart.

AREA MEMBERS OF BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER—Three area members of the Berkshire Music center recline on the lawn at Tanglewood: Left to right, Florence Dunn of Williamstown, assistant director of the Tanglewood study group; Robert Paige Ceeley of Colonial Village, Williamstown, a student of composition under Composer Roger Sessions; and Christine Cardillo of 149 Pleasant street, soprano in the Center Opera department. Miss Cardillo, whose brother, Pasquale, is a clarinetist with the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sing with the orchestra Aug. 6 at the performance of Act 2 of Beethoven's opera Fidelio. Her role is that of Marzelie.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,326

JUL 25 1955

Shed Concert First Series Ends With 8,700 at Festival

An audience of 8,700 persons was on hand at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon, as the ~~Boston Symphony orchestra~~ wound up the first series of shed concerts in the 1955 Berkshire Music festival with an all-Beethoven program.

24,000 Over Week-End

The crowd swelled the week-end attendance to over 24,000 persons.

Charles Munch conducted yesterday's program, which was devoted to the first, fourth and sixth symphonies of Beethoven.

On Saturday evening Pierre Monteux was on the podium. The program that night included the "Pascaglia and Fugue in C Minor" by Bach, in the Respighi arrangement; the Beethoven second symphony, "The Black Maskers Suit," by Sessions, and Strauss' "Death and Transfiguration."

The fourth week of the festival will get underway Wednesday evening when the New Music String quartet is heard in a program of Beethoven quartets. That concert will be held at 8.30 o'clock in the theater-concert hall.

Second Series

The second series of shed concerts will include programs on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Munch will conduct the first two concerts, while Mr. Monteux will appear again on Sunday afternoon.

One change was announced in the Sunday program. Due to illness, Gregor Piatagorsky, 'cellist, will be unable to appear with violinist Isaac Stern in the Brahms concerto for violin and 'cello. In place of that work, Mr. Stern will be soloist in the Brahms concerto for violin in D major.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

Premiere at Tanglewood On Friday Night Program

Samuel Barber's 'Prayers of Kierkegaard' Included; Munch to Conduct All-Beethoven Program Saturday Night; New Music String Quartet to Play Wednesday

Lenox, July 23 — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on the 27th in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Premiere Scheduled

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role.

Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Double Concerts

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program on Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed a 10 a. m. (July 30), for which nominal charge is made of $1 fo the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete program

Wed. July 27, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music:
String Quartets—G major, Opus 18, N 2 .... Beethove
E flat major, Opus 127
A minor, Opus 132
The New Music String Quartet (Broad Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; David Soyer, cello).
Fri. July 29, 8.30 p. m., Music She
Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Suite "Water Music" .... Hand
Symphony No. 4, in D minor .. Schuman
"Prayers of Kierkegaard" ...... Barb
Soloists: Leontyne Price, Soprano; Regin Sarfaty, Mezzo-Soprano; Arthur Schoe Tenor.
Tanglewood Choir of Students from D partment II (Chorus) and IV (Opera, a sociates) trained by Hugh Ross
Symphony No. 4 in E minor .... Brahm
Charles Munch, conductor
Sat. July 30, 8.30 p. m., Music She
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(All-Beethoven)
Overture to "Egremont" ...... Beethov
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Charles Munch, conductor
Sun. July 31, 8.30 p. m. Music She
Boston Symphony Orchestra:
(All-Brahms)
Academic Festival Overture .... Brah
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregory Piat gorsky
Symphony No. 1, in C minor
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Tomorrow's Music Shed conce by the Boston Symphony Orchest will find Charles Munch conduc ing and all-Beethoven program, t first, fourth and sixth ("Past rale") symphonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 106,753

JUL 24 1955

Berkshire Music Center Members

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center who hail from the Berkshire area. Left to right: Florence Dunn of Williamstown, assistant director of the Tanglewood Study Group; Robert Paige Ceeley of Williamstown, student of composition under the well known American composer Roger Sessions and Christine Cardillo, of North Adams, soprano in the school's opera department. Christine has been chosen to sing a solo at the Boston Symphony's performance of Act II of Beethoven's Fidelio on Aug. 6. Her brother plays clarinet in the orchestra.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-0068

Lakeville Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,771

JUL 21 1955

COMING CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on July 27 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the weekend's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role.

Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the music of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program of Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Conductor Munch will present on Friday evening, July 22, Beethoven's overture to "Coriolanus," Violin Concerto, 7th Symphony; Saturday evening, July 23, Pierre Monteux conducting an orchestral program of Bach-Respighi: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, in D major; Sessions: Suite from "The Black Maskers;" Strauss: "Death and Transfiguration." Sunday afternoon, July 24: Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program: the First, Fourth and Sixth ("Pastorale") Symphonies.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 ● RIchmond 2-4200

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 91,501

JUL 24 1955

MUSIC

Boston's Munch Outlines The Tricks Of His Trade

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

So you want to lead a band! It certainly looks like a pleasant and easy way to make a living—the musicians do all the work while the conductor just waves a magical wand and the music flows forth in the manner of an Aladdin rubbing his lamp. The only catch in the whole idea is our lack of the "secret words"—in this case, knowledge and experience, without which any natural talents possessed would fail to arouse the "musical genii" who make the music. With a group of the most temperamental characters—musicians—and a fickle public to contend with, a successful conductor truly has to be a modern Aladdin!

Anyone who harbors any illusions about conducting would do well to read "I Am a Conductor," by Charles Munch, who is now directing his great Boston Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival. While his recent tome is of principle interest to musicians and in particular, embryo conductors, the layman can learn much from a perusal of the Boston conductor's illuminative work, recently issued by the Oxford University Press. ($2.75).

Most of us are willing to call it a day after eight hours of labor (minus coffee breaks). Mr. Munch puts in 12 to 14 hours a day studying scores in preparation for his concerts. We look forward to two or three weeks of leisure during an annual vacation. The Boston conductor spends his vacations studying—and conducting! A conductor's profession literally consumes every hour of every day, 365 days a year!

In his book, the Boston conductor writes with imagination and great skill. We learn that conductors are both born and made. Great conductors combine a training and apprenticeship with "inner exaltation, an all-consuming flame, and a magnetism that can bewitch." Many are called but few are chosen! Mr. Munch is certainly an outstanding example of his own words.

Here are a few revealing comments taken from the Munch volume:

"A conductor worthy of the name is too busy making his feelings known to the orchestra to remember which is his better profile or to guess what flattering pose may have the best effect on the people sitting behind him."

"The new conducting diploma is like a new driving license. It is better not to use it on the super-highways without some more practice."

"Many conductors have 'war-horses' that they ride at certain times, but if they wish to travel far they must spare their mounts."

"Music should be treated chivalrously, not put on parade."

"Music stops and starts, breathes. You must find out where and when."

"We (the conductors) can make mistakes. It happens to everyone. But if you interpret music as you feel it, with ardor and faith, with all your heart and with complete conviction, I am certain that even if the critics attack you, God will forgive you!"

"The right hand draws, the left hand colors."

"These days mechanics and athletics have taken over everything and 'objectivity' is demanded of us. We should be ashamed of our feelings, ashamed of being sensitive or even sentimental, in the best sense of the word. We are still allowed to listen with our ears, but not with out hearts. We may no longer even sing with our spirit."

"In the end, it is the public who writes our history, who names the masterpieces and the great interpreters—and it is hard to please. There is only one valid, certain, effective way to keep its favor: to practice our art with frankness and joy and to love music more than anything else in the world."

Berkshire Festival Programs This Week

Mr. Munch will conduct two of this week's Berkshire Festival programs, those on Friday and Saturday evenings, while guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, will conduct next Sunday afternoon's concert.

Friday evening's concert will consist of Handel's "Water Music"; Schumann's Symphony No. 4, in D minor; Brahms' Fourth Symphony and the "Prayers of Kierkgard," by Samuel Barber. The latter will have Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, and Arthur Schoep, tenor, as the soloists supported by the Tanglewood Choir, composed of 60 students from the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Sarfaty is a student of opera dramatics at the school this summer, while the tenor is the assistant director in Boris Goldovsky's opera department.

On Saturday evening, Mr. Munch will present his third all-Beethoven program in the current Festival with the celebrated pianist, Rudolph Serkin, as the guest artist. Serkin will be the soloist in a performance of the "Emperor Concerto" while the orchestral portion of the program will consist of the Overture to "Egmont" and the Symphony No. 3.

Sunday afternoon's concert will be an all-Brahms program, with violinist Isaac Stern and cellist Gregor Piatigorsky as the soloists. The two artists will be heard with the orchestra in the Concerto for Violin and Cello. The Academic Festival Overture and the First Symphony will make up the balance of the program.

The week's Festival chamber music event has the New Music Quartet scheduled for an all-Beethoven program of string quartets on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Pops Managed To Break 'Jinx'

The Pop concerts finally managed to break an attendance "jinx" which plagued the first two programs this season. For the first time in the current series, the third concert, last week, got over the 10,000 mark. This was most encouraging, though the three remaining events will have to do considerably better than this, just to break even, to say nothing of making the season a financial success.

The fourth Bowl concert on August 2 should produce a "full house," what with the scheduled debut there of one of the most colorful figures in the current musical scene. Oscar Levant—pianist, wit, author, actor, and a stormy petrel in the musical field, will make his first Bowl appearance in this next concert. This "one man show" promises to give his listeners an evening of unusual entertainment, both musically and generally speaking. Next to Jose Iturbi, Levant has probably been seen and heard by more people than any other contemporary pianist. He doesn't even need a piano to keep things humming, as the millions who have seen him on TV and heard him on radio programs are well aware.

Levant has but recently returned to the concert field after an extended absence due to illness so we are most fortunate that he will appear here this season. He will perform the favorite Tschaikovsky Concerto with the New Haven Symphony in the coming program.

MONDAY, JULY 11, 1955 Schenectady Gazette

Bach 'Mass in B Minor' Featured at Tanglewood

By D. E. RITZ

The Bach "Mass in B minor" was featured yesterday as the final program of the first week of the Boston Symphony's Tanglewood music festival.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the work, which is without peer in the choral field, and a chamber orchestra of the first chair men of the Boston Symphony assisted.

Vocal soloists included Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

The chorus was combined from the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society and had been prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth.

Special soloists within the orchestra included Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; James Stagliano, horn, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Louis Speyer and Jean Devergie, oboi d-Amore; E. Power Biggs, organ; Daniel Pinkham, harpsichord; and Roger Voisin, trumpet.

The audience, which numbered 3,585 according to gate records, filled the Theatre-Concert Hall and the adjoining bleachers and overflowed to the lawn, with campchairs, blankets and the thick Tanglewood grass as seating facilities.

It was most warm in the Theatre-Concert Hall but no one thought of that once the music started. For over two hours one was privileged to hear a monumental work, to get a glimpse of a beauty that is beyond and above mere perfection.

* * *

MUNCH IS A SUPERB orchestra man. He knows instruments and their techniques, he knows how to focus color, the value of contrasts and above all he is ever conscious of music as art.

There is no figure, no nuance too small to escape his attention. He is a great conductor and a sincere musician.

There were times when the various instrumental figures predominated, others when color was most striking, or a peculiar rhythmic figure caught one's ear. Other times the sheer beauty of the voices proved breath-taking.

Bach is monumental and the "Mass" defies description.

* * *

DURING THE SIX YEARS that Munch has conducted the Boston Symphony the Tanglewood festival concerts have grown both numerically and musically. Today the summer season of the Boston orchestra is quite as important, though not as long, as its home town program and it reaches an ever-widening audience.

The festival will continue through Aug. 14 with major programs on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Offerings this week include a Beethoven trio program Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. by the Beaux Arts Trio, including Menahem Pressler, piano; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Friday evening chamber orchestra program and Munch will conduct the Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs.

The first four programs last week drew 4,787 persons, an increase of 1,437 over last year.

Public Events

Eagle 7/12

Tonight

2:00-9:00—Flower show by Lenox Horticultural Society, Town Hall, Lenox.

5:30-7:00—Public supper. Hancock Baptist Church.

8:30—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra with Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Charles Munch conducting Beethoven program. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

Tomorrow

10:00 a.m.-9:00 p.m.—Flower Show by Lenox Horticultural Society, Town Hall, Lenox.

10:00 a.m.—Student chamber music concert, Tanglewood chamber music hall, Lenox. (BMC Friends)

2:30 p.m.—Berkshire Festival concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra with Isaac Stern, violin soloist; Pierre Monteux conducting Brahms program. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

8:30 p.m.—Composers' forum. Tanglewood chamber music hall, Lenox. (BMC Friends)

7/22 SCHENECTADY GAZETTE

CHARLES MUNCH PIERRE MONTEUX
Conducting at Tanglewood

Beethoven Sonata Concert Huge Tanglewood Success

By D. E. RITZ

Isaac Stern, who will be the soloist with the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Beethoven violin concerto tonight at the Tanglewood Music Shed, presented a Beethoven Sonata program Wednesday night in the Theatre-Concert Hall with Alexander Zakin, pianist.

* * *

THE INTIMATE THEATER proved ideal. There was not an empty seat and the overflow audience listened from the cool lawns of the estate.

Violinists and sonata players from far and wide were there and a more informed audience would not be possible. Yet the artistry of the performance was such that new beauties were revealed in every phrase.

Sonatas played were those in A major, opus 12, number 2; number 5 in F major, opus 24 ("Spring") and number 7 in C minor, opus 30, number 2.

An encore, a rare event in the Tanglewood tradition, was the "Scherzo" from the Sonata in D minor by Brahms.

THE PERFORMANCES were presented with artistic restraint and in keeping with the Beethoven tradition. The violin sung, cajoled and the performance of both the violinist and pianist was emotional yet never sentimental.

The two colleagues presented a performance that rates high in the chamber music ideal with delicate phrasing and translucent melodies. One was never aware of the astounding technique which was the basis of the beauty but felt always the inner significance of the music.

In contrast to the Beethoven one noted the elegance of style of the Brahms' "Scherzo."

STERN DONATED his services for the Wednesday night program for the benefit of the Tanglewood evolving scholarship fund. He returned last fall from his second round-the-world tour in 16 months and since then has played in more than 50 American cities on his 13th coast-to-coast tour. He has just returned from his fourth series of appearances in Israel, having also appeared as soloist with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra on its European tour in May.

He will play tonight in the Shed program and will play again on July 31 under Pierre Monteux in the Brahms' Double Concerto for violin and 'cello with Gregor Piatigorsky as the assisting artist.

TONIGHT'S SYMPHONY program, which will open at 8:30 o'clock, will be led by Charles Munch and will include the Beethoven Overture to "Coriolan," the violin concerto and the Symphony number 7 in A major, opus 92.

Pierre Monteux will conduct tomorrow evening. His program will include the Bach "Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor," orchestrated by Ottorino Resphighi; the Beethoven Symphony number 2 in D major, opus 36; Roger Sessions' "Orchestral Suite from the "The Black Maskers" and Richard Strauss "Tod and Verklarung," tone poem, opus 24.

The Sunday afternoon program, to be directed by Munch, will include three Beethoven symphony symphonies, number 1 in C major, opus 21, number 4 in B-flat major, opus 60 and number 6 in F major, opus 68, "Pastoral."

Climax at Tanglewood

Republican 7/31

The annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood is approaching its climax. After today's all-Brahms program, only six more Music Shed concerts remain and only two more programs of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall. The best part of a year is required to complete preparations for the six-week summer season at Lenox.

Friday night will be marked by the presentation of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with chorus, soloists, and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of the brilliant young conductor, Leonard Bernstein. Of the other remaining Shed concerts, one will be conducted by the venerable Pierre Monteux, the other four by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, including a performance Saturday night of the second act of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio," and excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdamerung," and as the culmination of the Festival, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, Beethoven's massive ninth, or choral, symphony.

Among the soloists in both the "Missa Solemnis" and the Symphony No. 9 is Springfield's own Adele Addison. Once in Vienna, in 1824, when both these works were presented on the same program, Beethoven, who was on the platform, had to be turned toward the audience to "see" the overwhelming applause, which he had grown too deaf to hear.

An added feature, the annual "Tanglewood on Parade," also is still ahead, on Thursday, Aug. 11, when the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, led by Arthur Fiedler, will add zest and color to the festivities.

Tanglewood now is one of the great summer music centers of the world, along with Salzburg, Edinburgh and Glyndbourne. Tanglewood has the quality and the setting, and year by year is accumulating tradition as well as building for the future with its many student activities. Rarely do the dreams and aspirations of the founders of any cultural enterprise reach so rich a fulfillment.

Honorary Committee Named For Benefit at Tanglewood

Union 7/30

Many Boxes Already Reserved at Berkshire Music Center for Concert On Thursday, Aug. 11

Honorary committee members for "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday, August 11, are announced today. They are Mrs. William N. Bullard of Lenox, Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox of Exeter, N. H.

At a recent meeting of the committee Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, announced that 31 boxes had been reserved for the Shed concert at 8.30 p. m. Box holders include Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Monroe B. England, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gibson, Mrs. S. Ralph Jones, Donald B. Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Wellington, all of Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. William Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly, and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond.

Also, Miss Anna Alexandre, Miss Gladys Greene, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Huxley, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Miss Constance Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mrs. John L. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern, and Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde of Lenox.

Others are Mrs. Charles Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe of Stockbridge; Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Beinecke, Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Strau, 2d, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton; Mr. and Mrs. James Phinney Baxter, 3d, of Williamstown; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Sokolsky of Otis; Julius Fleischmann of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Ethel Cramer of Rockville, Conn.

Those wishing to reserve boxes for "Tanglewood on Parade" should contact Miss Margo Miller at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, chairman of the prize committee for the benefit, announced the following prizes: a season ticket for two for the 1956 Shed concerts, a collection of Beethoven symphonies recorded by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky and Charles Munch, and a life-time subscription to "High Fidelity Magazine." Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky has donated a collection of her pencil drawings of famous musical personalities to be bid for in a silent auction. Other prizes will be announced later.

SERKIN IS HAILED AT TANGLEWOOD

Rep 7/31

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 30—It would be easy to wax lyrical tonight for all the ingredients of a poem were here.

There were one full moon, gleaming stars, a performance of Beethoven's "Concerto for Piano, No. 5 in E-flat Major" by Rudolf Serkin as fine as we ever expect to hear, and an audience of 15,500 almost filling the shed and dotting the lawns to the manor house. In the last five years the largest single performance attendance has been 15,800.

Brass Section Excels

Once again Charles Munch planned a gala all-Beethoven program. It opened with an impressive performance of the Overture to Goethe's "Egmont," one in which the wonderful brass section of the orchestra was in top form. Mr. Munch conducted a concise, finely balanced performance.

Then came the "Emperor" piano concerto with Rudolf Serkin as soloist. Mr. Serkin appeared relaxed, calm, and at the peak of his powers. With the superb collaboration of the orchestra and Mr. Munch, Mr. Serkin provided a stunning performance. From the great opening chords, through the ornamentation and florid passages of the opening movement to the sheer magnificence of the finale, this was a performance so finely conceived, so exact as to detail, and entrancing in its colorations, that we cannot remember hearing one that was finer. The result was one of the greatest ovations any soloist has ever received at Tanglewood. The only other comparable one we remember was won by Arthur Rubinstein, when he played a Brahms piano concerto with the orchestra, a few seasons ago.

"Eroica" Is Played

The program concluded with the "Symphony No. 3 in E-flat Major" known as the "Eroica." This is one of the symphonies we must hear several times during a season, if only on records. In his third symphony, Beethoven speaks his mind, throws away the shackles of convention and yet keeps within traditional form. There is absolute defiance in the opening movement, mystery, yes, in the funeral march, but death is not feared. The exaltation of the final variation is a jubilant affirmation to all who will listen. Mr. Munch provided a searching interpretation, bringing to light its inherent strength. It was as illuminating a performance as has been offered this season.

Pierre Monteux takes over tomorrow afternoon in an all-Brahms program. He will open with the "Academic Festival Overture." Isaac Stern will play the violin concerto, in place of the concerto for violin and cello because of the indisposition of Gregor Piatagorsky. The program will close with the "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor."

TOURING DEFICITS

NYT 7/31

Funds Harder to Raise In 1955 Than 1930

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

The Programs

It would be pleasant if the Philharmonic had American works of equal stature in its repertory for this European trip. There should be a more determined effort to give American music a better showing on future tours abroad by our orchestras. But considering that the Philharmonic's programs were worked out weeks ago, the prominence of the Shostakovich and Prokofieff symphonies may have unexpected goodwill value. Although the orchestra is not going to the Soviet Union, that country ought to be gratified at this tribute to its music.

Speaking of Russia and touring American orchestras, one should add here that the offer of the Boston Symphony to visit the Soviet Union in its 1956 European junket is exciting. It ought to be received with enthusiasm in Moscow and Washington. It should, of course, be closed as soon as possible, and it should lead to an extensive exchange of American and Russian cultural attractions.

SAMUEL BARBER WORK IS HAILED AT TANGLEWOOD

Union 7/30

"Prayers of Kierkegaard" Given First Festival Performance

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July [illegible]—The first Tanglewood performance of Samuel Barber's setting of "Prayers of Kierkegaard" for mixed chorus, soprano solo and orchestra was the feature of the opening concert of this second week of concerts in the shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Other works on the program were Sir Hamilton Harty's arrangement of a suite from the "Water Music" by Handel; the "Symphony No. 4 in D Minor" by Schumann and the "Symphony No. 4 in E Minor" by Brahms.

We have seldom seen Charles Munch in so forceful a vein. He conducted vehemently and with apparent relish for all the works. The result was some notably fine playing by the orchestra and tremendous enthusiasm from the audience of 7677. Weather conditions were perfect, with a beautiful moon lighting up the Stockbridge Bowl.

Mr. Barber is one of the most significant of American composers. He is a fine craftsman and also a melodist of the first order. He knows also how to write for the voice and the solo in his "Prayers of Kierkegaard" was admirably sung by soprano Leontyne Price. Philosopher Kierkegaard's words are noble and so is the music to which Mr. Barber has set them. The Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross sang very well, particularly in the more quiet passages where the words could be understood. In moments of affirmation of exaltation the music is turbulent, making understanding of text practically impossible.

Mood Is Happy

The program tonight was, on the whole, a happy one. The "Water Music" by Handel remains fresh and charming and Mr. Munch offered attractive interpretive contrasts. Schumann's Symphony is the happy evocation of a happily married man. There are no breaks between movements to spoil its mood. Romance, grave and vociferous, is in this music which might well be called the first tone poem of them all.

Brahms' Fourth Symphony is of more rugged stuff. It is a solid work, individual and original. Von Bulow found it of "incomparable strength from start to finish." The performance tonight was broad, all embracing, constantly surging forward. It was a performance as strong as the work. One thing that always interests us when Mr. Munch conducts is the manner in which he will approach that work. Seldom have we known him to conduct a reading in the same manner. This makes for interesting comparison, if nothing else.

Tomorrow night Rudolf Serkin will be heard in Beethoven's "Concerto for Piano, No. 5 in E-Flat Major." The other works on the program will be the overture to "Egmont" and "Symphony No. 3 in E Flat Major."

Pierre Monteux will preside Sunday afternoon, offering an all-Brahms program. Isaac Stern will play the Violin Concerto and the other works will be the "Academic Festival Overture" and "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor."

MONTEUX SHOWS MUSICAL SKILL

Rep 7/24

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 23—When the 80-year-old Pierre Monteux stepped on the stage of the shed tonight there was a burst of affectionate applause from the audience and the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

His step is a bit slower than in the past and his motions are deliberate but little escapes him and his readings were scholarly and often exciting. The years have deepened his appreciation of the messages of Bach and Beethoven and his interest in contemporary music is as keen as ever, witness a remarkable reading of the orchestral suite from "The Black Maskers," by Roger Sessions one of the stalwarts of the Berkshire School of Music.

An audience of [illegible] was on hand, in spite of threatening weather and the heat and humidity.

The program opened with a massive performance of the "Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor" by Bach, in the Respighi. Of the several orchestral arrangements of this work, it seems to us that the Respighi is the most satisfactory for it has been conceived in purely orchestral terms. The men play for Mr. Monteux as they used to play for Koussevitzky.

It was a magnificent performance, tone piled atop tone, yet there was the utmost clarity in the fugue and the finale of the fugue where Resphigi makes use of the combined forces was overpowering in its impact.

From the excitement of this work to the pure beauty of Beethoven's "Second Symphony in D Major," was no anti-climax, for Mr. Monteux and his men provided a beautiful performance. It was a luminous performance with delicately varieted colors, flashes of brilliance and dynamic contrasts.

The Larghetto is one of the loveliest ever written and it was played with incomparable beauty of tone. The Sherzo was somewhat on the diliberate side, but it was delicate and effective. Spirits run high in the final Allegro and an audience reacts accordingly.

Black Maskers

Following intermission, we heard a performance of the orchestral suite which Mr. Sessions made from the "Black Maskers." Mr. Sessions wrote seven numbers as incidental music for the play by Leonid Andreyeff, for a performance at Smith College in 1923. It is a tortuous story and so is much of the music, although it is highly effective from the descriptive standpoint. Mr. Sessions uses many clever devices to get his music across and if it is not always pleasant to the ear, it a superb piece of craftsmanship. Mr. Monteux seemed as much at home in this work as in Beethoven or Bach.

The final work on the program was the Strauss tone poem "Death and Transfiguration." Regardless of the philosophical implications of this music, there is in it that which moves the layman as well as the musician. In spite of occasional bombast, there is a depth of feeling, and honesty of expression which cannot go unperceived. Under the leadership of Pierre Monteux we heard a performance wonderfully rich in color, depth and understanding. We rather doubt that any finer single performance will be heard this season.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 130,826

JUL 24 1955

Brahms, Barber Beethoven Music At Tanglewood

"Prayers Of Kierkegaard," a recent work by the American composer, Samuel Barber, will be featured by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood Friday at 8:30 p.m.

The composition had its premiere in Boston last winter, and is for soloists, chorus and orchestra. Also on the same program will be a Suite from the "Water Music," by Handel; and Brahms's Symphony No. 4.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in an all-Beethoven concert, featuring Rudolf Serkin in the "Emperor" piano concerto. Other works will be the Symphony No. 3 (Eroica) and the "Egmont" Overture.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor for the Sunday afternoon program, at 2:30. He will do an all-Brahms program including the Academic Festival Overture, the First Symphony, and the Concerto for violin and cello, featuring Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatrigorsky.

NYT 7/31

8 A. M.-12 Mid.—Monitor: Continuous program of news, sports, special events and variety entertainment. Featured today will be pick-ups from backstage at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, from Hollywood, for an interview with Roy Rogers, and from Ashland, Ky., for a [illegible] prison for juvenile delinquents. Participants include Fay Emerson, Bob and Ray, Leon Pearson Clifton Fadiman, others—(WRCA).

8:15-9, WRCA—BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERTS: The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; Isaac Stern, violinist:
Violin Concerto .... Beethoven

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival

of the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Eagle 7/30

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
A Season of BEETHOVEN

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Tonight at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist Rudolf Serkin (MUNCH)
Sun., July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Soloist, Isaac Stern (MONTEUX)
Tickets, Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. [illegible])

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—Conductors Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

☞ For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX [illegible]

TANGLEWOOD'S MUSIC SCHOOL IS BUSY PLACE

Union 7/30

Opera Department Has Some Splendid Voices; Gollovsky Has Patience

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 29—There is always something going on at the Berkshire Music School, which is operated by the Boston Symphony orchestra as an integral part of the Berkshire Music Festival. First desk men of the orchestra are on the faculty, along with such other famous teachers as Hugh Ross, who heads the choral department; Boris Goldovsky, who heads the opera department, and Leonard Bernstein who teaches conducting.

Lucid Explanation

The opera department has some splendid voices this year. Indeed, even Mr. Glodvosky admits to a most talented group. We watched Mr. Goldovsky coach some opera scenes the other day and wondered at his infinite patience, his lucid method of explanation and his insistence that word, action and voice be integrated. That same night, Tuesday to be exact, he appeared before a large audience of students and friends and introduced a number of opera scenes and played the piano accompaniment for most of them.

These particular scenes were played without props, so the audience was invited to use its imagination. However, so clever were some of the students in the art of pantomine, that too much imagination was not necessary.

Mozart always heads the list of operatic composers at Tanglewood. It was the hope of Dr. Koussevitzky that Tanglewood might become an American Mozart center, but it has become much more than that. Thus the program opened with scenes from Mozart's "The Magic Flute," "Don Giovanni" and "Cosi Fan Tutte." It takes not only good voices but a good technique to sing the music of Mozart and one saw both in action during these scenes.

Then came the lesson scene and rollicking "shaving" scene from "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini. The ensemble action was clever and admirably handled. A short scene from "Hansel and Gretel" served to reveal the unusual mezzo-soprano of Regina Sarfaty as Hansel. The Quintet from "Carmen" with the original spoken diolog brought new life to this scene.

The second portion of the program was given over to Acts 1 and 4 of "La Boheme." Hewell Zulick and Virginia Babikian were the lovers in the first act, which also gave opportunity to Peyton Higgison to reveal his powerful and beautiful baritone. In the fourth act we heard again the young tenor Lynn Detwiler, who has a fine voice and a definite flair for the stage. His Mimi was Darlene Miller, also a clever actress. The Colline of Stephen [illegible] of Springfield was handsomely sung and acted with elan.

Choral Department

In an introductory speech before the opening of a concert by the Tanglewood Choir, Hugh Ross said that the training received does not aim at tonal or technical perfection. Rather, the training serves to make known to students the rare literature available, the problems of ensemble singing and of [illegible] conducting. However, the singing we heard was remarkable for its sense of unity and often for its vocal color. Mrs. Ross led the chorus through the mazes of Brahms' "Warum ist das Licht Gegehen, Op. 74, No. 1." It was a rare experience to hear this great unaccompanied work sung with such freshness of tone and with understanding of text.

An admirable example of the art of the Renaissance was "O Admirabile Commercium" by Josquin Des Pres." This was directed by Elaine Yaho. A fine performance by chorus and orchestra was given Mozart's "Te Deum" directed by Kalman Novak. Then came the first American performance of Edmund Rubbra's Song of the Soul from "St. John of the Cross." Rubbra, born in 1901, is an English composer who has written in many mediums and whose choral style is vaguely similar to that of Vaughan Williams. The premier performance was directed by Iva Dee Hiatt, director of choral activities at Smith College, who is assisting Mr. Ross this summer. As was to be expected Miss Hiatt enthused her singers and provided a richly sung, deeply felt performance of a very beautiful work.

There was also a first performance of four motets by Alan Hovhaness, born in 1911. The final work on the program was conducted by Mr. Ross, an "Easter Cantata" for soprano, mixed chorus and orchestra. This is a work of considerable power, some melodic beauty and it reveals an extremely sensitive composer.

The chorus will be heard again on Aug. 1 in works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others.

12—The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Friday, July 29, 1955

Music

Bernstein Conducts Students

MUSIC FOR THE STAGE held the spotlight last night in the fourth concert by the Tanglewood Department I orchestra, with some 1,800 present in the Music Shed. Wagner's "Prelude and Love-Death" from "Tristan and Isolde" was well performed under student conductor Henry Janiec, while Leonard Bernstein gave an exciting but somewhat unbalanced reading of Stravinsky's "Petroushka."

The piano made its seasonal bow on the stage of the shed last night. Two, in fact, were employed, and both played by one artist. Jerome Lowenthal, 23, a Philadelphia man and a student of William Kappell until his air-crash death in October, 1953, did a first-rate job after an uncertain start in the long first movement of Tchaikovsky's "Tonight We Love" concerto. Mr. Lowenthal, a soloist within the past two years with the Robin Hood Dell and Minneapolis orchestras, also proved competent on a smaller piano and a smaller part in the Stravinsky.

* * *

JAMES YANNATOS conducted the concerto, hampered somewhat by the French horns' inability to reproduce Tchaikovsky's score. Mr. Bernstein later encountered the same problem, with trumpet trouble to boot, and his emphasis on brass and percussion made these weaknesses stand out.

Mr. Bernstein's Stravinsky was predominantly rhythmic, with melodic string writing at times made inaudible by the volume allowed repeated chords in the brass. The strings, playing well all evening with Hiroshi Hatoyama again the concertmaster, were drowned out by the huge orchestra.

Kenneth Schermerhorn led the overture to Gluck's opera of 1778, "Iphigenia in Aulis," for a promising opening. The Tchaikovsky which followed is corn no matter how well served, while the great Wagner prelude, feelingly phrased by Mr. Janiec and the string players, might gain if some day performed without its traditional trailer.

A.D.H.

Kent Art Show Opens Aug. 20

KENT, Conn.—The Kent Art Assn. Inc., will hold its 27th exhibition of painting, sculpture, prints and crafts at the Town Hall in Kent, Conn. from Saturday, Aug. 20, through Sunday, Sept. 4, from 2 to 6 p.m.

It is the policy of the association to make its exhibitions representative of the best current professional art by men and women artists who have come to Litchfield County and near-by sections of Connecticut and New York.

Many of those who have shown their work at the Kent Art Assn. exhibitions have been, and are, nationally known artists whose works are owned by museums and many private collections. However, there has been no neglect of young talent.

Since Colonial days when Ralph Earl painted outstanding landscapes and portraits, Litchfield County has been the hospitable host to many artists, and Ken thas for years, attracted as residents a professional group. Since the association's inception it has held a no-jury show, but often throughout the years the invited guest artists have outnumbered the active artist members in representation.

Tanglewood Tales

Chamber Music Sunday Morning

The fourth concert of chamber music by members of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center will be held Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program follows:

La Revue de Cuisine — Martinu
- Harold Themmen, clarinet
- Peter Ciurczak, trumpet
- Marcia Hansen, violoncello
- Beatrice Messina, bassoon
- Genia Palasanian, violin
- Anne Fuchs, piano

Sonatina for Brass — Parris
- Stephen Chenette, trumpet
- Joseph Umbrico, trumpet
- Richard Foley, tuba
- Charles Connors, trombone
- Bruce Paine, trombone
- Richard Gohn, trombone

Quintet in F Minor for Piano and Strings — Franck
- Heinz-Zvi Perez, violin
- Sanford Reuning, violin
- Edward Gerber, viola
- Phyllis Rode, violoncello
- Dolly Haim, piano

* * *

Forum Program

The program for the composers' forum at the Theater-Concert Hall Sunday evening at 8:30 was announced today. It follows:

Septet for Woodwinds and Strings — Edward Miller
- Israel Borouchoff, flute
- Nelson Dayton, bassoon
- Genia Palasanian, violin
- Catherine Carter, clarinet
- Barth Bennitt, French horn
- Midhat Serbaji, viola
- Albert Petillo, violoncello

String Quartet — Susan MacAdam
- Elizabeth Beebe, violin
- Jean Honl, viola
- Judith Heins, violin
- Phyllis Rode, violoncello

A Work for Brass — Paul Glass
- Trumpets—Peter Ciurczak, Joseph Umbrico, Merrill Debski
- Horns—Edwin Thayer, Larry Laurence, Barth Bennitt, Janette Cardwell
- Trombones—Bruce Paine, Michael Horvit, Richard Gohn
- Tuba—Richard Foley
- Timpani—Albert [illegible]
- Percussion—Marvin Britton

* * *

County Children In Opera Debuts

Two young Tanglewood neighbors will be making their operatic debuts in Berkshire Music Center productions on Aug. 8 and 9, or, more accurately their debuts in opera, for their roles are non-singing. Holly McLennan, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. McLennan, of Tyringham, plays Mary, a New England child, in Louis Mennini's new opera, "The Rope," adapted from a 1917 short play by Eugene O'Neill, and George Lussier Jr., aged 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lussier of West Street, Lenox, will appear for the first time on any stage in the two-act Mozart opera, "Zaide," which will have its American premiere, playing Osmin, son of the sultan of Turkey.

Holly McLennan finished seventh grade in Lee public school last spring and will enter St. Agnes' School in Albany in the autumn. She has been in ballet productions in the Pittsfield Community Music School, staged by Nina Fonaroff, and in school performances. Her interests are pretty equally divided between horses, music and acting. Holly got the job through a recommendation to Boris Goldovsky, head of Tanglewood's opera department, from her piano teacher, Helen Morgan of Stockbridge, wife of concert bass-baritone Mac Morgan. Young George Lussier, whose parents work at Tanglewood under the supervision of grounds superintendent Ward Gaston, starts his fifth grade in Lenox School this fall, and is keen on baseball and swimming.

* * *

Talented Stage Designer

The Tanglewood opera productions this year will introduce to Berkshire visitors the work of an upcoming young stage designer, David Hays of Boston, an A.B. from Harvard (1952), who designed sets at Cambridge's famed Brattle Theater for "Billy Budd" and "Liliom," then went to London on a Fulbright scholarship, where he painted scenery, "as a tenth assistant" on many shows at the Old Vic, and studied with Roger Furse and Leslie Hurry in connection with stage plays produced by Laurence Olivier, Peter Brook, John Gielgud and Sadler's Wells. Subsequently he had a year at Yale University Theater, and last summer designed at Green Mansions Theater in New York state, including the revues which later became "The Shoestring Revue" on Broadway, "Brigadoon," "Down in the Valley," "Trouble in Tahiti" and an original opera, "The Cozy." Last season Mr. Hays spent on a teaching fellowship at Boston University Theater, where he designed "The Chief Thing," lighted three Thornton Wilder plays for Jose Quintero, designed sets, costumes and lights for "The Three-Penny Opera," and executed the design for Bob O'Hearn for Boris Goldovsky's production of Berlioz' "The Trojans."

Concerts: Two at Lenox

Serkin Plays 'Emperor' Concerto, Stern Performs in an All-Brahms Program

NYT 8/1

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 31—The second week-end of concerts in the main shed of the Berkshire Festival ended this afternoon with one in which Pierre Monteux directed the Boston Symphony. An audience of about 12,000 attended —a good turnout, but nothing like last night's, in which 15,000 came to hear Rudolf Serkin play the "Emperor" Concerto.

The all-time record here for a single concert had been established in 1951, when 15,800 came for a Saturday night concert directed by Charles Munch. Last night, Berkshire officials were desperately looking for another 801 persons; but, honest souls that they are, refused to include the ushers and other personnel in the count. And thus 1951 stands supreme. The official attendance for this week-end was [illegible].

This afternoon's concert was all-Brahms. Mr. Monteux conducted the "Academic Festival" Overture and the First Symony. Soloist was Isaac Stern in the Violin Concerto. Originally scheduled for this program was the Double Concerto, but Gregor Piatigorsky, who was to play the cello part, informed Mr. Munch last week that he was indisposed.

The collaboration of Mr. Monteux and Mr. Stern was a delight. Neither violinist nor conductor was out to sweep the world off its feet. They adopted a relatively mild approach to the concerto, one containing much in the way of delicate instrumental interplay. It was above all a lyric reading that almost suggested chamber music in its intimacy and ensemble. Mr. Stern, who never attempted to take over the show, and was content to stay in the framework imposed by the conductor, set a superb example of musicianship. And, needless to say, his violinistics were beyond reproach—firmly centered in pitch, technically deft, rhythmically fluent.

This was the high point of the concert, although Mr. Monteux' ideas about the First Symphony had their usual interest. His tempo for the third movement was somewhat slow, and the music emerged with pastoral characteristics. One does not remember hearing it exactly this way before, but it sounded perfectly natural in this conception.

Saturday night's program was all-Beethoven, containing the "Egmont" Overture, the "Eroica" Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto.

Charles Munch conducted. Mr. Serkin, who was making his Tanglewood debut, played the concerto as usual—with breadth, virility and often a free view toward the music. Some of his playing sounded improvisatory, which probably was the effect he wanted for the sprawling cadenzas of the first movement.

The finale was taken at a remarkably fast clip, with Mr. Serkin never missing a note and going at it with the utmost brio. He received an ovation; one guesses he will not be a stranger to the Berkshire Festival in the future.

The orchestral portion of the program was done with the inevitable polish that Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony bring to their music-making. [illegible] readings of elegance rather than passion, though it should not be implied that the interpretations lacked intensity. The "Funeral March" of the "Eroica," for example, had all the drama one could expect.

No official word has yet been received about the Boston Symphony's offer to make an appearance in the Soviet Union during its European trip in the fall of 1956. All that can be said is that matters are being "negotiated." If one can cite a straw in the wind, officials of the orchestra seem remarkably optimistic that the offer will be accepted by the Soviet Government.

Eagle 7/31

Tanglewood Tales

BSO To Renew Contract With RCA-Victor

An important ceremony will take place at Tanglewood during the afternoon and evening festivities of Tanglewood on Parade on Thursday, Aug. 11. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will sign a five-year renewal of its contract to record exclusively for RCA-Victor Records in the Berkshire Music Center's administration building. The contract will be signed jointly by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, with executives of the Victor company, to be followed by a press reception and dinner at the Lenox Club.

* * *

Student-Orchestra Program Announced

At Tanglewood on Parade the student symphony will perform in the Music Shed, from 6-7 p.m., while simultaneous performances of opera are taking place in the Theater-Concert Hall and of chamber music in the Chamber Music Hall. The symphony program for this occasion will be Aaron Copeland's "Outdoor Overture" conducted by James Yannatos, of New York City; Brahms' "Tragic Overture" conducted by Kenneth Schermerhorn; Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" conducted by George Mester; and will conclude with the "Roman Carnival Overture" of Berlioz, conducted by Henry Janiec, Passaic, N.J.

Behind the Pianist and Left of the Bassoons

Protocol Leads a Newspaperman into the Middle of Tanglewood's Orchestra

By DUANE LA FLECHE

There was a certain protocol to be followed.

The manager and the personnel manager were consulted. There was a formal request by the manager to the orchestra committee for its approval. Then, as matters proceeded well, on a recent day a letter from the Boston Symphony Orchestra brought the information that I might sit in with the players at a rehearsal under the baton of Pierre Monteux.

The place was Tanglewood, which last weekend opened its four-week season of Boston Symphony concerts.

I was to present myself at 9:30 a. m. Saturday to Rosario Mazzeo, the orchestra's personnel manager. I would be given, I was told, "words of help, caution and advice," and would be seated "strategically" among the players.

I would, it was implied, make no nuisance of myself, remain inconspicuous and keep myself in tune with the nature of the occasion.

I did so solemnly promise.

The words of "help, caution and advice" from Mr. Mazzeo (an amateur ornithologist of note—and quite used to rare birds) proved not so formidable as the summons to his presence had indicated. He eyed me from head to toe, greeted me graciously and, as we walked toward the great Tanglewood shed, he asked only that I be discreet.

His request proved [illegible] to fulfill. There was nothing to be discreet about, save, perhaps, that a certain bass clarinetist couldn't resist poking with his toe that part of the posterior of an oboist that bulged through a chair ahead of him—(that in a lull in the proceedings)—or the prodigious wink given me by a bass violist after, with professional nonchalance, he plucked a particularly gutty plunk from his instrument at just the split second it was called for. But those things I do NOT mention. I had promised to be discreet.

FAMED CONDUCTOR—Pierre Monteux, in an informal portrait taken as he rehearsed the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

• • •

MY strategic sitting place proved to be just behind the pianist, a bit to the left of the bassoonists, in a curve formed by the bass players, close at hand to the violoncellos and, a bit to my dismay, directly in line with the somewhat questioning eye of M. Monteux.

But at this moment M. Monteux had not yet taken his place on the podium. All about me were the players. The pianist was asking that the top be removed from the huge concert grand; all about were plunks and toots, thumps and twangs, as the players tuned their instruments. There was a babel as well, as more than 100 men and two women relaxed and readied themselves for the work ahead of them.

We (and on such an occasion certainly I may say we) were to rehearse what might be called a somewhat difficult program. Not, perhaps, of particular difficulty to the musicians, for playing such works is their profession, but rather, difficult for the listener.

The Beethoven Second Symphony is familiar enough, and Beethoven is always heart-warming. Not so easy to hear, and, in hearing, comprehend, would be the orchestral suite from "The Black Maskers," by the American composer, Roger Sessions (in residence this summer at Tanglewood and present for the rehearsal). Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor isn't listened to casually, and the Strauss tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration," requires a bit more attention than a juke box ballad.

But before the arrival of M. Monteux it seemed appropriate to become acquainted with some of the musicians about me.

• • •

THE young American lad at my right, blowing negligently into that grandpa of all woodwinds—a contra-bassoon—and producing a moan with a built-in vibration, he had a kindly look.

RICHARD PLASTER, 27, from Winston-Salem, N. C., in his third season with the Boston Symphony after graduation from the Juilliard School of Music and playing with the Baltimore Symphony.

However did one become a contra-bassoonist? he was asked.

It developed one doesn't just become a contra-bassoonist, he more often has the instrument thrust on him. He starts off, perhaps, as a clarinetist and then, in high school or such, a bassoon and contra-bassoon player is needed in the orchestra. A likely lad is selected and the world has a new bassoonist.

But Mr. Plaster also had an aim and a practical eye. He wanted to play with a great orchestra; the contra-bassoonists in the three or four great orchestras in the East were growing old. Mr. Plaster first applied himself, then applied to the Boston Symphony for an audition. He made it.

Cellists Bob Ripley and Richard Kapuscinski (whose Polish name isn't to confuse you—he was born in Milwaukee).

Mr. Ripley, 33, once a student at Tanglewood; a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Symphony; in his first season with the Boston. He was in the Army in the war and spent three years playing with Glenn Miller's Army band.

Mr. Kapuscinski, 31, is likewise a graduate of Curtis Institute and the Cleveland Orchestra and in his first year with the Boston.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, one of the two women members and a flutist—pardon me, first flutist—with the orchestra. She doesn't find it strange being surrounded by men; her husband is a physician in Boston; both she and her husband have similar attitudes toward their [illegible] make music and medicine mix. She will keep on [illegible].

The other woman member is Olivia Luetcke, harpist for five years with the Boston and divorced from her husband, a San Antonio attorney.

Henry Freeman, violist, one of those seven violists ranged in a quarter circle behind me. He is from Rochester, where his father played first trumpet with the Rochester Symphony. Mr. Freeman has been with the Boston [illegible] years. He is a practical man.

Bernard Zighera, pianist with the orchestra since 1926 and a harpist as well. He has an engaging, toothy grin and doesn't mind my peering over his shoulder at the score. He asks what I am doing. Told I am an newspaperman, he beams happily. "We thought you were from TV," he says.

I didn't have an opportunity to ask why such a thought had ever come into his mind, for he disappeared immediately after the session's work was rehearsed.

Martin Hoherman, a cellist and a Pole, despite his German name. Born in Warsaw, playing in Paris when his homeland was invaded, years of travel (sometimes it was flight) whilc a stateless person, 2½ years in the British Army, making his way about Europe and the East "on the green"—that is without a passport and in somewhat undercover fashion. Eventually to Ceylon, then to Canada, and since three years ago with the Boston. Stateless no longer, he is becoming an American citizen.

• • •

BUT suddenly the talking, the plinking, the plunking and the toots halt. The members of the orchestra rise, there is a burst of applause and here and there a bravo. M. Monteux has arrived.

WOMAN MEMBER OF ORCHESTRA — Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and one of the two women members of the orchestra, practices on the lawn at Tanglewood.

In a quick, little trot, he crosses the stage from the wings and mounts the podium. With a smile and a twinkle in his eyes he says:

"Thank you just the same."

Then, directly to business, he says, "First the Sessions. We will play it without cuts." He pronounces Sessions as only a Frenchman would.

This M. Monteux, perhaps five feet tall, perhaps three feet around, with his longish, black hair, his full white moustache, his spectacles, his knowledge and his dignity, is, at 80, a miracle man of music.

Last night he was conducting the Chicago Symphony. Sunday night, June 26, he was conducting another of his former orchestras, the Concertgebouw, in Amsterdam. Twenty-four hours later he was leading the New York Philharmonic. In the late spring he had been in London and Brussels for concerts and in Paris for recordings.

But now his baton is descending at Tanglewood and the orchestra is alert to his commands as the first notes of the Sessions work are sounded. For a time it is a stop-and-go business as he bring the orchestra to silence to say:

"Don't make any crescendo"; to a bassoonist, "Can you play louder?"; to the tuba, "Do not play too loud." To a violist he addresses a remark that cannot be heard in the farther ranks, then illustrates, curling the fingers of his left hand as if holding the instrument and using his baton as a bow.

Without halting the music, he says, as a little passage particularly pleases him, "Nice."

Now the music swells. Cellos and basses are humming, kettle drums booming. The volume of sound shakes one.

• • •

IT is different listening to an orchestra from within. The non-professional finds it difficult to hear, as a whole, the work being played. His attention is constantly being diverted as music bursts out all about him—now from the woodwinds, now from the brasses, again from the piano.

Then comes the quieter finale, and as the last notes fade away, M. Monteux orders the work replayed.

Again it is a matter of stop and go with a "shh" to the flutes not to drown out the violins; a bit of difficulty with a horn player about how loud he should play at a certain moment—leading to a colloquy on the matter, every word in French. A moment later a lifted chin and a nod brings in the piano for a measure or two.

Satisfied now with the performance, M. Monteux orders a playing of the Bach. No work this time for the pianist. Quick as a wink, he disappears.

Not quite so much stop and go with the Bach. At its conclusion, the musicians begin chattering. M. Monteux merely looks sad and quiet is restored.

In good fun, he threatens:

"I'll make another speech."

The orchestra chuckles and grows quiet.

• • •

THEN is rehearsed the "Death and Transfiguration"—much attention now to the brasses and more pronounced direction from the conductor. The harpist wins a smile and a quiet "good" as she brings in a tiny trill of notes.

It is time now for an intermission.

The players set down their instruments and disperse to smoke and rest. M. Monteux remains a moment to answer a question or two. Then, unhurried and unharried, he disappears into his off-stage haunts.

The time of my invitation to sit with the orchestra had run out. I left the stage to sit in the auditorium and hear, from my more familiar place, the playing of the Beethoven.

It sounded wonderful!

Bernstein Names Son After Koussevitzky

Leonard Bernstein, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra Aug. 5 at Tanglewood in a concert in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, has named his new son after the great conductor and founder of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The son, 3 weeks old, has been named Alexander Serge. Koussevitzky was Serge Alexander.

Mr. Bernstein was a protege of Mr. Koussevitzky before he made a name for himself in the world of music.

NYT IN BLACHER'S OPERA 7/31

Gus Manos

Naomi Farr and Harold Johnson, who will sing title roles of "Romeo and Juliet" at Tanglewood tomorrow.

Berkshire Festival

NYT 7/31

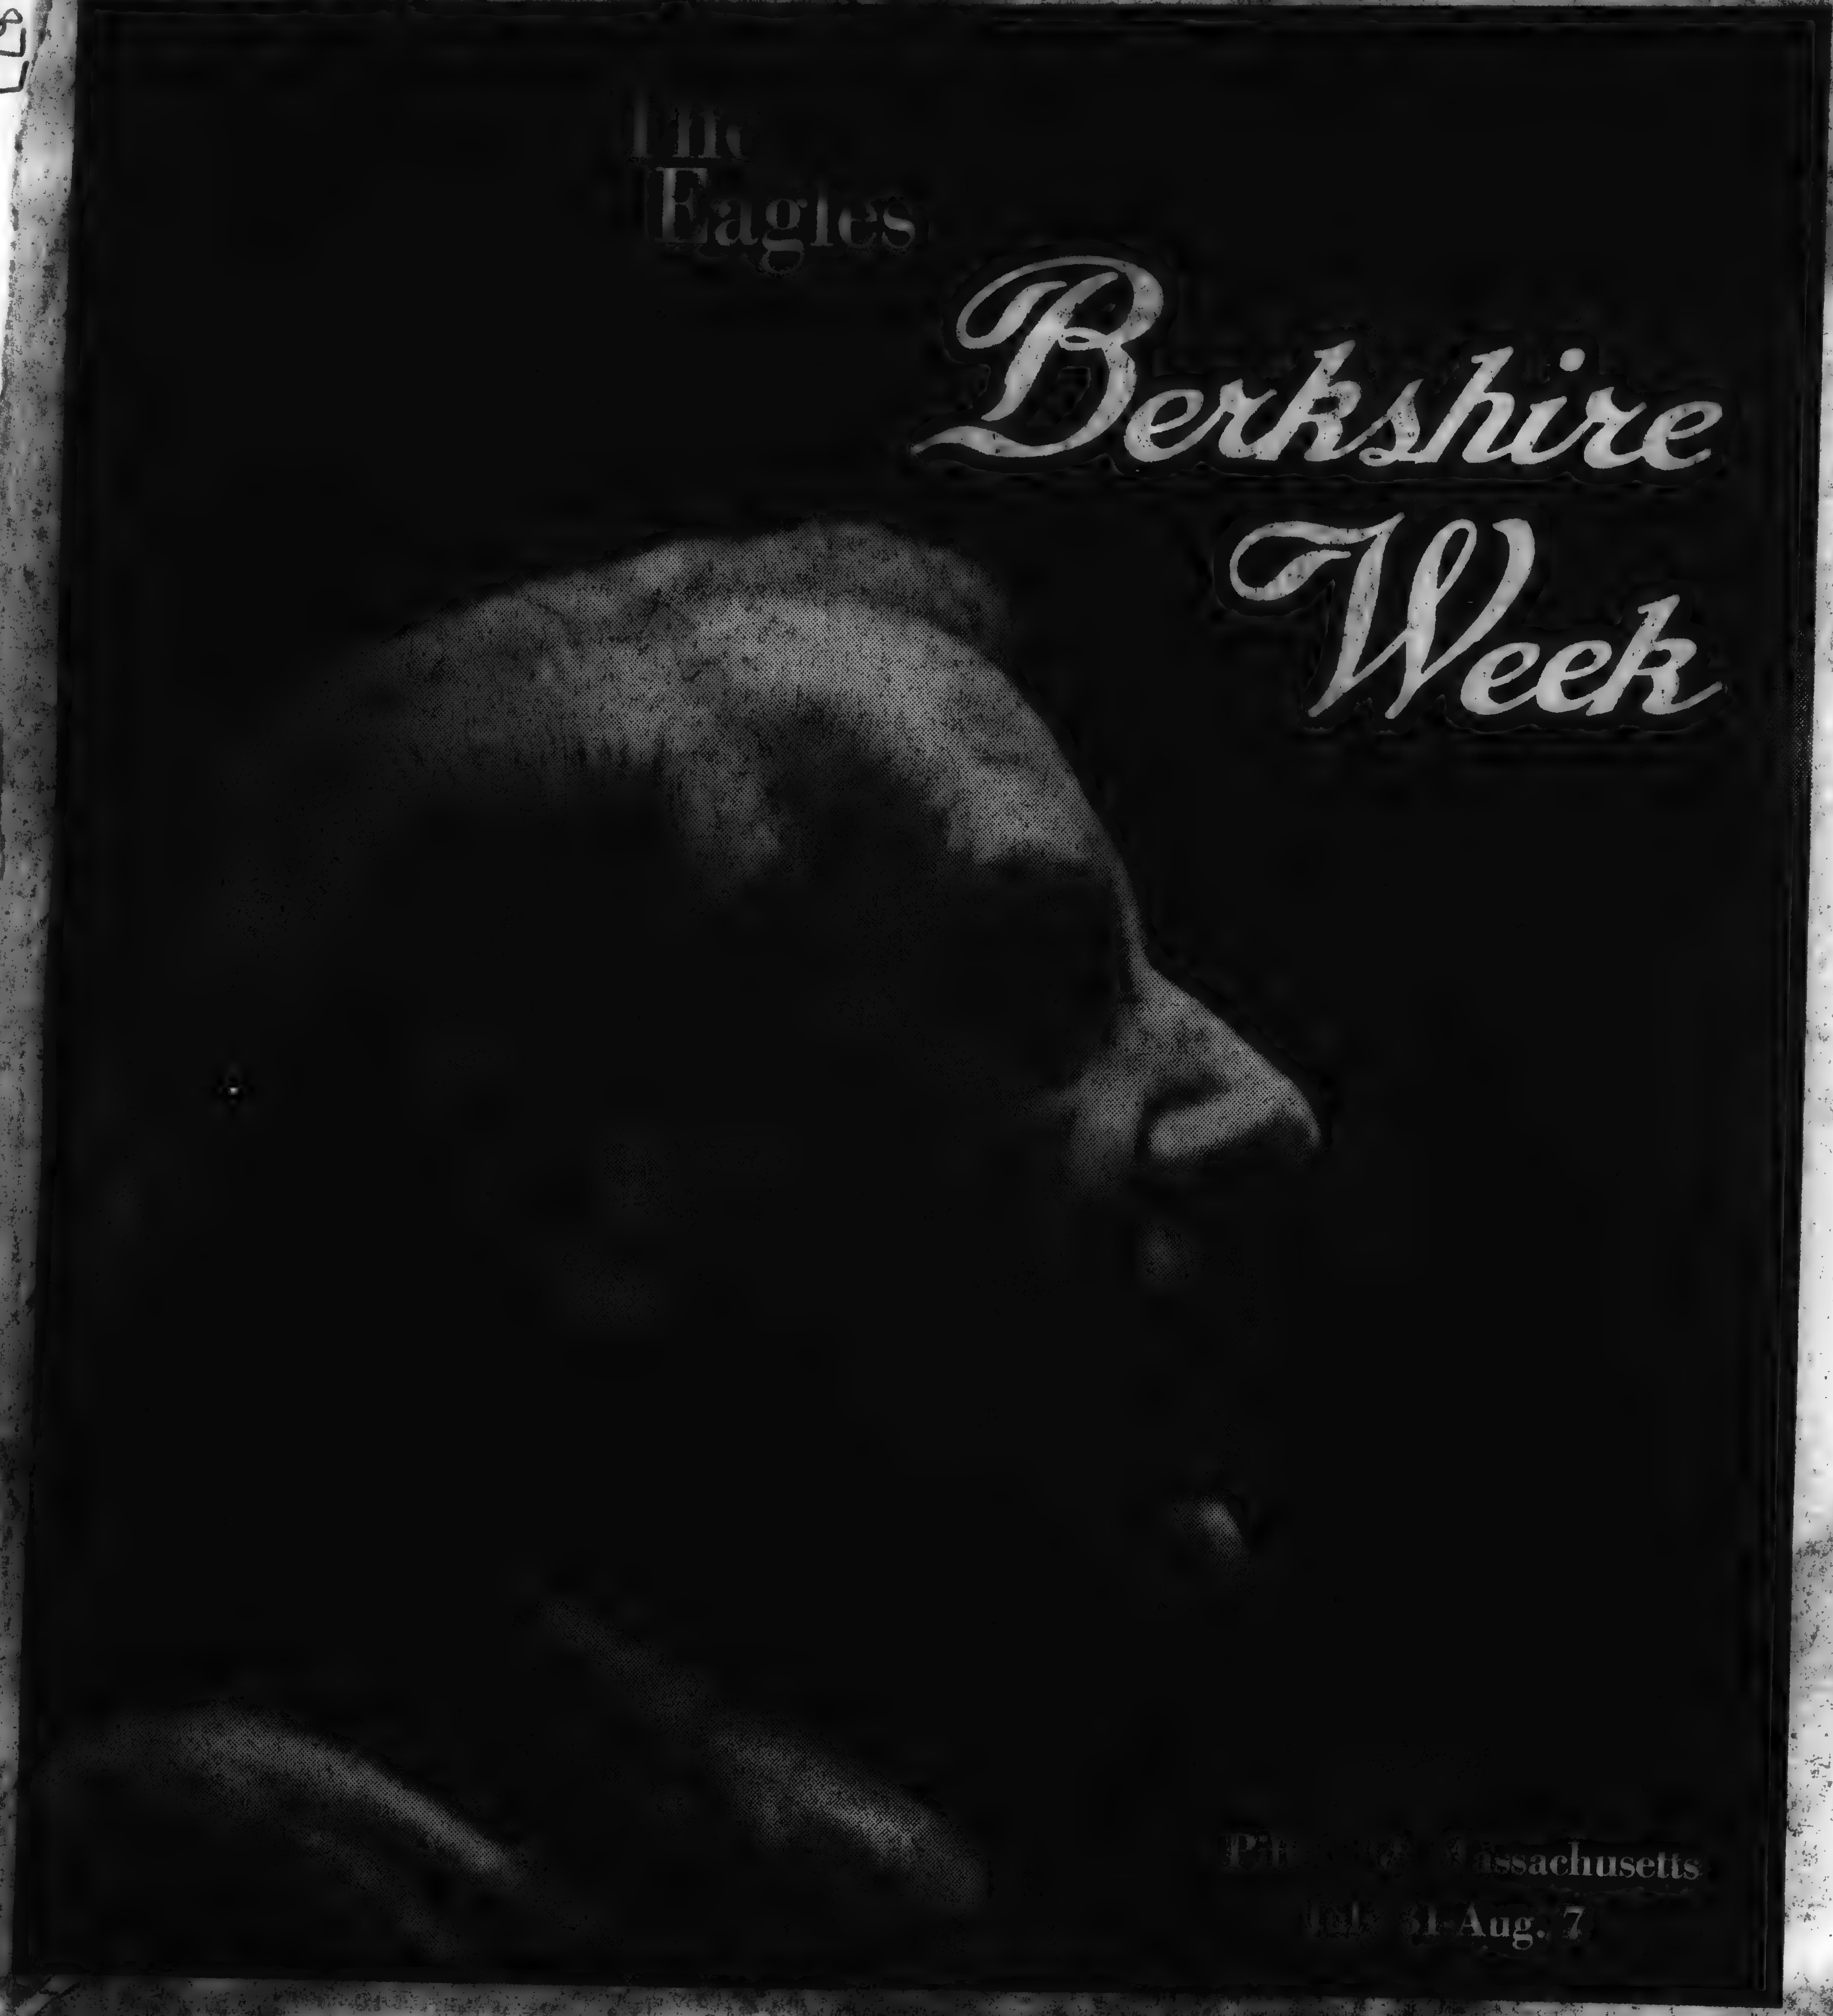
Tanglewood, [illegible], Mass. [illegible] 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, [illegible] conducting; soloist, Isaac Stern, violinist. Academic Festival Overture; Concerto for Violin in D major; Symphony No. 1 in C minor, [illegible]. [illegible] 8:30. "Romeo and Juliet" (first performance at Tanglewood), Boris Blacher; [illegible] Songs of Spring, Domingo [illegible]; Two Pilgrim Songs, Ross Lee [illegible]; [illegible] Serge Taneyef; [illegible] Over Boston, William Bil[illegible]; "[illegible] D'Ariane" (first performance at Tanglewood), Darius Milhaud. [illegible] Soloist, Rudolf Serkin, [illegible] in F major, Op. 10, [illegible] Op. 10, No. 3; B flat ("Hammerklavier") Beethoven. Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting; soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Richard Burgin, violinist; Willem Frank, organist, and Students Chorus. 8:30 Beethoven's Missa Solemnis. Saturday, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. "Fidelio," Act II (first performance at Tanglewood). (Soloists, Margaret Harshaw, Christina Cardillo, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan, Malcolm [illegible], Arthur Schoep), Beethoven. Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung": Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation Scene (Soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano), Wagner. Sunday, Aug. 7, 2:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Eugene Istomin, pianist. Symphony No. 8 in F major; Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major; Symphony No. [illegible] in C [illegible], Beethoven.

[illegible] . . . The biggest non-holiday tourist weekend of the summer overloaded overnight accommodations in many county towns, brought [illegible] customers to four Tanglewood concerts, and contributed to several of 16 accidents that took place on Berkshire highways . . . In response to numerous objections from [illegible] citizens, Pittsfield Police Chief Thomas H. Calnan announced that male or female wearers of over-abbreviated shorts and similar scanty attire would be banished from the city or hauled into court for indecent exposure . . . More than 10,000 watchers ignored humid over

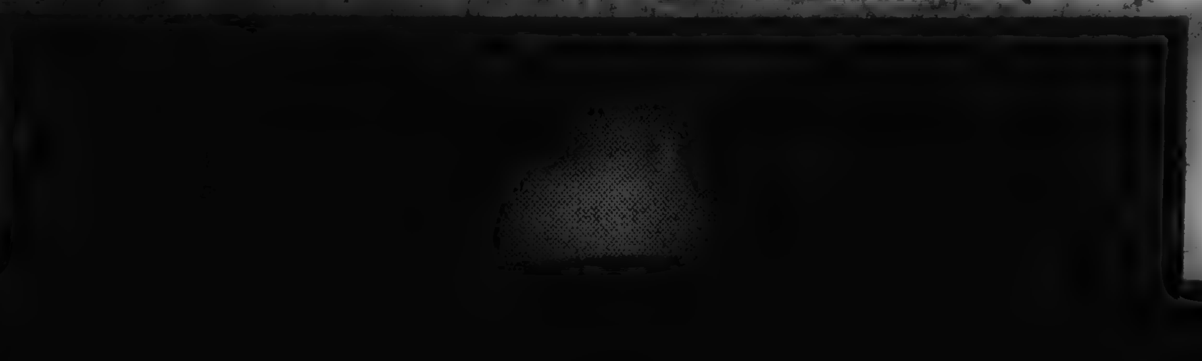
340
4
360

1700

MUSICIANS
At Work

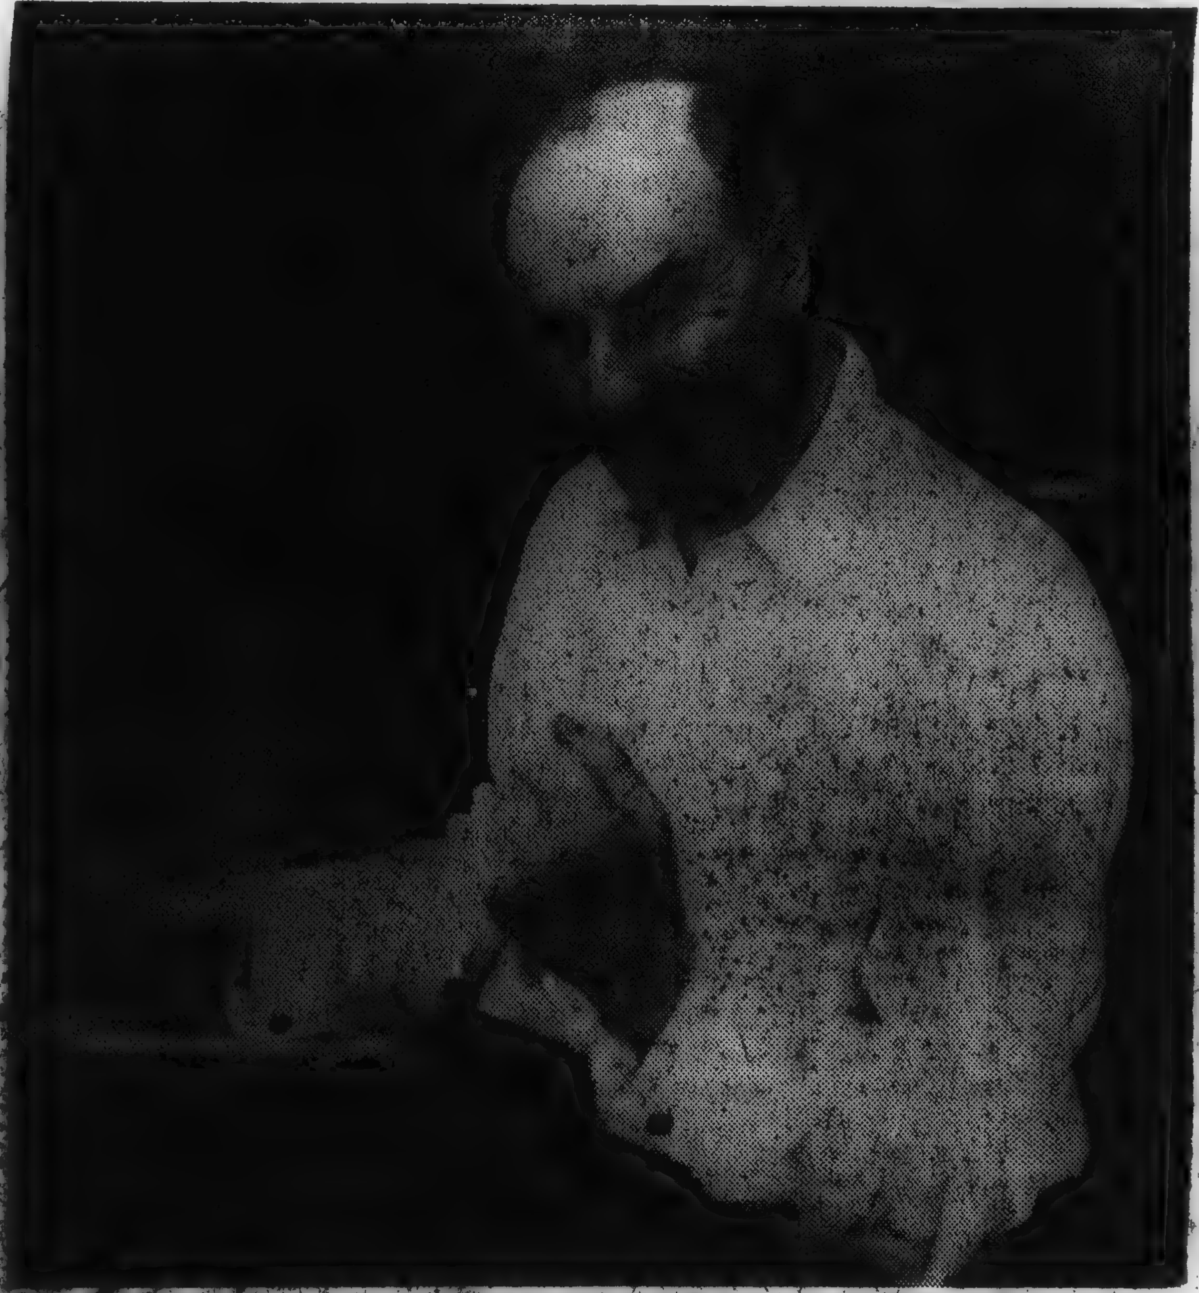


CONDUCTING brings moments both prayerful and dynamic in rehearsal as well as at concert time. Charles Munch (above) turns his eyes upward in a Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsal. Hugh Ross (below) leading the Music Festival chorus in a rehearsal of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis, gestures violently to create a staccato attack.



TEACHING at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, employs the high talents of first-chair men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Richard Burgin (above), concertmaster, leads a string quartet in a chamber-music class. Gino Cioffi (below), first clarinetist, discusses intricate fingering.

CONDUCTING brings moments both prayerful and dynamic in rehearsal as well as at concert time. Charles Munch (above) turns his eyes upward in a Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsal. Hugh Ross (below) leading the Music Festival chorus in a rehearsal of Beethoven's [illegible] Solemnis, gestures [illegible] to create a [illegible] attack.



MUSICIANS
At Work

Photos and Text by Gus Manos

A MUSICIAN AT WORK is a wonderful thing to see, for he is at once a man devoted and engrossed. In the dressing room he is alone and meditative. On the podium he is dynamic and inspiring. In the classroom he is demanding and patient.

When the music begins, the musician loses all his inhibitions. For him there is nothing else in the world but the music. He can pour himself into the beautiful sounds and forget that the world is watching him, but his face reflects his feeling. Because of his devotion to the art he practices daily, he is also a ready teacher to those who come to learn.

At Tanglewood, where these photographs were made in classes and at rehearsals, the musicians have settled down into the second half of their rigorous summer schedule. For those who work close to Tanglewood daily there is high inspiration in seeing these devoted men at work.

SHUSHING the student orchestra at Tanglewood, conductor Leonard Bernstein gestures up a pianissimo with both his hands.

RESTING after a BSO performance, Pierre Monteux sits alone in the dressing room with fan, ice, Coke to help cool off.

Verner

PHOTOGRAPHER Gus Manos at 20 is the youngest full-time photographer ever employed by the Tanglewood publicity department. A senior at the University of South Carolina, he is spending his second summer at Tanglewood. Photographing musicians comes naturally to him since he is a flute player both at college and with the Columbia Symphony Orchestra in his home town. His free-lance camera career began at the age of 16 at the Brevard Music Festival in North Carolina, where he spent three summers taking publicity pictures. A 35 mm specialist, he has four Leicas, the only type of camera which he uses.

PLAYING the piano for young composers who surround him, Roger Sessions runs through one of his recent scores during a class at the Berkshire Music Center.

Many Miss Tanglewood

15,500 Crowd Tanglewood
For All-Beethoven Program

Many Miss Tanglewood Concert in Traffic Jam

Union 8/1

Pittsfield, July 31 — Expanding cultural attractions in the Berkshires have added another cost to their enjoyment, the price being a possible long wait in a traffic line.

Second Largest Audience

Last night's concert at Tanglewood attracted a crowd of 15,112, second largest in the history of the event, and many music lovers never even got into the spacious grounds because of the tangled traffic situation.

At one point before the concert started, cars were lined up more than two miles from the main gates than two miles [illegible] the main gates of the festival entrance on on West St., in Lenox to the Lenox bypass on Routes 7 and 20 and to the bypass at the Walker St. entrance on the south end.

Continued On Page 7

State Police Lt. John Luphold of Northampton troop headquarters in charge of the nine man state police traffic detail at Tanglewood, said tonight that the simple reason for the traffic tieup was "too many cars for too little parking space." Lt. Luphold said that at 8 p. m. all four free parking areas at Tanglewood were filled and that cars were being directed into private parking lot areas.

Meet Others Leaving

By 10.30 when the concert was almost over, many cars still were clogging the roads, seeking a parking spot within walking distance of the shed. At that time cars started leaving the grounds and the state police detail had to route incoming cars away from the exits so that the departing concertgoers could reach the main highways.

This afternoon when a relatively small crowd of 12,000 attended the concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra no traffic tieups at all were reported except for the inevitable waits at the entrance gates.

Representatives of the Berkshire festival organization could not be reached tonight for comment on ways to prevent a similar occurrence at future concerts.

Future Prospect

William Callahan, chairman of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, said yesterday that completion of the new toll road would bring many more thousands of happy tourists from New York and Massachusetts into the Berkshires. The question in many minds here is "Where will [illegible]

John Downing, [illegible] the Berkshire Hills Conference and James Lucas, executive secretary of the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce, have [illegible] accommodations during [illegible] week ends are non-existent [illegible] has been sent for [illegible] to register available rooms for rent but more tourists and cars will make the traffic and room problem even more acute.

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Music: Lively Lenox

Vivacious Audience at Tanglewood Fete Complements Brisk Work by Munch

7/31

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 29—The second week-end of concerts in the music shed and the fourteenth program of the current season got under way Friday night at the Berkshire Music Festival. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony, and the generous program consisted of Handel's "Water Music" Suite in the familiar arrangement by Sir Hamilton Harty, Schumann's Fourth Symphony, Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard" and the Fourth Symphony by Brahms.

To one who has been away from Tanglewood some years, it was like picking up again almost without interruption. Little has changed—the scenery, the grounds, and even the musical programs. The grass is as violently green as ever and the trees as straight. The same predominantly young audience is attracted. They come long before 8:30 P. M., wander through the gardens and picnic on the grounds, many of them. The picnics, too, are often still of a gargantuan nature, complete with salad bowls, wine bottles with expensive-looking labels, and rare-looking viands.

During the afternoons, the heady noise of many instrumentalists rehearsing all at once fills the grounds. Students seem to be all over the place, and the faculty strolls gravely along.

•

Much in evidence are the two composition teachers, Roger Sessions and Boris Blacher. The two, it is said, have become inseparable, and have virtually converted into a "bierhaus" a section of a local hotel, where they sit for long hours quaffing the noble brew and discussing music in all of its phases. Mr. Blacher's opera "Romeo and Juliet" will receive its Tanglewood première on Monday evening.

Mr. Munch was in a lively mood. He took the Handel at a brisk pace, constantly pushed it along, and gloried in the sonorities created by Harty. At the end of the work, he had the four horn players of the Boston Symphony share the applause.

He also refrained from the least suspicion of lag in the Schumann symphony. Like many conductors, he used an edited version of the score, one that points up a few instrumental niceties that the composer missed. Whether or not this is "echt-Schumann," its brilliance cannot be denied. Possibly because of the length of the program, Mr. Munch took almost no repeats, except in the scherzo movement.

The strings of the Boston Symphony shone through the night, the other choirs added their quota of brilliance, and, in the coda of the last movement, Mr. Munch whipped up the action with a frenzy that made the music not unlike the sound of a military brass band. It was quite effective, in its way, and the audience went wild.

•

Mr. Barber's new work, which received its première in Boston in December, 1954, and which first was heard in New York last season, was sung by Leontyne Price, soprano; Regina Safarty, contralto; Arthur Schoep, tenor, and the festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross.

Miss Price had been the soprano for all the previous Boston Symphony performances. Of the two other singers, Miss Safarty is a student of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department and Mr. Schoep is assistant stage director to Boris Goldovsky, head of the department.

Much attention obviously had been paid to Mr. Barber's score. Its many complications were transparently unraveled, and Mr. Munch had the musical layout at his fingertips. The soloists, too, were in fine voice, and the chorus, barring some questionable diction, performed nobly. The prose of Kierkegaard may seem an unlikely subject for a choral work, but Mr. Barber has set the theologian wisely and well; and with considerable conviction, too.

What's Going On?

Eagle 7/30

ONIGHT:

:30—Tanglewood. Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Soloist, Rudolf Serkin.

NY HT 8/1

15,500 Crowd Tanglewood For All-Beethoven Program

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., July 21.—Tanglewood's attendance record nearly fell last night when 15,000 persons in the Music Shed and on the lawn heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a Beethoven program under Charles Munch's direction, with Rudolf Serkin as a soloist in the "Emperor" piano concerto. The figure missed the peak mark set on a Saturday night in 1951 by only 300. No space was left in Tanglewood's vast parking lots, and later arriving cars had to be left farther afield. Tickets were sold to late arrivals up to the beginning of the last work in the program, the "Eroica" Symphony.

Twelve thousand heard this afternoon's Brahms program by [illegible] Symphony under [illegible]x, making a total gate of [illegible]han 35,000 for the three re[illegible] orchestral concerts of [illegible] Festival's fourth week, not including the 3,307 who heard yesterday morning's public rehearsal for the Boston Symphony's pension fund.

The last two programs were similar in pattern, with the "Egmont" Overture prefacing the two mighty works in E Flat Major last night. The "Academic Festival Overture" was the prelude in Mr. Monteux Brahms list today, which closed with the First Symphony. Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky were to have played the double concertot for violin and cello, but owing to a recent injury Piatigorsky had to withdraw from this concert as well as from those set for Aug. 10 and 12, and Mr. Stern was heard instead in the Violin Concerto in D Major.

The "Emperor" Performance

The orchestra played admirably in both concerts and Mr. Serkin was in fine technical form for the "Emperor" Concerto, playing with a consistently delectable quality of tone and a finely graded dynamic range in an interpretation which also conveyed the essential dignity and expressive range of the work. The orchestral co-operation was unified, admirably balanced and expressively sympathetic. Mr. Stern's technique was also illustrated at its best in the Brahms Violin Concerto today; the tone was clear, lyric and fine spun in a performance marked by dynamic and expressive sensitiveness. Here and there the music seemed to call for a slightly more substantial presentation; there was occasional room for more momentum and wider range of mood in the slo and in the laudably proportioned collaboration of the musicians under Mr. Monteux.

Mr. Munch realized the dramatic values of the "Egmont" Overture and also the epic scale and emotional span of the "Eroica" Symphony. The threat posed at the beginning of a too rapid pace was not fulfilled, and after the one instance the overstress of contrast between concentrated tension and relaxation which sometimes appears in this conductor's interpretation disappeared. Drama, expressive stress and climax were at hand, but Mr. Munch and the orchestra also did justice to the other aspects of the symphony, and the treatment of the finale, on a well planned gradually rising emotional level, was a feature of a memorable performance.

The Brahms Symphony

Mr. Monteaux's interpretations usually prefer flexible and continuous transitions of volume or mood to emphasis on contrast, and this was the case in the Brahms Symphony in C Minor. The "Academic Festival Overture" had a good humored and persuasive treatment. In the symphony, the lyric revery of the second movement and an easy going relaxed atmosphere in the third effectively set forth the distinction between these parts of the work and the bolder exprissev pronouncements of the first movement and the finale.

David Lloyd, tenor; Samuel Mayes, cellist, and a wind and piano quintet will replace Mr. Piatigorsky's sonata program of Aug. 10, and Mr. Munch will conduct Berlioz's "Fantastic Symphony," Debussy's "La Mer" and Ravel's Second Daphnis and Chloe Suite in his substitute program for Aug. 12.

The Saturday afternoon chamber music series on South Mountain near Pittsfield in an auditorium which antedates Tanglewood as a Berkshire home of music began yesterday, when the New Music String Quartet played Jerome Rosen's First Quartet, a work which won a Fromm Foundation award. Broadus Earle, Walter Trampler, Matthew Raimondi and David Soyer also played music by Casella and Anton Webern in the more or less modern portion of their program, and were also happy in the quartet by Mozart, which closed the list.

HONORS SHARED BY ISAAC STERN AND SYMPHONY

Union 8/1

12,000 Applaud Performances of Brahms' Works At Tanglewood

Tanglewood, July 31—A perfect day, Isaac Stern and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, plus the music of Brahms and the presence of Pierre Monteux on the podium drew another huge audience to Tanglewood, 12,000 to be exact, today.

UN Group Present

The parking areas looked as though all had come by car. We noted a delegation of 50 United Nations personnel and also a group from the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

Making his second appearance of this season, Mr. Monteux opened his program with a vigorous, full-blooded, performance of the "Academic Festival Overture," a work as picturesque as it is exciting.

Isaac Stern had played his way into the hearts of Tanglewoodians twice this season, first when he presented the Beethoven "Violin Concerto" and secondly when he played a chamber music recital consisting of three of the Beethoven violin sonatas. Because of the illness of Piatagorsky, it had been necessary to cancel the Brahms concerto for violin and cello and the Brahms "Violin Concerto" was substituted.

If anything, Mr. Stern was happier with this concerto than he was with the Beethoven opus. Despite its sturdiness, there is a deal of poetry and charm in the Brahms concerto, particularly in the slow movement, one of the loveliest ever written, and the utterly pure tone Mr. Stern draws from his instrument is ideal.

In the lengthy first movement, orchestra and soloist were in complete accord, providing a deeply felt large-toned performance. In the hearty finale, the music glittered and came in waves to the audience. There was tremendous applause which Mr. Stern shared with the orchestra and Mr. Monteux.

Brahms Symphony

The concert concluded with the Brahms' "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor." The years have broadened Mr. Monteux's conception of this mighty work, and deepened his feeling for it. Today he provided a reading of great vitality, deep penetration. It was wholly rewarding and, in fact, a brilliant realization of this music. The orchestra responded superbly to the conductor's demands and the sound was sumptuous throughout.

Rudolf Serkin will open this week's events with a recital in the theater-concert hall Wednesday night. He will play the "Sonata in F Major, No. 2, Opus 10," "Hammerklavier Sonata in B Flat, Op. 106."

Friday night we shall hear Beethoven's "Missa Sollemnis" and Adele Addison will be one of the solo quartet. Saturday night, for the first time at Tanglewood, the second act of Beethoven's only opera "Fidelio" will be sung. Margaret Harshaw, soprano, will appear in this work and also in the "Immolation" scene from "Götterdammerung."

Sunday [illegible] will play Bee[illegible] No. 4 in G Ma[illegible] Orchestra." Th[illegible] include the Fifth [illegible] phonies of Beethoven.

always eager to serve you at

Trees provide the greenery which graces the views that attract Backroad Bill as he charts his trips. On the next page he rises as far as he can to overlook hundreds of miles of wood-

Manos. Page 8A, presented by photographer Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge, deals with an offshoot of fine music, Great Barrington's High Fidelity magazine. To see all of the Berkshires

S.S. PIERCE CO.

ICE CUBES AVAILABLE

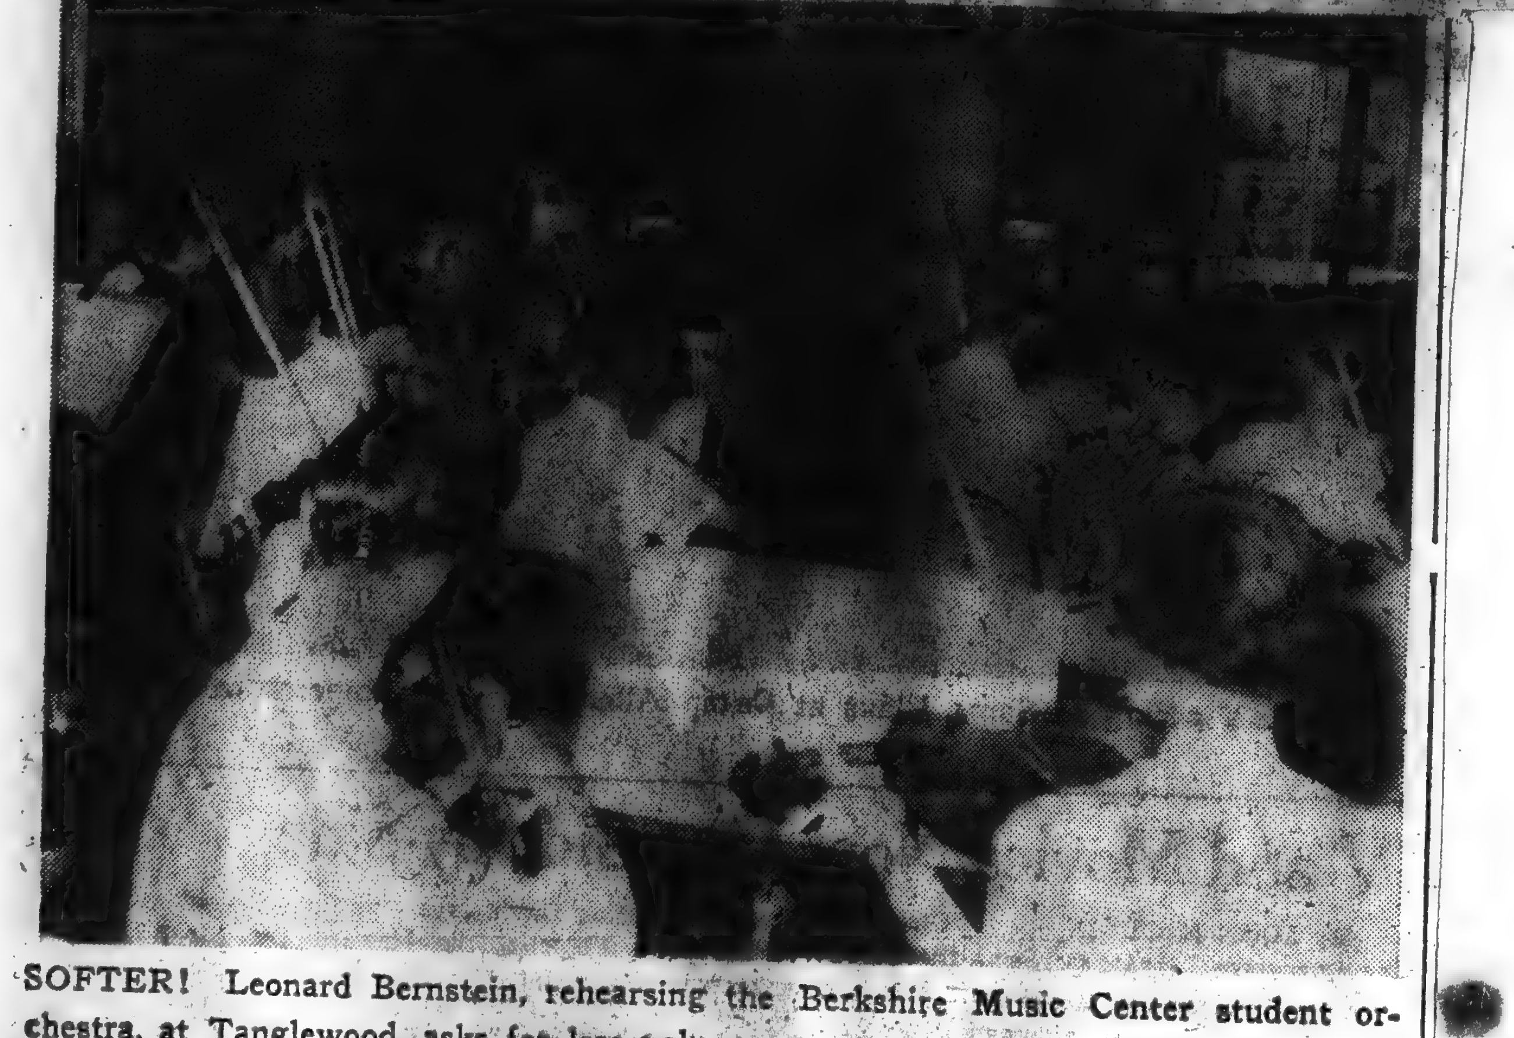
Hashim's Corner Stores

Mercury Outboard

Camping Supplies

Massachusetts' "Belt of Culture" Was Born in the Dan Hanna Farm Horse Ring at Stockbridge 21 Years Ago When Henry Hadley Conducted an Orchestra of New York Philharmonic Musicians for "Well-Heeled People of Social Distinction"

Today the Berkshire Music Festival Is for All the People From All Over



SOFTER! Leonard Bernstein, rehearsing the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, at Tanglewood, asks for less volume.

ublic Library.

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX—The Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts have been transformed into a region of increasing tourist travel and what, if the term were not so frightening, you might call The Belt of Culture. Good music has been prominent among the various forces which have worked this transformation over the past 20 years or so.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood has played a large part in this development, along with other cultural influences, the profound beauty of the region itself, and ever-lengthening stretches of high-speed, modern highways. What used to be in Summertime a strip of greenly-charming sleepy villages, and imposing country estates of the wealthy, has become a region where the welcome traveler may enjoy a variety of eye, ear and heart pleasures when vacation time comes 'round.

This portion of Heaven-on-Earth runs about 50 miles from the Vermont border to the Connecticut, and approximately 25 miles east from the New York state line. In it are so many things that the public who visit there can easily be a good deal happier than Kings. Music and its relatives, theatre and art, were my concern during my visit, and I wanted to find out, on the spot, just how much they had been responsible for this progress toward general enjoyment.

* * *

In our life things often work out to a satisfaction not foreseen. There is a quiet irony in the fact that when Henry Hadley conducted an orchestrat of New York Philharmonic-Symphony musicians in the horse ring of the Dan Hanna Farm at Stockbridge in 1934, the audience consisted mainly of well-heeled people with social distinction. Twenty-one years later the Berkshire Festival is for all people, from those who park their expensive cars on the east side of the Music Shed, to those who bring their own picnic and listen to the music while sitting on the lawn.

* * *

That the Berkshire Festival has become the outstanding Summer music Festival of the United States, drawing a huge and heterogenous public from all over, is but simple fact. For some years it has been running comfortably in the black, which is almost unheard-of in the field of symphonic music. The "take," as show business calls gross receipts, has been tremendous.

How much of it has remained in the Berkshires?

For this I went to see two men in Pittsfield, the Berkshire County seat, banking and industrial center of the region.

* * *

"Tanglewood certainly means extra dollars to us in Pittsfield," said James Lucas, executive vice president of the Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce. "One hundred seventy-seven private homes are registered with us as tourist guest houses. They, of course, are in addition to the hotels and inns roundabout. Last year we had so much business that we had to direct people as far away as Springfield for accommodations. Then they'd come back next day. We have had an increase in savings accounts, locally, from $37,000,000 to $100,000,000 in 11 years. No doubt Tanglewood accounts for a portion of that. How much I couldn't say."

* * *

John F. Downing, who directs the operations of the Berkshire Hills Conference, feels much the same way.

"Tanglewood has been responsible for the Lenox development of inns and other accommodations. Twenty-one motels have been constructed within eight years. I'd say that it is due to the Festival that there has been a total increase of some 80 places of accommodation.

"Many a person who has taken in paying guests has sent his kids to camp, or has put a new roof on his house from the money he has made. That is, both Tanglewood and the whole recreational picture have been responsible."

Both Mr. Lucas and Mr. Downing look forward to the construction of the new toll road and the completion of improvements on Route 2. They believe it will swell the flow of Berkshire visitors.

* * *

Meanwhile the 1955 Berkshire Festival looks as if it will end with bigger attendance than ever. The advance reservations already have surpassed those for 1954 which was the biggest season in Festival history.

* * *

There is another increasing aspect at Tanglewood, small at the moment, but possibly of future significance. That is Department 5 of the Berkshire Music Center, the school run in conjunction with the Festival. Department 5 consists not of professional musicians, but of amateurs who may go for two weeks, or four or six, play and sing at the classes of this group, and thus enjoy their avocation in an exceptional way.

The other morning Department 5 (or the Tanglewood Study Group, as it also is known) were going over an old Tuender cantata on "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." They were deep in concentration, and the sound was good.

* * *

Consider three members of this group, who have come to spend some vacation time with music. They are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth D. van Wagenen, 66 and 67 respectively, from Casper, Wy., and Morton Lachenbruch, from Jackson Heights, L. I., who is a violinist, aged 71.

* * *

Other, smaller musical ventures have followed in the wake of Tanglewood. Irmgard Carle, a folk music specialist, and her husband, Dr. Charles Carle, in 1954 started a Folk-Music Workshop, and presented a series of such concerts in Sedgwick Hall at the Lenox Public Library. They are back this year. Dr. Carle is a correspondent for several German papers; his wife is music director of the Workshop, which includes folk music both sung and played.

Jazz has its innings, week-ends, at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, hard by the Music Inn, run by Philip and Stephanie Barber. He is a Manhattan public relations man who liked jazz. In 1950 he decided that jazz, as well as serious music, was needed in The Belt of Culture. He was put in touch with Prof. Marshall Stearns, a teacher of English who is also an authority on jazz. Prof. Marshall fell in with the Barber idea, and the Music Barn was conceived.

To the east and south of Lenox, in the township of Becket, is the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Ted Shawn has been the guiding genius here ever since he bought a tract of land and some run-down buildings in 1930. At first Jacob's Pillow was a sort of retreat for Shawn's male dance group who wanted to work at their art in Summer seclusion. But word got about and soon there was a public for their dancing. A theatre seating 525 was put up in 1942, but World War II intervened. Jacob's Pillow did not begin to come into its own as a famed and well-attended center of art dancing until about 1949.

Like Tanglewood, Jacob's Pillow also runs a school. This is close to the heart of Mr. Shawn, who administers the affairs of Jacob's Pillow each season, and manages to make a single personal appearance and give one lecture each season. Mr. Shawn has a big outlook toward his art and profession; he likes to have many styles practiced, and the varied programs, Wednesdays through Saturdays, prove his point. The day I was there I sat for a while watching a class of youngsters working at the bar in details of classic style. Five minutes later, in another rehearsal shed, I saw and heard the fervid intricacies of Haitian native dances and tomtoms by Jean Leon Destine and his company.

The Jacob's Pillow Theatre is admirably equipped for its purpose, and it has one of the best stage floors this chronicler has seen. Two portraits hung on either side of the proscenium, and spotlighted at performance times, attest to the great past of the man who founded the center. One is a portrait of his former associate, Ruth St. Denis, the other of Mr. Shawn in his famous Indian role, "Thunder Bird." Both were painted by the father of Gov. Christian Herter.

Stockbridge Town Hall again will house its source of musical pleasure in August, when New York Pro Musica Antiqua returns for a series of five concerts. This organization, with its Primavera Singers, specializes in music from mediaeval, renaissance and baroque times.

At the northern end of The Belt of Culture lies the finely-groomed college hamlet of Williamstown. Williams College has had its own superbly-equipped theatre for 15 years, an admirably designed structure with a fine electrical switchboard in the orchestra pit, a stage 60 by 32 feet, with a permanent cyclorama, and acres of rehearsal and dressing room space. Up to the present time both the theatre and music departments of Williams have shared quarters in the Adams Theatre.

* * *

Just this Summer, with permission from Williams and under incorporation of the Williamstown Theatre Foundation, a stock company has made the Adams Theatre available to the public. With David C. Bryant Jr. as executive director, and Nikos Psacharopoulos (from the Amherst College drama department) as associate director, 10 plays will be given. The wind-up will be no less than "Ondine," which requires tricky staging.

* * *

Just a few hundred yards off the main street of Williamstown stands a white marble structure that fairly dazzles your eyes when the sun is bright. This is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, opened last May 18, and now open to the extent of three rooms. This museum eventualy will house the extensive personal collection of paintings, sculpture, silver and other objects of Robert Sterling Clark, a New York financial man. He not only gave the museum to Williams, but, as importantly, provided the money to maintain it.

The Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute no doubt will be later and better described by the Globe's Art Editor, Edgar Driscoll. It will suffice to say here that, according to curator Peter Guill, it contains more Winslow Homer oils than any other one musuem owns; "Rockets and Blue Lights," said to be "the finest Turner in this country," and one of the 72 copies that Gilbert Stuart made of his head of George Washington.

All this—and let us not forget Billy Miles' Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge—just goes to show how much the Berkshires have changed in less than a generation. And around and beyond all these manifestations of living arts, lies the eternal rolling green of countryside. This is a rich region for enjoyment of a superior sort. But don't be put off by that term The Belt of Culture!

Spfld Republican

Students at Tanglewood In Three One-Act Operas

7/31

Lenox, July 30—Three contemporary one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Monday night at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others, sung by students of Department II (chorus).

The performance is open to those who support the summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Guest Composer

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fur Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the U. S. for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its fist stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950. It was first staged in the U. S. in 1953 by the opera workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois, and this will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" (L'Abandon d'Ariane), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, who is head of the Associate Division of the Opera Dept.

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946 was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka. The three one-act operas are produced under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department.

Choral Music

On the same program will be a concert of choral music, prepared by Hugh Ross, head of Tanglewood's chorus deaprtment, with the assistance of Iva D. Hiatt and John Krueger. The choral program is: "The 142d Psalm" (1941) by Julius Chajes, for mezzo-soprano, tenor and baritone solo, mixed voices and organ; "Two Pilgrim Psalms" (1951) by Ross Lee Finney, Ann Arbor, Mich., Psalm 138: "With al my hart I'le Thee confess, and Psalm 95: "Come, let us to the Lord showt joyfully." Also "Three Songs of Spring" (91955) by Domingo Santa Cruz, Chile: "From the mountains comes the snow, On the arid earth of winter," "Where are the ones that are departed?"; "Lamentation Over Boston" and "Modern Music" by William Billings (1746-1800), and "The Stas," by S. J. Taneyef. Students of Department II (Chorus) and conductors from the choral department will participate.

NYT 7/31

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TODAY at 2:30

Wed. Aug. 3 (Theatre) at 8:30—RUDOLF SERKIN—Beethoven Piano Sonatas
SHED CONCERTS: Fri. Aug. 5 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—Missa Solemnis
Guest conductor, Leonard Bernstein
Sat. Aug. 6 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER: Soloist, Margaret Harshaw
Sun. Aug. 7 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM: Soloist, Eugene Istomin
Tickets Wed. [illegible] $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors, Leonard Bernstein-Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

☞ For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

[289]

Eagle 7/30

Music

Varied Program Given at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

LAST NIGHT'S concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood marked the beginning of the final half of this year's Berkshire Festival. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch played the Hamilton Harty arrangement of the suite from Handel's "Water Music," the fourth symphonies of both Schumann and Brahms, and Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard."

The Barber piece is a commission of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation and was only completed and first performed last year. Samuel Barber was exhibit A of American composers on the 1952 European tour of the Boston orchestra where his overture to "The School for Scandal" was on most of the programs. Last night's work enlisted the assistance of a mixed chorus, the Festival Chorus trained by Hugh Ross of the Berkshire Music Center choral faculty, and, as soloists, of Leontyne Price, contralto Regina Sarfaty, and tenor Arthur Shoep.

* * *

MISS PRICE'S opportunities, unfortunately, were too meagre to suit the desires of the audience as she had but one aria, and that too short, and the assignments of the other two soloists were even more limited. Miss Price's voice was in prime fresh power and its easy resonance was favored both by Barber's writing and by Munch's discretion with the orchestra. She sang with a classic style perfectly suited to the text which is based on the religious devotion of the Danish philosopher whose death, exactly a century ago, is being memorialized this year.

Leontyne Price

The "Prayers" start with a male chorus singing without accompaniment. This section doesn't ris~ above a fervent restraint and is a harbinger of devout petition and supplication which are not quite fulfilled musically in the succeeding short cantata. Munch built the half-dozen separate episodes into bulk rather than a climax and the audience was oppressed by volume mor~ than impressed by the sound.

* * *

THE CONDUCTOR was at his gayest and most free in the other parts of the program where the orchestra play‹ l for him with a response in a corresponding spirit. The Handel was played with guileless bouyancy and the string tone was allowed to be heard in its finest glory. The strings again shone in the Brahms symphony with which the concert closed.

There was an ardent glow to the celli, and then the violins as they repeated it, in the second theme of the first movement, and the intense warmth of the slow-movement second theme was one of the biggest joys of the evening. The violins ascended to the tops of the G strings with uniform security to produce a beautiful tonal effect. Every detail of the rich score was realized and Munch was in his element. For my taste, though, he could have let the tympani player pound away in the formal gardens of the Tanglewood estate if he chose to let him release all the potentialities of his drums.

* * *

MUNCH CALLED Doriot Anthony to the front of the stage at the conclusion of the symphony to be recognized for her outstanding execution of flute interlude in the final movement. This is an excellent practice but it is often a bit unfair. For instance, this very episode for which Miss Anthony stood later expands into a dialogue and a discussion between the clarinet and oboe, answered by the violas and celli, as lovely a bit of orchestral color as Brahms ever wrote. It can not always be clear who is responsible for all the beautiful sounds which come from the various orchestral sections but the audience loves to show their appreciation to individuals, as they did to the flute soloist last night.

The Schumann cult never can be sure whether they are in temporary obscurity or are being eclipsed for longer terms. I am of the sect that welcomes any repetition of his works, especially the D minor symphony. Munch played it for us as a premier chef would have prepared his masterpiece. The tempi were comfortable without being headlong; the romanze, as played by the oboe and celli, had consummate style, the ensuing violin solo by concertmaster Richard Burgin a happy and lilting grace, and detail after detail was a succession of gems.

It was good to see "lively" as Schumann indicated (lebhaft), interpreted as just that and not furiously at full speed ahead. An obvious acquaintance with the dictionary is an advantage and necessity at times. Musicians at large might well emulate Munch in his approach to this Schumann and apply to a composer's wishes their true meaning instead of the blanket and all-inclusive synonym, speed.

OPERA LOVERS in Boris Blacher's "Romeo and Juliet" are soprano Naomi Farr of New York and tenor Harold Jo[illegible] of Chicago, Tanglewood students who will sing lead roles in single performance of one-act opera at 8:30 Monday, Aug. 1, in Theater-Concert Hall. Program will include choral selections and short operas by Darius Milhaud ("Ariana Abandoned") and Bohuslav Martinu ("Comedy on the Bridge").

Tanglewood Tales

Opera Scenes Tuesday Night

The next program of opera scenes performed by students of Department IV will be given Tuesday night at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The program follows:

Don Giovanni	Mozart
Scene from Act I
Don Giovanni	Peyton Higgison
Zerlina	Peggy Ann Hoover
Donna Elvira	Claire Watson
Donna Anna	Helen Hess
Don Ottavio	Jefferson Morris
Hansel and Gretel	Humperdinck
Scene from Act II
Gretel	Peggy Ann Hoover
Hansel	Lucile Villeneuve
Sandman	Darlene Miller
Don Giovanni	Mozart
Scenes from Acts I and II
Zerlina	Christina Cardillo
Masetto	Herbert Gibson
Eastward in Eden	Meyerowitz
Act II
Dr. Wadsworth	Peyton Higgison
Parishioners—	Lee Goebel and Robert Kerns
Miss Simpson	Regina Sarfaty
Emily Dickinson	Saramae Endich
INTERMISSION
Aida	Verdi
Scene from Act II
Amneris	Mary MacKenzie
Aida	Helen Hess
Rosenkavalier	Strauss
Scene from Act III
Marschallin	Claire Watson
Octavian	Regina Sarfaty
Sophie	Darlene Miller
Don Pasquale	Donizetti
Scene from Act II
Don Pasquale	Malcolm Bernstein
Doctor Malatesta	Peyton Higgison
Norina	Susan Winchester
Ernesto	Richard Krause
Notary	Douglas Miller
Majardomo	David Beckwitt
Servants	Garry Gaines and Clyde Hiss

* * *

Student Conductors To Make Debuts

The combined chorus-opera program Monday at Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, will witness the debuts on the podium of two student conductors. Kalman Novak, 31, of Cambridge, a Harvard graduate, will lead the orchestra of Department I (orchestra) students and chorus in the pit of students from Department II (chorus) in the Tanglewood premiere of Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet." Mr. Novak, a graduate in piano studies from the New England Conservatory of Music, is now conductor of the Philharmonic Choir of Arlington, and teaches music at the Longy School of Music in Cambridge. Igor Chichagov, 31, of Baltimore, Md., will be directing a student orchestra for Darius Milhaud's short opera "Ariana Abandoned" on the same evening. A native of Leningrad, Russia, he attended high school there until 1941, and simultaneously the Leningrad Music Conservatory. Upon coming to this country in 1951 he studied conducting and opera at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, and is now conductor and music director of the Baltimore Civic Opera Company.

* * *

Composers' Forum Tuesday at 4:30

The composers' forum in the Theater-Concert Hall at 4:30 p.m. Monday will include the following:

Somnambulistic Ballad, Piece for Chorus — Claire Polin
Barth Bennitt, conductor
Tone Poem (About Israel) for Piano — Victor Ziskin
Victor Ziskin, piano
Piece for Violin and Piano — Paul Glass
Tossi Ichiyanagi, piano; Hiroshi Hatoyama, violin
3 Lieder — Eino Rautavarra
Christina Cardillo, soprano; Eino Rautavaara, piano
Piece for String Bass and Piano — Alan Daniels
John Carbone, string bass; Robert Miller, piano
Three Movements from a Trio for Clarinet, Cello, and Piano — William Sydeman

---

Herald 7/31

Beethoven, Wagner Feature Fifth Festival Week Concerts

The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its semi-final week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on Aug. 3 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

JACK DELON, who will play Sid in Sigmund Romberg's all-time favorite musical, "The Desert Song," which starts a week's engagement at the North Shore Music Theater in Beverly tomorrow night.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for the three weekend concerts in the huge Music Shed. Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, and Leonard Bernstein, who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening.

Mr. Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Mr. Bernstein's baton two summers ago. Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-45, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center Students of the chorus, opera and Study Group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio", Act II, with the Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, Ohio, Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor, and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams, Mass.), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein (Baltimore, Md.), bass. The second half of the program is devoted to excerpts from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung", with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The Sunday afternoon concert Mr. Munch will devote to Beethoven, whose music is a feature of the 1955 Berkshire Festival, with Eugene Istomin, pianist, making his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra as soloist in the Concerto No. 4.

Evening concerts at Tanglewood are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon performance is at 2:30 p.m. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow patrons to hear the concerts from the lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance.

A bonus for Festival patrons is the Sunday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a.m. (Aug. 7), for which a nominal charge is made of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Boston Post

Concerts This Week

7/31

TODAY

Gardner Museum. Harriett Emerson, violinist. 2:00 p. m. Free.

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Brahms—Academic Festival Overture, Violin Concerto (Isaac Stern, soloist), and Symphony No. 1. 2:30 p. m.

Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass. Teddy Charles Quartet. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

MONDAY

Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood. "Romeo and Juliet" by Boris Blacher. "L'Abandon d'Ariane" by Milhaud. Tanglewood Opera Department. Directed by Boris Goldovsky. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Center Theater, Duxbury, Mass. "The Sailing of the Nancy Belle" and Menotti's "The Medium." Performances nightly at 8:30 through Saturday.

Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Mass. Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Beethoven Sonata program. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

FRIDAY

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Robert Goldsand, pianist, and the New York Woodwind Quintet. 8:30 p. m.

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Beethoven—"Missa Solemnis" (IN MEMORY OF SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY). Soloists and chorus. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SATURDAY

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Beethoven—Act II of "Fidello" (Margaret Harshaw, David Lloyd, Mac Morgan). Wagner—Siegfried's Death Music, and Immolation Scene. 8:30 p. m.

Castle Hill, Ipswich. Robert Goldsand, pianist, and the New York Woodwind Quintet. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SUNDAY

Music Shed, Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Beethoven—Symphony No. 8, Fourth Piano Concerto (Eugene Istomin, soloist), and Symphony No. 5. 2:30 p. m.

Boston Globe 7/31

Three One-Act Operas at Tanglewood

Three contemporary one-act operas, by Boris Blacher, Darius Milhaud and Bohuslav Martinu, will be performed by students of opera of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Monday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. A portion of the evening will also be devoted to choral works by Domingo Santa Cruz, Ross Lee Finney, William Billings and others. The performance is open to those who support the Summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

"Romeo and Juliet," a chamber opera in three parts, is by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule fuer Musik in Berlin, currently visiting the United States for the first time as guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The opera was given its first stage performance at the Salzburg Festival in 1950, and was first staged in the United States in 1953 by the Opera Workshop of the School of Music, University of Illinois. This will be its Tanglewood premiere. It will be sung in English.

"Ariana Abandoned" ("L'Abandon d'Ariane"), a one-act opera by Darius Milhaud, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948, has a text by Henry Hoppenot, and is given, for the first time at Tanglewood, in the English version of Ludwig Zirner, head of the associate division of the opera department.

"Comedy on the Bridge"

"Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, guest composer at Tanglewood in 1946, was produced at the Berkshire Music Center in 1951. It has a libretto by V. K. Klicpera and an English version by Walter Schmolka. The three one-act operas are under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood opera department.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, the opera department will give the world premiere of the one-act "The Rope," by Louis Mennini of the faculty of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. This is the first opera to be commissioned at Tanglewood under the Koussevitzky Music Foundation plan to develop young composers, which was initiated in 1953. "The Rope" is based on Eugene O'Neill's one-act play of the same name.

On the same program will be what, so far as is known, is the first American production of "Zaide" (K. 344), an unfinished two-act opera by Mozart, written at Salzburg in 1779 to a libretto by Johann Andreas Schachtner. The Tanglewood version of the opera has been prepared in English by Sarah Caldwell.

Berkshire Festival

Cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, hampered by a shoulder ailment, has been obliged to cancel his three scheduled appearances at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Lenox, Mass. This will necessitate alteration of some programs. The list now is announced for this week as follows:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux guest conductor. Brahms: "Academic Festival" Overture; Violin Concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist; Symphony No. 1, in C minor.

Wednesday, Aug. 3, at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Rudolf Serkin, pianist, in Sonatas by Beethoven: F major, Op. 10, No. 2; D major, Op. 10, No. 3; B-flat ("Hammerklavier"), Op. 106.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein guest conductor. Beethoven: Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky); soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, trained by Hugh Ross.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director. Beethoven: Act 2 of "Fidelio" (first performance at Tanglewood), soloists: Leonore, Margaret Harshaw; Rocco, Mac Morgan; Florestan, David Lloyd; Marzelline, Christina Cardillo; Pizzaro and Fernando, Malcolm Bernstein; Jacquino, Arthur Schoep. Wagner: Excerpts from "Goetterdaemmerung" — Siegfried's Rhine Journey and Death Music, Immolation Scene, Margaret Harshaw, soprano soloist.

Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch music director. Beethoven: Symphony No. 8; Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major, Eugene Istomin, soloist; Symphony No. 5.

[290]

l Singers Study at Tanglewood

gfield singers studying at Tanglewood: Stephen Harbachick, baritone; Barbara Da- with Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

ONE-MAN SHOW BY TURE BENGTZ AT TANGLEWOOD

Paintings, Drawings and Prints On View This Week

Lenox, July 30—An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School here, will be on display during the coming week, starting today in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as all the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

When he came to the United States in 1927 from his native Finland, Ture Bengtz studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts. His awards have included the Paige traveling scholarship for European study; first prize in the New England competition sponsored by the Stewart Gallery, Boston, in 1946; the Palmer Memorial prize at the National Academy of Design in New York; as well as an honorable mention from the Society of American Etchers.

Examples of his work can be seen at the National Academy, the Art Institute in Chicago, Washington's Library of Congress and at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Library, Wiggings collection. Mr. Bengtz has recently exhibited at the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and the Otis Library and Museum. Since his last showing at Tanglewood a year ago, he visited his family in Finland in the autumn of 1954, did portrait commissions, and had a one-man show at Marieham.

Big Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses resting," oil; "The Fiddler," oil; "Girl Blowing a Horn," oil; and "Children in the Countryside," oil.

Sculptures, P[illegible]aphs, Paintings [illegible]anglewood

Carvings by Peter A[illegible] and Canvasses by Ralph Berkowitz Seen [illegible] Lenox; Janet Appleton's Water Colors, Al[illegible] Kiesling's Oils at Mt. Park

By WAYNE C. SMITH

The principal art events of this past week at Western Massachusetts centers were [illegible] exhibitions presented at Tanglewood, in Lenox, and at the Mountain Park Casino, Holyoke, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Valley Players as part of their contributions to the artists in other fields in the area.

Both of these two organizations have been generous and considerae in providing show windows for the work of the artists in their respective areas an din bringing to the attention of their large audiences through regular programs of exhibitions.

Paintings and Sculpture

Presented this past week in the lobby of the Casino were groups of water colors and enamels by Janet Appleton of Springfield and oils by Albert G. Kiesling of Easthampton. A group of small sculptures by Peter Abate of Brookline and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge were displayed in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood.

Elsewhere around Tanglewood, a group of large sculptures by Abate are placed to advantage in the formal gardens and available to few visitors is the group of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, which are hung in his office in the administration building.

Three of the paintings by Berkowitzz are abstract impressions of views of Venice, Italy, which he completed after returning to this country from his European tour as accompanist for Gregor Piatigorsky. From his musical training and background Berkowitz brings to his painting a commendable regard for abstract creation. The present group, however, lacks the ingenuity, vitality and freshness of vision which marked those of his paintings seen last year.

Work Familiar

Abate's work is familiar to Western Massachusetts through exhibitions of the work of Boston sculptors at the Museum of Fine Arts in Springfield and previous exhibitions at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. Then, too, he was the creator of the memorial for Serge Koussevitzky, which is on the conductor's grave at the Church-on-the-hill in Lenox, and the life-size Vermont marble altar piece, "The Holy Family," which was installed in the new octagonal Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Holyoke last Christmas.

He will be probaby even more familiar here in the future, as he plans to open a school of sculpture at the Berkshire Museum next summer, joining in the Berkshires Ture Bengtz, a fellow teacher at the school of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, who has a school during the summer at Lenox.

Abate is a native of Salem and the son of a monument carver. He first won a scholarship to the Boston Museum School and then a scholarship which took him for three years to Mexico. He had also studied in Rome on a Prix-de-Rome and a Fulbright grant and exhibited there a number of times. [illegible] ve been shown [illegible] Museum in [illegible] ition of ecclesiastical sculpture in New York, the DeCordova and Dana Museum at Lincoln and Addison Gallery, Andover.

Abate Sculutures

The sculpture by Abate being displayed in the gardens includes "Gli Stateli," a family group some 10 feet high which the artist started in Italy and finished at his Brookline studio this year; another family group nearly as tall entitled "Architecture;" "Mankind," representing a chained man, from driftwood; and "Life," a life-size group of a man, wife and child in marble, which was shown at Tanglewood last year but has since been remodeled.

Abate's works shown this past week in the reception hall are all small pieces and includes a group of portraits of famous musicians as well as compositional works in a venturesome vein. Many of the latter are lineraly abstracted while the influence of Rodin, through Epstein, is notable among the portraits.

RECEPTION HALL, TANGLEWOOD: Exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengts, director of the Ture Bengts School of Art, Lenox, closes Friday; drawings and sculpture by Franc Epping, director of the Sculpture Workshop, Lenox, opens Saturday.

'Pastorale' Of Munch Unusual

Pe 58 7/31

By TUCKER KEISER

The key to an understanding of Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven's "Pastorale," as for many of his performances, can be found in his book, "I Am a Conductor."

"My taste for painting," he writes, "often brings visual images to mind to mix with sounds . . . In the end, almost all music is descriptive for me, but sometimes I experience visual impressions that the composer had no intention of arousing."

Much has been made of the conductor's interest in the graphic arts. His home in Paris is said to be the envy of many museums, and he writes that after a concert has gone well he rewards himself by buying a picture, and after a concert has gone badly, he consoles himself—by buying a picture.

Beethoven suggested a picture for each movement in the "Pastorale": serene impressions on arriving in the country, a scene by the brookside, a thunderstorm interrupting a jolly gathering of country folk, and a shepherd expressing in song his gayety and thankfulness after the tempest is over.

This portrayal of moods rather than scenes, of serenity and merriment, of emotional outburst and calm happiness, is a kind of tone-painting still characteristically musical because it is dynamic, constantly moving and changing. As Munch conducts the score he seems to stand before a succession of static pictures, reacting independently to each, securing an illusion of movement only by the exclamatory intensity of his isolated impressions.

Whereas Beethoven seems to have a single generalized setting in mind for the first movement, which he approaches from every angle, Mr. Munch seems to be contemplating a number of distinct scenes, of each of which he takes an overexposed snapshot.

Running Brbok

If we take the opening theme as a picture of a brook running through a meadow in a valley, we are reminded of this picture by the composer not only in the gentle development section, and again in the recapitulation, but finally in the coda. Through variations in tempo, the spotlighting of certain instrumental color, and dynamic level changes, Mr. Munch makes each return to the theme a quite new picture.

This is an original approach, and a fascinating subject for study, but an approach which sometimes appears more fitted to the dicipline of the plastic arts than to music.

In the thunderstorm sequence Beethoven describes a jolly gathering of country people surprised one drowsy afternoon by a sudden storm.

After a peasant festivity a la Breughel, Mr. Munch whips up a storm of frontal proportions during which the wind rises to hurricane fury, the lightning becomes apocalyptic, and the rain pours down from a cloudburst. After this violence, the abrupt calm which follows seems less peaceful than tense.

Beethoven adds bird calls after the second movement to round out his scene by the brook. Mr. Munch moves them into the foreground so that each song is a climax rather than an afterthought.

Perhaps his delight in the painter's art, an intense realization of a momentary impression, explains the curious staccato, hyperbolic, and exciting rather than integrated and essentially musical atmosphere which this reviewer has always sensed in his interpretations.

l Singers Study at Tanglewood

ngfield singers studying at Tanglewood: Stephen Harbachick, baritone; Barbara Da- with Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

ONE-MAN SHOW BY TURE BENGTZ AT TANGLEWOOD

Paintings, Drawings and Prints On View This Week

Lenox, July 30—An exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox School here, will be on display during the coming week, starting today in the glassed exhibition hall, main gate, at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Bengtz show, as well as all the others in the weekly displays of painting, sculpture and photographs at Tanglewood, has been arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

When he came to the United States in 1927 from his native Finland, Ture Bengtz studied at the Boston Museum School, where he is head of the department of drawing and graphic arts. His awards have included the Paige traveling scholarship for European study; first prize in the New England competition sponsored by the Stewart Gallery, Boston, in 1946; the Palmer Memorial prize at the National Academy of Design in New York; as well as an honorable mention from the Society of American Etchers.

Examples of his work can be seen at the National Academy, the Art Institute in Chicago, Washington's Library of Congress and at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Boston Library, Wiggings collection. Mr. Bengtz has recently exhibited at the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and the Otis Library and Museum. Since his last showing at Tanglewood a year ago, he visited his family in Finland in the autumn of 1954, did portrait commissions, and had a one-man show at Marieham.

Big Tanglewood exhibit includes such recent work as "Olive Bank," oil painting abstract of a Swedish sailing vessel; "Horses resting," oil; "The Fiddler," oil; "Girl Blowing a Horn," oil; and "Children in the Countryside," oil.

Sculptures, [illegible]aphs, Painting[illegible]anglewood

Carvings by Peter A[illegible] Canvasses by Ralph Berkowitz [illegible] Janet Appleton's Water Colors, Albe[illegible]ing's Oils at Mt. Park

By WAYNE C. [illegible]

The principal art events of this past week at Western Massachusetts centers were [illegible] exhibitions presented at Tanglewood, in Lenox, and at the Mountain Park Casino, Holyoke, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Valley Players as part of their contributions to the artists in other fields in the area.

Both of these two organizations have been generous and considerae in providing show windows for the work of the artists in their respective areas an din bringing to the attention of their large audiences through regular programs of exhibitions.

Paintings and Sculpture

Presented this past week in the lobby of the Casino were groups of water colors and enamels by Janet Appleton of Springfield and oils by Albert G. Kiesling of Easthampton. A group of small sculptures by Peter Abate of Brookline and photographs of music and musicians in the Berkshires by Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge were displayed in the reception hall at the main gate of Tanglewood.

Elsewhere around Tanglewood, a group of large sculptures by Abate are placed to advangtage in the formal gardens and available to few visitors is the group of paintings by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, which are hung in his office in the administration building.

Three of the paintings by Berkowitzz are abstract impressions of views of Venice, Italy, which he completed after returning to this country from his European tour as accompanist for Gregor Piatigorsky. From his musical training and background Berkowitz brings to his painting a commendable regard for abstract creation. The present group, however, lacks the ingenuity, vitality and freshness of vision which marked those of his paintings seen last year.

Work Familiar

Abate's work is familiar to Western Massachusetts through exhibitions of the work of Boston sculptors at the Museum of Fine Arts in Springfield and previous exhibitions at Tanglewood and the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. Then, too, he was the creator of the memorial for Serge Koussevitzkv, which is on the conductor's grave at the Church-on-the-hill in Lenox, and the life-size Vermont marble altar piece, "The Holy Family," which was installed in the new octagonal Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Holyoke last Christmas.

He will be probaby even more familiar here in the future, as he plans to open a school of sculpture at the Berkshire Museum next summer, joining in the Berkshires Ture Bengtz, a fellow teacher at the school of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, who has a school during the summer at Lenox.

Abate is a native of Salem and the son of a monument carver. He first won a scholarship to the Boston Museum School and then a scholarship which took him for three years to Mexico. He had also studied in Rome on a Prix-de-Rome and a Fulbright grant and exhibited there a number of times. Lately his works have been shown at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the exhibition of ecclesiastical sculpture in New York, the DeCordova and Dana Museum at Lincoln and Addison Gallery, Andover.

Abate Sculutures

The sculpture by Abate being displayed in the gardens includes "Gli Stateli," a family group some 10 feet high which the artist started in Italy and finished at his Brookline studio this year; another family group nearly as tall entitled "Architecture," "Mankind," representing a chained man from driftwood; and "Life," a life-size group of a man, wife and child in marble, which was shown at Tanglewood last year but has since been remodeled.

Abate's works shown this past week in the reception hall are all small pieces and includes a group of portraits of famous musicians as well as compositional works in a venturesome vein. Many of the latter are lineraly abstracted while the influence of Rodin, through Epstein, is notable among the portraits.

RECEPTION HALL, TANGLEWOOD: Exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints by Ture Bengts, director of the Ture Bengts School of Art, Lenox, closes Friday; drawings and sculpture by Frano Epping, director of the Sculpture Workshop, Lenox, opens Saturday.

'Pastorale' Of Munch Unusual

Post 7/31

By TUCKER KEISER

The key to an understanding of Charles Munch's interpretation of Beethoven's "Pastorale," as for many of his performances, can be found in his book, "I Am a Conductor."

"My taste for painting," he writes, "often brings visual images to mind to mix with sounds . . . In the end, almost all music is descriptive for me, but sometimes I experience visual impressions that the composer had no intention of arousing."

Much has been made of the conductor's interest in the graphic arts. His home in Paris is said to be the envy of many museums, and he writes that after a concert has gone well he rewards himself by buying a picture, and after a concert has gone badly, he consoles himself—by buying a picture.

Beethoven suggested a picture for each movement in the "Pastorale": serene impressions on arriving in the country, a scene by the brookside, a thunderstorm interrupting a jolly gathering of country folk, and a shepherd expressing in song his gayety and thankfulness after the tempest is over.

This portrayal of moods rather than scenes, of serenity and merriment, of emotional outburst and calm happiness, is a kind of tone-painting still characteristically musical because it is dynamic, constantly moving and changing. As Munch conducts the score he seems to stand before a succession of static pictures, reacting independently to each, securing an illusion of movement only by the exclamatory intensity of his isolated impressions.

Whereas Beethoven seems to have a single generalized setting in mind for the first movement, which he approaches from every angle, Mr. Munch seems to be contemplating a number of distinct scenes, of each of which he takes an over-exposed snapshot.

Running Brook

If we take the opening theme as a picture of a brook running through a meadow in a valley, we are reminded of this picture by the composer not only in the gentle development section, and again in the recapitulation, but finally in the coda. Through variations in tempo, the spotlighting of certain instrumental color, and dynamic level changes, Mr. Munch makes each return to the theme a quite new picture.

This is an original approach, and a fascinating subject for study, but an approach which sometimes appears more fitted to the dicipline of the plastic arts than to music.

In the thunderstorm sequence Beethoven describes a jolly gathering of country people surprised one drowsy afternoon by a sudden storm.

After a peasant festivity a la Breughel, Mr. Munch whips up a storm of frontal proportions during which the wind rises to hurricane fury, the lightning becomes apocalyptic, and the rain pours down from a cloudburst. After this violence, the abrupt calm which follows seems less peaceful than tense.

Beethoven adds bird calls after the second movement to round out his scene by the brook. Mr. Munch moves them into the foreground so that each song is a climax rather than an afterthought.

Perhaps his delight in the painter's art, an intense realization of a momentary impression, explains the curious staccato, hyperbolic, and exciting rather than integrat

AMERICAN CHAIN LINK FENCE CO.
22 Ship Ave., Medford, Mass.
Riverside Avenue

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 31, 1955

Entire Boston Symphony Plays Again at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., July 30—The Boston Symphony Orchestra began the fourth week end of the Berkshire Festival and the second of concerts by its full complement of musicians in Tanglewood's Music Shed last night.

The program under the direction of Charles Munch was heard by 7,677 persons. The presence of a contemporary American work, Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," in the list, did not have the adverse effect which modern music is sometimes supposed to exert upon the attendance, which bettered the figure of the previous Friday's all-Beethoven program by forty-four.

Heard in December

Last night's other works, heard under other ideal weather conditions, were Harty's familiar arrangement of a suite from Handel's "Water Music," Schumann's Fourth Symphony in D Minor and the Fourth Symphony of Brahms.

Mr. Barber's Prayers was first played by this orchestra under Mr. Munch in Boston in December, when the Bostonians also gave it twice in New York. Leontyne Price [illegible] the soprano solos [illegible] with Regina Sarfaty [illegible] Schoep as the contralto and tenor soloists with the festival chorus trained by Hugh Ross. Short as it is, taking little over fifteen minutes, this cantata can be considered as one of Mr. Barber's most significant works thus far, as a notable contribution to the American literature for chorus with orchestra.

The music preserves the essentially prayerful nature of the composer's selections from Kierkegaard's writings; it projects and reinforces their varying expressive atmosphere. A chance to follow the words during the performance in the darkened Music Shed might have given the audience a better opportunity to consider verbal and musical relations; the first chorus was sung very intelligibly, but the rest of the text seemed hard to catch without visual aid. This happens, indeed, in many of our best choral concerts. But [illegible] in expressing the liberally ranging emotional content of the work as a whole and in its main divisions.

Skillful Scoring

Mr. Barber's scoring is [illegible] skillful and revealing [illegible] well as pronounced [illegible] expressive lines in the orchestra and the voices which, while distinguished, are parts of a single deftly balanced and proportioned musical fabric. The idiom, dissonant or consonant in savor as the expressive situation requires, is individual in music which ranges from brooding to lyric confidence. There may be one or two slightly static moments, but the general impression is one of motion. The choral and orchestral performance under a conductor obviously devoted to the work had an admirable musical and emotional unity and lucidity and fineness of dynamic shading. With a high standard of tone and range of timbres, the choristers also understood the meaning of what they sang. Miss Price's singing was discerning and persuasive, and her two colleagues fared well in their [illegible] assignments.

[illegible] The [illegible] interpretation of the Schumann symphony, sometimes rather deliberate in the first movement, had a pervasive vitality and freshness. Under Mr. Munch, the Brahms symphony was not heard as familiar music that could be taken for granted. At times, he overstressed a distinction between episodes of tension and emotional stress and others when the power, so to speak, was turned off rather than relaxed. But emotional force and musical conviction prevailed, particularly in the finale, in a performance which, as in the evening as a whole, [illegible]

---

6 The Berkshire Evening Eagle, Saturday, July 30, 1955

Committee, Boxholders Listed For Tanglewood on Parade

Honorary committee members were named today for Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday, Aug. 11. They are Mrs. William N. Bullard of Lenox, Dr. Lewis Perry of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Cabot of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cox of Exeter, N.H.

At a recent meeting of the committee Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge announced that 31 boxes had been reserved for the Shed concert at 8:30 p.m. Box holders include Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Monroe B. England, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Gibson, Mrs. S. Ralph Jones, Donald B. Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Wellington, all of Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. William Crane, Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly, and Mrs. Albert Sterner of Richmond.

Also, Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Miss Gladys Greene, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Huxley, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Miss Constance Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mrs. John L. Senior, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Stern, and Col. and Mrs. H. George Wilde of Lenox.

Others are Mrs. Charles Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe of Stockbridge; Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Beinecke, Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Straus II, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton; Mr. and Mrs. James Phinney Baxter III, of Williamstown; Mr. and Mrs. George E. Sokolsky of Otis, Julius Fleishmann of Cincinnati, Ohio; and Mrs. Ethel Cramer of Rockville, Conn.

Those wishing to reserve boxes for "Tanglewood on Parade" are to call Miss Margo Miller at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Prizes Announced

Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, chairman of the door prize committee for the benefit, has announced the following prizes: A season ticket for two for the 1956 Shed concerts, a collection of Beethoven symphonies recorded by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky and Charles Munch, and a life-time subscription for High Fidelity magazine. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky has [illegible] ed a collection of her pencil drawings of [illegible] personalities to be bid for in a silent auction. Other door prizes will be announced later.

LD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD,

Tanglewood Story 7/31

'Music Under the Moon' by John G. W. Mahanna Early History of Berkshire Festival

Habituees of the Berkshire Music Festival will read "Music Under the Moon" (Eagle Press; $2.50) and look at the many photographs of Tanglewood scenes and personalities with a bit of nostalgia. This book, just published, is written by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of the Berkshire Evening Eagle in Pittsfield. Mr. Mahanna gained his first newspaper experience on

JOHN G. W. MAHANNA

The Springfield Republican and during the war was attached to Naval Intelligence and spent some months in Springfield, working under Comdr. Raiche.

Festival Background

"Music Under the Moon" is an early history of the Festival, drawn from the official minutes of the meetings of the corporation from 1934 to 1945, when the $100,000 Music Shed at Tanglewood was presented as a gift by the Berkshire Festival organization to the Boston Symphony orchestra. An epilogue covers high lights from 1945 to the present.

This book is more than a history; it is a tribute to the pioneering spirit and vision of the small group of Berkshire residents who inaugurated the first Festival under the moon on the Hanna [illegible] in a tent on the estate of Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, and at Tanglewood before the Shed was built in 1938. Mr. Mahanna gives eloquent glimpses into the trials and problems faced by this little group. He tells how they were solved, but every solution meant an expansion of ideas and another problem.

The book is factual and informative. The photography is beautiful, wide range and as historically important as the reading material. In this 125-page book, the author has traced the beginning, growth and ultimate success of the dreams of a small group of berkshire folk, who had the courage of their convictions. The first edition of 5000 copies can be obtained in bookstores and new stands in Berkshire County, including the Music Store in Tanglewood; in Boston and Cape Cod, the Albany N. Y., area and New York City.

WILLARD M. CLARK

Midway in 'Berkshire Week'

July 31

FIVE ISSUES of The Eagle's "Berkshire Week" become matters of files and history with publication of this one, but five others of this summer supplement are on the way. At the mid-point of "Berkshire Week's" 1955 existence, it covers an unusual variety of activities that range indoors and out over the recreation spots, entertainment areas and tourist meccas of the Berkshire Hills. Pausing to recall the past, however, "Berkshire Week" pays tribute to a prime attribute of our Purple Hills—trees.

Carman

Elms, declares "Bygone Berkshire" serialist Bernard Carman, "might almost be the heraldic mark" of the county's most beautiful towns. On Page 10A he reviews the battles that raged around Pittsfield's "old elm" before Nature brought peace.

Trees provide the greenery which graces the views that attract Backroad Bill as he charts his trips. On the next page he rises as far as he can to overlook hundreds of miles of woodland from the summit of Greylock, reached by following his directions from Williamstown.

Hairpins, Tents

Jaded columnist Richard (Notes and Footnotes) Happel goes on climbing, too, checking up on the trees and views that long ago made the Mohawk Trail into the nation's first well-known tourist route. On Page 4A, he rounds the Hairpin Turn to report what the advent of thruways and turnpikes seems to mean for the future of the Trail.

Right into the heart of North Berkshire's woods goes Howard [illegible], veteran camper-outer and Eagle advertising salesman. He took the whole family for a campout at Savoy Mountain State Forest in the town of Florida to produce the first-hand report on Page 9A detailing the pleasures and drawbacks of tenting in the Berkshires.

Polo at 25

Another outdoor activity, like camping growing steadily in popularity, is polo—this weekend marking its 25th year on the local scene. The story of how Zenas Crane Colt for more than two decades has been bringing outstanding players and teams to Pittsfield is told on Page 5A by Francis Callanan of The Eagle's sports department.

Pictorially, "Berkshire Week" bows to music, now at the peak of its summer drawing power. Thet cover is a project designed and photographed by Tanglewood's official cameraman, Gus Manos. Page 8A, presented by photographer Clemens Kalischer of Stockbridge, deals with an offshoot of fine music, Great Barrington's High Fidelity magazine.

To see all of the Berkshires, you'll need maps. "Berkshire Week," on the cover of the first 1955 issue, published the newest and best illustrated Berkshire map to date, drawn by cartographer Vaughn S. Gray of Glendale, who also does the weekly Backroad Bill maps. This week Mr. Gray announced that copies of the full-size county map, bigger than cover size, printed in two colors and suitable for framing, are being distributed for general sale. If you have trouble finding one quickly in a store, he advises, you may order direct from him. The map is printed, not on newsprint, but on heavy gray paper at 75c, or on thinner paper at 50 cents.

[29a]

Second Thoughts in Music

Isaac Stern Heard Twice During Tanglewood Week

Violinist Plays Three Beethoven Sonatas and D-Major Concerto; Second and Seventh Symphonies Performed by Boston Symphony Orchestra

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, July 30—Violinist Isaac Stern was the particular star of the third week of the Berkshire Music Festival and the Boston Symphony Orchestra made its initial appearance of the season under the directions of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. When the concerts in the Shed begin, then the Berkshire Music Festival is really rolling. The first two weeks provided fine music, but the great mass of people come for the Shed concerts by the 104-man orchestra.

Three Sonatas

Isaac Stern, as those who heard him in Springfield last season know, is a consummate artist. Sensitive, musical, superbly equipped from the technical standpoint and devoted to his music, Stern plays for the sake of the music. He was first heard with his accompanist, Alexander Zakin, in one of the chamber music recitals in the Theater-Concert Hall. As emphasis this season is on Beethoven, the duo were heard in three sonatas, namely Violin Sonata in A major, Op. 12, No. 2, Violin Sonata in F major, No. 5, Op. 24 and Violin Sonata in C minor, No. 2, Op. 30.

To each of these sonatas Messrs. Stern and Zakin brought their broad experience, technical and interpretive talents. There were those present who felt that Mr. Zakin was not at his best, that he was heavy handed and sometimes mechanical. We feel that some of these complaints were justified, but also that some of the fault lay in the unresponsive instrument he was playing. As for Mr. Stern, he was in top form, which meant that one heard superlative playing, imaginative interpretations and [illegible] some assured technique.

Mr. Stern made his second appearance at the first Shed concert when he played Beethoven's Concerto in D major with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Again he provided an immaculate performance, [illegible] the music [illegible]. He [illegible] off the [illegible] cadenza with entire disregard of the difficulties involved [illegible] pure tone [illegible] rounds, so [illegible]. He was given admirable collaboration by the orchestra and Dr. Munch.

Due to the indisposition of Piatigorsky, who was to appear with Stern in the Brahms double concerto, he will add another solo appearance with the orchestra, playing the Brahms violin concerto.

Seventh Symphony

In addition to the Beethoven violin concerto, Mr. Munch programmed the overture to "Coriolan" and Symphony [illegible] major. In a Festival devoted to the music of Beethoven, it seemed fitting that the first concert should bring us the massive seventh symphony. The terrific heat has [illegible] appeared to dim the enthusi-

Brando. He will also conduct a performance of Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait." In addition, Mr. Bernstein will appear with Mr. Fiedler and the Pops orchestra as pianist in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." It will be a busy night for Mr. Bernstein.

Rudolf Serkin Among Leading Modern Pianists

Lenox, July 30 — The famed American pianist, Rudolf Serkin, making his Tanglewood debut here tonight as soloist in Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto, will appear again Wednesday night in the next to last chamber music concert in the Theater-Concert Hall. On that occasion he will perform three Beethoven piano sonatas, in F major, D major and B flat.

RUDOLPH SERKIN

Ever since his American debut in 1935 with Arturo Toscanini conducting the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, Mr. Serkin has been one of the most popular and distinguished artists in the United States. In recent years he has journeyed annually to the small French village of Prades to participate in Festival performance with the great cellist, Pablo Casals. He is especially renowned as a Beethoven interpreter. A Berkshire neighbor in the summer, he lives on a Vermont farm.

WOMAN TO CONDUCT TANGLEWOOD OPERA

Lenox, July 30—A woman student conductor is somewhat of a rarity at Tanglewood. On the podium for the two performances of Mozart's 1779 unfinished two-act opera, "Zaide," which it is believed has never been staged in the United States before, when the Tangle-

MISS CARDILLO OF NORTH ADAMS SINGS SATURDAY

To Appear With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 30—Christina Cardillo, talented young soprano from North Adams, has been given two important roles at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. On Saturday night, Aug. 6, she will be a soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed. At that time she will sing the role of "Marcellina" in Beethoven's Fidelio, Act II. This will be her first appearance as a soloist with the full BSO in a major concert at Tanglewood.

Also In Premiere

Two nights later, on Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8 and 9, she will be having the leading role in Mozart's opera "Zaide" at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. This will be the American premiere of the opera. The English version which will be presented was prepared by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department.

With the close of the season at Tanglewood, Miss Cardillo will return to New York City where sing in NBC-TV's premiere presentation of the opera based on "Cain and Abel" with music by Alfred Weidman. Previous to the Festival Season she sang on a series of CBS-TV programs in New York City.

Winner of the Metropolitan Opera Company's Auditions of the Air a year ago, Miss Cardillo spent last summer at the Central City Opera in Colorado. Previously, she was featured in opera presentations at Tanglewood.

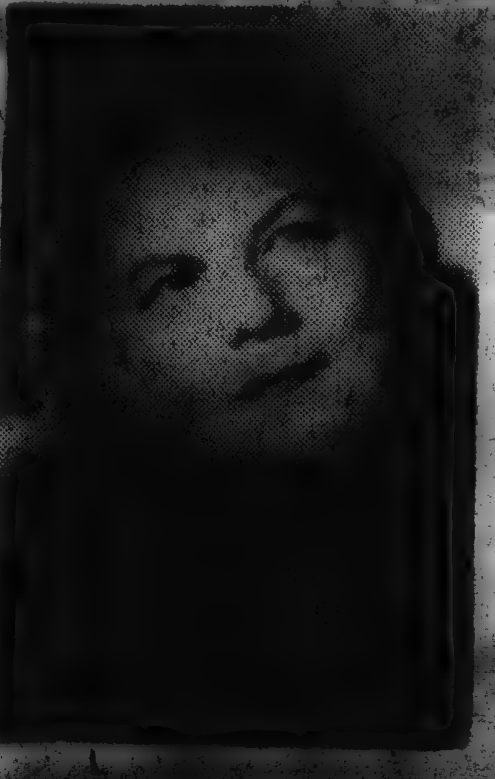
She has studied voice in Milan, Italy, on a scholarship as has she at the Katherine T. Long School which is affiliated with the Metropolitan in New York.

This past week she was featured in the gala "Celebrity Night" benefit program at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. There she was accompanied by Paul Ulanowsky who for 14 years was accompanist for Lotte Lehmann.

She has also been a featured soloist at the Auditorium in Springfield and was soloist at the National Republican Club's annual Lincoln Day Dinner in New York City last February.

When appearing as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, Aug. 6, she will make for a complete Cardillo family night. Her brother, Pasquale, is a veteran E flat clarinetist with the BSO.

Soloists This Week at Tanglewood



MARGARET HARSHAW

ADELE ADDISON

EUNICE ALBERTS

These five vocalists will be heard at Tanglewood this week as soloists in major choral works by Beethoven. Miss Addison of this city, Miss Alberts, Lloyd and Morgan are to take part in the "Missa Solemnis" Friday night, while Miss Harshaw, Lloyd and Morgan will appear in Act II of the opera "Fidelio."

MAC MORGAN

DAVID LLOYD

Tanglewood Topics

By WALTER ALFORD

Lenox, July 30—There will be a dividend for opera fans on the program of short operas and choral music announced by the Berkshire Music Center for Monday evening. In addition to Boris Blacher's chamber opera, "Romeo and Juliet," and Darius Milhaud's "L'Abandon d'Ariane," and choral selections by students of Hugh Ross' chorus department, Boris Goldovsky's opera department will give "Comedy on the Bridge," a short comic opera by Bohuslav Martinu, who was Tanglewood's guest composer in 1946.

It will be staged by Sarah Caldwell, stage director of the opera department, and Mr. Goldovsky will provide piano accompaniment. This program, as well as the succeeding ones on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, requires reserved seat tickets, and patrons should apply to the Friends' office at Tanglewood for reservations.

Student Leaders

Students who will sing leading roles in "Romeo and Juliet" are Naomi Farr (New York City), Juliet; Harold Johnson (Chicago), Romeo; Gwendolyn Belle (St. Louis), Lady Capulet; Regina Sar-

the impressive full-evening "Missa Solemnis" by Beethoven, which will be given on a Berkshire Festival concert program, Friday, Aug 4, in memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The four soloists with the orchestra are all former Berkshire Music Center students. Soprano Adele Addison, who sang a solo role earlier this summer in Bach's B minor Mass, was a student in the opera department in 1947, 1948, again in 1950.

Eunice Alberts, the contralto, studied at Tanglewood in the music school's second session, in 1941, and for four more succeeding summers. Miss Alberts is flying to the Berkshires for this engagement from Aspen, Colo., where she is on the faculty of the Aspen International Institute. David Lloyd, the tenor, sang in the opera department's American premiere performances, in 1947, of Benjamin Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk In Italy."

Bass-baritone Mac Morgan, popular concert singer who summers in Stockbridge, was a student of opera dramatics in 1953. The violin solo in the "Missa Solemnis" will be performed by BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin, the organ will be played by William Frank-

Brahms' First Symphony Climax of Concert Today

Isaac Stern Soloist in Violin Concerto at Tanglewood; Bernstein to Conduct Beethoven's 'Missa Solemnis' Friday, Munch On Podium Saturday

Lenox, July 30—The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, moves into its semifinal week of summer symphonic music, opening with the fifth of the Wednesday evening series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three piano sonatas performed by Rudolf Serkin, on Aug. 3 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Beethoven and Wagner provide the fare for next weekend's concerts in the Music Shed. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the three concerts, on Saturday evening (Aug. 6) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7), and Leonard Bernstein who heads the department of orchestra and conducting of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, the Berkshire Music Center, takes the podium on Friday evening (Aug. 5).

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

"Missa Solemnis"

Bernstein, who came to Tanglewood as a student conductor in 1940 and 1941, then began his long association with the Berkshire music school in 1942 as assistant to the orchestra's late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will conduct Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" on Friday evening as a memorial to his patron. The evening-long orchestral and choral work was similarly performed at Tanglewood under Bernstein's baton two summers ago.

Soloists on this occasion will be Adele Addison, soprano, Eunice Alberts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center, [illegible] of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening wired that he would be unable to leave his home in California to perform here. Piatigorsky has also found it necessary to cancel the cello classes he was to conduct during the final two weeks of the current session of the Berkshire Music Center.

Instead of the Concerto for Violin and Cello Mr. Piatigorsky was scheduled to play with Isaac Stern at tomorrow afternoon's concert, on the all-Brahms program Pierre Monteux will conduct with the Boston Symphony in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Isaac Stern will perform Brahms' Concerto for Violin in D major, Opus 77. Stern, a frequent soloist on Festival programs, has not previously given this concerto at Tanglewood.

BERNSTEIN BOOKED AT CARNEGIE HALL

To Lead Symphony of the Air Six Times

New York, July 30—Leonard Brenstein will lead the Symphony of the Air in six subscription concerts at Carnegie Hall during the coming season. The series opens Nov. 9, with other concerts scheduled for Dec. 13, Jan. 6, Feb. 3, March 7 and April 18.

Mr. Bernstein thus becomes the first full-season conductor of the Symphony of the Air since it ended its connection with the National Broadcasting Co. in April, 1954. Since that time, the orchestra has had a number of guest conductors, including Mr. Bernstein.

It is expected that Mr. Bernstein's series with the Symphony of the Air will be his only conducting appearances in New York next season. The composer-conductor is at work on a composition that was commissioned for the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is also preparing a musical based on Voltaire's "Candide."

SARAH CALDWELL DOES 'ZAIDE' TEXT

Lenox, July 30 — Mozart's "Zaide," which the opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky will give at Tanglewood Aug. 8 and 9, is numbered K. 344. It has a text by Johann Andreas Schachtner, and was composed in Salzburg. It lacks an overture and concluding finale, but Andre, the original publisher, himself supplied these numbers for his edition. Grove's Musical Dictionary comments about this almost unknown work: "The score contains some of Mozart's most delightful music; but it is a pitty that it is

THE SPRINGFIELD

[293]

[illegible] playing the Brahms violin concerto.

Seventh Symphony

In addition to the Beethoven [illegible] lin [illegible] Mr. [illegible] lan" and Symphony No. 7 in A major. In a Festival devoted to the music of Beethoven, it seemed fitting that the first concert should bring us the massive seventh symphony? The terrific heat has not appeared to dim the enthusiasm of the players on Mr. Munch. The performance of the A-major symphony was a rewarding one, with a particularly effective reading of the Larghetto movement. Mr. Munch is at his best in reading the slow movements. He becomes relaxed and so do the players. The last movement was spacious, glowing and boistrous in sound.

The 80-year old Pierre Monteux took over the second concert which was built to please varied tastes, although the Beethoven Symphony No. 2 in D major was on the program. He opened proceedings with a tremendous performance of the Bach "Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor" in the Respighi arrangement. The Italian composer set out to make an orchestral arrangement without any regard to the music or style of Bach. He put forth a bombastic, colorful, dramatic work, as far from the spirit of Bach as could be imagined. The Boston players gave it a sumptuous performance.

Then followed a beautiful performance of the second symphony in which Mr. Monteux realized to the full the delicacy, humor and imagination within it. It was full of happiness and light.

Macabre Music

From this realm to the grim bleakness of Roger Sessions' orchestral score of the music he wrote for "The Black Maskers" in 1923 was a long distance. The seven pieces had been written for a Smith College production of the Androyeff play. This is macabre music, but it admirably suited the play. It is also music demanding virtuoso players and the Boston Symphony men were on their mettle and played gallantly. A stunning performance of "Death and Transfiguration" by Strauss, concluded the program.

Charles Munch conducted the final concert of the week, one which drew 8700 people. He chose to play three Beetthoven symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth. These three symphonies are in a happy, spirited vein and reveal various facets in the growing art of the composer. Mr. Munch was at his best in the fourth symphony, bringing to his reading the elegance, illumination and beauty within it. His reading of the "Pastorale" was a bit pedestrian, less rewarding than the performance of the first symphony. It was a lot of Beethoven for a single afternoon, but the audience response was enthusiastic, reaching ovation proportions.

Tanglewood on Parade

Keep Aug. 11 free for Tanglewood will be on parade that afternoon and evening. Once again Arthur Fielder will lead his Boston "Pops" orchestra through a typical program. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert commencing at 8.15. He will introduce for the first time anywhere a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront," which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon farm.

---

WOMAN TO CONDUCT TANGL[illegible] OPERA

Lenox, July 30—A woman student conductor is somewhat of a rarity at Tanglewood. On the podium for the two performances of Mozart's 1779 unfinished two-act opera, "Zaide," which it is believed has never been staged in the United States before, when the Tanglewood opera department mounts it for two performances, Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 8 and 9, will be Miss Aviva Einhorn, 26, a citizen of Israel, visiting the U. S. for the first time. Miss Einhorn is a conductor and pianist, quite a linquist, speaking French, German, Flemish, Italian, Hebrew and perfect English.

Born in Antwerp, Belgium, she moved to Paris with her family in 1940. She commenced piano study at the age of five, gave her first recital a year later, and played annually thereafter. Aged 16 she entered the Paris Conservatory, and took lessons from Eugene Bigot and Nadia Boulanger. Two years later she switched to the Conservatory Ecole Norm[illegible] in Paris, to become a student of conducting. Pierre Fournier, of the Opera Comique, discouraged her at first, explaining what little precedent there is for a woman conductor.

After she had conducted for him, however, he reversed his decision, and has since been her sponsor, las Christmas entrusting her with the performance of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on the French television network. In 1953 she won a scholarship to attend a six-week summer school for young conductors under Paul van Kempen at Siena, Italy, where she had a chance to conduct the Philharmonic Orchestra of Florence. In the autumn she returns to France to conduct the Radio Orchestra of Monte Carlo.

---

10 Top Records

Selected from a poll of listening audiences)

Popular

"Learning' the Blues," Frank Sinatra (Capitol).

"Something's Got to Give," McGuire Sisters (Coral).

"Whatever Lola Wants," S. (Mercury).

"Cherry Pink Mambo," Perez Prade (RCA Victor).

"Damn Yankees," Original Cast (RCA Victor).

Classical

"Daphnis et Chole" (Ravel), E. Ansermet-Suisse Romande Orch. (London).

"Offenbachiana," M. Rosenthal conducting the RIAS Orch. (Remington).

Concerto N. 2 (Rachmaninoff), Geza Anda, with A. Galliera conducting (Angel).

"Romeo and Juliet" (Berlioz) C. Munch-Boston Sym. Orch. (RCA Victor).

"Music of Aaron Copland," H. Mitchell-National Sym. Orch. (Westminster).

DEMOLITION HONOR

[illegible] program, as well as the succeeding ones on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 8 and 9, requires reserved seat tickets, and patrons should apply to the Friends' office at Tanglewood for reservations.

Student Leaders

Students who will sing leading roles in "Romeo and Juliet" are Naomi Farr (New York City), Juliet; Harold Johnson (Chicago, Romeo; Gwendolyn Belle (St. Louis), Lady Capulet; Regina Sarfaty (New York City), the nurse; Lynn Detwiler (Altoona, Pa.), Tybalt; Robert Kerns (Utica, Mich.), Benvolio; Peyton Higgison (Mobile, Ala.), Capulet.

Principal singers in the short Milhaud opera are: Claire Watson (Rochester, N. Y.), Ariane; Lee Goebel (San Diego, Cal.), Phaedra; McHenry Boatwright (Boston), Dionysius; Peter Roberts (Westbrook, Conn.), Theseus. Igor Chichagov, of Baltimore, will conduct for "Ariane," Kalman Novak, of Cambridge, for "Romeo."

* * *

Mrs. Lucy Putnam, chairman of the society of Friends, through membership in which the public may attend student concerts at Tanglewood, their contributions going to the support of the Berkshire Music Center, announces that contributions so far this season have reached a total of $26,000, toward a summer goal of $40,000. Gifts from Friends are considerably ahead of 1954, when the Boston Symphony's summer music school benefited by $23,545 at the end of the season. The drive for increased contributions has been considerably sparked by the generous grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, which has announced that it will match, dollar for dollar, all monies over $15,000 raised by the school, over a five-year period.

* * *

Adele Addison Soloist

Leonard Bernstein, who got his start in conducting as a student of the late Serge Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center during its first two summers, in 1940 and 1941, is directing preparation of

From North Adams

North Adams brother and sister, Pasquale and Christina Cardillo, in concerts at Tanglewood. Christina will sing a solo role in Beethoven's "Fidelio" Saturday night and will also be heard in an opera premiere in the Concert-Theater on Aug. 8 and 9. Brother Pasquale is a clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

is on the [illegible] Aspen International Institute. David Lloyd, the tenor, sang in the opera department's American premiere performances, in 1947, of Benjamin Britten's "Albert Herring" and Rossini's "The Turk In Italy."

Bass-baritone Mac Morgan, popular concert singer who summers in Stockbridge, was a student of opera dramatics in 1953. The violin solo [illegible] "Missa Solemnis" will be [illegible]med by BSO concertmaster Richard Burgin, the organ will be played by William Frank.

* * *

Word From Barber

Samuel Barber writes from Italy to Tanglewood friends (the young American composer with a former teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center) that he is summering at Capri with opera composer Gian-Carlo Menotti, at work on a new opera with score by Barber and libretto by Menotti. Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its Tanglewood premiere Friday evening, with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony, was recently given at the Singakacemie in Vienna, with Hilda Gueden as soloist, and with Zino Francescatti, the noted violinist who summers in Monterey, Mass., in the audience. The Barber choral work was also heard in London, by the Philharmonia Choir, and is planned for performances soon in Rome and Berlin.

* * *

Tanglewood audiences are looking forward to the return of Metropolitan Opera soprano, Margaret Harshaw, who will repeat, this time with Charles Munch, the performance of the Immolation Scene from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung" she did in the Tanglewood Music Shed in 1952, under Pierre Monteux' baton. That summer Miss Harshaw sang vocal numbers also from Act III, scene 2 of "Siegfried."

On Saturday evening, Aug. 6, with a supporting cast of soloists of past and present Berkshire Music Center students, she will give, for the first time on a Tanglewood program, the complete Act II of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio."

* * *

At "Tanglewood on Parade," when simultaneous demonstrations are given to the public, from 6 to 7 p. m. by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center, there will be a symphony program by the student orchestra in the Music Shed, opera by the opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall, chamber music by students of Dept. I in the Chamber Music Hall, and during the serving of box lunches, a concert by the choral department from the steps of the administration building of the Boston Symphony's summer music school.

* * *

Ingolf Dahl, who heads the popular Dept. V (Tanglewood Study Group) at the Berkshire Music Center, and who is associate professor of music at the University of Southern California, where he directs both the Collegium Musicum and the University Orchestra, will conduct one of his own compositions at the final concert of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, on Saturday, Aug. 13, (Music Shed, 3 p. m.). It is a symphonic legend in four parts, entitled "The Tower of St. Barbara," about a saint of medieval times, and it was commissioned and recorded by the Louisville, Ky. Orchestra under a Carnegie Foundation grant and performed four times last season. Simultaneously, the New York Woodwind Quintet will be performing Mr. Dahl's Woodwind Quintet at the South Mountain Chamber Music Concert, Pittsfield.

* * *

Women's Chorus

Hugh Ross' assistant in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, Miss Iva D. Hiatt, director of the Smith College Choral Society, is training the women members of the Festival Chorus (composed of members of the Berkshire Music Center's choral, opera and Study Group departments) for participation in the Debussy "Sirenes," one of the three Nocturnes which Pierre Monteux will conduct on his final Berkshire Festival concert, Saturday evening, Aug. 13 in the Music Shed. The "Sirenes" has not been given at Tanglewood since the early days of the Festival.

* * *

Tanglewood's student composers will have two forums during the coming week. Tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the program will include four works, "Septet for Woodwinds and Strings," by Edward S. Miller, of Miami Beach, Fla.; "String Trio" by Robert Paige Ceely, of Williamstown,; "String Quartet" by Susan MacAdam, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a work for 14 brass instruments by Paul Glass, of Los Angeles, Cal., which will be conducted by George Mester, of Mexico City.

An unscheduled forum Monday afternoon at 4 in the Chamber Music Hall, will offer "Somnambulistic Ballad," a piece for chorus by Claire Polin, of Philadelphia, which Barth Bennett, of Miami, Fla. will conduct; a tone poem about Israel for piano by Victor Zinskin, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., with the composer at the piano; a piece for violin and piano by Paul Glass, performed by Hiroshi Ha toyama, of Tokyo, violin, and Tossi clmyanago, of Tokyo, piano; a piece for string bass and piano, by Alan Daniels, of New York City, performed by John Vincent Carbone, of Providence, R. I., strung bass, and Robert Miller, Mount Vernon, N. Y., piano; and a monument from a String Quartet by William J. Sydeman, of Sarnia, Ont.

The Aaug. 1 forum will also give music lovers an opportunity to hear a work by Eino Rautavaara, 26-year-old Finnish composer especially chosen by Jean Sibelius to study this summer at Tanglewood, on a Koussevitzky Music Foundation scholarship. Mr. Rautavaara will accompany Gabriel de los Rios, Chilean baritone, in several German lieder he has composed.

---

berts, contralto, David Lloyd, tenor, Mac Morgan, bass. All are former students of the Berkshire Music Center, Miss Addison, in 1947, 1948 and 1950, Miss Alberts during 1941-1945, Mr. Lloyd in 1947 and Mr. Morgan in 1953. The Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students of the chorus, opera and study group departments, trained by Hugh Ross, will also assist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening program will commence with a first Tanglewood performance of Beethoven's opera "Fidelio," Act II, with Festival Chorus trained by John Krueger of the Youngstown, O., Philharmonic and Chorus, a Berkshire Music Center chorus faculty member this summer. Soloists are Margaret Harshaw, of the Metropolitan Opera, soprano; David Lloyd, tenor; Mac Morgan, bass; Arthur Schoep, tenor; and from the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, students Christina Cardillo (North Adams), soprano, and Malcolm Bernstein Baltimore, Md.), bass.

The second half of the program is devoted to excerps from Wagner's "Gotterdammerung," with Miss Harshaw soloist in the Immolation Scene, a selection which she did with great success at a Berkshire Festival concert in 1952.

The program:

Wed. Aug. 3—8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall—Chamber Music:
Piano Sonatas—F major, Op. 10, No. 2
D major, Op. 10, No. 3
B flat, Op 106 ("Hammerklavier")
.... Beethoven:
Rudolf Serkin
Fri. Aug. 5—8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—
Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Missa Solemnis (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky) .... Beethoven
Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Eunice Alberts, contralto; David Lloyd; tenor; Mac Morgan, bass. Violin solo: Richard Burgin, Organist; Willem Frank Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, trained by Hugh Ross.
Leonard Berstein, conductor
Sat. Aug. 6—8.30 p. m.—Music Shed—
Boston Symphony Orchestra:
"Fidelio", Act II (First performance at Tanglewood) .... Beethoven
Leonore—Margaret Harshaw; Florestan—David Lloyd; Rocco—Mac Morgan; Marselline—Christina Cardillo; Pizaro and Fernando—Malcolm Bernstein; Jaquino—Arthur Schoep
Excerpts from "Gotterdammerung"
.... Wagner
Siegfried's Rhine Journey; Siegfried's Death Music; Immolation Scene—soloist, Margaret Harshaw, soprano,
Charles Munch, Conductor
Sun. Aug. 7—2.30 p. m.—Music Shed—
Boston Symphony Orchestra:
(All-Beethoven)
Symphony No. 8, in F major
Piano Concerto No. 4, in G major
Soloist: Eugene Istomin
Symphony No. 5, in C minor ... Beethoven
Charles Munch, Conductor

Piatigorsky Cancels

Three programs of the Festival, tomorrow; Wednesday, Aug. 10 and Friday, Aug. 12, have been revised because a shoulder ailment has necessitated cancellation of soloist engagements at these concerts by cellist Gregor Piatigorsky. The noted musician regretfully ment headed by Boris Goldovsky will give at Tanglewood Aug. 8 and 9, is numbered K. 344. It has a text by Johann Andreas Schachtner, and was composed in Salzburg. It lacks an overture and concluding finale, but Andre, the original publisher, himself supplied these numbers for his edition. Grove's Musical Dictionary comments about this almost unknown work: "The score contains some of Mozart's most delightful music; and it is a pitty that it is not better known."

---

The Tanglewoood version, in English, has been prepared by Goldovsky's stage director, Sarah Caldwell, who will stage the work. Scenery and lighting is by David Hayes, costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen. In 1947 Goldovsky gave the American premiere of Mozart's "Idomeneo" at Tanglewood, of his "La Finta Giardiniere" in 1950 and his "Titus" in 1952.

3000 ALLOYS CONTAIN NICKEL

Chicago—More than 3000 alloys are in use that contain nickel.

THE EXQUISITE
Acrosonic

Compact, yet full 88 note. Its resonant tone is unequalled in a small piano. That is why the Berkshire Music Festival uses only the Baldwin Acrosonic spinet.

Trade-in allowance for your present piano. 36 months to pay balance.

Summer store hours:
Tuesday thru Saturday 9-5:30
Closed, Thurs. Eves. and Mon.

Parks Piano Company

87 State St. Tel. ST 8-7335

Springfield's New Baldwin Dealer

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival
BY THE
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director
A Season of BEETHOVEN
TODAY at 2:30

Wed. Aug. 3 (Theatre) at 8:30—RUDOLF SERKIN—Beethoven Piano Sonatas
SHED CONCERTS: Fri. Aug. 5 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—Missa Solemnis
Guest conductor, Leonard Bernstein
Sat. Aug. 6 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN—WAGNER: Soloist, Margaret Harshaw
Sun. Aug. 7 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM: Soloist, Eugene Istomin
Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler
Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records
For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone Lenox 6[illegible]

[494]

Second Thoughts in Music

Beaux Art Trio, Symphony Highlight Festival Week

Mayes' Performance of Boccherini Cello Concerto Is A Personal Triumph

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The second week of Berkshire Music Festival concerts provided two highlights. The first was the recital by the Beaux Arts Trio, during which three Beethoven trios for piano, violin and cello were heard. The second was the concert by the chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Leonard Bernstein; a concert devoted to the music of Mozart.

Audience Is Attentive

There were, of course some other good routine performances by the chamber orchestra under Charles Munch, particularly a concert of French music last Sunday during which Mr. Munch provided interesting interpretations of works by Rameau, Ravel, Faure, Mihaud and Honegger. Another concert was enlivened by the distinguished playing of first cellist Samuel Mayes, whose performance of the Boccherini cello concerto was a personal triumph.

The hot and humid weather has kept the audiences down, we believe, but those who have come have found the effort worthwhile. It is a singularly attentive audience whether listening to chamber music in the concert hall, or whether spread out on the lawn during a chamber orchestra concert.

The Beaux Arts Trio is newly formed but promises to attain a distinguished place in the ranks of chamber music ensembles. The members are Me[illegible] Pressler, pianist; Daniel Gu[illegible], violinist and Bernard Greenhouse, cellist, splendid musicians who form a well-integrated ensemble. The performance of the "Gh[illegible]" and "Archduke" Trios were marked by musical understanding, imagination and superb playing. Pressler is a brilliant pianist with strong powers of projection and Guilet is concertmaster of the former NBC orchestra, now known as the "Symphony of the Air." Greenhouse has long been known as an excellent performer. The [illegible] trio was the "Trio in [illegible] Op. 1 No. 3." Cham[illegible] are all devote[illegible] Beethoven.

There was [illegible] the old glamo[illegible] of Koussevitzky [illegible] Leonard Bernstein [illegible] the all-Mozart conc[illegible] were on the [illegible] audience was excited [illegible] the concert [illegible].

[illegible]

Bernstein [illegible] a fine conductor whose knowledge of what he is conducting is profound. As usual, he conducted without score, providing interesting and sensitive readings of the overture to "Don Giovanni" and "Symphony No. 36 in C Major" known as the "Linz." He conducted and played the piano remarkably well in the "Piano Concerto in G major." One wonders when he has time to practice between conducting, composing and teaching.

Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano, was the soloist in two arias from "Idomeneo" and a seldom heard airia from "The Marriage of Figaro." As usual this fine artist sang with technical fluency. She is complete mistress of the art of song. Whatever she does is distinguished and right. The voice is neither particularly large or beautiful, but her art is incomparable.

The first concert of the week led by Charles Munch was devoted primarily to the music of Vivaldi; music as fresh in texture and vital as the day it was written. Young Samuel Mayes, first cellist with the orchestra provided a handsome performance of the Boccherini cello concerto. His tone is large and rich in color. His success with the audience and with his colleagues was instantaneous. Incidentally this concert took place on the hottest night of the week.

Has Flexibility

Mr. Munch has a fondness for the music of Vivaldi and he provided fine, objective readings of the "Concerto Gresso in D minor, Op. 3 No. 11" and the final concerto Grosso in B minor, for Four Violins and String orchestra, Op. 3, No. 10." The chamber orchestra played with unusual flexibility and responsiveness.

Hugh Ross, heard of the choral department, made his first appearance of the season leading a small chorus through the intricacies of Vivaldi's "Gloria" Mass. Mr. Ross works his magic on a chorus and it sings as it never sang before, sometimes better than it knows how. So it was in the "Gloria." There was a fine blending of parts, faultless intonation and clear enunciation. The two solists were Sara May Endich, soprano and Sadie McCollum, contralto. Both filled their assignments admirably.

Mr. Munch was at his very best last Sunday when he led the chamber orchestra through a program of French music. Most of the music was contemplative, smooth and lovely, as for instance the Suite from the Opera "Dardanus" by Rameau and the ever fascinating "Le Tombeau de Couperin" by Ravel. Then came a "Pavane" by Faure and a "Serenade" by Milhaud. This bright and piquant Serenade was a fine preface to Honegger's Fourth Symphony. Mr. Munch made this symphony known to the United States in 1948 [illegible] a concert by the N. Y. [illegible]monic.

This afternoon at 2.30, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three Beethoven symphonies, the first, fourth and sixth.

Play at Tanglewood Wednesday Night

The New Music String Quartet performs three Beethoven quartets in the fourth of the Wednesday night Chamber Music concerts of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. These performances will take place in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall next Wednesday at 8.30 p. m. Proceeds are to the Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music at Tanglewood. Members of the ensemble are Broadus Erle, violin; Matthew Raimondi, violin; David Soyer, cello; Walter Trampler, viola.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Will Take Place Thursday, Aug. 11

Arthur Fiedler to Direct Boston 'Pops' Orchestra and Leonard Bernstein to Lead Boston Symphony

Lenox, July 23—Tanglewood will be On Parade Thursday, Aug. 11. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 10,050 persons in 1954, afternoon and evening festivities in Lenox, Mass., is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 13th session in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. The gala day's activities, from 6.00 p. m. to 11:00 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, an evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Arthur Fiedler

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler, its celebrated conductor for 26 years, on the podium, will perform a typical "Pops" program, as it did in 1954 when it made its first appearance in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed, helping to shatter all attendance records for "Tanglewood On Parade." Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive [illegible] probably more people have heard the "Pops" and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

Mr. Fiedler is now, until July 30, conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, flies to conduct the Miami Beach Pops Concerts in Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade," then flies to Miami for a second concert August 14, returning immediately to Boston to conclude the Esplanade series August 15 to 20.

The first half of the concert program in the Shed will be given at 8.15 p. m. by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Bernstein, head of the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra and conducting departments, and himself a student at the music school in 1940, the first year of its founding. Mr. Bernstein will conduct the first performance anywhere of a suite he has arranged from the music he composed for the film, "On the Waterfront", which won the 1955 Academy Award and additional Oscars for its star, Marlon Brando, and its director, Elia Kazan. Also on this portion of the program will be "A Lincoln Portrait" by Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center (on leave of absence in 1955.) It was first performed by the Boston Symphony on April 9, 1943.

Leonard Bernstein, noted equally as composer, conductor and concert pianist, will be soloist with the Boston "Pops" in George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." [illegible] Fiedler's program will also include the "Caprice Espagnole" of Rimsky-Korsakov and the suite of Johann Strauss dances from the ballet "Graduation Ball" as arranged by Antal Dorati. A number of encores in typical light popular "Pops" vein will follow.

Seats for "Tanglewood On Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600.

Tanglewood Topics

Lenox, July 23—Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has chosen Regina Sarfaty, a student in the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, and Arthur Schoep, assistant stage director to Boris Goldovsky in the opera department, to sing supporting solo roles with Leontyne Price, soprano, in Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which will have its Tanglewood premiere on the Berkshire Festival program of Friday evening, the 29th.

The choral and orchestral work by the noted young American composer, who was a guest teacher of composition at the orchestra's summer music school in 1947, had its world premiere at the hands of the Boston Symphony last winter. Hugh Ross has trained a Tanglewood Choir of 60 voices from his own choral department and comprising also associates from the opera department.

Regina Sarfaty will be remembered by Festival audiences from last year, the young New Yorker's first summer at Tanglewood. She was chosen by Lukas Foss as one of the soloists in the excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" and one of the leads in the concert performance of Stravinsky's "La Pulcinella," which he conducted. She portrayed the role of Mrs. Splinters in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," and was the nurse in Ernst Toch's short opera, "The Princess and the Pea." Twenty years old, Miss Sarfaty was born in Rochester, daughter of a cantor. Aged 19 she entered the Juilliard School of Music in New York, won a scholarship, and last year won the Max Dreyfus Scholarship at Juillard as its outstanding vocal student.

Arthur Schoep, of New York, has sung in Tanglewood opera productions in 1946, 1948, 1952 and 1953. A midwesterner, son of Netherlands immigrants, he studied at the University of South Dakota, Eastman School of Music, and the New England Conservatory. After teaching at several colleges in Texas, he went to Europe on a Fullbright Scholarship and [illegible] recitals, radio concerts and [illegible] performances in Holland and [illegible]any. He has sung leading [illegible] the New Orleans, [illegible] Shreveport and Rochester opera companies, and for the past nine years has had leading roles in Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera theaters.

Last season he alternated between singing Figaro in "The Barber of Seville" and acting as associate conductor on tour. Recently he sang Aneas in the first American production of Berlioz' "The Trojans" in Boston, and at the Theatre Royal de la Monnaie in Brussells, under Pierre Monteux, sang Pelleas in Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande." Mr. Schoep has also been Boris Goldovsky's assistant stage director at opera workshops in Pittsburgh and Wheeling, W. Va.

Church Singers

Tanglewood opera and chorus students are donating their services to sing in Pittsfield and Dalton churches during the Berkshire Festival season. Soloists at St. Steph[illegible] Episcopal Church, Pittsfield [illegible] July 17, Mary McKenzie, mezzo-soprano winner of this [illegible] Naumberg prize, of Groton-on-Hudson, N. Y.; July 24, Richard E. Krause, tenor, Delmar, N. Y.; July 31, Saramae Endich, soprano, New York City; Aug. 7, Harold Johnson, tenor, Chicago; Aug. 14, Adele Addison, soprano, Springfeld.

At First Congregational Church, Pittsfield, soloist from Tanglewood are: July 17, Mac Morgan, baritone, Stockbridge; July 24, McHenry Boatright, bass, Boston; July 31, MacMorgan; Aug. 7, Lee Goebel, soprano, San Diego, Cal.; Aug. 14, Harold Johnson, tenor, Chicago. Dalton Congregational, Dalton, has Miss McKenzie as soloist July 24, Harold Johnson July 31; Jane Paul, Urbana, Ill., on Aug. 7; and Herbert Gibson, Danville, Ill., Aug. 14.

Eight Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood this summer are disdaining the relative comforts of Wheatleigh, the male students' dormitory, for the more rugged life, and are camping on the edge of Stockbridge Bowl. Since three are tympanists, two are French horns, and the other three opera singers, they are well equipped to give a nocturnal concert of their own. In one tent are Albert E. Payson, of Springfield, Ill. and Mervin W. Britton, tympanists; in another tenor Leon E. Heiple, of Wilmington, Ill. and Henry Levy, of Kingston, N. Y., both singers. Other tenors are Lloyd S. McCausland, tympanist of Milford, Mass., a repeater from last summer; Lewus G. Rubinstein, of Albany, French horn; Richard E. Krause, Delmar, N. Y., opera singer. Kaid Friedel, of Morristown, N. J. will be joined by his wife later. Friedel is the other horn student.

Fiedler To Visit

When he has completed his free concerts on the Escplanade in Boston, 'Pops" director Arthur Fiedler is expected to visit Tanglewood in early August, to scout for talent for his three-year-old touring "Pops" orchestra. When the popular maestro came to guest for "Tanglewood on Parade" in 1954 he took back with him Constance Weldon, of Miami, talented tuba player from the student orchestra; David Allan, of Medford, French horn player in the student symphony; and John Grande, of Long Island City, N. Y., student clarinetist. Grande and Allan have returned to Tanglewood for second summers, Grande again with the student symphony, Allan managing the canteen at Wheatleigh.

The second composers' forum, tomorrow evening, will have a novelty, Music for Two Horns, composed in a single week since the author, Michael Sahl, of New York, arrived at the Berkshire Music Center July 3. Sahl, a student here in 1954, shared one of the composition awards made at the end of last summer. Aged 20, Boston-born, he has composed since he was eight years old. He was graduated from Amherst College this spring, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa. The college honored him with a performance at commencement exercises of his Symphony No. 1 in E. He has been awarded the Edward Poole Lay Fellowship by Amherst, and a residence fellowship by Harvard, where he will commence graduate studies in the fall in the school of arts and sciences.

Berkshire Music Center Members

Three members of the Berkshire Music Center who hail from the Berkshire area. Left to right: Florence Dunn of Williamstown, assistant director of the Tanglewood Study Group; Robert-Paige Ceeley of Williamstown, student of composition under the well known American composer Roger Sessions; and Christine Cardillo, of North Adams, soprano in the school's opera department. Christine has been chosen to sing a solo at the Boston Symphony's performance of Act II of Beethoven's Fidelio on Aug. 6. Her brother plays clarinet in the orchestra.

Premiere at Tanglewood On Friday Night Program

Samuel Barber's 'Prayers of Kierkegaard' Included; Munch to Conduct All-Beethoven Program Saturday Night; New Music String Quartet to Play Wednesday

Lenox, July 23 — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood moves into the fourth of its six weeks of summer symphonic music, opening with the fourth of the Wednesday series of chamber music of Beethoven, a program of three quartets played by the New Music String Quartet, on the 27th in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducts two of the week end's three concerts in the huge Music Shed, on Friday (July 29) and Saturday (July 30) evenings, and Pierre Monteux takes the podium with the orchestra Sunday afternoon (July 31) for the second of his three guest appearances this summer.

Premiere Scheduled

Mr. Munch's Friday program comprises orchestral music of Handel, Schumann and Brahms, and the Tanglewood premiere of Samuel Barber's "Prayers of Kierkegaard," which had its first performances last winter by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leontyne Price, soprano, a student in 1951 at the orchestra's Tanglewood music school, the Berkshire Music Center, has the principal solo role.

Supporting solos will be sung by Arthur Schoep, tenor, of New York, assistant technical director in Boris Goldovsky's Tanglewood opera department; and Regina Sarfaty, mezzo-soprano, also of New York, a student of opera dramatics at Tanglewood. The Tanglewood Choir, which will assist, has been trained by Hugh Ross, and comprises 60 voices from Mr. Ross' choral department and from the associate division of the opera department.

Charles Munch gives his third all-Beethoven program of the 1955 Festival, which is largely devoted to the [illegible] of the German composer, on Saturday evening, when Rudolf Serkin, noted pianist and Tanglewood neighbor in Vermont, makes his first appearance in the Music Shed, as soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto.

Double Concerts

Pierre Monteux's all-Brahms program on Sunday afternoon will have Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky as soloists in the Concerto for Violin and Cello.

A bonus for Festival patrons will be the Saturday morning public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Music Shed at 10 a. m. (July 30), for which a nominal charge is made of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The complete program:

Wed. July 27, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Chamber Music:
String Quartets—G major, Opus 18, No. 2 .... Beethoven:
E flat major, Opus 127
A minor, Opus 132
The New Music String Quartet (Broadus Erle and Matthew Raimondi, violins; Walter Trampler, viola; David Soyer, cello).
Fri. July 29, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
Suite "Water Music" .... Handel
Symphony No. 4, in D minor .. Schumann
"Prayers of Kierkegaard" ...... Barber
Soloists: Leontyne Price, Soprano; Regina Sarfaty, Mezzo-Soprano; Arthur Schoep, Tenor.
Tanglewood Choir of Students from Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera, associates) trained by Hugh Ross
Symphony No. 4 in E minor .... Brahms.
Charles Munch, conductor
Sat. July 30, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(All-Beethoven)
Overture to "Egmont" ...... Beethoven
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Soloist: Rudolf Serkin
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Charles Munch, conductor
Sun. July 31, 8:30 p. m. Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:
(All-Brahms)
Academic Festival Overture .... Brahms
Concerto for Violin and Cello
Soloists: Isaac Stern and Gregory Piatigorsky
Symphony No. 1, in C Minor
Pierre Monteux, conductor

Tomorrow's Music Shed concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will find Charles Munch conducting an all-Beethoven program, the first, fo[illegible] and sixth ("Pastorale") symphonies.

TANGLEWOOD HAD NOTED GUESTS AT RECENT CONCERTS

Playwrights and Producers In Visit to the Music Festival

Lenox, July 23—Recent guests at Berkshire Festival concerts have included the playwright, S. N. Behrman (author of the musical comedy hit "Fanny" in New York), whose wife is a sister of violinist Jascha Heifetz; Ethel Linder Reiner, producer of the N. Richard Nash comedy hit of the past Broadway season, "The Rainmaker"; Richard Horner, company manager of the Broadway musical hit, "Damn Yankees," and his wife, Patricia Peardon, who is featured in the New York hit melodrama, "The Desperate Hours"; Mike Wallace, of Columbia Broadcasting System, narrator for last season's popular "On a Sunday Afternoon" program, and last season star of the farce comedy "Reclining Figure" which is shortly to be done at the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge. Mr. Wallace is a brother-in-law of Boston Symphony Orchestra assistant concertmaster, Alfred Kripe.

* * *

Gregor Piatigorsky is expected at Elm Court, Lenox, on Thursday, July 28, to commence the classes he will hold in chamber music at the Berkshire Music Center during its final two weeks. The eminent cellist appears three times on Festival programs this summer, playing the Brahms Concerto for violin and cello with Isaac Stern on Sunday afternoon, July 31; giving a sonata program with Ralph Berkowitz Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, and performing Ernest Bloch's "Schelomo" Friday, Aug. 12.

* * *

Boris Blacher, director of Berlin's Hochschule fur Musik, who is guest composer at Tanglewood, had one night in New York before coming to Tanglewood to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The distinguished composer revealed in an interview this week that he had spent his first evening in the U. S. in the orchestra pit of the St. James Theater on Broadway, watching from that vantage of a performance of the musical comedy hit, "The Pajama Game." Professor Blacher had a relative in the pit orchestra, and volunteered "to play the celeste, or something. . . but they all seemed quite busy, so I had nothing to do." The German composer was delighted by this first [illegible] of the American musi[illegible] have nothing like it in [illegible] is a genre unique to the American stage and American music with music, dancing, and story fused into a perfect whole."

* * *

Seventy members of the chorus of the Springfield, Mass., Symphony Orchestra have been invited by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony to appear with the orchestra, the Festival Chorus of the students of the Berkshire Music Center, and soloists Adele Addison, Catherine Akos, David Lloyd and Donald Gramm, in the Festival concert performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with which the Berkshire Festival will close at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14. The Springfield Chorus, which took part in the Berlioz "Requiem" in a Festival concert last year, is being trained by Hugh Ross, head of the Tanglewood choral department, and his assistant, John Krueger, of Youngstown, O.

SLEEPY CONVICTS CAUGHT

Nashville, Tenn., July 24 (AP)—Escaped convicts George Sanders, 21, and Jerry Doss, 22, blamed lack of sleep for the sudden end to their freedom. Police officers awakened the two men, who broke out of the Nebraska State Prison July 13, when they found them sleeping in a car rported stolen.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 11TH • Events from 6 to 11 P.M. RAIN OR SHINE

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

"Tanglewood on Parade"

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Conducted by LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Suite from "On the Waterfront" (First Performance)	Bernstein
A Lincoln Portrait	Copland

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

ARTHUR FIELDER, Conductor

In a Typical Pops Program

Spanish Caprice	Rimsky-Korsakov
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra Soloist — Leonard Bernstein	Gershwin
Suite from the Ballet "Graduation Ball" (Encores may be expected)	Strauss-Dorati

LAWN PARTY

PICNIC SUPPER

WALTZING ON THE LAWN

DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS: Box Seats — $5. Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

THE CHORUS

OPERA SCENES

CHAMBER MUSIC

Write or Phone
TICKET OFFICE
Tanglewood
Lenox, Mass.
(Lenox 600)

REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS
Each Wednesday Evening—Chamber Concert
Friday Evening—Shed Concert
Saturday Evening—Shed Concert
Sunday Afternoon—Shed Concert
UNTIL AUGUST 14TH

Baldwin Piano
RCA Victor Records

Eagle 7/23

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS thru AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

Times 7/24

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TODAY at 2:30

Wed. July 27 (Theatre) at 8:30—NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET—Beethoven

SHED CONCERTS Fri. July 29, 8:30—HANDEL—SCHUMANN—BARBER—BRAHMS
Soloist, Leontyne Price, soprano.

Sat. July 30 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist, Rudolf Serkin

Sun. July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux
Soloists, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky

Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11
Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano

RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

ASTOR CONCERT TOURS

Berkshire Music Festival

23^{75} And Up

at Tanglewood & Jacob's Pillow

Travel Friday and Enjoy Full Day Saturday and Sunday
First rate accommodations
Only 6 Miles From Tanglewood

For information and folder write or call

ASTOR TRAVEL BUREAU

1846 Broadway, N.Y.C. CO 5-1375

Tour operated by Bert Key Tours.

Sun. Globe
7/3

TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • July 6 to AUG. 14

OPENING THIS WEEK!

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

• THEATRE-CONCERT HALL

NEXT WED., July 6 at 8:30 — KROLL QUARTET

FRI., July 8, at 8:30 — BACH — STRAVINSKY — MOZART
Soloist — Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Flute

SAT., July 9, at 8:30 — HANDEL — HAYDEN — HINDEMITH
Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson; Soloist, Joseph de Pasquale, Viola

SUN., July 10, at 2:30 — BACH — Mass in B minor

Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood; Lenox, Mass — Phone Lenox 600

Eagle 7/6/55

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 6 to Aug. 14

OPENING TONIGHT

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

THEATRE-CONCERT HALL

WED., July 6, at 8:30 — KROLL QUARTET

FRI., July 8, at 8:30 — BACH — STRAVINSKY — MOZART
Soloist — Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Flute

SAT., July 9, at 8:30 — HANDEL — HAYDN — HINDEMITH
Guest Conductor, Thor Johnson; Soloist, Joseph de Pasquale, Viola

SUN., July 10, at 2:30 — BACH — Mass in B minor

Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Fri., Sat., Sun., $4, $5; (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Phone Lenox 600

Sunday July 17th

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TODAY at 2:30

Wed., July 20 (Theatre) at 8:30—ISAAC STERN: Beethoven Violin Sonatas

SHED CONCERTS: Fri., July 22 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM: Soloist, Isaac Stern

Sat., July 23 at 8:30—BACH—BEETHOVEN—SESSIONS—STRAUSS
Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux

Sun., July 24 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM

Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TODAY at 2:30

Wed., July 20 (Theatre) at 8:30—ISAAC STERN: Beethoven Violin Sonatas

SHED CONCERTS: Fri., July 22 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM: Soloist, Isaac Stern

Sat., July 23 at 8:30—BACH—BEETHOVEN—SESSIONS—STRAUSS
Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux

Sun., July 24 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM

Tickets: Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano NY Times - Sun. July 17 RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

Tonight (Theater) at 8:30—NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET—Beethoven

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Fri., July 29 at 8:30—HANDEL—SCHUMANN—BARBER—BRAHMS—[illegible]
Soloist, Leontyne Price, soprano

Sat., July 30, 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist, Rudolph Serkin (Munch)

Sun., July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Soloist, Isaac Stern (MONTEUX)

Tickets, Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—Conductors Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 600

Eagle
7/23

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TONIGHT at 8:30—BACH, BEETHOVEN, SESSIONS, STRAUSS
Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux

Sun., July 24 at 2:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM

Tickets, Shed: $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 600

The Beauty of

Boston Sunday Post
7/24

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

by the

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TODAY AT 2:30

Wed., July 27 (Theatre) at 8:30—NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET—Beethoven

SHED CONCERTS, Fri., July 29 at 8:30—HANDEL—SCHUMANN—BARBER—BRAHMS
Soloist, Leontyne Price, soprano

Sat., July 30 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist, Rudolf Serkin

Sun., July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux
Soloists, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky

Tickets Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

THURSDAY, AUG. 11

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE: TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 600

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. • CONCERTS through AUG. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

TONIGHT at 8:30 • TOM'W at 2:30

Wed. July 27 (Theatre) at 8:30—NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET—Beethoven

SHED CONCERTS: Fri. July 29, 8:30—HANDEL—SCHUMANN—BARBER—BRAHMS
Soloist, Leontyne Price, soprano

Sat. July 30 at 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist, Rudolf Serkin

Sun. July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Guest Conductor, Pierre Monteux
Soloists, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky

Tickets Wed. $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Admission $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—
Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD • Lenox, Mass. • Phone LEnox 600

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Concerts Through Aug. 14

Berkshire Festival

BY THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

A Season of BEETHOVEN

Wed., July 27 (Theater) at 8:30—NEW MUSIC STRING QUARTET—Beethoven

Shed Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Fri., July 29 at 8:30—HANDEL—SCHUMANN—BARBER—BRAHMS—(MUNCH)
Soloist, Leontyne Price, soprano

Sat., July 30, 8:30—BEETHOVEN PROGRAM—Soloist, Rudolph Serkin (Munch)

Sun., July 31 at 2:30—BRAHMS PROGRAM—Soloist, Isaac Stern (MONTEUX)

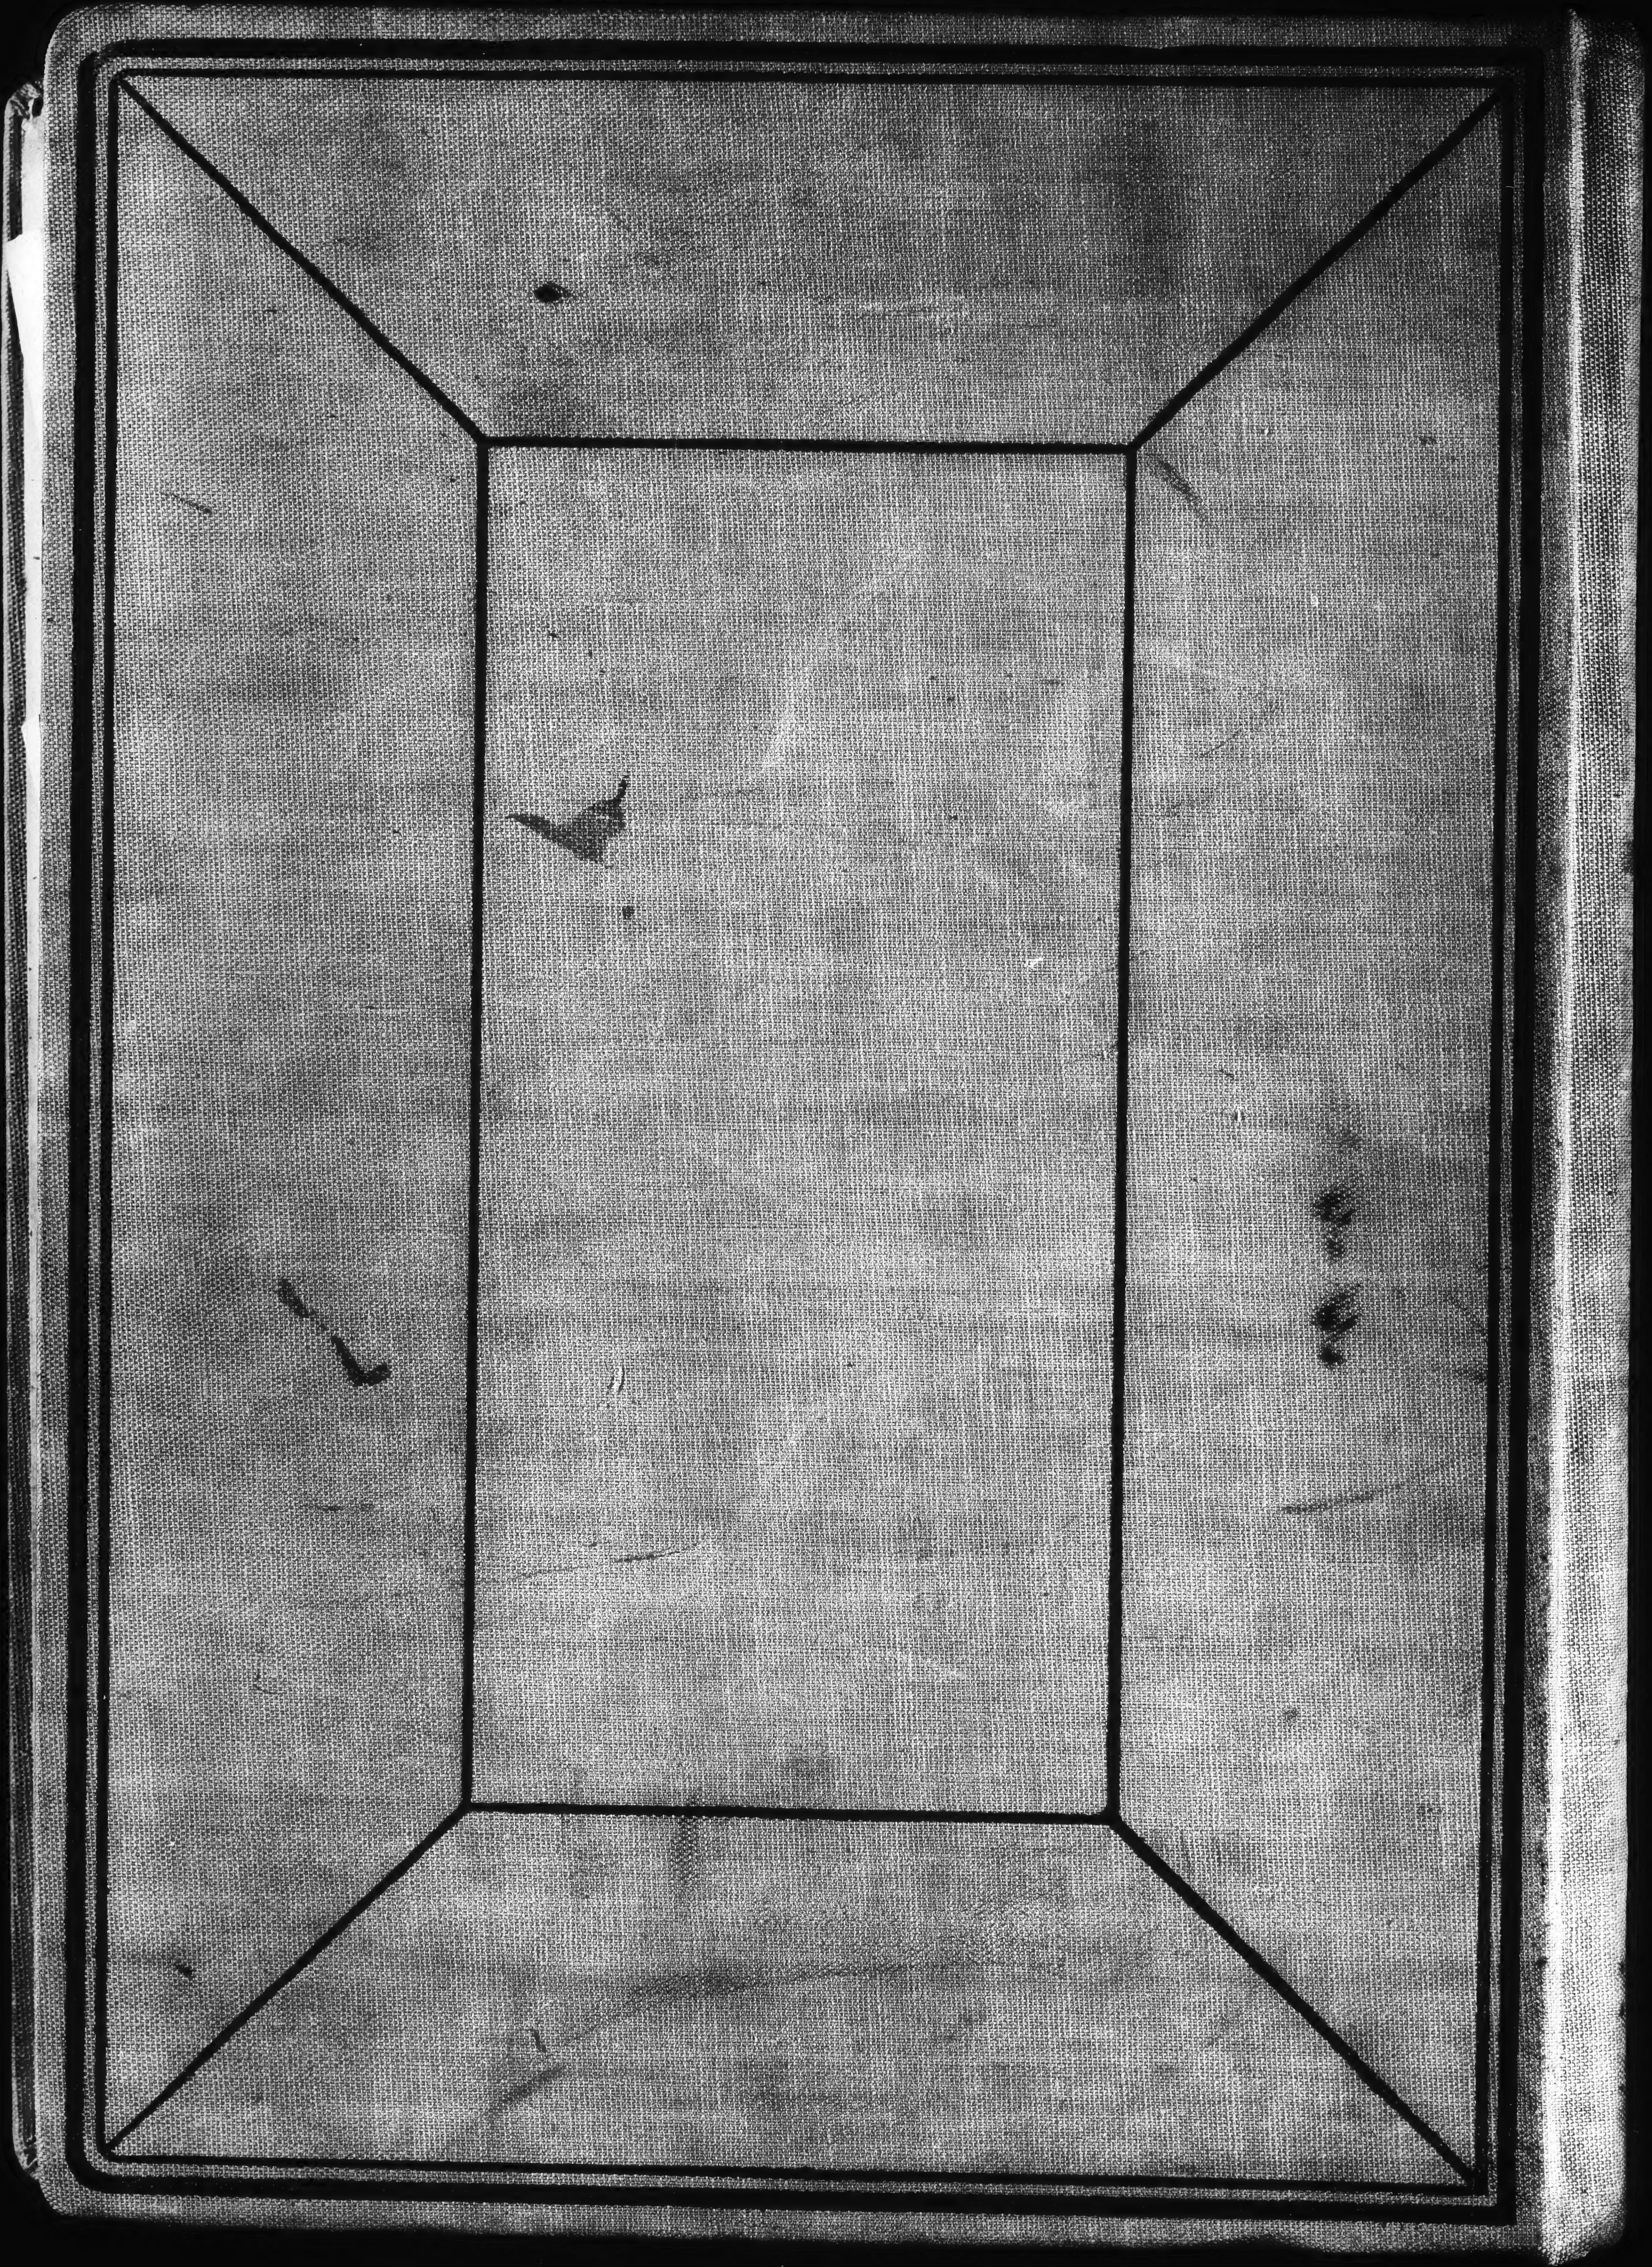
Tickets, Wed., $2, $3; Shed—$2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50, $6.50 (Adm. $2)

"TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"—Thurs. Aug. 11

Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras—Conductors, Leonard Bernstein; Arthur Fiedler

Baldwin Piano RCA Victor Records

For programs and ticket information apply:
TICKET OFFICE, TANGLEWOOD; LENOX, MASS. PHONE LENOX 600



END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE

REWIND